Days after chase and arrest, police on Mayor's block told not to wear body cameras

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Chicago police officers who are assigned to sit outside of Mayor Rahm Emanuel's home on the 4200 block of N. Hermitage have been ordered to not work with the body-worn cameras (BWC) that other officers are required to wear.

News of the development was reported first by the police blog called Second City Cop.

Now, this newspaper has learned that the no-camera order was issued by someone who "out-ranks"

19th District Commander and BWC champion Marc Buslik.

Whether that person is a police executive or a member of the mayor's office was not immediately clear.

News of the policy change leaked out after an arrest that took place Dec. 20 directly across from the mayor's home. The apprehension of the suspect—who's on parole for shooting a man in Uptown—was assisted by the no-camera house units.

A covert police gang investigation that day related to a series of shootings in Uptown ended with a foot chase, gun recovery and an arrest directly across the street from Mayor Rahm Emanuel's front door.

Around noon, undercover units established a surveillance operation in Uptown related to gang violence and shootings, according to police sources.

During the operation, officers saw a series of suspicious actions on the street, in vehicles and on the sidewalk.

Around 3:15 p.m., officers attempted to make an "investigatory stop" on a vehicle in the 4500 block of N. Ashland. But, the car took off as officers stepped out of their unit. The vehicle—a gold Mercedes—was found abandoned minutes later in the 4400 block of N. Paulina.

A witness approached officers and said she saw three men run from the car and one of them entered her gangway while holding his pocket. Police opened the gangway and found a fully-loaded 9-millimeter handgun "secreted under foliage alongside the air conditioning unit."

Minutes later, the police unit assigned to sit in front of the mayor's home reported seeing a man matching the description of the wanted offender walking into a gangway north of Mayor Emanuel's residence.

Other units, guided in by the mayor's front-of-house car, soon arrested Antwon "Trap" Jackson, 24, as he emerged from another gangway at 4225 N. Hermitage—directly across the street from the mayor's front door.

Review of police pod cameras that were installed to protect the mayor's home captured images of Jackson walking southbound on Hermitage before cutting into yards and gangways, police said.

Police said the abandoned gold Mercedes is registered to Jackson.

Prosecutors charged him with reckless conduct for leaving his car on the road—but nothing else.

Assistant State's Attorney Sharon Kanter declined to pursue the unlawful use of a weapon charge "pending forensic and latent print results" of the recovered firearm, police said in their report.

But Jackson may have cut those plans short. At a court appearance on Dec. 29, Jackson immediately

The Zoo's new visitor center is expected to open later this summer.

New $9 million visitor center, east gate coming to Lincoln Park Zoo

The Lincoln Park Zoo is pouring another $9 million into improving the grounds with word last week of a construction permit being issued for a pair of new structures.

The Zoo hopes to begin work this Spring on major renovations by building a new visitor center and redesigning its eastern gate, both efforts designed by Chicago-based Ross Barney Architects.

The zoo will build a dynamic new Visitor Center as a principal project in the final phase of the $125 million Pride of Chicago campaign. Located near the zoo's East Gate, the new center is the first of its kind – in size and resources. Integrated technology and staff will highlight daily activities, new arrivals and the breadth of the Zoo's mission of conservation, learning and care.

With more than 3.5 million annual visitors, the Zoo has outgrown its old visitor center and will be replacing the small, silo-like "gateway pavilion" that was built in 1994. The upcoming project will feature a pair of new buildings containing guest and member services, stroller rentals, interactive displays, a shaded rest area, and new bathrooms.

It will also house the zoo's first ever Member Lounge, where members can enjoy a dedicated space to relax, enjoy special programming, and have any questions addressed by the on-site membership team.

The new visitor center is expected to open later this summer. It is hoped that this space will improve the overall guest experience as the zoo moves toward its next generation of visitors.

Kaumakaiwa Kanaka'ole.

Award-winning Hawaiian vocalist returns to do local show

BY PETER VON BUOL

Kaumakaiwa Kanaka'ole, one of Hawaii's most dynamic vocalists, returns to perform 7 p.m. Jan. 14 at the Old Town School of Folk Music, 4545 N. Lincoln Ave.

Performing alongside Kanaka'ole will be longtime producer and slack-key guitarist Shawn Pimental. The duo previously performed together in 2013 at Old Town. That show was recorded as an episode of the PBS World Music Series Musicology.

