Got 10 Million Dollars?

ANN GERBER

IF YOUR MATTRESS IS THAT LUMPY with assets, you can join Tiger 21, a unique community of wealth creators “dedicated to unlocking the transformative value of wealth.” This group of high-net-worth investors held their 5th Annual Members Conference recently at The Breakers in Palm Beach, FL. Tiger 21 members heard presentations on matters affecting their financial assets, personal health, and family relationships. Former Governor of Florida Jeb Bush and Greta Van Susteren of Fox News were featured.

THIS PEER-TO-PEER NETWORK for high-net-worth investors was founded in 1999 by Michael Sonnenfeldt. The company consists of 16 full-time employees and 23 regional chairs who support the company's 300+ members in 16 cities in the U.S. These members, who collectively manage approximately $30 billion in investable assets, pay annual membership dues of $30,000.

ONE OF THE RULES FOR MEMBERS is that they must reveal all of their assets, something many investors find difficult if not impossible to do. Tiger 21 promises to improve members' investment acumen through critique and coaching as well as exploring common issues of wealth preservation, estate planning and family dynamics.

TIGER 21, AN EGO-CARESSING Big Daddy guide is headed in Chicago by Rick Harig, founder of Legacy Resources, a financial planning firm specializing in the artful blending of financial and estate design and the challenges of living a legacy and leaving one of significance.

AVERAGE NET-WORTH of the 220 members is $75 million. “Meet the wealthiest, most powerful social networking group in the world,” boasts the groups selling point, “Don't confuse wealth with success.” Goal is wealth preservation and how to deal with resulting family issues.

New City development is perfectly structured

Amazing Lincoln Park mega complex to open in July

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY JIM MATUSIK

With its intriguing mix of retail & residential, the New City development now heading toward completion at Halsted and Clybourn is going to have something for everybody. Tenants and shoppers will experience a garden of earthly pleasures and conveniences as they navigate Chicago's newest luxury zone.

Currently over 300 workers are on site daily and this number will double when commercial tenants begin their specific buildouts. It already looks like the inside of a heavily mechanized anthill with noise and non-stop activity pulsating in every direction.

Once completed, the New City project will include about 360,000 square feet of new retail space in what is now Chicago's second hottest retail districts after Michigan Ave. and Oak St. It will also include a 19-story, 199-unit luxury apartment building with views to kill for. The site will also house 40,000 square feet of medical office space and a 1,100-vehicle ga-

Cappleman wins hard-fought election in the 46th Ward

Ald. James Cappleman

BY BOB KITSOS

First-term Ald. James Cappleman survived a strong challenge from Kirkland-Ellis attorney Amy Crawford in winning re-election in the contentious 46th Ward election.

The 62-year-old Cappleman overcame battles with pigeons, Salvation Army food trucks and Single Room Occupancy hotels to outdistance the 10-year Uptown resident and community activist in a ward that includes parts of Uptown, Buena Park and Lake View and has just under 54,000 residents.

Ald. Cappleman, a social worker by trade, should pick up a fair bit of confidence by picking up nearly 54% of the vote compared to Crawford's slightly better than 46%. He had the support of City Hall, Senator Dick Durbin, former Gov. Pat Quinn, Congresswoman Jan Schakowsky and U.S. Rep. Mike Quigley, State representatives Sara Feigenholtz and Greg Harris and the Chicago Sergeants' Assoc.

Many of the ward's issues coming into this election revolved around crime, gang activity and drug dealing, gentrification, housing and commerce and development.

This race became a runoff came because neither candidates [nor a third candidate] were able to secure a majority of voted during February's municipal election. Ald. Cappleman, who has served one term, and Crawford were the top two vote-getters leading to Tuesday's vote.

The slow progress, as perceived by some ward residents, in improving small business growth, developing residential dwellings and improving the local economy has been a point of criticism of the incumbent.

Lincoln Park still divided as nail-biter election basically 50/50 proposition

43rd Ward race too close to call

BY RONALD ROENIGK

A 43rd Ward over-flowing with clout, strong personalities and resources saw one of the closest aldermanic elections in ward history Tuesday. In fact residents of the tony North Side ward may still not have made up their minds.

With 95.65% of vote in and 44 of 46 precincts reporting, Ald. Michele Smith had 6,504 votes to Caroline Vickrey's 6,406.

The vote in those last two ward districts had not been reported by the Chicago Board of Elections by 11:30 p.m. deadline Tuesday.

No doubt whomever comes up short will question if she could have worked a little harder, knocked on a few more doors or said a few things differently and things might have turned out differently. Both candidates can rightly claim her own mandates.

Caroline Vickrey

Considering how close the race is a recount is likely.

The eventual loser will no doubt still be a strong voice in the ward over the next four years.

The ward encompasses a large part of Lincoln Park and smaller portions of Old Town and the Gold Coast, three of the city's wealthiest neighborhoods.

This ward is not like other wards in Chicago who look to their aldermen to facilitate city services, husband growth and development and negotiate settlements between differing clans within their bound-

Hopkins takes new 2nd ward

BY PATRICK BUTLER

With more than 100% of the vote in at 9:33 p.m., Brian Hopkins was the clear winner, with 7,176 votes to Alyx Pattison's 5,571, ending the the most exciting and intense 2nd Ward's elections in a long time.

The six-week race, which included over 30 debates and sometimes-lively forums, followed a hard-fought contest in which none of the six original contenders got the required 50% plus one vote.

At the victory celebration Hopkins thanked his wife Colleen and supporters, including Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] and former aldermanic challengers Bitu Buenrostro, Cornell Wilson and Steve Niketopoulos.

Hopkins, a former chief of staff to Cook County Comr. John Daley, got 29% of that pie with 2,850 votes, Pattison trailed with 2,373 votes, or 24% of the total which lead to Monday's face off election.

Pattison is a lawyer and Ukrainian Village resident.

Hopkins said that during his two-year campaign, he knocked on 15,000 doors in the newly-re-mapped ward on a platform of safer neighborhoods, fiscal responsibility, improved city services, and no property tax increases.

The new 2nd ward became an open race when Ald. Bob Fioretti's home was gerrymandered out of his own ward. Those new ward boundaries lead from the Gold Coast west through Old Town and Lincoln Park twisting and turning west out to Wicker Park and Ukrainian Village.

One of the first major tasks for the new alderman will be to try and find a way to manage the diverse ward and unify all the unique needs he will find in the different areas.

Perhaps the most daunting task ahead for Hopkins and the ward will be helping to husband the re-development of the Finkl Steel site at Cortland and the Chicago River. Indeed the legacy of what happens there will have long term implications for generations to come.

Calling all dog-loving landlords: Dexter, Chucky and Lola need you!

