Feb. 13 deadline for shelter decision

A decision on the conversion of a building at 1140 W. Wilson Ave. into a single room occupancy [SRO] facility is expected later this month. This proposal was brought forward by Uptown charity Cornerstone to purchase the building, and use it to provide shelter and supportive services for homeless men.

Cornerstone has set a deadline of Feb. 13 to buy the property, which is currently owned by Cedar St. Flats. The plan includes 40 SRO units. This site was chosen due to its readiness in comparison to other properties Cornerstone looked at. The building is also located in close proximity to Cornerstone's existing properties and the services offered in them.

Residents will have their own unit, including their own bathroom and kitchenette, and will be provided with case management, support services, access to meals, and other resources down the block at Cornerstone's community shelter and the Sylvia Center on Clifton.

Yet another fire in tent camp under Uptown viaducts

What is the current state of LSD's burned bridges?

It has become a habitual problem, fires in the viaducts along N. Lake Shore Dr. adjacent to Uptown. It is the most obvious and blatant display of vagrancy on the North Side. And the city is outwardly ignoring taking control of the situation today, while each new fire further weakens the bridges above them.

The long term damage already done to the bridges is presently unknown. And there are no published industry standards developed for the behavior of bridges after fires.

What is known is that as the temperature increases during a fire or explosion, the strength characteristics of concrete deteriorate. Concrete does not regain its original characteristics during the cooling after a fire.

For prestressed high-strength concrete bridge girders, highly intense fires heating up within a few minutes can easily lead to the layered detachment of the surface of the concrete called "spalling."

Spalling leads to a rapid increase of temperatures inside concrete, which accelerates the deterioration of fire-exposed prestressed concrete bridge girders.

This is an irreversible chemical process that takes place in the structure of the concrete under the influence of heat.

As a result, the structure of the concrete is destroyed slowly.

The failure of concrete due to fire is basically based on two reasons: the chemical transformation of the components of the concrete, and spalling.

These include internal micro-cracks, which evolve during the heating. The chemical processes created by the high temperature in cement stone and concrete can be investigated by thermoanalytical methods.

It is not known if the city or state has conducted any of those investigations.

Even if a bridge doesn't collapse in a fire, the fire damage can leave concrete crumbling and the steel warped and weak.

The testing's thermogravimetric and derivative thermogravimetric curves allow quantitative analysis of mass-related transformations. Differential Thermal Analysis curves are used to monitor the evolution of concrete as a result of the temperature increase.

stone is stable up to 450 degree Celsius, but micro-cracks can occur under this temperature.

Between the temperature of 450 and 550 degree Celsius, the porosity increases due to the decomposition of the portlandite. Above 650 degree Celsius, the decomposition of compounds begins, and the number of cracks increases. Above 750 degree Celsius, the diameter of the cracks increases greatly.

What's next for new open spaces under the 'L' tracks?

The CTA's three-year project to rebuild the Red and Purple lines on the North Side has created new open space under the tracks, and now people are contemplating over what to do with it. It is a linear open space about a mile long that previously was part of the embankment and fill that the former tracks sat on.

Last week the CTA and their contractors hosted two community meetings to get the community involved in helping to decide how to proceed in using the new space.

The two meetings were split into two by block sections north and south of Foster, and CTA officials brought some ideas for what the project could look like, including studies from the $140 million, 7.4-mile Miami Underline, which oddly is today benefiting from Chicago's loss. Former Chicago billionaire Ken Griffin is one of the financial backers of the Miami Underline. Griffin, who moved to Miami from Chicago, made a $5 million donation in 2021 to seed an endowment fund to pay for maintenance of The Underline.

New lights will be installed under the tracks, and the CTA says the spaces will hold community programs supported by the CTA.

The initial feedback the CTA received from the neighbors who attended their meetings focused on safety and usable space. The CTA said they hoped to present a first draft of the plan this spring. No budget has been established, nor have any billionaires been identified to help with project fundraising. The CTA says that the spaces won't open until this phase of the rebuild is completed in 2025.

It's been more than three months since three people died after being found unresponsive inside an apartment in a CHA senior housing facility in Edgewater. Last week, the Cook County Medical Examiner released the results of their autopsies.

Chicago Fire Dept. personnel responded to the Judge Fisher Apartments, 5821 N. Broadway, around 6:30 a.m. Sept. 29 after someone discovered two women and a man unresponsive inside a 12th-floor unit.

David Edwards, 53, was pronounced dead at the scene. The women, 70-year-old Linda Daley and Royce Daugherty, 30, died later that day at Weiss Memorial Hospital.

Medical Examiner: Cocaine, fentanyl killed three in Edgewater senior housing unit

In an interview with WGN, a building resident said Daley was a "very nice lady," and they had been told that Edwards and Daugherty were her guests.

"Oh my god, how do three people die all at once?" Roberta Nunziato asked in a CBS2 interview. She remembered 70-year-old Daly as someone "always looking forward to the next adventure," she said.

"I don't know what happened, but it's sad," Nunziato continued. "And we're all going to miss her, all of us."

Initial speculation was that the three may have died from carbon monoxide poisoning. The fire department even launched a hazardous materials response. But their testing of the apartment came back normal.

Last week, the mystery was solved: All three died from accidental overdoses of fentanyl and cocaine, according to the medical examiner's office. Alcohol also contributed to Edwards' death.

Fentanyl, a powerful synthetic opioid, is commonly mixed with street drugs as the narcotics make their way through distribution channels. It was most commonly found in heroin but is now appearing more frequently in cocaine and pills.

Used legitimately to treat extreme pain, particularly during advanced-stage cancer, it is 50 times more powerful than heroin and 100 times more potent than morphine, according to the Drug Enforcement Admin. A tiny amount of fentanyl mixed into an illicit drug dose can be fatal.

Let me be honest. Keep me in the hospital and I'm gonna have a lot of deep, other worldly thoughts.

And all the wacky thoughts in my noggin are gonna be embellished. I'll be doing a lot of Jesus thinking. Wondering what would Jesus do, why I haven't shaved, and why I am still working out last week's New York Times crossword puzzle.

Or why President Bartlett's White House looks so great on Netflix. The West Wing has legs. And they move fast.

As we wrestle with our new immigrant arrivals, I've been thinking a lot about the public face that "West Wing" has been able to hold since its days on NBC 1999-2006. All those Washington, D.C. stories. White House tales of power and peace.

We didn't exit the world during those years. We had confidence and didn't run from problems. We had reverence for storylines that fit into a believable presidential term of office.

President Jeb Bartlett got to warring with our global neighbors and helping out the folks next door. Issues of race, history, geography, trusting the Russians or the Chinese, and the countless small issues made into huge issues for the elite members of the White House staff. They'd know what to do with the streaming masses yearning to be free.

I like the notion that while we can tell a great human yarn sitting in the vicinity of the Oval Office, I also treasure our ability to grow the story.

Chicago now has its own unassailable brand of exotic political tea. I would be sad if Chicago didn't give that democratic TV White House of fancy-pants East Coast snobs time to make its full political impact known.

The problem for me is that American politicians aren't more generous, less thieving, conniving or blame casting. More focused on the real problems.

In Jeb Bartlett's case he never stops trying to ingest the fairness and grandeur of the American political philosophy he embraced as a young man. His ability to form a White House of intelligence, reason and promise opens up the nation's chances to act with a more powerful sense of justice from one corner of America to the other. His openness to new immigrants and people from new places reset the compass that guides us.

More than anything else, our nation needs the energy that comes from our willingness to help each other over the barriers and blockages of familiar paths. Paths our own ancestors tread as well. Paths that lead us to the American life we enjoy now.

Nobody leaves their homeland and heads here because things are going well at home.

We are a city - and nation - of immigrants, so let's act like it. We've been here before.

We need more stamina to hike up the skirt, roll up the sleeves, grab the boot straps and lift one another over the ditches and potholes of reckless repair. Based on our common concerns for each other, and not for how good that's going to make us look.