Kanaka'ole, who was born and raised in the city of Hilo, is the latest member of her family to achieve acclaim. Known for her dynamic range, Kanaka'ole is the eldest great-great grandchild of the late Edith Kanaha Kanaka'ole, a leading figure of the late 20th century movement known as the Hawaiian Renaissance. Her ancestors were among the first settlers of Hawaii Island as her family includes Pele, Hawaii's volcano goddess, as an ancestor.

"We trace our genealogy all the way back to at least 1,000 years ago," Kanaka'ole said.

The Hawaiian Renaissance helped bring about a resurgence of pride in the native Hawaiian language and culture. It has enabled

Police Chief: Cook County "Bond reform is NOT protecting our citizens"

Setting criminals free "strictly a financial decision"

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

When Sheriff Tom Dart's office announced last month that the Cook County Jail population had dropped below 6,000 inmates for the first time in a decade, the media was all over it.

Mainstream outlets reported Dart's talking points without any counterpoints.

NBC even said there was "uniform support for bond reform by the head of the county's court system, the sheriff and prosecutor, as well as County Board President Toni Preckwinkle."

But there are plenty of public servants who aren't onboard with the "uniform support" narrative. Like the police chief in west suburban Riverside, who's more than happy to share his thoughts.

"I have been telling our state and county elected official that criminal justice reform, including bond reform, is not protecting our citizens," Riverside Chief Tom Weitzel said. "My concerns fall on deaf ears."

Weitzel issued his own press release about the jail population on Dec. 24. We could not find any media outlets that have reported on his position.

"Our elected officials in Cook County and the state keep calling me an 'alarmist,'" Weitzel said Sunday. "After 33 years in law enforcement I know I am telling the truth!"

For starters, he takes great exception to a statement from Dart's office that said: "the jail is being used more appropriately now and not being used to criminalize those who are poor."

"This statement paints police as having a stormtrooper mentality and is just not true," Weitzel said. "It's outrageous and not factual in any manner."

"Over 90% of the time, my officers in Riverside and those throughout Cook County are responding to calls for service from residents or victims of a crime," he said. "Officers are dispatched to calls, investigate those calls and make arrests where appropriate. We do not ask individuals their economic status... They are arrested because they have broken the law and police have enough probable cause to make the arrest."

Weitzel questioned whether the county is even keeping track of the number of affordably-bonded individuals who wind up back in

I carry two, how about you?

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

That's what you look for in a great pen. Balance. Weight distributed in such a way that the movement of hand and wrist are co-ordinated by the perfect balance of weight.

I still have that pen. It's out of ink at the moment and places to purchase real ink and writing supplies are slowly disappearing. As I get older I realize that I am carrying a very expensive tool around with me that is irreplaceable, so I am more cautious with it. And of course never allow anyone else to touch it, let alone write with it.

So to offset this, I buy scads of disposable pens that write beautifully and get tossed when they run out of ink. But they are real fountain pens. Blue, black, purple, bright blue are some of the colors of these $3 pens. I have started giving them to bright children to encourage their cursive.

Anyway, the notebook I just found is from Winter 2007. Trips to Dublin, Rome and Naples. Rose O'Neill and I were busy working with the Irish Foreign Ministry and setting up a celebration for the 400th anniversary of the Flight of the Earls, the exile of the O'Neill and O'Donnell princes from Ireland to the continent. Many of these Irish princes are buried in Rome. But the notebooks contain stories of travels, dinners, receptions and interviews. As well as a catalogue of the journeys. Museums, restaurants, trattorias, embassy gatherings, etc. are all identified. Listed and often editorialized. Of course, they are an amusing thing to read as far as life and travel go. But there are many layers to their value. I found at least two serious articles that I can write that come from my searching out some Caravaggio's in Rome. Public ones in museums and two that remain in private possession. I had forgotten much of this.

There are some really wonderful architectural analyses of Church designs and treasure painted on the walls included. Especially out of the way shrines and quiet corners of the city. I appreciate what I wrote very much, the words bring everything back to me quickly. And of course with our plans and projects I get to add an ending as to how everything turned out. That's important too.

I am saying this here more to encourage others to write. Keep notebooks. Keep track of where you go and who you meet. Where that great coffee was on the Via Veneto. Or where that wonderful, small family trattoria was with the shaved truffle and the hearty wine.

