Grab your wallets North Siders, more tax increases coming

"We have to have an honest conversation about how we tax. Chicago actually has the lowest property taxes anywhere in the area," Ald. Ameya Pawar (47th) told a Northcenter Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

Alderman: 'Chicagoans not being taxed enough'

After voting in favor of the highest property tax increase in history, Chicagoans shouldn't expect to be able to get away with government-on-the-cheap much longer, Ald. Ameya Pawar [47th] told a recent Northcenter Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

The money for public schools, for example, has to come from somewhere, and that must eventually mean a graduated income tax instead of the property taxes the state has been relying on for generations, Ald. Pawar warned the business and community leaders at Kick Restaurant, 1943 W. Byron.

While "it looks like there's a budget deal and the schools will open in the Fall, it's going to require another property tax increase," Ald. Pawar said, adding that he's not sure it will take a vote by the City Council or just be authorized by the Board of Education.

Certainly that news is cold comfort to residents now opening up their property tax bills that they just received in the mail over the holiday weekend. Most North Siders got large increases thanks primarily to the mayor's 2015 tax increases.

"It's time we had an honest conversation about how we raise revenue," said Ald. Pawar, adding that people may not want to hear it, but far from being overtaxed, we're not being taxed enough.

The Chicago Public Schools [CPS] are looking at a $1 billion budget deficit for next year with no identified income source to cover that balance. That $1 billion would go almost entirely to pay for government pensions, with none of that cash seeing a classroom. Democrats in both Springfield and City Hall have been kicking the fiscal can down the road for years, which is why there's now a city, county and state budget and pension crisis, Ald. Pawar said.

"I know a lot's been said about the CPS 'bailout.' I think that's an offensive term because without Chicago there's not much of a state left. But we need our neighbors to the south, west and north as much as they need us," he said.

But comments like "bailout" reflect the divisive nature of politics at the moment, said Ald. Pawar. "There's this belief there are billions of dollars hidden away somewhere. It's just not true."

But "bailout" is not the only term being bandied about... the governor has suggest "bankruptcy" for the perpetually cash-starved and mismanaged CPS. In May Gov. Rauner told a gathering at Lyons Township High School that it is "a hard process and it's a dangerous process. [But] I believe bankruptcy should be an option if it's absolutely necessary."

"A couple of years ago they (CPS) decided we needed to get more efficient, that it was outrageous to have janitors making $60,000, $70,000 so they privatized the janitors. So instead you have janitors making $12, $13 an hour. So we reduced the bottom line and those schools are filthy," said Ald. Pawar. "Truth is we never had enough money to provide the services people want."

But the alderman says taxes are also going up for other reasons.

"If you want to stop mass shootings, you need to fund mental health services. And yeah, your water bills went up, but we're replacing water mains dating from the 1860s. We have some of the oldest water mains in the entire city. We still have some wooden ones."

Calling property taxes "an unfair" way to pay for schools and infrastructure, Ald. Pawar said "our North Shore neighbors are able to spend $10,000 more per kid because they have a higher property tax base. It's a more homogeneous population. There's less poverty."

"There's this belief there are billions of dollars hidden away somewhere. It's just not true."

The Chicago Police Dept. mobile command unit was brought out for display at CPD headquarters last week as SWAT team members posed in full gear, assault rifles at the ready. Police canine units stood at attention and dozens of police officers rounded out the backdrop for news cameras.

Meet the bomb squad

Flurry of police appearances, blizzard of press releases leading up to July 4th holiday

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

It was a sight to behold. A Chicago Police Dept. mobile command unit was pulled into position at CPD headquarters on Michigan Ave. SWAT team members then posed beside it in full gear, assault rifles at the ready. Police canine units stood at attention. Dozens of police officers rounded out the backdrop for news cameras as PH1-- one of the two department helicopters lifted off from a nearby corner of the headquarters parking lot.

Even the bomb squad's remote-controlled robot was brought out for the event.

So went the pre-Independence Day weekend media blitz by police brass, anxious to convince the public that they were ready for whatever the holiday weekend brought.

And, as of early Monday morning, the CPD's efforts appeared to be keeping carnage relatively low with three homicides and 30 shootings reported since midday Friday. That compares to 11 homicides and 55 wounded during the full four-day weekend last year.

The department generated a flurry of on-camera appearances and veritable blizzard of press releases in the days leading up to the holiday.

Late Friday, 88 arrests were announced following a series of 20 raids against street gangs, the department said.

"Fifty-five were convicted felons and 16 of them were currently serving sentences on parole for earlier crimes. Eight firearms were seized during the operation... Of the 88 offenders arrested, 76 are on CPD's Strategic Subject List"

Art lit only by fire changed the way we saw the world

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Twenty thousand years ago, in France, early man covered the cave walls of Lascaux with imagery. Re-imagining the everyday world around him, he created those images, by surrounding himself with the natural elements of the world with which he was familiar - the beasts and wildlife, birds and animal life, all the nature with which he was familiar.

In the process of replicating those images something transpired. Early man made some discoveries about himself and the geography in which lived.

All art began in a cave at the dawn of fire. Even at this most primitive stage of development humans had the desire and skill to reproduce their world which they knew was larger than themselves. They also had the wits to recognize their relationship to the earth. The universe. The cosmos.

I do not know how they expressed themselves everyday to each other. But I do know that when conscious of the need to speak of great power and energy and life, one way of doing so was to catalogue it in pictures that told their story. I expect they were intrigued by the sheer beauty of what they created, and deeply moved by their ability to reproduce the world of which they were so conscious. Some things never change for artists.

They were correct in assuming that though they had skills beyond that of the animals around them, they were more fragile a creation than the mighty ox or bull or giant stag. They related deeply to the earth, but I suspect they were cautious of their more cerebral body frames.

They puzzle me. And leave me with questions.

What does early man reveal about himself in the things he places on the walls of the cave? Do the images have a deeper, more mystical meaning for early man or us? What was the incentive for him to paint? Did the paintings accomplish their original goal?

The cave art of France has much to teach us still about being human. About understanding our fragile circumstances and conditions. It means recognizing the need we all have for protecting one another and the planet on which we walk.

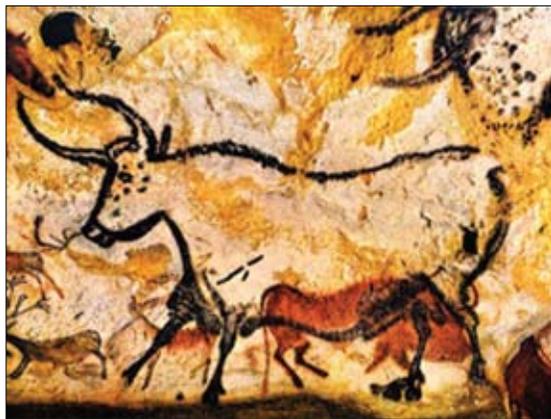

I have been thinking about this as I make my way through Ernest Hemingway's classic, "The Hemingway and friends in a Paris cafe searching for meaning and writing for love.

