Great weather jeopardized college hockey match at Soldier Field

On Saturday, with a college hockey double-header getting ready to face off at Soldier Field, it was 40 degrees and bright sunny most of the afternoon jeopardizing the first game between Western Michigan and Miami of Ohio which was delayed 100 minutes while the sun was allowed to dip behind a high-rise building and send shadows over the playing surface.

BY MARK SCHIPPER

For February, the sun seemed to beat down on Soldier Field like a desert scene. The black and green “Hockey City Classic” logo painted on a sub-layer of ice covered up with a white plastic tarp and the just resurfaced ice looked like a shallow soup from end-to-end.

“The sun goes toward anything with color,” said a wise old rink steward who had seen everything that can happen to ice under bad conditions. “You put a piece of electrical tape down on the white surface and pretty soon you’ll have a hole in the ice under the tape.”

In a town like Chicago in February the smart-money worry would be temperatures too frigid for players to play in and for fans to sit outside in. But on Saturday, with a college hockey double-header getting ready to face off, it was 40 degrees and bright sunny most of the afternoon.

The first game between Western Michigan and Miami of Ohio was delayed 100 minutes while the sun was allowed to dip behind a high-rise building to the south-west and send shadows to spread over the playing surface.

Normally, the ice would have been playable even in the unseasonably warm conditions. A dreaded double-catastrophe had struck the engineering crew at Soldier Field with warm ambient temperatures and the specter of an electrical failure. A rumor had it that one of the big compressors that sat outside the stadium had failed.

I confirmed it with a rink attendant while waiting for warmups to start for the second game between the BIG Ten’s Michigan State Spartans and Michigan Wolverines.

“It looks like a MASH unit out there during the breaks,” I said. “I saw a guy on the ice blasting a fire extinguisher after squirting water into those divots.”

“Oh yeah,” laughed the steward. “That’s just to get those spots to freeze instantly. The ice really is in good shape now. Remarkably good shape.”

He confirmed that a compressor did go down.

“That and an electrical failure. The ice was just sitting under the sun without anything underneath cooling it. It’s good now, amazingly good.”

After the morning skates had been cancelled there was trepidation the event might have been called off entirely. Making and keeping ice is no easy business. And without good ice there is no good hockey.

When the compressors failed the very cold-water and anti-freeze brine that is pumped—at a football stadium like Solider with great logistical difficulty—through a network of pipes that coils around beneath the ice like intestines, stopped flowing. The

The 106-year-old Trumbull School building will apparently be saved. The Waldorf School is one of the top contenders and the other proposal wants to sell part of the property to a theater and convert the rest of he building into apartments or condos.

Trumbull School neighbors vote for school first, theater second

Signature building will not be torn down

BY PATRICK BUTLER

An overwhelming majority of the 310 local residents who voted in a survey on the future of the former Lyman Trumbull elementary school building at 5200 N. Ashland supported plans submitted by the Chicago Waldorf School and the Chicago Development Corp./TimeLine Theater.

Eighty percent favored the Waldorf Plan while 55% liked the Timeline Theater proposal, according to Ald. Patrick O’Connor [40th]. But of the 170 respondents living within 10 blocks of the now-empty school, 77 backed Waldorf and 65 went for Timeline and 47 preferred residential units.

None of the other four proposals – mixed commercial/residential proposals by Svigos Development, Cedar Street and Hub@Trumbull, and a proposal from Windy City Productions – got a more than a 28% “acceptable” rating.

The vote came as no surprise to Waldorf School’s

Luke Goodwin who told DNAinfo’s Benjamin Woodard “We anticipated this. We heard it from the community since November as we’ve been going door to door. It was meant to be a school. It should be a school.”

Chicago Development’s Howard Weiner said including 47 condos or apartment units in his plans wold keep most of the site on the tax rolls. Weiner said he planned to sell the theater part of the Trumbull building to TimeLine, which now does most of its’ productions out of a church on Wellington just west of Broadway.

Ald. O’Connor said it’s also clear the 106-year-old candidate for landmark status will escape the wrecking ball. The Prairie School building was designed by architect Dwight Perkins, onetime chief architect for the Chicago Board of Education who designed 40 schools, including Lane Tech High School.

Ald. O’Connor’s office said that the city is drawing up an RFP (request for proposal) to Waldorf School and Chicago Development.

Council defers mayor’s affordable housing plan; it would benefit fund with multi-million dollar balance

While Mayor Rahm Emanuel proposes higher fees for apartment developers in the name of affordable housing, it appears the city hasn’t spent $23 million it has already collected from developers for that exact purpose.

Developers have paid about $32 million in “affordability fees” to the city’s affordable housing opportunity fund in 11 years, and the fund has spent about $9 million.

Developers also have paid about $21 million to a separate fund that subsidizes rental housing for persons of low and moderate incomes.

A proposed ordinance introduced by Mayor Emanuel in December would increase fees on developers and require for the first time that they include affordable units in new projects.

For Park Side of Old Town [above], on the former Cabrini Green site, the city assisted with a $12 million grant from Chicago Housing Authority, $12 million in tax credit equity, $10 million in tax increments and a loan of $1.9 million.

The measure passed a few committees last month and advanced to the city council on Jan. 21, when the council deferred action with some members expressing concern the increased fees would stifle development.

Currently, a developer must meet affordability standards in one of every 10 units or buy its way

VA Hosp. gets Nooks; not books from Kiwanis Club

A delegation from the Lake View Kiwanis Club heard the patients at Hines VA Hospital needed some books, so they brought out some Nooks.

Leah Steele, the service group’s secretary, said the idea came from Dorena Wenger, who used to work for Steele at the Sulzer Regional Library before moving on to the Jefferson Park Library, where Wenger retired as branch manager.

Hearing the facility was short of space as well as books, the Kiwanis bought a dozen “Nooks” - or e-tablets. Wenger called her former boss Steele and she suggested sending the Nooks instead of the books.