I had forgotten that on our trip we were invited to attend Sean Cardinal Brady's taking possession of his titular church near the Colosseum. On a bitter, cold January night with lashes of rain, we huddled together in an ancient church and the Cardinal, a successor of St. Patrick in Armagh, said Mass in Irish. And students from the Irish College sang. We attended a reception after and lost some of the people we were with. That was a nice little memory to recollect. And who knows, it might turn up in a novel someday. But keeping track of what's going on all around you is important. Recording your reaction to events and people and food is a worthy enterprise.

A notice arrived announcing that the Smithsonian cable network was going to show the film of Queen Elizabeth II's coronation in 1953. I was five years old then. I remember my grandmother's niece, Mae Ryan, and some of her Irish girlfriends taking me along to a downtown movie theater to see that film 65 years ago. Mae died this past autumn at 96. She had a lovely family of boys and they all had lots of children. But I still could recall being very young and being taken to see this huge world event, the coronation of the English Queen. I'm not sure I ever reconciled that with my IRA Commandant grandfather. But I thought, is that where my interest in history began? Is that why I have watched the Crown so thoroughly? Did this jump-start interest in politics and government for me? Well it certainly fits the pattern. I used to think it was why I love to stay at Brown's Hotel or the Connaught in London.

If only I had used a notebook in 1953 to recorded my thoughts and feelings.

Was this why I was familiar with Westminster Abbey when I finally visited some years later? Mae always laughed when we talked about that day out with the royals. She was a wise woman, and she knew the value that experience brought people in life. And how there was nothing like seeing the real thing.

The Queen writes in her notebooks everyday. Always has. I wish I could read her entry from June 1953. Of course, they are deeply historical and personal.

God Save the Queen.

HAPPY AND GLORIOUS: On Jan. 14, "The Coronation," the filmed version of the 1953 crowning of Queen Elizabeth II in Westminster Abbey will be simulcast on the Smithsonian channel. For the first time in her life, HM the Queen will view the film and comment, as will some who participated in the ceremony 65 years ago. You will see the Queen reacting to the scenes before her.

If you've watched all of "The Crown" series, you might as well see this.

PBS IN TROUBLED TIMES: After watching Art Institute's Gloria Groom in a recent interview on Channel 11, it occurred to me that perhaps as further change seizes the station when Phil Ponce leaves, perhaps Gloria Groom could get more airtime and further introduce Chicagoans to great art, filling in the blanks on the fabulous exhibitions underway. She would be an outstanding voice for

Chicago Scenic Studios turns 40 this year

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

He's considered the "granddaddy" of scenic construction in Chicago, with his company unofficially serving as a training hub for stage designers for four decades. Chicago Scenic Studios' [CSS] president/founder Bob Doepel established his company in 1978 as a design and fabrication studio for the city's up and coming theatre community.

Doepel, who brings his four-legged best friend, Verdi, a flat-coat retriever, to work every day, comes from a long line of notable local construction professionals. His great-grandfather founded Paschen Nielson Construction Co., which built Navy Pier.

He'll tell you that, "No project is too big," for his firm, and that his company has a unique position in that CSS is the only company the Art Institute will allow to handle its public art.

"We create a lot of excitement," said Doepel. "We create a lot of magic."

As the company's 40th anniversary approaches, CSS has relocated from its former Goose Island location to 955 W. Cermak Rd. At more than 165,000 square-feet, the massive new industrial warehouse-style building provides a larger and more efficient work space for its multi-faceted experts to continue creating "show-stopping, transformative," sets for clients nationwide, from the Ford Motor Co. and the Chicago Cubs to the Joffrey Ballet and the "Steve Harvey Show."

"Truly setting the stage, whether for a permanent fixture, a traveling production or a world-class event, is and always has been my passion," said Doepel. "We try to create not just a set, but an experience."

CSS' work can be seen in a wide range of locations here in Chicago and also nationwide. The company's impressive list of work is too lengthy to mention everything, but some of it includes: Nearly all local television studios and the Chicago Bears' studio in Halas Hall; 360 Chicago at the John Hancock Center; sets, ranging from the von Trapp family villa in Lyric Opera's "The Sound of Music," and pieces for The Joffrey Ballet's "The Nutcracker" to grandiose displays for Radio City Music Hall's "Spring Spectacular," in New York City.