Sun Also Rises," as the summer progresses. I last read it in 2009. Maxwell Parrish, the literary giant at Scribner's, published the work in 1926. So it's 90 years old this year.

People were still recovering from the slaughter of World War I then. Many disillusioned Americans roamed Europe searching for life's spark to rekindle them. They were exiles, physically and spiritually, from the world as it had once been. People looked for new forms of expression. Making attempts to reestablish a suitable language to express their pain. Their heartache. Their hope.

Painting of a bull, Lascaux Cave, 20,000 years old.

Gertrude Stein, the wealthy American modernist writer, living in Paris then, was presiding over her own literary self-discovery at this time. Stein thought she had found a new literary language in her soon-to-be-dated repetitions and one word sentences. "A rose is a rose. Is a rose. Is a rose."

Ernest Hemingway, who she loved, also thought he had found something new in his sparse modern prose style freed from the burden of modification. He was jettisoning adjectives left and right. Snarling his tiny sentences at the reader who shook with emotion at his daring. It was thought to be brilliant and manly. "See?"

Some of his language, and most of Stein's, always feels sluggish to me. Forced.

At times I think they try too hard. But Hemingway really does have a story to tell. I like traveling with him. I enjoy his simple style of journey. His sense of American friendship, his comfort in another culture, his savvy ability to find delight in the best everywhere. He always seems to have a sense of what's of value.

Hemingway actually wrote the entire novel while sitting at the famed Parisian cafe La Closerie des Lilas on the Boulevard du Montparnasse. Of course, he wasn't looking for an outlet so his laptop could stay charged. No. Between brandies and sodas it was strictly fountain pens on paper in a bound notebook. This was Paris for God's sake.

So Hemingway makes the journey enjoyable, filled with his microscopic knowledge of Paris. Its streets. Its customs. Spain becomes a great trip with his fellow American ex-patriots. It is Hemingway who exposes his readers to the events of the San Fermo Festival and the running of the bulls in Pamplona for the first time. He and his fellow disillusioned Ivy-Leagers sit around the squares of the town's cafes swilling local wines and eating food no one in Iowa ever head of. So much detail. So much drama. So many snapshots of what Stein called "the lost generation."

The Basque country comes alive in Hemingway's tale, which has great style and color despite its lack of adjectives. And while there is romance, it is drained of its cloying sweetness, favored by the Edwardians. This romance has a hard view of the world. Sometimes we are almost overwhelmed by the mistakes people make about other people and their willingness to risk for love.

Ironically, the storyline is as clear as James Joyce's "Ulysses" is madness and confusion. Joyce is another one of their Paris neighbors in exile who is reinventing words as he goes along. Sylvia Beach, everyone's friend in Paris from Shakespeare & Co. Bookstore, managed to get Joyce published in 1922. But it was slow going for Joyce in his work, growing to become the wonder of the literary world. Hemingway is no Joyce. He is ultimately readable, though. Rough charm. Rugged American emotion.

Six bulls from the top breeding ranches of Spain run 974 yards through the Pamplona streets from their pens to the bull ring everyday. The run takes about three minutes each day at 8 a.m. from July 7-14. But what life unfolds around it.

Especially in 1926. Thousands run with the bulls. The danger is insane. People, usually drunk, get mauled or trampled, or gored. Some die. Most live. It's just once a year.

For Hemingway, some of life gets resolved. Some doesn't. After Spain, there is always Paris. There is always time to distill life. Write some articles.

Make some cash. Go out for dinner. Write a book.

I look at the images on the cave walls of Lascaux and I think of Pamplona. And new ways of writing. Fresh attempts at savoring what's important in the 1920s or in the distant past of 20,000 years ago. How strange that the muscular bull connects both worlds. Early man was trying to break out of his stale life, just like "the lost generation." Early man had it easier, they did not have to cope with the imperialism of Gertrude Stein. "Your an expatriate, see? You've lost touch with the soil."

So I will keep on. Keep reading. Keep on imaging. Moving toward that lunch at the exquisite Botin's, one of the best restaurants in Paris. As Jake orders a fourth bottle of Rioja Alta. Worthy of the walls of a cave.

WHAT'S A WEEKEND? JULY 2016: July this year will have five Fridays; five Saturdays; and five Sundays. This only happens every 823 years. So the last time this occurred was 1293, Edward I was King of England and William Wallace (Braveheart) was about to cause mayhem in Scotland.

I'LL TAKE MANHATTAN: Bill Cunningham was "THE" New York Times fashion photographer best known for his candid shots of smartly dressed New Yorkers usually taken around 57th Street and Fifth Avenue. A Harvard alum, he had a feel for New Yorkers and the ability to make the rest of the country feel like farmers from Nebraska. He died this past week and is mourned across the length and breath of NYC. He was 86 and always on his bike.

THE LUCAS EFFECT: Names are being talked about all over town for Mayor Rahm Emanuel's successor. The fiasco of the Lucas Museum shows how much anger there is towards him and what he has done to Chicago. That, and Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart's readiness to run. There are others in the wings, of course, Cook Commissioner Bridget Gainer would also be a healthy candidate for mayor.

County Commissioner Bridget Gainer is another bright star unsoiled by Rahm's antics. And then there is always Cook County Board President Toni Preckwinkle, but the Mayor's Office might not be up her alley any longer, especially if former Governor Pat Quinn gets mileage out of his term limit proposal for the Mayor's post. Someone should start pushing the conversation for a smaller City Council as well, and begin in earnest proposed strategies for making it a smaller assembly. Take a look at what they do in New York

Neighborhood dogs dig Wiggly Feild's 20th anniversary party

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

on June 25.

And what a doggone good time they had, thanks to the Wrightwood Neighbors Assoc. [WNA] and Wiggly Field Advisory Committee.

"It was great," said Stacey Hawk, a founder of the park who is also a Wrightwood Neighbor and Wiggly Field chairwoman. "We handed out more than 250 goodie-bags!"

It's hard to believe that it was 20 years ago that Wiggly Field officially opened, said Hawk. And that was after three years of working with the Chicago Police Dept., City Hall, neighbors, dog owners, non-dog owners on establishing the doggie haven, she said.

"It makes me realize how much I love this community," she said. "Many friendships made during that time, establishing the park, have remained solid over all of this time. I am truly blessed."

"It's also a very important lesson in community politics, and how -- and how not -- to build consensus and get things done that you believe in," said Hawk.

Wiggly Field, 2645 N. Sheffield Ave., opened in spring of 1997, and was Chicago and Cook County's first official Dog Friendly Area (DFA). Due to the huge success of this park, many more have been established throughout the city, said Hawk.

"Wiggly Field set the precedent for all future dog friendly areas and beaches here," she said.

The establishment and existence of the park is made possible by funding and the generous support of the WNA and its Wiggly Field Advisory Committee, along with numerous volunteers and park users, who are responsible for keeping the park clean, said Hawk.