With 8GB of storage, a Nook can hold up to 6,000 books. Or it can hold a combination of 1,000 books, 25 full-color magazines, 10 newspapers, 50 kids’ books, 500 songs and 150 photos.

They couldn’t have picked a more appropriate place, said North Side resident Francine O’Connor, a nurse/social worker who runs Hines’ 100-patient mental health unit.

After all, she said, the VA got into high tech early. “We were the first to start computerizing medical records,” O’Connor said.

O’Connor and Steele said the Nooks will be filled with a variety of genres, after they find out what the patients prefer.

“A lot of our veterans are avid readers. Some are not. Just like you see anywhere else,” said Robert Schuler, a former Marine who’s now just one semester away from getting a masters degree in social work from the Univ. of Illinois/Chicago.

And like you’d find anywhere else, “there’s a wide range of things that catch our veterans’ interest. Sometimes it’s fiction, sometimes sci-fi, mysteries, westerns, adventure. They really enjoy a wide range,” he said.

And what are his own tastes?

“Since I’m still in school, my tastes in reading these days are what my teachers assign me,” said Schuler with a smile.

Love is in the air at Newberry Library

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

If you're looking to find a whole lotta love this Valentine's Day, look no further than the Newberry Library's heartwarming exhibit, Love on Paper, running through April 4 at the library, 60 W. Walton St.

You're sure to fall in love with this sweet exhibition, which features 55 amour-related items (54 are from Newberry's own collection, one map is on loan), including handwritten letters and mass-produced messages; affectionate verses and anti-love tableaux; endearing confessions and graphic revelations of platonic, heterosexual, and same-sex adoration, said Diane Dillon, the library's interim vice president for Research and Academic Programs.

"The tender dispatches delivered to loved ones on February 14 are, of course, the most familiar manifestations of love on paper," said Dillon. "To understand the broader culture of these heart-felt, often heart-shaped missives, we have contextualized historic Valentines with an eclectic array of expressive forms, ranging from sincere proclamations and sentimental pictures to comic send-ups and cynical put-downs of love."

I always loved Valentine's Day, especially as a kid. My paternal grandparents, Grandma Peggy and Grandpa Irving, always sent me a glittery and fancy card in the mail. When I was really little they put $1 in it and as I grew older it went up to $5. I wish I had some of those pretty, vintage cards still today.

Most of the display's vintage valentines were collected by the late Andrew McNally III, a former president of Rand, McNally & Co. and the great grandson of the map publishing firm's co-founder, said the very knowledgeable Dillon. Apparently, McNally III began collecting valentines as a teenager, and by the time he donated his collection to the Newberry in 1999, it had grown to about 325 valentines plus another 25 related items. American, British and German valentines dating from the mid-19th to the mid-20th century are included in the set, as are McNally's assemblage of "vinegar valentines," which offer irreverence and satire in place of sweetness and sentimentality, said Dillon.

"This genre became popular in the 1840s and continued into the early 20th century," Dillon told me. "Printed on cheap paper with garishly colored inks, vinegar valentines featured caricatured figures and insulting verses. They were often sent 'COD' so that the recipient had to pay the mail carrier to be insulted."

For those wishing to draw inspiration from either the vinegar or sweet valentines, from 4 to 7 p.m., Feb. 11, the library will hold a free valentine-making workshop where you can make an original, from-the-heart card. (Paper artist Becky Saiki will demonstrate how to create pop-up folded hearts, and light snacks will be served).

Before creating your own valentine though, you could even get some romantic ideas from the "letters held most dear by lovers and archivists alike," original compositions penned by hand, such as those between Rose Eden and her fiancé Ivory J. Martin, from Sullivan, Illinois, and between Gideon and Annie Allen, who lived in Madison, Wisconsin.

You can also find out about Chicago's role in this history (and I don't mean the St. Valentine's Day Massacre), which is also represented in the display, said Dillon. The Matrimonial News, a newspaper published here in 1877, observed, on its first page, the "superabundance of men in the West, and a corresponding ratio of women in the Eastern States," and vowed to facilitate match-making through its extensive personal advertisements.

The exhibit also includes several objects chronicling the history of Valentine's Day, which began as a religious celebration focused on several early Christian saints named Valentinus, said Dillon. It became associated with romantic love during the Middle Ages, sparked by Geoffrey Chaucer's late 14th century poem, "Parlement of Foules," where the narrator dreams of coming upon a parliament at which all birds choose their mates for the year, she said.

The story goes that three male eagles vie for a female, taking so long that the birds of the lower estates enter into a comic parliamentary debate. Eventually, nature intervenes, allowing the female eagle to put off her decision for another year. The poem was first printed by William Caxton in 1477; in the exhibition it appears in William Morris's 1896 Kelmscott Press edition of Chaucer's works, said Dillon.

As you can see, whether you're a romantic, a lover, a Don Juan in need of valentine ideas, or you just live in the neighborhood, this exhibit is sure to capture your heart.

"Like the larger collection from which it is drawn, this exhibition has something for everyone who has an interest in the humanities," said Dillon. "Love is, of course, an eternal theme. Since ancient Egyptian time, lovers have expressed their amorous hopes and desires through letters."

The power of love... They say laughter is the best medicine, but love works wonders too, as the folks at Lurie Children's Hospital well know. That's why once again the hospital is running its Handfuls of Love drive.

Lurie wants to receive 10,000 e-card Valentines for its patients, and helping them to reach that number is simple. You can easily send an adorable valentine online and for free at foundation.luriechildrens.org.

Valentines will be printed out and a handful will be hand-delivered to each sick child's bedside, said Amanda Salhoot, associate director of communications for the Lurie Children's Foundation. Some will go to satellite hospital locations and many valentines, along with the personalized message you can write on them if you so choose, will paper the walls of Lurie's Family Life Center.

It's a "touching gesture," said Salhoot, who has had the kids run up and give her hugs as well as smile, and cry, after receiving their cheery valentines.