After 25 years of building sets for Oprah Winfrey's Chicago-based TV talk show, CSS set the stage for her finale show at the United Center. It also created the stage for former President Barack Obama's 2008 victory celebration in Grant Park.

Combining the arts and athletics, the company made and "dressed" the famous brachiosaurus at the Field Museum in his custom made enormous Chicago Cubs and Chicago Blackhawks jerseys during the teams' post-season and Stanley Cup semi-finals appearances, respectively. It also created the scene on stage at the 2016 Chicago Cubs World Series Championship Rally, shuffling crews' schedules to work overnight for the celebration just 36 hours after the Cubs won Game 7 in Cleveland, including coordinating 24 confetti cannons being flown in to Chicago from California overnight.

From the above aforementioned to creating a giant mosquito to Santa sleighs, Doepel and his crew have seen and done much in 40 years. Here's a little info on Doepel. We congratulate him on his milestone anniversary!

Q. Tell me a little about yourself... where did you grow up, schooling etc.?

A. I grew up on the North Shore, went to New Trier. That's where I got interested in theatre. They had an outstanding theatre department. After high school, I went to a school for forestry engineering but changed my mind because all the jobs in that field were going to Viet Nam vets. I transferred to Carnegie Mellon U. in Pittsburgh and got my undergraduate and graduate degrees in theatre arts there.

Q. What made you decide to start a business like this?

A. There were no jobs, there was a recession going on. There was a growing theatre community in Chicago, some friends I knew let me work in their building and use their tools so I started a scenic company and it took off from there.

Q. You established CSS in 1978 and have created a wealth of amazing items, props, sets etc. What have some of your favorite and most unusual things been throughout the years? Who have been your favorite people to work with?

A. My favorite projects were the Opening Cup Ceremonies for World Cup Soccer, the Democratic National Conventions, working for Oprah for 25 years. I never met former President Obama, but I met Oprah and lots of celebrities - Barbara Bel Geddes, Bob Hope, Tina Turner.

Q. You come from a long line of construction professionals. Did they influence or inspire you in any way?

A. My great grandfather built Navy Pier. I have building in my gene pool.

Q. How big is your staff? How do you manage to create so many things?

A. There are 50+ people on staff. Opportunities come in, we respond. We create solutions.

Bob Doepel, founder of Chicago Scenic Studios.

Q. What's your new location like? Is there room for all your creations there and do you store and keep all your items?

A. We're in a new building (since July) on the river. We don't keep our work; there's not enough storage. Everything we build goes out to our clients.

Q. As you approach 40 years in business, what is your secret for staying around and being relevant for so long?

A. Diversity and tolerance. We serve a broad base of industries and markets so when there's a downturn in one market, others are still doing well during those low periods. It's tiring!

I'd like to work for another 40 years. We have a good strong reputation, we're a leader in the industry. One of the signs of success is the number of people who worked at CSS and have left and succeeded in opening their own companies.

They're hot!... Chicago Filmmakers has officially moved into its new location after completing an intensive rehab of the circa-1928 firehouse at 5720 N. Ridge Ave. in Edgewater. The more than four-decades-old nonprofit cultural group is still raising the funds to equip the vintage building with a 75-seat movie theater for screenings. Administrative offices and new classrooms for public courses are also in the space.

If they only had a cure... Earth, Wind & Fire and a star-studded line of entertainers -- as well as young dancers from the Gus Giordano Dance School -- performed as more than 800 guests danced the night away at McCormick Place at a recent benefit for Gateway for Cancer Research, a nonprofit dedicated to funding transformational cancer research.

The event raised $3.5 million at Gateway's 26th annual Cures Gala, "Gateway to Oz," which showcased a number of the 57 clinical trials currently underway. Since Gateway for Cancer Research was founded 26 years ago, more than 3,600 patient lives in 150-plus Gateway-funded clinical trials at institutions worldwide have been directly impacted. Proceeds supported crucial Phase I and Phase II patient trials across all cancer types, including breast, blood, lung, brain, pancreatic and pediatric cancers.

The event was co-chaired and presented by Richard J Stephenson, founder and chairman of Cancer Treatment Centers of America [CTCA] and Gateway for Cancer Research; and Dr. Stacie J. Stephenson, CTCA Chairman of Functional Medicine and member of the Gateway board of directors; along with honorary chair Jim Gordon, founder and managing partner of Edgewater Funds.

