Libertarian candidate challenging Osterman in 48th Ward

BY JIM VAIL

If you run for alderman in Chicago you need a sponsor: the political machine, unions, or a political party nominally affiliated with the Democrats or Republicans.

Independents do run and win on occasion, but quickly fold into one of the three categories mentioned above so they can get re-elected.

In the 48th Ward, Ald. Harry Osterman, whose family roots run deep in Chicago politics, has a challenger.

But you wouldn't know that if you walked down the busy Argyle St. and saw all of Osterman's blue election signs in almost every restaurant and storefront window.

His opponent is David Earl Williams III, who ran as a Republican for Congress and was a former Libertarian Party of Illinois Lt. Gov. candidate.

Osterman is an alderman who is well-liked and generally respected on the North Side. He has offered strong support of public education, is proud of the turnaround at Senn High School where enrollment has increased significantly, and he has taken courageous stands on the corrupt Tax Increment Financing [TIF] program that seems more often to subsidize developments in wealthy areas rather than in blighted areas as it was intended to do.

Osterman wrote that it was "reprehensible" that all of the affordable housing units required to be built under the Affordable Requirements Ordinance would not be built on site, as he requires in his North Side ward.

He voted against the TIF financed luxury condos in Uptown at Montrose and Clarendon and recently said he will vote against the controversial $900 million Lincoln Yards TIF development in the 2nd Ward that most of the surrounding communities oppose.

In his weekly newsletter Osterman wrote that it was "reprehensible" that all of the affordable housing units required to be built under the Affordable Requirements Ordinance would not be

Rescheduled 40th Ward aldermanic forum Feb. 8

Candidates for 40th Ward Alderman will discuss why they want to represent the Ward in the Chicago City Council, at a non-partisan Forum, sponsored by the League of Women Voters, 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, at Chicago Waldorf School, 5200 N. Ashland Ave.

An earlier Forum was cancelled because of inclement weather.

In addition to the League, the Forum is co-sponsored by eight local community groups.

Information on voting options and locations will be available at the Forum. For further information call 773-562-3371.

Candidate forum Sunday includes community questions

A forum featuring candidates for the 50th Ward aldermanic race will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Bernard Horwich Jewish Community Center, 3003 W. Touhy Ave.

The event will focus on issues related to economic development in the West Ridge/West Rogers Park community. The moderator will present all of the questions, which will be sourced from members of the community.

Questions for the candidates may be emailed to info@westridgechamber.org.

Note that the organizers reserve the right to omit any questions based on relevance to the theme or due to time constraints.

The hope is to facilitate a "robust conversation about the future of our community."

For more information call the West Ridge Chamber of Commerce at 773-743-6022.

Residents to review proposal for new Howard St. microbrewery

Who needs a beer?

A community meeting will be held tonight in North Rogers Park to review a proposal for a new microbrewery called Howard Street Brewing Company at 1617 W. Howard St.

The meeting will be held tonight at 7 p.m. in the proposed microbrewery location where interested parties will be able to look over the proposal. The proposal requires a Special Use Permit from the Chicago Zoning Board of Appeals and a tavern license from the City's Local Liquor Control Commissioner.

The microbrewery would be located in the empty storefront and owned by Ryan "Chuck" Patella, who says he has been homebrewing for 10 years and would like to establish a small 26-seat venue where his customers can sample his products.

Patella says he has maintained a longtime relationship with the Factory Theater, located immediately to the west of his proposed store. (His wife is a Factory Theater member and has written a play for the theater's 2019 season.) To help with theater events, Patella has brewed and served over 1,000 pints of beer at their events.

According to Ald. Joe Moore, when presented with the idea of opening a microbrewery next door, it seemed to Patella to be a natural fit given their history together. "I urge you to attend the meeting to offer your opinions and suggestions regarding the proposed new microbrewery," said Ald. Moore [49th].

"If you are unable to attend the meeting, please share your thoughts with me." Plans call for leaving the large windows that enclose the space at the front will remain untouched with clear views in and out. The brewing equipment will be located on the west wall of the room with open space for customers to observe the brewing process.

A custom bar will be designed and built for the bar that will be the focus of the brewery with tap handles displayed prominently at the center of the back bar. Where available, exposed brick will line the walls. A polished concrete floor will reflect the manufacturing elements of beer making, and the ceilings will be open and pipework exposed for a more industrial feel.

The property is now zoned B3, which allows for a tavern as a "special use" so long as it is not within 400' of another tavern. So Patella now needs to apply to the Zoning Board of Appeals for a Special Use Permit. The opinion of the local alderman and the community will greatly influence the Zoning Board of Appeals' decision over whether the permit will be granted.

Obtaining a special use permit does not automatically entitle the owners to a tavern license; it simply gives them the right to apply for a license. The owners will still need to satisfy additional criteria and their application is subject to the approval of the City of Chicago's Local Liquor Control Commissioner.

The Liquor Control Commissioner may at her discretion require the applicant sign a legally binding "Liquor License Plan of Operation," which places various conditions on the license. Any violation of the agreement may result in the imposition of a fine or a suspension or revocation of the license.

A freeze on the Peterson-Ridge Metra Station points to political PingPong

BY ROXANE ASSAF-LYNN

Residents of Chicago's Edgewater, West Ridge, Bowmanville and Andersonville communities have waited years to learn if the money set aside in Springfield for a new Metra commuter rail station just north of Peterson Ave. would finally be released for its construction. But in his first weeks in office, Gov. J.B. Pritzker has made no promise to one-up his predecessor Bruce Rauner on that point.

Meanwhile, Metra claims their hands are tied.

In the run-up to municipal elections, speculation has emerged again about the stalled progress on a Metra station at Peterson and Ridge avenues. Previous reports, including one by Ald. Patrick O'Connor [40th], stated that former Gov. Rauner had failed to release the $10-15 million earmarked for construction.

The neighborhoods astride the Union Pacific North Metra Line tracks along Ravenswood Ave. host a solid blue collar working class and white collar upper class base with many residents choosing automobiles in lieu of public transportation because of the roughly one-mile trek by bus, bike, or foot to the nearest CTA train station. This also contributes to a burgeoning parking dilemma in these enclaves.

Taking questions at a candidate meet-and-greet on Jan. 14, one of the four aldermanic contenders for the 40th Ward aldermanic seat told voters that the funds for the project had been released. But phone calls and written exchanges with Ald. O'Connor's office, as well as those of Ald. Harry Osterman [48th], state Sen. Heather Steans [7th], and House Majority Leader Greg Harris [13th], were not confirming.

"They're down in Springfield working on legislation for that," said Emily Volini, Ald. Osterman's assistant in Constituent Services. "We will have an update soon."

"This is an important project to improve transit options for the neighborhood," said House Majority Leader Harris. "Both Sen. Steans and I hope that the money for it in the state budget is released quickly so that the work on the new station can be completed as soon as possible."

Likewise, Metra Public Relations Manager Meg Thomas-Reile responded: "There is no status change on the station project at Peterson/Ridge. We are still wait-

A dinner party mixing Chicago's past and present, fiction

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

A well set table in the kitchen near the stove. Grateful for the extra heat. Winter is still banging on the door. Cars stalling in the streets. Kitchen chairs still claim shoveled parking spots, protecting un-negotiated right of ways. A real Chicago dinner made glorious in this season of dark antics, just weeks before Chicago's 2019 mayoral election. An honor to be invited and a bigger honor to be kept away.

