3 Little Words So Hard To Say

ANN GERBER

PITY THE PEOPLE who have never heard these three little words and also those who have never said these words.

THREE LITTLE WORDS that can have more impact than a ton of bricks, a billion dollars, a matter of life and death.

I LOVE YOU. Rolls gently off the tongue but is powerful enough to turn the tide of lives. Ah, if only the 3 little words were always true when said.

VALENTINE'S DAY is approaching Feb. 14 and thoughts of love fill our commercial world.

WHY DO MOST OF US find it so difficult to say those three little words? If your mother and father were not demonstrative, rarely or never said "I love you" it is a safe bet that kids won't say it either. We had neighbors who always, always finished every conversation with their children by telling them, "I love you." And the youngsters always, always added their "I love you" to end their talk. Yelling was at a minimum, even for blatant mistakes by the kids.

"I FELL OVER YOUR BIKE. Don't ever leave it there again. I love you, son." This was typical. No child ever feared a reprimand from these loving parents. Too often neurotic fathers and mothers short-change their children when it comes to giving them unconditional love. Children need to feel safe and loved and valued. We see the unloved youngsters in court, as runaways, as poor students, as problems for all of us.

CANDY AND FLOWERS AND VALENTINES will be all over our world this Valentine's Day. Love, not so much.

Scheduled to open in June 2016, this new high-end grocery store will reactivate a long-vacant site on Broadway.

After a decade, 3030 Broadway finally breaking ground

High density development coming to narrowest stretch of Broadway

BY PATRICK BUTLER

After nearly a decade of planning, wrangling and false starts, ground was broken Feb. 3 for a new Mariano's supermarket, an XPort Fitness gym and an assortment of street-level retail shops at 3030 N. Broadway.

On hand was Ald. Tom Tunney (44th) and representatives of Mariano's, Barrett & Porto Real estate, the Taxman Corp., and Newport Capital Partners.

When completed in about 18 months, the five-story development will house approximately 125,000 square feet of retail space and will become one of the most densely developed section of Broadway in Lakeview East.

Mariano's will have 73,000 square feet of that on the second and third floors. XSport Fitness will have 44,500 on the fifth floor.

And the remaining 75,000 square feet of small retail shops will be on the ground level. The complex will also have two levels of decked parking totaling 245 spaces, with another 20 spots on the ground level.

The site sat vacant for a decade due to the poisonous mix of the 2008 real estate crash, the credit crisis, a poor economy and old fashioned Chicago political meddling.

"[The] 3030 N. Broadway [location] has been the site of a long-sought-after grocery store and I could not be more proud to welcome Mariano's and XSport Fitness to the 44th Ward," Ald. Tunney said. "Grocery stores are economic engines for neighbor-

Great weather jeopardized college hockey match at Soldier Field

On Saturday, with a college hockey double-header getting ready to face off at Soldier Field, it was 40 degrees and bright sunny most of the afternoon jeopardizing the first game between Western Michigan and Miami of Ohio which was delayed 100 minutes while the sun was allowed to dip behind a high-rise building and send shadows over the playing surface.

BY MARK SCHIPPER

For February, the sun seemed to beat down on Soldier Field like a desert scene. The black and green "Hockey City Classic" logo painted on a sub-layer of ice was covered up with a white plastic tarp and the just resurfaced ice looked like a shallow soup from end-to-end.

"The sun goes toward anything with color," said a wise old rink steward who had seen everything that can happen to ice under bad conditions. "You put a piece of electrical tape down on the white surface and pretty soon you'll have a hole in the ice under the tape."

In a town like Chicago in February the smart-money worry would be temperatures too frigid for players to play in and for fans to sit outside in. But on Saturday, with a college hockey double-header getting ready to face off, it was 40 degrees and bright sunny most of the afternoon.

The first game between Western Michigan and Miami of Ohio was delayed 100 minutes while the sun was allowed to dip behind a high-rise building to the south-west and send shadows to spread over the playing surface.

Normally, the ice would have been playable even in the unseasonably warm conditions. A

Neighbors approve another year on Wellington for Broadway Youth Center

The Broadway Youth Center [BYC] just got the OK to stay another year at the Wellington Ave. United Church of Christ, 615 W. Wellington.

The Southeast Lake View Neighbors [SELVN] – the community organization representing that neighborhood – voted 19-0, with three abstentions at its meeting Monday – to renew both its "Good Neighbor Agreement" with BYC. SELVN also reaffirmed its support for a special-use permit allowing the Howard Brown Health Center-affiliated agency to operate out of that church for at least another year. BYC is a part of the Howard Brown Health Center, which leases the space from the church.

According to BYC director Imani Rupert and Michelle Wetzel, the agency's lawyer, 572

youths between 12 and 25 were served by BYC this past year. Rupert estimated BYC provided as many as 20,000 separate services.

Under the Good Neighbor Agreement, BYC staff and neighborhood volunteers agree to monitor the area around the church along Wellington from Clark to Broadway and in the surrounding vicinity including alleys. BYC staff and volunteers are reminded in the agreement to pay particular attention to "drop-in" program participants as they enter and leave the neighborhood.

Still another provision calls for the 44th Ward alderman to mediate in any disputes between the community and the BYC that haven't been resolved within 30 days after the dispute arises.

One of the few changes from last year's Good Neighbor Agreement is that BYC representatives are no longer required to attend every SELVN board meeting unless there are specific issues on the agenda involving BYC, Rupert and Wetzel said.

Neighbors had complained that the BYC and Wellington Church needed to be more accountable for the behavior of the program's clients.

As apartment rents rise developers unveil new condo-tower plans taking advantage of the urban apartment boom and pocketing some hefty rent increases.

More than $14.3 billion in rent was paid in the Chicago area in 2014, an increase of 7.4% from a year earlier, according to a new analysis by Zillow. That translates into a $50 average monthly rent increase for Windy City renters, compared with a U.S. average boost of $26.

However, tenants in other hot rental apartment cities are paying more. In San Francisco, the average rent hike was $163 a month in 2014, and landlords there raked in a hefty $14.6 billion.

After years of battling higher real estate taxes and operating expenses, Chicago landlords finally are taking advantage of the urban apartment boom and pocketing some hefty rent increases.

Average rents in Denver jumped $86 a month, and Seattle renters paid an average of $71 more per month in 2014. Rents in Washington, D.C. and Miami-Fort Lauderdale rose an average of $59, and Boston tenants paid $58 more a month last year.

The Home Front

With the nation's homeownership rate slipping to 64.3% in the third quarter of 2014, from about 70% before the Great Recession, Zillow economists expect rents to rise faster than home values in 2015.

With rents skyrocketing, it's no wonder Chicago home and condominium developers are scurrying to lock in sites for new-construction units. Experts say the pendulum appears to be swinging back toward building for-sale units after a nearly seven-year hiatus.

