Kenwood senior point guard during long stoppage in third quarter.

Kenwood battles Lincoln Park for 70-61 victory

BY JACK LYDON

Lincoln Park High School battled Kenwood on Jan. 30 for the top of the Chicago Public League's [CPL] Red—Shield division basketball title. Kenwood is just too good. The Lions (21-4, 9-2) battled the Broncos (32-1, 11-0) but in the end, Kenwood defeated the Lions 70-61 by breaking Lincoln Park's press, scoring in transition and making free throws.

The Lions just couldn't out score Kenwood in the closing minutes.

"They are the number one team in the state for a reason. They are battle tested. That's a good team," Lincoln Park head coach Joshua Anderson said of Kenwood. This really was one of those games where both teams played well enough to win and one team was just a little bit better and won at the end.

It was a two-point game at the half with Kenwood ahead 28-26. But in the third quarter, Kenwood's sophomore guard Devin Cleveland - the top ranked sophomore in the state - took over with three straight buckets, seniors "TJ" Seals, Alex Alston and Amari Edwards each added a bucket. The Broncos' two-point lead became 10 points.

The energy in Lincoln Park High's tiny little gym on Armitage Ave. was off the scale. The cheering was deafening. In places, the feet of the fans sitting in the front row were literally on the court. The environment would be tough for even the finest teams.

Century-old paint and glass company puts Clybourn Corridor property up for sale

BY THEREALDEAL.COM

Carbit Paint Company, 1440 N. Kingsbury St., is looking to sell its two-acre industrial property in the Clybourn Corridor, but any attempts at redeveloping it would require a zoning change.

The manufacturer listed its former brick headquarters building, which is comprised of a low-rise brick buildings and the company's iconic water tower, according to CoStar. CBRE's Marcello Campanini and Mitch Adams are marketing the property for a potential high-rise development with 400 residential units.

The whole area was historically set in a Planned Manufacturing District meant to protect industrial businesses from a residential encroachment exactly like what may happen at this site. The designation was lifted in recent years, allowing projects like the 327-unit Foundry high-rise across the street.

But the Carbit property is in a buffer zone that restricts residential use, because of its proximity to Goose Island, requiring city approval for a zoning adjustment.

The Westerman family has owned and managed Carbit Paint Co. since 1925.

Offers contingent on zoning changes will be considered, according to CBRE. Developers could explore demolishing all of the structures or incorporating some buildings into a mixed-use project.

"It's very rare to have two acres of opportunity along the river in this part of the city," Campanini said.

'Mass confusion' as city starts clearing homeless campers out of Lincoln Park

According to Ald. Angela Clay [46th] the city last week undertook an effort to move homeless campers out of Lincoln Park and into proper housing, but that the effort was plagued by "mass confusion" reportedly over the availability of federal funds.

Called "Accelerated Moving Events" [AME] the effort found homes for 20 homeless campers, working out of temporary space at Wilson Abby, 935 W. Wilson Ave.

Operated by the Dept. of Family and Support Services [DFSS], AME's are one of the tools the city uses to move outdoor tent campers into stable, supportive housing. The event was set for Jan. 28 and 29.

"After months of conversations, negotiations, and meetings with DFSS and the Mayor's Office about the growing needs for [relocating homeless living in lakefront parks], we connect[ed] with housing providers, and DFSS staff who made this event run smoothly," Clay reported in her weekly newsletter.

"But due to the mass confusion around the federal funding freeze on all government-funded grants, the [groups] sponsoring the [relocation event] decided to pause the [effort] until there is more clarity on funding cuts."

Clay said that she was "shocked and horrified to learn this news" as it meant a significant number of homeless across the lakefront must wait longer to get placed into housing. "DFSS in coordination with the Mayor's Office is working on identifying other ways to fund the remainder of the event."

City meeting on Broadway upzoning plan held after DPD had already sent matter to Plan Commission

BY BOB ZULEY

As plans for the massive upzoning of Broadway in Uptown and Edgewater are rushed through the approval process by the Chicago Dept. of Planning and Development [DPD] without substantial community stakeholder input, this newspaper has learned that DPD's Broadway Land Use plan was previously introduced to the Chicago Plan Commission [CPC] on Jan. 16 - instead of the planned published date of Feb. 20.

Now Feb. 20 is set up for the CPC to adopt the new upzoning plan.

Introducing the matter to the CPC and receiving their approval is the first step before going to the Committee on Zoning, Landmarks and Building Standards before heading to the City Council.

This newspaper has further learned that Ald. Leni-Manaa-Hoppenworth [48th] terminated Jack Markowski as a member of her Zoning Advisory Council on Jan. 30. Markowski, a longtime Edgewater resident, was notified of the decision by 48th Ward staffer "Kelly B." ostensibly to "make room for some new voices on the ZAC."

Markowski was notified via email from "Kelly B." on Jan. 21 that he was being retained on a new, second term on the ZAC, with the missive closing with, "Thank you so much for your continued dedication."

Markowski has a Master's degree in Urban and Regional Planning from the Univ. of Chicago, was once commissioner of the Chicago Dept. of Housing, and has decades of experience with zoning and city planning.

In the interim period between the two email dates, Markowski co-hosted an informational meeting on the upzoning sponsored by 10 Edgewater Block Club and tenant organizations at the Edgewater Library on Jan. 25. Ald. Leni Manaa-Hoppenworth was present for the duration of the two-hour meeting.

Where there's smoke there's expectations

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

My paternal grandparents lived in a large, rambling wooden clapboard home. Huge front porch. Arranged, meticulously, for seeing out and not so easily seeing in from street or sidewalk. Ripe for neighborhood viewing and observing. Their nextdoor neighbor was the alderman. So there was always something to see there. Political visitors. The mayor's car. A gaggle of local judges ready for a card game on the alderman's screened-in porch.

You always knew where my grandfather, James O'Gorman, was because you could smell him. Puffing away like a locomotive. The pungent smell of his pipe. Robust. Manly. Discerning. And lavishly foreign. It was the smell of the Irish. As he was a former commandant in the old Irish Republican Army [IRA] back in County Tipperary Ireland during their struggle for independence from Britain. And so many of his Chicago Irish pals, all former IRA, were pipe smokers too.

He, long ago, traded his rifle for a pipe.

If you needed to find my grandfather you only had to follow your nose. Pipes and his favorite tobacco were stashed in large ashtrays throughout the house. Pipe smoking made gift giving easy. He could always use a new pipe for Christmas. His birthday. For Easter. For St. Patrick's Day. Or just a sale downtown on Wabash St. at Iwan Ries & Co., the pipe and tobacco shop. They always had the best paraphernalia.

At night when he was reading or watching his favorite TV shows, you could spot where he was in the dark by the glow of his pipe bowl. His grandchildren learned how to clean and polish his pipes. Needless-to-say we always observed the first rule. Never let soap or water near the bowl or the bit of the pipe. Perfect pipes needed time to age-well and cure for flavor and balance.

So while our grandmother filled the air with kitchen aromas of baking bread and scones, my grandfather filled the front of the house, and the porch, with the elegant smoke of his pipes and the perfume of his tobacco which were kept in beautiful tobacco jars around the house.