Our guests must be hungry, and bold enough to speak their mind. No worries there. Our invitees gained their pedigrees in the tough working world of their professions, all gilded in Chicago fame. Let me introduce them.

The Honorable Harold Washington, Chicago's first Black mayor. CSO conductor Sir Georg Solti, the Grammy winner. Prairie poet Carl Sandburg. The Great Chicago Fire's Catherine O'Leary, urban dairy farmer. Radical "Lost Generation" writer Ernest Hemingway. Cub's Manager Joe Madden. Journalist and civil rights leader Ida B. Wells. And this correspondent, the cook.

The menu: Chicken cacciatore, spinach rotini, shaved carrots in garlic ginger, fresh baked bread and cannoli cake for dessert. We have good Chianti and Lacryma Christi for wines, and a round table for easy talk. Lots of candles for soft lighting. Most people have met before. But no one knows Ida B. Wells or Mrs. O'Leary.

The first question at the table starts the conversation, but may not be needed... talk sprouts on its own.

Washington: "Mmmm. Is that the aromatic fragrance of garlic I smell?"

Cook: "It is, I hope everyone

Ida B. Wells

Harold Washington

likes Italian?"

Solti: "Of course, we do!"

Hemingway: "But not more than French food. Paris. Paris taught me food. Wines. Only French."

Solti: "That's not possible," he says in his thick Hungarian accent. "Hungarian Tokay sweetens every dish."

Madden: "Well, I'm a true student of wine, I know what's good."

Isa B. Wells: "Not me, Lake Michigan water's always fine for me. But I'm fascinated. Baseball and wine?"

Sandburg: "Not much wine where I come from. No grapes on the prairie. More rhyme than wine. Though mother always made Elderberry wine with Grandmother as I grew up. But I never acquired the taste for it."

Washington: "I know what your saying, Dr. Sandburg. Maybe you could get the recipe from Joe. The Cub's played like they could use some Elderberries this year."

Solti was rolling his eyes. That worried the cook.

Madden: "No. The guy who needed the Elderberry juice this year was Mayor Rahm Emanuel. He totally ran out of juice which is why he is shortly to be unemployed."

Sandburg (now frowning): "He just ran out of patience. He had his goals written on his refrigerator door. Like it was a shopping list. The murders. The feds. The cops. The schools. Shady aldermen. And installing Miss Ida's new street signs. This poor soul couldn't catch a break. Ms. Preckwinkle invading his every dream. She was spiritually stalking him. Reminds me of Lincoln, early, as the Civil War went haywire. Nightmares."

Wells: "Women should stalk such men," she said, surprising her fellow diners. "Men will usually make the right decision and pack up and run." Sudden silence stalks the room for a second. Hemingway had his back up.

Hemingway: "But Mayor Emanuel is a man. Smells like a man. Swears like a man. Honest. Straight forward. Exclaiming his genius."

Madden: "Yeah, real genius.

Mrs. Catherine O'Leary

Sir Georg Solti

Going out of his way to pick a fight with the Ricketts and the Cubs."

Solti could not sit still.

Solti: "I can tell Chicago has changed from my day. This mayor was not a natural "personage" of the arts. Too "estranger" to art's superior love of understanding. How was he ever 'le comment était-il un vrai danseur de ballet classique?' The dancer of ballet? In Hungary we have a saying: The ballet cannot beget political leaders."

The cook notes that Solti's no schmo!

Wells: "I've been trying to get a clearer understanding of that myself. What's really going on in Chicago. Same as always."

Washington: "The semi-trickle down. Nothing works right. Too many hands grabbing for things. Too many paws out trying to pick the public's pocket. Just look at the City Council. In my day they were the agony in the garden. And now they get their feathers ruffled when Ald. Solis wears a wire? I can tell you that Hinky Dink Kenna and Bathhouse John Coughlin got a laugh out of that. They may have been Chicago's most crooked turn of the century scoundrels, but they never deluded themselves. I think they should all wear wires. Cameras too. We make the cops do it."

Wells: "Well, I never heard of such things. Why would Chicagoans put up with such things? Life was far from perfect in my time, but we did have the comfort of some genuine God-fearing believers who were trying to make change happen. Jane Addams always agreed with me on that much," she added with valor on her tongue.

Sandburg: "Me too, Miss Ida, I agree with you on that one. Everyone says my urban aesthetic made me famous. That's true. You know how I feel describing urban Chicago. We're more than a 'hog butcher.' Did I idealize Chicago too much? I don't think so. I was just trying to make her real in my poetry. Remember 'Shoveling. Bare headed.' If a city is real, it can change and grow."

Hemingway: "A city must be real. Real as a man's smell. Real as his courage."

Madden reaches for the plate of chicken, just beating Washington's throw to the plate.

Madden: "It's the stories of everyday hope that make a city real. Real as a strike out. Real as a home run."

Solti: "Of course. European cities are ancient by comparison. Their history and lives are written on the pavement cobbles. In the destruction. And building fresh again. That's the real music of a city."

Madden, hands the platter of chicken to Washington after grabbing a leg: "Like the crack of a baseball bat. Or the hope of next season."

Wells: "I think cities are capable of change and rebuilding. Has to happen. How else can it survive."

Twenty years and still going strong

For the last two decades, I've had the pleasure of working with Gold Coaster Beth Silverman and her successful, River North-based publicity firm, The Silverman Group, Inc. The company recently launched its 20th year with a major celebration at the West Loop hot spot (and longtime client), City Winery Chicago.

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Among the 200-plus guests attending were heads of Chicago's top arts institutions, members of the media, and friends and family – all toasting Silverman and her 'small but mighty' staff of passionate publicists: Elizabeth Neukirch, Lisa Dell, Amanda Berrios and Nicole Rizzo.

It makes a writer's job easier when working with people such as these, who do their job with knowledge, passion, and a willingness to go beyond the call of duty when necessary. Beth and her team have frequently bent over backwards to accommodate this newspaper and other local media. Like I said, a real pleasure.

A self-proclaimed 'PR geek,' Silverman, 54, said she was "humbled" by the turnout, and attributes the support she's been shown throughout her career to her "sincere and well-honed relationship-building skills." Throughout her youth in suburban Niles, her undergrad years at U of I/Champaign-Urbana, and some 33-plus years practicing arts and lifestyle public relations here, this lifelong Chicagoan has always made friends easily the old school way: in person, which in today's world has become a rarity. Silverman prides herself on never forgetting a face and considers it a privilege that she "truly can't go anywhere in town without seeing someone she knows."

"I actually feel empowered celebrating my company's 20 years – and more specifically, my 30-plus years in this market," said Silverman. "I am owning my seniority and the history I've got here. I'd like to think that having a decades-long frame of reference about how Chicago works and knowing the key players provides a unique value to our clients, and I'm proud to have earned that."

It's no surprise that under Silverman's direction, her company's signature strengths are providing expert coverage, counsel and yes, connections. Among the high profile cultural institutions that currently count on TSG to manage their messaging are JAM Productions' Uptown Theatre, The Joffrey

Ballet, Lyric Opera of Chicago, Old Town School of Folk Music, and UChicago Arts, not to mention she has been serving as the longtime Chicago area agency-of-record for Cirque du Soleil. And these are long, loyal relationships; Silverman has worked with Cirque for nearly 30 years and The Joffrey more than 15, while the Old Town School was TSG's very first client.