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

When Debbie Garcia's mother was dying last May, she begged her daughter to keep her two beloved dogs, Chucky and Lola, together after her death. Although Garcia already had a pooch of her own, a shih tzu/poodle mix named Dexter, "I promised her I'd do my best," she recalled. After all, at that time Garcia had already had Lola and Chucky living with her for nearly a year since her mom, Doris White, had tripped and broken her arm on her 74th birthday in Aug. 2013. When two weeks later Doris fell again, this time breaking both legs, "From there it was on to the hospital and lots of nursing homes," said Garcia. "She never came home."

Garcia and her mom were not only very close but they were also neighbors. Doris had lived in the front of a Roscoe Village two-flat for 23 years, with Garcia living in the coach house for the last 19 of them. But now, both buildings are being razed to make way for condos, and Garcia needs to move by June 1.

In less than two years she lost her mother and her longtime home, and Garcia doesn't want to lose her dogs too. But she's having a heck of a time finding a place that'll take all three.

"Chucky and Lola are like brother and sister, I have to keep them together," said Garcia. "I'll never have kids of my own... they are my kids. I love them."

So did Garcia's mother. Doris was always dressing up the dogs in cute, fun outfits and taking them with her wherever she went.

"She didn't go anywhere without them," Garcia said, smiling as she recalled her mother traipsing about the city with the adorable little furry white pair. "She took them with her for her mani and pedis, took them with her to Bloomingdale and Saks. She took them everywhere."

"They meant everything," said Garcia. "She didn't even care about herself when I called her at the hospital. She just asked about the dogs."

Garcia has been poking around online, yet she hasn't found anywhere that allows more than two dogs. Aside from the dog issue, her needs are fairly simple: She can pay up to $1,200 a month rent for a one-bedroom with a yard, parking, and laundry in building. She would love to stay in Roscoe Village, but Wrigleyville, Lincoln Square, Ravenswood, North Center and "pretty much anywhere on the North Side," would do. "It will mean everything," said Garcia. "I can't even explain it."

Eight-year-old Dexter, six-year-old Chucky and four-year-old Lola all weigh less than 20 pounds each. They've been with Garcia and her mom since they were puppies, and in August, it'll be two years that they've called Garcia's house their home.

"They are my family," she said. "I can't wait to get home from work and see them."

Work for Garcia is Lawry's Prime Rib, where she has waitressed for the last 28 years. When she comes home is the only time the dogs really bark, she said, making them, "Good watchdogs."

As of April 1, Garcia had 60 days to find a new home. And what happens if there's no where that'll take Dexter, Chucky and Lola? "I don't know," she said, clearly distressed.

I asked Garcia what she would want people to know most about her mom.

"She was the love of my life," said Garcia. "And she loved life and loved her dogs."

Anyone out there who might have an apartment to rent to keep this family together, please shoot me an e-mail at write12@comcast.net. I'm really hoping to help a loving daughter honor her late mother's wishes.

It's no secret the community loves Whispers... so I was glad to hear the popular cafe has been granted an extension, through this season, to continue as the vendor at Mariano Park, 1031 N. State St., while bids for the future are being reviewed.

"The board of the Mariano Park Advisory Council views this as very good news," said its president, Peter Spiros. "I might add that the Chicago Park District leadership, as well as those with whom we have interacted over the past few months, have shown a professionalism that we Chicagoans can all be proud of."

Keep on truckin'... Last year, Gold Coaster Danny Kravitz's hit song, "The Bigger The Wheels The Better The Man," won Monster Truck Song of the Year. The tune was penned by Kravitz and sung by Nashville artist Brandon Maddox, who toured around with it after winning what Kravitz called the "Super Bowl of Trucks" honor.

Continuing that "wave," on April 9, Kravitz will be guest appearing with Maddox at Mother's, 26 W. Division St.

"There will be three bands, two local, the third is Brandon Maddox, who'll perform some country songs and some cover songs," said Kravitz, who is currently working with actress/singer Karen Mason on her next single.

A man of many talents, Kravitz is also a screenwriter and an author

Franklin Delano Roosevelt's time as leader of this country.

He writes and produces music, writes books, has a screen writing script being developed with a "pretty big" Hollywood actor, wrote the screenplay for a movie about to shoot this summer, is co-writer of a TV show in the making, and, as if all that is not enough, Kravitz is a screenwriting professor at Columbia College!

As a screenwriter, he was recently ranked by students as 3rd highest rated professor at Columbia College... out of 1,800 teachers. He's also up for an annual award called the Teaching in Excellence Award. "It's super exciting," he said.

Meanwhile, Kravitz is also super excited about his upcoming gig at Mother's.

"I want so many people to come," said Kravitz. "People who like pop and country... anyone who likes that kind of stuff should come out."

Millennial generation to lead nation into the next housing boom

BY DON DeBAT

The Millennial Generation—all 89 million of them—will be the catalyst to lead the nation's housing market into its next boom.

That's the opinion of Jim Kinney, 2015 president of the 41,000-member Illinois Assoc. of Realtors, and vice president of luxury home sales at Baird & Warner in Chicago.

"I think we are on the cusp of another housing boom, and Millennial buyers are going to lead it," said Kinney in an exclusive interview with Inside Publications.

Housing experts say Millennials—young people age 18 to 33 years—are mostly renters, or folks who live at home with parents while paying off student loans.

Typically, they are not first-time home and condominium buyers.

However, Kinney disagrees. "Millennials are buying homes, especially in the $350,000 to $450,000 price bracket in Chicago's hot Bucktown and Wicker Park neighborhoods—enclaves filled with people less than 30 years of age," Kinney noted.

"I've seen a dozen Millennial buyers at showings and multiple bids occurring on the most attractive properties," he said. "It reminds me of the hot market in Lincoln Park 20 years ago."

What's driving the market? Apartment rents are skyrocketing, and Millennials are beginning to marry and form families, he said.

And, not all Millennials are burdened with student-loan debt. "Many are getting down-payment help from their parents, and others are using inherited money," Kinney said.

Another spark fueling the start of the boom is rock-bottom mortgage interest rates. Benchmark 30-year fixed home-loan rates averaged 3.70% in early April. A year ago, 30-year fixed loans averaged 4.41%.

Despite worries that the Federal

The Home Front

Reserve Board likely will boost mortgage rates at mid-year, Kinney believes the economy has not recovered enough, and the Fed is not ready for the hike.

"An interest-rate increase of .25% could cause a tailspin in the stock market," Kinney said. "Home buyers and real estate people have played a wait-and-see game with the Fed for three years."

In reality, "mortgage rates could double and they still would be low by historical standards," Kinney noted, recalling the days of 18% home-loan rates in the early 1980s.

What's the biggest problem delaying the housing boom? "Millennials prefer new homes and condos, not decade-old units that need rehab—especially new kitchens and baths," Kinney said.