Downtown, plans for new condo high-rises popped up nearly every week in December and January:

- Wanda Group, a Chinese developer, and Chicago-based Magellan Development Group want to build an 88-story condo/hotel tower on the south bank of the Chicago River in the Lake Shore East neighborhood. Dubbed Wanda Vista, the project calls for 390 condos, 250 hotel rooms and 9,000 square feet of retail space are planned in the $900 million project.

- Related Midwest is planning a 67-story tower adjoining a 1.7-acre park on the southwest corner of Grand Ave. and Peshtigo Ct. in Streeterville. The tower would include 100 condos and 250 apartments. Under the site is a 900-space parking garage.

In November, Related also took title to the 2.2-acre Chicago Spire site at 400 N. Lake Shore Dr., but plans have not been announced.

- Belgravia Group reportedly is in negotiations to secure the air space above an underground garage at 403 N. Wabash immediately north of Trump Tower in River North. Preliminary plans call for building a 16-story high-rise with 52 condo units.

Developers also are moving to acquire sites along the South Branch of the Chicago River in an emerging neighborhood now being called "River South."

- CMK Development, a Chicago-based residential developer, has acquired one vacant riverside parcel and is buying two others between Congress Pkwy. and Roosevelt Rd.

A pending acquisition is 5.1 acres at Franklin Point, along the river, just south of Harrison St. CMK has acquired a 1.8-acre site on the river just south of River City condos.

In 2014, CMK broke ground on a 144-unit building at 1345 S. Wabash, the biggest downtown condo project since the real estate crash.

The land-rich River South neighborhood also includes a vacant 62-acre riverfront parcel located south of Roosevelt Rd. Rezmar Development originally proposed 4,600 homes and condos on the site before the Great Recession, but that plan faded and the land was sold to General Mediterranean Holding, a Luxembourg-based conglomerate.

VA Hosp. gets Nooks; not books from Kiwanis Club

A delegation from the Lake View Kiwanis Club heard the patients at Hines VA Hospital needed some books, so they brought out some Nooks.

Leah Steele, the service group's secretary, said the idea came from Dorena Wenger, who used to work for Steele at the Sulzer Regional Library before moving on to the Jefferson Park Library, where Wenger retired as branch manager.

Hearing the facility was short of space as well as books, the Kiwanis bought a dozen "Nooks" - or e-tablets. Wenger called her former boss Steele and she suggested sending the Nooks instead of the books.

With 8GB of storage, a Nook can hold up to 6,000 books. Or it can hold a combination of 1,000 books, 25 full-color magazines, 10 newspapers, 50 kids' books, 500 songs and 150 photos.

They couldn't have picked a more appropriate place, said North Side resident Francine O'Connor, a nurse/social worker who runs Hines' 100-patient mental health unit.

After all, she said, the VA got into high tech early. "We were the first to start computerizing medical records," O'Connor said.

O'Connor and Steele said the Nooks will be filled with a variety of genres, after they find out what the patients prefer.

"A lot of our veterans are avid readers. Some are not. Just like you see anywhere else," said Robert Schuler, a former Marine who's now just one semester away from getting a masters degree in social work from the Univ. of Illinois/Chicago.

And like you'd find anywhere else, "there's a wide range of things that catch our veterans' interest. Sometimes it's fiction, sometimes sci-fi, mysteries, westerns, adventure. They really enjoy a wide range," he said.

And what are his own tastes?

"Since I'm still in school, my tastes in reading these days are what my teachers assign me," said Schuler with a smile.

Illinois Environmental Protection Agency

Public Notice
Renewal of the Federally Enforceable
State Operating Permit
Northwestern University in Chicago

Northwestern University has applied to the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency to renew the federally enforceable state operating permit (FESOP) regulating air emissions from its facility located at 410 East Huron Street in Chicago. The university operates a heat generating plant comprised of four natural gas fired boilers as well as a medical waste incinerator for their research and development department. The Illinois EPA has reviewed the application and made a preliminary determination that the application meets the standards for issuance and has prepared a draft permit for public review and comment.

The Illinois EPA is accepting written comments on the draft permit. Comments must be postmarked by midnight March 13, 2015. If sufficient interest is expressed in the draft permit, a hearing or other informational meeting may be held. Requests for information, comments, and questions should be directed to Brad Frost, Division of Air Pollution Control, Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, P.O. Box 19506, Springfield, Illinois, 62794-9506, phone 217/782-7027, TDD phone number 217/782-9143, brad.frost@illinois.gov.

The repositories for these documents and the application are at the Illinois EPA's offices at 9511 West Harrison in Des Plaines, 847/294-4000 and 1021 North Grand Avenue East, Springfield, 217/782-7027 (please call ahead to assure that someone will be available to assist you). The draft permit and project summary may also be available at HYPERLINK "http://www.epa.gov/reg50air/permits/ilonline.html" "http://www.epa.gov/reg50air/permits/ilonline.html. Copies of the documents may also be obtained upon request to the contact listed above.

The 1990 amendments to the Clean Air Act require potentially major sources of air emissions to obtain federally enforceable operating permits. A FESOP permit allows a source that is potentially major to take operational limits in the permit so that it is a non-major source. The permit will contain federally enforceable limitations that restrict the facility's emissions to non-major levels. The permit will be enforceable by the USEPA, as well as the Illinois EPA.

Council defers mayor’s affordable housing plan; it would benefit fund with multi-million dollar balance

While Mayor Rahm Emanuel proposes higher fees for apartment developers in the name of affordable housing, it appears the city hasn’t spent $23 million it has already collected from developers for that exact purpose.

Developers have paid about $32 million in “affordability fees” to the city’s affordable housing opportunity fund in 11 years, and the fund has spent about $9 million.

Developers also have paid about $21 million to a separate fund that subsidizes rental housing for persons of low and moderate incomes.

A proposed ordinance introduced by Mayor Emanuel in December would increase fees on developers and require for the first time that they include affordable units in new projects.

The measure passed a few committees last month and advanced to the city council on Jan. 21, when the council deferred action with some members expressing concern the increased fees would stifle development.

Currently, a developer must meet affordability standards in one of every 10 units or buy its way out of the requirement at $100,000 per unit. To the disappointment of affordable housing advocates, developers generally prefer to pay the buyout fee particularly here on the North Side.

Calls for reform rang out after developers of 690 new apartments at Block 37 on State St. paid $6.9 million rather than include 69 affordable units. Block 37 is an area downtown bounded by State, Dearborn, Washington and Randolph.

The mayor responded with his proposal to require developers to make one of every 40 units affordable before they could buy out of the requirement. On Block 37, for example, that rule would have required the developer to include 17 affordable units.

Under the mayor’s plan that appears to be stalled for now as the council has not scheduled action on it, the buyout fee would also increase from $100,000 to $125,000.

The fee would jump to $175,000 for Downtown projects, and $225,000 under certain conditions. In low income areas, the fee would drop to $75,000.

