The city is hosting a public meeting on the coming repairs to the Lake St. Bridge 4 p.m. Thursday.

Lake St. Bridge goes under construction in 2024

A critical river crossing in the Loop will be under construction - and closed down to traffic - beginning in early 2024 when the city starts a major rehab on the Lake St. Bridge over the South Branch of the Chicago River.

The work is expected to take 18 months, leaving Lake St. closed from Canal St. to Wacker Dr.

The city is hosting a public meeting on the project 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 10, at CTA headquarters, 567 W. Lake St. Attending will be CTA and city of-

The project includes a complete replacement of the bridge, and rehabilitation the substructure, bridgehouse, electric and mechanical component of the bridge.

The bridge was first constructed in 1916 and carries a double track of CTA trains east and west over the upper portion of the bridge and vehicular traffic on the lower level.

The current bridge replaced a double-decked center pier swing bridge. All swing bridges in Chicago had been identified as obstructions to navigation and ordered removed by the U.S. War Department in the late 1800s. When the bridge first opened, it was the world's first doubledecked trunnion bascule bridge. Today, this workhorse bridge carries about 4,000 pedestrians, 14,500 cars, 526 trains every day and is operated about 40 times each year for seasonal sailboat

As city resources are stretched thin, Streertville promised more attention at migrant shelter

Last week after reports of violence, trafficking and lawlessness at the migrant refugee center at the Inn of Chicago in Streeterville broke, the Committee on Immigrant and Refugee Rights met to hold a Subject Matter Hearing to collect testimony and discuss the growing problem.

Residents are already weary of the troubles going on near the building, and decry all the lawlessness. They experience the daily parade of problems including gang activity, fighting, sex trafficking, drug use and drug dealing, and wonder when help will actually arrive.

City officials say that the Inn at 162 E. Ohio St., will get more attention. Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] - in whose ward the Inn is located - and his colleagues have been promised enhanced building security; increased police presence and patrols; more regular inspections of the property to ensure residents are in safe living conditions; and more regular visits from social service providers.

How the overworked and understaffed Chicago police manage that is yet to be seen, but Chicago residents can be sure that as more migrant refugees arrive in town, managing them will only get more difficult.

In a July 20 letter from DFSS Cmsr. Brandie Knazze, the city admitted they are now "in the midst of a national humanitarian crisis that requires the collective responsibility and swift action" from the Mayor's Office and all other departments. She says that the migrants at the Inn of Chicago have been given a copy of the "shelter rules and expectations."

> Sharing roles in managing this growing mess are the Dept. of Family & Support Services [DFSS]; Chicago Public Schools; the Office of Emergency Management & Communications, and the Chicago Dept. of Public Health.

But as with most things involving large groups of people, it always comes down to "you and what army?" And right now, as City Hall bureaucrats hold meeting after meeting on the growing problem of how to assimilate new refugees into Chicago life, they seem to be short on armies. As the city further spreads arriving migrants out into more community locations, managing this is going to take boots on the streets in and adjacent to the growing number of migrant refugee shelters. In many ways this is an all new staffing crisis for the city, Cook

Burglars raid posh Mag Mile boutique, get away with huge haul of pricey leather goods

BY CWBCHICAGO

A luxury boutique on the famed Magnificent Mile was burglarized Aug. 5 by up to eight men who hauled away a massive amount of high-end leather goods.

The break-in at Bottega Veneta, 800 N. Michigan, occurred just a few hours after an armed man broke into the nearby DIOR store after closing time on Aug. 4 and stole merchandise while threatening the staff with a gun.

Around 5:32 a.m. Saturday, Chicago police received calls of a panic alarm and a burglary in progress at Bottega Veneta. The retailer specializes in highend leather goods like purses and shoes. Handbags at the store can retail for more than $4,000 each.

Police said seven or eight men entered the store by smashing a front window. Once inside, they gathered shoes and clothing, then fled in two vehicles.

The getaway cars were a dark

Ford F-150 and a white Nissan Altima, a Chicago police spokesperson said.

The store's losses will be in the tens of thousands of dollars, according to a source. An officer at the scene radioed that "pretty much the whole store" was empty.

Just four days ago, Crain's reported that Bottega Veneta will be moving out of the Mag Mile location for new digs at 41 E. Oak St., right around the corner from the DIOR store.

A similar raid occurred at the store at 4:39 a.m. last Christmas. Chicago police said a white van pulled up near the store, and three offenders got out. They broke a pane of glass near the store's front entrance and went inside.

CPD released surveillance video of the burglary in early January. The footage showed one man getting out of the vehicle with a tool, possibly a sledgehammer, while the other two climbed out with large blue trash bins.

All the girls and the boys made a divil of a noise

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

My grandmother, the indomitable Nora Ryan O'Connor, was a sweet softy.

She spent her whole life making room for other people. Room on the sofa. Room at the kitchen table, room in the pew (her favorite), room in the back seat of the car, room on a CTA bus, room on the Santa Fe Chief. (Her favorite train to California).

She'd even squeeze over for you in her rocking chair. She didn't skimp a bit.

I always suspected that she was making room for her own survival, coming as she did from a very large family in the picturesque village of Croom Co. Limerick.

Her Ryan clan didn't have a lot of bedrooms, or beds, in their 19th Century Irish cottage. There was a lot of room to tinkle, outside, rain or shine, but I think they often had to eat in shifts, to make room for all the people. It was like the Arthur Godfrey, Carmel Quinn tune, "Mick McGilligan's Ball."

The Irish ditty recounted the fabled return of a former immigrant to the U.S., years later when he's a wealthy man of means. He returns and throws a huge party for people far and wide. No one refuses his invitation. So many folk show up for the ball, the song recounts, "they had to tear the paper off the walls. To make room for all the people, in the hall. All the girls and the boys made a "divil" of a noise, at Mick McGilligan's ball." It was that crowded.

Whenever we heard that tune as children we laughed ourselves silly. No one more than Grandma O'Connor. She loved eye-balling the ridiculous in life, possessed as she was with the wits to bring us to hysterical laughter.

That was always true when she'd spot someone making too much of themselves. Showing off for others. In our family she'd never let anyone get away with such nonsense. At the first moment of their showing off, she'd have the room in stitches. And taught someone too big for their britches a life lesson of sense and sensibility. She did it with no harm intended. Just the reasoned hopeful conscience that they'd mend their ways.

If you might think she was rough on people with low self-esteem, you should have seen her with liars. She had absolutely no time for the fraudulent tricksters of life in or out of the family.