This was an Irish thing. I can't recall any Italian, German or Polish neighbor ever puffing on a pipe. I knew it was as old-fashioned as a loaf of soda bread or a dumpling, and loved to picture my grandfather in his IRA days shooting his rifle for Ireland while puffing away on his pipe.

My grandfather never puffed better than when presiding on the front porch in a large cushioned chair. From there he'd chit-chat, gossip and converse with passing neighbors walking home from Holy Mass, the grocers, or home from work in the evening.

Smoking, he engaged the real world of living, breathing humans, hopefully White Sox or Blackhawks hockey fans. He'd learn the news of the neighborhood and pass along his own take on life, the city, the parish or the lawn. The green grass was his pride and joy.

My grandfather died when I was a senior in high school. What would his world look like if he had to contend with the awful mess now at City Hall?

The incompetence of urban government, at the moment, and its deepening sorrow at what appears to be without solutions. My grandfather would expect the streets to be efficiently plowed and maintained. If not he'd ring the doorbell nextdoor with a list of neighborly suggestions for the alderman.

He never had to miss the greeting of a neighbor because he was looking at his iPhone. Or skip trimming his precious hedges or the creeping bend. Does anyone take the time anymore to actually interact with their lawns?

He always had time for the cops. Their surveillance. Their precautions and their keeping an eye on things. He was never plagued trying to remember his password to his laptop or reading the daily newspapers online. He'd read every word Chicago's print media would deliver, making him well-versed not only on political issues or what the Mayor was up to, he was conversant in who had died, where someone's funeral Mass was to be offered, or how much chickens were at Kroger's.

Living in the city back then was an exercise in citizenship and neighborliness, two invaluable human resources that prepared people for living lives of competence, informed opinion and the correct baseball scores.

We are lucky today for all the advances of technological and scientific achievement, we have the ability to Google and Wikipedia all knowledge in the world, but we might not recall anyone's telephone numbers anymore.

Sadly today's world does not meant more effective or efficient political leaders here in Chicago or Washington, D.C. It hasn't raised the intelligence of the American people when they go to the polls. It doesn't seem to be able to lift high the true ideals of American liberty anymore.

And it can't erase the shameful results of crass and morally dangerous individuals from assuming high office.

George Costanza, Jerry Seinfeld's pal, once thought that he should always do the opposite of what he thought was right because he was never right about anything.

George was on to something, especially when we talk about Chicago these days. No one gets anything right. George couldn't make a correct decision. So he might as well just do the opposite of what he believed.

So Chicago's schools collapse, and our teachers think the educational system is theirs to loot. America is proud to overpower Denmark and buy Greenland for our political, economic and military ends. Renaming the Gulf of America, just in case some deadbeats have not been cruel enough to our neighbors who make life work for us.

"Many of the issues President Donald Trump addresses in his recent Executive Orders, are matters on which the Roman Catholic Church has much to offer," says the text of a letter, signed by Archbishop Timothy P. Broglio, President of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. "Some provisions contained in the Executive Orders, such as those focused on the treatment of immigrants and refugees, foreign aid, expansion of the death penalty, and the environment, are deeply troubling and will have negative consequences, many of which will harm the most vulnerable among us," it continues.

Were my grandfather still living his pipe smoke would even be more fragrant and life affirming. But he also might be setting down his pipe and looking for his old IRA rifle just to defend his immigrant home and dreams.

Advocate Health closing all 47 clinics at Walgreens

Stock shares drop as quarterly dividends suspended; faces potential $80B penalty for false scripts

BY BOB ZULEY

Advocate Health Care announced Jan. 29 that it is closing all 47 health clinics it operates at Illinois Walgreens stores effective February 6. Of the sites to be closed, several are in the readership area of this newspaper.

Separately, Deerfield-based Walgreens Boots Alliance announced on Jan. 30 that it is suspending its practice of paying quarterly cash dividends to stockholders – the first time it won't pay a dividend in 92 years as the chain faces a potential penalty in the tens of billions.

On the Advocate front, one or two medical office assistants work at each of the clinics, along with additional clinicians who support virtual care, and Advocate is working to find alternate roles for those employees, Advocate said in a statement.

Five of the local Advocate clinics at Walgreens that will be closing include 5625 N. Ridge Ave., 7510 N. Western Ave., 400-410 N. Michigan Ave., 79 W. Monroe St., and 1601 N. Wells St.

Forty-two others are scattered throughout northern Illinois including 11 others in Chicago.

Appointments at these clinics for patients over age two for minor illnesses involved meeting with a clinician over video while an in-store care team assists with the visit. Clinics treated anxiety and depression, COVID and flu testing, STI screenings, and urine pregnancy testing as well as other screenings, diagnostics, and sick care and treatment.

Advocate noted that it will overhaul how it provides care on Chicago's South Side where advanced practice providers will address common afflictions such as colds, sore throats, flu, and chronic disease management over video calls made from churches and community centers.

Previously, Advocate Medical Group closed seven of its clinics in Walgreens stores in Feb. 2020. After the current closures, Walgreens noted that patients can see doctors or nurse practitioners through Walgreens Virtual Healthcare.

In recent months, Walgreens has also been moving away from other types of health care clinics in its stores. Walgreens had invested billions of dollars into primary care provider VillageMD however backtracked after recording a nearly $6 billion impairment charge related to VillageMD, and that VillageMD would close 160 clinics.

Walgreens announced plans in October to close 1,200 stores over the next three years, including in Chicago. They have been cutting costs for years including through layoffs locally and elsewhere.

Current CEO Tim Wentworth has said that Walgreens wants to refocus on being a "retail-pharmacy-led company."

Walgreens said in a Jan. 30 statement that it was suspending quarterly dividends "as management continues to evaluate and refine its capital allocation policy consistent with the company's broader long-term turnaround efforts" with respect to litigation and debt refinancing. Previously, it had paid quarterly dividends for 368 consecutive quarters, or 92 years.

Walgreens had a net loss of $265 million in the first quarter of this year, compared with a net loss of $67 million for the same period last year.

Assessor's Office releases final reassessment data

Total value grows to $51 billion; homeowner share of tax base drops

The Cook County Assessor's Office last week released data reflecting its final values in the City of Chicago for the 2024 reassessment.

Following the 2024 reassessment cycle, total assessed value in Chicago is $50.8 billion. This represents an increase of $9.5 billion, or 23%, over total assessed values in 2023.

Because commercial property increased in value by more than residential property, homeowners saw their share of the tax base drop from 51% to 49%.

During a property reassessment, which takes place every three years, the Assessor's Office determines the market value of property. This market value is then converted to an assessed value – usually, this level of assessment is 10% of market value for residential property and 25% of market value for commercial property.

Assessed values are used to calculate the tax base. The tax base, made up of equalized assessed values, is divided by property tax levies set by taxing districts, like schools and municipalities, to determine the tax rate. (Other factors, such as Tax Increment Financing, exemptions, the multiplier, and the "recapture" provision, also affect tax rates.)

When assessed values grow and levies remain constant, that can lead to a decrease in the tax rate.

