To his critics like Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the Chicago Board of Education, ousted Blaine School principal Troy LaRaviere is an insubordinate ideologue.

Which surprises the maverick educator who admits to serving as an education advisor in Jesus "Chuy" Garcia's race against Mayor Rahm Emanuel last year and publicly criticizing his school board superiors.

Ignoring the well-known consequences of supporting party outsiders in Chicago, he appeared in a Bernie Sanders campaign spot in March criticizing Hillary Clinton for supporting Mayor Emanuel.

And LaRaviere encouraged parents at Blaine to keep their children away from taking the controversial Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers exam — PARCC for short.

During a conversation with a parent, he even compared having a

Honoring fallen police officers, one horse at a time

BY SHEILA SWANN

In 1962, President Kennedy proclaimed May 15 National Peace Officers Memorial Day, and the calendar week in which May 15 falls, as National Police Week.

Yes, police lives still matter too, even in Chicago.

In 2014 in Chicago, the Horses of Honor Project (HOH) was conceived, to pay special recognition to law officers who have lost their lives in the line of duty. This year, the project rides west into the sunset to Omaha, Nebraska.

The Horses of Honor are life-size, hand-painted police horse statues, each painted in honor of a fallen officer.

Last year I painted one of those horses. His name is "Bailey," painted in honor of Michael R. Bailey, P.O. #13970. You can visit him in front of the Guesthouse Hotel at 4872 N. Clark St.

I had found out about the HOH in September of 2014 while attending a Chicago Police Memorial Foundation event. I was watching images on a large screen and a picture of one of these horses came up. I almost jumped out of my seat, thinking, "where do I get one of those horses? I have to paint a horse."

"Bailey" in front of the Guesthouse Hotel at 4872 N. Clark St. This horse was painted in honor of P.O. Michael R. Bailey, who was shot outside his home on July 18, 2010.

The information on how to sponsor a horse was easy to find, but finding the money required to sponsor one wasn't. I wondered how in the world I was going to do this. I'm not a fundraiser, I'm an artist. I am not a person who is comfortable asking for help, much less large sums of money, so the prospect of raising money was daunting.

And then I discovered that the deadline to sponsor a horse had just passed.

Rainbo remembered

It's been 13 years since they closed the Rainbo Skating Rink at 4812 N. Clark St., but the memories are still fresh for folks like Cale Carvell, Donna Arndt, Jimmy Nerd and Ang 13.

These and others shared those memories at an April 23 reunion of sorts at the Sulzer Library, 4455 N. Lincoln Ave.

For Carvell, the memories were especially close to home. After all, he was practically raised here after his parents bought the onetime nightclub in 1956 and converted it into an ice skating rink. "They also had bowling lanes, but what really made the Rainbo famous was wrestling," said Carvell, who started running the sports shop once he was old enough.

Incidentally, the Chicago Blackhawks used this as their practice rink (including the year they won the 1961 Stanley Cup).

"I had the run of the place as long as I stayed in the building," Carvell said. "When they closed the building down, we discovered sewer tunnels underneath Clark Street. If I wanted to, I could walk through them to the cemetery or Lawrence avenue."

But Carvell admitted he never did, maybe because he was afraid of what he might find in the cemetery.

He later learned he wouldn't have had to go even that far to stumble on the macabre.

In 2002, when the building was being torn down, workers found two bags of still-unidentified human bones and two pairs of gym shoes dating from the building's Kinetic Playground days. "Back when all the rock stars were there," Carvell recalled.

Not surprisingly, "I found an awful lot of illicit substances," he said. "It was like stepping back into another era when they had the big bands."

The Rainbo, in fact, may be one of the North Side's most recycled buildings. It was originally built for jai-alai (a game played with large, curved wicker baskets) games but soon closed when they started cracking down on gambling, Carvell said. Soon afterward, Frank Mann — who had served in the recently-ended World War I with the Rainbow division in France, opened what he boasted would be the country's biggest nightclub with table seating for

"Dewey, Cheatem and Howe" — our Lakefront power play

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

"Emanuel is attempting a last-ditch legal maneuver."

Last week this headline was e-mailed across the city on the Sun-Times website.

In any other city people might think the mayor may be trying to get a stay of execution for a death row inmate. But no, Rahm's just trying to bully folks on the George Lucas Star Wars Museum.