"We all remember going to school and getting bags of valentines, this is a way to bring that experience to them," said Salhoot. "It's pure joy."

As apartment rents rise developers unveil new condo-tower plans

BY DON DeBAT

After years of battling higher real estate taxes and operating expenses, Chicago landlords finally are taking advantage of the urban apartment boom and pocketing some hefty rent increases.

More than $14.3 billion in rent was paid in the Chicago area in 2014, an increase of 7.4% from a year earlier, according to a new analysis by Zillow. That translates into a $50 average monthly rent increase for Windy City renters, compared with a U.S. average boost of $26.

However, tenants in other hot rental apartment cities are paying more. In San Francisco, the average rent hike was $163 a month in 2014, and landlords there raked in a hefty $14.6 billion.

Average rents in Denver jumped $86 a month, and Seattle renters paid an average of $71 more per month in 2014. Rents in Washington, D.C. and Miami-Fort Lauderdale rose an average of $59, and Boston tenants paid $58 more a month last year.

With the nation's homeownership rate slipping to 64.3% in the third quarter of 2014, from about 70% before the Great Recession, Zillow economists expect rents to rise faster than home values in 2015.

With rents skyrocketing, it's no wonder Chicago home and condominium developers are scurrying to lock in sites for new-construction units. Experts say the pendulum appears to be swinging back toward building for-sale units after a nearly seven-year hiatus.

Downtown, plans for new condo high-rises popped up nearly every week in December and January:

The Home Front

- Wanda Group, a Chinese developer, and Chicago-based Magellan Development Group want to build an 88-story condo/hotel tower on the south bank of the Chicago River in the Lake Shore East neighborhood. Dubbed Wanda Vista, the project calls for 390 condos, 250 hotel rooms and 9,000 square feet of retail space are planned in the $900 million project.
- Related Midwest is planning a 67-story tower adjoining a 1.7-acre park on the southwest corner of Grand Ave. and Peshtigo Ct. in Streeterville. The tower would include 100 condos and 250 apartments. Under the site is a 900-space parking garage.

In November, Related also took title to the 2.2-acre Chicago Spire site at 400 N. Lake Shore Dr., but plans have not been announced.

- Belgravia Group reportedly is in negotiations to secure the air space above an underground garage at 403 N. Wabash immediately north of Trump Tower in River North. Preliminary plans call for building a 16-story high-rise with 52 condo units.

Developers also are moving to acquire sites along the South Branch of the Chicago River in an emerging neighborhood now being called "River South."

- CMK Development, a Chicago-based residential developer, has acquired one vacant riverside parcel and is buying two others between Congress Pkwy. and Roosevelt Rd.

A pending acquisition is 5.1 acres at Franklin Point, along the river, just south of Harrison St. CMK has acquired a 1.8-acre site on the river just south of River City condos.

In 2014, CMK broke ground on a 144-unit building at 1345 S. Wabash, the biggest downtown condo project since the real estate crash.

The land-rich River South neighborhood also includes a vacant 62-acre riverfront parcel located south of Roosevelt Rd. Reymar Development originally proposed 4,600 homes and condos on the site before the Great Recession, but that plan faded and the land was sold to General Mediterranean Holding, a Luxembourg-based conglomerate.

out of the requirement at $100,000 per unit. To the disappointment of affordable housing advocates, developers generally prefer to pay the buyout fee particularly here on the North Side.

Calls for reform rang out after developers of 690 new apartments at Block 37 on State St. paid $6.9 million rather than include 69 affordable units. Block 37 is an area downtown bounded by State, Dearborn, Washington and Randolph.

The mayor responded with his proposal to require developers to make one of every 40 units affordable before they could buy out of the requirement. On Block 37, for example, that rule would have required the developer to include 17 affordable units.

Under the mayor's plan that appears to be stalled for now as the council has not scheduled action on it, the buyout fee would also increase from $100,000 to $125,000.

The fee would jump to $175,000 for Downtown projects, and $225,000 under certain conditions. In low income areas, the fee would drop to $75,000.

The city, however, appears to seldom spend the proceeds of the fees, and may not really need them, as it sustains an affordability program that rolled right along from 2009 to 2011, even though market rate activity stopped and developers paid no fees.

According to Chicago Rehab

Currently, a developer must meet affordability standards in one of every 10 units or buy its way out of the requirement at $100,000 per unit. To the disappointment of affordable housing advocates, developers generally prefer to pay the buyout fee particularly here on the North Side.

Network, which tracks housing programs, the city developed more than $1 billion in affordable projects from 2009 to 2012.

The network reported that those projects provided 3,564 affordable units and 273 market rate units, at a cost of about $270,000 per unit.

City records show that some projects cost more than $400,000 per unit, enough for luxury apartments or single family homes on the open market.

Cost estimation website Building-Cost.net shows that a frame home of average standard quality, with 2,500 square feet, plus basement and garage, would cost $333,188 in Chicago.

Most of the city's projects depend on equity that developers of low income housing invest in exchange for credits that Congress allows against income taxes.

The city can also arrange tax increment financing, grants, easy loans, housing credits under Illinois law, historic tax credits, and more.

Many projects serve specific groups like veterans, homeless adults, and mothers with disabilities and serious medical conditions.

In 2012, the city raised about $12 million for an artist colony of 32 units.

Sometimes the city combines residential and commercial development.

In 2012, the city raised $34 million for 96 units next to a new Wal-Mart. In 2013, the city raised $110 million for housing and $20 million for commercial space at Rosenwald Courts at 46th St. and Michigan Ave. in Bronzeville.

The city arranged for $58 million in tax-exempt bonds, $47 million in tax credit equity and $25 million in tax increments.

The project provided 229 units, with 120 for renters below 60% of area median income, 105 for renters below 50% and 14 at market rate. The apartments cost $460,955 per unit.

Last year, the city set up about $14.4 million in tax credit equity, a nearly $5.135 million grant from Housing and Urban Development [HUD], a $2.8 million city loan, a $900,000 private loan, $500,000 in state grants and $500,000 from the Federal Home Loan Bank for Woodlawn Park senior housing on S. Cottage Grove.