NO PARKING: The city is hosting an in-person open house Thursday for the Lincoln Square Brown Line Area Streetscape and Plaza Improvements project. The area has suddenly gotten difficult to navigate, and impossible to park in. Pity the poor retailer.

Two large construction projects blocking roadways and sidewalks, next up is work on the CTA transit plaza adjacent to the Brown Line, the Farmers Market taking out the parking lot, the narrowing of Leland Ave. for those privileged bike paths, and Western Ave. down to one northbound lane. The open house is at the Old Town School of Folk Music, 4544 N. Lincoln Ave., good luck finding parking. These days I get as far north as Laschet's Inn on Irving Park and just stop there. Order their goulash, best in town.

NAZI ART AND PROUD: You've got be kidding me. Even sharing the shame of the same artistic aesthetics as Hitler isn't enough to get the Art Institute of Chicago [AIC] to back down on the issue of stolen Nazi plunder.

You've no doubt read of the mega-controversy over the stolen works by Austrian artist Egon von Schiele. The finest modern man with a pencil in all Austrian history. Died too young just after the Great War of the Influenza. Tragically young.

In uniform he was a jailer at a prisoner of war facility where he used to sketch the incarcerated. He was always controversial. Before the war, as a teen, he sketched too many scantily clad beauties like an X-ray machine rendering. But the present legal logistics of controversial court case now raises the AIC's compliance to the court's order.

Bottom line, most museums return stolen art from Hitler's crew by return mail. What's the problem AIC? The Fuhrer got your tongue? The AIC is the last hold-out. Shame. Shame.

Buyer beware for new web-based AI-sourced community feedback sites

The developer of the proposed Fern Hill project in Old Town has introduced a new web-based concept for developers to engage with community members without having to participate in live, in-person community meetings.

The social media / urban planning site is called Courbanize [https://www.courbanize.com/]. The platform is basically a zoning Artificial Intelligence [AI] platform for development advocates. And as in all things AI, it's buyer beware.

The site itself notes that "most real estate developers dread the community outreach aspect of getting projects approved. Contentious meetings with angry neighbors and a long, tedious entitlement process puts projects at risk - and cause a lot of stress for community members, municipal leaders and project teams alike."

It's not a surprise that most developers and their advocates would like their path to approval be made much simpler, and what better way than to phase out the whole in-person community engagement part of the process.

Courbanize notes that their

The obvious concern that accessing and using AI platforms presents to community stakeholders is that the site demands that proponents and opponents alike must 'just trust us' to provide a free and open un-censored forum, and give the actual accurate data and input they may be receiving.

Fern Hill specifically is now boasting about their list of engaged community members they've met with, and making extensive use of the platform. So far this newspaper has not seen any published data from Fern Hill, Courbanize.com or the alderman's office on the number of residents who state they are for and/or against this proposal.

(The Jan. 16 virtual community meeting hosted by Fern Hill occurred after this newspaper's deadline so we are not able to report on how the platform was utilized by the developer to help hone in their sales efforts.)

But Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] and Fern Hill appear to be early adopters of this AI, and have encouraged citizens and community organizations to pick up the site's paintbrush and work on the "blank canvas" of the Old Town development sites: the two gas stations, former Treasure Island space, Moody parking lot, and Walgreens.

For now it appears that the site is being lightly utilized by those in the community, with few painting on the site except for Fern Hill themselves.

Meanwhile, people in the community have told this newspaper they are scrambling to establish dialogue among neighbors in opposition to Fern Hill's high density housing plan that offers scarce off-street parking in a community that exists today in an off-street parking desert.

Summer lifeguard applications now open

It's below zero this week so that is always the best time to start thinking about summer and becoming a lifeguard.

Being a Chicago Park Dist. [CPD] lifeguard and spending work days on a lakefront beach or at a neighborhood pool is the job we all wish we had in our youth, and some can have if they qualify.

This year, the first 500 applicants that complete the Lifeguard Skills test will receive a $50 Amazon gift card. The CPD also offers the Lifeguard Explorers training program this winter, which affords Chicago residents ages 15 to 22 the opportunity to learn the required skills needed to successfully pass the Lifeguard Skills Test.

In addition to great lifesaving knowledge, those who complete the Lifeguard Explorers program will receive a $475 stipend. To pass candidates must attend 15 classes now through March 1.

To learn more about being a lifeguard, and the application process call 312-742-7801, or visit www.chicagoparkdistrict.com/lifeguards.

CPS inspector finds PPP fraud, stolen laptops and sexual misconduct cases

BY THE CENTER SQUARE

Chicago Public Schools Inspector General William Fletcher's office's annual report was released last week, looking at fraud, waste and misconduct.

The most recent report from IG Fletcher's office found 77,000 laptops to be lost or stolen. Chicago Teachers Union [CTU] Vice President Jackson Potter is calling for more "tech coordinators."

John Kugler, a lifelong educator and a former employee of the CTU, said tech coordinators don't specialize in loss prevention but rather they repair and prepare technology.

"For them to say they don't know where those computers are is ridiculous. They know exactly where every one of these computers are today," Kugler said.

Kugler was a CPS employee from 2004 to 2010 and then worked alongside Potter and CTU President Stacy Davis-Gates. He worked in a computer lab.

"Tech coordinators do not have authority over students," said Kugler. "They put on an asset tag and they set up the computer so teachers and students can use them."

Each computer would be assigned to a room number or, in the case of remote learning, each computer is assigned to each student, which then would follow that student to each teacher. All of those computers are on a roster under a teacher's name, Kugler said.

"They don't want to retrieve the computers," Kugler said.

The lost or stolen laptops amount to a total of $23 million in taxpayer cost. Fletcher said the schools need a complete overhaul on how to track lost or stolen laptops.

"One of the things the performance review showed was that some schools hire their own technology coordinators called 'techos' and those are CPS employees," Fletcher said. "Whereas other schools may hire an external vendor or a company, but those third-party technology coordinators don't receive centralized training and they don't know how to input data into the system."

Fletcher said all of these things resulted in really poor data being entered into the asset inventory system that was completely unreliable and led to 77,000 computers, laptops and tablets being reported lost or stolen.

"One of the recommendations we had in our report was that where we have schools that have school-based technology coordinators ... those audits that were submitted by those schools tended to report fewer lost or stolen devices," Fletcher said. "They were doing a better job at accounting for their inventory."

The report, which details the inspector general's work for the year that ended June 30, 2023, also shows the district spent $124 million on tech assets.

Kugler said the loss prevention falls on the teacher and the disciplinary action falls on the administration.

"I worked with computers and

State seeking summer instructors for 2024 Urban Fishing Program clinics

The Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources is accepting applications now for instructors for 2024 summer fishing clinics through the department's Urban Fishing Program.

Fishing instructors are the department's boots on the ground at free clinics hosted in communities throughout Illinois. These are temporary positions not to exceed six months, making them perfect for teachers, retirees, students, and others who are eager to help people learn about fishing skills and ecology.

Numerous spots are available for Chicago, Cook County, and the northeastern part of Illinois.

The deadline to apply is approaching quickly. To learn more about the positions, qualifications and how to apply, visit <https://bit.ly/IDNRjobs>. Look for positions titled "conservation education representative."

The Illinois Urban Fishing Program was established in 1985 to teach people of all ages to fish, to provide better local fishing opportunities, and to offer participants an understanding of and a greater appreciation for natural resources.

"Fishing is a great way for families to spend time together outdoors, and our clinics give thousands of young people an opportunity to experience the fun of fishing every summer," said Mike McClelland, chief of fisheries for Illinois. "Is there a better way to spend the summer than teaching children and adults about the joys of fishing and the importance of conservation?"

Declining rates will stimulate 2024 local home market

The Home Front
by Don DeBat

The stabilizing and lowering of home-loan interest rates should be a stimulus for the 2024 spring residential real estate season in Chicago.