A big lie was a mortal sin in her book. And she was like a one-woman jury from the Council of Trent when she heard them covering up the truth or twisting reality to suit their situation.

Grandma would have made a good nun.

She was never mean spirited or cruel. But she'd gnaw-away at a lie she'd heard like a greyhound with a leg bone

She once told me that the truth was all we had. Ours to protect at all costs. It's all Jesus had. Or any of the disciples. Either you get the truth or you have nothing.

That's not Sinn Fein propaganda from her youth, but the words of St. Thomas Aquinas, himself. And St Dominic. Both knew there were no short cuts to the transformative power of God. So no unjust cuts. False cuts. Or fake starts.

You lived by the elastic from which you were hung.

Since coming to America, that had been all they'd known regarding the strength and stability that they could not let go. Constancy was the absolute moral value. Proven over time by conscientious Americans and immigrants new upon arrival.

The manipulators of truth needed no elaborate measurement of truthfulness. Expert and flawless, as they were, at delivering the altering surgery of disguise and disintegration.

Truthfulness demanded not only an embrace of everyday reality, but also the wits to recognize that when you won't let go of truth you have no need for excuses or alibis.

That's what makes me most uncomfortable around liars as well. All those nervous alibis that make simple living a hardship. And everyday life a long grocery list of

You don't have to strain your eyes to see how that works in Chicago. The home of the professional American liar. The natural habitat, it seems, for "the fibber," the obfuscater, the forked tongue and the show-off. Whether we're talking baseball, or who won an election, or whose lipstick is on the collar of your shirt. Alive in the urban capital of the lie.

Maybe that's why so many aldermen go to prison.

But it's not only City Hall, the Statehouse or Washington D.C. that has a slippery slope past their front door. Looks like there are equally slippery slopes in front of the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago Sun-Times. Must be, when neither one can stop fibbing about the looting that unfolded last week in the South

Eyewitness accounts from Chicago police at the scene say there were more than 400 young teens out-of-control ransacking businesses. The Tribune just says some 30 to 40 arrests were made. The Sun-Times dittos that. These newspapers really must see themselves as a partner in crime, reporting those numbers of looting mobs. Wish my grandmother could have a go at them and their fibs. She might even remember the days when the Medill and Mc-Cormick Families, former owners of the Tribune regularly attacked Chicago's immigrant Rocky Wirtz Irish population for being a race of witless drunkards, petty thieves and mindless papists.

In the past, on warm summer nights, rioting, murder and looting was centered along Chicago Ave. at State St. near the McDonald's with easy and free access to the CTA Red Line station. But this last shindig of Chicago crime was on the complete opposite side of town at the South end of the Loop.

The outnumbered forces of truth in their checkered riot gear must have wondered as the opposing forces met head on what an extra comfort "seclusion" of the press, "fibbing" brings to any battlefront. Especially where fibs and lies are as helpful to the lawless, as a bazooka was on the sandy beaches, once, of Normandy.

And sadly, here in Chicago, the only mourner of truth is an Irish grandmother now long dead. Still puzzled at those who risk their loss of heaven by the twisted conceits of human trickery. Giving up on honest talk. And the true dimensions of the conflict

Especially the sheer number of those teens now muscularity made bold by theft and the ease for carrying a weapon. They had long lost their childish sense of play. Trading it for gangland mayhem no city newspaper can even acknowledge, no urban tabloid can admit.

Will proposed 'Mansion Tax' burden middle-class owners?

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

The so-called "Mansion Tax" really is a Robin-Hood style plan to steal from the rich to give to the poor, conservatives say. However, it could also hurt the city's middle-class property owners.

Mayor Brandon Johnson's proposal to more than triple the transfer tax that buyers of residential or commercial properties priced at $1 million or more could eventually backfire to actually reduce the city's affordable housing stock.

Thousands of North Side two-, three- and four-unit apartment buildings are owned by "Ma and Pa" middle-class people and senior citizens, who frequently charge under-market affordable rents.

While a growing number of those properties may be valued at more than $1-million, the buildings really represent the middleclass owner's retirement nest egg. And in time, won't just about all North Side be properties be worth a million or more? They will if real estate values continue to grow and inflation casts its magic.

Although the proposed tax would be paid by the buyer, essentially it could lower the seller's sale price by tens of thousands of dollars.

Dubbed the "Mansion Tax," the Johnson proposal would hike the buyer's transfer tax on a $1-million property to 2.65%—or a hefty $26,500—from the current $7,500, which is .075% of the sale price.

Essentially, this means the city would be taxing elderly and middle-class owners of $1-million properties $26,500 off the top. Closing the sale at a lower price would slash the seller's retirement nest egg. It is likely that the new owner would ask double-digit rent increases to make up for the luxury tax hit, and that is the exact opposite of what Mayor John-

The luxury tax would translate into buyers of $1-million properties having to pay $13.25 for every $500 in sales value, up from the current $3.75 in value. The $3,000 transfer tax sellers now pay per $1 million would not change under the current proposal.

The buyer's tax bite would grow incrementally the more agents across the state, believes that the luxury tax would further lower prices and reduce volume in the high-end market.

Upscale lakefront neighborhoods—such as the Gold Coast. Near North Side, Lincoln Park, Old Town, Lakeview and Edgewater—likely would suffer losses in value if the luxury tax is enacted.

Under Mayor Johnson's "Bring or Johnson's goal is for the luxury tax to be approved by the Chicago City Council this fall.

Then, in 2024 the proposal would be placed on the ballot for a voter referendum on the March. Presidential primary ballot. So, the earliest the luxury tax could go into effect is spring of 2024.

Jim Kinney

Jim Kinney believes buyers will ask: What does the Mansion Tax do to my choices? A buyer either pays the tax in the city or moves to a North Shore suburb where there is no Mansion Tax and the schools are infinitely better. "High taxes and crime already are causing people to vote with their feet. Some 60,000 people have left Illinois in recent years," Kinney said.

expensive the home or building. For example, if the sale price were $1.5 million, the transfer tax would jump to $39,750 from the current $11,250. The buyer of a $2-million mansion would pay a whopping $53,000, up from the current $15,000.

"Values of $1-million-plus properties already have dropped 10% to $30% this year," noted Jim Kinney, former president of the Illinois Realtors Association and a veteran Gold Coast broker for Baird & Warner.