Growth in market value of different property types can also change each type's share of the tax base.

According to the Assessor, the assessed value of commercial property in Chicago increased by more than residential property values. Before the reassessment, homeowners held 51% of the share of assessed value in Chicago. Following the reassessment, that share dropped to 49%.

This decrease could result in a decrease of the average homeowner's share of the tax burden.

The final effect on property tax bills depends on changes to levies, as well as other factors mentioned above. It also depends on the impact of ongoing appeal decisions by the Cook County Board of Review.

While the assessed value of both residential and non-residential property types grew, non-residential grew more than residential property.

"A strong market for multifamily apartments and industrial properties helped boost commercial property values in 2024, and offset more modest growth in the office sector," said Cook County Assessor Fritz Kaegi. "The residential housing market also grew, but at a slower rate."

Proposed laws would legalize 'magic mushrooms,' require a license to buy flamethrowers, and make street racing a felony

BY CAPITOL NEWS
ILLINOIS

Illinois lawmakers kicked off their spring legislative session roughly three weeks ago, but lawmakers in the House have already filed more than 1,800 bills that could be acted on before the General Assembly adjourns in May.

The vast majority of the ideas won't make it to the desk of Gov. JB Pritzker or become law—last General Assembly, House lawmakers filed 5,929 bills and only passed 564—but the list of proposals offers some insights into the issues members of the lower chamber are concerned about as they kick off their new terms in office. Rep. Rita Mayfield introduced a measure that would allow people convicted of crimes to serve their sentences in “community-based settings” rather than in prison. Mayfield said her proposal would “create a transformative post-conviction model that reduces reliance on traditional incarceration for emerging adults.”

Under House Bill 44, community-based nonprofits that set up alternatives to prison would be required to provide housing, workforce training, mental health counseling and restorative justice programs. People serving their sentences in those community settings would be required to participate in the restorative justice court programs.

The bill would allow judges to decide which defendants would be placed in the community settings instead of prisons.

Defining 'domestic assault'

A bill was introduced by Rep. Amy Grant to create the offense of “domestic assault” and make it a Class A misdemeanor.

Currently, Illinois law does not define domestic violence any differently than abuse, which is defined as “physical abuse, harassment, intimidation of a dependent, interference with personal liberty or willful deprivation.”

House Bill 1455 is an attempt to define language surrounding domestic violence. The measure defines domestic assault as when a person “knowingly engages in conduct that places any family or household member in reasonable apprehension of great bodily harm, or permanent disability or disfigurement.”

Under the bill, if a person arrested for domestic assault is released from custody pending their trial, the courts can prohibit them from contacting or communicating with the victim, as well as entering or remaining at the victim's residence for at least 72 hours.

Legalizing psilocybin

A Chicago Democrat wants to make it easier for people in Illinois to obtain and use psilocybin, the chemical that gives so-called magic mushrooms their hallucinogenic properties. Introduced by Rep. La Shawn Ford, House Bill 1143 would decriminalize and tax psilocybin and psilocybin products for the use of Illinoisans who are at least 21 years old. People under the influence of psilocybin would not be allowed to drive a vehicle.

The legislation states that Illinoisans “deserve” access to tools that could improve their mental health, including chemical substances such as psilocybin. Ford's proposal notes that several U.S. states and cities have already decriminalized psychedelic plants and fungi or have made these psychedelics the lowest level of law enforcement priority.

But the bill would not change the status of peyote—another intoxicating controlled substance. Ford chose not to add the drug, according to the bill's language, “because of the nearly endangered status of the peyote plant and the special significance peyote holds in Native American spirituality.” Still, Illinois continues to “respect and support” the possession and use of peyote by Native Americans, the bill stated.

Among other bills related to the state's criminal justice system:

Introduced by Rep. La Shawn Ford, House Bill 1143 would decriminalize and tax psilocybin and psilocybin products for the use of Illinoisans who are at least 21 years old. People under the influence of psilocybin would not be allowed to drive a vehicle.

- Drifting and street racing would become a felony under another proposal sponsored by Ford. House Bill 38 categorizes “knowing or reckless” drifting and street racing as a felony if the activities “result in the use of force or violence disturbing the public peace.”

- People buying or possessing a flamethrower would be required to have a valid Firearm Owner's Identification Card under a proposal by Rep. Daniel Didech. The legislation, House Bill 19, would exclude certain military and law enforcement personnel from the requirement.

- Illinois residents would not be able to bring firearms into polling places—even if they have a valid concealed carry permit—under legislation introduced by Rep. Bob Morgan. However, the proposal, House Bill 34, allows on-duty law enforcement officials to carry firearms there.

Single-use plastic and paper bag ban

Rep. Suzanne Ness wants to prohibit businesses and grocery stores from providing single-use plastic bags to customers, as well as prohibit grocery stores from providing customers with single-use paper bags.

If Illinois lawmakers pass House Bill 1146, Illinois would join nine other states that ban both paper and plastic single-use bags. The states with existing bans are California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Hawaii, Maine, New York, Oregon and Vermont. Single-use plastic foodware items would also be banned.

Restaurants would be prohibited from providing customers with single-use plastic disposable foodware items when they dine-in under a bill filed by Rep. Jennifer Gong-Gershowitz. House Bill 1600 would allow restaurants to provide customers with single-use plastic items when requested, but the items would not be allowed to be packaged in plastic.

PROPOSED see p. 8

Edgewater Glen now part of National Register of Historic Places

Edgewater Glen in the Edgewater community has been placed on the National Register of Historic Places for its architectural significance. The designation will allow some homeowners to be eligible for tax incentives if they restore their home.

Bounded generally by Clark St., and Broadway on the west and east, and Granville and Norwood avenues on the north and south, The Glen joins three other areas in Edgewater as a neighborhood historic district.

The name Edgewater Glen is a modern one, created in the early 1970s when residents were forming a neighborhood association and needed a name for their organization that reflected the neighborhood. Glen was chosen because it was the first syllable of two intersecting streets in the neighborhood – Glenlake and Glenwood.

The east half of Edgewater Glen was first subdivided beginning in 1890. Before that the area was made up of farms. Some of the farmland had been owned by an early settler, Nicholas Kransz, who arrived from Luxembourg in 1848.

While the name is modern, the sense of being a separate neighborhood is not, and probably goes back as far as the early 1920s.

As Edgewater matured in its development west of Broadway, the Edgewater Glen neighborhood became an island of predominately single family homes bounded on the north and south by areas where the housing stock was predominately two-flats and larger buildings.

That dynamic is still true today. The architectural significance of the area's single-family homes and multi-unit Foursquare buildings - most built between 1890 and 1920 - made it eligible for the designation. Those styles include Dutch Colonial, Prairie Style, Queen Anne, Chicago Bungalow and Craftsman.

Area resident Justin Colombik helped drive the effort to create the historic district. He and his husband moved into the community in 2023 and quickly went to work with the Edgewater Glen Assoc. [EGA] pursuing the designation. They were aided in the effort by the expertise of historic preservation consultant Jean Guarino, and the contributions of EGA board members Cynthia Espy, Daniel Otto, and Anthony Nove.