Because of the housing recession, less risky rental-apartment

Illinois nearly tops in real estate taxes

The average American household spends $2,089 on real estate property taxes each year, and residents of the 27 states with vehicle property taxes shell out another $423. Roughly $15 billion-worth of homes are also foreclosed upon as a result of property tax delinquencies each year, according to the National Tax Lien Assoc.

And while property taxes may appear to be a non-issue for the 36% of people nationwide who rent their homes, that couldn't be farther from the truth. We all pay for property taxes, whether directly or indirectly, as they impact the rent we pay as well as the finances of state and local governments.

With that in mind, the personal finance website WalletHub released a report Monday on the States with the highest and lowest property taxes in 2015, which compares home and vehicle taxes across the country. And you guessed it, Illinois ranks #50 with $3,939... costing about $300 more than New Hampshire at $3,649 and leading only New Jersey who knicks their residents at $3,971 on average.

Who has the lowest property taxes? Paradise does... Hawaii comes in at $482. Second was Alabama at $752 and third place goes to Louisiana at $832.

towers dominate the downtown skyline. There just are not enough new-construction for-sale condo units being built in the neighborhoods Millennials covet.

"New boutique condos in buildings with six to 20 units are selling like hot cakes," Kinney said. However, the downtown luxury high-rise condo market is just beginning to come back.

Taking a global view, Kinney, a longtime member of the International Real Estate Federation, is working to attract more international investors to Chicago and Illinois real estate.

"The U.S. is a safe haven for foreign investors," and Chicago is an attractive World-Class city that should be a magnet for them, said Kinney, who is urging local developers to welcome foreigners and their money.

DePaul presents The Duchess of Malfi

Neighbors Night April 22

The Theatre School at DePaul Univ., 2350 N. Racine Ave., will present The Duchess of Malfi, by John Webster, on the Fullerton Stage Theatre at the school.

In partnership with DePaul's Office of Community and Government Relations, the school is hosting a Neighbors Night on Wednesday, April 22. Neighbors are invited to join in for a pre-show reception at 6:30 p.m. before seeing The Duchess of Malfi at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $15 and include complimentary hors d'oeuvres and cocktails before the performance. Those interested can call the box office at 773-325-7900 and mention "neighbors" to attend this night's event.

The production, directed by Lavina Jadhvani, premieres on Friday, April 17, and runs through Sunday, April 26. Performances are Wednesdays through Saturdays at 7:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m. Previews are on April 15 and 16, at 7:30 p.m.

The Duchess asserts her freedom of choice to marry whom she pleases, even if her beloved Antonio is "beneath her class." Her brothers retaliate in protest and send their henchman, Bosola, to keep an eye on the Duchess. The result is a tragedy full of complex players, destruction, violence, greed, secrets, madness, murders, double crosses, poison, treachery, and good old-fashioned aristocratic revenge.

Notoriously one of the greatest blood baths of the stage, this Jacobean drama is reimagined by Jadhvani.

The school is easily accessible via the Fullerton CTA Station and the Fullerton (74) bus. Visitors and audience members can park in DePaul University's Clifton Parking Deck, 2330 N. Clifton Ave.

For patrons who are blind or have low-vision, the performance will be audio described 7:30 p.m. April 24 with a pre-performance touch tour. The performance 2 p.m. April 26 will be interpreted in American Sign Language. TTY: 773-325-7975.

Jadhvani is a Chicago-based freelance director in her third and final year of the MFA Directing program at The Theatre School. She is an Artistic Associate at Silk Road Rising (Ching Chong Chinaman, Gold Boy/Emerald Girl) and Oak Park Festival Theatre (Hamlet, Twelfth Night, Two Gentlemen of Verona). She is also the Casting Director at Lifeline Theatre.

The Theatre School at DePaul educates, trains, and inspires students of theatre in a conservatory setting that is rigorous, disciplined, and culturally diverse.

School architecture topic of library talk

Hayt School, circa 1907.

Ever wonder why...?

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Ever wonder why the city closed off the basements in some of the older schools like Trumbull, why it took so long to build the Lane Tech high school campus, or why Hayt School once had the city's largest grade school playground?

Or why public school historians Julia Bachrach and Elizabeth Patterson still haven't written the book answering these and other questions covering just about everything about how Chicago public schools got that way – but never thought to ask.

Answers to these and other questions can be found in Bachrach and Patterson's Chicago Historic Schools website if you weren't at their recent talk at Sulzer Library, 4455 N. Lincoln Ave.

According to Bachrach and Patterson, students can thank architects like John Flanders for focusing on heating and ventilation in many of the 50 turn-of-the-century schools he designed. "If you ever drive by a public school and see ribbing on the chimney stack, you'll know it's probably an early Flanders-designed school," Bachrach said.

Among his North Side handiworks, she added, were Ravenswood, 4332 N. Paulina, and Nettelhorst, 3253 N. Broadway, elementary schools.

Back in the dark ages when pupils got to use the washrooms in dingy basements only once a day, Dwight Perkins came up with the radical idea of putting boys' and girls' "toilet conveniences" on every floor in schools like Trumbull, 5200 N. Ashland. Perhaps it's no wonder the children "sang and marched" at the Oct. 3, 1908, cornerstone-laying ceremony.

But apparently no good deed goes unpunished, said Bachrach, noting how Perkins was later accused of incompetence, inefficiency and insubordination, apparently because he refused to follow orders from several school board members who wanted Perkins to give contracts to some of their friends.

"After all, this was Chicago," Bachrach said.

Although Perkins was fired, he really didn't suffer, Bachrach said. "Although he was forced to resign (as head school architect), it didn't hurt too much because he ended up designing more schools and everything else."

Edgewater's Hayt School, 1518 W. Granville, is largely forgotten as the school which once had the largest playground, separate boys and girls entrances, and one of the first auditoriums, thanks also to Perkins and others who thought schools should be used by the community after classes were over.

While that all seems to normal today, Patterson said, nobody ever expected to see four ladies walk into a community meeting at Hayt in June 1913 soon after Illinois women received the vote, surprising what had until then been a men's-only meeting.

Hayt's assembly hall and gymnasium, designed to seat over 1,100 people, have played an important role to the surrounding community for decades. When the West North Edgewater Improvement Assoc. held a meeting in Hayt School's auditorium, shouting broke out in the crowded, smoky room when Mrs. Florence Bennett Peterson walked in and took a seat. Three other women soon entered the room.

"The men [had taken] out their cigars and tried to smoke them out. They didn't leave," Patterson said.

In 1910, Ella Flagg Young (1845–1918),

Construction is well underway at Lane Tech's new Western Ave. campus.

a reform-minded Chicago Public School superintendent and the first woman head of a large city school system in America, announced that "every child should be taught to swim." Admitting that she herself could not swim, she suggested that swimming lessons were important for safety reasons and could provide children with a healthful form of exercise. She advocated offering swimming instruction in schools "to both boys and girls impartially."