The Illinois Assoc. of Realtors, a trade association that represents Chicago Home" proposal, 100% of an estimated $163 million in additional buyer taxes reportedly would be earmarked for the fight against homelessness over 12

That's on top of the roughly $62.6 million in annual transfer taxes $1-million-plus sales actually pumped into city coffers under the existing tax structure in the past year.

Mayor Johnson's team has signaled it no longer will seek to enact its luxury tax proposal as a state law through the Illinois General Assembly. Instead, May-

Ald. Nicole Lee (11th Ward) told the Chicago Tribune she is urging City Council members to ensure that the tax would not apply to the sale of multiunit apartment buildings with affordable rentals. "I want to make sure that we're not inadvertently causing a reduction in naturally occurring affordable housing with this transfer tax," Lee said.

Kinney believes buyers will ask: What does the Mansion Tax do to my choices? A buyer either pays the tax in the city or moves to a North Shore suburb where there is no Mansion Tax and the schools are infinitely better.

"High taxes and crime already are causing people to vote with their feet. Some 60,000 people have left Illinois in recent years," Kinney said.

If the City Council passes the Mansion Tax proposal, and it is approved via referendum next spring, experts say Cook County Assessor Fritz Kaegi may have to institute a new model for assessing $1-million-plus homes to compensate for falling market values and the hefty burden of the added layer of taxes.

A recent count showed there are 6,139 homeless people in Chicago, according to the Department of Family and Support Services. That number includes 2,196 migrants. The U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development estimates Chicago's homeless population is closer to 5,300.

Obviously, these totals do not include the thousands of asylumseekers shipped to Chicago from Texas and now living temporarily in Chicago police stations, schools, Park Dist. field houses, on the Wright Junior College campus and in motels. The Broadway Armory Park Fieldhouse at 5917 N. Broadway in Edgewater also has been named a new immigrant haven.

Why are tax bills are so high, how can we save money?

Treasurer's new guide explains how our property tax system works

In an effort to bring transparency to the complex property tax system, last week Cook County Treasurer Maria Pappas released an easy-to-understand property tax guide that explains the ins and outs of property taxes.

The guide, "How the Illinois Property Tax System Works," explains in simple terms how property taxes are determined, the offices involved and how collections are enforced. It includes a glossary of key words.

"Property taxes are very complex and involve six different government agencies," Pappas said. "This guide helps pull back the curtain on the property tax system so taxpayers know exactly how their tax bill is calculated and where the money goes after they pay their bill."

The guide also details the money-saving tax exemptions that help lower a tax bill. It also explains the process of filing an appeal to dispute an assessment. Typically, property owners can appeal if they believe their property was assessed at a higher value than comparable properties in their area.

Long-suffering taxpayers won't be surprised to learn that Illinois has the second-highest median residential property tax bill of all U.S. states. Illinois continues to rely heavily on property taxes to fund local government and has the most units of government of any state.

A new report from the Illinois Commission on Government Forecasting Accountability shows a dramatic increase of overall tax-payer spending over the past six years. Their report on fiscal year 2024 - also released last week reviews the annual budget that began July 1. The report details the budget process and how much each state agency and program is set to receive in annual appropriations.

While a lot of reporting focuses on the state spending of $50.4 billion in Illinois General Revenue Funds, overall taxpayer spending is much higher at more than $193.5 billion when taking into account federal and special funds. That's up from the $99 billion in total spending for fiscal year 2018, or a 95.3% increase.

From 2020 to 2021, spending increased 19%. The following year, spending went up 8% and from 2023 to 2024, spending increased around 3%. When the pandemic lockdown happened, state and local spending rose at the same time tax revenue dropped. The federal government covered a lot of that spending with bailout cash, still between 2019 and 2020, the annual appropriations increased by a whopping 35%.

Illinois and Chicago also have some of the highest unfunded pension liabilities in the country, which can result in steep tax increases as counties comply with Illinois and Chicago also have some of the highest unfunded pension liabilities in the country, which can result in steep tax increases as counties comply with a state law that mandates pension funds achieve 90% funding in the coming decades.

Does Lincoln Park Zoo's new five-year plan ignore its long history of innovation?

BY SANFORD B. DOLE

With more than 154 years of history, innovation, and educational programming, the current leadership of the Lincoln Park Zoo recently released its strategic plan for the next five years that seems to ignore its history of innovation.

"By 2028, we [will] have increased our impact and deepened engagement with schools and communities through co-creation and technology," according to a seven-page slide presentation posted on its website.

The Chicago institution is one of the last free zoos in a major American city and has long been

Back-to-school birth certificate days

With the first day of school fast approaching, the Cook County Clerk's Office will offer extended weekend hours this month for families seeking to obtain birth certificates to complete their child's registration for school.

Clerk Karen A. Yarbrough and her office will be hosting Backto-School Birth Certificate Day on Saturday, Aug. 19, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Clerk's Office downtown, at 118 N. Clark St., Room 120.

"Whether your child is starting kindergarten, or your teenager is entering high school, having their birth certificate on hand is essential for enrollment and a smooth start to the school year," said Yarbrough. "We are pleased to be offering extended hours on Saturdays to accommodate families with busy schedules."

To get a certified copy of a child's birth certificate, the child must have been born in suburban Cook County or Chicago; the attending adult must be listed as the child's parent on the birth certificate or be their legal guardian, and that adult must have a valid photo ID, such as a driver's license, federal or state ID card, military ID, U.S. passport, and/or supporting documents. There is a $15 fee and $4 bonus fee for additional copies.

Parents may also request a birth certificate online, by phone, by mail, or at a local currency exchange.

a leader through its realistic wildlife displays, educational outreach and programming, and participation in scientific research which has included restoring wildlife populations to their natural environment, including the Arabian Oryx antelope and the Guam Kingfisher.

According to the plan "We will innovate and use technology to understand animals and enhance choice and agency."

More than 70 years ago, the Lincoln Park Zoo was among the earliest zoos to recognize the importance of a new medium, television, to reach and inform the public about the zoo and its animals. They were true 'influencers' before the term was even used.

Nearly 80 years ago, at a time when only about 300 homes in Chicago had a television set, its then-director Marlin Perkins began the first of what would be many television appearances on behalf of the zoo. His first appearances were in-studio and Perkins brought small animals such as small mammals, snakes, birds, frogs and turtles. After each of these appearances, awareness of the zoo and its mission in the state of the second in the second state of the second s

According to the authors of the 2003 book Ark in the Park: The Story of the Lincoln Park Zoo, Perkins decided to put an end to these television appearances when he found out station executives at WBKB (today WBBM) had sent a remote television truck to the Museum of Science and Industry but refused to send one to the zoo.