The project provided 26 units for renters below 50% of median income and 39 for those below 60%. It cost about $24.27 million at $373,351 per unit.

For Park Side of Old Town, on the former Cabrini Green site, the city assisted with a $12 million grant from Chicago Housing Authority [CHA], $12 million in tax credit equity, $10 million in tax increments and a loan of $1.9 million.

The project provided three units for renters below 30%, four for those below 40%, nine for those below 50%, and 11 for those below 60%.

It also provided 36 units to replace CHA units, and 43 at market rate. It cost $40.95 million, at $386,335 per unit.

Nature and Garden Arts and Crafts Fair

The Northtown Garden Society is holding a Nature and Garden Arts and Crafts Fair at the Warren Park Field House, 6601 N. Western, on Saturday, May 2, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., to raise funds for its community service and educational programs. The Society is currently seeking artists and crafters to sell their creations at the fair. If you are interested in participating, the deadline to apply is February 28.

The theme of the fair is Nature and Gardening, so all art works need to depict gardening or nature or, in the case of soaps, candles, jewelry or foods, be made of natural products. The fair will feature all media, including paintings, woodworking, textiles, soaps, ceramics, mosaics, photography and jewelry.

For more information visit www.northtowngardensociety.org.

HOUSING from p. 4

W. 118th St., the city arranged for about $12.21 million in tax credit equity, a $4.5 million loan, $1.5 million in tax increments and an economic opportunity grant of $158,015.

The senior housing project provided three units for renters below 30%, 39 for those below 50%, 21 for those below 60%, and five at market rate. It cost $18.37 million at $262,434 per unit.

For St. Edmund's Tower, on S. Michigan Ave. in Washington Park, the city arranged for a $5.52 million grant from HUD, $780,881 in other grants and $76,500 in state housing tax credits.

The city helped out by selling the land for a dollar. This senior housing project provided 34 units for renters below 50% and cost nearly $6.58 million at $193,444 per unit.

For the Cicero and George Elderly Apartments in the city's Belmont-Cragin neighborhood, the city set up $11.84 million in tax credit equity, a $4.93 million loan, $4 million in tax increments and $815,100 in grants.

The project provided eight units for renters below 30%, 11 for those below 40%, 28 for those below 50%, 14 for those below 60%, eight for those below 80%, and one for a resident janitor. It cost $21.6 million at $308,509 per unit.

For Milwaukee Ave. Apartments in Avondale, the city provided slightly more than $7 million in tax credit equity, nearly $1.44 million in state grants and $1 million in tax increments.

The project provided 11 units for renters below 30% and 21 for those below 60%. It cost about $9.71 million at $303,422 per unit.

For housing project put up on the site of the former Strand Hotel on S. Cottage Grove in Woodlawn, the city arranged for $12.4 million in tax credit equity, a nearly $4.71 million loan, $3.37 million in historic tax credits, $2 million in tax increments, $293,750 in state housing tax credits and $138,790 from other sources.

The project provided 10 units for renters below 50%, 43 for those below 60%, nine at market rate, and one for a resident manager. It cost almost $22.92 million at $363,807 per unit.

For Cornerstone Apartments, on E. 50th Place, the city provided assistance with about $9.55 million in tax credit equity, $1.61 million in state housing tax credits, $2 million in tax increments, a $1.25 million loan, and $995,705 from other sources.

The project provided 12 units for renters below 50% of median income, 40 for renters below 60%, and seven for renters below 80%. It cost $15.51 million at $262,841 per unit.

In all the activity last year, totaling about $170 million, less than two percent of the money came from the fund of developer fees.

The fund supplied $506,394 for Woodlawn Park and $2.1 million for Cornerstone.

Icicles weighing thousands of pounds cling to Loyola's Georgetown Hall in the 6300 block of N. Kenmore, from what would appear to be burst pipes. The National Weather Service said the 19.3" of snow that blanketed the Chicago area in the early February storm was the fifth highest snowfall total since records were kept. The area experienced more than 12 straight hours of blizzard conditions and more than 50,000 ComEd customers lost power.

Snowfall makes the job easy for area burglars

Year after year, police report, burglars are found targeting homes that are surrounded by undisturbed snow.

No footprints? No shoveling? ... That means nobody's home and the residence shoots to the top of likely targets.

Before last weekend's snow fell, a series of burglaries were reported on the North Side. Most of the break-ins were through locked back doors.

The Friendly Bureau of Investigation?

A smiling spy catcher's secrets for success

BY JIM MATUSIK

Jack Schafer's warm, inviting smile and his gregarious nature belie the fact that he has used these charms to put spy's and criminal's behind bars forever. He draws you into a friendly comfort zone and casually begins to discover everything about you.

Schafer was Special Agent for the FBI's National Security Division's Behavioral Analysis Program for 20 years. "My ability to quickly read people gave me a unique understanding of human nature and shared human behavior," he says.

His work ranged from convincing people to spy on their own country to identifying perpetrators and convincing them to confess. From these experiences he developed incredibly powerful methods for getting people to trust him, and often without saying a word. These methods of Influence and Attraction are the subject of his new book "The Like Switch."

"My profession boiled down to getting people to like me," he says, "and later on I realized in a broader sense that the techniques I used on spies could be used whenever a person wants to win anyone over in virtually any personal interaction."

Schafer was in town last Thursday talking about the book and other FBI matters at the DePaul Univ. Bookstore, 1 E. Jackson Blvd.

Schafer developed dynamic strategies for profiling terrorists and detecting deception. Now a law enforcement and criminal justice professor, he has adapted his tactics to day-to-day life, helping readers develop successful relationships at home, at work, or anywhere else that personal interactions take place. From sales calls to dating, Schafer cracks the code on making great first impressions, building lasting relationships, and understanding others' behavior to learn what they really think and how they feel.