Young and other administrators emphasized the need for a large North Side campus with state-of-the-art athletic facilities. The school board acquired a 10-acre site to provide Senn High School, 5900 N. Glenwood, with "the largest high school playground in the city." Plans not only included the swimming pool and enormous gymnasium complex, but extensive grounds with tennis courts, a running track, and athletic fields.

The largest high school in the city, Lane Tech, 2501 W. Addison, took several years longer to finish than planned because of the Depression and a series of labor disputes. Construction finally resumed with a grant from the federal Public Works Administration, Patterson and Bachrach noted on their website.

But the first Lane Tech High School was actually built in 1908 at Sedgewick and Division. As forward-looking as it was, it was also almost immediately too small

Man beaten at Belmont Harbor

A pleasant evening on the lakefront took an unpleasant turn for many passers-by who witnessed a man getting beaten up by "a gang armed with a pole" at Belmont Harbor at 7:08 p.m. Saturday.

Several 911 callers reported a "fight" involving at least five men on the lakefront near Belmont.

Police arrived 10 minutes later and immediately summoned an ambulance for a victim who suffered serious injuries.

According to witnesses, the offenders—described as three Hispanic men—fled northbound in a white work van with two letters on top and "RCN" written on its side. No other details have been released by the Police.

The case is recorded as an aggravated battery with a dangerous weapon.

Two robbed in Lakeview

Two people were robbed this weekend in Lakeview. The first robbery came around 4 a.m. Saturday at Halsted and Cornelia.

According to the victim, three black men kicked and beat him, then took his cash before running away. The victim was treated at Illinois Masonic Medical Center for his injuries.

Then, at 3:15 a.m. Sunday, a man reported that two black men wearing all black mugged him near Addison and Racine just west of Wrigley Field. The two reportedly fled northbound in a black car with the victim's cash and credit cards.

FBI seeks help in search for Black Cap Bandit

The FBI is asking for assistance from the public in identifying and locating a bank robber suspected of carrying out four recent robberies at various Chicago-area TCF Bank locations. He is also suspected of robbing a fifth bank in the south suburbs. The FBI announced that a reward is being offered for information that leads to the identification and arrest of the robber dubbed the Black Cap Bandit.

The robber earned his moniker by wearing a black cap during the robberies. The Black Cap Bandit first struck on 10:51 a.m. September 25, 2014, at the TCF Bank branch located at 3400 N. Western Ave. in Roscoe Village. On that day, a robber entered the bank, approached a bank employee and made a threatening demand for money.

They believe he is also responsible for a robbery at the TCF Bank branch at 3570 N. Elston Ave. on December 31, 2014, as well as robberies at a TCF Bank branch located in Oak Lawn and in Burbank in October and December or 2014.

The Black Cap Bandit is also suspected to have robbed a Standard Bank branch located in Calumet City on Nov. 6, 2014. To date, there have been no physical injuries reported in connection with these robberies.

The Black Cap Bandit is described by witnesses as a male, black, approximately 6'-1" to 6'-3" tall, and weighing 200-210 lbs. He has been seen wearing either a black shirt or jacket or a gray hoodie, jeans, a gold cross chain, a black cap, and either glasses or sunglasses. He is considered armed and dangerous.

Anyone recognizing the Black Cap Bandit or having information about his whereabouts is asked to call the Chicago Office of the FBI at 312-421-6700 or local police at 911. This case is being investigated by the FBI in coordination with local authorities.

Group of thugs cause havoc in Lakeview

A large group of troublemakers wandered through Lakeview April 6 leading to a flood of 911 calls reporting everything from street fights to burglaries over the course of an hour. At least one person was arrested.

The first call for help came around 7:40 p.m. when a man called from Kit Kat Lounge, 3700 N. Halsted, to report that seven people were slamming a door and throwing things at him.

Then approximately 30 minutes later, police discovered some of the same individuals after residents reported 10 men fighting in the alley at Fremont and Cornelia and other callers reported street fights on neighboring blocks.

That was followed almost immediately by a 911 call of 20 people breaking into a garage in the 3500 block of Reta.

Police stopped several members of the group and took at least one of the individuals into custody as additional calls poured in. Among those stopped by officers was a 20-year-old robbery parolee who lists the Howard Brown Health Center as his home address.

Gang member arrested for harassing citizens

Officers arrested a gang member in Rogers Park March 30 after they overheard him harassing citizens on a city sidewalk.

The gang member, 19, was with two other males walking south on the 6900 block of N. Clark St. shortly after 10 p.m., police said. As officers approached in their patrol vehicle they heard him shout, "Latin Kings! Woo! Woo!" at two people as their groups passed each other on the sidewalk.

Officers recognized the teen as a gang member and stopped him. While asking him why he was shouting gang affiliations at citizens the officer patting him down found a grey, gun-shaped knife in his pocket with a 3.5 inch barrel blade.

At the 24th District the booking officer found the teen had violated a bail bond for a previous narcotics offense, according to the report. He was charged with unlawful use of a dangerous weapon for the knife.

Woman charged on CTA train after attacking conductor

Police on March 29 arrested a 46-year-old woman from a CTA Red Line train after she activated one of the car's emergency door handles multiple times despite being stopped by the conductor.

Elderly man missing in Uptown

Edward Lomax, 85, has gone missing in Uptown. Lomax was last seen by his grandson on March 23. He is reported missing from the 900 block of W. Argyle.

The Police are asking anyone who may have information on the whereabouts of Lomax contact Area North Detectives at 312-744-8200.

County prosecutors drops rape charges against a former Uber X driver

New evidence comes to light in secret recording

Uber driver Maxime Fohounhedo, who was accused of rape last November, has been freed from jail Monday. Shady Yousif Yassin, Fohounhedo's lawyer, said the new evidence was a nine-minute recording his client made on his cellphone while driving the alleged victim home.

"Fortunately Max can live the rest of his life without this stain on his name," Yassin told the Chicago Sun Times.

This newspaper had reported on the crime at the time. Fohounhedo had been in jail since his arrest in December, unable to make bail.

Cook County Prosecutors said Monday that they told the woman about the recording before Monday's hearing and state that she understood the decision and did not object to the County dropping the charges.

The recording Fohounhedo made showed that the woman, who at the time reported that she was falling in and out of consciousness, "was totally alert the whole time and engaged in what sounded like a friendly conversation about her boyfriend and work," said Yassin.

Yassin said that at the end of the ride the recording shows that she gives him a big hug and a big kiss. "That's not somebody who's in fear of her life."

Yassin credited prosecutors for quickly dropping the charges after learning of the recording.

Prosecutors now say that the woman was out with her friends when at 3 a.m. she hailed Uber to arrange a ride to her Rogers Park home. Last

She was charged with reckless conduct for tampering with the handle and battery after she attacked the conductor in the car near the Jarvis stop, police said. He was treated at St. Francis Hospital in Evanston for a minor cut to the left side of his face where the woman had punched him, according to police.