Just south of The Glen is another historic neighborhood, the Lakewood-Balmoral historic district.

The effort to designate the community involved documenting about 400 buildings in the area, gathering information on the buildings' history, getting approval from the Commission on Chicago Landmarks and going to Springfield to speak in front of the Illinois National Register Advisory Council.

The volunteer's year's worth of legwork paid off and the designation was approved and placed on the list Dec. 30 by the U.S. Dept. of the Interior, which oversees the National Register of Historic Places.

While researching the area and submitting materials, Colombik said the block club learned from the state that Edgewater Glen has the most contributing buildings — meaning buildings that retained their original elements — than any other historic district

With its treasury trove of landmark buildings, the historic Old Town neighborhood may be one of the few finest surviving collections of 1890s architectural gems in Chicago.

Unfortunately, hundreds of Old Town Historic District property owners must continue to battle high-rise creep. Greedy developers are rudely branding the movement as “Not In My Back Yard” (NIMBY) folks.

However, this week, Old Towners likely are imagining erecting a statue in Lincoln Park to honor Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] as on Jan. 24, he bravely used his time-honored “aldermanic prerogative” to slow down a monstrous 44-story high-rise proposal for construction on the northwest corner of LaSalle St. and North Ave.—one of the busiest traffic corners on the North Side.

“My office is currently awaiting a possible compromise proposal from the development,” Ald. Hopkins said. “There was just no way I could support Fern Hill’s current proposal in the face of neighborhood pushback.”

We’ll see how that compromise proposal comes in, but so far so good.

A survey by the Old Town Triangle Assn. shows that 80% of members are opposed to Fern Hill’s high-rise development because of its impact on neighborhood traffic, and quality of life.

Specifically, some Old Town neighbors are concerned about nearby Latin School’s children crossing the intersection across the street from the proposed project.

Old Town Friends for Responsible Development, a new neighborhood group which formed in spring of 2024 around this issue, also is battling the high-rise because it would create more traffic congestion and detract from the character of the Wells St. retail and residential corridor.

“In 1984, we worked so hard to enact the Old Town downzoning ordinance after the 44-story Eugenie Terrace high-rise was constructed,” recalled neighborhood historian Diane Gonzalez. “Thanks to the leadership of [former 43rd Ward] aldermen Charles Bernadini, and then Ed Eisendrath, the City Council approved the downzoning ordinance in 1991.”

In a letter to Ald. Hopkins last week, Gonzalez wrote: “The Fern Hill development will diminish the quality of life in Old Town. Quality of life is difficult to measure when compared with a developer’s dollar profit, but this dense project will negatively change our lives.”

Spin-doctors and online bloggers backed by developer Nick Anderson, CEO of Fern Hill Cos., are working overtime and weekends to generate contrived, back-alley criticism of Ald. Hopkins and Gonzalez. But there is no there there with these paper tigers.

Anderson and Fern Hill’s claim that building a 500-unit tower on the corner of LaSalle and North won’t create 24/7 traffic havoc was broadly rejected.

Now, the latest shot at Ald. Hopkins is in claims he is turning his back on the prospect that the 500 units—including 100 affordable apartments—would be only 0.3 miles from the Sedgewick “L” station, and meet current Chicago’s Transit-Oriented Development standards.

There was no mention at any of the community meetings of the Chicago Housing Authority’s [CHA] plan to build a whopping 4,080 affordable units just a few blocks south of North Ave.

Rendering of the proposed Fern Hill high-rise project at North Ave. and LaSalle St.

High-rises and mid-rises are part of the CHA plan along with some lower density buildings. Most of the rentals will be affordable residences, and likely will include hundreds of Section 8 public housing units.

That’s a massive amount of new density for Old Town to absorb.

Despite the developer’s chess game, Old Town insiders—who have battled high-rise construction for decades—say they might agree to a 10-story residential development on the site and a 5-story parking garage with 200 to 300 dedicated parking spaces for use by Moody Church parishioners on Sunday, and maybe other drivers during the week.

Old Towners also desperately want a new anchor grocery store to replace the defunct Treasure Island store. They say there is plenty of space there for a grocery store and a new, compact Walgreen’s.

Local resident Joe Jacobazzi, a licensed structural engineer, tersely stated: “Fern Hill has proposed the most economical tower that could be expeditiously constructed to maximize its investment return.”

Jacobazzi also noted that the Fern Hill project “more closely resembles an office tower in a central business district than a residential building near the historic district.”

Fern Hill’s cookie-cutter plans may spark traffic congestion and provide CTA bus service near the door, but this glass box has no architectural character and shockingly lacks balconies or outdoor space for future residents.

Critics fear Fern Hill is working in the shadows to engineer a complete high-rise zoning plan for Old Town.

Through a new entity, Old Town Triangle Partners I LLC, an updated 2024 Old Town high-rise zoning application calls for much more than rezoning of a proposed 44-story apartment tower for a vacant Moody Church parking lot. The partnership also includes Moody Church, and Walgreen’s, which despite its financial problems plans a new store at North and Wells.

The secret 11-page zoning document further includes the Piper’s Alley tract, now owned by Old Town Development Associates, LLC, a partnership headed by politically connected Thomas M. Tully, who served as Cook County Assessor from 1974 through 1978.

Insiders say Fern Hill’s proposed Old Town Canvas high-rise, apparently is planning—through various partnerships—to stretch the “land-canvas” for at least two additional towers on the north side of North Ave., west of Wells.

In play in this rezoning chess game is the Piper’s Alley complex, including the X-sport Fitness Club, Starbuck’s, Second City Theater, and more than a dozen commercial properties that ring the northwest corner of North and Wells running west to North Park Ave.

Zoning experts say the rezoning of the 84,078-square-foot Piper’s Alley site to allow a floor-area-ratio of 420,390 square feet could eventually pave the way for two additional high-rise towers at that intersection.

As proposed, the sweeping zoning changes under Fern Hill’s planned development could result in up to 1,400 new units for 4,000 to 5,000 people along a two-block stretch of North Ave. between LaSalle and North Park.

Although Fern Hill’s rezoning application does not immediately allow residential units on the Piper’s Alley commercial site, that may happen in the future.

The rezoning application also provides that the 392 parking spaces in the deteriorating Piper’s Alley garage could be removed at the time of that parcel’s “site-plan approval,” resulting in a sharp reduction in the area’s much-needed off-street parking.

At the controversial Jan. 9 meeting, Anderson said Piper’s Alley owners recently signed a new long-term lease for the Second City Theater and have “assured him that they have no future plans for high-rises.”

“If another development proposal for Piper’s Alley comes along it will be judged on its own merits,” Ald. Hopkins said at the meeting.

So yes, Old Towners must keep an eye on that site and let Hopkins know that that too would be a fight.

While hundreds of Old Town residents are doing cartwheels about the rejection of the skyscraper, other veteran political analysts warn that since another proposal is coming soon from Fern Hill, the alderman still has time to do a 180-degree about-face and approve a down-sized project.

High-rise battle on Marcey St.

On-going anti-high-rise wars are continuing in the RANCH Triangle district too on the western edge of Lincoln Park.