Wiggly Field provides a safe, separate, enclosed area for people and dogs to socialize and exercise, she said. It's also a great resource center: it gives people with dogs a great place to learn about all things dog (training, health, nutrition, boarding, day-care, grooming, dog walkers, etc).

"It helps gets people informed and involved in their community," said Hawk. "Dogs that have an outlet for exercise and socialization are more likely to be better mannered in their homes, hopefully reducing the rate of intake at local shelters. Com-

Violet the pug was there. And so were Timmy, and Winston, Zelda and Sully. Watson and Martini stopped by too.

Yep, all the neighborhood dogs came out to play at Wiggly Field's 20th anniversary party

munities that designate separate dog areas have less conflicts in other area open spaces between people recreating with their dogs and those that would rather not be around them."

Besides plenty of neighborhood dogs showing up for the action, the party had a DJ booth for some doggie dancing, an instant photo booth, games, prizes, and something both dogs and humans love, goodie bags. The event drew some pols too with both current Ald. Michele Smith [43rd] dropping by and former 43rd Ward Ald. Vi Daley stopping in. There were lots of old WNA board members too.

"It was a great time visiting with old friends, and more importantly, a great way to educate current park users that Wiggly Field exists because of the ongoing support and financial contributions of WNA -- made possible by our annual fundraiser, The Taste of Lincoln Avenue -- and by volunteers keeping the park clean," said Hawk.

Classy new principal... I was surprised to hear that popular Lake View High School Principal Scott Grens had resigned, but hopefully the new interim principal, Paul Karafiol, will be a good fit for the job, even if he is temporary. Karafiol is a lifelong Chicagoan and CPS graduate (Kenwood, 1988).

On June 28, Karafiol sent a letter to the school's parents, students, and community members, explaining his goals for the future.

"I am committed to learning about Lake View with and from you, bringing people together to understand and assess the work being doing at Lake View, and engaging staff, students, LSC, families, and the community in developing strategies to improve every student's experience," said Karafiol. "My goal is not to disrupt the good work that is already being done at Lake View, but to continue and extend it. I want all of us at Lake View to be your partners in education."

The LSC and Lake View High School Partners will be hosting an "Open House"

The Stienstra family is a family divided. It happened in 2004 when the Cubs broke Derek Stienstra's heart for the last time when, despite a strong record, the team missed the playoffs. That year, Derek broke from his family and officially became a Sox fan. Luckily, with a way to cheer for either team, their bank accounts don't need to be a source of friction.

Home loans lowest in three years, thanks to Brexit

The Home Front
By Don DeBat

While America was celebrating the Fourth of July holiday, we also should have hoisted a Budweiser 'America' to the British for giving U.S. homeownership a boost from coast to coast.

All that financial turmoil created by the British pulling out of the European Union continues to put downward pressure on long-term interest rates, creating more affordable opportunities for home buying and refinancing, experts say.

Benchmark 30-year fixed-rate mortgages fell on June 30 to an average of 3.48% from 3.56% a week earlier. That's only 17 basis points above its November 2012 all-time record low of 3.31%, reports Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey.

The mortgage-rate average not only hit a low for 2016, it posted its lowest level in three years. A year ago at this time the average 30-year fixed home-loan rate was 4.08%.

After Brits exited the 28-country European Union, the British Pound Sterling declined to its lowest level since 1985, and Wall St. suffered its biggest selloff in 10 months. The Dow bounced back closing Friday at 17,949, within reach of the pre-Brexit level of 18,100.

However, thousands of U.S. investors fled the stock market and money poured into a safe haven—U.S. government bonds—driving bond prices higher and yields lower.

As a result, yield on 10-year U.S. Treasury notes fell to low of 1.48% from 1.73% a week earlier. Because long-term mortgage rates tend to track the yield on 10-year Treasury notes, home loan rates also moved lower.

"In the wake of the Brexit vote, the yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury bond plummeted 24 basis points," noted Sean Beckett, Freddie Mac's chief economist. The 30-year mortgage rate declined as well, but not by as much, falling eight basis points to 3.48%, he said.

"This extremely low mortgage rate should support solid home sales and refinancing volume this summer," Beckett predicted.

So what segment of the U.S. population is going to dive into debt to take advantage of bargain-rate mortgage money?

All that financial turmoil created by the British pulling out of the European Union continues to put downward pressure on long-term interest rates, creating more affordable opportunities for home buying and refinancing, experts say.

According to new research by Marcus & Millichap, the combined group of 150 million people in the Baby Boomer and Millennial generations has $5.5 trillion in spending power.

Therefore, one would think that the aging Baby Boomers would be flocking in droves to buy downsized houses at the beach or in the mountains, and Millennials would rush into the first-time buyer condominium market in urban neighborhoods.

By the year 2020, there will be 57 million Americans age 65 or older—16% of the U.S. population. However, aging Baby Boomers spend a lot of money on insurance, medications and health care, and that spending rose by 8.3% over the past 12 months.

"Rather than spending money on things, Millennials are allocating income to experiences," Marcus & Millichap said. Millennial spending on bars and restaurants rose 6.5% over the past year.

Both Baby Boomers and Millennials also are in love with hotel getaway weekends and vacations. In the first quarter of 2016, U.S. hotel occupancy rose to 60.7%, the second highest level on record.

Millennials also spend money on household formation items—furniture and home furnishings. Millennial spending in this sector rose 3.6% over the past year.

With all that spending at bars, restaurants, hotels and a chunk of income going toward paying off student-loan debt, Millennials likely are not accruing savings for a down payment on that first condo, experts say.

However, Marcus & Millichap noted that Millennials are spending money on rental apartments. Most of them tend to lease apartments in the suburbs where rents are affordable.

"Affluent Millennials favor urban environments with live/work/play options in lifestyle communities and mixed-use developments," Marcus & Millichap said.

A better long-term option might be becoming a boomerang kid. Why not forgo the play, move back with those Baby Boomer parents and save for that elusive condo down payment?

Letters to the Editor

'City that works,' for some

Good article [June 29 newspapers] about all the homeless people now encamped on the sidewalks of State St. In the "city that works," it's great to know there are teams of well-trained officials looking out for these people.

About a year ago, I started my first job in the Loop. I was amazed at all the homeless people there! The problem seems to have gotten much worse in recent years.

In this time of "Brexit" and the top tier of society holding so much of our wealth, there's no better example of our weird national economy than right here in Chicago. Just look at the sidewalks of State St.

She's a hottie!

I am writing in regards to an item in Thomas J. O'Gorman's column (June 15) where he talks of a matinee idol-looking man having a drink with a supposedly unattractive lady and then Mr. O'Gorman mentions that when the man excused himself for a moment, his lady friend told four people (at the next table) that she and her gentleman friend were dating, and then says that those four people tried to control their laughter.

Anyways, I found that item to be more than a little cruel as well as weirdly petty. Whether this woman was unattractive in someone else's eyes, she may have been a wonderful woman whose interior and soul outweighed any physical flaws.