That's the optimistic early 2024 forecast from Baird & Warner's January Market Analysis, co-authored by Realtors John Irwin and Jackie Lafferty.

On Jan. 11, the Freddie Mac Primary Mortgage Market Survey reported that benchmark 30-year fixed-rate mortgages nationwide averaged 6.66%, up slightly from 6.62% a week earlier. A year ago, the 30-year fixed loans averaged 6.33%.

Fifteen-year fixed mortgages averaged 5.87% on January 11th, down from 5.89% a week earlier. A year ago, 15-year fixed loans averaged 5.52%.

"Mortgage rates have not moved materially over the last three weeks and remain in the mid-6% range, which has marginally increased home-buyer demand," said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's chief economist.

"Even this slight uptick in demand, combined with inventory that remains tight, continues to cause prices to rise faster than incomes, meaning affordability remains a major headwind for buyers," Khater said.

Overall in 2023, resale-home prices rose by 1.3% over 2022.

The Freddie Mac survey is focused on conventional, conforming, fully amortizing home-purchase loans for borrowers who put 20% percent down and have excellent credit.

In the Baird & Warner January Market Analysis, Irwin noted that after 21 consecutive months of year-over-year home sales decreases, 2023 ended with a 2.3% increase in December for Lincoln Park, Near North Side, Lakeview and North Center.

"Hopefully, these positive numbers for December will signal a Chicago real estate rebound in 2024," Irwin said. However, home buyers and sellers still face some challenges before we can feel confident that the market is rebounding."

The Baird & Warner analysis also noted the following positive trends:

- Resale homes sales: In December, 2023, home sales rose 2.3%, compared with a decline of 23.8% in December of 2022. While three of our four neighborhoods reported increases, sales in Lincoln Park declined 29.8%.

The December sales increase was driven primarily by homes priced under $500,000 and homes priced over $2 million. "The increase in home sales is great news, but there are still inconsistencies in neighborhoods and price points," Irwin observed.

- Listing inventory: With interest rates dropping, historically low inventory levels are now the main obstacle to a real estate rebound. Inventory levels dropped 20.1% in 2023 and fell 23.4% in December.

"These decreases were consistent in all four neighborhoods and price points,"

Irwin noted. "The market will need a significant infusion of new inventory in order to sustain a long-term real estate turn around."

- Interest rates: Falling interest rates and rising loan limits have given North Side real estate a new enthusiasm for 2024. Most home loans have dropped into the mid-6% range and are expected to fall as low as 5.5% by the second quarter, economists predict.

- Loan limits: Conventional home loan limits have risen to $766,550 in 2023 from $726,000 in 2022. The limits for other loans, such as Federal Housing Administration-insured mortgages, also have been increased.

"Loan-limit increases in addition to interest rate decreases are restoring some of the buying power that has been lost in the past two years," Irwin noted. "Real estate brokers can already see an increase in buyer activity in the past few weeks. The lowering of interest rates will hopefully bring sellers back into the market raising inventory levels that are so desperately needed."

- Resale home prices: Overall in 2023, resale-home prices rose by 1.3% over 2022. However, in December prices rose a hefty 6.3%. "Traditionally, low inventory levels significantly drive-up prices, but this has not been the case on Chicago's North Side," Irwin said.

"North Side resale price numbers are lower than the Chicago suburbs and many cities across the country," John Irwin said.

"North Side resale price numbers are lower than the Chicago suburbs and many cities across the country," Irwin said. "As we head into the spring real estate season, sellers should be careful not to fall victim to perceived market momentum. Homes need to be priced competitively to avoid extended market times and lower offers."

- Crystal ball gazing: Irwin said it is too early to predict the direction of the 2024 market, but unlike 2023, there are positive indicators.

"Buyers and sellers need to stay updated on a regular basis for market changes in their specific neighborhood and property types," he advised. "The market for a single-family home in Lincoln Park can be entirely different from a high-rise condo in the Gold Coast."

Judge removes top resentencing prosecutor from murder case over conflict of interest

BY CWBCHICAGO

Dante Brown waited more than ten years for a judge to reconsider the life-without-parole sentence he received for a double murder in Chicago in 2009.

The case eventually found its way to Judge Michael McHale, who, on November 17, granted Brown a new sentencing hearing. The state, represented by Asst. State's Attorney Michelle Mbekeani, had agreed with Brown's defense team that a new hearing should be held, McHale's order said.

Any relief Brown may have felt upon hearing McHale's decision was short-lived.

McHale vacated his own order on Dec. 8, 2023, after learning that Mbekeani, the head of the Cook County state's attorney's office Conviction Review Unit, appeared to operate a for-profit business linking inmates with wrongful conviction claims with private attorneys. He had read about it on City Wire the day before.

The judge said Brown's case would not proceed until he knew more about Mbekeani's side hustle.

Mbekeani spoke with this reporter about the company, PeriodSentence.com, a couple of days later, saying it wasn't a functioning company. It was an idea, a class project she had at the Univ. of Chicago Booth School of Business.

"The software we envisioned isn't even built fully," Mbekeani said, adding that the company hadn't even been legally formed.

On Jan. 8, all of the parties were back in court, as first reported by Martin Prieb, an author and former Chicago police officer.

"Based on all the information that I see here, I conclude that you are, indeed, running a for-profit corporation, registered in the state of Illinois with the purpose that involves you spending your time assisting incarcerated defendants and their defense attorneys," McHale announced. "It presents a very disturbing appearance of impropriety in the form of a conflict."

ney Kim Foxx's top deputy, Risa Lanier, joined Mbekeani for the hearing, which more closely resembled a deposition of Mbekeani by the judge.

The judge had read the CWB Chicago story.

"You were quoted as saying, Period is not a real business. Is that correct?," McHale asked. "You explained that was merely a concept that you had developed last spring for that same business class mentioned before. Correct?"

"Correct," replied Mbekeani to both questions.

"You told the CWB reporter that the company had never been legally formed, right?" McHale continued.

"Period? Yeah, Period. Not legally formed, correct," Mbekeani replied.

After many more questions, including several about the company website, which McHale said he printed out before it was taken offline, the judge revealed that he found active Articles of Incorporation for a company called Due Tech Process Corporation, previously known as Period.

McHale said that Mbekeani is listed as the company's CEO, president, director, and registered agent.

The judge wasn't having Mbekeani's arguments on the topic.

"You're — you're fudging, and that's fine. You're an attorney, so I expect that," the judge offered.

"Based on all the information that I see here, I conclude that you are, indeed, running a for-profit corporation, registered in the state of Illinois with the purpose that involves you spending your time assisting incarcerated defendants and their defense attorneys," McHale announced. "It presents a very disturbing appearance of impropriety in the form of a conflict."

Live ice sculpting in Lakeview

As long as we are all freezing let's put that cold to good use making ice sculptures.

Ice sculpting will take place in Lakeview 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday Jan. 27 and Sunday Jan. 28 in front of St. Alphonsus, 1429 W. Wellington.

Guests may watch master ice carvers make winter magic happen as they sculpt a block of ice into art pieces of the audience's choosing. That's right — bring your ideas, as the ice sculptor will ask the audience for suggestions of what to create.

Food trucks will be on site both days of the event, offering complimentary beverages and bites to help keep attendees warm. This event is free and open to the public.

Judges needed for Chicago Metro History Day, contest opens Jan. 25

Formerly known as the History Fair, Chicago Metro History Day is a research program for students in grades 6-12. Each year, over 8,000 students from across the metro region research a topic of their choice connected to an annual theme and develop historical arguments that are shared with the public in a series of local, state, and national competitions.

The event is now seeking volunteer judges. Volunteer judges evaluate the historical quality of students' documentaries, papers, exhibits, performances, and websites.

Teacher and project registration opens on Jan. 25, and student registration is due Feb. 12. Final project paperwork uploads are due by 9 a.m. Feb. 21. For more information visit www.chicagohistoryday.org.