Holy smokes. Makes you want to run somewhere and hide under a bed. Mellody Hobson (Mrs. George Lucas) unplugged. The Chicago financier, philanthropist, power-couple partner, friendly lunch person from RL, is ranting. She is furious.

Friends of the Parks, she says, are stopping progress. They are holding the city for ransom. The unsophisticated rubes just do not understand what the Lucas Museum could actually mean for Chicago and the nation. You know, the untold numbers of children who want to grow up to work in films with special effects.

But apparently, some citizens of the city actually believe in our Republic. And feel that our democracy is actually working. Friends of the Parks, it seems, take their mandate seriously - "Forever open, clear and free." Those words of Daniel Burnham have been the battle cry throughout our urban history.

Mellody Hobson does not think this applies to her and George.

Translated for non-Chicagoans that means hands off public lakefront lands, no matter how beautiful you think it is. No matter how big you think you are. No matter how much money you have made. The lands along the lakefront belong to the public and no one shall usurp them.

Mellody Hobson says she is only thinking of all the little "black and brown children" who will be deprived of a further Star Wars education if the Lucas Museum is not built in Chicago on this lakefront spot.

She is furious that the Friends of the Parks who now say they will present a legal challenge on the latest museum location on the lakefront at McCormick Place. Hobson says that their family is looking for a new zip code outside Chicago. Hence Rahm's "last-ditch efforts."

Mayor Emanuel must have sweet-talked the couple. They did not expect this. Yikes! Mayor Emanuel not being able to deliver the goods. What a shock. Time for one of his last-ditch efforts.

George Lucas and Mellody Hobson at odds with legal rulings on use of public lands for their new museum.

Well maybe now if he could just try to stop the gun-murders on the weekends and keep the schools open.

How could anyone look other people in the face after such histrionics as Mrs. Lucas'? How could they ask Chicagoans and the people of Illinois to pick up the $1.2 billion tab on this? How could you allow yourself to appear to be bamboozling the public and hoodwinking them of their precious patrimony - lakefront parkland?

Former Mayor Richard M. Daley may have had his faults, but he would never allow himself to be perceived as being so carelessly connected to bamboozling and hoodwinking. Children on the streets of Bridgeport learn such lessons early. Daley's father, Mayor Richard J. Daley would be ashamed by such political stupidity. But not Mayor Emanuel. He knows the impact of a "last-ditch effort."

The Lucas Museum has been ruled a private, not a public, endeavor like any other commercial enterprise.

Friends of the Parks lowered the boom in court. A sympathetic judge agreed that a 99-year lease is surrendering control of public land (land for the public trust), is not for the good of the public, but for the good of Lucas' "private or commercial interests." Hence the second offer of land further south at the McCormick Place site. And now that this promises some massive further legal challenge, George and Mellody grow frightened that its all over.

No cocktail parties for their friends on a balmy night at their namesake museum with the stunning view. No place for future fundraising events for Mayor Emanuel as he pursues a future outside Chicago. No incredible palace for Lucas to bring all his Hollywood buddies to for opining about special effects and war stories with Darth Vader.

I like to think that the ghost of catalog king A. Montgomery much intact. I am certain he cheers on the work that Friends of the Parks are committed to, no matter what charges are hurled at them by the likes of the Mayor and Lucas Family.

At Chicago's door step is really too much beauty. Too much nature. Too much Prairie grandeur to take in. But it is God's gift to us to share and tend and revere. We are obliged to keep it safe and protected from the guiles of the greedy and the thoughtlessness of ecological barbarians. The gift must be preserved and harmoniously "forever open, clear and free."

Upon arrival at the theatre, audience members will be given a playbill that includes questions they'll be asked to answer after the performance and turn in prior to leaving.

"The questions seek feedback on the story, script and characters, including the good, the bad and the ugly," said Cohen. "This feedback is critical to the pilot's development and the editing process. In the words of iO writing teacher, TV writer Michael McCarthy, 'the staged reading doesn't signify the completion of a script, but rather the second to last link in the chain that will take into account the audience's reaction to the work.'"

Besides all that, the night will be just good fun, said Cohen.

"With a cast of comedic actors and a live audience, these staged readings give writers a chance to see their work come to life, actors a chance to put their own mark on the roles while assisting with character development and the audience a chance to play an integral role in the creative process,

Apartment deals on the horizon downtown despite expected tax hikes

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

Chicago's apartment dwellers should find some rental deals downtown this spring despite the gloomy forecast for higher rents this year.