The city, however, appears to seldom spend the proceeds of the fees, and may not really need them, as it sustains an affordability program that rolled right along from 2009 to 2011, even though market rate activity stopped and developers paid no fees.

According to Chicago Rehab Network, which tracks housing programs, the city developed more than $1 billion in affordable projects from 2009 to 2012.

The network reported that those projects provided 3,564 affordable units and 273 market rate units, at a cost of about $270,000 per unit.

Currently, a developer must meet affordability standards in one of every 10 units or buy its way out of the requirement at $100,000 per unit. To the disappointment of affordable housing advocates, developers generally prefer to pay the buyout fee particularly here on the North Side.

City records show that some projects cost more than $400,000 per unit, enough for luxury apartments or single family homes on the open market.

Cost estimation website Building-Cost.net shows that a frame home of average standard quality, with 2,500 square feet, plus basement and garage, would cost $333,188 in Chicago.

Most of the city’s projects depend on equity that developers of low income housing invest in exchange for credits that Congress allows against income taxes.

The city can also arrange tax increment financing, grants, easy loans, housing credits under Illinois law, historic tax credits, and more.

Many projects serve specific groups like veterans, homeless adults, and mothers with disabilities and serious medical conditions.

In 2012, the city raised about $12 million for an artist colony of 32 units.

Sometimes the city combines residential and commercial development.

In 2012, the city raised $34 million for 96 units next to a new Wal-Mart. In 2013, the city raised $110 million for housing and $20 million for commercial space at Rosenwald Courts at 46th St. and Michigan Ave. in Bronzeville.

The city arranged for $58 million in tax-exempt bonds, $47 million in tax credit equity and $25 million in tax increments.

The project provided 229 units, with 120 for renters below 60% of area median income, 105 for renters below 50% and 14 at market rate. The apartments cost $460,955 per unit.

Last year, the city set up about $14.4 million in tax credit equity, a nearly $5.135 million grant from Housing and Urban Development [HUD], a $2.8 million city loan, a $900,000 private loan, $500,000 in state grants and $500,000 from the Federal Home Loan Bank for Woodlawn Park senior housing on S. Cottage Grove.

The project provided 26 units for renters below 50% of median income and 39 for those below 60%. It cost about $24.27 million at $373,351 per unit.

For Park Side of Old Town, on the former Cabrini Green site, the city assisted with a $12 million grant from Chicago Housing Authority [CHA], $12 million in tax credit equity, $10 million in tax increments and a loan of $1.9 million.

The project provided three units for renters below 30%, four for those below 40%, nine for those below 50%, and 11 for those below 60%.

It also provided 36 units to replace CHA units, and 43 at market rate. It cost $40.95 million, at $386,335 per unit.

For Kennedy Jordan Manor, on W. 118th St., the city arranged for about $12.21 million in tax credit equity, a $4.5 million loan, $1.5 million in tax increments and an economic opportunity grant of $158,015.

The senior housing project provided three units for renters below 30%, 39 for those below 50%, 21 for those below 60%, and five at market rate. It cost $18.37 million at $262,434 per unit.

For St. Edmund’s Tower, on S. Michigan Ave. in Washington Park, the city arranged for a $5.52 million grant from HUD, $780,881 in other grants and $76,500 in state housing tax credits.

The city helped out by selling the land for a dollar. This senior housing project provided 34 units for renters below 50% and cost nearly $6.58 million at $193,444 per unit.

For the Cicero and George Elderly Apartments in the city’s Belmont-Cragin neighborhood, the city set up $11.84 million in tax credit equity, a $4.93 million loan, $4 million in tax increments and $815,100 in grants.

The project provided eight units for renters below 30%, 11 for those below 40%, 28 for those below 50%, 14 for those below 60%, eight for those below 80%, and one for a resident janitor. It cost $21.6 million at $308,509 per unit.

For Milwaukee Ave. Apartments in Avondale, the city provided slightly more than $7 million in tax credit equity, nearly $1.44 million in state grants and $1 million in tax increments.

The project provided 11 units for renters below 30% and 21 for those below 60%. It cost about $9.71 million at $303,422 per unit.

For housing project put up on the site of the former Strand Hotel on S. Cottage Grove in Woodlawn, the city arranged for $12.4 million in tax credit equity, a nearly $4.71 million loan, $3.37 million in historic tax credits, $2 million in tax increments, $293,750 in state housing tax credits and $138,790 from other sources.

The project provided 10 units for renters below 50%, 43 for those below 60%, nine at market rate, and one for a resident manager. It cost almost $22.92 million at $363,807 per unit.

For Cornerstone Apartments, on E. 50th Place, the city provided assistance with about $9.55 million in tax credit equity, $1.61 million in state housing tax credits, $2 million in tax increments, a $1.25 million loan, and $995,705 from other sources.

The project provided 12 units for renters below 50% of median income, 40 for renters below 60%, and seven for renters below 80%. It cost $15.51 million at $262,841 per unit.

In all the activity last year, totaling about $170 million, less than two percent of the money came from the fund of developer fees.

The fund supplied $506,394 for Woodlawn Park and $2.1 million for Cornerstone.

The Anti-Valentine’s cookies

The bakery makes between 150 and 300 cookies per week leading up to the big day, and nearly 500 cookies during Valentine’s week itself.

Owner Peter Rios arranges a tray of Anti-Valentine’s Day cookies.

Baker pushes the heart-shaped envelope with racy messages

Whether you’re a lover scorned or just looking for a laugh, Alliance Bakery, 1763 W. Division, in Wicker Park has the antidote to excessive amounts of Hallmark-induced Love Potion No. 9.

Eight years ago owner Peter Rios and his decorators were tired of making the traditional Valentine’s Day cookies. “We were just sick of the whole idea, of the overexposure of Valentine’s Day,” Rios said, “so we decided to have some fun with it.”

The team starts brainstorming in January, and this year came up with over 40 ideas. They selected between 15 and 20 to actually use (the rest were deemed too explicit). However, Rios said that each year they push the envelope a bit farther. The selection ranges from “I want my CDs back” to “Your brother was better,” and everything in between.

“We started out fairly tame. We didn’t want to offend anyone. But each year the sayings got a little racier,” he said. They take care to keep the PG-13 and R-rated slogans on higher shelves and often display them later in the day. “We do have families and kids that come in here, so we usually put those cookies out after 5 p.m.”

Dana Spector browsed the cookies as she ordered her son’s fifth birthday cake. “These are really funny, actually!” she said, laughing. She said she would definitely consider buying one to give to her husband, or maybe one of her friends.

Julia Brennan, 24, works behind the counter. She said that she often sees couples buying them for one another, as well as a lot of single girlfriends. Her personal favorites are “I faked it” and “I still watch your Netflix.”

The cookies aren’t what you might expect from an award-winning pastry chef whose resumé includes the Fairmont Chicago and Parisian bakery Ladurée, but Rios has a healthy sense of humor. The bakery also has taken on more controversial topics with their cookies in the past, from Rod Blagojevich to Je Suis Charlie.