It reminded me on an insightful bit in one of Ann Gerber's columns around 2012 where Ann went to dinner at a woman's house and the woman's face was deformed or damaged in some way. But Ann noted what a delightful gal this person was and that she had a loving family to boot.

I knew a terrific girl in high school, Marcy, who had Neurofibromatosis (made famous by Joseph Merrick in the "Elephant Man") and Marcy earned a nickname from me, "nothing but guts." Peers could be cruel, but she rose above it all with a poky sense of humor, which won people over, and I was so happy to find out, years later that she married a handsome man, who looked beyond the physical coating, as looks are fleeting anyway, and what some may deem as "unattractive," others may view as "hot enough to cook a pizza on"!

Ribbon cut to officially open first Wolf Point tower

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

One down, two to go. Christopher Kennedy, chairman of Joseph P. Kennedy Enterprises, Inc., and grandson of the Kennedy family patriarch, cut a ribbon on June 16 to officially open Wolf Point West, a $160 million, 46-story, 509-unit luxury rental property on arguably the most historic spot in Chicago.

“Wolf Point is no ordinary building,” said Kennedy. “From its Chicago location to its [Pelli Clarke Pelli] master plan to its bKL Architecture construction to its final finishes, there is in every aspect of Wolf Point a sense of pride and a declaration that this building is like no other in any place in the city or any place in the country.”

Kennedy says Wolf Point West, built on 3.85 acres of land his family has owned since the 1940s, represents no less than “the fulfillment of the American dream” and “the hopes of generation after generation that our country can be unique in the world.”

“Wolf point,” says Kennedy, “was built by the people who own it. Not just the Kennedys and the Hineses but more broadly. It’s owned by the people who poured the cement like Paul Mallon. It’s owned by the guys who ran the hoists like Ramon Ulloa. It’s owned by people like Diana Bridges, who kept everyone safe on the job, including me.”

The building has been open since January and is nearly 50% occupied, according to Michael Carrigan, president of Illinois AFL-CIO. The federation of labor unions has a $34 million stake in the project.

“This project is about pension dollars, retirement dollars, coming together, putting union people to work, and then it becomes an asset of this great city,” said Carrigan.

Eventually, the project will include a 950-foot south tower and a 750-foot east tower that will both contain a mix of office, retail, and residential space. Developers will have to take the project one tower at a time, with new traffic studies and additional trips to the Chicago Plan Commission.

Controversy slowed project start

The project got off the ground despite disapproval from nearby neighborhood and homeowner associations. The most vocal critics were unit owners at The Residences at Riverbend Condominium Assoc., whose dramatic views east down the main branch of the Chicago River are interrupted by Wolf Point West and the two other massive towers planned for Wolf Point.

On May 30, 2013, a group led by four residents sued the City of Chicago to stop development of Wolf Point, claiming they were denied adequate opportunity to present their opposition to the plan. Richard Kessler and Joseph Jacobi of McDonald Hopkins LLC said the city, in approving the zoning amendment that allows the project, ignored the requirements of its own zoning ordinance, the 2009 master plan for the Downtown Central Area, design standards and guidelines for building structures adjacent to the Chicago River, and a 2012 nature conservation plan.

But on Nov. 19, 2013, saying the amended planned development does not deprive anyone of constitutionally protected property interest, a U.S. District Court judge dismissed the lawsuit. In her analysis, Judge Amy J. St. Eve pointed out that the Riverbend condo owners do not own property on Wolf Point, just adjacent to it.

The property was ready for its first residents on Jan. 11. A mix of studio, one-bedroom, two-bedroom, and three-bedroom units are being leased by Magellan Property Management LLC.

Amenities include outdoor pool, hot tub, and sundeck directly adjacent to the Chicago River, state-of-the-art fitness center with private training rooms and golf simulator, 46th floor Sky Lounge, and an indoor/outdoor pet lounge with grooming table, dog wash, and veterinarian.

A 400-foot walkway along the Chicago River is accessible to the public.

Union League Clubs Raise $300,000

The Union League Boys & Girls Clubs raised $300,000 at their 38th annual gala. The event highlighted the organization's deep commitment to the 13,000 at-risk youth it serves in the Pilsen, Humboldt Park, Near West Side, Bucktown, Englewood and South Lawndale communities.

By
ANN

"Every afternoon offers us a chance to change a child's future and we are truly thankful for our gala benefactors that are helping us seize that opportunity," said Terry Hendrickson, Union League Clubs board president. "Our Gala is crucial in funding our after-school programming designed to ensure success is within reach of each young person that walks through the club doors," added Hendrickson.

Proceeds from the gala help change lives through after-school programming at eight club sites in Chicago. The ULBGC also operates a 247-acre summer residential camp in Salem, WI. Last year the clubs hosted an average 1,400 youth each weekday and served more than 143,000 after-school meals.

Gala chairperson Nancy Ross, Union League Boys & Girls Clubs board first vice president, led a team of creative volunteers who worked tirelessly to present a memorable evening for 312 guests.

Matt McGill, WVON-1690 AM radio host emceed the gala.

For 95 years, the clubs have served youth by promoting academic success, good character and citizenship and healthy lifestyles. In 2014, the clubs served 12,942 youth with an average daily attendance of 1,407 youth, a 45% increase over the past three years.

Senior LIVING

How to know if you're ready for assisted living

BY BILL LOWE

While average life expectancy has grown over time, a new report from the United Health Foundation, "America's Health Rankings: Senior Report," is a reminder that living longer and living healthier are not the same thing.

Bill Lowe

The report found that, while overall measures of health show an improvement for middle aged adults over a 15-year period, greater numbers of older adults will be living with diabetes and obesity in the coming years — and with the health challenges that come with each.

In Illinois alone, almost 15 percent of people aged 50 to 64 reported having diabetes. Memory loss is also on the rise, with the World Health Organization predicting that the number of people living with dementia will triple worldwide by 2050.

Modern medicine allows many people to live long and well with these and other chronic conditions, but it cannot eliminate their effects entirely. As we grow older, we want to maintain our independence, and for many people that means delaying a move to assisted living or accepting assistance at home. But with health in older age largely connected to social interactions and many wishing they had moved into a retirement community sooner, these statistics should remind us that an assisted living community can largely diminish many health challenges that can come with aging.

"An assisted living community is just that - a community," Chicagoland Methodist Senior Services [CMSS] operations vice president Jay Evans said. "It's a place where you can make friends and spend time with them, even if getting out and about is difficult for you. And it's a place where there are people you can count on when you need a hand."

Assisted living communities provide housing for older adults who could use some support in day-to-day tasks and would benefit from easy access to medical care when needed, but who don't need the sort of around-the-clock care offered in a traditional nursing home.

The benefits of assisted living

In an assisted living community, residents can maintain the level of activity and independence that's right for them, while feeling more secure knowing help is available when needed. Residents don't have to worry about daily chores like shopping for groceries or cooking and cleaning up after every meal. And, of course, there's assistance available for daily needs. The time and energy saved can be spent on enjoyable pastimes - taking an art class, socializing or catching up on a favorite TV show.