OOH-LA-LA: Was there a dust-up recently in a popular bistro when two well-known and popular men-about-town literally bumped into each other after a nasty break-up a long time ago? Apparently time heals nothing. The raised voices and biceps didn't end until the non-political gent and his newer boyfriend stood up and evacuated the place. No one ever really knows the clutter that's left, do they?

Tax reforms slice real estate ownership benefits, may spike rents

Upscale Lakefront neighborhoods hardest hit

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

Chicago apartment renters—especially those who lease their digs from small “Ma and Pa” landlords—could be slapped with hefty rent increases in 2018 as a result of tax reform.

The Tax Cuts and Jobs Act, which took effect Jan. 1, likely will take a big bite out of a small landlord’s write-offs for property taxes. Under tax reform, State And Local Tax (SALT) write-offs—deductions of state and local property taxes—now are limited to $10,000.

If the owner of a $1-million three-flat in Old Town has his real estate tax deduction cut to $10,000 from $25,000, it would mean the loss of $15,000 or more in write offs, and those losses likely would be made up with rent increases, management experts said.

Million-dollar home and condominium owners in the Loop, Gold Coast, Lincoln Park, Lake View, Edgewater and other upscale lakefront Chicago neighborhoods with property tax bills of $20,000 to $25,000-plus also will see their tax write-offs sliced in half—or more under tax reform, taking major bucks out of their wallets.

And with local property taxes expected to spike dramatically higher over the next decade due to

With the extremely high property taxes paid by Chicago residents, many North Side homeowners will be hit hard by the recent changes to the tax code.

the severe financial crisis that Chicago, Cook County and Illinois are all stuck in, this new tax bill will be the gift that keep on giving it to local property owners.

According to Sen. Dick Durbin, SALT is used by nearly one-third of all taxpayers nationwide to help them avoid being taxed twice—once at the state and local level and again at the federal level.

“Illinois has the fifth highest number of taxpayers who claim this deduction,” Durbin said. “Weakening of SALT will hit Illinois especially hard.”

Nearly two million Illinois residents used the deduction in 2015 to claim an average deduction of $12,500 on their taxable income, Durbin said.

Generally, Americans view the $1.5-billion tax reform law as benefiting the wealthy and corporations, according to opinion polls. Some people are skeptical tax reform will do much for middle-class taxpayers.

Tax reform took a historic step in directly revising the mortgage-interest deduction—a $70-billion annual tax expenditure. The new tax law reduces the mortgage interest deduction cap to $750,000 from $1 million. However, it retains the mortgage interest deduction for second homes.

One thing is for sure. The loss of homeownership tax benefits could discourage some buyers from jumping into the housing market in 2018 as mortgage interest rates creep higher.

Lawrence Yun, chief economist of the NAR, predicted that “existing home sales will probably not make gains in 2018 even as the economy creates more jobs.” It would be the first year of flat or falling home sales since the housing crash 11 years ago.

Another damper on home buying likely will be higher interest rates in a stronger economy sparked by tax cuts. Yun predicts that benchmark 30-year fixed home loan rates should increase from the current 3.9% to 5% by the end of 2018.

The coveted capital gains exclusion which allows homeowners to exclude up to $250,000—or $500,000 for married couples—in capital gains on the profit from the sale of a home or condo if the owners have lived in the residence for two of the last five years. The new tax law eliminates the deduction for interest on home-equity loans. Before tax reform write offs for up to $100,000 in debt was allowed. And, tax reform preserves the benefit for real estate investors to make tax-deferred exchanges of property, commonly referred to as “like-kind” exchanges. Be sure to check with your tax professional regarding details on the new tax law, experts advise.

Well, it wasn't the 'Hanging Judge'

In reference to your article: Guest list at hotel party disrupted by gunfire, [Jan. 3 edition], consider in the future apprising the reader to what the judge(s) names are that heard these various cases, allowing us to consider the individual at election time. These individuals had what was described as having ‘extensive histories.’ We want to know which judges heard these cases to determine if a change is needed in the system.

pleaded guilty to the reckless conduct charge in exchange for a 45-day sentence from Judge Anthony Calabrese.

Records show that in 2012, Jackson was charged with attempted murder for allegedly shooting a man in the 900 block of W. Sunnyside. The charge was reduced to aggravated discharge of a firearm in a plea deal that saw him draw a seven-year prison sentence. He was paroled in Oct. 2016 and will remain on parole until Oct. 2018, according to state corrections records. He has twice been charged with having street gang contact in Uptown while on parole. Both cases were stricken by Calabrese.