"He told the station director that he would no longer bring zoo animals to the studio but would be glad to cooperate if WBKB wanted to bring the mobile unit to the zoo," according to The Ark in the Park authors Mark Rosenthal, Carol Tauber and Edward Uhlir.

Perkins believed showing animals at the zoo would be more beneficial to the animals and would help educate the public about the work of zoo staff.

Nevertheless, the executives at WBKB refused Perkins' request.

"I thought the show would run through the summer until perhaps Labor Day and then when the kids went back to school it would be discontinued," said Perkins, who unknowingly would create an entire new genre of television, the nature show.

Perkins had hoped his broadcasts would connect the public with the zoo animals and his instinct was proven correct.

Robbers beat, rob, steal car from Lakeview hotel guest

A Lakeview hotel guest may have to find another way to get home after getting mugged in the hotel's parking garage on July 30. After roughing the man up and rifling his pockets, the robbers drove away with his car, a Chicago police report said.

The man told police he parked his car in the Century Mall parking garage, 2836 N. Clark, and started walking toward the hotel around 10:15 p.m.

But he didn't even make it out of the garage. A man and woman attacked him, forced him to the ground, and went through his pockets. They took his wallet, phone, and Then, they hopped into his white 2020 Nissan Rogue and drove out of the garage. They were last seen heading south.

A CPD report said the suspects are a heavyset Black male and a thin Black female. No weapons were seen during the robbery.

Twelve charged in drug trafficking probe targeting Fentanyl-laced heroin and cocaine sales

A federal drug trafficking investigation has resulted in charges against a dozen individuals for allegedly trafficking fentanyl-laced heroin, cocaine, or other drugs in Chicago.

The multi-year investigation, led by the FBI, utilized numerous controlled narcotics purchases, covert surveillance operations, and wiretapped communications to shut down two separate drug trafficking operations. Some of the defendants allegedly supplied or sought to supply drugs to customers in other states, including Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Ohio.

One of the defendants allegedly possessed a loaded semiautomatic handgun while engaged in his drug trafficking activities.

During the investigation, law enforcement seized nearly $400,000 in suspected illicit cash proceeds, distribution quantities of cocaine, heroin, and marijuana, Bentley and Mercedes-Benz automobiles, and a custom-built motorcycle.

Most of the defendants were arrested July 28 as part of an Organized Crime Drug Enforcement Task Force operation.

Charged in this federal drug conspiracy are Rnald Johnson, 57, Solstine Brown Robinson, 69, Charles Lawrence, 48, Chantell Toney, 37, Darrell Jones, 58, and Troy Bonaparte, 58, all of Chicago.

The charges allege that Johnson is a large-scale supplier of multiple narcotics. Law enforcement observed Johnson making several cocaine sales in the summer and fall of 2022, the complaint states. The conspirators allegedly utilized an apartment in Chicago's Oakland neighborhood as a "stash house" to store narcotics and cash.

During a meeting outside the stash house in Dec. 2022, Johnson allegedly provided a woman with approximately $300,500 in suspected drug proceeds that was stuffed into a duffel bag that law enforcement later seized from the woman.

Also charged are Derek Donley, 29, Kendall Banks, 31, Niger Gray, 25, Jamari McNeal, 29, April Thomas, 60, and Byron Murphy, 60 all of Chi-

According to the charges, the conspirators distributed and intended to distribute fentanyl-laced heroin, cocaine, and marijuana in Chicago.

Sexually abused by massage therapist, women receive $2.2 million settlement from Chicago luxury spa

Two women who accused a massage therapist of sexually abusing them during treatments at a Chicago luxury hotel spa have received settlements totaling $2.2 million, according to a press release from the law firm that represented them.

Joseph Mitchell

The Chuan Spa at the Langham Hotel Chicago, 330 N. Wabash, hired Joseph Mitchell though even he had been fired from two other massage jobs due to complaints about sexual behavior, the firm said. The Langham "ignored the prior complaints of sexual assault [by] continuing to employ Mitchell and even rehiring him after firing him due to the COVID-19 pandemic," according to the press

Prosecutors charged Mitchell, 32, with criminal sexual assault and sexual abuse in connection with the Chuan Spa allegations in June 2021. The cases are still pending, with the next court date on Aug. 8, court records show.

The women and a group of coworkers were in Chicago from Tennessee to celebrate with a client when they went to the Langham's spa for services in Sept. 2020, prosecutors said.

One of the women, 42, planned the trip and arranged for everyone to enjoy a spa day at the Chuan Spa.

She told Chicago police that a therapist who identified himself as "Joseph" rubbed mud on her private areas with his bare hands without consent. She later drifted in and out of sleep during a massage, prosecutors said, but she remembered feeling the therapist touch her private areas and woke up on her back, uncovered and exposed, prosecutors said.

The other woman, 34, reported Mitchell reaching under a towel covering her private areas and using his hands during her mud wrap and massage. Hotel and spa policy requires therapists to use a brush during the mud treatment, as is customary, prosecutors said.

Both women quickly shared their experiences with others, and they reported the allegations to the hotel about a week later, officials said. The hotel confronted Mitchell and fired Chicago police detectives learned that a woman made similar allegations against Mitchell when he worked as a massage therapist at a high-end fitness club downtown, prosecutors said. They said he was also accused of touching a female coworker inappropriately while they were applying for jobs at a massage service chain.

The women's law firm said the businesses were the East Bank Club and Massage Envy.

During Mitchell's initial bail hearing two years ago, private defense attorney Mike Gillespie said the criminal charges were filed after Mitchell was served with a civil suit regarding the allegations, and he did not respond to requests for monetary compensation. Mitchell has two children and "absolutely no criminal background," Gillespie said.

Attorneys for Power Rogers LLP represented the women, yielding a $1.2 million settlement for one of them last week. The firm's press release said the other woman reached a $1 million settlement last year.

Power Rogers said the Langham received an earlier sexual assault complaint against Mitchell in June 2019. A female customer called Mitchell "a predator" who went "too high on her thigh, touching her public bone, exposing her breasts, and touching her vagina," said the firm's statement.

"Staff apparently referred that complaint to the hotel's Director of Human Resources, but the hotel took no action other than 'counseling' Mitchell on 'how not to make clients uncomfortable," the firm said, citing the lawsuit.