Additionally, many houses and apartment buildings are full of trip hazards and stairs and may be difficult for older people to navigate safely. Some may find themselves wishing for a handy grab bar for support when getting in and out of the shower, or a lower bed frame to make getting in and out of bed easier. An assisted living residence is built to be accessible for all levels of mobility. Even for people with no current mobility concerns, an assisted living environment will minimize the risk of falls, which is an asset for any older adult.

"Moving to assisted living isn't about what you can't do on your own — it's about expanding the range of what you can do by moving to a place where you have the support you need," Evans said.

Assisted living options

It's common for people to put off researching and moving to assisted living. Many of us want to believe that we'll be able to live independently forever. But planning ahead and exploring your options early can in fact be a way to maintain control over your own life

By exploring your assisted living options when you are not in the midst of a health crisis, you can put yourself in the driver's seat, making decisions about your own future care. If you put off a decision, this opportunity may be taken from you, and your family members may be left to make a decision about assisted living while you are hospitalized or struggling with medical concerns.

Instead of hoping your family will make a decision you are comfortable with, plan ahead so that you can determine your own future living arrangements.

With this decision made, you can enjoy daily life knowing that, if something were to happen causing you to need immediate and long-term assistance, you have a plan in place, and you're comfortable with where you're moving and, more importantly, with the organization that will be providing your care.

There are a number of ways that you can begin researching your assisted living options. The first step is something you can do from your own home, and that's to take a look at a community's online materials. Visit websites, sign up for email lists and see what communities near you are saying on their blogs or Facebook pages. Take a look at the pictures and posts they share for a first look at their values and atmosphere. If a community intrigues you, pick up the phone and talk to a representative.

The next obvious step is to schedule a tour, but a tour is not the only way to interact with a community you're interested in. Check if an assisted living community near you offers any community events you can attend. For example, CMSS offers educational talks on topics of interest to older adults about once a month and has hosted breakfasts for people interested in learning more about available services. Events are a nice way to get to know a community if you don't feel quite ready yet to sit down for an individual meeting.

"An assisted living community is just that — a community. It's a place where you can make friends and spend time with them, even if getting out and about is difficult for you. And it's a place where there are people you can count on when you need a hand."

You can also become a volunteer at a community. Nonprofit aging services providers, like CMSS, are dedicated to reinvesting their resources into communities and benefiting those they serve. Volunteers help these assisted living communities go even further for their residents, offering more events and programs that community members can enjoy. Volunteering is a great way to give back, learn more about a place and get to know people who could be your future caregivers and who can also give you more context in a decision about whether a given assisted living community is right for you in the future.

"Getting to know communities near you could challenge your preconceptions about what assisted living is like and who lives there," Evans said. "Whether you anticipate a need to move soon, or far in the future, you'll gain a better understanding of how a community can fill your needs."

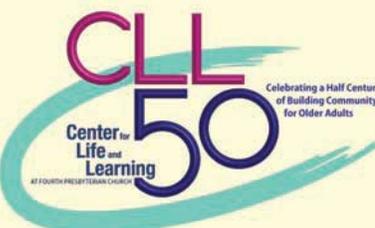

Average life expectancy is on the rise, but living longer doesn't necessarily mean living healthier. Today, it's more important than ever to consider your assisted living and other care options as you prepare to live well beyond retirement age.

Nine practices for conscious aging

BY MARILYN SCHLITZ

As I live into my own process of aging, my worldview has been informed by the depth and insight of many great teachers. These include masters from different wisdom traditions, health care practitioners, friends facing end of life, and researchers studying the transformative nature of death, dying and beyond.

For decades, the team at the Institute of Noetic Sciences has conducted research, created educational programs and engaged in conversations on transformations in consciousness. We have been led to an ever-expanding appreciation for the aging process and its transformative potentials. We also have found ourselves moved by a great calling to help reduce the suffering so many experience.

During this process, we have identified nine practices that can help people engage the fullness of their lives, each and every moment.

1. Reflect on your assumptions.

Stop long enough to reflect on your worldview, beliefs, stereotypes and assumptions. How might they be limiting you or holding you back? What do you need to change to reflect your highest values and most noble aspirations?

2. Reframe your inner talk.

Take note of your critical self-talk, bringing the inner critic into more conscious awareness to help reframe these internal messages as more positive and self-compassionate. As you invite equanimity, self-compassion, wonder and awe into your daily life, even the most mundane aspects of experience can become sacred.

3. Shift your perspective.

Clear a space in your life that turns away from the popular media and the weapons of “mass distraction” that shape the dominant culture’s view of aging. Find opportunities to pause and ask yourself where you find joy, goodness and connections. Write down major moments of transformation that have led you to who you are and give you meaning. As philosopher Soren Kierkegaard noted, “Life can only be understood backward, but it must be lived forward.”

4. Practice mindful attention.

Bring your attention toward greater self awareness through simple activities such as meditation, contemplative prayer, journal writing, walks in nature, gardening with mindfulness, and somatic subtle-energy body practices. What do you need to surrender or leave behind? How can you conserve your energy for what has heart and meaning? What still needs healing or forgiveness?

5. Set intentions.

Ask yourself, “What matters most? What values do I want to adhere to?” Based on these reflections, you can craft an intentionality statement so that when challenges and opportunities arise, you will have developed an inner compass with which to navigate and make more conscious life choices.

6. Build new habits.

Challenge your brain with new learning, explore new activities, dance often, connect with people of different generations, ask a child about his or her life, or do something new every day. Neuroscience offers us hope that such new habits are possible as we lay down new neural pathways that can help us see the world and ourselves in new ways. As Gandhi said, “Live as if you were to die tomorrow. Learn as if you were to live forever.”

7. Find guidance.

Find a skilled teacher, a study group, and/or a social network that supports your explorations. Whether in virtual or proximal social settings, connecting with others offers a way of living into new patterns and behaviors.

8. Move from “I” to “we.”

While aging is a personal process, conscious aging is more than a personal quest. It can infuse your life as you promote the transformation of your community. Altruism and compassion born of shared destiny, rather than duty or obligation, can emerge and add joy and purpose to your actions.

9. Death makes life possible.

An important part of positive transformation involves a reflection on one’s own cosmology of what happens after we die. There are many maps or worldviews on this question, revealing a wide range of viewpoints. In considering these viewpoints, people can find comfort and a set of possibilities for their understanding. As people grow older, as they come to face their own mortality, they can bring greater awareness to the transformative process that allows a deeper experience of their life journey.

Tips for eating well in retirement

You can’t have healthy aging without healthy eating. Eating right in the autumn of life may help prevent heart disease, stroke and even some cancers — but that doesn’t mean it has to be boring. Amy Klassman, the Registered Dietitian at The Clare, Chicago’s premier retirement residence, recently shared her advice on getting the most from “power foods.”

“These nutrient-packed foods,” says Amy, “can help you maintain a healthy diet, and especially a healthy digestive system, without disappointing your taste buds.”