Incredibly, a high-ranking executive recently issued a verbal order that no body-worn cameras are to be worn by officers assigned to sit outside of the mayor's home. The information was confirmed by two police department sources who agreed to speak anonymously.

The decision to prohibit BWCs

The no-camera order applies to 19th District officers assigned to the "1926" cars that simply sit outside the Emanuel home 24/7. At least four cars are assigned to the unit. One sits in front of Emanuel's home. Another in back. A third roams the block. And then there's a sergeant. None have access to the Emanuel home and none travel with the mayor's executive protection detail.

"came down from the mayor's people" one source said. "No cameras are going to the mayor's house now."

None have access to the Emanuel home and none travel with the mayor's executive protection detail.

Especially surprising is that someone "out-ranking" the local police commander would order BWCs to be put away. Local Commander Marc Buslik has been at the forefront of the CPD's rollout program since 2016 when he was assigned to the Shakespeare District.

"This is your silent partner," Buslik told officers who adopted the BWCs early on. "[It's] going to back you up, and nobody can question motives."

Buslik is "very upset by this decision" to not deploy cameras on officers stationed outside the mayor's home, a source said. "He is a huge proponent of the cameras and feels like this sends the wrong message to everyone."

On Dec. 11, Mayor Emanuel and Police Supt. Eddie Johnson announced that every district-level police officer in the city was working with functional BWC equipment.

"While this expansion to the districts is complete, our work isn't done yet," Johnson said last

"There is no independent long-term tracking being done to see if this new bond order from the chief judge is making the streets of Cook County safer," Weitzel claimed. In fact, he says that the effort to free criminals is all about Cook County's failing finances.

"To simply put people on recognition bonds or electronic monitoring to empty the jails is strictly a financial decision," Weitzel said. "Cook County is creating its own rules, regulations and laws that are contrary to Illinois State Statute."

Weitzel worries that the jailhouse's revolving door will have a negative effect on cops. "Once police officers feel that there is no method for offenders being held responsible for their actions, and that includes setting proper bonds, police officers' self-initiated activity will plummet, and crime will rise exponentially," he predicted.

the Hawaiian language to experience a revival. Today, Hawaiian-language classes are available from pre-school through to university. Due to the efforts of her own ancestors (as well as many others), the younger Kanaka'ole was among who have been able to be educated in Hawaiian.

As one of the most highly-regarded traditional Hawaiian language hula chanters, as a solo composer and performer, Kanaka'ole seamlessly blends the past with the present. "My work draws directly from ancestral memory and hula practice, with roots in [ancient] chant that transforms to melody. It is not simply Western song with Hawaiian lyrics," Kanaka'ole said.

Since childhood, Kanaka'ole has been "surrounded by Hawaiian music as well as all types of Western music, from classical to indie." She has received numerous awards and is currently working on another disc with Shawn Pimental. Also appearing on her next recording will be legendary hula chanter Kekuhi Kanahale, Kanaka'ole's mother.

When Kanaa'ole began her professional career, she identified as a man. Five years ago, with the support of her family, she identified as female, embracing a traditional Hawaiian identity known as a Mahu Wahine. In 2014, Kanaka'ole and her mother toured together as what is believed to be the first mother-transgender daughter performance duo in Hawaiian music.

"My voice is my true gift. When I perform, I can hear not only my own voice but also the voice of my mother and my aunt and grandmother," Kanaka'ole said.

Kanaka'ole describes her own songs as drawing on Hawaiian culture and modern sensibilities. It is not uncommon for a song to include references to ancient Hawaiian 'oli [chants] but also contemporary melodies. In addition to music, Kanaka'ole continues the family tradition of providing song commentary, often with humor, and context to her own music.

In 2014, Kanaka'ole and her mother toured together as what is believed to be the first mother-transgender daughter performance duo in Hawaiian music.

Kaumakiaiwa, along with guitarist Shawn Pimental, brings to the stage an immense talent as a singer, chanter, and dancer as well as a deep understanding of her Hawaiian culture and her place as a modern, transgender Hawaiian (mahu wahine) in this contemporary world. Her performances and music seamlessly meld Hawaiian culture with modern sensibilities and original lyrics. Hawaiian culture has plenty of humor and she often provides wry commentary and stories to give context to her songs.