"I want to be the voice so that other women can come out and tell their story. If you had a similar experience at the Langham, please know that we will support you and you're not alone," one of the women said in the

The other woman encouraged other potential victims to step forward.

"There's strength in numbers. The sooner we all stand up, the sooner the world starts changing," the woman said. "To the Langham leadership who put us and so many others in danger: I hope your profits are worth it. I don't know how you sleep at night."

River North man pushed quadriplegic into street, causing a concussion

A River North man faces a felony charge for allegedly pushing a quadriplegic man into a downtown street, causing the victim's wheelchair to tip over, and giving the victim a concussion. And, prosecutors say, the whole situation started with a disagreement over a dog the victim wasn't involved

Tristan Block

Officials said it started around 8 p.m. July 22 when Tristan Block, 27, was seen chasing an unleashed Golden Retriever near Ontario and erby stopped to help Block catch the dog after seeing it run into traffic. But prosecutor John Kyle said once the dog was back in Block's hands, the passerby grew concerned that he wasn't the animal's owner, and the two began arguing.

He said the 26-year-old victim came out of a nearby restaurant with a companion to check on the dog, but they didn't get involved in the argument. According to news reports, the victim was paralyzed after suffering a spinal injury while playing football several years ago.

Another passerby who was walking her own dog gave Block her dog's leash so he could use it, but she asked for it back because she was worried Block would use the leash to hurt the dog or a person, Kyle said.

The situation turned violent when Block punched the man, who stopped to help him catch the dog, in the face, according to a court transcript of Block's bail hearing. Block then threw the dog leash back at the woman who gave it to him.

Finally, without provocation, he pushed the victim in the chest, causing the man's wheelchair to roll off a curb, Kyle alleged. He said the victim's wheelchair tipped backward after falling off the curb, and his head hit the pavement.

The victim, bleeding from the head and suffering a concussion, left the scene with his companion, who took him to a hospital for treatment, Kyle explained. Block fled with the Golden Retriever, but the other two witnesses waited for police, he said.

Kyle said one of the victim's hands, which had limited feeling and mobility before the incident, remains numb, and it's unclear if he will regain feeling and use of the hand.

Hal Garfinkel, a private defense attorney representing Block during the bail hearing, said Block has never been arrested.

He called the allegations "troubling" and said his early information was that alcohol may have "skewed [Block's] judament."

Block worked in Google's HR department until March and plans to relocate to New York City for a consulting job in a couple of weeks, Garfinkel

Judge David Kelly ordered Block to pay a $2,000 bail deposit to get out of jail. He refused to permit Block to travel to New York or to see family in Michigan until another judge looked at the situation.

Prosecutors charged Block with aggravated battery of a handicapped person and two counts of misdemeanor battery.

Another Home Depot employee charged in massive fraud scheme, allegedly issued $281,000 in bogus gift cards

Prosecutors on Aug. 1 accused a fifth Home Depot employee of participating in a massive gift card fraud scheme that cost the retailer at least $6 million in losses.

Rosa Reynoso-Rodriguez, 34, is charged with participating in a continuing financial crime enterprise and theft of $100,000 to $500,000.

Rodriguez

Like two of the previously charged employees, Reynoso-Rodriquez worked at the 2570 N. Elston location. Prosecutors said she issued $900 gift cards 313 times, for a total of $281,700.

We first reported on the racket in May. Officials said Home Depot stores in the city were defrauded by scammers who collected $900 credits more than 6,000 times for a single purchase made three years ago.

The scam began in March 2020 when someone made a $6,000 purchase at the 2570 N. Elston location. Days later, someone returned to the store and said the purchase was for a tax-exempt church. A store employee accepted the tax-exempt documents and issued the representative a $900 gift card for the tax value.

The same receipt was used for over three years to generate more than 6,000 gift cards, mostly for $900 each.

Cashiers scanned the receipt bar code from an accomplice's phone each time, manually entered the tax exemption information, and then cut a gift card for the difference. Some cashiers issued multiple gift cards for the same purchase in one sitting. And some cashiers even had a copy of the receipt stored on their personal phones so they could issue gift cards by themselves.

On Tuesday, prosecutors said Reynoso-Rodriguez issued $49,500 worth of $900 gift cards between May 3 and May 10 alone.

Last Thursday, prosecutors accused Tyler Clark, 25, of being involved in the scam while working as a cashier at the company's 4555 S. Western location. Prosecutors said Clark used his employee credentials to issue $900 gift cards for the same 2020 purchase on 971 occasions, costing the company $8/3,900.

Between May 1 and May 11, when investigators were actively investigating the scam, he issued $108,900 worth of $900 gift cards using the receipt, officials said.

Officials said the scam started slowly, with unknown persons using the receipt to get $900 gift cards 15 times in 2020. In 2021, the receipt was used to generate gift cards 33 times.

Last year, 1,372 gift cards were issued for $900 in "tax credits" on the same purchase.

In the first round of charges in May, prosecutors said Lamont Thompson, 49, was one of the "customers" who presented the three-year-old receipt to receive $900 in gift cards after Home Depot alerted Chicago police on May 5. Thompson allegedly received ten gift cards worth $9,000 on May 10, another 39 cards worth $35,100 during two sessions on May 12, and three cards worth $2,700 on May 15.

When police arrested Thompson, he had 33 Home Depot gift cards worth $29,700 on him, prosecutors said. He is charged with four counts of felony retail theft and operating a continuing financial crime enter-

Two Home Depot cashiers, Christiana Westbrooks, 38, and Sharon Dwyer, 46, were charged with theft in May. Each had been working for the company for about two years.

Prosecutors said Westrooks used her unique teller code to issue $900 gift cards on the same receipt more than 1,000 times since January 1. She was carrying $2,980 in cash when police arrested her, officials said. She allegedly admitted to receiving $100 for every gift card she Dwyer allegedly issued more than 1,500 of the cards worth a total of $1.3 million since Jan. 1. Prosecutors said Dwyer received $30 for every gift card she issued during the scam. In addition to giving cards to scammers who posed as customers, Dwyer is accused of scanning an image of the 2020 receipt from her phone and issuing $900 gift cards to herself. She was carrying $4,420 in cash when cops arrested her.

Officials did not explain how the fraudulently issued gift cards were converted to cash, nor did they say if additional arrests were expected. Exactly how the scheme was able to operate for three years, generating thousands of $900 gift cards from a single $6,000 receipt, is unclear.