Initially Rios was concerned that neighborhood residents might be offended by the anti-Valentine’s Day sentiment, but he said it has never been an issue. “We haven’t encountered anything truly mean-spirited,” he said. “They’re all in good fun. We haven’t come across anyone who really hates Valentine’s Day.”

While the bakery is known for its sophisticated sweets, Rios said they keep it simple for the iced cookies. “We go with a butter shortbread cookie, because they are a little bit more firm and they hold the icing together,” he said.

That doesn’t mean the decorations aren’t ornate. Jess Mercardo, the resident cookie decorator, said the idea is to do fancy scrollwork and stick to the conversation candy heart style when it comes to colors. “They’re pretty cookies, but the words aren’t always so beautiful,” she said.

You can still find iced cookies with traditional sayings in house, as well as desserts like chocolate shortbread with pink icing and heart-shaped cakes, but Rios said

Police Beat

West Ridge woman robbed of tooth money in her apartment

A West Ridge woman allegedly was robbed Feb. 3 by two men armed with knives in the stairwell of her apartment on the 2000 block of W. Farwell Ave.

Officers responded about 5 p.m. to calls of a robbery in progress within the building and found the 54-year-old victim inside. She claimed two men had cornered her and used knives to cut the straps off her purse before taking $550 cash, police said.

One of the men had cursed at her and threatened to “cut her up” if she didn’t allow them to take the money, said police. The woman displayed the purse when officers arrived and said the money had been set aside for having a tooth fixed at the dentist.

Three arrested in Lincoln Square robbery

Three men were arrested at a Lincoln Square gas station Tuesday and charged with aggravated robbery.

Police found a loaded .25 caliber handgun inside the offenders’ vehicle during a search in the parking lot of Shell gas station at 6000 N. Western Ave., police said.

The offenders had manhandled and robbed a 35-year-old just after midnight on the 5300 block of N. Paulina St., according to police. A witness to the robbery told officers at the scene he had been parking his vehicle when he saw the men approach the victim aggressively from across the street.

After parking his vehicle the witness got out and saw the victim on the ground with the three men digging through his pockets before they jumped into another vehicle and fled. The witness called 911 and reported the incident to police.

The victim told police one of the men had threatened to shoot him before emptying his messenger bag and pockets of a phone, wallet and cash.

Officers located the vehicle at the Shell station based on the description and blocked it from leaving the lot. When the police cruiser had entered the driveway the vehicle had attempted to flee, according to the report.

The victim’s credit cards and cell-phone were recovered inside the vehicle. His messenger bag was found dumped in a garbage can. The victim identified the men at the scene as the same group that had robbed him minutes earlier, police said.

The victim was taken to Swedish Covenant Hospital for treatment to minor injuries.

Love lost on Halsted St.

Police responded to a 911 call from the Center On Halsted [COH], 3656 N. Halsted St., on January 22 after receiving multiple reports of a woman “pulling on a male’s privates” outside a third-floor basketball game there.

Police arrested Tatiana Love, 19, for allegedly biting and scratching a man who broke up with her earlier in the day. When a COH security guard intervened, Love allegedly punched him in the face and fled the building. She was apprehended nearby Waveland Ave.

Love, who lists The Crib youth shelter as her home address, is charged with one count each of domestic battery and battery.

Delivery driver robbed

A Sam’s Chicken and Ribs delivery driver said he was robbed at gunpoint Jan. 31 on the border between West Ridge and East Rogers Park.

The driver, 45, had been making a delivery on the 7000 block of N. Ridge Blvd. about 3 a.m. when he was hit, said police. Two men had ambushed him from behind while he waited outside the entryway. One man had put a gun to the back of the driver’s head and announced he was being robbed, police said.

The offenders took $33 worth of food, an iPhone 4 and $120 cash, according to the report. The driver said the men fled into a nearby building. No arrests were made that night.

A Rogers Park woman who attempted to buy a Pomeranian from a seller with a St. Paul, MN, area code claimed her money was accepted but the dog never was sent.

The 23-year-old victim made a report Jan. 28 stating she had wired $310 for the dog to a man calling himself “Dominique Tyner.” According to her statement, $200 was for

When she had not received the dog after a week she contacted the seller, who allegedly said the new shipping price would be $700 but would not give a reason for the up-charge. The woman said she would not pay it and the seller said he would refund her original payment, according to the report.

But the money was not refunded and the seller has stopped answering phone calls and responding to emails, the woman claimed. Police were given the name and contact information for the purported seller.

Police arrest gang member for possession of crack/cocaine

Officers arrested a documented Gangster Disciple for possession of crack/cocaine after a brief foot chase Jan. 31 near the Morse station on the CTA Red Line.

The 18-year-old offender had been arrested previously for drug possession and was being electronically monitored by the Cook County Dept. of Corrections at the time of this arrest, police said. He was charged with misdemeanor narcotics possession.

Officers had spotted the offender about 3 p.m. standing with a small group on the 1400 block of W. Morse Ave. He was seen making hand-to-hand transactions with multiple subjects, according to the report.

When approached for an interview an officer spotted a small plastic baggy tucked under the offender’s tongue. After being asked to remove the bag from his mouth the offender fled west down a crowded sidewalk and knocked several pedestrians out of the way, according to the report.

The offender cut onto Morse Ave. and forced a vehicle to slam on its brakes to avoid hitting both himself and the pursuing officers before being taken into custody a short distance away. Officers found an additional half-gram of cocaine in his back left pocket, according to the report.

Pedestrian pulled knife on motorist in West Ridge before running

A man allegedly pulled a knife on a driver Jan. 28 in West Ridge after the driver did not see him using the crosswalk at N. Richmond Ave. and Albion.

The driver, 44, told police that about 9:30 p.m. he had stopped his vehicle at the intersection and then began rolling when a man suddenly slammed his hands onto the man’s hood. The vehicle had just started rolling when the man hammered on the hood, according to the report.

The only contact with the vehicle had been initiated by the pedestrian, who was not injured in the incident.

The unidentified offender had allegedly stopped and shouted, “Don’t you know how to drive?”

The victim told officers he had rolled down his window and said, “Is there a problem?”

The offender allegedly responded, “No, but we can make it a problem,” and pulled a knife from his jacket, according to the report.

But instead of fighting the offender ran with the men in the car following him. They tracked him to the 6400 block of N. Washtenaw Ave. before he evaded them by ducking between buildings, police said. Officers toured the area seeking the offender but did not make any arrests.

Man said he was beaten after refusing to sell drugs

An Uptown man said he was beaten and robbed Jan. 28 by a drug dealer who attempted to strongarm him into selling drugs inside his building.

Officers had responded to a robbery call about 4:35 p.m. on the 1000 block of W. Argyle St. and found the victim standing with a swollen face and without a jacket on. The victim alleged that the offender had punched him repeatedly in the face and stolen his jacket and phone after he had refused to sell drugs for him, according to the report.