• QUINOA: Quinoa is a fiber and protein-rich ancient grain that is a great gluten-free grain option that can be spiced up to accommodate any taste preference. Add it to some roasted red peppers and garlic for the perfect side dish, and your tongue and digestive system will thank you.

• CHIA SEED: Another power food that can be mixed into almost any dish is the chia seed. Chia seeds are perfect to sprinkle over yogurt, salad or to add to any smoothie. As a nutrient powerhouse, the chia seed is a great plant-based source for nutrients and may be beneficial for preventing osteoporosis.

• MATCHA TEA: Instead of turning to sugary drinks, try Matcha Tea as a healthier way to quench your thirst. This green tea powder not only tastes great, but may assist with immune function and may increase your concentration and energy.

It’s never too late to start eating well for a longer, happier life.

The Clare “Crewsaders”

Racing for a cause and building community

With a spirit of collegiality and camaraderie, residents and staff of The Clare participated in the 16th Annual Dragon Boat Race for Literacy, hosted by the Chicago Chinatown Chamber of Commerce. The event took place at Ping Tom Memorial Park on Saturday, June 25.

Thirty dragon boat race teams competed in the event, which was held on the south branch of the Chicago River. The Clare Crewsaders were noticeably in a different age group compared to other teams—and they received boatloads of encouragement from their cheering section of fellow residents, friends, family and a crowd of on-lookers.

crazy. But after walking five miles back to The Clare that day, I had them convinced that we could do it.”

This year, Niebling turned his vision into reality.

“The whole event was such a success,” he said. “We had both residents and staff rowing and a crew of people who came out to watch us. I am delighted with the outcome.”

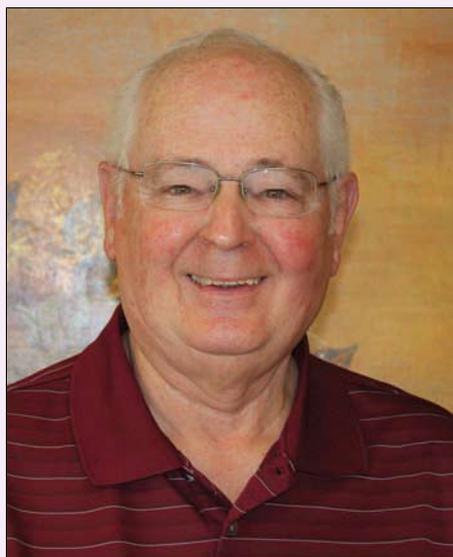

Clare executive director Kyle Exline said participation in the race started out as a resident-driven idea that grew into a community-wide and community-building event.

“It was an amazing opportunity for both the staff and residents to forge new relationships and engage with one another on a new level,” Exline said.

Each rowing team was made up of a total of 20 members, including 18 paddlers, one drummer, and one flag catcher. Paddlers Large crowds supported their teams.

Participation in this year’s Dragon Boat Race was an idea conceived by Clare resident Ralph Niebling. “Last year, The Clare Pacemakers, our Saturday walking group, went to Ping Tom Park to see what the races were all about,” Niebling said. “When I first mentioned to my walking group friends that I thought we should enter the race the following year, they told me I was rowed to the drum beat, and the flag catchers were in charge of grabbing the flags at the finish line.

Collaboration and commitment were definitely required.

“We participated in two heats,” resident and team drummer Bing Cady said. “We may not have won, but there was a great showing of teamwork and enthusiasm.”

Clare life enrichment director Lori Griffin is responsible for delivering an array of programs and special events at The Clare that include lectures, musical performances, outings, film screenings, book clubs, discussion groups, bridge and other card games, themed dinners and everything in between.

“So much goes on both inside and outside of The Clare for the residents here,” Griffin said. “The Dragon Boat Races were definitely a unique addition to our activity lineup. The creation of The Clare Crewsaders is a perfect example that aging doesn’t mean you have to stop trying new things, and aging certainly doesn’t have to be boring.”

Ken and Shirley Mullin

In their own words...

The Mullin’s considered several sites while deciding upon a new home and chose The Clare for its Gold Coast location. They loved the dynamic urban environment and short walk to theaters, concert halls, Northwestern University and Northwestern Medical Center.

“Ultimately, we experience a loving community of compassionate friends & neighbors. The Clare’s iconic architecture of tower-verticality fosters spontaneous, impromptu relationships.”

The Mullin’s could have easily remained in their home but chose not to wait for retirement. “Should the need arise, no one else will be responsible for our care or housing. We feel completely settled at The Clare, which has exceeded our expectations.”

Depression after retirement

BY NANCY SCHIMELPFENING

While it might seem like retirement should be a time when you can finally relax and enjoy the fruits of your labor, it can sometimes lead to feelings of depression instead. Why does this occur and what can you do about it?

Reasons

For many people, work brings a sense of usefulness and purpose. There is a lifelong desire to be a good provider for one's family, an achiever and a useful part of society.

The person's sense of self is tied up very strongly in what he or she does for a living; with retirement, a sense of loss can occur, leaving people struggling to understand who they are and what their value is.

Another reason for depression is the fact that the dynamics at home are changing. Where one or both spouses may have worked out of the home and been away a significant portion of the day, now both spouses may be spending more time at home together. Roles may be changing, and a greater need for joint decision-making may be occurring. Until a new equilibrium is attained, there may be conflicts as each spouse adjusts to the new situation.

Finally, retirement may be seen as a reminder of the fact that the person is aging, with fears about death, sickness and disability arising.

How to cope

Many experts suggest the following tips to help new retirees make an easier transition into the next stage of their lives:

Stay active. Do things to keep both mind and body active, such as taking a class, participating in sports, doing volunteer work or even taking a part-time job.

Strengthen social and family ties. Visit your kids or offer to babysit your grand kids. Make time to participate in activities with friends. Visit your local community center and seek out activities that you enjoy so you can make new friends.

Find a new sense of purpose. Maybe you can do volunteer work related to your former career, or maybe you've always cared deeply about a particular cause. Finding a new way to provide meaning for your life will restore the sense of purpose that you once found through work.

Fulfill your dreams. Maybe you've always wanted to learn to play a musical instrument or perhaps to travel – now is the perfect time. You have the freedom, and you are still young enough to enjoy it, so go for it.

sleep or waking up in the morning

- Having changes in appetite or weight
- Having problems with thinking, making decisions or remembering things
- Feeling tired all the time
- Feeling worthless or excessively guilty
- Feeling helpless or hopeless
- Thinking about death or suicide

If you are experiencing several of these symptoms, then it's a good idea to see your family doctor for evaluation. The doctor will ask you some

The person's sense of self is tied up very strongly in what he or she does for a living; with retirement, a sense of loss can occur, leaving people struggling to understand who they are and what their value is.

Develop a schedule. When you are used to planning your entire day around your job, it can be quite disconcerting to have a totally unstructured day. Instead, set up a schedule for yourself, creating set times when you will do work around the house, exercise or do volunteer work.

Serious depression

If you're finding that your depression just isn't going away or is starting to seriously interfere with your life, it is possible that you need to seek out professional help for Major Depressive Disorder.