"My profession boiled down to getting people to like me," he says, "and later on I realized in a broader sense that the techniques I used on spies could be used whenever a person wants to win anyone over in virtually any personal interaction."

After retiring from the FBI Schafer went on to get a doctorate in Psychology and began to flesh out his strategies for the book.

"Social media has effectively separated many people from face to face interaction and dealing with people, especially strangers, can be a challenging and even scary experience."

As an example he relates a classroom experience where he had two people sit closely facing each other and told them to talk to each other for five minutes. "What do we talk about," they asked?

"Anything that you want," he replied. They just stared at each other in mute silence. But when he had them turn their chairs around and sit back to back so that they couldn't see each other, they chattered like magpies.

To overcome fearful social hurdles like this, Schafer has constructed a "Friendship Formula" that consists of four elements: proximity, frequency, duration, and intensity.

People who share the same physical space are more likely to become attracted to each other even without speaking. This is proximity. And the increased frequency of these casual sightings is the next step. "But be careful not to get too close too soon, or your subject may go shields up," he says.

With duration you patiently spend time in the same space with an individual without speaking and this adds an element of curiosity. After enough time has passed you are ready for the intensity, the verbal introduction. But now its like you already know each other and the barriers are down.

This strategy has been used to successfully recruit spies, and there is no reason why it shouldn't work at the "club."

Schafer's concept of "The Friend-Foe Continuum," is all about the important initial meeting between two people.

Each day we may walk past hundreds of people without paying the least bit of attention to most of them, but then someone will pique our interest even though we may not understand why. "They have been picked up by your brain's territory scan," says Schafer. "Our senses are constantly sending messages to our brain to determine whether a stranger can be ignored, is worthy to approach, or is someone to be avoided.

This process is hardwired into our brain and it is what determines our friend or a response."

Schafer grew up on the South Side of Chicago and related a story about how his first job in law enforcement was being a policeman in Hinsdale. Coming from the city he had what he describes as "The Urban Scowl" which is a facial defense mechanism that basically says "don't screw with me."

As he was working the job he started getting complaints at the department from residents who said that he was very unfriendly and aggressive. "Did he do or say anything wrong," the department asked?

"No, but there was just something about him that made me feel uncomfortable..." was the general response.

The "scowl" which is an automatic feature for most city dwellers was perceived as a threat to the kinder, gentler, richer, suburban set.

There are three essential non-verbal friend signals that you can send out if you want to meet someone and most of us use them without even realizing it. They are the "eyebrow flash," the "head tilt," and the "real smile."

The eyebrow flash is described as a quick up and down movement of the eyebrows that lasts for about one sixth of a second and occurs with brief eye contact to another.

The head tilt is about seeming less dominant and exposes one of the carotid arteries which are the major blood suppliers to the brain. Severing either will cause death within a few minutes. This "tilt" has been a primordial response in the animal kingdom as a friend signal from a submissive to a dominant. It says "I'm a nice animal, please don't eat me." And with humans, "I am a friendly guy, won't you take me home?"

The third and most important signal is the true smile, and yes, science has proven that they can detect the impostor.

"Smiles are attractive, likable, and they release endorphins which gives us a good feeling," says Schafer.

"When we smile at other people it is very difficult for them not to smile back, and the return smile causes the target of your smile to feel good about themselves. That's a lot of mileage for a one second facial expression, just make sure that it is the real one."

Studies show that the real smile is for people that we want to make contact with, or who we already know and like.

Conversely, the fake is the salesman smile used when we are forced by social obligations or job requirements to appear friendly.

When he was with the FBI, Schafer worked on the case of a suspected child molester. They wanted to arrest the guy but lacked probable cause. Schafer decided to interview him to seek his consent to examine his computer. He invited the suspect to the office, but had him pick the time so that it seemed voluntary. He met the suspect at the door with a "manufactured" eyebrow flash, a tilted head, and a "simulated" real smile (since he really felt loathing for the man).

He warmly shook the suspects' hand and offered him a cup of coffee to tap into the psychological principal of reciprocity, which assumes that when people get things, they tend to give back. When he handed the suspect the coffee he stated, "How could you treat me with such respect after what I did?"

This small admission even before the interview had begun showed Schafer that he had was on the right track. Using mimicked friend signals to give the suspect the illusion that he was not a threat, but a person that he could trust with a secret, he divulged information that would put him in jail for the rest of his life.

"We emulate what people do when they like each other," says Schafer. "We lift up the hood and start tinkering. We are down there getting a wrench on the stuff of human behavior."

"They go to jail for life and they still like me, he says, "that's the power of rapport!"

West Ridge woman robbed of tooth money in her apartment

A West Ridge woman allegedly was robbed Feb. 3 by two men armed with knives in the stairwell of her apartment on the 2000 block of W. Farwell Ave.

Officers responded about 5 p.m. to calls of a robbery in progress within the building and found the 54-year-old victim inside. She claimed two men had cornered her and used knives to cut the straps off her purse before taking $550 cash, police said.

One of the men had cursed at her and threatened to “cut her up” if she didn’t allow them to take the money, said police. The woman displayed the purse when officers arrived and said the money had been set aside for having a tooth fixed at the dentist.

Three arrested in Lincoln Square robbery

Three men were arrested at a Lincoln Square gas station Tuesday and charged with aggravated robbery.

Police found a loaded .25 caliber handgun inside the offenders’ vehicle during a search in the parking lot of Shell gas station at 6000 N. Western Ave., police said.

The offenders had manhandled and robbed a 35-year-old just after midnight on the 5300 block of N. Paulina St., according to police. A witness to the robbery told officers at the scene he had been parking his vehicle when he saw the men approach the victim aggressively from across the street.

After parking his vehicle the witness got out and saw the victim on the ground with the three men digging through his pockets before they jumped into another vehicle and fled. The witness called 911 and reported the incident to police.

The victim told police one of the men had threatened to shoot him before emptying his messenger bag and pockets of a phone, wallet and cash.