The victim was treated at nearby Weiss Hospital, 4646 N. Marine Dr., for minor injuries and was released the same day. Officers patrolled the area following the incident but did not make any arrests.

Police pull man using heroin from traffic

A shoeless man pulled from traffic on the 6400 block of N. Western Ave. was charged with reckless conduct and two narcotics charges after officers found heroin and a syringe in his clothing.

The offender, 22, told the officers that he was a regular heroin user, according to the report. The police department said he has a prior conviction on his record for possession of the drug.

A regular beat patrol had spotted the man about 7:20 p.m. as he attempted to cross four lanes of traffic on Western Ave. Several cars had to slam on their brakes or swerve to avoid hitting him, said police.

Police arrest crazy man with knife, find out he was out on parole

A 24-year-old man was arrested Jan. 28 for allegedly assaulting his neighbor with a knife in West Ridge.

The offender was on parole with the Illinois Dept. of Corrections for a prior conviction, police said, but did not specify the case.

Officers had responded about 11:55 p.m. to reports of a person with a knife and found the offender being held down by numerous people on the 6400 block of N. Rockwell St.

Several minutes before they arrived, the offender had approached the victim carrying an eight-inch kitchen knife and said, “I will kill you because you talk too much,” according to the report.

The victim had said he had no problem with the offender but picked up a car snow-brush to defend himself. When the offender attacked the victim had punched him in the eye and fought off the assault until the rest of the group helped him subdue the offender.

Officers said the offender was highly intoxicated and had both a black eye and multiple cuts to his hand. He was taken to the 24th District for processing and his parole supervisor was informed of the incident.

Teen claims Lane Tech security guard head-butted him following school event

An 18-year-old is suing the Chicago Board of Education [CBE] over claims a security guard headbutted him after a high school event.

According to the suit filed Jan. 15 in the Cook County Circuit Court, Ivan Rios attended an event on Oct. 16, 2014, at Lane Technical High School, 2501 W. Addison St.

When he and a few friends attempted to enter the school parking lot to get to their vehicle, Rios alleges several school security guards and police officers prevented them access and one of the security guards rushed at him without provocation and headbutted him in the face, causing him to sustain concussive-like symptoms.

The security guard was acting as an agent of the CBE and, as such, Rios contends the defendant is responsible for the guard’s actions.

Minibar nighclub hit with suit over alleged assault

A man is suing a nightclub in Boystown over claims he was assaulted by an employee.

Alexander Cikanek filed suit Jan. 20 in Cook County Circuit Court against Mini Bar Inc., 3341 N. Halsted St., doing business under the names Minibar, Mini Bar Meat, mEat Restaurant, and Alex Rodriguez.

This investigation included court ordered wiretaps and targeted North Side Black P-Stones’ leaders Craig Johnson aka “CHOP” and Henry Wiggins aka “MIX”. Johnson and Wiggins operated a $2.5 million drug trafficking organization with ties to multiple districts as well as Evanston and Skokie.

This operation crossed traditional gang alliances and supplied members from other gangs operating on the North Side of the city. The Cook County State’s Attorney’s Office approved arrest warrants which included charges of Calculated Criminal Drug Conspiracy carrying sentences of up to 30 years.

Twenty one subjects were charged as a result of this operation. Also charged with Calculated Criminal Drug Conspiracy was Melvin Foote, an associate of Jeff Forte and an original ranking member of the Black P-Stones. Several shooting incidents were thwarted as a result of intelligence gleaned during the course of this investigation.

This operation resulted in eight vehicle seizures, as well as the seizure of $58,000 in cash, 377 grams of crack cocaine. A 9mm handgun was recovered during a search warrant. Henry Wiggins was charged with Possession of a Defaced Firearm in addition to Calculated Criminal Drug Conspiracy.

According to the complaint, Cikanek was at Minibar nightclub on Jan. 27 2013, when he was approached by Rodriguez, who he claims placed him in immediate fear and apprehension by physically striking him.

The suit states the Mini Bar defendants failed to intervene in the matter, which resulted in the assault. Cikanek also alleges they hired personnel it knew or should have known possessed violent propensities and failed to properly screen prospective applicants.

Additional officers scrambled to the store, arriving just in time to apprehend the offender.

Police found credit cards belonging to another apparent victim in the arrestee’s possession during a search. Cops were not immediately successful in reaching the second victim, who lives in Streeterville.

Thieves try to swipe ATM from Lakeview high rise

Chicago police are investigating the attempted theft of an entire ATM from a Lakeview high-rise Sunday night.

Officers were called to the Park Place Tower, 655 Irving Park Rd., around 6:30 a.m. Monday after someone stumbled across the machine, abandoned in a parking garage stairwell.

Police say the machine was heavily damaged in the failed heist and, while there were a substantial number of pry marks, it did not appear that the bandits succeeded in freeing any of the cash.

Detectives are trying to determine if the theft attempt is connected to a series of burglaries across the North Side in which safes have been stolen from businesses, including Aldi grocery stores.

The Friendly Bureau of Investigation?

A smiling spy catcher's secrets for success

BY JIM MATUSIK

Jack Schafer's warm, inviting smile and his gregarious nature belie the fact that he has used these charms to put spy's and criminal's behind bars forever. He draws you into a friendly comfort zone and casually begins to discover everything about you.

Schafer was Special Agent for the FBI's National Security Division's Behavioral Analysis Program for 20 years. "My ability to quickly read people gave me a unique understanding of human nature and shared human behavior," he says.

His work ranged from convincing people to spy on their own country to identifying perpetrators and convincing them to confess. From these experiences he developed incredibly powerful methods for getting people to trust him, and often without saying a word. These methods of Influence and Attraction are the subject of his new book "The Like Switch."

Schafer was in town last Thursday talking about the book and other FBI matters at the DePaul Univ. Bookstore, 1 E. Jackson Blvd.

Schafer developed dynamic strategies for profiling terrorists and detecting deception. Now a law enforcement and criminal justice professor, he has adapted his tactics to day-to-day life, helping readers develop successful relationships at home, at work, or anywhere else that personal interactions take place. From sales calls to dating, Schafer cracks the code on making great first impressions, building lasting relationships, and understanding others' behavior to learn what they really think and how they feel.

"My profession boiled down to getting people to like me," he says, "and later on I realized in a broader sense that the techniques I used on spies could be used whenever a person wants to win anyone over in virtually any personal interaction."

After retiring from the FBI Schafer went on to get a doctorate in Psychology and began to flesh out his strategies for the book.

"Social media has effectively separated many people from face to face interaction and dealing with people, especially strangers, can be a challenging and even scary experience."

As an example he relates a classroom experience where he had two people sit closely facing each other and told them to talk to each other for five minutes. "What do we talk about," they asked?

"Anything that you want," he replied. They just stared at each other in mute silence. But when he had them turn their chairs around and sit back to back so that they couldn't see each other, they chattered like magpies.