With its Lincoln Yards development stalled due to severe financial problems, Sterling Bay, developer of the two-tower, proposed 615-unit project at 1840 N. Marcey St., is in a battle with Ald. Scott

Burglar broke into six downtown businesses on Jan. 27

Chicago police say this man committed at least six business burglaries in the Loop and West Loop on Jan. 27.

Area Three detectives say a lone burglar is responsible for breaking into at least six businesses in the Loop and West Loop on Jan. 27. They need a little help finding him, though.

Most of the burglaries occurred along Clinton St. between Madison and Washington, according to an updated community alert from Chicago police. They say the prowler pried open the front doors of the businesses and took cash from their cash registers.

His first break-in was in the 500 block of W. Lake around 1:40 a.m. Then he moved to Clinton St., hitting a shop in the 100 block of S. Clinton at 1:56 a.m., followed by two businesses on the 100 block of N. Clinton between 2:04 a.m. and 2:30 a.m.

At 3 a.m., he targeted two more businesses in the first block of N. Clinton, according to CPD.

The alert describes him as Black, 5'-10" to 6' tall, and 150 to 160 lbs. He wore a black hoodie, black and gray jeans, white gym shoes, a black ski mask, black gloves, and a black backpack.

You can reach Area Three detectives at 312-744-8263. They've grouped the break-ins under crime pattern #25-3-011.

Grand Jury indicts man for allegedly attempting to extort Lincoln Park Restaurateur

A federal grand jury has indicted a man for allegedly threatening and assaulting a Chicago restaurateur to collect a debt the man claimed he was owed.

An indictment returned Monday in U.S. District Court in Chicago charges Jawad Fakroune, also known as "Angelino Escobar" or "Anjelino Escobar," 45, of Morocco, with extortion.

Arraignment is scheduled for Feb. 5, at 10:30 a.m., before U.S. District Judge Manish S. Shah.

In 2023 and 2024, Fakroune privately loaned approximately $405,000 to the restaurateur to start a new restaurant in the Lincoln Park neighborhood, according to a criminal complaint previously filed in the case. The restaurateur repaid a portion of the loan, but in Nov. 2024 Fakroune and the restaurateur engaged in a dispute regarding the amount of money still owed, the complaint states.

On the evening of Nov. 25, 2024, Fakroune went to the restaurant, threatened the restaurateur over the manner and nature of the repayments, and claimed that $1.5 million was still owed, the complaint states. Fakroune then choked, kicked, and punched the restaurateur, while continuing to demand money and threatening the restaurateur's life and the lives of his family members, the complaint states.

The indictment was announced by Morris Pasqual, Acting United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, Douglas S. DePodesta, Special Agent-in-Charge of the Chicago Field Office of the FBI, and Ramsey E. Covington, Acting Special Agent-in-Charge of IRS Criminal Investigation Chicago Field Office.

Uptown burglary

The police are investigating a commercial burglary in Uptown on the 1000 block of W. Lawrence Ave.

At 3:55 a.m. Jan. 18, multiple offenders forcibly entered into the business through the front/rear glass windows or doors. Once inside, the offenders rummaged through the business and took possession of property located inside. In each of the incidents, the offenders were observed fleeing in a previously reported black SUV.

The offenders are described as three to four African American males wearing black clothing, including black hooded sweatshirts, black pants, and black ski masks.

Anyone with information on this crime may contact Area Three Detectives at 312-744-8263 and use Reference # 25-CWP-006.

Downtown burglaries

Police report a rash of recent commercial burglaries downtown. In each of the incidents, an unidentified offender forcibly entered a business after prying open the front door. Once inside, the offender takes currency inside cash registers.

Incidents include one on the 500 block of W. Lake 1:40 a.m. Jan. 27; the 100 block of S. Clinton St. 1:56 a.m. Jan. 27; 100 block of N. Clinton on Jan. 27, at 2:04 a.m.; 100 block of N. Clinton on Jan. 27, at 2:30 a.m.; 0-100 block of N. Clinton on Jan. 27, at 3 a.m., and on the 0-100 block of N. Clinton on Jan. 27, at 3 a.m.

The offender is described as an African American male, 5'-10" to 6' tall, 150-160 lbs., wearing a black-hooded jacket, black and gray jeans, white gym shoes, black ski mask, black gloves, and a black backpack.

Assailant stabs two men on downtown train platform

Two men are recovering after an assailant stabbed them during an argument on a CTA platform in the Loop, Chicago police said. It happened around 10:33 p.m. Jan. 30 at the Clark-Lake station in the 100 block of W. Lake.

CPD said the two victims were in a "verbal altercation" with a man who pulled out a sharp object and stabbed them. One victim, a man approximately 30 years old, suffered a chest injury while the other victim, 51, was cut on the face, according to a CPD media statement.

Both victims were in serious condition at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

The assailant, last seen heading toward Clark Street, was a shorter Hispanic man wearing a black puffy coat, gray sweatpants, and black shoes with a large gold chain around his neck, according to an officer at the scene.

Police warn serial rapist has attacked three women

A serial rapist is on the loose, Chicago police warned Feb. 2, saying he has targeted three women in separate attacks since Jan. 14.

The assailant struck most recently around 3:40 a.m. Sunday in the 2600 block of N. Troy. According to preliminary information, the man approached a woman from behind, displayed a knife, and sexually assaulted her in the hallway of an apartment building.

On Jan. 18, the same man is suspected of sexually assaulting a woman on the 606 Trail. That attack occurred in the 2800 block of W. Bloomingdale around 3:10 a.m.

Police said the first known attack occurred at 9:30 a.m. Jan. 14, in a residential building in the 3400 block of W. Armitage.

As in Sunday's attack, the man approached the other two victims from behind. Police said that he had also used a knife in one of the first two crimes.

CPD's alert described the assailant as a Hispanic man who stands 5'-6" to 5'-10" tall and weighs 150 to 175 lbs. He is 29 to 35 years old, unshaven, and has short black hair.

Area Five detectives are asking anyone with information that could help their investigation to contact them at 312-746-6554 or submit an anonymous tip at CPDTIP.com. Police have grouped the crimes under crime pattern #P25-5-005.

Man on felon pretrial release teamed up with eight juveniles to attack and rob Red Line passengers

Jovan Edwards

An adult and seven juveniles have been charged with attacking and robbing a group of teenagers on a CTA train in the Loop last week, according to Chicago police and court records. The adult, 19-year-old Jovan Edwards, had been on pretrial release for a pending stolen motor vehicle case for just 19 days when he allegedly participated in the mob attack.

Edwards and his accomplices approached three boys, a 15-year-old and two 16-year-olds, on a Red Line train near Roosevelt around 9:30 p.m. on Jan. 26, police said. One member of the group implied that they had a gun and demanded the victims' valuables.

Police said the group proceeded to attack the victims.

Edwards robbed one of the 16-year-olds of his belt and then ordered the boy to remove his pants, prosecutors said in a detention petition. After the boy complied, Edwards allegedly whipped the boy with a belt. Prosecutors said that Edwards also punched the victim in the face and body.