However, analysts say owners of smaller North Side properties likely will be forced to pass along hefty rent hikes because they are anticipating extraordinary real estate tax increases when the second installment of the property tax bill arrives in August.

And, "Ma and Pa" landlords who own 2-flat to 4-flat buildings also will feel the sting of the new garbage collection fees, which will add hundreds of dollars to their operating costs.

Higher property taxes and fees are needed to help the city raise $588 million in new revenue to pay for pensions of teachers, police and firefighters, according to Mayor Rahm Emanuel.

If there is one ray of sunshine in the city's rental market, experts say it may be the glut of new apartment buildings such hot downtown neighborhoods as the Loop, West Loop, South Loop, River North, Streeterville, Gold Coast and Near North Side.

Appraisal Research Counselors reports that 16 new rental high-rises containing a total of 5,759 units are under construction downtown and scheduled for delivery in 2016 and 2017. The majority of the new 2016 units are expected to hit the market this summer.

Eight additional buildings are currently in the active lease-up stage. They include: the 509-unit Wolf Point West, the 469-unit 1000 S. Clark St., the 398-unit 340 E. North Water, and the 362-unit 845 N. State St.

"We are projecting another nine buildings with about 2,183 units to start construction during the first half of 2016 with 2017 delivery dates," said Ron DeVries, vice president of Appraisal Research.

While the prospect of rising real estate taxes downtown is a major issue for developers, Appraisal Research noted that wealthy owners are counting on lowering assessment levels through aggressive Board of Review appeals by their lawyers, and lower final levels are expected.

As a result of the huge supply of new apartments and all the competition, rents in new downtown Class A and luxury buildings have been nearly flat—up only 1.42% over a year ago—on occupancy of 93.5%.

Average net rents in luxury downtown apartment buildings at the start of 2016 were $2.97 per square foot, while Class A buildings posted an average net rent of $2.81 per square foot.

However, elite new buildings are posting significantly higher net rents. For example, the 153-unit Walton on the Park on the Gold Coast has net rent of $3.79 per square foot, while 845 N. State St. is netting $3.68 per square foot, and Wolf Point West is at $3.53 per square foot.

In addition, about half of the new buildings in the lease-up stage are offering rental concessions, or deals.

"We have seen an increasing frequency of free rent being offered on top of revenue management quoted rents," DeVries said. "Through revenue management vacant units are continually repriced up or down to reflect daily demand, particularly in new luxury buildings."

Besides a month's free rent on selected apartments or all units, downtown concessions also can include gift cards, and waiving or reducing move-in fees, or application fees.

Alderman addresses Home Sharing Ordinance

Urges colleagues to consider negative impact of short-term rentals

BY ALD. MICHELE SMITH
Special to Inside

Chicago needs a wake-up call to avoid the headaches experienced by cities around the world due to under regulated short-term rentals (STR), or vacation rentals. I'd point out that Berlin, Germany, moved last week to stop vacation rentals from destroying the traditional rental market for residents. I predict we're headed for the same problems that are surfacing around the world if we don't get a handle on this $25B a year industry.

I am urging City Council not to vote at the May 18th Council meeting to allow short term rentals without adding significant controls to a pending ordinance. I believe that lax oversight can lead to squeezing out traditional renters, disrupting full-time residents, and threatening property values.

The proposed ordinance allows up to six vacation rentals in a building, but an unlimited number on a street or block. In addition to Berlin, San Francisco, New Orleans and Barcelona, as well as many cities around the globe, are racing to enact controls on exploding Airbnb-type rentals. Some cities have taken further steps than others when it comes to enacting stricter laws.

In London, residents can rent out their units for up to three months, but year-round vacation rentals are prohibited. In New York, leases under 30 days are illegal, and in Paris, owners of short term rentals must keep an equivalent long-term rental property available. Austin, Texas, has a moratorium on new non-owner vacation rentals until 2017, and is phasing out all non-owner vacation rentals by 2022.

I insist that the quality of life of residents must be protected and cite neighbors in the Gold Coast who have tried for over a year to get rid of an illegal short-term rental and complain that their block has been turned into a constant party zone.