To overcome fearful social hurdles like this, Schafer has constructed a "Friendship Formula" that consists of four elements: proximity, frequency, duration, and intensity.

People who share the same physical space are more likely to become attracted to each other even without speaking. This is proximity. And the increased frequency of these casual sightings is the next step. "But be careful not to get too close too soon, or your subject may go shields up," he says.

With duration you patiently spend time in the same space with an individual without speaking and this adds an element of curiosity. After enough time has passed you are ready for the intensity, the verbal introduction. But now its like you already know each other and the barriers are down.

This strategy has been used to successfully recruit spies, and there is no reason why it shouldn't work at the "club."

Schafer's concept of "The Friend-Foe Continuum," is all about the important initial meeting between two people.

Each day we may walk past hundreds of people without paying the least bit of attention to most of them, but then someone will pique our interest even though we may not understand why. "They have been picked up by your brain's territory scan," says Schafer.

"Our senses are constantly sending messages to our brain to determine whether a stranger can be ignored, is worthy to approach, or is someone to be avoided.

This process is hardwired into our brain and it is what determines our friend or a response."

Schafer grew up on the South Side of Chicago and related a story about how his first job in law enforcement was being a policeman in Hinsdale. Coming from the city he had what he describes as "The Urban Scowl" which is a facial defense mechanism that basically says "don't screw with me."

As he was working the job he started getting complaints at the department from residents who said that he was very unfriendly and aggressive. "Did he do or say anything wrong," the department asked?

"No, but there was just something about him that made me feel uncomfortable..." was the general response.

The "scowl" which is an automatic feature for most city dwellers was perceived as a threat to the kinder, gentler, richer, suburban set.

There are three essential non-verbal friend signals that you can send out if you want to meet someone and most of us use them without even realizing it. They are the "eyebrow flash," the "head tilt," and the "real smile."

The eyebrow flash is described as a quick up and down movement of the eyebrows that lasts for about one sixth of a second and occurs with brief eye contact to another.

The head tilt is about seeming less dominant and exposes one of the carotid arteries which are the major blood suppliers to the brain. Severing either will cause death within a few minutes. This "tilt" has been a primordial response in the animal kingdom as a friend signal from a submissive to a dominant. It says "I'm a nice animal, please don't eat me." And with humans, "I am a friendly guy, won't you take me home?"

The third and most important signal is the true smile, and yes, science has proven that they can detect the impostor.

"Smiles are attractive, likable, and they release endorphins which gives us a good feeling," says Schafer.

"When we smile at other people it is very difficult for them not to smile back, and the return smile causes the target of your smile to feel good about themselves. That's a lot of mileage for a one second facial expression, just make sure that it is the real one."

Studies show that the real smile is for people that we want to make contact with, or who we already know and like.

Conversely, the fake is the salesman smile used when we are forced by social obligations or job requirements to appear friendly.

When he was with the FBI, Schafer worked on the case of a suspected child molester. They wanted to arrest the guy but lacked probable cause. Schafer decided to interview him to seek his consent to examine his computer. He invited the suspect to the office, but had him pick the time so that it seemed voluntary. He met the suspect at the door with a "manufactured" eyebrow flash, a tilted head, and a "simulated" real smile (since he really felt loathing for the man).

He warmly shook the suspect's hand and offered him a cup of coffee to tap into the psychological principal of reciprocity, which assumes that when people get things, they tend to give back.

"My profession boiled down to getting people to like me," he says, "and later on I realized in a broader sense that the techniques I used on spies could be used whenever a person wants to win anyone over in virtually any personal interaction."

When he handed the suspect the coffee he stated, "How could you treat me with such respect after what I did?"

This small admission even before the interview had begun showed Schafer that he had was on the right track. Using mimicked friend signals to give the suspect the illusion that he was not a threat, but a person that he could trust with a secret, he divulged information that would put him in jail for the rest of his life.

"We emulate what people do when they like each other," says Schafer. "We lift up the hood and start tinkering. We are down there getting a wrench on the stuff of human behavior."

"They go to jail for life and they still like me, he says, "that's the power of rapport!"

An artsy Chicago solution provides disabled artists a place for employment

BY ROBERT KINGETT

One of the biggest ongoing advocacy efforts by anyone in the disability community is employment awareness. Activists, rehab agencies, and even bloggers and vloggers continuously promote the message that disabled people are just as competent, sometimes better, workers than their non disabled colleagues.

Even today some employers would rather hire people without disabilities, but a new start-up in Chicago is tackling this problem with art and the power of the Internet.

The North Side start-up called We Are Lions is empowering the disabled and changing some perceptions of the disabled by combining crowd-sourcing with work opportunities such as packaging the art sold on their website. They work with non-profits and artists with disabilities, using their art to promote equality, awareness, and break the stigmas often associated with disability.

"It is community support that allows us to achieve large scale impact for the individuals we serve," said Kevin McMahon, co-founder of the fundraising platform. "We Are Lions believes in and is inspired by the incredible talent, creativity and individuality of the special needs community. We see their historic marginalization as one of the most important issues of our day and we believe that waiting for policy makers and foundations to enact change is simply not enough. We've taken matters into our own hands."

People with disabilities manufacture, package, and ship orders and 50% of your purchase goes to the artists and non-profits that create the art. Art can be submitted on the website at www.wearelions.org/

"The determining factor was a combination of a couple things. Foremost, what we thought was fair, and would be able to provide a worthwhile return for our artists and non-profits. Second, we needed it to be sustainable so that We Are Lions could grow and continue to do its best to serve this community. [The 50/50 split] seemed like the natural choice to show that we're not trying to profit any more than the people who's art is being supported." McMahon said.

We Are Lions was born in 2010 out of the Founder and CEO David Schwartz's desire to combine his entrepreneurial love of clothing, with something more meaningful.

As someone with family members affected by disability and mental illness, McMahon witnessed first hand the disparities and lack of support between the disabled and non-disabled community. And after being surrounded by artwork created by the inspiring individuals he began to come into contact with, an idea was born.

Schwartz saw the beauty and potential of this artwork as something people might like to wear. So—after almost two years of developing the infrastructure to do so—the first batch of official We Are Lions clothing was introduced in late 2011.

There are a lot of other sites that allow disabled people to sign up and receive donations via crowdfunding means, such as Kickstarter and Patreon, but the artists who sign up there are competing against other contributors to try to generate incentives to donate to someone, rather than the other person. At We Are Lions, a lot of partnership are done to ensure sold work.

"We engage in a large variety of outreach for our partnering organizations," said Schwartz. "We ask that they co-promote the campaigns with us and we both do our best to mobilize the local community. We do pop-up shops to create buzz, but we also rely a lot on word of mouth."

Aside from partnerships, the company also hosts many expos to showcase the work and to generate buzz.