Symptoms of Major Depressive Disorder include:

- Feeling sad, depressed or empty
- Losing interest in things you used to enjoy doing
- Feeling irritable or restless
- Having problems getting to questions and do some testing to determine if your depression symptoms might be due to some other cause, such as a medical condition or medications that you are taking. If these things can be ruled out, then you may have depression.

If you do have depression, there are several very effective treatments, such as antidepressant medications, psychotherapy and counseling, which can help you get back on an even keel. Your doctor may opt to prescribe medication for you or may choose to refer you to a psychiatrist or other mental health professional for assistance. Generally, the best treatment for depression will be a combination of medication and therapy or counseling, but your doctor will work with you to determine what is best for you.

Tips for staying mentally sharp as a senior

Promising research indicates that taking the following steps can help keep your mind sharp as you age:

- Control cholesterol problems and high blood pressure. These conditions can increase your risk for heart disease and stroke, which are thought to contribute to the development of certain types of dementia. Cardiovascular health — having healthy blood sugar, cholesterol levels and blood pressure, along with being physically active, eating a nutritious diet, maintaining a healthy weight, and not smoking — was associated with better cognitive function in a 2014 study published in PLoS One.
- Don't smoke or drink excessively. Because smoking and drinking both are seen as putting you at increased risk for dementia, kick the habit if you smoke and, if you drink, do so only in moderation.
- Exercise regularly. Regular physical activity is thought to help maintain blood flow to the brain and reduce your risk for conditions such as high blood pressure that are associated with the development of dementia. Consistent vigorous exercise helps lower the risk for dementia, according to a study published in Annals of Medicine in 2015.
- Eat a healthy diet. People who consume plenty of vegetables and fatty fish and keep away from saturated fats are thought to have a lower risk for cognitive decline
- Stimulate your brain. People with less education are at higher risk for dementia, according to the Alzheimer's Association, because mental stimulation throughout your lifetime is important for your brain health. Keep your mind active by increasing your level of social interaction, learning new skills, playing challenging games and doing other activities that require an engaged mind. People who are more socially and intellectually involved are less likely to develop dementia.

Johansson presented 2016 Renaissance Award from Film Center

Scarlett Johansson holding the 2016 Renaissance Award from the Gene Siskel Film Center presented to her Thursday night at The Ritz Carlton Hotel in Chicago.

“Scarlett Johansson has created some of the most memorable roles of our generation,” said Gene Siskel Film Center [GSFC] Executive Director Jean de St. Aubin. “Her diverse body of work speaks to how versatile and multifaceted she is, and the way she has stretched herself in all genres of acting, both on the screen and the stage, shows the depth of her talent.”

The GSFC honored Johansson last Thursday night with the 2016 Renaissance Award to at The Ritz Carlton Hotel in Chicago.

Some of Johansson’s most memorable performances were in “Girl with a Pearl Earring,” “Lost in Translation,” “Chef,” “Vicky Cristina Barcelona,” and “The Black Dahlia.”

Each year, the GSFC celebrates the art of film by honoring a filmmaker who advances the art of cinema. Past Renaissance Award honorees have included Mark Ruffalo, Morgan Freeman, Gwyneth Paltrow, Reese Witherspoon, Jamie Foxx, Robert Downey Jr., George Lucas, Nicole Kidman, Bob Balaban, John Woo, Michael Mann and William H. Macy and Felicity Huffman.

All proceeds from the benefit support the Gene Siskel Film Center’s curated film programming as well as lecture series and discussions with visiting scholars and filmmakers. This programming provides the opportunity for students and the Chicago community to experience the best in film presentation. The annual fundraiser is the primary event that ensures that the GSFC can continue to present films and film-related events in Chicago.

Johansson is a Tony and BAFTA award winner and four-time Golden Globe nominee. She was most recently seen in the title role of Luc Besson’s action-thriller “Lucy.” She won a Tony for her Broadway debut in the Arthur Miller play “A View from a Bridge” and took on the role of ‘Maggie’ in “Cat on a Hot Tin Roof” for her second run on Broadway.

She can be seen in three upcoming releases including the latest Coen Brothers film “Hail, Caesar!,” as the voice of python ‘Kaa’ in Disney’s upcoming live action/CGI animation adaptation of “The Jungle Book” and as the lead role in “Ghost in the Shell” out in 2017.

of violence-prone individuals, the CPD says.

The department announced 27 additional arrests in the Uptown neighborhood one day earlier, focusing on narcotics sales.

Reporters for this newspaper identified 13 of the Uptown arrestees and found that all were charged with conducting one or two low-level, hand-to-hand narcotics transactions. The charges were upgraded because the sales took place within 1,000 feet of various schools and churches, according to court records. Only three of the 13 subjects were identified as gang members.

“As we head into the July 4th weekend we are sending a clear signal to offenders that CPD will come at you with every tool we have to keep our communities safe,” Supt. Eddie Johnson said.

But CPD Communications Director Anthony Guglielmi bristled when a reporter suggested that the raids and scores of arrests were timed to avoid bad holiday headlines.

“Sad comment,” Guglielmi wrote on Twitter. “We really are trying to make [the] city safer and you know we’ve been doing these roundups nearly every 2-3 weeks against gangs.”

Former Old Town arts colony landmarked

A one-block stretch of artist studio spaces in the Old Town neighborhood was designated as an official Chicago Landmark District by City Council last Wednesday.

The Burton Place District includes a group of 12 buildings and five coach houses on W. Burton Place between LaSalle and Wells streets. Built in the late 1800s as rooming houses, the homes were remodeled in the late 1920s through the 1940s into a unique cluster of artist dwellings. Led by artists Edgar Miller and Sol Kogen, the remodeling work attracted other architects and craftsmen who achieved national and international fame, including Boris Anisfeld, Mark Tobey, Jesus Torres, and John W. Norton.

The structures retain most of the characteristics that define their historic significance, and are noted for their decorative metal and carved wood doors, a variety of terra cotta, stained and painted art glass, stone and tile ornaments, courtyard gardens, and art deco and modern designs.

The designation will protect the buildings’ exterior elevations, as well as select walls, fences, gates and sidewalks, from alteration or demolition.

Also, Biblical, Second City Cop is standing by their statement that George Lucas gave Father Mike Pfleger's St. Sabina Parish some $200,000 for his efforts as an anti-gang pastor, it might also be why he is an anti-high-rise pastor ... attacking members of the Friends of the Park.

SOTHEBY'S RECORD: At a recent auction, "Sotheby's Impressionist and Modernist Art Evening Sale," on June 21st, Pablo Picasso's, "Femme Assise," a stunning work in the cubist style was sold for more than $58 million. A work by Amadeo Modigliani, "Tragic Muse," sold for $51 million. Granted these are museum quality pieces but finances appear to be bouncing back in the tip top of the art market. Right, Steven Zick?