That said, the media landscape has dramatically changed since Silverman began working in publicity in 1986 – first with PR pro Cindy Kurman and then under veteran PR guru Margie Korshak (for whom she worked 12 years, ultimately heading Korshak's entertainment division until leaving in 1999). Just as she is thankful for what she learned from these two female publicity pioneers, Silverman hopes that her way of conducting her business – "leading with sincerity first," has made a powerful impression on the staffers she's trained over the years. And whether it's the traditional broadcast and print media relations still relevant to her baby boomer peers or the increasingly important social media and influencer relations that her staff practices, relationships will always be at the core of her company's work and success, she said.

"We are in the business of 'media relations,'" said Silverman. "That core activity will never change, even as the scope of 'media' has so greatly expanded over the years. To that end, we maintain a proprietary list of more than 4,500 national, regional and local media contacts that is literally updated daily."

"I'd like to think that my long term relationships with more traditional print and broadcast media, paired with my staff's communications with hyper-current influencers, keeps us competitive with other firms and offers clients the coverage they seek," she said.

Here's wishing The Silverman Group another successful couple of decades and then some! I thank Beth for being a total pro to work with and for her ability to make my job easier, as well as for her generosity when it comes to me bringing my grand-temps last week to help others, and one of them is 33-year-old East Rogers Parker Eric Huebner. On Wednesday and Thursday, the two coldest days, Huebner, rather than sitting in his toasty house like the rest of us, hopped on the Red Line and started handing out useful goodie bags to needy/homeless riders, filled with necessities such as hats, gloves, water bottles, socks, granola bars and other munchies, hand and toe warmers, Band-aids, Q-tips, Kleenex, and more. Neighbors dropped off a few items and Starbucks even provided pastries.

"I didn't have a lot of money to put towards it, but with what I did I tried to make it count," said Huebner, who took the train from Loyola to Lake St., switching from car to car at each station and after reaching Macy's went into the pedway and passed out the rest there. "There's so many people who take the train when it's cold just to stay warm."

Huebner, who owns a store at Navy Pier called Best Gift Idea Ever, said he was taking the train to work prior to that, on the first day of negative temps, and each car had about three sleeping people in it with minimal belongings and some asking for money, or food.

"And it hit me, there are so many people who come on the train when it's this frigid out just to escape the cold," he said. "I wasn't trying to be noble; I just thought it would be such a great starting point to help people who don't have a lot on the coldest days in decades. So I made about 45 care packages from my own money and donations from the community and a coffee shop and resolved myself to do this."

"It obviously felt good to do good for others, but it was also very disheartening to see the lack of empathy from others on the train," Huebner added. "I had one guy even want to take one of the packages for himself because he was hungry. I said these are for people who don't have anything and he said, 'oh,' like I was randomly passing food out to people."

"But it felt good to help others and I would highly recommend to those that are able to help as often as they can with whatever they can," said Huebner.

Buyers could see more affordable rates in 2019

Home buyers in Chicago and across the nation may still be thawing out from the recent Polar Vortex, but the outlook for locking in an affordable mortgage rate in 2019 is beginning to heat up.

After a two-day meeting of the Federal Reserve Board's Open Market Committee on Jan. 30, the Fed said it would leave interest rates unchanged and promised in the future to be "patient" in evaluating the nation's economic health.

"In light of global economic and financial developments and muted inflation pressures, the committee will be patient as it determines what future adjustments to the target range for the federal funds rate may be appropriate," the Fed said.

The Open Market Committee said it will maintain its target range for the federal funds rate at 2.25% to 2.5%.

As a result of the Fed effectively taking its foot off of the interest-rate peddle, the rate on 10-year Treasury bonds—the driver of long-term mortgage charges—eased to 2.69% from 2.71%. And Wall Street liked the news. The Dow Jones stock market average skyrocketed 434 points to close above 25,000.

On Jan. 31, Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey reported that average 30-year fixed-rate loans remained relatively flat at 4.46% compared with 4.45% a week earlier, after weeks of moderating. A year ago, benchmark 30-year fixed loans averaged 4.22%.

Chicago-area lenders were charging a range of 4.256% to 4.57% on 30-year fixed-rate mortgages on Jan. 31, reported rateSeeker.com.

Fed Chairman Jerome Powell said that while the economic forecast remains strong, there are "cross-currents" and "conflicting signals" to consider, citing a slowdown in growth in major foreign economies.

Interestingly, the committee did not include any language in reference to "further gradual increases" as it has in the past, signaling to some that a decrease could be on the horizon.

Powell also said several political uncertainties—including U.S. trade tensions, Brexit and fallout from the government shutdown—have contributed to the Fed's new patient approach.

In keeping with the cautious tone, the Fed also said it was ready to slow or even reverse the reduction of its $4-trillion bond portfolio, a sharp move away from its December pledge to reduce its holdings.

New data from Capital Economics, an independent macroeconomic research firm, suggests an oncoming economic slowdown that could push the Open Market Committee to slash the federal funds interest rate by 0.75% as early as 2020.

The Chicago 'No Way'

Something odd is up in City Hall (yes, I know, an understatement these days)... but aldermen are suddenly speaking up about funky deals going on in other wards. Just last week

Something odd is up in City Hall (yes, I know, an understatement these days)... but aldermen are suddenly speaking up about funky deals going on in other wards.

10 aldermen (including some members of the City Council's Zoning Committee) broke with the Chicago Way tradition of 'aldermanic prerogative' by stating they planned to try and hold up the controversial $6 billion Lincoln Yards proposal in Ald. Brian Hopkins 2nd ward. The plan includes $900 million in tax money that would be given to the developers through a proposed new Tax Increment Financing [TIF] district.

Ald. James Cappleman [46th], who replaced Ald. Danny Solis [25th] as the head of the city's Zoning Committee, said he plans to slow down the process while demanding more than 25% on-site affordable housing added to the project.

Other aldermen now speaking up against the Lincoln Yards deal include Joe Moreno [1st], Scott Waguespack [32nd], Deb Mell [33rd], Carlos Rosa [35th], Michele Smith [43rd], Tom Tunney [44th], John Arena [45th], Ameya Pawar [47th], and Harry Osterman [48th].

An alderman speaking out against a development outside their respective ward is somewhat unusual in Chicago, but it did happen in a big way one other time back in 1984 when the Eugenie Terrace On The Park high-rise was built at 1730 N. Clark St. in Lincoln Park. At that time Lincoln Park alderman Martin Oberman was so disliked by all of his colleagues that he lost control of the project by a vote of 49-1.

Besides needing to pass Ald. Cappleman's Zoning Committee, Lincoln Yards and its accompanying $900 million TIF will need to clear the Community Development Commission, Committee on Finance, and the full City Council for final approval.

slowdown in economic growth will force the Fed to cut rates by 0.75% in 2020."

If that scenario happens, Chicago home buyers likely would have an opportunity to lock in a 30-year fixed mortgage in the 3.5% to 3.75% range in early 2020, experts say.

Lower mortgage rates in 2020 could potentially be the boost the housing sector needs, experts say, because more and more lenders are reporting a decline in both loan origination and revenue volumes. However, rate reductions are often an indicator of a struggling economy, which also means consumer spending could weaken.

"My best guess is that rates in 2020 are more likely to be down than up," predicted Tendayi Kapfudz, chief economist for LendingTree.

"Mortgage rates may be lower in this scenario, but typically home sales will drop with consumer spending," said Ruben Gonzalez, chief economist for the Keller Williams real estate brokerage chain. "I would say we would likely see a steeper drop in home sales in 2020 if we get into a situation where the Federal Reserve is actively dropping rates."

Gonzalez said what happens in 2020 is largely going to be dictated by "how the macroeconomic outlook changes" over the year. "Without a recession, we think home sales are likely to flatten out at a slower pace and price growth likely will as well."