The victims exited the train to get help, but the attackers continued riding until they reached the Fullerton stop. Cops who followed signals from one of the victims' stolen phones were waiting for them when they arrived. Some of the suspects were arrested at the station, while others were located a block away after the police followed a second stolen phone's GPS signals.

When police arrested Edwards, he had a belt in his pocket along with a phone that belonged to the boy who got whipped, according to a CPD report. Prosecutors said Edwards had also transferred money from the boy's CashApp account to his own.

Judge Shauna Boliker detained Edwards on charges of robbery and aggravated battery in a public place. CPD said seven of the nine juveniles arrested were charged with robbery, too.

Police and court records show Edwards was arrested on Jan. 9 after cops found him with a stolen SUV at a West Pullman gas station. A CPD report said the car had been stolen two days earlier from a man who left it unattended while it warmed up.

Cops found it at the gas station with three boys, all between 14 and 16, in the back seat. Edwards was inside the station's convenience store when officers arrived. Police said he told them he had "nothing to do with that car." However, the businesses' surveillance video showed that Edwards drove the car to the station, the report said.

Paroled 23-time convicted burglar, accused of 4 more burglaries, is released to await trial

Chicago police arrested a 23-time convicted burglar this week after he was identified as the man who had been breaking into North Side businesses during January.

Mugshot of Lamont Gordon.

Prosecutors charged Lamont Gordon, 58, with four burglaries and, even though he is on parole for his three latest burglary convictions, he was released from custody the next day. According to court records, his parole was not revoked, nor was he put on electronic monitoring.

CPD released two community alerts about the burglary crime pattern, including a video of the suspect and surveillance images. According to Gordon's latest arrest report, a Chicago cop ultimately recognized him.

Officers on patrol saw Gordon walking in the 2700 block of W. Devon at 2:30 a.m. Jan. 29 and took him into custody. The arrest report said he had a screwdriver and a flashlight when the cops detained him.

While he initially denied participating in any burglaries, he "admitted and confessed" after seeing surveillance footage, the report said.

Prosecutors charged him with burglarizing River & Road Cafe, 1259 W. Devon, on Jan. 11; Vee-Vee's African Restaurant, 6232 N. Broadway, on Jan. 9; Falafel Kebab Station, 1133 W. Granville, on Jan. 3; and Nohadra Grocery, 2959 W. Devon, on Jan. 11. They said he took cash from registers or offices at all four locations.

Gordon also told cops he has "a narcotics/cocaine habit/addiction," according to the arrest report.

Under Illinois' cashless bail law, people accused of burglary can only be detained if they use force against another person during the break-in. However, Franklin County State's Attorney Abby Dinn says there is an exception if the individual has "two prior Class 2 felonies in the last 10 years."

Gordon has three Class 2 felony convictions in the past four years, all for burglary, court records show. But prosecutors did not ask Judge Deidre Dyer to detain him and the state did not issue a parole warrant.

Dyer released Gordon on Jan. 30, telling him to stay away from the businesses he's accused of burglarizing.

Gordon was released from prison on July 3 after serving less than three years of a seven-year sentence he received for burglarizing North Side businesses in 2021. He was on parole for burglary at the time of those crimes, too.

Gordon's burglary convictions resulted in: three concurrent 7-year sentences in 2021, nine concurrent 14-year sentences from 2013, two concurrent 7-year sentences in 2007, 14 years for armed home invasion in 1996, eight years for burglary in 1992, four years for burglary in 1990 and five concurrent 5-year sentences for burglary in 1988.

Man cut off ankle monitor before robbing Loop fast food restaurant

The man who robbed a Taco Bell in downtown Chicago had cut off his electronic monitoring bracelet after going AWOL from a pending shoplifting case, officials said Jan. 31. Misael "Javier" Velazquez, 35, is also accused of burglarizing the same restaurant, also after he cut off his ankle monitor.

Velazquez was released on electronic monitoring on Dec. 17, but he disappeared the very next day while enjoying a day of "essential movement" that state law affords individuals who are on house arrest, according to the Cook County Sheriff's Office.

His ankle monitor sent a "strap tamper" alert to the sheriff's office, indicating that someone may have been trying to remove the device. When investigators found the ankle monitor in the 600 block of W. Ohio St., it was no longer attached to Velazquez, the sheriff's office said.

Now, prosecutors have charged Velazquez with committing two felonies in a week at Taco Bell, 178 N. Wabash.

Late on Jan. 21, he walked into the restaurant wearing a mask and appearing to hold a gun inside a sling bag that was draped across his chest, according to a detention petition. Prosecutors alleged that he took the cash register containing $130 and slammed it onto the ground to break it open.

Chicago cops arrested him a short time later in the first block of E. Lower Wacker. The police also found the cash register in a dumpster behind the 100 block of N. State.

A Taco Bell employee recognized Velazquez as the same man who tried to steal the restaurant's cash register one week earlier, on Jan. 14, officials said.

Judge David Kelly granted the state's detention petition, keeping Velazquez in jail on the new charges. He is also being detained for failing to comply with pretrial release conditions in the shoplifting matter.

Prosecutors ordered to seek prison time in all machine gun possession cases

BY CWBCHICAGO

As Cook County State's Attorney Eileen O'Neill Burke announced on Jan. 30 that her office will seek prison time for every defendant accused of possessing or using a machine gun.

While machine guns may seem like relics from the gangster era, a new breed of automatic weapons is rapidly gaining popularity on Chicago's streets. Using a small aftermarket "switch" device that can be purchased for as little as $25, anyone can convert certain models of handguns, usually Glocks, to spray dozens of bullets with a single pull of the trigger.

"The bottom line is if you are convicted of using one of these weapons of war on the streets of Cook County, you are going to prison," Burke said.

O'Neill Burke's office said the policy shift is based on "a fifteen-fold increase in the number of illegally modified firearms being recovered by local law enforcement."

Converted pistols generate significant recoil and are very difficult to control, especially for inexperienced shooters who may be firing them on the streets. Here's a YouTube video that shows the firing of two converted pistols equipped with drum magazines:

Under the new policy, front-line prosecutors are no longer allowed to enter plea agreements for reduced charges "when the evidence is sufficient to prove" possession of a machine gun or a "machine gun-like device," O'Neill Burke's statement said. A supervisor must approve any reduction in charge.

"Anyone who has seen one of these modified guns in action—which enable a shooter to unload a 30-round drum magazine in less than two seconds—understands that these are weapons of war that have no place in our communities," O'Neill Burke said in a press release. "With this policy shift, we are providing certainty and consistency for prosecutors and police so they can do their work with confidence to get these incredibly dangerous weapons and the people who use them off the street."

Chicago Police Supt. Larry Snelling and Christopher Amon, the special agent in charge of the ATF's Chicago office, supported O'Neill Burke's policy shift.

When O'Neill Burke took office on Dec. 1, 2024, she immediately announced a host of policy changes, including charging all retail thefts of more than $300 as felonies. State law sets that limit, but her predecessor, Kim Foxx, decided to put the felony bar at $1,000. This reporter found that felony retail theft charges increased 154% in December.