The event is co-sponsored by the Univ. of Illinois Chicago, Chicago History Museum and Latin School.

Authors to speak at Book Cellar

The three authors who just published the book "Chicago's Modern Mayors," Dick Simpson, and Betty O'Shaughnessy, as well as contributor Kari Lydersen, will be celebrating the launch of their new book Feb. 1 by speaking with customers at The Book Cellar, 4736 N. Lincoln Ave.

The book is filled with analysis and insights on Chicago's modern mayors that tries to illuminate a time of transition and change and considers the politicians who—for better and worse—shaped the Chicago of today. The book examines the five mayors that guided the city through this transition beginning with Harold Washington's 1983 election through Eugene Sawyer, Richard M. Daley, Rahm Emmanuel, and Lori Lightfoot.

Woman's failed U-turn allegedly caused vehicle collision at Fullerton / Damen intersection

A woman has filed a lawsuit against a driver who allegedly crashed into her vehicle during a failed U-turn maneuver at the intersection of Fullerton and Damen avenues.

According to court documents filed in Cook County Circuit Court, on March 5, 2023, the plaintiff, Crystal Correa, was driving westbound on Fullerton Ave. near the intersection with Damen Ave. when her vehicle was struck by a vehicle driven by defendant Kristin Sandquist. Sandquist was allegedly operating her vehicle in the westbound turn lane and intending to make a U-turn, but decided to pull back into the westbound lane of traffic and collided with Correa's vehicle as she attempted to reenter traffic.

Sandquist is accused of several acts of negligence, including failing to maintain her vehicle in the turn lane of westbound traffic until it was clear, failing to yield the right of way to avoid collision, failing to reduce speed to avoid collision, failing to stop, failing to have adequate brakes, driving at a speed that was greater than reasonable for the conditions, and general carelessness.

Correa claims to have suffered severe and permanent injuries as a result of Sandquist's negligence. She is seeking damages in excess of $50,000 for pain, suffering, mental anguish, loss of normal life, loss of earnings, medical expenses, plus court costs, and any other relief the court deems proper.

Asst. principal at Skinner School allegedly swiped $273K

Cook County prosecutors say the assistant principal, Tracey Canty-Robinson, embezzled $273,000 in cash that parents paid for an after-school program at Mark T. Skinner West Elementary School, 1260 W. Adams St.

A Cook County grand jury filed a 17-count criminal indictment against Canty-Robinson, who served for the last 12 years as an assistant principal at the school. She has since resigned amid an investigation.

Prosecutors say Canty-Robinson would transfer thousands of dollars at a time from the school's PayPal account to a personal bank account. Prosecutors say she then sent checks to many of her own family members.

Canty-Robinson and her lawyer denied any wrongdoing.

Parolee attacked CTA security dog in the Loop

A parolee with a lengthy criminal background is facing a misdemeanor or animal cruelty charge for allegedly attacking a CTA security canine in the Loop.

Transit security officers asked Ivory Smith, 44, to exit a train at Clark-Lake because he was creating a "disturbance" shortly after 6 p.m. on Jan. 4, according to a Chicago police arrest report.

As he stepped from the train, Ivory struck a security K9 named Roman "multiple times with his foot and hand" in the face and chest, the report stated. Dogs used by CTA's security contractors wear muzzles that prevent them from biting people—even if they are being attacked.

Roman's handlers tackled Ivory and held him down until police arrived.

According to court records, Judge Barbara Dawkins released him from custody the next day with a nighttime curfew.

Smith was released from Stateville Correctional Center on July 17 after serving six months of a one-year sentence he received for criminal damage to government property. His parole is scheduled to end today.

Cook County court records show he has accumulated 59 criminal cases, including 10 felonies, since 1997. In addition to the case he's on parole for, his previous prison sentences include two criminal damage to government property cases in 2021; aggravated DUI in 2021; being a felon in possession of a firearm in 2018; theft in 2016; escape from electronic monitoring in 2012; and manufacture-delivery of cocaine in 2004.

Man who robbed two in Wrigleyville while on bail for a felony gun case gets 10 years

A man has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for robbing two people at gunpoint in Wrigleyville while he was on bail for a felony gun case two summers ago.

Damichael Bishop, 27, pleaded guilty to two counts of armed robbery before Judge Michael Hood on Jan. 9, according to court records. The judge gave him 10 years on each charge to be served concurrently.

On Jan. 10, Bishop received another year from Judge Geary Kull for the gun case he was on bail for at the time of the holdups. That sentence will be satisfied by the time Bishop has already served in jail.

The robbery occurred early on July 15, 2022, on Newport Ave., just east of Clark St.

Damichael Bishop pleaded guilty to robbing the two men at gunpoint in Wrigleyville.

Two men, ages 21 and 22, were walking when Bishop allegedly confronted them with a pistol and demanded their property. As Bishop held the gun on the victims, a 17-year-old boy and a third person walked up behind them and rifled through their pockets, prosecutors said.

As that was happening, one of the men screamed for a passerby to call for help because they were being robbed. Bishop and his two accomplices ran away with the victims' money, credit cards, and jewelry.

Cops caught Bishop and the 17-year-old near the Addison Red Line CTA station and found a firearm nearby. The third person got away.

The teen was charged in juvenile court with two counts of armed robbery and possessing a stolen firearm. Those records are shielded from public review, so the case outcome is unknown.

Bishop's parole date has not yet been set because he hasn't been transferred to Illinois Dept. of Corrections custody. However, his 10-year sentence will be cut in half for good behavior. He earned another 557 days of credit while in custody awaiting trial.

Man charged with shooting Chicago cop after smash-and-grab burglary at Prada store

Prosecutors have filed attempted murder charges against a man who allegedly shot a Chicago police officer after burglarizing the Prada store on Oak St. last week. The accused man had an active federal arrest warrant at the time of the shooting because he went AWOL while awaiting trial for a gun charge.

Deshawn Lucas, 33, was shot and critically injured in an exchange of gunfire with police officers in the first block of E. Walton around 4:16 a.m. on Monday, Jan. 8, said CPD Supt. Larry Snelling.

CPD officers said they found two guns in Lucas' possession, including one equipped with a switch that enabled it to generate automatic gunfire.

He is charged with two counts of attempted first-degree murder, aggravated battery of a peace officer by discharging a firearm, burglary, unlawful possession of a machine gun by a felon, and possession of a firearm by a felon.

Deshawn Lucas

Records show that Lucas remained hospitalized on Wednesday morning and could not appear for a detention hearing at the Leighton Criminal Courthouse. Judge William Fahy continued the state's detention motion to Jan. 17.

Snelling said that officers responding to a burglary at the Prada store, 30 E. Oak, encountered a member of the burglary crew near State and Walton streets shortly after 4 a.m. He was armed, and the officers ordered him to drop his gun, Snelling said.

An "exchange of gunfire" ensued, with two officers firing shots, according to Snelling. The injured officer fired shots, as did a 29-year-old cop who joined the force six years ago, the superintendent continued. The department said both officers will be placed on administrative duties for 30 days, consistent with CPD's policy.

Other members of the crew who escaped in several vehicles remain at large, Snelling said, and detectives are working on the shooting and burglary cases. Video provided to this reporter shows a smash-and-grab crew running in and out of the Prada store after they drove a Dodge Durango through the storefront around 4:15 a.m. Officers at the shooting scene said they could not identify Lucas immediately because he carried a fake identification.

Woman, 61, 'not expected to survive' after being savagely beaten on a CTA train in the Loop

Prosecutors say a 61-year-old woman is brain dead and will likely die after an eight-time felon, on parole for robbing an undercover CPD narcotics officer, savagely beat her during a robbery aboard a Red Line train in downtown Chicago.

Judge William Fahy granted the state's petition to detain Mijawon Johnson, 36, as a public safety threat during a hearing at the Leighton Criminal Courthouse. State officials have also moved to revoke his parole.