Fight homelessness and climate change

Thank you for "Keeping Warm: Where Do the Homeless Go When It Gets Cold?" [Jan 23]. Dangerously and unusually cold temperatures this last week have made me even more concerned for this vulnerable group.

In addition to working to improve services for the homeless, we can take action by calling our alderman's office and asking them to support a pending city resolution that would put Chicago on the forefront of the battle to reverse climate change.

Our aldermen need to know we want them to support City Council Resolution R2017-915, which calls on Congress to pass legislation for national carbon fee and dividend. This is an approach to halting climate change that extracts a gradually-increasing fee on carbon from fossil fuel producing companies, and returns that money in the form of a monthly dividend to all American families. It's bipartisan, revenue neutral, and couldn't be more timely, given the extreme weather conditions we're all experiencing at the moment.

Over 100 cities have passed such resolutions, but Chicago would be the largest one yet, putting us into a national leadership position in the fight against climate change.

one absolutely searing hot night of great rock 'n' roll. On Feb. 16, the organization, which strives to showcase art, assist area businesses and create a sense of community in Edgewater, will present the band Great Moments in Vinyl. But here's the incredible part, the first set performed will be the Rolling Stones' album "Let It Bleed," performed in its entirety and the second set will be The Beatles' "Abbey Road."

In my Stones and Beatles-loving eyes, it just doesn't get much better than that.

Edgewater Artists in Motion president Kevin Flynn reports that the emcee for the night will be Eileen Tull, who teaches comedy writing and improv at Berger Park in Edgewater and has a local show coming up that she'll promote, Tull is donating her time for the event and will be opening the show with a few announcements, then between sets some business, then a 20 minute comedy/storytelling performance, Flynn said. Then, will come "Abbey Road," also in its entirety.

The first set starts at 7:15 p.m. and tix are $25, which includes beer, wine and non-alcoholic beverages. This is the third concert Edgewater Artists in Motion has presented, and upcoming also will be "Prince" in April and the "Talking Heads" in June.

Anyone who can attend is in for a hot night of great rock. There'll be drawings for phones, gift certificates and other prizes and it's a chance to meet some new friends. Tickets can be purchased at www.bitly.com/caimconcerts.

Rescheduled Wild Mile meeting Feb. 7

The previously scheduled community meeting on the Wild Mile - cancelled due to the cold - has been rescheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 7, at the Cornerstone Center, Leslie Hall, 1111 N. Wells St.

This is the second Wild Mile public meeting that hopes to collect feedback from the community on designs for the project's Framework Plan.

The goal of Wild Mile is to create a new park environment for wildlife habitat, recreation, and education on the North Branch Canal. The area of focus is the Chicago River along the east side of Goose Island between Chicago and North avenues.

Giant pizza party coming Feb. 9

The Chicago Pizza Party is coming back to Ravenswood on National Pizza Day, Feb. 9.

The third annual pizza blast will take place at Ravenswood Events Center, 4021 N. Ravenswood.

The party will feature two sessions, three floors, over 60 pizza styles from 20 local restaurants, a rooftop dessert lounge, local beer from Half Acre Beer Co., wine, signature cocktails, top local DJs, games and special guests.

Session one from 1-5 p.m. is all ages, kids over 10 years old will require a ticket, kids under 10 are free. Session two from 6-10 p.m. is a 21+ event. Valid state issued identification required at the door. Tickets are $20, and food and beverages are extra.

Chicago Pizza Party claims to be Chicago's largest pizza festival.

FOIAFest aims to promote better understanding of public records requests

A daylong conference dedicated to public information will be held 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 23, in the Schreiber Center at Loyola University Chicago, 16 E. Pearson St.

The event is called FOIAFest, named after the federal Freedom of Information Act through which citizens access public records.

FOIAFest 2019 will feature panels and workshops with journalists, attorneys and community groups offering information to help attendees better understand public records in order to produce more impactful investigations.

The keynote speaker is Todd Wallace, an investigative and data reporter for the Boston Globe's Spotlight team. The graduate of Northwestern University's Medill School of Journalism also has worked for the San Francisco Chronicle, the Dayton Daily News and the Boston Herald.

Admission to FOIAFest is $20 for Chicago Headline Club members, $30 for non-members and $10 for students. Tickets include a continental breakfast and lunch.

For more information call the Chicago Headline Club at 872-267-2242.

AMERICAN LITERARY ARISTOCRACY: The celebrated former New York Times writer and American humorist, Russell Baker, died at 93. For many PBS viewers he was the voice of Masterpiece Theater, a Sunday night pastime, having taken over from the late British American journalist Alistair Cooke. Baker's introduction of the classic British tales of gentility and erudite literary grandeur were without equal. The soft spoken, lifelong Virginian spoke like he wrote. With harmony and sparkle. With a shared taste for the true elegance of the English language and imagination, Baker was a sturdy bridge over which Americans could cross in cultural safety and poignant self-reflection. He followed "the rockets red glare," cherishing the liberties that flowed from our sense of national purpose. Baker was a raconteur. A quiet acterized with refined polish. At the heart of all his artistry, Baker was an American yeoman. A "get the job done" writer who knew America inside and out. From its poverty and leanness during the Depression and its fear during wartime, to its shaky and dangerous modern urban disharmony, Baker spent his life taking the measure of America. For that, we are all grateful. "Life," Baker wrote, "is a braided cord of humanity stretching up from time long gone, and that it cannot be defined by the span of a single journey from diaper to shroud." Rest in peace, dear man.

NOT FAKE NEWS: The Newseum in Washington, DC is about to close on Pennsylvania Avenue, its gorgeous building proved too costly. Will it find a new home?

VIVRE LEGRAND! I can't walk on the sands of Cape Cod and not hear his music. It's like the dawn. Or a kiss with a stranger. Just like living and loving in Paris. Music for the "Thomas Crown" touched our soul in "The windmills of your mind." Michel Legrand interpreted the human heart. He was France for many of us. A wet boulevard. A sun streaked street near the Left Bank. A bridge over the Seine. A heart broken by beauty. The discovery that Paris was fantastique after all. Even the Third Reich could not mar its beauty. And the happiness that it is not for everyone. Oscar Winning composer Legrand died last week in France at 84. His life was music and he enriched the world with a product genius of the Paris Conservatoire. He studied with the greatest of teachers, Nadia Boulanger. He wrote the music for some 200 films, including "The Umbrella's of Cherbourg," and the heart-wrenching "Brian's Song" (Bears' Brian Piccolo) and "The Summer of '42," bringing me back to Cape Cod. Have gentle rest.

JUVENILE JUSTICE: Ashly Hartman joining Chicago family and friends cheering the success of Aunt Jennifer Freeman in the NY State legislature in getting landmark passage of a new "Child's Victims Act" in Albany. Bravo.

POST IMPRESSIONISM: Vincent van Gogh's "Sunflowers" painting deemed too fragile to ever travel again. Painted during his 1889 journey to Arles, it must remain at the Van Gogh Museum in Amsterdam to be seen.

I OBJECT: Are brother-in-law and sister-in-law, practicing in the same law firm crossing the line in billable hours? Apparently the wife thinks so. Too much Habeas Corpus. Too much Hanky Panky.

Five exercise myths for people 55+

While it's expected that most older people tend to slow down with age, the notion that seniors and soon-to-be seniors should trade in exercise and their active lifestyles for bingo and rocking chairs is definitely antiquated, says Chicago physical therapist Marc Gregory Guillen.