The operator told officers he had gone to check on a fault-light on his board at about 11 p.m. and found the woman lifting the emergency handle. The operator reset the handle and told the woman emergency exits were restricted to times of emergency and when the train was not moving, according to his statement.

The woman lifted the handle twice more after the operator had reset it and then became enraged. She sucker punched him with a right, opening up the cut, and sent the conductor back to his car where he called the supervisor who then contacted police.

Woman's life threatened by violent ex-boyfriend

A 23-year-old woman told police that a man she is attempting to break up with showed up at her Rogers Park residence March 29 and threatened to kill her.

The boyfriend, 23, had threatened the woman with a knife the previous night and said, "If you take away my freedom, I'll kill you," according to police.

After leaving that night, he showed up again the next morning and the woman called 911. The man ran before police arrived.

The woman told officers she believes he has access to a handgun. Officers searched the area for the boyfriend but did not find him.

Man driving without license and with marijuana charged

A 23-year-old West Ridge man was arrested March 29 for possession of marijuana.

He was pulled over around 8:30 p.m. on N. Claremont Ave. just south of Warren Park for driving with a cracked windshield, police said.

When officers approached the vehicle the man told officers he did not have a driver's license and he was carrying marijuana. He gave officers four zip-lock baggies with varying quantities of the drug inside.

Maxime Fohounhedo

November she claimed that she was intoxicated and fell asleep in the car only to wake up in a Lincoln Square area apartment finding him raping her on his living room couch.

Then he reportedly helped her to his car and drove her home. But Yassin says that the woman had actually made a pass at his client when she first stepped into his car.

Fohounhedo then recorded his nine-minute conversation with the woman on his cellphone as he drove her home, the recording that freed him from jail Monday. Fohounhedo is due back in court later this month where charges are expected to be dropped.

There is no word as to whether the woman will face charges for falsely accusing Fohounhedo.

"I know it wasn't right what she did," Yassin told the Sun Times. "My client was the real victim. He had to spend four months behind bars for whatever her motivation was — her own embarrassment, or whatever."

According to Yassin, Fohounhedo doesn't plan to work with Uber anymore.

He was charged with three misdemeanors for the broken windshield, driving without a license and carrying less than 10 grams of a narcotic, police said.

Police arrest flasher

Police arrested a man in West Ridge after he exposed himself to a woman and ordered her to perform a sex act on him.

Officers took the 20-year-old into custody shortly after noon on the 2000 block of W. Norwood St.

A 40-year-old woman had called 911 after she said the man began masturbating in front of her on the sidewalk and said, "Come here and s— my d—," according to police.

The man was charged with a sex offense, public indecency and taken to the 24th District for booking.

Sympathetic employee cut by knife but declines felony charges

A Sam's Chicken and Ribs employee suffered a serious hand injury March 27 while attempting to disarm a man threatening the store's occupants with a knife.

Officers arrested a 22-year-old Rogers Park man for the crime but did not pursue felony charges at the request of the man he'd cut, according to the report.

The attacker in this case had been escorted out of the store multiple times that night, police said. He returned a third time just after 1 a.m. with a knife and threatened to "cut you all."

The employee had grabbed the knife just as the attacker pulled it back leaving a long, deep gash in his hand. The employee then tackled the man and pinned him down while the other customers helped incapacitate him, according to police. Several police officers from Loyola Univ. also assisted the citizens.

The attacker was charged with misdemeanor battery and misdemeanor narcotics possession after police found a small amount of marijuana in his clothing, according to the report.

Funding cuts to Supportive Living, paratransit would affect community

I've heard the phrase "tools don't make the man," more times than I can remember.

Obviously, I know that tools alone don't make the man. What also makes people who they are is sheer determination and drive, using the education they have received to turn their determination into an effective business practice or innovative way to tackle an Internet security breach.

As a blind journalist who has relied on tools and services to work and live, I understand that one thing doesn't give back alone. It's a combination of things, each forming something that creates sustainability.

To some, the paratransit service I utilize and the Supportive Living environment I live in seem like minor services. They only take into account that these services help a small population, and may think that a small group of people don't have a lot to offer the world.

Those services now face serious troubles with the proposed cuts in state funding.

To me personally, and the people I work with and live around, however, these services are huge.

Friedman Place is one Supportive Living facility in Chicago that houses blind adults. Given my old age of 25, many would assume that I wouldn't want to go into a community setting. What I have gratitude for is finally finding a place where I can live and work from after experiencing homelessness. It isn't just me who's grateful, some residents who just lost their sight are relishing in the opportunity to gain their independence back so they can return to the workforce. Others are just happy they have a safe and stable place to live with other blind people so they don't feel alone.

It isn't easy for people to see the big picture. Make big cuts to immediately make change happen. I can understand how that would seem to be the solution. People in Illinois are desperate in these economic times. People don't know where to go or what to do so some people want to do something big to make action happen.

Every day, I interview people, pen their stories, show the public what's happening in the world, demonstrate that little things can make a difference. People read my articles and for some their lives are changed. Not Hollywood monumental change, but noticeable change.

For instance, a start-up on the North Side works to employ disabled artists, and they even give back to other organizations and not for profits. They have donations because I was able to travel down there via paratransit and take down their story, and share that with the world.

I know it seems easy to cut from places that don't have a direct impact on everybody, but having a place to live after worrying about the unknown for so many years, and having an affordable way to travel around Chicago that accommodates my physical disabilities, that's a cut I don't want to have happen.

It isn't just me. The residents who have found a family at Friedman Place wouldn't like having to worry where we would end up next if Supportive Living and paratransit budgets are cut drastically by the state. To many, we're just small people. You just never know, though, because one person could do big things and can make a big difference.

Robert Kingett, Lincoln Bend

We deserve better leaders

Election Day is over. Regardless of one's views and political preferences, leadership at all levels everywhere is in lamentable decline. Whether alderman, mayor, governor, or president, where these days does one look to find an exemplary leader?

Will we ever again see the likes of Sir Ernest Shackleton, of Endurance fame (probably the greatest leader of the century)? Worse yet—how many people do you think even know of him?

Our communities deserve nothing but the finest leaders.

Leon J. Hoffman, Lakeview East

Protect the lakefront

Chicago's lakefront must be protected. What is there to discuss? It is a priceless legacy bequeathed to us and not to be squandered.

Recent, numerous attempts at what can only be seen as land grabs must not be permitted to overcome and destroy the reason and vision of Daniel Burnham and other selfless, noble city leaders.

Museums, a presidential library, and myriad other projects, while of importance to many, must always be trumped by what is best for the most. That is what democracy stands for. And therefore, it is crucial that we preserve our gem of a resource for the free, open, public use as originally proposed.