I fear that the availability of Lincoln Park rentals, which currently have a two percent vacancy rate, would be further diminished by an influx of additional short-term rentals. Citywide, the number of Airbnb listings has increased by more than 100% every year since 2009.

Chicago has a real opportunity to heed the lessons learned around the world and not make the same mistakes. To be a World Class City we need to act like one and devise smart regulations that come with being a major tourist destination.

North Side author pens two paranormal mystery thrillers

BY SHEILA SWANN

Chicago has a new mystery writer in its midst. Lincoln Park resident Jan Joseph has written two paranormal mystery thrillers that take place in Chicago.

"Vanished: The Search for Sally Hunt," published in the Fall of 2014, involves an abducted psychic mystery writer and the Chicago Police detectives that go on the hunt to find her. Her second book, "Lost Boy," which has just been freshly published, centers on a boy abducted from his home in Lincoln Park.

Joseph has a real knack for grabbing your attention from the first page. She lets you in on the detective's work, the world of genuine psychics and sprinkles in Chicago locations that really give a Chicago reader a sense of place.

Recently I had a chance to interview Joseph to learn more about her work and here is what we discussed:

SS: How did you create your characters?

JJ: Every author has a cadre of people they draw on to create their characters; sometimes they are amalgams of people you know or have had encounters with during your life. I love to people-watch and sometimes you see someone who fascinates you by something they do or the way they interact and you sort of store that away to bring it forward when you develop the characters in a book.

SS: Was there a point of inspiration for writing "Vanished: The Search for Sally Hunt"?

JJ: It came from an experience I had in the 1990s. The first was a botched surgery for a calcified cyst; it left me with a hole in my chest about the size of a walnut. I was seeing a foreign-trained physician who suggested that I use bio-feedback techniques to close the wound; she sent me to see someone who could teach me this, an old woman in the back of a dry cleaners. The old woman was foreign born and told me that you could heal yourself, just with your mind. She told me to look at the wound every night before I went to bed and then place my hand above it and tell myself to heal. I don't know if it worked or if my body just healed myself, but I ended up with only a small scar.

When I was developing the character Sally, I thought what if you could heal people with a touch; what would you do? Think what a powerful skill that is, it could propel someone to fame and fortune or drive them crazy. But how neat would it be to be able to take pain away from someone just by touching them. Would you use it for the good of mankind?

SS: The whole time I was reading "Vanished" I wondered where in Chicago that warehouse was that Sally was held hostage in?

JJ: I would say in either the northwest or southwest sides of the City. If you drive through these areas, along Northwest Highway and the expressways, you often see these old factories that are just sitting there, surrounded by junk, and you know that at one time they were vital workplaces for past generations.

SS: How long did it take to write the book?

JJ: The book was written in 2001, over a two day period when I was stranded in Lake Geneva, WI. It was the weekend after 9/11 and the world seemed deserted; some of the shops were closed, no one felt like doing anything and so I got two yellow lined legal pads and some pencils and sat on the balcony of my hotel room and wrote the story out longhand.

Actually showing anyone the book, took me three years. I showed the book to my friend, actor Randy Steinmeyer, who gave it a thumbs-up and we both sort of forgot about it. Then Randy introduced me to Michael Argetsinger, a great author. Michael said he would read the book to give me his opinion, and a few days later we met and he did the first edit. He was a great mentor and helped me with my second book, "Lost Boy," too. Michael passed away in July 2015, I will never be able to thank him enough; he was a great friend and writer.

SS: Did you have to do a lot of research for the book's characters?

JJ: Not really, as a work of fiction it's pretty much just that - fiction. I did consult several physician friends to help me with terminology and the hospital situations to make sure I wasn't using them incorrectly. I think the question that I ask myself is why I made my character Carmella so darn old? She'd be a great character to bring back in future novels.

SS: "Lost Boy" is about a parent's worst nightmare. Do any characters from your first book show up in that?

JJ: "Lost Boy" takes place in Chicago and involves CPD detective Jane Peters and psychic Susan Nelson (from "Vanished"), but is about a 10-year-old boy who gets kidnapped from a very tightly knit, and a little off-kilter family.