Officers located the vehicle at the Shell station based on the description and blocked it from leaving the lot. When the police cruiser had entered the driveway the vehicle had attempted to flee, according to the report.

The victim’s credit cards and cell-phone were recovered inside the vehicle. His messenger bag was found dumped in a garbage can. The victim identified the men at the scene as the same group that had robbed him minutes earlier, police said.

The victim was taken to Swedish Covenant Hospital for treatment to minor injuries.

Love lost on Halsted St.

Police responded to a 911 call from the Center On Halsted [COH], 3656 N. Halsted St., on January 22 after receiving multiple reports of a woman “pulling on a male’s privates” outside a third-floor basketball game there.

Police arrested Tatiana Love, 19, for allegedly biting and scratching a man who broke up with her earlier in the day. When a COH security guard intervened, Love allegedly punched him in the face and fled the building. She was apprehended nearby Waveland Ave.

Love, who lists The Crib youth shelter as her home address, is charged with one count each of domestic battery and battery.

Delivery driver robbed

A Sam’s Chicken and Ribs delivery driver said he was robbed at gunpoint Jan. 31 on the border between West Ridge and East Rogers Park.

The driver, 45, had been making a delivery on the 7000 block of N. Ridge Blvd. about 3 a.m. when he was hit, said police. Two men had ambushed him from behind while he waited outside the entryway. One man had put a gun to the back of the driver’s head and announced he was being robbed, police said.

The offenders took $33 worth of food, an iPhone 4 and $120 cash, according to the report. The driver said the men fled into a nearby building. No arrests were made that night.

Woman says out of state dog seller ripped her off

A Rogers Park woman who attempted to buy a Pomeranian from a seller with a St. Paul, MN, area code claimed her money was accepted but the dog never was sent.

The 23-year-old victim made a report Jan. 28 stating she had wired $310 for the dog to a man calling himself “Dominique Tyner.” According to her statement, $200 was for the pup while the remaining $110 was slated for shipping costs.

Operation Tangled Web leads to over 20 arrests

Melvin Foote

Craig Johnson

Henry Wiggins

Chicago Police along with the FBI Joint Task Force on Gangs conducted a round-up of Operation Tangled Web on February 4 focused on a complex Drug Trafficking Organization that was spun into the fabric of gang life across Uptown and Northeast Rogers Park and beyond. This investigation included court ordered wiretaps and targeted North

When she had not received the dog after a week she contacted the seller, who allegedly said the new shipping price would be $700 but would not give a reason for the up-charge. The woman said she would not pay it and the seller said he would refund her original payment, according to the report.

But the money was not refunded and the seller has stopped answering phone calls and responding to emails, the woman claimed. Police were given the name and contact information for the purported seller.

Police arrest gang member for possession of crack/cocaine

Officers arrested a documented Gangster Disciple for possession of crack/cocaine after a brief foot chase Jan. 31 near the Morse station on the CTA Red Line.

The 18-year-old offender had been arrested previously for drug possession and was being electronically monitored by the Cook County Dept. of Corrections at the time of this arrest, police said. He was charged with misdemeanor narcotics possession.

Officers had spotted the offender about 3 p.m. standing with a small group on the 1400 block of W. Morse Ave. He was seen making hand-to-hand transactions with multiple subjects, according to the report.

When approached for an interview an officer spotted a small plastic baggy tucked under the offender’s tongue. After being asked to remove the bag from his mouth the offender fled west down a crowded sidewalk and knocked several pedestrians out of the way, according to the report.

The offender cut onto Morse Ave. and forced a vehicle to slam on its brakes to avoid hitting both himself and the pursuing officers before being taken into custody a short distance away. Officers found an additional half-gram of cocaine in his back left pocket, according to the report.

Pedestrian pulled knife on motorist in West Ridge before running

A man allegedly pulled a knife on a driver Jan. 28 in West Ridge after the driver did not see him using the crosswalk at N. Richmond Ave. and Albion.

The driver, 44, told police that about 9:30 p.m. he had stopped his vehicle at the intersection and then began rolling when a man suddenly slammed his hands onto the man’s hood. The vehicle had just started rolling when the man hammered on the hood, according to the report. The only contact with the vehicle had been initiated by the pedestrian, who was not injured in the incident.

The unidentified offender had allegedly stopped and shouted, “Don’t you know how to drive?”

The victim told officers he had rolled down his window and said, “Is there a problem?”

The offender allegedly responded, “No, but we can make it a problem,” and pulled a knife from his jacket, according to the report.

But instead of fighting the offender ran with the men in the car following him. They tracked him to the 6400 block of N. Washtenaw Ave. before he evaded them by ducking between buildings, police said. Officers toured the area seeking the offender but did not make any arrests.

Man said he was beaten after refusing to sell drugs

An Uptown man said he was beaten and robbed Jan. 28 by a drug dealer who attempted to strongarm him into selling drugs inside his building.

Officers had responded to a robbery call about 4:35 p.m. on the 1000 block of W. Argyle St. and found the victim standing with a swollen face and without a jacket on. The victim alleged that the offender had punched him repeatedly in the face and stolen his jacket and phone after he had refused to sell drugs for him, according to the report.

The victim was treated at nearby Weiss Hospital, 4646 N. Marine Dr., for minor injuries and was released the same day. Officers patrolled the area following the incident but did not make any arrests.

Police pull man using heroin from traffic

A shoeless man pulled from traffic on the 6400 block of N. Western Ave. was charged with reckless conduct and two narcotics charges after officers found heroin and a syringe in his clothing.

The offender, 22, told the officers that he was a regular heroin user, according to the report. The police department said he has a prior conviction on his record for possession of the drug.

A regular beat patrol had spotted the man about 7:20 p.m. as he attempted to cross four lanes of traffic on Western Ave. Several cars had to slam on their brakes or swerve to avoid hitting him, said police.

Police arrest crazy man with knife, find out he was out on parole

A 24-year-old man was arrested Jan. 28 for allegedly assaulting his neighbor with a knife in West Ridge.