If we blur, and perhaps even violate, our delicate boundaries, permitting any incursions into what still remains of the lakefront's natural state, we will have made Chicago (despite its countless splendid offerings) into just another big city with a dreadful crime experience and a lamentable, corrupt, untrustworthy political system that has no competitor.

Chicago must maintain its lakefront for future generations to discover and enjoy. I, for one, have delighted in its offerings, almost daily, for over half a century. I hope others will be able to do so as well.

Leon J. Hoffman, Lakeview East

aries. Lincoln Parkers know how to work the levers of City Hall, and hire clout heavy lawyers and lobbyists to move projects along. They generally don't start battles until they have already secured victory.

It's tough being the alderman of a community that is home to so many constituents who have more clout than the alderman. In that environment it is the force of personality that moves people. This race may have been more a battle of personalities than a battle over issues.

Both candidates worked non-stop since the primary election to get their share of votes. Smith and Vickrey worked themselves weary talking to voters on the phone, at events, at bus stops, train stops and walking door to door asking for support.

That's not to say that this election didn't have big issues. The future of vacant Children's Hospital site was one, as was an earlier decision about what would take the place of the old Grant Hospital on Webster.

Certainly the decisions made by Ald. Smith over the Lincoln School expansion was key in getting Vickrey into the race.

And while the site has been taken out of the 43rd Ward by redistricting - and moved into the new 2nd Ward - the future fate of the Finkl Steel site on Cortland and the river now looms large.

Ald. Smith also faced a personal challenge in this race when her second job managing an arts foundation became a campaign issue.

The financial crisis the city and it's public schools face will present immediate uncomfortable decisions to be made. Billions of dollars need to be found and there are no easy solutions. Indeed fixing this financial mess may take decades to accomplish and there is no guarantee that the city fathers will get it right.

SCHOOL from p. 5 to meet the demand for manual training classes. The popularity of the school's curriculum continually increased, so that by the early 1930s, the 7,000 boys were housed not only in the main building on Sedgwick, but also in five branch schools and 60 portable classrooms. That's when the CPS developed a plan for a sprawling Academic Gothic style campus on a 30-acre lot on Western Ave., then adjacent to the popular Riverview Amusement Park.

The book they had originally planned to write 10 years ago never materialized because they kept finding new information.

And they still are, which makes a website the only practical alternative, the two historians explained.

Chicago's first joy bike riders can thank American Wheelmen for paving the way

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Back when Clark St. and Sheridan Rd. were little more than dirt and gravel, the first joyriders in the 1890s were the bicyclists.

In those days, groups like the League of American Wheelmen were making notes where the best roads were. The League of American Wheelmen was founded in 1880 and membership peaked at 103,000 in 1898. Bicyclists, known then as "wheelmen," faced antagonism from horsemen, wagon drivers, and pedestrians while riding the roads. And they weren't paved, just gravel-surfaced, according to Newberry Library Map Curator James Akerman. Indeed the League was the first organization in America to lobby for paved roads.

Having worked at the Newberry since 1985, Akerman has a Ph.D. in Geography from Penn State Univ. and is the author of many studies of the social and political aspects of cartography, railroad and road maps, and the history of atlases.

Speaking at a March 21 meeting at the Edgewater Library, 6000 N. Broadway, the cartography expert said maps for those early recreational travelers were probably the most accurate maps available.

After all, the growing cycling fraternity needed to know where to find the best roads. And while there were plenty of real estate maps available, many were designed to sell home sites, not necessarily show the fastest, easiest routes, he said. "You had to take real estate maps with a grain of salt."

Most of the best maps were produced by bicycle companies, he said. "There's probably 10 or 20 bicycle shops in Chicago today. There were many times that back in the 1890s."

A few years later, Akerman added, it was the oil companies passing out the maps as more adventurous travelers started buying cars that were little more than "four wheels attached to a lawn mower engine."

Motoring back in those days was still the privilege of the well-off, he said, noting that some of the earliest "horseless carriages" sold for as much as $2,000 at a time when carpenters were making about $20 a week, with common labors pulling down about half that.

Another big difference between then and now, Akerman added, is that motorists didn't worry as much about running out of gas as they did running out of oil on their trips to Kenosha or Milwaukee.

"Gas stations in large numbers didn't come around until the 1920s, but you could buy gas at a stable, blacksmith's or hardware store," he said.

Things started to change during World War I when the federal and state governments started kicking in money for local municipalities to maintain the streets and roads, he said.

Newberry Library map curator James Akerman shows an illustrated North Shore travel guide to members of the Edgewater Historical Society. Back around the turn of the 19th century, the real trailblazers were the "wheelmen" and pioneering motorists, he said.

Before long, the Evanston police were posting signs threatening to prosecute "bicyclers" riding on sidewalks or without lamps after dark or going faster than eight miles an hour. While in Wilmette, motorists were warned that anyone going over 12 miles an hour could be fined anywhere between $25 and $200.

So much for the good old days.

Are Chicago's public parks increasingly up for grabs?

BY FRIENDS OF THE PARKS

Chicago's citizens are witnessing an aggressive assault on their public parks, led by the Mayor Rahm Emanuel's desire to govern by press release and to exploit the city's greatest natural open space assets for development.

First was the City and the Chicago Park District's [CPD] proposed gift of 17 acres of invaluable, protected, public lakefront open space to billionaire George Lucas for the building of his private museum, which is currently entangled in litigation. Second was the Univ. of Chicago's proposal to appropriate a 20+ acre parcel of historic, Olmsted-designed public parkland in either Jackson or Washington Parks for the Obama Presidential Library plus a large amount of office space for the Obama Foundation. The CPD and City Council quickly backed this proposal making a historically unprecedented move transferring public historic parkland from state-protected, park district ownership to less-restrictive city ownership.

Lesser known are two more recent parkland incursions: the proposed 10,000 square foot restaurant at the south end of Maggie Daley Park and the City's recent proposal to develop a high-rise building on Pritzker Park (on State St. directly north of the Harold Washington Public Library), the only dedicated park in Chicago's central business district.

The restaurant in Maggie Daley Park, designed as a massive above-ground glass structure on Monroe St., directly contradicts the Lakefront Protection Ordinance and its guiding principle to "Maintain and improve the formal character and open water vista of Grant Park with no new above-ground structures permitted." The result would be the elimination of the little remaining passive park space in the now-intensely-active Maggie Daley Park and the creation of an obstruction in what could otherwise be a natural sloped transition to the remainder of Grant Park to the south.

The proposal to occupy Pritzker Park with a high-rise threatens to erode the only open respite in an otherwise dense downtown area that is built lot-line-to-lot-line, curb-to-alley.