Surveillance video showed Johnson trying to steal the Uptown woman's bag on a train car near State-Lake around 1:33 a.m. Jan. 4, officials said. He soon launched a violent attack, pinning her head on a seat and repeatedly punching her in the head and stomach, the detention petition said. Officials said he "stomped" on her body and left her on the train.

CTA employees found the woman unresponsive when the train arrived at the Roosevelt station.

Prosecutors told Judge Fahy that the woman was "on a ventilator and is brain dead" and was "not expected to survive."

Investigators identified Johnson as the attacker and sent a bulletin to local police districts, according to a CPD report. On the day after the attack, officers on patrol saw Johnson on a CTA bus in the 700 block of W. Chicago. They pulled the bus over and took him into custody.

He is charged with attempted murder and two counts of aggravated battery, according to court records. Prosecutors also charged him with violating an order of protection for allegedly entering a 27-year-old Old Town woman's residence on New Year's Eve after being ordered to stay away.

Johnson was paroled in August after serving half of a six-year sentence he received for robbing a covert narcotics officer on the West Side on St. Patrick's Day 2021.

In that case, Johnson held his hand to his side as if he had a gun and ordered the undercover cop to give him cash and his phone. The officer surrendered his phone and cash with pre-recorded serial numbers intended for drug purchases, according to the CPD case report.

Other cops moved in and arrested Johnson when the covert officer gave them a secret signal to alert them that he was being robbed.

At the time of the robbery, Johnson was on parole for aggravated battery of a police officer at the Near North (18th) District station, 1160 N. LaSalle.

He was sentenced to prison six other times between 2007 and 2015, all for narcotics, according to IDOC records.

A dispute over discarded water bottles ended in murder at a popular rooftop bar

More than a year after a man was shot and killed on a popular rooftop bar in Lincoln Park, charges have been filed in the case.

Cordaryl Allen, the married father of three boys, was slain at the J. Parker atop Hotel Lincoln, 1816 N. Clark, on Oct. 16, 2022.

At the time, Chicago police said two men were fighting inside the bar when one pulled out a gun and shot the other man in the chest.

But that's not what further investigation revealed, officials said this week, as prosecutors charged Parrish Jefferson, 37, of Dolton with first-degree murder. The medical examiner determined that Allen had been shot in the back, not the chest. And officials now suspect he was mistakenly killed by Jefferson, who intended to shoot the bar's bouncer.

Parrish Jefferson

On the night of the shooting, Jefferson went to the J. Parker with friends to celebrate his girlfriend's birthday, prosecutors said in a detention petition filed with the court.

At one point, Jefferson "became upset that water bottles his group brought to the bar were thrown away," the petition stated.

The lounge's unarmed security guard offered to replace the water bottles. Jefferson was not satisfied with the offer. He began hitting the bouncer, and the confrontation moved to the outdoor patio area, where only four people were present: Jefferson, Allen, the bouncer, and a friend of Jefferson's.

Another fight erupted on the deck between the bouncer and Jefferson's friend. As they fought, Jefferson pulled out a gun and fired one shot, striking Allen in the back.

Officials said the two men who were fighting stopped and turned around to see Jefferson trying to assist Allen, according to prosecutors. They said Jefferson fled before police arrived, but everyone else who was with the birthday party stayed on the rooftop.

Judge Maryam Ahmad granted the state's detention petition, saying prosecutors presented a "strong circumstantial case." She said it was "likely" that Jefferson was trying to shoot the bouncer, who was fighting his friend.

"Someone is deceased because he could not control his temper and actions," Ahmad wrote in her detention order.

Chicago police officers arrested Jefferson in Calumet Park last week.

"You did this to my kids and they are going Krazy now that everyone left the house y'all [expletive] wrong MANNNNNN, they daddy gone and I don't have my husband, ughhhhh," Allen's wife wrote on Facebook shortly after the shooting.

"Life without my Husband I don't even understand it."

"This is such a sad occasion," wrote his sister, CeCe, in a GoFundMe plea. "We've lost a brother, uncle, cousin, son and for some a best friend. But most importantly a loving husband and a good father."

"He was always laughing, or saying something funny. We're going to truly miss him. I know everyone he met loved him and just know he loved you all too."

CeCe's campaign raised $4,410 for Allen's family.

Driver shot while dropping off passenger at River North hotel

A livery driver was shot when gunmen opened fire on a group of people as he was dropping off a passenger outside a River North hotel on Jan. 14, according to Chicago police. It happened around 9:19 p.m. outside the SpringHill Suites and Residence Inn, 410 N. Dearborn.

Police said two men got out of a black sedan and started shooting at a group of people on the sidewalk as the victim was letting his passenger out. A bullet grazed the 52-year-old victim's left shoulder blade. He was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in good condition.

The gunmen fled in the black car after firing shots, speeding down Hubbard St. with one of its rear doors hanging open.

A video posted to the Citizen app showed police crime scene tape draped across Dearborn St. in front of the hotels' shared entrance. A bullet hole pierced the hotels' front door and at least two cars, according to a witness. Several shell casings were also seen lying in the street.

Sunday's victim is the third person shot on the Near North Side in 2024. A 55-year-old Chicago police officer and 33-year-old Deshawn Lucas were both shot during an exchange of gunfire in the first block of E. Walton early on Jan. 8.

Prosecutors said the officers encountered Lucas with a gun in his hand as he ran from a smash-and-grab burglary at the Prada store at 30 E. Oak. The cops ordered him to drop the weapon, but he opted to shoot at the police, two of whom returned fire, officials said.

Lucas, who had been AWOL from a pending federal gun case for more than three years, is charged with two counts of attempted murder.

Police investigate man's claims of being shot in Rogers Park

Chicago police are investigating after a man hobbled into a Rogers Park grocery store, claiming that someone shot him on a nearby street Jan. 14.

The 25-year-old sought help at Jewel-Osco, 1743 W. Howard, around 7:40 a.m.

He told officers he was walking in the 7500 block of N. Wolcott when he heard two people he didn't know arguing inside a white car, followed by gunfire, according to a CPD report. The man then realized he had been shot.

He was taken to St. Francis Hospital with a gunshot wound to his thigh.

Police did not receive any calls of shots fired in the area. Investigators did not find signs that a shooting occurred in the location provided by the man. An officer at the scene

Supreme Court to determine if pot odor can be cause for vehicle search

BY DILPREET RAJU
Capitol News Illinois

On Jan. 10 the Illinois Supreme Court heard arguments as to whether the smell of pot alone is grounds for police officers to search a vehicle, marking a test of the state's 2020 recreational marijuana legalization law.

The court heard two consolidated cases of individuals who were in vehicles that were searched after an officer used the smell of pot as probable cause.

In People v. Redmond, defendant Ryan Redmond was pulled over by Illinois State Police for an unsecured license plate and driving three miles per hour over the speed limit, court records show. Upon smelling pot, the officer searched the vehicle and found about one gram of marijuana according to court documents.

The other case, People v. Molina, involved defendant Vincent Molina, who was a passenger in the vehicle when an Illinois State Police trooper smelled pot and searched the car, finding a small box of rolled joints, according to court records. Molina told the trooper he had a medical marijuana card prior to the search, the records state. Molina was charged with unlawful possession of cannabis by a passenger in a motor vehicle for not storing the pot in an odor-proof container.

Lawyers for Molina and Redmond argued the smell of pot alone should not be probable cause to search a vehicle given that the substance is no longer illegal in Illinois.

But Attorney General Kwame Raoul's office argued the law requires drivers to transport pot in an odor-proof container. Thus, the presence of pot odor is grounds for a search, even if the passenger is possessing an amount under the legal limit or has a medical marijuana card.

"It remains illegal to use cannabis in a vehicle and to transport cannabis in a vehicle in a container that is not odor-proof," a November brief filed by Raoul reads. Thus, "the odor of cannabis - whether in raw or burnt form - continues to provide police with probable cause to search."

Mitchell Ness, assistant attorney general, continued the argument before the Supreme Court on Jan 10.