And yet, when it comes to exercise for the 55-and-older population, plenty of myths continue to drive people's actions – or rather, inactions – when it comes to putting in the right amount of sweat equity to stay healthy and active.

“From a purely physiological perspective, sure, you're going to start to slow down a little here and there as you get older, but that doesn't mean you just roll over and accept these so-called consequences of age,” said Guillen, owner of Free Body Physical Therapy & Wellness in Wicker Park. “As they say, age is just a number. You want to be smart about how you adapt activity to certain age-related limitations, sure, but regular exercise remains just as critical now as when you were younger – perhaps even more so.”

To help encourage the older crowd to continue making exercise a standard aspect of their everyday lives, Guillen provided a list of his top five exercise myths for older adults:

Myth 1: “It's Too Late to Start” It doesn't matter what you've done before now, Guillen says. Even if you've never had a regular exercise routine before, it's never too late to start. Exercising later in life can lower your risk of heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, and some types of cancer.

Myth 2: “My Body's Too Frail” (aka, “I Might Break a Hip”) Unless you've been told this by a medical professional based on a specific condition or injury, this is likely fear talking. Not only does regular exercise help strengthen your body's stability, balance and flexibility, reducing the chances of a fall, and it can also help strengthen bones.

Myth 3: “I Have Joint Pain, so I Should Stay Away from Exercise” Again, the opposite is true. According to Guillen, it's crucial people with arthritis partake in regular exercise. Not only does it improve strength and flexibility, but exercise can also reduce joint stiffness and pain while helping sufferers ward off fatigue.

Myth 4: “I'm Too Old for Weight Training” Weight training, also known as resistance and strength training, actually takes on a more critical role as you age. Not only does a stronger body help seniors stay upright and confident, but weight-bearing exercise can also ward off the onset of osteoporosis by helping maintain bone density.

Myth 5: “I'm Better Off Focusing on My Mind, Not My Body” Fact is, focusing on the body is focusing on the mind. According to multiple studies, including one published last month in Nature Medicine, exercise improves brain health, helps ward off dementia, and may even slow the progression of dementia. In addition, exercise reduces stress and anxiety, and staying active often equates to a better social life.

According to 2018 physical guidelines by the U.S. Dept. of Health, older adults should shoot for 150 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic activity each week, plus weekly balance and muscle strengthening exercises.

And while fitness levels and certain limitations shouldn't keep most older adults from exercise, some exercises may require modifications based on such conditions, Guillen says. Fortunately, a physical therapist can provide personalized guidance based on individual health conditions, movement limitations and physician recommendations.

Demystifying ‘The Core’

Seniors with back problems have been hearing a lot about core workouts. Core-building exercises and core strength.

Seems like everyone in the fitness world is always talking about “the core,” yet does the typical person fully understand what the core is and why it matters so much?

According to Guillen, the core is made up of the many individual muscles and muscle groups that make up your torso, or the center of the body – all of which are essential for optimal movement, and stability, particularly as you age.

“Maintaining your core is actually quite vital to overall fitness and health,” said Guillen. “Not focusing on keeping the core strong can set one up for poor posture and balance, which can put unnecessary strain on other parts of the body. This can make a person more susceptible to chronic conditions like back pain, or acute injuries like abdominal strains.”

And whether you realize it or not, your core plays an essential function in daily life. Sitting, standing, turning sideways ... nearly any physical movement involves your core in some way. A debilitating injury to a weak, unstable or inflexible core – say, a core muscle injury (often, and misleadingly, called a “sports

Keep up at work as you age

BY JENNIFER FITZPATRICK

Do you ever marvel at how fast the new college graduates in your office seem to move? Have you heard them chatting about watching late night television or having sipped martinis at the latest hip club into the wee hours of the morning?

Despite this lifestyle, they still seem to have unlimited energy at work the next day.

Do you remember when you used to be like that? It's not your imagination; you probably are moving a bit slower.

As we get older, the body has less "bounce back" than it did when we were younger. Often as we age we feel tired more often at work. Even older workaholics in love with their jobs may remember a time when they could work 18 hours every day and not feel the effects. These same driven career-oriented professionals are often surprised by their fatigue, which often leads to burnout.

How do we keep up with younger colleagues, subordinates, customers and even managers who have seemingly unlimited energy and fresh ideas and appear to require little sleep?

Most people don't realize that some of the natural aging process begins around age 30. The need for sufficient sleep, good nutrition and exercise becomes more important every year once the aging process starts.

Unfortunately for many of us, our responsibilities multiply in our middle age and older years, which increases stress just during the time when we should be reducing it. Taking care of children, assisting older parents, buying homes, and increased career obligations often push good self-care to the lowest priority.

So how do we maintain excellent work performance, meeting our career goals while feeling good and being healthy? Consider these 10 tips for feeling younger and healthier at work:

1. Treat your body better every year

Would you skip routine maintenance for your older vehicle and expect it to continue running reliably? It's startling how many responsible older workers wouldn't dream of missing an oil change appointment for their car but don't take time for lunch. Eating healthfully, exercising regularly, minimizing alcohol and caffeine consumption, drinking plenty of water and getting sufficient sleep is essential to keeping energy up. Treat your body at least as well as you treat your car.

Taking care of children, assisting older parents, buying homes, and increased career obligations often push good self-care to the lowest priority.

2. Travel smart

Travel often becomes more challenging on our bodies as we get older. If you are a road warrior, have a suitcase and toiletry case prepared at all times with items you will need such as toothpaste, a toothbrush, a hairbrush and makeup. Try to pad cross-country and cross-continental trips with an extra day or two to reduce the strain of jet lag. Stop regularly to stretch muscles during long car trips.

3. If you are ill, take a sick day

Even if you just have a cold, your immune system will thank you if you coddle yourself a little bit. Take a day to drink tea in bed while watching an old movie. If you truly have unavoidable deadlines, at least work from home. The older workforce tends to see calling in sick as a sign of weakness, wanting to persevere even while under the weather. Taking a day or two off when you begin to feel sick often decreases the length of an illness because the rest allows your body to recover more quickly.

4. Manage chronic conditions

Chronic and acute conditions are a not a "normal" part of the aging process, but they do occur more frequently as we get older. If you have diabetes, heart disease, sleep apnea or any other chronic conditions, be sure to discuss with your doctor and see the appropriate specialists. With the onset of chronic and acute conditions, older workers are more likely to be prescribed medications. It is important to do a cost-benefit analysis with your doctor when considering taking a new drug. The decision to take medicine should always be weighed carefully, because many drugs tend to have side effects that may impact work performance and quality of life. Take into consideration how sleepiness, weight loss or gain, fatigue, or memory issues may impact your job if it is necessary to take a drug that causes those side effects.

5. Stop rushing

Rushing from appointment to appointment is another surefire way to increase stress, which can exacerbate chronic conditions. Budget plenty of time to get to where you need to go.

6. Prioritize preventive care appointments

Preventive care such as routine physical, dental and eye exams should not be constantly rescheduled in favor of work obligations. Make it a rule that you will not re-schedule a medical appointment more than once.

7. Schedule opportunities for stress reduction

Taking vacations and unplugging from work altogether is ideal. But regular yoga, massage, acupuncture, and psychotherapy appointments can help manage stress when a vacation is not possible. Figure out a way to incorporate some relaxation into every single work day, even if it is only a few minutes of meditation.

8. Be more efficient at work

Wouldn't it be great if you could get your job done in less time? If you have trouble delegating, take a course on how to work smarter. Ask others who seem to have a better work-life balance for their secrets.