The book was an offshoot of a romance novel I wrote in the summer of 2013. Right now I'm editing it, it's way too long for publication. It concerned a woman who is basically a nerd, who fails at every relationship (me in other words), who meets another romantic failure through two senior citizens (her best friend and his father) and how they meet and fall in love. In part, the book was me writing out my frustrations. "Lost Boy" evolved from that book, the characters literally haunted me, it was like their story wasn't done and they wanted a life, so I gave it to them.

I think "Lost Boy" summarizes what happened in the interim between falling in love and moving and growing into a family. They get Max through a fluke when it's reported to Ohio Family Services that he's come to school dirty and bruised. They do a paternity test and Jeff is the father. They adjust their lives to make room for his son. When he's kidnapped, they do what they do best, circle their wagons and work diligently to go on.

SS: What was the inspiration for this new book?

JJ: My friend, Michael (Argetsinger)... for helping to write myself out of corners. Michael worked with me on the first book as he suffered through reading my first romance novel as he edited it. His said I didn't get into the story fast enough and I needed to get the reader's interest. So when I wrote "Lost Boy," he said it was on the mark. Unfortunately, Michael didn't get to see the published version before he died. The book itself didn't take long to write once I laid out the story line; probably around eight weeks. However, right after that, I was diagnosed with breast cancer and so that took top priority and stalled even the publication of "Vanished," because I worked between treatments.

This new book is a very fast-paced book. Its cast of characters are interesting and the plot twists and turns to keep the reader involved.

SS: I'm sorry to hear that, are you ok now?

JJ: Yes. The tumor was caught very early because of a cat who wouldn't stop banging into my chest. He basically saved my life since the tumor did not show up on any mammograms. So after chemo and radiation, I began reconstruction. Over the past three years I've had six surgeries, I was beginning to feel like the Dan Ryan - always under construction! But thanks to a lot of great doctors, and one determined little cat, I'm here to laugh about it.

SS: I'm so glad that you're better now. Speaking of the Dan Ryan, it's so great to read a book that takes place in Chicago - was that fun for you, too?

JJ: I love Chicago. It's home, it's comfortable and has enough oddities in the neighborhoods and quirky people that make it fun. I love the RANCH Triangle area of the City, it is one of the City's gems.

"Vanished: The Search for Sally Hunt" and "Lost Boy" are available on the Barnes and Noble and Amazon websites in print and e-book versions.

A couple of months later it was announced that there would be another parade of horses in 2015, so I approached a family foundation about being my sponsor. They said “yes” and sent the check. This newspaper had also donated money to my cause.

Officer Bailey was approached by at least two men who tried to steal his Buick.

Shots were exchanged, Officer Bailey was hit and paid the ultimate sacrifice, the murderers fled the scene.

Excitedly, I called the HOH project manager and found out that the 2015 sponsorship cost had increased. Another road block.

I had been close to completely giving up the idea of painting one of these horses, but deep inside, I couldn't let it go. I just had to do this.

A couple of months later, in a moment of inspiration I contacted Dave Krug, the owner of the Guesthouse Hotel, about being one of my sponsors. Thankfully he said, “yes.”

Not only did the Guesthouse Hotel become one of my sponsors, but also graciously loaned a garage space to paint the horse in. It took nine months from the first time I had learned about these painted horses until I had actually raised the money, filled out the paperwork and found a space to paint the horse. This was my baby.

The blank white horse arrived at the hotel on the morning of June 1. He was beautiful. I sanded him and painted on a coat of primer that Dan O'Donnell from Armitage Hardware had donated.

On that same day I also picked the officer I would honor.

Michael R. Bailey, a 20-year veteran, had been shot and killed outside his home on July 18, 2010. After an overnight shift guarding Mayor Richard Daley's house, Officer Bailey had gone home at 6 a.m. to wash a new Buick that he had gotten for himself in honor of his retirement, which was less than one month away.

Officer Bailey was approached by at least two men who tried to steal his Buick. Shots were exchanged, Officer Bailey was hit and paid the ultimate sacrifice, the murderers fled the scene.

I thought of Officer Bailey often while I painted the horse. I had read about his service as a police officer in Chicago and his service in the Air Force, that he had been a firefighter at a Glenview Naval Air Station and a police officer in Washington, DC. At his funeral they said he was a “Gentle Giant,” but I would often catch myself wondering if Officer Bailey had a good sense of humor.

I wondered, if I had ever met him, would he and I get along and have some good laughs?

I will never know.