"Cannabis is no longer contraband in every circumstance, but that doesn't absolve the person from following the laws that are in place," he said.

Chief Justice Mary Jane Theis said the central matter of the cases was roadway safety.

"The concern here is the safety of the public driving down the highway and impaired drivers," Theis said at the oral arguments. "We're concerned about drunk drivers, and we're concerned about high drivers."

Nationwide and state-level chapters of the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Assoc. of Criminal Defense Lawyers filed a brief in support of Molina and Redmond, writing that allowing the odor of cannabis as cause for searching a vehicle will lead to biased enforcement against Blacks and Latinos.

"There is a decades-long pattern of police in this state using pretext like cannabis odor to disproportionately stop and search Black and Latino drivers," the brief reads. Illinois' stop and search policy "unfairly subjects (Black and Latino drivers) to at-will intrusions of their privacy and relegates them to second-class citizenry."

The organizations argued the legalization of pot means its presence is not indicative of contraband or crime.

Alexandra Block, director of the ACLU of Illinois' criminal legal systems and policing project and co-author of the brief, told Capitol News Illinois a probable cause must be objective, not "malleable."

"Even the claim of smelling cannabis can be discretionary. Honestly, it can be made up sometimes when officers are being less than honest because there's no way to challenge it. You can't see (a smell) on a body worn camera," Block said.

Because such accusations are unchallengeable in court, the results "are often coming out worse for drivers of color," she said.

In People v. Molina, a trial court determined the odor of pot alone could not be cause for

I set computers up. School-based and third-party technology coordinators, all of them, wouldn't be able to retrieve these computers. It's not their job and it doesn't make sense for the IG to say that. It begs the question: Why are they mirroring the same talking points?" Kugler said.

When he was at CPS, they would file a police report if the computer went missing, Kugler said.

Fletcher's office's annual report looks at other issues including fraud, waste and misconduct.

Of the 446 sexual misconduct complaints received by the office, 7% were sexual acts while 26% were other sexual misconduct allegations and 67% were guideline violations.

"While there are concerning allegations for sexual abuses and sexual misconduct, most of the 464 complaints relate to guideline violations that relate to appropriate boundaries between staff and students," Fletcher said.

Guideline violations could be giving students presents, texting with students and giving rides.

The Chicago Board of Education is pushing for the removal of police officers in the schools, and Fletcher said when the office reports these suspected crimes they are usually calling detectives especially assigned to investigate sex crimes.

"We are not usually reporting these complaints to the police officers that are stationed in schools," said Fletcher. "I am not familiar with any cases where the initial outcry from a student has been to a school-based security officer or a school-based Chicago police department officer. I am certain they are a great resource in other ways."

During the pandemic, the government offered taxpayer-funded Paycheck Protection Program [PPP] loans, but CPS employees lied on their applications and did not qualify for those loans. Fletcher's report says 810 employees took PPP loans and of those 16 were asked questions and later resigned or were fired.

"These are year-round employees who applied for these loans under fraudulent pretenses and the common thread is that they claim to have businesses and have payroll that would qualify them to apply for and receive these PPP loans and our investigations have shown these businesses are entirely made up," said Fletcher. "In some cases they would claim their sole proprietorship would make them $100,000 a year and our investigations would show if anything it was much less."

Burglar held at gunpoint by concealed carry holder gets probation while his wife called 911.

Tyler Hamlin was charged with burglary last February after a concealed carry holder [CCL] interrupted the break-in and held him at gunpoint until Chicago police arrived. Last week, a judge sentenced Hamlin to probation.

Tyler Hamlin

He was already on probation for a criminal damage by fire case, which started as an aggravated arson charge, when the Wrigleyville gun owner detained him around 8:30 p.m. on Feb. 6, 2023.

The CCL holder had received an alert from his security system that someone was on his front porch in the 3500 block of N. Fremont. Prosecutors said he inspected the property and found Hamlin inside his garage. The homeowner warned Hamlin that he had a gun and ordered him to show his hands

"[The police] were here in about 45 seconds, and he couldn't get out of the garage.

I was standing in the door," the homeowner told CBS2 last year.

Hamlin, 31, has a bachelor's degree in psychology and gender and women's studies from UIC, according to his defense attorney. Despite those credentials, he was homeless and unemployed at the time of the burglary.

He pleaded guilty to burglary last week in exchange for the sentence from Judge Sharon Kanter. His probation in the criminal damage to fire case was terminated unsatisfactorily, according to court records.

BACH TO BOWIE: The Auditorium Theatre is presenting Complexions: Contemporary Ballet by the New York City-based contemporary dance company that is reinventing dance. The one-night-only performance, titled Star Dust: From Bach to Bowie, features the Chicago premiere of Star Dust, the company's electrifying, act-long tribute to rock icon David Bowie. The performance is 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 3. Tickets start at $30 and are available at auditoriumtheatre.com.

Founded in 1994 by Alvin Ailey alumni Desmond Richardson and Dwight Rhoden, Complexions has an artistic approach that mixes methods, styles, and cultures. Richardson is a pioneer in the transformation of ballet from a predominately white art form, and was the first African American principal dancer of American Ballet Theatre.

He also received a Tony Award nomination for his role in the original Broadway cast of Fosse.

Master choreographer Rhoden has created over 80 ballets for Complexions as well as numerous prominent dance companies across America and the world. As a dancer, Rhoden has performed with Dayton Contemporary Dance Company, Les Ballet Jazz De Montreal and as a principal dancer with Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater.

Much like the company itself, the show is a celebration of differences and the graceful marriage of aesthetic opposites featuring music that spans from Baroque to contemporary pop. The first half of the mixed repertory program includes beloved works from the company's repertoire including Chaconne (from Ballad Unto); Choke; Pocket Symphony; Elegy; and Work It Out (from SBFTE). The second half of the program is Rhoden's Star Dust celebrating the work and legacy of Bowie and featuring some of the greatest hits from his catalogue of rock classics, including "Young Americans," "Heroes," and "Space Oddity."

"Bowie, who performed on the Auditorium Theatre stage in 1972, is one of the most iconic voices in the last 50 years of rock and glam music," says Rich Regan, Auditorium CEO. "Complexions is a company that embodies Bowie's traits of going against the grain, artistic innovation, and blending genre. We're excited to welcome Complexions back to our stage for this thrilling program and touching tribute."

Restaurant Week is underway

The first big event of Chicago Restaurant Week [CRW] is this Thursday night, but stop right there, the First Bites Bash at the iconic Field Museum is sold out.

The bash showcases tasting portions from more than 50 CRW participants, alongside wine, beer, spirits and live entertainment. Tickets are $150 and available to purchase online - next year for those who don't already have a ticket. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to Pilot Light and the James Beard Foundation.

This year Restaurant Week is featuring 21 neighborhood restaurant favorites, 18 vegetarian options and 23 award-winning hot spots. Restaurant Week brings prices down to a much more affordable price range that more diners can enjoy. CRW participants feature special tasting menus. Each participating location offers prix-fixe lunch ($25), brunch ($25) or dinner ($42 or $59). There are some great deals to be found out there for those who do some legwork.

You haven't gotten a real taste of our town's diverse restaurant scene until you've explored the city's neighborhoods. That's where you'll find an incredible array of dining options representing cuisines from all around the world.

There's no better time to try some of these beloved spots than CRW, happening from Jan. 19 through Feb. 4. This year there are 381 participating restaurants representing over 30 neighborhoods — including more than 60 women- and minority-owned establishments.

Reservations go fast so don't delay, most reservations can be made on Open Table or Resy, but you can always call the restaurant directly.

Chicago Architecture Biennial: Through February 11

The Chicago Cultural Center, 78 E. Washington St., serves as one of the main exhibition venue sites for CAB 5, featuring projects from more than 80 participants.

The Chicago Architecture Biennial [CAB] is the largest architecture and design exhibition in North America. It's a city-wide event that resembles a "World's Fair" of contemporary architecture.