According to the Chicago Loop Alliance, the Loop has a daily population of approximately 63,000 college students (attending 21 colleges and universities on vertical "campuses"), 300,000 employees, and a residential population of almost 16,000 (a downtown population growth rate of 123% between 2000-2010). The elimination of Pritzker Park would leave this community unserved by proximate public open space. Pritzker Park fits the textbook urban model of a central public square next to the city's public library, providing a space for public programming and activities similar to New York City's celebrated Bryant Park.

While Friends of the Parks is very supportive of new economic development opportunities coming to Chicago, we oppose their siting on Chicago's protected lakefront and public parkland. There are nearby attractive alternative sites for Mr. Lucas and Mr. President which have been largely and effectively ignored by the State reviewing 14 additional conditions for medical marijuana

The Illinois Medical Cannabis Advisory Board is reviewing 22 petitions requesting 14 medical conditions or diseases be added to the Compassionate Use of Medical Cannabis Pilot Program Act.

After its review, the board will hold a hearing on May 4, at the James R. Thompson Center in the Loop to discuss and listen to technical evidence concerning those 14 medical conditions or diseases.

The board will then make a recommendation to the director of the Illinois Dept. of Public Health about those conditions or diseases that would benefit from the medical use of cannabis and should be considered for addition to the program.

The 14 conditions or diseases for which petitions will be considered are:

Anorexia Nervosa, Anxiety, Chronic Post Operative Pain, Diabetes, Ehlers-Danlos Syndrome, Essential Thrombocythemia with a JAK 2 mutation, Irritable Bowel Syndrome, migraine headaches, Neuro-Behcet's Autoimmune disease, Neuropathy, Osteoarthritis, Polycystic kidney disease, Post Traumatic Stress Disorder and Superior Canal Dehiscence Syndrome.

Individuals who want to present technical evidence about a petition being reviewed on May 4 are required to file a statement of intent in writing no later than 15 days prior to the date of the hearing, or by April 18, with the Division of Medical Cannabis.

Citizens can submit petitions to IDPH twice annually – January 1-January 31 and July 1-July 31. The board will meet twice a year to consider those petitions. For more information call 217-558-0500.

Watching and recording: use of automatic license plate readers debated in Illinois

MARY KUHLMAN
AND JOEL HANDLEY

Mounted on police cars or sites around town, automated license plate readers are monitoring the coming and going of thousands of North Side motorists every day.

The Chicago Police Dept. [CPD] has used license plate scanners since at least 2006 and began using Vigilant Solution's software and database in Sept. 2013. Vigilant Solutions creates intelligence by merging previously disparate data sets such as fixed and mobile automatic license plate recognition [ALPR], privately collected ALPR data, facial recognition, and more, to create their LEARN Intelligence Network which provides an easy to use and intuitive interface to all of this information for unmatched investigative capability in a secure, hosted environment to reduce demands on agency IT resources and to facilitate nationwide interoperability and data sharing.

As with other high-tech surveillance gear, the CPD keeps information about the ALPR programs under tight seal. And with no regulations to govern—or mandates to disclose—how and when police departments use license plate data, the public has no way of knowing the full scope of this pervasive technology.

According to inthesetimes.com, in January Chicago's Office of Emergency Management and Communications (OEMC)—which purchases equipment for CPD, runs the city's vast surveillance camera network, and is a frequent partner in surveillance with the police—made a $500,000 agreement with Vigilant Solutions for ALPR software and database management services. That brief description, found in a monthly summary of the city's professional services contracts, accounts for the entirety of the publicly available information about the agreement.

The CPD has also been slow to provide information to the media about its use of ALPR. The CPD has yet to respond to two Freedom of Information Act requests submitted by In These Times on Nov. 25, 2014, seeking documentation of the CPD's relationship with Vigilant Solutions and other private ALPR firms. The CPD asked for a one-month extension, but that date has passed. The CPD did respond to a third FOIA request concerning the use of its in-house ALPR program. But the data it provided is difficult to reconcile with previously reported numbers.

The CPD Office of News Affairs has ignored multiple requests by In These Times to speak with not been posted because of "security reasons," and that to see the text, one would need to make a Freedom of Information Act request. She declined to answer further questions about the specifics of the agreement and the decision to advance the contract through the PBC instead of the Dept. of Procurement Services.

Now under consideration in the Illinois Legislature, HB 3289 would limit the use of automated license plate reading systems to traffic and parking enforcement, controlling access to secure areas, and current criminal investigations. Similar legislation has been introduced or is pending in more than a dozen other states.

Schwartz says the legislation also stipulates that information collected by law enforcement cannot be exchanged for any other purpose, and not kept for more than 30 days without a court order.

"So the government has to destroy its own information within 30 days," says Schwartz, "and the government can't buy more than 30-day-old information from the private sector."

But earlier this year, documents released to the ACLU and additional reporting by the Wall Street Journal revealed that the Drug Enforcement Agency (DEA) had created its own ALPR network and database, accessible to law enforcement agencies across the country. The DEA's ALPR cameras can also capture passengers' faces.

Vigilant Solution's NVLS database grew from one billion records in 2013 to more than three billion today—an average of 12 license-plate scans for each of the 253 million vehicles in the U.S.—and adds more than 70 million new scans every month. Vigilant says its LEARN software, specifically designed for law enforcement, is used by more than 2,200 agencies across the country. And Vigilant is just one of many companies jockeying for dominance in the ever-growing industry.

Valued at $415.5 million in 2013, the global ALPR industry is expected to reach $1 billion by 2020. Several private database and software system providers also collect and share location data. These companies market ALPRs and their attendant data not only to law enforcement, but to any company or government agency interested in tracking vehicles: repossession businesses, departments of revenue, insurance and financial services firms, toll booth and parking lot operators, private security and detective services, and more.

According to the ACLU, the cameras can read one license plate per second, amounting to nearly 28,000 plates in eight hours. Supporters say the measure would stop the creation of a permanent database of stored information. Opponents say the data collected is not used to track people in real time, and that the legislation could hinder criminal investigations.

The cameras read license plates as a system records the date, time and location of each passing vehicle. According to Adam Schwartz, senior lawyer with the ACLU of Illinois, the technology is unregulated - and violates privacy rights.

officials knowledgeable who can clarify the data and shed light on the department's use of ALPR technology.

The cameras read license plates as a system records the date, time and location of each passing vehicle. According to Adam Schwartz, senior lawyer with the ACLU of Illinois, the technology is unregulated - and violates privacy rights.

"The government asserts, 'Oh, we need this, because we might have a cold murder case. There might be a crime that comes up later and this will give us investigative leads,'" says Schwartz. "We understand that, but it is not the way our society should operate that the government keeps track of innocent people."

According to an internal CPD document released to the ACLU, by Jan. 5, 2010 the ALPR fleet of camera mounted vehicles had grown to "approximately 40" and had scanned more than 500 million plates that year.