She also ordered prosecutors to automatically seek detention for anyone accused of murder, carjacking, armed robbery, home invasion, aggravated battery of a child, domestics involving a weapon, and any detainable felon offense where a defendant is accused of using or possessing a ghost gun, extended magazine, or machine gun.

In another policy change, O'Neill Burke's office is allowing Chicago cops in one of the city's 22 police districts to file felony gun charges without getting approval from a prosecutor.

Illinois alleges cannabis companies mislabeled products to get around THC limits

BY TG BRANFALT
Ganjanpreneur.com

A class action lawsuit in Illinois claims that some state-licensed cannabis companies mislabeled cannabis-infused products as concentrates so they could exceed the legal THC limit for certain products.

A class action lawsuit filed against several Illinois-based cannabis companies claims the firms labeled cannabis-infused products as concentrates in order to exceed state limits on THC, Forbes reports. The lawsuit was filed by Chad Alsip, a cannabis consumer, against Wellness Group Pharms and its affiliates, and several entities under Acreage Holdings.

In the lawsuit, the plaintiffs allege that the defendants mislabeled their vape oils as cannabis concentrates which are not subject to the same THC limits as cannabis infused products which allowed consumers to purchase more THC than allowed under state law.

For example, instead of being limited to 500 milligrams of THC in cannabis-infused products, a customer could buy a total of 5 grams of vape oils – 11 times the legal limit – and then be able to purchase another 500 milligrams of cannabis-infused products.

"In doing so, Defendants unlawfully promoted the unregulated overconsumption of cannabis by marketing, promoting, and selling improperly labeled and packaged cannabis products that fail to feature or conform to the safeguards against overconsumption imposed by the Illinois Cannabis Acts. Specifically, safety labels, serving size limits, serving size identification, and legal quantity limits." — Excerpt from the lawsuit, via Forbes

The lawsuit claims the "conduct is misleading in a material way in that it induced Plaintiffs and the Class Members to purchase Defendants' Vapable Oils when they otherwise would not have."

"Defendants," the lawsuit claims, "made their untrue and/or misleading statements and representations willfully, wantonly, and with a reckless disregard for the truth."

The lawsuit seeks compensation for statutory violations, fraud, unjust enrichment, and other claims.

One of the biggest benefits to homeowners living in a historic district is that they are now eligible for a federal income tax incentive for restoring rented properties or a property tax assessment freeze incentive for restoring single-family, owner-occupied residences.

Owners of buildings in the District aren't required to get approval to change their home if using private or city money, and they also are not required to restore their properties. End-of-life options

A group of lawmakers are trying again to make physician-assisted suicide, sometimes called "death with dignity," an option for adult patients with terminal diseases.

Rep. Robyn Gabel introduced House Bill 1328, which would allow qualified, adult patients who to request a prescription of aid-inducing medication "that will allow the patient to end the patient's life in a peaceful manner."

The patient would have to make both an oral and written request to a physician, wait at least five days, and then make an oral request again in order to be administered the medication. The patient would also have to sign and date the written request with two witnesses present. Patients making the request would have to possess the mental capacity to make and communicate this request themselves, and it would have to be an informed decision— meaning that their physician has informed them of the potential risks and benefits of the medication, other feasible end-of-life care and treatment options, their right to withdraw their request at any time or to obtain the medication but not take it.

Under the bill, patients diagnosed with a major depressive disorder alone would not be considered terminally ill and wouldn't be able to obtain the medication.

It would apply to one community college in each Restore, Reinvest, Renew Area (R3 Areas) designated by the state as eligible for grants paid for with marijuana tax revenue R3 Areas (map) are communities that have been harmed by violence, excessive incarceration, and economic disinvestment and have higher rates of gun injuries, child poverty, unemployment and incarceration.

DCFS and providing luggage

Foster children who move out of a home would have to be provided with luggage, rather than trash bags, under a bill sponsored by Rep. Margaret Croke.

House Bill 10 would require the Dept. of Children and Family Services to provide luggage for any child being removed from home or changing homes.

The bill would also require DCFS to create a system to store chain knowingly filed millions of prescriptions that lacked a legitimate medical purpose. Walgreens potentially faced civil penalties of up to $80,850 for each unlawful prescription, or $80.85 billion for the first one million false scripts.

Similarly, Walmart announced last April that it was closing Walmart Health centers, citing challenges related to reimbursements by insurers and rising operating costs.

When retailers opened many of these clinics years ago, they may have expected that many more patients would use them or that patients would buy more items in the stores during their visits, noted Timothy Hoff, professor of management and health policy at Northeastern Univ. in Boston.

and distribute a supply of luggage that will be used to transport belongings of children in the foster care system. The children would own the luggage, and neither their foster parents nor DCFS would be allowed to take it from them.

Croke's bill would also require DCFS to submit an annual report to both the governor and the General Assembly. The report would include how many times a trash bag was used to transport a child's belongings and why DCFS was unable to provide them with luggage.

No marriage for anyone under 18

When filing for marriage, both partners would have to be 18 years old under a measure introduced by Rep. Joe Sosnowski.

Current Illinois law allows marriage between two partners if they will both be 18 years old when the marriage license is effective or if they are least 16 years old with the consent of both their parents or guardians, or judicial approval. House Bill 1744 would prohibit approval of any underage marriages.

Additional bills

Other proposals under consideration in the legislature include:

- Rep. Kevin Schmidt wants employers to give their veteran employees a paid day off on Veterans Day. House Bill 1421 would require veteran employees to provide documentation of their status

"In a model where the reimbursement is low for any health care service, the way you break even or earn a profit is you have to do more of these services, so you have to pump a lot of volume through the door," he noted.

"Demand for the kinds of services retail clinics offer, and I think demand for retail clinics generally, [have not been] as much as many of these places expected when they opened their doors."

CVS is in a different league due to their ownership of Oak Street Health Clinics and Aetna Insurance. It is nonetheless facing significant financial challenges with reports of declining profit margins, rising costs, and a need to cut expenses through store closures and layoffs.

as a veteran and give prior notice to their employer if they intend to take the day off.

- If the employer denies the request for the paid day off, the bill requires them to find a different day to allow the veteran employee to take a paid day off.

- Health insurers would not be allowed to rely solely on artificial intelligence to deny, reduce or terminate coverage for patients, under a separate proposal from Morgan. If companies use AI to make those decisions, the actions would have to be "meaningfully reviewed" by a human with the power to override the computer system, under House Bill 35.

- The legislation would also give the Dept. of Insurance the authority to regulate health insurers' use of artificial intelligence to determine patient benefits.

Waguespack [32nd], who blocked its approval because of excessive density and because they were off-shoring the affordable housing component to an undisclosed location.

Now, Sterling Bay is seeking an alternate back-door route into the City Council, dodging aldermanic prerogative and going straight to the Zoning Committee for approval.

Burning a bridge with their alderman is a desperate act for this thread worn company.

"Sterling Bay and Mayor Brandon Johnson's Administration are now asking us to sign off on a property tax abatement for the entire property," Ald. Waguespack said. "That would put the entire property's tax burden on the taxpayers of Chicago for the first three years, with annual abatements for the next 30 years."