Man gets nine years for shooting victim in the Loop

A man was sentenced on Tuesday to nine years for shooting another man near a downtown Chicago hotel two years ago.

Jeaun Tapley, 32, received the sentence from Judge Michael Clancy after pleading guilty to aggravated battery by discharging a firearm, according to court records. Prosecutors dropped five counts of someone in line for food.

Before long, Tapley pulled back up in front of the hotel, walked into the McDonald's, and walked a woman out of the restaurant, officials said. Tapley then pulled out a gun and fired shots at people outside the restaurant.

The victim, a 25-year-old man, was shot twice in the arm and once in the chest. Both bones in one of his forearms were broken. Prosecutors said Tapley returned to his car and drove away after the shooting.

An initial media statement from the Chicago Police Department said the shooter was a woman. But prosecutors later claimed that McDonald's surveillance cameras recorded the shooting and clearly showed Tapley's distinct hairstyle and a physical handicap on his arm. And video from the hotel showed his car's license plate, they said.

He earned 736 days of credit toward his sentence while in custody. His parole date has not been announced.

Did a pack of wild teens destroy your property? Bill the city

BY CWBCHICAGO

Chicago residents and business owners who suffer losses from large groups of young people running wild in their neighborhood may want to take a tip from a North Side alderman: Bill the

The unusual suggestion came from Lakeview Ald. Bennett Lawson [44th] following an hours-long "teen trend" near the Belmont CTA station in June.

Lawson's advice may come in handy for folks in the South Loop, where hundreds of people, primarily teenagers, ran rampant on the night of July 30. Like the owner of the 7-Eleven store at 560 W. Grenshaw, which was looted by dozens of teens.

We've learned that a small businessperson recently took ownership of the Grenshaw location, which had been owned by 7-Eleven's corporate operations.

While some observers quickly conclude that insurance will cover losses, that's not necessarily true.

Many insurance policies carve out exceptions for mob action and civil unrest.

A Lakeview resident learned that the hard way on the Monday after Chicago's Pride Parade.

"I could see that people were jumping on cars. I couldn't see my car, but I knew...it was totally destroyed," he told NBC Chicago. Rescigno told the station he was looking at a $15,000 auto repair

He and his partner were on the hook for repair bills, he said, because of the mob action exception, "'You don't have the package that covers mob insurance,'... I thought (it was a joke). I didn't realize I needed to check the 'mob' box."

Enter Ald. Lawson. He addressed the Lakeview teen trend in his weekly newsletter on June

"If you or a neighbor experienced any vehicle or property damage," Lawson wrote, "we highly recommend filing a claim with the City." He provided a link to the locations.

That helpful link takes 'mob' victims to the Dept. of Law's "claims" page, the first stop on what will surely be a long road. The page invites the public to submit claims for motor vehicle accidents, property damage, and general liability.

A database of city claims shows they often involve damage to cars—think potholes—and can take years to reach a resolution.

The good news? If your claim clears all of the bureaucratic hurdles, the City Council almost always approves payment unanimously, WBEZ reported in 2019.

Shape up or ship out

I can't be the only Chicago resident that is entirely fed up with Mayor Brandon Johnson's defense and coddling of the teen mobs that are taking over our city.

Johnson has zero plans to realistically combat these teen mobs, and there are zero repercussions for these out-of-control

Apparently he's worried about the teen mobsters' feelings getting hurt by reporters using the word "mob."

Johnson certainly isn't worried about the feelings of business owners and other civilized, law-abiding citizens and tourists of this city terrorized by these mobs.

For the record, Johnson, this is the definition of the word "mob:"

"Noun: a large crowd of people, especially one that is disorderly and intent on causing trouble or violence."

As my mom used to say, "Shape up or ship out." That is advice Mayor Johnson should heed if, like the last mayor, he doesn't want to get "shipped out" in the next mayoral election.

Numb to nature

Enjoying the ambiance of Andersonville's outdoor dining, no one spoke up when Hamburger Mary built seating against, and over, this large tree's rain grate. Not the 40th Ward alderman. Not the Andersonville Chamber. Not the "green folks" posturing about protecting Chicago's Urban Forest.

Unfortunately this sidewalk tree wasn't considered part of the "Forest." I watched it decline, and now it's dead. But oblivious to this leafless tree, new owner Sweetgreen was granted a permit, and built its sidewalk cafe around a dead tree. Have nature lovers arrived at a point where they turn a blind eye to a tree's needs, abuse, distress,

I became a Chicago Treekeeper in 2005, and will continue to speak up for trees paying a price for botanical ignorance. Proper tree care is not a mystery, yet many are numb to nature and blind to the abuse going on right in front of them. Abuse includes trees serving as bulletin boards, enduring wrappings, or a cafe stealing space from the trees, for storage, and extra seating. The tree was there first—years before the cafe's expansion—yet remains poorly protected by the outdated City of Chicago Sidewalk Cafe Rules.

So neighbors, the next time you sit down at a sidewalk cafe, look around. Is there a tree in the space? (Look up if it's dead.) Is the rain grate free and clear? Or are you Alderman, chamber's Apple Fest plans squeezing juice out of local business?

When will Lincoln Square residents, shoppers and businesses realize Ald. Matt Martin wants to hurt them, not help them? And his ally in the latest scheme is once again the local Lincoln Square Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce, who has signed on, for a price.

First he gave away a critical piece of commercial infrastructure, the Lincoln Square parking lot, and boosted the winnings on the slick insider deal with tens of millions of extra tax dollars, all gifted to an out-of-town developer.

The chamber was one of the first to endorse the parking lot give-away, back in Nov. 2019. And now suddenly the chamber is undertaking a parking study to see where the heck all their commercial parking has disappeared to?!

Next up, the chamber and Martin are practically closing down three blocks of Lincoln Square businesses so they can sell beer on the streets from Saturday, Sept. 30 through Sunday, Oct. 1.

The Lincoln Square Apple Fest was run for 20 years by the publisher of this newspaper to bring shoppers into small neighborhood Lincoln Square businesses. Back then the Lincoln Square Chamber of Commerce didn't shut down any streets or parking lots to accomplish this. The chamber knew easily accessible parking was critical for the local businesses to succeed.

Now Apple Fest has morphed into a three block long beer blast and music fest that will close Lincoln Ave. from Lawrence to Sunnyside, and close off two critical parking lots on a big shopping weekend, the one at Leland and Lincoln, and the one just north of Sunnyside.