The offender was on parole with the Illinois Dept. of Corrections for a prior conviction, police said, but did not specify the case.

Officers had responded about 11:55 p.m. to reports of a person with a knife and found the offender being held down by numerous people on the 6400 block of N. Rockwell St.

Several minutes before they arrived, the offender had approached the victim carrying an eight-inch kitchen knife and said, “I will kill you because you talk too much,” according to the report.

The victim had said he had no problem with the offender but picked up a car snow-brush to defend himself. When the offender attacked the victim had punched him in the eye and fought off the assault until the rest of the group helped him subdue the offender.

Officers said the offender was highly intoxicated and had both a black eye and multiple cuts to his hand. He was taken to the 24th District for processing and his parole supervisor was informed of the incident.

Teen claims Lane Tech security guard headbutted him following school event

An 18-year-old is suing the Chicago Board of Education [CBE] over claims a security guard headbutted him after a high school event.

According to the suit filed Jan. 15 in the Cook County Circuit Court, Ivan Rios attended an event on Oct. 16, 2014, at Lane Technical High School, 2501 W. Addison St.

When he and a few friends attempted to enter the school parking lot to get to their vehicle, Rios alleges several school security guards and police officers prevented them access and one of the security guards rushed at him without provocation and headbutted him in the face, causing him to sustain concussive-like symptoms.

The security guard was acting as an agent of the CBE and, as such, Rios contends the defendant is responsible for the guard’s actions.

Minibar nighclub hit with suit over alleged assault

A man is suing a nightclub in Boystown over claims he was assaulted by an employee.

Alexander Cikanek filed suit Jan. 20 in Cook County Circuit Court against Mini Bar Inc., 3341 N. Halsted St., doing business under the names Minibar, Mini Bar Meat, mEat Restaurant, and Alex Rodriguez.

According to the complaint, Cikanek was at Minibar nightclub on Jan. 27 2013, when Side Black P-Stones’ leaders Craig Johnson aka “CHOP” and Henry Wiggins aka “MIX”. Johnson and Wiggins operated a $2.5 million drug trafficking organization with ties to multiple districts as well as Evanston and Skokie.

This operation crossed traditional gang alliances and supplied members from other gangs operating on the North Side of the city. The Cook County State’s Attorney’s Office approved arrest warrants which included charges of Calculated Criminal Drug Conspiracy carrying sentences of up to 30 years.

Twenty one subjects were charged as a result of this operation. Also charged with Calculated Criminal Drug Conspiracy was Melvin Foote, an associate of Jeff Forte and an original ranking member of the Black P-Stones. Several shooting incidents were thwarted as a result of intelligence gleaned during the course of this investigation.

This operation resulted in eight vehicle seizures, as well as the seizure of $58,000 in cash, 377 grams of crack cocaine. A 9mm handgun was recovered during a search warrant. Henry Wiggins was charged with Possession of a Defaced Firearm in addition to Calculated Criminal Drug Conspiracy.

he was approached by Rodriguez, who he claims placed him in immediate fear and apprehension by physically striking him.

The suit states the Mini Bar defendants failed to intervene in the matter, which resulted in the assault. Cikanek also alleges they hired personnel it knew or should have known possessed violent propensities and failed to properly screen prospective applicants.

Pick pocket nabbed at Halsted St. 7-Eleven

A pickpocket was arrested in Lakeview Monday morning while attempting to use the victim’s credit card to make $700 worth of transactions at a nearby convenience store.

Chicago plolice were flagged down at 2:30 a.m. near Belmont and Clark by a woman who reported that her wallet had been stolen at Roscoe’s Tavern on the corner of Halsted and Roscoe.

While speaking with officers, the victim learned that one of her credit cards was being used at that very moment to make purchases worth $100, $200, and $400 at a 7-Eleven convenience store across the street from Roscoe’s.

Additional officers scrambled to the store, arriving just in time to apprehend the offender.

Police found credit cards belonging to another apparent victim in the arrestee’s possession during a search. Cops were not immediately successful in reaching the second victim, who lives in Streeterville.

Police warn Rogers Park neighbors about garage burglaries

Garage Burglaries have occurred in Rogers Park where in most cases, an unknown offender(s) forcibly enters the garage by either prying or kicking open the service door and stealing property from the garage.

Incidents have occurred in the 2400 block of W. Farwell Ave. during daylight hours on January18; then again on the 2200 block of W. Lunt Ave. sometime between 6 p.m. and 6:30 a.m. January 19-20; an incident also occurred in the 2100 Block of W. Farwell Ave. on January Jan. between 8 a.m. and 6 p.m., and finally an burglary occurred in the 2200 Block of W. Lunt Ave. about 11 a.m. on January 21.

In the 2200 W. Lunt Ave. burglary the offender was described as a male Black or male Black-Hispanic with short beard stubble, such as a “five o’clock shadow.”

Police are asking for anyone with information on these crimes to contact the Bureau of Detectives – Area North at 312-747-8263 and refer to Pattern P15-N-039 cases RD#s HY120053, HY121617, HY123671, HY123120 and alert # P15-N-039CA.

Thieves try to swipe ATM from Lakeview high rise

Chicago police are investigating the attempted theft of an entire ATM from a Lakeview high-rise Sunday night.

Officers were called to the Park Place Tower, 655 Irving Park Rd., around 6:30 a.m. Monday after someone stumbled across the machine, abandoned in a parking garage stairwell.

Police say the machine was heavily damaged in the failed heist and, while there were a substantial number of pry marks, it did not appear that the bandits succeeded in freeing any of the cash.

Detectives are trying to determine if the theft attempt is connected to a series of burglaries across the North Side in which safes have been stolen from businesses, including Aldi grocery stores.

No fee shall be paid by the mortgagee acquiring the residential real estate pursuant to its credit bid at the sale or by any mortgagee, judgment creditor, or other lienor acquiring the residential real estate whose rights in and to the residential real estate arose prior to the sale. The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court.

Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale.

The property will NOT be open for inspection and plaintiff makes no representation as to the condition of the property. Prospective bidders are admonished to check the court file to verify all information. If this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee, shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4). If this property is a condominium unit which is part of a common interest community, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/18.5(g-1).

IF YOU ARE THE MORTGAGOR (HOMEOWNER), YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN IN POSSESSION FOR 30 DAYS AFTER ENTRY OF AN ORDER OF POSSESSION, IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 15-1701(C) OF THE ILLINOIS MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE LAW. You will need a photo identification issued by a government agency (driver's license, passport, etc.) in order to gain entry into our building and the foreclosure sale room in Cook County and the same identification for sales held at other county venues where The Judicial Sales Corporation conducts foreclosure sales.

Lawrence Hall announces selection of new CEO

Improvements needed for troubled Lincoln Square youth service provider

The Lawrence Hall Youth Services Board of Trustees announced Feb. 2 the selection of Kara Teeple as their new CEO. Kara joined Lawrence Hall, 4833 N. Francisco, in 2013 and has served as Chief Operating Officer [COO] and most recently as Interim CEO since June 2014.

Lawrence Hall was excoriated by a Chicago Tribune investigation last December as part of a series on the state’s inability to manage troubled and ‘at risk’ youth. Founded in 1865, Lawrence Hall Youth Services has been know as one of the states foremost child welfare institutions delivering care to children, many of whom have experienced significant traumas in their lives. Last year the nonprofit took in some $20 million in government grants to treat and care for these wards of the state. Illinois tax payers pay the facility approximately $340 per night to manage and care for the youths.

The Tribune investigation found that the children at the 48-bed residential treatment center and its other group homes and supervised apartments were preyed on and abused by hardened peers and drawn into a life of crime that then spilled out into the streets of the surrounding community.

This change of leadership likely reflects deep concerns within the Board of Trustees and staff that change was needed.

Conditions inside Lawrence Hall, detailed in thousands of pages of juvenile case records reviewed by the Tribune, highlighted the crisis in Illinois’ loosely monitored system for caring for and housing disadvantaged youths, some who have behavioral and mental health problems.

According to the reports, “Amid staff shortages, youths are raped, assaulted and running away and many come out more battered than when they were admitted.” Horrendous crimes were being committed by youths on and off site, many which were witnessed by staff and other youth.

Teeple brings to the position over 20 years of experience in working in social services and child welfare, including various senior roles in the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services (DCFS) and positions with Catholic Charities and the Allendale Assoc.

According to the reports, “Amid staff shortages, youths are raped, assaulted and running away and many come out more battered than when they were admitted.” Horrendous crimes were being committed by youths on and off site, many which were witnessed by staff and other youth.

In her time at Lawrence Hall, Teeple directed numerous programs and implemented system reforms. Her continued day-to-day operations include over-seeing residential treatment, foster care, independent and transitional living, workforce development, the therapeutic day school and specialized service programming.

The facility is required to send a report to DCFS every time an employee learns of or witnesses a crime or when one of the wards is put in danger so as COO she is well-aware of the troubles that are plaguing the institution. She acknowledged to the Tribune that many of the children they’ve taken in in recent years have troubled histories of trauma, absenteeism, criminal behavior and juvenile detention, and that the institution had room to improve.

“We are very fortunate to have someone as experienced and qualified as Kara who can be a continued advocate for our youth and their families. [She] exemplifies our mission and is committed to providing the most innovative and effective programming and treatment designed to provide our youth with better opportunities step down into a safe and reliable family or caregiver home setting,” said Mark McCareins, Board President.

Man says he was robbed at gunpoint near Loyola Univ.

A man told police he was robbed at gunpoint the morning of Jan. 25 two blocks east of Loyola University’s Rogers Park campus.

The victim, 30, said he’d been on the 1300 block of W. Arthur Ave. when a man coming from an alley confronted him shortly after 10 a.m. The unidentified offender was carrying a chrome semi-automatic weapon and ordered the victim to hand over everything he had, police said.

The victim surrendered $30 cash and an unspecified piece of jewelry to the offender, who fled east on Arthur toward the Loyola Red Line CTA station. The victim ran the opposite direction to his girlfriend’s house before contacting police, according to the report. The offender was described as a black male, likely in his 20s, about 6-feet 2-inches tall.

moment it did, the ice began to melt into the slurry I saw just 30 minutes before face off.

In the end things got right and two good games were played before two sparse crowds. Intersport, the marketing agency, and Coyote Logistics, the event's primary sponsor, announced an attendance of 22,500 for the 60,000 seat stadium, but it was doubtful there were half that number for either game.

Miami defeated the Western Michigan Broncos 4-3 in the first game. It had been a blowout for more than two periods with Miami dominating the ice, but Western jammed home two goals within 37 seconds of each other about half way through the third, and then pulled their goalie with more than two minutes to play and tried for the desperation equalizer. The Redhawks held off the Broncos late blitz and skated out of Chicago with a win to keep them in third place in the National Collegiate Hockey Conference.

The Redhawks brought four Chicago-area kids to Soldier for the game. One of them, Louie Belpedio of Skokie, tallied two assists in the second period. Belpedio, who is only a freshman, had his draft rights claimed in the third round of last year's NHL Entry Draft by the Minnesota Wild.

In the night cap, which started at 8:40 p.m. after being scheduled for 7, Michigan got up a big lead on Michigan State and defended it, winning 4-1. The ambient air temperature had dipped into the lower 30s and made surface conditions better as the night wore on. The game, as it always does between those rival schools, got rough, with multiple players being hauled off to serve penalties.

The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court. Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale. The property will NOT be open for inspection and plaintiff makes no representation as to the condition of the property. Prospective bidders are admonished to check the court file to verify all information. If this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee, shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g) (1) and (g)(4). If this property is a condominium unit which is part of a common interest community, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/18.5(g-1).