That's some gall with Sterling Bay trying to bulldoze their alderman, then asking for tax cuts while sending the affordable units off-site into some other neighborhoods, and not building them at 1840 N. Marcey.

RANCH Triangle neighbors are seeking a compromise on the project, including a reduction in height, parking and adding affordable units onsite, per the code.

friends. Like family. Outrageous traveling companions to the ends of the earth. She was easy to speak, glib, knowledgeable and filled with worthy experiences of life and human travail. I always looked at her as a being from a more worthy age. Times when her journalistic skills really brought the literary hammer down.

Isn't that always the way with skilled people who really get their craft? Her rough, at times, curmudgeon antics were endearing. You knew instantly she was no pushover. And that always gave me a personal sense of comfort. That someone out there was in touch with reality and real life. She will be missed and remembered. A real American pro. Peace friend.

DR. KING:

On Jan. 24, the 39th Annual Interfaith Breakfast, "Honoring the Dream," celebrated the life and legacy of Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. The keynote address by the brilliant Dr. Michael Eric Dyson touched on the importance of carrying forward Dr. King's vision in the current moment. Words everyone needed to hear. Rev. Jesse Jackson was also in attendance, as was Cook County Comsr. Donna Miller.

not only official city emails but by the 48th ward staff directory. This newspaper has requested she identify herself by her given name.

In the virtual Broadway Land Use Framework meeting held on Jan. 30, the aldermen from the three affected wards, Angela Clay [46th], Matt Martin [47th], and Manaa-Hoppenworth [48th] gave brief opening statements, all in apparent support of the upzoning plan.

DPD's North Region Planning Team lead planner Katharyn Hurd summarized the upzoning plan in a 40-minute presentation before taking questions.

As to why the upzoning plan is being taken now, Hurd said, "we're at an inflection point. We're at a once-in-a-generation opportunity for development." The CTA has realized 'L' train ridership is half of 2015 levels but left unsaid is that the 'L' stations at Lawrence, Berwyn, and Bryn Mawr have been closed or partially closed for construction of new stations. And work habits have changed, with fewer people choosing to go downtown to work, preferring to work from home. And some of those who do work downtown are choosing not to use the CTA over security concerns.

Hurd explained the goals of the upzoning plan include adding more affordable housing, to support local businesses, create a more livable neighborhood, and "right-size" the approval process to align with community priorities. Only as evidenced by an earlier community meeting Jan. 25 at the Edgewater Library that saw 90% of those in attendance ask for further study and to slow down the process, the upzoning is not a community priority, as much as it's a City Hall priority.

New developments will invariably raise living costs in Edgewater and threaten existing naturally occurring affordable housing. Small businesses operating out of rented commercial space may find their property owners now eager to sell their properties out from under them as developers seek parcels ready for high density construction.

Hurd explained the new DPD zoning recommendation of B3-5 for Broadway from Devon to Winona will allow for greater height and density on both sides of Broadway, while many area block clubs and community groups have called for high den-the streets between Broadway and Sheridan. There are no additional plans for a parking structure even though the concept of adding 10,000 to 18,000 new residential units has been openly discussed.

Hurd stated that new business must comply with the Chicago Affordable Requirements Ordinance but failed to mention that Carbit Paint is selling after 70 years of operation, having relocated to Melrose Park. The company moved several times in its 100-year history in the Near North and near downtown Chicago neighborhoods.

The northern portion of the site is leased to tenants including Off Color Brewing's Mousetrap taproom, allowing for potential phased redevelopment. A future developer could build on the southern end while maintaining rental income from the northern portion.

Recent projects along Kingsbury St. have created a shift away from a century-long industrial zone toward high-rise residential development in the corridor.

Structured Development and

ZSD are set to add a 272-unit apartment building just south of the 27-story Foundry apartments, which were developed by White Oak Realty Partners, Ponsky Capital Partners and Structured Development. Structured Development principal Mike Drew said the Carbit site has potential but likely would be difficult to rezone.

Carbit's name is derived from its first product, a Carbon Bitumastic coating to protect the structural steel and rolling stock of the Chicago Stockyards from the corrosion caused by rock ice and salt - the only method of refrigeration in the 1920's. Today the company still creates industrial coatings as well as a coating line comprised waterbased product finishes that are used to decorate interior architectural glass.

sity on the east side of Broadway, and lower density on the west.

Hurd added that this corridor of Broadway currently has 39 landmarked buildings as historically significant, "...but we have to balance this with other matters that are pressing." Hurd explained that "proactive" zoning changes do not automatically trigger redevelopment and we do not expect to see rapid change. "It will be incremental."

Hurd said that 40% of area residents have no personally-owned vehicle but didn't address the current parking situation on developers are free to make an in-lieu tax payment to the Chicago Low Income Trust Fund to evade including affordable units in their projects.

Among the next steps, Hurd explained DPD will request the CPC to adopt the Broadway Land Use Framework at the Feb. 20 meeting. Mailed notices will be sent to affected property owners along the Broadway corridor, and the CTA will release solicitations to redevelop construction staging sites.

Yet Kenwood was not phased by the atmosphere. Every game they play all season is a tough game. They regained the number one ranking two weeks ago after close victories (but still victories) over Whitney Young, Cure and Chaminade.

There was a long stoppage of play midway through the third quarter with the Lions behind by nine. The cause of the stoppage related to a disturbance at the scorer's table and was not immediately evident.

One report suggested an argument between the coaches. It soon involved fans from the opposing teams arguing back and forth. One supporter of Lincoln Park was escorted from the gym. Ultimately, technical fouls were assessed against both head coaches forcing them to sit on their respective benches for the rest of the game.

Strangely, the stoppage helped Lincoln Park. They rallied.

"[My team] got a little motivated off after that little scuffle, whatever [was] happening. [The refs] made me sit down. When I am up, I am the energy. At that time, they saw that I couldn't be with them. They rallied together and said . . . we're gonna find the energy ourselves with each other," Anderson said of his team.

The Lions dialed up the energy and chipped away at Kenwood's lead. Lincoln Park's junior forward Larry Harris led the way for the Lions with 10-points to get the Lions going.

With 2:20 to play, the game was even at 60. Lincoln Park continued its full court press. Kenwood's senior point guard Edwards took control. With Lincoln Park in its high pressure full court press, Edwards calmly and deliberately brought the ball up court with crisp passes and few dribbles.

"I think Amari Edwards, he's a really good player. He's a really good floor general for sure. He picked us apart at the end and he kind of took control of the game," Anderson said of Edwards.

In crunch time with the game on the line, Edwards broke the press and the Broncos were able to get points in transition. He also added some key free throws to seal the victory.

This might not be the last time that the Lions and the Broncos meet this year. They are the top two CPL teams and could easily meet in the upcoming City Championship tournament.

And then, both teams are assigned to the toughest sectional of any in the IHSA boys basketball playoffs—Hinsdale Central. That sectional has #1 Kenwood, #6 Hinsdale Central, #8 Lincoln Park, #15 Curie, #17 Simeon, #24 St. Ignatius, and previously ranked and always dangerous, Whitney Young. No other sectional in state comes close to having that many good teams.