Shoppers will not be able to park nearby and access Gene's Sausage, Merz Apothecary, the Davis Theater, the Old Town School of Folk Music and all the other wonderful restaurants, stores and shops.

On one of the last nice weekends this fall the Apple Fest will compete with Gideon Welles, Fork, Caro Mio, Bistro Campagne, Due Lire, the Warbler, Gather, Daily Bar & Grill, Luella's Southern Kitchen, Sojourn, Dimo's Cafe, Bagel Miller, Pastures, Oromo Cafe, Hello Jasmine, Cafe Selmarie, Barba Yianni, Arturo Steakhouse, Garcia Mexican Restaurant and Territory Kitchen. Fest goers will come in, drink some water, use the bathrooms, order nothing, then leave. The food and drinks are out on the

Will the city, Ald. Martin and the antismall business chamber of commerce reimburse Lincoln Square businesses for lost revenue? Why not move the Apple Fest to Welles Park and keep Lincoln Ave., its parking lots and the businesses open? Oh right, Ald. Martin gave away Welles Park to the out of the neighborhood Lincoln Park Little League.

Who will benefit from this scam? Well if there is nice weather, the chamber will make lots of money... and it will be at the expense of their own membership.

AUGUST 9 - AUGUST 15, 2023 • 9 Chalk Art Fest Aug. 26 on Howard St.

Chalk Howard Street 2023 will be held Saturday, Aug. 26 along Howard St. between Paulina and Ashland. It is Chicago's only chalk art festival.

The festival returns to transform the street surface into blank canvases for national and local street artists, neighbors, families, and street art lovers.

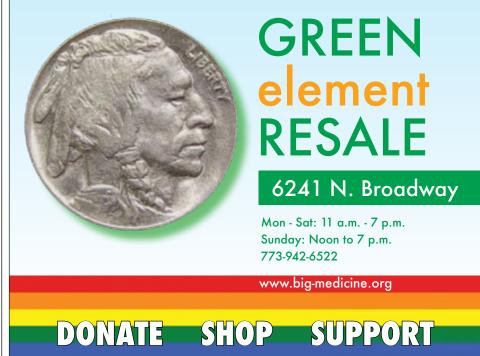

This year the event features nationally renowned 3D street artists Amanda-lee Harris, Randy Segura, Craig Rogers and Zach Herndon, as well as 2D street artists Asia Bell, April Tolliver, Heather Drost, and Rebecca LaFlure, who will create vivid and interactive chalk drawings.

This year, Chalk Howard Street will offer a limited amount of street squares available for purchase to individuals, families and groups who wish to have a creative space and draw their own chalk art. Each square is priced at $25 and includes a supply of chalk.

This free-admission street art festival features live music, local vendors, food and drinks. Chalk Howard Street is sponsored by Howard Street/Jarvis Square Special Service Area #19. For more information on the festival, visit chalkhowardstreet.com.

those in turn can be traced back to Perkins's pioneering efforts with Zoo Parade," wrote Rosenthal, Tauber and Uhlir in 2003.

Perkins had joined the zoo in 1944, as assistant zoo director. He had been recruited from the Buffalo Zoo in New York State to become its director. Even though he was still a young man, Perkins already had a stellar reputation as an animal keeper and curator. Perkins became director at a time when the public's perception of zoos was changing.

"The character of zoos has changed rapidly in America since World War II. Formerly zoos were just thought of as menageries and collections of animals for amusement and recreation. They still are wonderful for recreation, but more and more zoos are becoming important scientific and educational institutions," Perkins in 1957.

In 1962, Dr. Lester E. Fisher, who had already been the zoo's veterinarian, replaced Perkins as its director. Top priority for Fisher was to improve the animals' today through the zoo's Lester E. Fisher Center for the Study and habitats at the zoo.

According to the zoo's new five-year plan, the zoo will also "integrate and sustain Lincoln Park Zoo content and experiences as an element of learning in Chicago Schools." But this also seems to lack acknowledgment of the zoo's nearly half-century efforts on behalf of education.

"What was acceptable at Lincoln Park and around the country was to take animals, put them in small spaces, and have them for exhibit. Somehow, people were able to live with that. I decided it was one of my goals to take the animals out of what I thought were cement areas with metal bars. I had to try and change that," said Fisher in Ark in the Park.

Fisher's decades-long tenure as zoo director is remembered as one in which the Lincoln Park Zoo became known around the world for its zoo habitats which resembled their habitats in the wild and Conservation of Apes.

In 1968, Fisher supported the formation of the non-profit Lincoln Park Zoological Society, which supported the zoo's fundraising efforts. At that time, the zoo was completely funded by the Chicago Park District [CPD]. Bureaucratic red tape often made it difficult to make much-needed improvements. For more than two decades, the group spearheaded the zoo's fundraising efforts. Then, in 1995, the CPD relinquished control of its operations to the zoo society.

five-year plan, the zoo will also "integrate and sustain Lincoln Park Zoo content and experiences as an element of learning in Chicago Schools." But this also seems to lack acknowledgment of the zoo's nearly half-century efforts on behalf of education.

Through a grant from the US Fish and Wildlife Service, the zoo started its education program in 1978 and hired its first full-time education director, Judith Kolar.

According to Ark in the Park,

Kolar developed an ecologybased, conversation-oriented program from her workshops with Chicago Public School teachers and students. This allowed her to test and evaluate the educational material before she implemented a formal education program. Through these workshops, she had gained first-hand knowledge of the needs of the communities and how to best educate the public about wildlife conservation efforts.

"You need music. I don't know why. It's probably one of those Joe Campbell questions, why we need ritual. We need magic. and bliss, and power, myth, and celebration and religion in our lives, and music is a good way to encapsulate a lot of it." — Jerry Garcia

Long delayed Streeterville project may finally get underway

DuSable Park still years away from reality

A giant new twin-tower development at N. Lake Shore Dr. and the Chicago River now has permits pending in City Hall to get the project started.

Once the massive project is done, then the long-delayed DuSable Park may finally bloom too. That project was first announced back in 1987 by former mayor Harold Washington.

Related Midwest's 400 Lake Shore Dr. proposal should soon come to life after the site sat vacant for 15 years after the dramatic failure of a previously proposed "The Chicago Spire." The Spire plan crashed in 2009 during the worldwide real estate crash.

The Spires was partially built between 2007 and 2008, leaving a giant circular concrete foundation hole in the ground that filled with water.