9. Downsize your life in order to have more balance

If you have a high-pressure job that is your priority, you may need to cut back on volunteer or even some personal obligations in order to have more energy at work. Keep a tickler file of activities and worthy volunteer opportunities to refer to when you retire and have more time.

10. Set boundaries with managers and subordinates

If you have the type of position where you need to be on call, let others know the way you prefer to be contacted. If you don't wish to be contacted on weekends unless it's a true emergency, make sure you let people know. Often, older employees feel they need to be plugged in at all times, especially if younger counterparts are. But everyone is entitled to set boundaries at their own comfort level, especially during non-work hours. Older workers often provide some of the most effective leadership and valuable contributions to the workplace. When good self-care and healthy boundaries are cultivated, older workers can expect their example, wisdom and experience to influence others even after retirement.

A day in the life of The Clare concierge

What does concierge service look like at The Clare?

Michael Kwyer shares an inside look at his daily activities and interactions and his favorite part about working in the community.

At 2 p.m. one afternoon in January, Kwyer is at his desk. A constant crowd of people streams through the lobby, both in and out of the elevators and on to brave the cold. Kwyer notes there's been an increase in visits, communication and requests since The Clare's renovations in 2015, after which his desk was relocated to the ground level. However, he says this time is his favorite part of the day.

"After mealtime, around 2:30 p.m., there tends to be very high traffic down here," he says. "There's a lot of noise and a lot of craziness, but that's a lot of fun too, because people are coming and going and I get to greet everyone and chat with them. The day is winding down and people are more relaxed."

a concierge.

"I've always loved the city, so having the opportunity to share the joy Chicago has to offer was what made me want to be a concierge," Kwyer says. "It's a lot of fun to be able to help people in this way."

Specifically, he enjoys working at The Clare because there is a sense of community and family among the residents and employees.

"I connect with the residents in so many different ways," he says. "You don't necessarily get that kind of rapport with hotel guests."

Work starts for Michael at 8:30 a.m. during the week (his counterpart, Heidi, provides personal concierge services on the weekends). He mentions it is important to multitask and prioritize throughout the day. While he takes care of some smaller responsibilities, such as assisting residents in looking up phone numbers, handling work orders and printing the resident-led monthly newsletter, The Clarion, he also does his part to maintain day-to-day functions at The Clare.

For example, Kwyer helps to manage The Clare's incoming mail. When residents go out of town, they may ask him to hold or forward their mail. So every Friday, he goes to the post office to handle their requests and to buy stamps.

Coordinating transportation for residents is another of Kwyer's duties. The work involves updating the car and bus schedules and communicating with The Clare's three drivers. He also schedules Lyft rides for residents if The Clare vehicles are already booked.

Additionally, Kwyer reserves The Clare's guest suites when residents' friends and family members come to visit. He constantly checks and updates a spreadsheet of available rooms to ensure accuracy of reservations, check-ins and check-outs. When all of The Clare's guest suites are occupied, Kwyer connects with nearby hotels – even Loyola University Chicago – to ensure there are available rooms.

Along with guest suite and hotel reservations, Kwyer assists residents in booking airline tickets and appointments at The Clare's massage suite, as well as coordinating ticket purchases for various plays and performances around the city. He loves receiving suggestions for the many places residents are interested in visiting, and he especially enjoys hearing about their experiences afterward.

"It goes back to helping people enjoy the city," he says.

Overall, Kwyer is truly happy with his job at The Clare, especially because of the residents with whom he interacts, the community's vibrant atmosphere and the nature of his work. His passion shines through his friendly demeanor, and the results are rewarding.

EXERCISE from p. 7

hernia") – and one's quality of life can be dramatically impacted.

"Your core isn't a part of the body you want to ignore when looking to maintain or improve your fitness level and live an active life. Fortunately, there are plenty of simple exercises out there that can keep your core strong – exercises you can do anywhere because they require no special equipment."

Here are three tried-and-true core-strengthening exercises:

Abdominal Crunches: Lying on your back, place your feet on a wall so that your knees and hips are bent at 90-degree angles. Tighten your abdominal muscles and raise your head and shoulders off the floor. To avoid straining your neck, cross your arms on your chest rather than locking them behind your head. Hold for three deep breaths before returning to the start position, then repeat. This workout is a classic core exercise and flexes a number of the muscle groups that make up your core.

Plank Hold: This is an excellent way to strengthen your core and lower back muscles. Lie face down on the floor and place your elbows on the ground on either side of your body. Keep your stomach muscles tight and raise your body up off the ground, supported only with your elbows in front and toes in back. You must keep your core muscles tight and your butt lifted as high as your shoulders to avoid strain on the lower back. Hold the position for 10 seconds, then slowly lower to the starting position. Repeat five times. As you become stronger, you can experiment with holding the position for longer periods of time.

Leg Lifts: Leg exercises also contribute to your core strength. To do leg lifts, lie on your back with your legs straight and arms at your side, then lift your legs about 12" off the ground and hold. If that is too stressful, lift one leg at a time. You can do both legs together once you've built up strength.

If any of these exercises lead to pain or discomfort, don't do them. Instead, visit a physical therapist to learn modifications or different core exercise options that take your current physical limitations into consideration. A physical therapist can also assess the cause(s) of the discomfort and limitations, then help put you on a path toward a more active, pain-free life.

Police Beat....

Cops finally bust two wheel thieves on North Side

Many Chicagoans have become used to the sight of cars propped up on cinderblocks, stripped of wheels on North Side streets. Hardly a week goes by that we don't hear from a victim of wheel thieves, the phantom operators who steal during the dark of night and rarely face arrest.

But now there is good news.

Vidaurreta Alvarez

the suspect's cars.

Albany Park residents Daniel Vidaurreta Alvarez, 29, and Brandon Huizar, 25, were arrested at 4 a.m. Jan. 25 after cops in a covert vehicle allegedly watched their entire wheel theft process.

Undercover officers were watching as Alvarez double-parked his Volkswagen Passat next to a parked Honda Accord in the 2900 block of N. Washtenaw early that morning and turned his vehicle's lights off. Alvarez and Huizar got out and began loosening the Honda's lug nuts with hand tools, according to police.

The two men returned to Alvarez's car, drove around the block, parked next to the Honda again, and loaded its four tires into Alvarez's back seat, police said. The Honda was left teetering on landscaping blocks.

Cops then tailed Alvarez's car and watched as he and Huizar unloaded the tires into a garage in the 4400 block of N. Keokuk, according to court records.

Marked patrol cars were called in to arrest Alvarez and Huizar minutes later.

Police said they found a tire iron in Alvarez's driver's seat. On the passenger's side was a four-way lug nut wrench with a bag containing 13 wheel lock keys. The trunk, police said, contained a floor jack and two snow-covered landscaping blocks. A search warrant was obtained for the garage.

Prosecutors charged Alvarez and Huizar with one count of felony theft each. Judge Sophia Atcherson released the men on recognizance bonds.

Cops in other parts of the country have said that Honda wheels are popular with thieves because they have a common bolt pattern. That makes them easy to resell and their small, 19" size are "stylish" when bolted to a souped-up car.

Small fires set in 3 Streeterville high-rises, man charged

A Wheaton man is accused of setting small fires in the stairwells of three Streeterville high-rise buildings last week, including Northwestern Memorial Hospital and the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, according to court records. No one has been injured.

Andrew D. Jones, 28, is currently held in lieu of $1,000 bail.