CAB, running now through Feb. 11, is held at the Chicago Cultural Center, 78 E. Washington, with a selection of off-site projects, related exhibitions, and programming in neighborhoods all across the city. All events and exhibits are free and open to the public.

This year's exhibition titled, "This is a Rehearsal," offers a chance to dive deep into art and architecture in one of the best architecture cities on Earth.

The Chicago-based collective Floating Museum will drive the event's artistic vision. The exhibition will explore how contemporary issues are shared across the globe but are addressed differently through art, architecture, and infrastructure.

For a list of scheduled events visit <https://chicagoarchitecturebiennial.org>.

POLICE BEAT from p. 6

remembered that he had also been in a disturbance at his home on Wolcott Ave. the day before.

He is the second person shot in Rogers Park this year. On New Years Day, a 24-year-old man was shot while driving in the 6400 block of N. Sheridan.

Grindr hook-up brought a gun and an accomplice to rob Rogers Park man

The suburban Christian school teacher accused of robbing and invading the home of a man he chatted up on Grindr, the gay dating app, is now charged with committing a similar crime in Rogers Park last June.

Antoine Perteet

Incredibly, court records say the Rogers Park victim identified Antoine Perteet, 33, as his assailant in early July. But prosecutors did not charge Perteet with the crime until now. If the allegations are true, Perteet victimized at least one other person after authorities identified him.

On Oct. 8, three months after the Rogers Park victim identified him in a photo line-up, Perteet and another man went to the home of a Cicero man that Perteet chatted with on the app, prosecutors said. They allegedly tied up, gagged, and robbed the victim at gunpoint.

At one point, Perteet made the man reveal his phone password, prosecutors said, and Perteet thumbed through the device as he pressed his foot into the man's face.

Now, prosecutors have laid out similar allegations against Perteet in connection with the June 28 robbery in the 1900 block of W. Morse. In recently filed papers, prosecutors said Perteet met the man on a dating app, and the victim agreed to let Perteet and another man come to his home.

They arrived at the victim's house around 11:30 p.m. and, once inside, pulled out guns. They robbed the man, forced him to lie down in the bedroom, and took his cash and phone, prosecutors alleged.

The complaint said that Perteet forced the man to unlock the device and then accessed his digital wallet. While the second man held the victim at gunpoint, Perteet allegedly went to an ATM and tried to make a withdrawal with the phone.

Prosecutors said Perteet and his accomplice collected the man's jewelry and credit cards, then left.

The next day, Chase notified the victim that someone tried to use his debit card at one of their branches in Rogers Park. The victim also learned that one of his cards was used at a gas station on the Far North Side and a liquor store in Waukegan.

Coincidentally, Perteet teaches at a Christian school in Waukegan, according to his defense attorney, and he was arrested there on the Cicero charges late last year.

A video from the liquor store showed Perteet trying to make a purchase with the victim's digital wallet on June 29, but it failed. Officials said he used one of the man's credit cards to complete the transaction.

Perteet and an unknown person were also seen on video at the gas station, according to prosecutors. The business' cameras captured pictures of Perteet's license plate, and investigators used that information to identify him as a suspect, court papers say.

After hearing about the Rogers Park allegations this week, Judge Maria Kuriakos-Ciesel detained Perteet as a public safety threat. He has been detained on similar grounds since prosecutors filed charges in the Cicero case last month.

Prosecutors have not yet charged anyone else in connection with the crimes.

Man robbed two people in River North, got busted upon returning to his hideout

A South Side man robbed two people in River North Jan. 13 and got arrested by Chicago police when he returned to his hideout after the second holdup.

Jerry Mufid

At about 4:45 p.m., a 27-year-old victim told police that an assailant displayed a knife and robbed him of his laptop, phone, and other items in the 300 block of N. LaSalle, according to a CPD report.

Cops tracked the victim's phone and quickly located the robbery proceeds behind a Chicago Fire Dept. station at Dearborn and Hubbard, but the robber wasn't there.

Shortly after the officers found the first victim's property, a 32-year-old man called 911 after someone put a knife to his neck and robbed him in the first block of E. Grand, not far from the firehouse.

Cops staked out the area where they found the first victim's property, just in case the robber returned there after the second holdup. They detained Jerry Mufid, 20, moments later when he arrived behind the fire station, matching the robber's description.

Police say both victims identified him as the offender. An arrest report said he also had possession of the second victim's ID card.

Mufid appeared for a detention hearing at the Leighton Criminal Courthouse on Jan. 14.

Letter to the Editor

Unbelievable!

I'm finding it so hard to believe that all of a sudden there is a great need to build monstrosity type buildings in our neighborhoods of Old Town and Goose Island.

One is said to be at 400 feet tall and another at 450 feet. Just those two alone, provide standard parking for the residents moving in. Leaving the neighborhoods to be even more congested and jammed up than they already are. Let's not forget the blocking of lanes and loss of street parking as it is with bicycles lanes.

No word from Ald. Brian Hopkins on what people already living here are going to be going through with the Amazon, Fed Ex, and UPS deliveries, food deliveries, postal deliveries, Uber and Lyft, etc., etc.?

Oh wait, I know, cars will just double park with blinkers on!

Between the cars with the blinkers on, the buses, and the bike lanes, one might as well not drive.

Is that the new thinking?

Don't drive?

The state and the city would lose a fortune if people stopped driving their cars. Between the license plate fees, city stickers, parking tickets, speeding tickets, red light tickets, gasoline taxes, and the rest of that type of revenue. The city of Chicago would just continue with an even bigger deficit.

The Fern Hill meeting this month is another diversion. The Fern Hill website stated that they wanted the community to pick the new façade for Walgreens. Unless you are face-to-face and can have an in-person community meeting open to discussion, it sounds like - and it smells like - a one-sided monologue.

I am just putting it all out there. It's so frustrating that no matter what opinion you have; at the end, they still get built.

POT ODOR from p. 7

search since the odor of cannabis could be found on medical patients who grow their own marijuana plants or workers at cultivation centers and dispensaries. The ruling was reversed by an appellate court before the case was consolidated with Redmond's and brought to the Illinois Supreme Court.

Other top courts across the country have faced the same question, most recently in Minnesota, where the state's supreme court ruled the odor of pot, in the absence of any other evidence, is not enough "that the search would yield evidence of criminally illegal drug-related contraband or tims of crime. Our criminal courts work as an adversarial system. We have defense attorneys representing the accused on one side, and we're supposed to have a prosecutor representing the People on the other," the judge explained. "When those roles become entangled and blurred, as they most certainly were in this case, the public loses trust and confidence in our criminal justice system. It creates an appearance that something unethical is occurring."

"You're off the case," McHale concluded.

McHale saved a few words for Mbekeani's boss, Kim Foxx, though: "So, to some degree, I do sympathize with you, counsel, because in my opinion, Ms. Foxx basically set you up for failure because this was such a blatantly obvious conflict of interest that I find it shocking that she didn't see it coming. But, indeed, as we've seen before, Ms. Foxx's knowledge of conflicts law is not the best."

In a written order after the hearing, McHale called Mbekeani's responses to his questions "duplicious, incomplete, evasive and untruthful."

"In this court's 17 years on the bench and 32 years working in the criminal justice system, it has never seen such manipulative efforts used before a judge in open court to such a degree," McHale continued. He barred Mbekeani from ever representing the state in his courtroom again.

The judge said he even considered appointing a special prosecutor to handle Brown's case but determined that other attorneys in the Conviction Review Unit were fit for the job.

When the parties reconvene next month, Assistant State's Attorney Linda Walls will represent the people.

Foxx stands by Mbekeani

The State's Attorney's office is standing by Mbekeani, releasing this statement to us on Jan. 11:

Michelle Mbekeani's leadership of the Conviction Review Unit is anchored in her unparalleled experience, deep knowledge, and fervent dedication to justice reform. Her extensive legal advocacy and reform work make her ideally suited for this pivotal role. The concerns raised about a potential conflict of interest with her university-level practicum project are unfounded and detract from our critical mission.