OH SAY CAN YOU SEE? Happy to hear that Ellen Irwin, the "Songbird" of Arlington Park Race Track (where she sang the National Anthem for decades) is back in her home high atop Boul Mich. following her return from Florida. Yes, that is her tooling around the streets of the Gold Coast in her vintage yellow Rolls Royce. (Quite the hot rod).

ART EVENT OF THE SUMMER: Chicago's Morpho Gallery ...5216 N. Vice President Joe Biden accepts an Honorary Law degree from Dublin's Trinity College.

THE BIDEN PRINCIPLE: Vice President Joe Biden was recently given an honorary degree in Law from Trinity College Dublin, the first such degree he has received from outside the United States. He was joined on his Dublin journey by a host of family and friends. Front and center from Chicago was longtime Biden Family friend Mark O'Malley. The Irish streets were crowded, and the locals were filled with cheer and music while awaiting the vice president. A representative group of children from each side of the border who perform as the Cross Border Orchestra, Catholics and Protestants, waited in soggy weather for the vice president's car to come along and when they thought he could hear them, they struck up the music with a chieftain's salute. At Biden's St. Patrick's Day party this year the young musicians performed in Washington. Needless-to-say, the VP had his best grin on.

DADDY? What North Sider just posted photos of her boyfriend rolling joints with her two kids? We hear she has her kids call her new boyfriends "daddy" ... makes it easier not to mix up names.

NORTHSHORE TO THE OLYMPICS: Olympic Gold Medal Champion Conor Dwyer, 27, from Winnetka, is Rio bound.

But the Loyola Academy grad who struck gold in London at the 2012 Games should not have been surprised to find more than 70 members of his assorted family of Dowdles, McGuires, Dwyers, and Lucases from all the villages of the Northshore come out to Century Link Center in Omaha recently for the Olympic swimming trials. The surprise was all in their own special matching family Olympic gear cheering him on his way to the games. For the Rio Olympics the "Dwyer Nation" is well prepared and ready for Conor's second Summer games and the opportunity to bring back more gold. Congratulations, Conor.

Winnetka's Olympic Gold swimmer Conor Dwyer is all set for Rio games.

CARDINAL RED: What American Cardinal, long retired, is so humble that he hardly even lets most friends see a dribble of red? Especially new friends. He's an old American shoe who avoids any instance that requires he stand on any protocol. He avoids situations requiring princely externals. A recent friendship made on vacation with a minor European Catholic aristocrat never required him to reveal himself. But, apparently, the friend's family were visiting the U.S. and, of course knew who the Churchman was, particularly when he was required to wear red while in New York. The friend was understanding, and actually happy he was left in the dark.

CARDINAL CRUISE: What local law student decided to go to Europe with his older attorney boyfriend before starting summer school. He said good-bye to his parents who thought he was going back-packing for a month while they were heading off on a second honeymoon. Word is they were totally shocked to bump into junior and his companion aboard the RMS Queen Mary 2 at sea. As there was no escape, he 'fessed up. Turned out that after a couple of cocktails the parents adored the 30-something lawyer pal. Word is that hardly anyone in Lake Forest does not know the fun they all had. Apparently driving through the South of France together.

CARDINAL TWEED: What plastic surgeon, for whom Chicago ladies lined up for more than a nip and tuck in the past, has just acknowledged that he likes fixing up the ladies but likes playing with the boys. This just might cut into his income. But he cares not.

Meaty anniversary...hard to imagine a business lasting 75 years but Gene & Georgetti, 500 N. Franklin, has done just that.

My mom absolutely loved the place, whose history runs deep, from the storied mural painted on the second floor, to the walls on the first floor lined with the famous faces who've eaten there. If only those walls could talk, the stories they surely could tell!

One notable regular was Frank Sinatra. Every time Ol' Blue Eyes came to Chicago, he'd call Gene and request that his booth be reserved for him -- a vintage booth in the back left corner of the main dining room installed when the restaurant first opened its doors. Sinatra would always come for after-hours dining, after the restaurant had closed.

But that was no problem for Gene, as he and Sinatra were close friends. In fact, the Chairman of the Board once even surprised Gene's wife, Ida Michelotti, with a special rendition of "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider," for her birthday. (Can you imagine being sung to by Sinatra? What a birthday present!)

Gene also had a long lasting friendship with Lucille Ball, which started after he refused to close down the restaurant to loyal customers in order for her to host a premiere party. Apparently Gene loved Lucy, but loved his regulars just as much.

What's impressive is the steakhouse has been all in the family. Gene Michelotti and his partner Alfredo "Georgetti" Federighi opened the doors in 1941, and today the restaurant is run by Gene's daughter, Marion, and her husband, Tony Durpetti along with managing partners Richard Ciota and Michelle Durpetti.

And the stars still keep coming. Carol Burnett recently broke bread at G & G during her stay in town for her Evening of Laughter and Reflection Tour. Owner Marion Durpetti and Carol actually share a mutual friend, actor Larry Manetti. Marion grew up with Larry, who is a dear friend of Carol's, and he recommended Carol stop at the famed steakhouse.

Carly Leviton, new vice president at the Lakeview-based Carol Fox & Associates.

Need an excuse to go there? On July 21 to 23 only, Gene & Georgetti will offer a mouth-watering 75th Anniversary Menu for Two for $75, with proceeds benefiting the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Anyone interested should make a reservation now as they're sure to be packed.

Foxy ladies... movin' on up at the marketing and PR firm Carol Fox and Assoc. are Carly Leviton, who's now VP of the company; Stacey Lewis, promoted to Director of Group Tix and Special Events; and Keiren Baliban, Account Executive.

Women of vision... Congrats to Old Town resident Candace Jordan, who was honored as Eversight Illinois' 2016 "Woman of Vision," at a June 23 event at the Peninsula Chicago. Jordan was bestowed the honor for her "continued work and support of making vision a reality."

Eversight Illinois, 547 W. Jackson, is a not-for-profit organization dedicated to the preservation and restoration of sight. The evening also honored Dr. Marian Macsai, the Chief of Division of Ophthalmology for North Shore Univ. Health System and Clinical Professor of Ophthalmology at the University of Chicago Pritzker School of Medicine.

Rahm's neighborhood CVS gets robbed again, fifth time in 18 months

A CVS pharmacy near Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel's Ravenswood home was robbed again last Tuesday.

It's the second time the store at 4051 N. Lincoln has fallen victim to an armed robbery since May 22. And it's at least the fifth time the store has been robbed in the past 18 months. Police think one offender is responsible for the four most recent hold-ups.

A heavyset white male entered the store around 3:30 a.m., brandished an X-Acto knife, and robbed the cashier of about $70. The offender is about 45 years old, stands about 5'2" tall, weighs about 180 pounds, and wore black rim glasses and brown shorts.

That's consistent with the description of the man who robbed the store at 2:40 a.m. on May 22; at 4 a.m. on July 24, 2015; and at 5:15 a.m. Feb. 17, 2015.

A different man is believed to be responsible for robbing the store at gunpoint at 5 a.m. on Jan. 15, 2015, a source said.