On Jan. 19, Jones was detained by Northwestern Memorial Hospital security after he allegedly started a small fire in a stairwell of the hospital at 201 E. Huron around 8 p.m. Police said Jones admitted to setting the fire, which caused a worker to pull a fire alarm and the entire hospital to be placed on lockdown, according to court records.

Jones was charged with misdemeanor reckless conduct and misdemeanor criminal trespassing. He was released on a recognizance bond.

Two days later, police and fire personnel were called to the Ritz-Carlton, 160 E. Pearson, at 12:30 p.m. after an employee found and extinguished a small fire in a stairwell between the 11th and 12th floors. Jones, who was known to hotel security, was located nearby and held for police. Police officers said they found six disposable lighters in his possession.

Prosecutors charged him with felony criminal damage to property, misdemeanor trespassing, and two misdemeanor counts of reckless conduct-bodily harm.

Police officers at the hotel thought the fire sounded similar to a Jan. 14 incident in the One Bennett Park residential high-rise at 514 N. Peshtigo Ct. An investigation was launched, and Jones has now been charged with criminal damage to property and reckless conduct-bodily harm in connection with that case.

Jones is due back in court on Feb. 8. He can go free to await trial by posting a $100 deposit.

Man strikes stranger, punches cop in race-fueled incident on Boystown bar strip

A Georgia man is accused of punching a woman in the head and then punching a responding police officer in the eye during a racially-charged incident on the Boystown bar strip early Feb. 2.

Patrol officers in the 3300 block of N. Halsted saw Robert Buschman, 34, walk up to a 25-year-old woman and punch her in the face outside on the southwest corner of Halsted and Aldine at 1:52 a.m., according to a police report.

The officers intervened in the incident at which time Buschman struck one of them in the eye, calling the male cop a "black b*tch n*gger," according to an arrest report.

The woman who was punched told officers that she had never met Buschman before he walked up to her, yelled "F*ck you, immigrant b*tch" and struck her in the face.

The officer suffered minor injuries and swelling to the eye.

Prosecutors charged Buschman with felony aggravated battery of a police officer and misdemeanor battery. Judge Sophia Atcherson ordered Buschman held in lieu of $5,000. That means Buschman can go free by posting a $500 deposit.

Uptown wig shop robbed at scissorpoint; Two charged, another cut loose

Two people are in custody and a third has been cut loose without charges after an Uptown beauty store was robbed at scissor-point of wigs around 5 p.m. Feb. 1.

Police say Javier Hill, 25, stuffed wigs down his left pants leg at Beauty House, 1041 W. Wilson. Three employees blocked the door as Hill, Michelle Cain, 27, and a third person stole merchandise, prosecutors said.

The third person then pulled out a pair of scissors and lunged at the workers, allowing the thieves to escape, according to a police report. A paying customer told officers that the three offenders hang out at Center on Halsted, the massive LGBTQ service agency at 3656 N. Halsted.

Armed with "a distinctive description" of Cain and Hill: "One male wearing a black and pink wig. Another male wearing a black Mohawk," officers raced to the center.

Hill and Cain were quickly located at the Center and placed in custody. The third assailant, a longtime well-known Boystown menace, was subsequently arrested by police and released by prosecutors. We are not publishing

Man being sought for two downtown bank robberies

Chicago police are on the lookout for a man who staked out and then robbed two banks in and near the Loop since mid-January, according to a community alert.

The man seen in these surveillance photos entered the banks' lobbies and observed operations before leaving, then returning at a later time to rob the establishments, police said.

Hold-up notes written on deposit slips have been passed to tellers, warning them that the man has a gun and demanding cash, according to the alert. After receiving money, the man runs out of the bank and escapes in a vehicle.

The man struck most recently at the Lakeside Bank, 1350 S. Michigan Ave., at 3:47 p.m. Jan. 31, according to the FBI. A dye pack hidden in the cash exploded about a half-block from the bank, according to media reports.

Previously, the man robbed Chase Bank at 1:09 p.m. Jan. 16, the FBI said.

Police described the offender as a black male between 45- and 55-years-old who stands 5'-2" to 5'-6" tall. He weighs 150-180 lbs., has a medium complexion, short black hair, and a black and gray goatee.

Anyone with information about the robber may contact Area Central detectives at 312-747-8384 regarding pattern #P19-1-026 or the FBI Chicago Field Office at 312-421-6700.

his name because he has not been charged with this crime.

Prosecutors have charged Hill and Cain with one Class X felony charge of armed robbery each. They are being held in lieu of $20,000 bail by order of Judge Sylvia Atcherson.

Man charged with robbing Boystown bank so he could pay for a tattoo

It's the romantic tragedy of the year: A Chicago man held-up a Boystown bank last week shortly after asking a nearby tattoo artist how much it'd cost to have his girlfriend's name inked on his body. But as the budding Romeo ran from the bank to get the work done, he discovered a GPS device hidden in the cash and he had to ditch the satellite-tracked money behind the tattoo parlor and slip back home.

Christopher V. Berry, 26, of the Albany Park neighborhood is now charged with one federal count of bank robbery in connection with the hold-up at TCF Bank, 3531 N. Broadway on Jan. 23.

Berry donned a surgical mask, walked to a teller at the bank inside the Jewel-Osco store, held his right hand inside his pocket and handed over a note that said, "I have a gun, Give me all the money in the register," according to the FBI.

The teller handed Berry some cash. Looking in her drawer, Berry said, "Give me those 50s," an FBI agent wrote. She complied.

Berry left the note behind and ran from the bank into a nearby alley and headed toward the Pink Rhino tattoo studio with $1,351, according to the complaint and previous information from police.

Investigators later found the bank's GPS device, stacks of cash, a surgical mask and Berry's personal TCF Bank checkbook in a yard about two blocks from the bank, directly behind the Pink Rhino.

Cops conducting a routine post-robbery sweep of the area went into the tattoo parlor looking for the robber minutes after the hold-up and learned that a man matching the robber's description had come in earlier that afternoon and asked how much it would cost to have a specific woman's name tattooed on him, according to the FBI. The man said his name was "Chris" and that he would come back.

After finding Berry's checkbook, investigators returned to Pink Rhino with Christopher Berry's driver's license photo from police records. It was a match.

About six hours after the robbery, investigators went to Berry's apartment in the 3000 block of W. Gunnison. A woman, whose name matched the one Berry wanted to have tattooed on his body, answered the door. While she spoke with police at the front door, other officers arrested Berry on the back porch as he took out the trash.

According to the suburban Herald-News, Joliet police arrested Berry at the Gunnison address in December after he was charged with forgery, identity theft, and continuing a financial crime enterprise. His bond at the time was set at $250,000, the report said.

Residential burglaries in Uptown

Police have issued a warning about two recent residential burglaries that have occurred in Uptown. In these burglaries, the offender(s) gained entry into the premises through unlocked doors. Once inside, the offender(s) stole property from the apartment.

One incident was on the 1300 block of W. Argyle St. between Jan. 18 and 21, between 10:30 a.m. - 2:40 p.m. The second was in the 1300 block of W. Argyle St. on Jan. 28, at approximately 1 p.m.

Shots fired, no one injured during North Center road rage incident

A stray bullet broke two bottles in a nearby bowling alley but no one was injured Jan. 29 when gunfire broke out during a road rage incident in the North Center neighborhood, police said. No arrests have been made. A motorist's dashcam video captured images of the conflict.

Police received multiple calls of shots fired in the 1900 block of West Irving Park Rd. around 7:25 p.m. with between six and nine shots reportedly fired. The shooting involved two drivers who were apparently involved in a traffic dispute or collision about a block east of the shooting scene.