"Most often our expos are based around one of our partnerships. We'll create a collaborative event with one of the non-profits we work with, and use both of our networks to get as many people out as possible," said Schwartz. "We'll come stocked with official We Are Lions gear and original art from the artists that come from a particular non-profit. In fact, over the next few months we'll be doing a monthly event at the Randolph St. Market with Project Onward who are based in Bridgeport."

The company has broader horizons, however, not just in Chicago.

"We work with non-profits all over the US and even a couple in Israel and India," said McMahon "What separates We Are Lions from those other crowdfunding platforms is the scope of focus, and the way in which we raise money. We focus exclusively on the disabled community, we see their marginalization as one of the most important civil rights issues of our day. Specifically by showcasing these talents through the creation of wearable art, we incorporate the products into the day to day lives of our supporters. This means it's not just a donation, it's recognition, it's empowerment, it says that these individuals are capable of so much more, it's about opportunities. We want to be a network of support for individuals with disabilities all over the world, but Chicago will always be our home."

We Are Lions proves that, with the help of the community and the tools and platform to allow expression, employment opportunities are as far and wide as the Internet with minimal effort and creative flare. this artistic endeavor showcases, not only how simple it is to create employment opportunities for the disabled community, but that a simple act of expression can open up a world of entrepreneurial doors as well.

Don't eat the white snow either

What's to blame for dirty snow?

BY HANNAH HICKEY

Sometimes snow is not as white as it looks. A new large-scale survey shows that agricultural practices, not just smokestacks and tailpipes in cities like Chicago, may have a big impact on its purity. Researchers made an epic 10,000 mile trek across North American snow fields to see if tiny, dark particles of pollution that mix with reflective flakes might be just enough to speed melt rates and influence climate. For the study, researchers were particularly interested in the Bakken oil fields of northwest North Dakota and found that snow away from cities is similar to Arctic snow in many places. They also found more pollution in the U.S.' Great Plains.

“With all this oil exploration, diesel trucks, and new oil wells, people wondered: is there a huge amount of air pollution making the snowpack darker?” asks lead author Sarah Doherty, a research scientist at the Joint Institute for the Study of the Atmosphere and Ocean at Univ. of Washington. Researchers discovered that these activities do appear to be adding extra soot to the snow, but perhaps just as important is the dirt. Disturbance from construction sites, oil platforms, new housing and increased truck traffic on roads means dirtier snow in cities as well as wilderness areas. But even away from the oil fields, soil is disturbed by agriculture. Chicago may be getting soil in it's snow from the rural corn and soybean fields of Illinois and Iowa. “Our work suggests that land use and farming practices might matter as much as diesel emissions,” Doherty says. Doherty and colleagues spent the winter of 2013 driving across northwestern U.S. and some Canadian provinces to get a firsthand look at the continent's snow.

Disturbance from construction sites, oil platforms, new housing and increased truck traffic on roads means dirtier snow.

The project involved collecting hundreds of snow samples from 67 sites away from any cities or major roads. The trip took the researchers from Seattle to North Dakota, across the Midwest and north to Churchill, Manitoba. Every few days they melted and filtered the snow in their motel rooms, then back at the lab they shone light through a filter to see how much light was blocked, and did chemical analyses to determine what particles were responsible. Their main focus was black carbon, a very light-absorbing particle emitted by burning diesel, coal or wood. Some countries have regulated black carbon because of its effects on air quality and human health, but more recently climate scientists also have become interested because the tiny particles darken the snow and hasten melting. So who has the cleanest snow? The cleanest samples they collected were from northern Canada, with overall levels of black carbon, or soot, similar to that of Arctic snowpack. The Pacific Northwest and Rocky Mountain states had levels slightly higher. The Great Plains readings were more variable and sometimes two to three or more times higher than in other parts of the country, typically 15 to 70 nanograms of soot per gram of snow. Doherty also worked with Chinese collaborators in 2010 surveys of snow in northern China, all using the same techniques so the combined results can provide a first-ever global map of snow cleanliness. Results from China showed rates of pollution tens to hundreds of times greater than in North America, with the highest rate in northeast China of 1,220 nanograms of soot per gram of snow, likely because of industrial activity and other emissions in the Beijing area. But dirt and desert dust also were prevalent in central North China snow. “For a lot of the central U.S. and north China Great Plains the snow is not very deep. In the US, almost the whole area is agricultural fields and in China there is a lot of animal grazing,” Doherty says. “When the wind blows the dirt gets lofted, maybe just 10 feet off the ground, and gets mixed in with the snow.” North Dakota locals refer to the mixture as “snirt.” The new paper, published in the journal Science, documents how much light is blocked, and at which wavelengths, by filtered snow samples. A chemical analysis of the North American samples pinpoint exactly which compounds are contained in the snow. “A lot of the focus in climate models has been on black carbon, because it's a pollutant and it's very dark,” Doherty says. “But the snow is darkened by other things as well, like organics, and also by dust and soil that can get in the snowpack.” In fact, they found that in the Great Plains states up to half of light absorption is due to organic matter, or “brown carbon” from burning fossil fuels and from soil that mixes in with falling snow. The deposits affect both global and local climates. Pollution on the Himalayan glaciers, for instance, is raising concerns that it will speed melt rates and harm water supplies. For U.S. farmers, changes in the snow's reflectivity could affect when the spring melt will occur and when meltwater will drain out. Whether the pollution the researchers found is enough to change snow melt timing will have to be answered by region-specific climate models, Doherty says. “But first the models have to do a more accurate job of representing the amount of dirt that's in the snowpack.”

British School hires principal

Founding headmaster to lead new campus in South Loop

The British School of Chicago [BSC], an international school for children ages 3-18, has appointed Mel Curtis as principal of its Lincoln Park campus, 814 W. Eastman St.

Founding BSC headmaster Mike Horton will lead the school’s new campus in the South Loop, which is opening in September.

Curtis brings more than 15 years of expertise in strategic educational leadership, with international experience at schools in her native England, as well as in France and the United Arab Emirates.

Prior to joining BSC, she led academic integration at Ecole des Roches, a private school in France, and has been the head teacher at primary and K-12 schools in the United Kingdom, Europe and the Middle East. Her track record includes expertise in quality assurance, increased student attainment, student-centered learning and curriculum development. She also is experienced in leading efforts to ensure teachers are proficient in enhancing the learning environment through the use of technology and the virtual world.

“I am truly inspired by the BSC’s emphasis on individualized and interactive learning to provide students the tools they need to achieve their academic goals,” Curtis said. “I am excited to work with such a talented team, which has created a successful educational environment and cultivated a true love of learning in students.”

Under Curtis’ leadership, schools have been deemed “outstanding” by external education and inspection authorities.

“Mel’s excellent strategic leadership skills and talent for creating innovative education programs will be a significant asset to the BSC,” Horton said. “Her philosophy that learning should be a unique experience to engender curiosity is on par with the British School’s personalized learning approach, which focuses on the individual learning style of each child.”