The pending permits show an address of 462 E. N. Water St., and states that the northern tower will be the first to be built, followed by the southern tower. Designed by Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, the 73-story skyscraper will have 635 rental units and rise 875 feet, but provide only 300 off-street underground parking spaces. The second tower will rise 765-feet.

Reminiscent of a waterfall, the cascading silhouette of each tower is designed to form expansive outdoor terraces that extend individual residences beyond their walls. These outdoor living areas will present sweeping, 180-degree views of the adjacent lakefront, river and cityscape. Adjacent to the towers, an extended Riverwalk will bridge the gap between downtown and the lakefront, connecting to a future DuSable Park.

Due to a 20% allocation of units that qualify as affordable housing, Related Midwest will reportedly be getting a $510 million loan from the Illinois Housing Development Authority [IHDA]. IHDA offers several first mortgage and bond financing options to developers of affordable housing.

IHDA offers low-interest rate construction and permanent financing by acting as bond issuer and lender, and by providing credit enhancement through its HUD Risk Share Program. IHDA will underwrite the loan to the Risk Share standards and obtain an FHA-insured loan. The developer is able to work with IHDA directly for the bond issuance, bond loan and automatic four-percent Low Income Housing Tax Credit award.

One of the most stalled park projects in Chicago history will finally be getting attention, after this project is completed. Chicago Dock and Canal Trust first donated property to the Chicago Park District [CPD] as a proposed park in 1988. In 1857, the State of Illinois sold 40 acres, including the DuSable Park site, to the Chicago Dock and Canal Trust. In 1893 the company dug out the Ogden Slip to allow boats to pull cargo from railroads at North Pier.

Related Midwest must first use the longproposed DuSable Park as a equipment and materials staging area. Once they're done with the project, the developers will spend $10 million to finally create a park on the 3.44-acre peninsula of reclaimed land located along the Lake Michigan shoreline directly east of N. Lake Shore Dr. and north of the Chicago River. The site was created in the 1860s when fill materials were placed along the Lake Michigan shoreline.

Soil tests performed at the location of DuSable Park in 2000 showed contamination by radioactive thorium. From 1904 through 1936, the Lindsay Light Company processed ores at the site which contained thorium to manufacture thorium impregnated gas light mantles.

After the plant closed, contaminated soil was dumped on the location. In March 2003, the CPD stated that a clean-up was being undertaken. The CPD reported the remediation had been completed by Sept. 2012

The project will also complete Founder's Way, creating a landscaped riverfront walkway that extends to DuSable Park.

be used until the construction of the permanent venue is completed. The Temple has had multiple uses since being constructed 111 years ago, but has sat idle since 2020.

But area residents are still concerned about the traffic and crime impact the casino will have. The River North Residents Assoc. [RNRA] worries that two area neighborhoods will be forced to endure elevated congestion and increased predatory behavior to accommodate the gambling venue.

In a released statement the RNRA said, "It seems to be a foregone conclusion that River North and River West neighborhood streets and alleys will continue to bear the brunt of traffic gridlock for years to come. RNRA would like the relevant City agencies to better articulate to the public the traffic circulation routing, and methods that can be employed to deter pass-through traffic from neighborhood streets in all residential areas adjacent or near the casino site."

Ever since the announcement of the casino's location, nearby residents have express fears about the criminal element it may attract. The concern is a relevant one for Chicago residents, because the city is afflicted with rampant quality of life crimes, that are once again on the rise.

While the city's murder and sexual assault rates declined last year, burglary, robbery, theft, and motor vehicle theft percentages have all surged of late. Even without the presence of a casino, River North's crime rate is above the national average.

Some steps have been taken to ameliorate those concerns, including Bally's pledging to end outdoor events at 9 p.m. on weeknights and 11 p.m. on weekends. RNRA is also asking the gaming company to ensure the venue's bars have service hours that match those of other area watering holes, so drinkers don't simply leave a bar at closing time and head to the casino to continue drinking.

County and State of Illinois as well as a humanitarian crisis.

Knazze says city officials are now providing daily street sweeping to clean up litter, ticketing unlicensed street vendors, ticketing and towing illegally parked or unregistered cars, and After School Matters is providing 1.5 hours of weekly youth programming and educational workshops.

City officials are also pleading with the recent arrivals "to be a good neighbor" by not loitering, littering, keep noise levels down, and to be mindful of the neighbors they encounter day in and day out.

One challenge the city claims is making things worse is that there are a lot of community groups and private citizens driving up to shelters with donations and food for residents. "While we are trying to discourage this, it is challenging in that this activity takes place in the public walkways," said Knazze. "We need to redirect these donations."

In a media statement, Chicago police said a man entered a business in the 900 block of N. Rush through the back door while brandishing a handgun. CPD did not identify the store by name.

A source familiar with the case said the gunman pried open a door in the alley, entered DIOR, and threatened the staff with a handgun. He collected items from the store shelves and fled out the rear door.

Police said he escaped in a black Yukon truck. No injuries were reported.

Man shot on River North street corner

A man is recovering after being shot during an altercation in River North Aug. 5. Chicago police said the victim is in good condition.

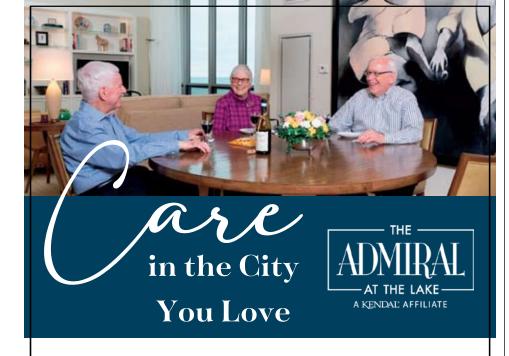

He was in the 500 block of N. State St. when a group of men walked up, and someone in the group shot him around 2:21 a.m., according to a CPD media statement. EMS took him to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound to his left thigh.

Some witnesses reported that the victim and another man were arguing before the shooting. One bystander said the gunman ran between two buildings on the 500 block of N. State after the shooting. He was said to be Black, skinny, and wearing a blue shirt, acid-wash jeans, and a blue hat.

Shootings are down sharply on the Near North Side this year. In fact, this is the best year so far since at least 2019. Records we maintain show 17 people shot this year compared to 49 at this point in 2022. There were 22 on this date in 2021, 31 in 2020, and 24 in 2019.

For the River North neighborhood, Saturday's victim is the 11th person shot this year. That's down from 21 at this time last year. It's even with 2021 and slightly higher than 2020, which had 9 as of Aug. 5.