What I do know is what it feels like to have a loved one murdered. One of my favorite aunts was murdered in November of 2001.

The man that murdered her was caught a few days after he killed her, but in those few excruciating days before they caught him, I learned what anguish it is to not know what happened. And I know how tragic it is to lose someone that has not died by natural causes. It is simply devastating. And that

The 13-point lightning bolt on the horse's face signifies enlightenment and transformation.

While putting the paintbrush to the horse, I also thought of other people in my life that I had lost. My mom, in particular. She would have been as excited as I was about painting the horse.

Some HOH horses are painted with a bold theme, or stripes, or portraits, I decided to paint a “space horse.” I wanted to paint him something that people wouldn't get tired of looking at.

Plus, I felt that the image of space, with its stars and nebulas, was akin to the soul. After someone dies, I always think that they're out in the universe, somewhere. As the lyrics of “Woodstock” say, “We are stardust, we are golden.”

It took three weeks to paint “Bailey.” I was in my element and having the time of my life. Sometimes my dog, Charlie, was with me, but often times not, as it took all my concentration to not fall off the step stool as I got lost in the painting.

The hotel garage was a perfect place to paint him. I would meet hotel guests from all over the country as they passed by the open garage. They would ask what I was doing and I'd tell them about the Police Memorial Fund, the HOH project and Officer Bailey. One woman even got teary-eyed and said, “bless you.”

I even made a friend in one of the guests. My dog, too, as Laura always gave him a treat when she saw him.

“Bailey” was picked up from the hotel and did his tour of duty on Michigan Ave. during the month of August. I visited him several times and frequently stood back and watched people react to seeing him and reading about Officer Bailey. He looked smart and noble standing guard over the boulevard and I admit to being filled with pride.

I was hoping that all of the horses would have been placed on the Mag Mile in early July, as many of the Deadheads that had converged on Chicago for the July Grateful Dead concerts would have easily recognized the 13-point lightning bolt on my horse's face, which signifies enlightenment and transformation and that would have made them all smile.

Alas, that was not to be. But something else just as good, if not better, happened. The Guesthouse Hotel purchased “Bailey” and he now stands proudly on Clark St., guarding the hotel and greeting passersby. Stop by and visit him if you're in the neighborhood and remember those police officers throughout Chicago history who died in the line of duty and also say a prayer for those officers out there today who put their lives on the line for us.

You can take your picture with him and you can pet him, but please, don't climb on him. “Bailey” is a gentle giant, too.

2,000 patrons, enough dance floor space for 1,500, and a revolving state for nonstop performances. It was called Mann's Million Dollar Rainbo Room.

Bank robber John Dillinger had his last birthday party at the Rainbo exactly a month before being gunned down by G-men.

When the original Kinetic Playground opened in 1968 at 4812 N. Clark St., it became one of the most important musical venues in the city, hosting acts such as Jimi Hendrix, The Grateful Dead, Frank Zappa and the Mothers of Invention, Pink Floyd, Janis Joplin, Muddy Waters and The Who. It suffered substantial damage in a fire on November 8, 1969 and never re-opened.

Donna Arndt started working at the Rainbo when it was converted to a skate rink in 1980 and stayed until it was sold to the United Skates of America.

“Think disco. It was a pleasure and an honor to be there,” Arndt recalled. “They (management) never made you feel like a number. They made you feel like a family member.”

“Ang 13,” an emcee who worked at the Rainbo back in the 1990s, recalled how a lot of people coming to the Rainbo were graffiti writers. “So what the management did was convert a back room for graffiti and they didn't have any more problems,” Ang 13 said.

“Nobody vandalized the place.” Although it was a skating rink, it wasn't just about skating, but a good place to meet people, said

“This was always about family, run by family. We didn't even have a bar when this was a skating rink. We were pretty old school. Played “Skaters Waltz” on Saturday nights,” said Cale Carvell, whose parents owned the Rainbo from 1956 until 1980.

“Jimmy Nerd,” who started going to the Rainbo in the late '80s where he was introduced to graffiti art and hip-hop culture.

“Even when the neighborhood was kind of violent and I got chased on my way there (the Rainbo) a few times, I felt safe when I got there,” he said.

“I think our elected officials really dropped the ball by not saving this place,” said Andy Pierce, a former Lerner Newspapers reporter who “saw this as a place that needed to be saved. People needed a safe place to recreate. Society needs employment and housing, but it also needs places like this.”