Under Horton’s leadership, the BSC has grown from 12 students to more than 800 since opening in 2001. All students will be able to take advantage of opportunities available at both campuses under the collaborative direction of Horton and Curtis.

hoods and Mariano’s will be a positive catalyst for our local businesses by bringing increased foot traffic to Broadway.”

The intersection of Broadway, Clark and Diversey has seen grocery options expanded greatly in the last few years with a new 18,000 square foot Trader Joe’s open on Diversey, a 34,000 square foot Walmart Grocery open on Broadway, and a 43,000 square foot Walgreens with food for sale at Broadway and Clark.

Scheduled to open in June 2016, this new high-end grocer will reactivate a long-vacant site with an environmentally sustainable design, stimulating new neighborhood investments. The “town square” format has a pedestrian-friendly design that includes a community park along Waterloo Court that will serve as a green space, Ald. Tunney said.

Also planned is a small “pocket park” behind the Mariano’s building.

The lot had been vacant since 2005 when a Father’s Day fire gutted the Dominick’s supermarket at that site.

The site sat vacant for a decade due to the poisonous mix of the 2008 real estate crash, the credit crisis, a poor economy and old fashioned Chicago political meddling.

The property had major legal problems to work through when city pension funds were used suspiciously as part of a loan to purchase the property by speculators. The project became a headache for former Mayor Richard M. Daley when his nephew, Robert Vaneko, and his business partner, Allison S. Davis invested $7.9 million in city pension funds in the project. The two ended up feuding with the developers and trying to find people to buy them out. The property was then foreclosed on and auctioned off.

Today Mariano’s supporters liked the idea of a large supermarket, which would have a ripple effect on other business in the area.

Opponents argued the Mariano’s building would be out-of-scale for the surrounding neighborhood.

Indeed with hundreds of cars and large trucks coming and going from the site every day this narrow stretch of Broadway will likely become one of the most congested commercial corridors on the North Side of the property is fully leased.

In a close vote last August, the South East Lake View Neighbors – the community organization representing that area – backed the Mariano’s proposal.

But Mariano’s will have a lot to live up to the expectations, Ald. Tunney told a Feb. 9 SELVN meeting at Second Unitarian Church, 656 W. Barry.

“The important thing is not only the quality of the merchandise, but the quality of the people working there. Dominick’s had very good people there. Well trained, familiar with the products. But I think this is going to be a win/win,” he said.

Northwestern and Illinois universities will play three games at Soldier Field in 2015, 2017 and 2019, the two schools announced Monday.

The move continues a trend of the two schools moving contests to Chicago’s historic professional stadiums. Illinois hosted Washington at Soldier Field in 2013, and, per Monday’s announcement, has agreed to add on three more home games at the location with the series against the Wildcats.

“We’re thrilled to now be playing eight of 12 regular-season games in 2015, and six of nine Big Ten Conference games in 2017 & 2019, in the Chicagoland area,” NU athletic department spokesman Paul Kennedy said. “Opportunities are rare to play a road game in a venue accessible from campus by public transportation. Particularly over a holiday weekend, this is incredible news for our student-athletes, coaches, families and fans going forward.”

NU has also dipped into the city’s pool of professional sports stadiums. In 2010, the Cats hosted Illinois at Wrigley Field. Three years later, NU and the Chicago Cubs entered into a multi-year partnership that would net the University several sporting events for a number of its varsity teams. The deal included five NU football games to be played at the stadium.

Since the beginning of the Wrigley agreement, the Wildcats have competed in multiple events at the historic stadium. In baseball, NU faced off against Michigan at Wrigley in 2013, and the Cats battled The Univ. of Southern California in lacrosse last April in the 101-year-old ballpark.

The 2015 contest between Illinois and NU was originally scheduled to be played at Memorial Stadium in Champaign.

dreaded double-catastrophe had struck the engineering crew at Soldier Field with warm ambient temperatures and the specter of an electrical failure. A rumor had it that one of the big compressors that sat outside the stadium had failed.

I confirmed it with a rink attendant while waiting for warmups to start for the second game between the BIG Ten’s Michigan State Spartans and Michigan Wolverines.

“It looks like a MASH unit out there during the breaks,” I said. “I saw a guy on the ice blasting a fire extinguisher after squirting water into those divots.”

“Oh yeah,” laughed the steward. “That’s just to get those spots to freeze instantly. The ice really is in good shape now. Remarkably good shape.”

He confirmed that a compressor did go down.

“That and an electrical failure. The ice was just sitting under the sun without anything underneath cooling it. It’s good now, amazingly good.”

After the morning skates had been cancelled there was trepidation the event might have been called off entirely. Making and keeping ice is no easy business. And without good ice there is no good hockey.

When the compressors failed the very cold-water and anti-freeze brine that is pumped—at a football stadium like Solider with great logistical difficulty—through a network of pipes that coils around beneath the ice like intestines, stopped flowing. The moment it did, the ice began to melt into the slurry I saw just 30 minutes before face off.

In the end things got right and two good games were played before two sparse crowds. Inter-sport, the marketing agency, and Coyote Logistics, the event’s primary sponsor, announced an attendance of 22,500 for the 60,000 seat stadium, but it was doubtful there were half that number for either game.

Miami defeated the Western Michigan Broncos 4-3 in the first game. It had been a blowout for more than two periods with Miami dominating the ice, but Western jammed home two goals within 37 seconds of each other about half way through the third, and then pulled their goalie with more than two minutes to play and tried for the desperation equalizer. The Redhawks held off the Broncos late blitz and skated out of Chicago with a win to keep them in third place in the National Collegiate Hockey Conference.

The Redhawks brought four

Chicago-area kids to Soldier for the game. One of them, Louie Belpedio of Skokie, tallied two assists in the second period. Belpedio, who is only a freshman, had his draft rights claimed in the third round of last year’s NHL Entry Draft by the Minnesota Wild.

In the night cap, which started at 8:40 p.m. after being scheduled for 7, Michigan got up a big lead on Michigan State and defended it, winning 4-1. The ambient air temperature had dipped into the lower 30s and made surface conditions better as the night wore on. The game, as it always does between those rival schools, got rough, with multiple players being hauled off to serve penalties.

In all there were 15 NHL draft picks between the teams, but 10 belonged to Michigan and behind them the Wolverines dominated the night to maintain their first place position in the BIG Ten conference race.

According to SELVN President Jan Sumrall, 45 people joined the SELVN a month before a December, 2013, membership meeting so they would be eligible to vote on the special use permit and Good Neighbor agreement when the time came.

During that meeting, tempers had heated to the point where Sumrall threatened to end the meeting after a fracas broke out right in front of her.

While the Good Neighbor Agreement helped, the drop-in program – which allows participants to get a free meal, hang out and make phone calls – was cancelled for the rest of that week after an incident last spring in which several boys got into a fight over a girl.

“We want the young people to see there are consequences when things like that happen,” Wetzel told the next SELVN meeting.