Casting doubt on Michelle's commitment and integrity leads to significant delays in our work, which have severe consequences – not only prolonging the wrongful incarceration of innocent individuals but also impeding the healing and closure needed by victims and their families. Our commitment to addressing historical wrongs of the past is unwavering. Under State's Attorney Kim Foxx's leadership, this office has worked tirelessly to overturn 246 wrongful convictions, and we remain focused on this vital task. Due to our commitment, Illinois has led the nation five out of the past six years in exonerations.

Michelle's academic project, which centers on due process for incarcerated individuals, underscores the crucial societal need to support and rehabilitate those conduct."

Last spring, the Wisconsin Supreme Court ruled the smell of pot is enough for police to search a vehicle.

Last year, Sen. Rachel Ventura introduced a bill that would amend the Illinois Vehicle Code and establish the odor of cannabis, raw or burnt, alone "shall not constitute probable cause" to search vehicles or persons. While the bill stalled last year, Ventura said she'd consider reviving the measure depending on how the court cases play out.

The Supreme Court's decision is expected later this year.

McHale saved a few words for Mbekeani's boss, Kim Foxx, though: "So, to some degree, I do sympathize with you, counsel, because in my opinion, Ms. Foxx basically set you up for failure because this was such a blatantly obvious conflict of interest that I find it shocking that she didn't see it coming. But, indeed, as we've seen before, Ms. Foxx's knowledge of conflicts law is not the best."

unjustly affected by our justice system. We are immensely proud to have Michelle, a professional so deeply committed to rectifying historical inequities, leading the charge against corruption and restoring trust in our legal processes.

Who is Dante Brown?

A jury found Brown guilty of two counts of murder in a double homicide that occurred on Oct. 6, 2003. An appellate court ruling in the case lays out more details.

In a recent filing by his attorney, Gregory Sygert of the Northwestern Univ. School of Law, said Brown was convicted under the theory of accountability, meaning someone else committed the murder, but Brown was accused of some other involvement.

In handwritten appeals sent from his cell at the Stateville Correctional Center, Brown has claimed that a Chicago police detective beat him with a thick phone book on the head and arms until he confessed.

The detective "tortured me into a false confession," Brown wrote in one appeal, saying he told his trial attorney about the beatings. In a later appeal, he claimed that authorities withheld evidence.

Sygert amended Brown's pro se filings in November with a different argument: Brown was sentenced to life without parole in 2009 at the age of 19 because state law didn't allow for anything less.

In a ten-page transcript of Brown's sentencing hearing, Judge James Linn mentioned eight times that he didn't have the authority to sentence Brown to anything less than the law required, Sygert's filing said.

The judge acknowledged that Brown's post-conviction filings contained "wisdom" and compelling arguments, none of which could be considered because the law made a life sentence mandatory, said Sygert.

"The Supreme Court has spoken, and I absolutely must follow the orders of the Supreme Court," Linn said once, according to Sygert.

"Again, my hands are tied. I must follow the law as it is. I will follow the law," Linn offered in a second instance.

Sygert's filing argued that "over 14 years later, the world Judge Linn commented on has changed significantly," and both federal and Illinois courts now recognize "that sentencing juveniles and emerging adults to mandatory life sentences without consideration of factors that reduce their culpability is unconstitutional."

The case continues in McHale's courtroom on Feb. 20.

Levy Center Village meeting Jan. 24

Representatives from Swedish Hospital will be the guest speakers 9 a.m. Jan. 24, at Levy Center, 2019 W. Lawrence Ave.

The speaker will be sharing information about the health system's recent rebranding and the new name of Endeavor Health.

They will also provide opportunities to engage in new community programs and events, including their new Community Wellness Center. In addition, relevant community resources will be shared by Emily Ledesma, a licensed clinical social worker.

The meeting will be broadcast virtually on Zoom, the meeting ID is 872 9248 0983, and the passcode is 912552

There is also an option to join by phone by calling 312-626-6799.

The library works on the honor system; community members are invited to take what they need and anyone is welcome to donate gently used dance shoes or apparel, except tights.

For more information, and to request dance apparel, contact Synapse Arts at info@synapsearts.com.

Propane, when mixed with oxygen can generate a flame temperature of up to 2800 degree Celsius.

Again, the first to report this latest fire under the Wilson Ave. viaduct was the community blog Uptown Update [UU] who warns that "unless someone from the city steps up to enforce the law prohibiting fires and incendiary devices in the tents under the viaducts, there is going to be a tragedy involving loss of life that no one wants to see happen."

The Jan. 8 fire occurred on the south side of Wilson. Tents and belongings of the homeless living in the tents were charred and strewn all over the sidewalk and bike paths. It is the sixth fire and or explosion in the last three years that this newspaper is aware of.

In the spring of 2022 an explosion and fire lead to 12 propane tanks being pulled out from under the Lawrence Ave. viaduct, although only two exploded in this instance.

The homeless campers are being given the tanks by people who may mean well, but these tanks lead to fires and explosions. The Chicago Fire Dept. is strongly opposed to anyone giving these tanks to homeless living in the streets given the safety risks.

This last fire looks like just a couple tents full of people's belongings were incinerated, according to UU. "And yet ... we see wannabe do-gooders providing flame heaters to those living there in highly flammable tents. We see open-flame cooking going on in the viaducts on a weekly basis," notes UU. "We're not alone. So does the city. Make no mistake, the people who can stop this see what's going on and have chosen to turn a blind eye."

According to former 46th Ward Ald. James Cappelman, "every single person staying outdoors has been offered the following options: a shelter bed, a hotel room, an apartment, or a nursing home to keep them safe and out of the elements."

"Those with a substance use disorder who are not yet ready to stop using are also offered either a low barrier shelter or an apartment with wrap-around services to motivate them to address their addictions."

For over a decade now homeless have been camping along Lake Shore Dr. adjacent to Uptown. Neighbors have struggled throughout the years over the open air drug use, open air sexual activity, garbage, objects and rotten food strewn across the ground in the viaducts and the park encampments.

These are all violations of the law and a threat to public health and safety, but the state, city and Chicago Police refuse to enforce the laws, and the Chicago Park Dist. refuses to enforce their own 11 p.m. curfew.

Daily there are open and obvious violations of the Americans With Disabilities Act, Illinois statutes, City ordinances and Park District Code.

The viaducts at Montrose, Wilson and Lawrence are under the jurisdiction of the City of Chicago and the State of Illinois owing to the presence of N. Lake Shore Dr. - a state highway - directly above. And Lincoln Park is under the jurisdiction of the City and the Chicago Park District.

Due to the tent campers blocking the sidewalk, it is routine to see bicyclists, pedestrians and the disabled using the traffic lanes under the viaducts to avoid the blockage, tents, mess, and chaos of the encampments, reports UU.

With the arrival of cold weather and more homeless tents crowded next to each other under the viaducts, the risk of expanded propane heater use and a fire rapidly spreading from one tent to another becomes more likely. And so does the risk of loss of life.

UU asks on their site what it will require

Again, the first to report this latest fire under the Wilson Ave. viaduct was the community blog Uptown Update who warns that "unless someone from the city steps up to enforce the law prohibiting fires and incendiary devices in the tents under the viaducts, there is going to be a tragedy involving loss of life that no one wants to see happen."

for aldermen Angela Clay [46th] and Lena Manaa-Hoppenworth [48th] to "take action, how many fires and explosions it will take for you to urge the city to enforce the laws in your wards?"

Ignoring the situation is not compassionate. It is setting the scene for a tragedy."

"The residents of Uptown are entitled to free, safe, and unencumbered access to and use of the viaducts, the parks, and DuSable Lakeshore Drive each and every day. It's well beyond time to put a stop to the practice of subjugating the interests of the overwhelming majority of citizens and visitors to a small minority who refuse help and refuse housing."