The one consolation, he added, is that a lot of Rainbo memorabilia will be in a permanent collection at the Sulzer Library.

50-mile police chase zooms through North Side, ends with suspect's escape, no arrests

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

A man who led officers from three police agencies on an hour-long, 50-mile chase through the suburbs and Chicago's North and West Side neighborhoods remains at large, wanted for questioning in a "drug-induced homicide" case, authorities said.

Police in west suburban Lombard found a drug overdose victim at 2:30 p.m. on May 4 and quickly identified a person of interest in the case.

Lombard officers attempted to curb the suspect in a traffic stop later that evening, but the man refused to stop, beginning an epic pursuit that followed the Eisenhower Expressway into the Loop.

Once downtown, Lombard police ended their involvement and Chicago officers joined Illinois State Police (ISP) units as the chase sped north on Lake Shore Dr. at speeds nearing 80 miles per hour before exiting the Drive at Lawrence and heading north on Clark St., eventually moving back south on Ashland Ave., trailed by three helicopters.

An ISP unit collided with the suspect's vehicle near Ashland and Berteau, causing another motorist to veer off off Ashland and crash through the window of Aracelia Rodriguez's garden apartment.

"When I heard that bam, I came out of the room and I saw that car and I said 'what the hell happened here'," Rodriguez told ABC7 News.

No one in the apartment was injured, but three people involved in the crash were treated for minor injuries at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical center.

Earlier, two Chicago police officers suffered minor injuries during the chase when their vehicle crashed near Leavitt and Congress Pkwy.

Chicago police ended their involvement as the chase neared the Pilsen neighborhood at 10:25 p.m., the department said. The last ISP unit broke from the chase five minutes later near Roosevelt and Ashland.

The suspect's vehicle was found abandoned in Bensenville on Thursday, police said.

Questions Raised

Second-guessing and clarifications were abundant on the morning after the pursuit as questions were raised about police chase policy and Lombard officials tried to set the record straight about exactly what the man was wanted for.

The "homicide" case was actually a heroin overdose, the public was told.

"The technical term is a drug-induced homicide, so I'm sure as it was passed along to radio channels through any other means of communication, it might have come out as a homicide suspect," Lombard Police Lt. Cyndy Velazquez told a reporter.

Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel pointed out that the crash at Ashland and Berteau is near his family's home.

"There's a real question [about the decision to chase the suspect]. This always gets evaluated when there's a police chase... There will be people that look at that."

No charges had been filed in the overdose or the pursuit as of Saturday night, DuPage County court records showed.

Water tower benefit May 27

Visitors to the Swedish American Museum often ask what happened to the historic blue-and-yellow water tank that had been a symbol of Andersonville since 1927.

After severe winter damage, the tank had to be removed from the museum roof in March 2014.

In the two years since then, fundraising events and donations from individuals and businesses have generated $120,000, nearing the tank replacement goal of $150,000.

A special event in support of the project is scheduled later this month.

"Cocktails on Clark" will take place 7-9 p.m. Friday, May 27, on the second floor of Brimfield, 5219 N. Clark St., a few doors north of the museum. Tickets are $53.74 per person.

In addition to live music performed by the VandaBobs, small bites will be provided by MyPrivateChef, Giordano's and Lady Gregory. Complimentary cocktails are offered, courtesy of Stolen and In Fine Spirits.

"It's always a good experience to receive recognition from a jury made up of peers," said Baugher. "In some respects I am just beginning my career as an artist. I have been painting since 2001, but my focus until 2014-15 has been on my graphic design and I have just begun doing those things necessary to gain recognition as an artist.

"This award is encouraging," said Baugher. "The awarded piece, Bluestream, was one of 25 paintings in my series Ovation -- all about eggs, and beginnings -- that exhibited at the Old Town Triangle Gallery."

Exhibit celebrates history of Edgewater Beach Hotel

A new Edgewater Historical Society exhibit celebrates the 100th anniversary of the opening of the Edgewater Beach Hotel on the shores of Lake Michigan in Edgewater.

The exhibit will open at noon June 4 with a reception at the Edgewater Historical Society and Museum, 5358 N. Ashland Ave.