The lack of information about the new Vigilant contract is due to an unusually secretive process. Most OEMC software purchases are approved by the city's Dept. of Procurement Services, which posts its contracts in an easily searchable public database. The Vigilant contract, however, was approved by Chicago's Public Building Commission (PBC), a city agency chaired by Mayor Rahm Emanuel, whose board includes Chicago school board president David Vitale, Cook County Board President Toni Preckwinkle and other board-hopping civic leaders. The PBC's mission is to oversee the construction and maintenance of buildings. The agency often does not publish the full text of its contracts and, unusually, did not assign the Vigilant agreement a contract number.

A spokesperson for the PBC, Molly Sullivan, told In These Times that the contract had likely

PUBLIC PARKS from p. 9

Mayor's Office despite significant community opposition to building in public parkland.

The former Michael Reese Hospital site (which the City claims is being reserved for undisclosed development opportunities rumored to include a casino), as well as the Univ. of Chicago/City-owned 11-acre site across from the Univ. of Chicago's proposed Obama Library site, are both very well-located, non-park development sites, well suited for large institutional and entertainment uses.

Persuading Lucas and Obama to target these alternative non-park sites for their institutions would have allowed the Administration to gain consensus and bridge communities as opposed to spinning the false narrative that Lucas and Obama would dismiss Chicago if not for the availability of our irreplaceable public parkland for their buildings.

The increasing voracity and frequency of proposed park confiscation in Chicago demonstrates the need for city leadership to undertake more proactive urban planning and land assembly to accommodate these type of attractive uses without eroding public parkland. Chicago ranks very low at only 14 out of the top 18 high-density U.S. cities when measuring acres of open space per capita as measured by the Trust for Public Land in 2014. In an era where most other North American cities are improving and expanding their urban downtown public open spaces to enhance livability, City Hall looks at parks as construction sites.

Giving away or selling our parks today sets a bad precedent for tomorrow. As our city grows and becomes more dense it is essential that we protect our open space for the quality of life it provides today's residents and visitors as well as future generations.

Friends of the Parks thanks the past and present citizens of Chicago for their vigilance in upholding the legacy of our parks and open spaces. We hope our city's and our nation's leadership similarly values and preserves Chicago's natural assets for now and centuries to come.

Friends of the Parks is a 40-year-old nonprofit parks advocacy group whose mission is to preserve, protect, improve, and promote the use of Chicago's parks and open spaces.

Real Estate For Sale

Case Number: 13 CH 01476 TJSC#: 35-1923

Looking down on the unfinished commercial portion now with halted street to the left.

Inside the unfinished 2-bed apartment enjoying the view the future tenants will have.

And wait until you go to the movies. Arclight Theater offers their "black box" auditorium concept as the focal point of what they call the ultimate viewing experience. Each of the 14 theaters are literally designed like a big black box or a darkened cave to allow undistracted, commercial free viewing. They exceed the THX Standards of presentation excellence which were created by George Lucas and Lucas Films Ltd. for his Star Wars Film Series. This, coupled with an intense state of the arts sound system, guarantees that all films will be presented in the mind blowing manner that the filmmaker intended. And of course there is that 1,100 car parking garage and valet parking to help you get there.

It has been a long, exciting, and complex road for Structured Development who is the primary master planner of this mega project.

"Everyone reports to the developer, says Kashima. "We hire the architects, the construction company and the management for all of the Buildings. It's all about patience and vision."

And Structured continues to move forward. Even as they finish with New City they have already begun a new $80 million office and retail project just a block away at Kingsbury and Blackhawk.

"Right now the concept design is before the city for approval" remarks Kashima,

Then the design and drawing process will take six months, followed by another six months for the permit process, during which time Structured Development will probably raze the existing structures."

All systems are go for the unstoppable Clybourn Corridor as this desirable diagonal slices headlong through the city at a futuristic pace. Who knows what other new cities will be born along the way.

Once completed, the New City project will include about 360,000 square feet of new retail space in what is now Chicago's second hottest retail districts after Michigan Ave. and Oak St. It will also include a 19-story, 199-unit luxury apartment building with views to kill for. The site will also house 40,000 square feet of medical office space and a 1,100-vehicle garage.

Soon your Uber driver will be able to bring you into the main entrance where you will drive by a huge boulder with water shooting out and then be dropped off at the turnabout. Before you lies two acres of lushly landscaped outdoor adventures. The aroma of Nando's flame grilled peri peri chicken mixes with the sounds of sizzling fajita from Adobo Grill.

You hear the bowling pins fly up for a strike at Kings Bowl as you head over for a true Hollywood style movie experience at Arclight Cinema. And after this sensation, you exit to find the night air throbbing from a late night dance floor DJ's beat at the Bowl.

The sprawling open air amenity floor on four at the Residences is also alive with activities. People are wet and wild as they cluster around the outdoor pool and nearby Jacuzzi. Around the corner others are gathered to cook dinner on the outdoor grills and hang out at the firepit. Even Fido is feeling fine at the custom dog run and taking in the full experience.

"This project started back in 2007, says Hide Kashima, Senior Program Manager for Structured Development LLC, " The New City YMCA was looking to dispose of some of its assets to raise capital and they identified this location as one" they could sell. With the demolition of the nearby Cabrini Green housing complex underway, membership at the New City YMCA was quickly dwindling which was one big reason why they sold the property in 2007. That they could get $54 million for their property was perhaps an even bigger reason.

"Many developers bid on it, but Structure Development was the winner" And then the long process began. "There were many changes along the way," he says, "and we went through several design phases to get to the ultimate layout."

The Structured venture's initial lender, the now-defunct Anglo Irish Bank Corp., filed to foreclose on the property reports Crain's Chicago Business, and the debt was eventually acquired by Dallas-based private-equity firm Lone Star Funds. In the spring of 2012 the venture landed new financing from J.P. Morgan Asset Management and settled the foreclosure suit.

And now, three years later, it's all coming together in a whirlwind of construction.

In the rental market these days it's the war of amenities and The Residences at New City, where stylish meets spacious, is ready to do battle. They expect to start renting in July, and are offering a tempting list of features like floor to ceiling windows, private balconies, and unparalleled views of the city.

All apartments will have plank floors, a washer and dryer, and a built in "tech desk" with all necessary connections and a quartz countertop. And also, a built in wine rack with the biggest Mariano's in the city at 90,000 square feet just across the plaza ready to help tenants stock it.

The building also has a fitness center, a cybercafé, and a private screening room. Studio rentals begin at $2,031.00 for 590 square feet and top off with a 1315 square foot two bedroom, two bath for $4,311.00. There are convertibles and one bedrooms' with prices and sizes in between.

Unique to this building, the entire third floor, 40,000 square feet, will be devoted to medical offices with every type of doctor at your service. As hospitals, like many other institutions become decentralized, the focus is on convenience and speed of performance for those who can afford it.

Why drive to a giant institution when you can just take the elevator down to three?