Mikey Shin's dashcam was rolling as the events unfolded. In the video, two cars enter traffic on Shin's right. The vehicles appear to be connected at the bumper, possibly because one vehicle ran into the other and became stuck or because the second driver was intentionally riding on the first car's bumper as a form of intimidation.

The two cars zoom down the block and then come to a stop near Damen Ave. Shots are fired, the second car reverses and speeds away eastbound.

How to make it as a free-lance copywriter

Why is it that writing a story, a book, or an article seems like child's play compared to writing a synopsis or a sales page? Despite fewer words on the page, writing a succinct summary or sales pitch can bring on much more anxiety.

How do writers get over this?

Find out at the next Independent Writers Of Chicago meeting 5 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 12, in room 4F at the Gratz Center, 126 E. Chestnut St., when copywriter and author Bryan Cohen while help guide local writers through the process of writing short, snappy words to help you get more clients and sell more books. Cohen and his colleagues have written over 2,000 book descriptions for authors in every conceivable genre.

By the end of the hour-long chat, you'll know how to cut straight to the point. Enough said.

Networking starts at 5 p.m. and the program at 6 p.m. IWOC members are admitted free and do not need to register. Non-members must pay $15 ($10 if pre-registered). For more information call 800-804-4962 or visit www.iwoc.org.

Suit filed against Thorek Hosp., doctors over woman's death

BY JENIE MALLARD-TORRES

Cook County Record

A relative of a Cook County woman has filed a wrongful death suit against two physicians and a Chicago hospital.

Carla Counts Allan, as personal representative of the estate of Amanda Counts Tanner, filed a complaint on Dec. 28 in Cook County Circuit Court against Thorek Memorial Hospital, 850 W. Irving Park Rd.; and physicians Raja Gill and John Hunniford, alleging wrongful death and medical malpractice.

According to the complaint, on Feb. 18, 2018, Tanner was admitted to Thorek's inpatient psychiatric unit because of severe depression and suicidal thoughts and was placed on close observation. The suit states Hunniford was Tanner's primary care physician and that Gill was also involved in her care.

The suit states Tanner was found hanged, on Feb. 23, 2018.

The plaintiff claims the defendants failed to adequately assess, diagnose, monitor and treat decedent.

The plaintiff requests a trial by jury and seeks judgment in an amount in excess of the jurisdictional limits, plus costs and further relief as the court deems just.

built on site, as he requires in his North Side ward.

“As a city, we should (incentivize) investment in the South and West Sides, areas that have been largely excluded from the economic development we have seen for decades on the North Side and downtown,” Osterman wrote. “A TIF for Lincoln Yards is counter-intuitive to growing the city’s economy in an equitable fashion, as it is the only undeveloped land on the North Side, situated between two affluent, transit-rich neighborhoods. I am not convinced that public funding is needed in order to attract development here.”

He also said the inclusion of small music venues in the Lincoln Yards plan directly threatens the success of the Uptown Entertainment District to the south of his ward where the city will help renovate the historic Uptown Theatre, along private efforts with Double Door, TimeLine Theater, and The Baton’s planned locations to Uptown.

“The city’s investment in another nearby mini-entertainment district undercuts the hard work of stakeholders and local leaders who worked tirelessly to breathe new life into Uptown,” Ald. Osterman said.

There are five TIF districts in the 48th ward, which is part of the Northside Red/Purple Line TIF district. Bryn Mawr Ave (near lake) is a SSA (Special Service Area) and the east side of Clark St. (Andersonville) are a few. In 2013, the ward had $22.3 million in TIF funds, with some funds used to renovate the CTA Red/Purple “L” line and former Ald. Mary Ann Smith secured $55 million for the ward schools.

Osterman touted his accomplishments in his recent newsletter before the Feb. 26 election. He said he helped pass the Senior Relocation Ordinance that will force developers with city funding to communicate and coordinate with the elderly impacted by construction, and co-sponsored an ordinance to enable the city’s inspector general to conduct a full review of City Council committees, a forensic audit of the Workers Comp program and demand an alderman to be a full-time position with no outside employment. This was in the wake of the FBI investigation of Ald. Ed Burke for shaking down a Burger King operator, and his private law practice that helps property owners lower real estate tax assessments on their properties.

So what is wrong with Ald. Osterman?

“He’s voted 94% of the time with the Chicago machine, favors the affluent part of the ward (East Andersonville) more than Edgewater and North Uptown, drops the ball on providing basic services unless you’re his friend, and was one of the many aldermen who tried to push a $5 million settlement on Laquan McDonald’s family to cover up the actions of former Chicago Police Officer Jason Van Dyke and aid Rahm Emanuel’s 2015 Mayoral re-election prospects,” says Williams.

Williams, a Navy veteran, has lived in the ward for six years and said people asked him to run so that voters would have a choice. He said he favors more affordable housing, rent control, an elected school board, a LaSalle St. tax to give home owners relief, and a Civilian Police Accountability council, and wants to preserve Edgewater’s historic landmarks and enforce littering laws. He said he’s also in favor of legalizing marijuana, building a casino and reducing aldermanic salaries from $104,000 to $73,000.

He said he’s been endorsed by mayoral candidate and millionaire businessman Willie Wilson as well as progressive Ald. Scott Waguespack [32nd].

Williams said he would preserve the Edgewater historical landmarks such as the 1912 house and 64-unit apartment building on 6300 N. Winthrop block which is in the process of being torn down by Loyola Univ. to build a sophomore dormitory. This will displace the low-income residents, he said.

“It isn’t fair for one part of the ward (East Andersonville) to have a voice when it comes to downzoning to save 2-flat apartment buildings, but ignore the residents of Edgewater by not allowing them to voice and vote their concerns on these local matters,” he said. “Due to gentrification, many low income families who have been loyal, longtime residents of the ward are being pushed out.”

Williams says he no longer is a Libertarian and is now Independent because he doesn’t agree with lowering the age of consent to 13. He said his campaign has raised $10,000, while Ald. Osterman has nearly $97,000 cash on hand according to Illinois Sunshine.

Unlike other incumbents, Ald. Osterman chose not to challenge the 1,902 signatures Williams gathered for his petition.

ing for the governor to release the funds and hope that the new administration will do so shortly. As to why the funding was held up by Gov. Rauner’s administration, we’d have no real way of knowing.”

However, while the state budget impasse has been blamed, past reports also pointed to the Illinois Dept. of Transportation (IDOT) for tying up the process in red tape due to Peterson’s designation as state highway U.S. 14.

A call from IDOT’s Dir. of Communications Guy Tridgell was emphatic. “Funds are programmed for the project, but implementation lies with Metra,” he said. “Metra is in charge of that and should answer questions about funding and schedule.”

Tridgell was unaware of any technical matter relating to highway jurisdiction and knew of no reason why IDOT was thought to be blocking the funds.

A decade ago, the state had reduced Metra’s bond funding by $265 million, but the portion set aside for the Peterson/Ridge station was since restored, so designs were begun.

On the bright side, Metra confirmed progress on the remaining designs, renderings for the two federally funded bridges that straddle the platform to the north and south of the station. That piece of the project is slated to go out to bid this Spring.

Mere days into his governorship, Pritzker was issuing a statewide disaster proclamation in advance of the life-threatening weather. Meanwhile, O’Connor took on a new role as chairman of the City Council Finance Committee after Ald. Ed Burke [14th] was forced to resign due to a scandal.