Exhibit materials also will be shown at The Breakers at Edgewater Beach, 5333 N. Sheridan Rd., the Edgewater Beach Apartments, 5555 N. Sheridan Rd., and various other Edgewater community businesses.

The Edgewater Beach Hotel opened in Edgewater in 1916 in a building designed by Benjamin Marshall and Charles Fox, who owned the hotel with John Corbett and John Connery. It was managed by William Dewey 1916-1952. An addition was built in 1923.

At one time the site included a small golf course, tennis courts, gardens and a playground for children. Radio broadcasts were held featuring dance band music from the Marine dining room.

In 1937 the hotel changed the upper rooms to apartments, offering accommodations for 50 years until it was torn down in 1970.

Among the items featured in the exhibit will be construction photos, floor plans, interior and exterior photos over the 50 years of operations, photos of the staff and the original founders, postcards, a listing of the entertainers who performed there and photos of the demolition.

Artifacts on display include souvenir items, Chinaware, table settings and other custom items made for the hotel.

The exhibit at the museum will be available 1-4 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays until June 2017. A number of special events and speakers will be presented over the year, and announcements will be sent for each one.

For further information call 773-506-4849.

Letter to the Editor

Go West mayor, go West

Mayor Rahm Emanuel, As a citizen and resident in a historic area of Ravenswood you, of all people, should appreciate the need to save and protect our lakefront from development. Honor the legacy of Montgomery Ward and Daniel Burnham. Let the Lucas Museum go west! Keep our lakefront open and free for all citizens and visitors.

If you really want the Lucas Museum in Chicago, then give them a city block somewhere west of, say, Ashland Ave. With a museum built on some unused industrial site west of Ashland or south of 63rd, then it will work as a catalyst and anchor for unrestrained development. With a museum on the West or Southwest sides, then the surrounding area can be used by developers to construct motels, restaurants and other associated money-making tax producing activities. The area can become a Chicago version of a Disneyland or Branson, Missouri.

Just keep it away from the lakefront.

Honor the 50th anniversary of Lyndon Johnson's signing of the Historic Preservation act in 1966. If you advocate for a museum on the far West or South sides, away from the lakefront, then you will also avoid the label of "cultural vandal."

Do the right thing, let the museum go West.

Peter Donalek

Police Beat.....

Lakeview man stabbed by co-worker

A 28-year-old man is in critical condition after suffering multiple stab wounds in a Lakeview East apartment. The assailant, Christopher Holmes, 25, is in police custody.

Officers were called to a third-floor apartment in the 500 block of W. Aldine after receiving reports of a man being stabbed in the back by a neighbor 1 a.m. Monday morning.

Upon arrival, police found the victim bleeding severely after being stabbed in the back, legs, thighs, and arms. He was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center.

Holmes was arrested Tuesday and charged after being positively identified as the person who stabbed a 28-year-old man on Monday. Holmes and the victim were in an apartment consuming alcohol when they began to argue.

This newspaper has learned through a source that the two men are co-workers at a popular casual dining restaurant.

Handgun found during Wrigleyville traffic stop, say police

Police say they recovered a loaded handgun during a routine traffic stop outside of Wrigley Field and the vehicle's driver now faces weapons and other charges.

Anthony Coleman

Anthony Coleman, 23, of Kenwood, was pulled over in the 3600 block of N. Sheffield around 1 a.m., May 4 for traffic violations, police said.

When officers asked Coleman if he had any weapons in the vehicle, he allegedly responded, "Yes. Underneath the passenger seat."

A .40-caliber Glock semi-automatic blue steel handgun loaded with 15 rounds was recovered from the vehicle's floorboard, prosecutors said.

Coleman told officers that he did not have a concealed carry license, but that he was "in the process" of getting one, police said.

He's charged with aggravated unlawful use of a weapon, pot possession, and various traffic violations. His bail is set at $50,000.

Kidnapped woman jumps from moving car, escapes sexual assault, police say second case eyed

Chicago police are warning about a kidnapping and attempted criminal sexual assault as well as a separate attempted kidnapping in the Irving Park and Lincoln Square neighborhoods this week. The cases have not been publicly linked, but the crimes bear strong resemblances.

Tuesday's victim was abducted at a CTA bus stop, police said.

One victim bailed out of the offenders' car while it was moving near Cullom and Western when one of the men tried to sexually assault her in the back seat Tuesday morning, police said.

That victim was standing at a bus stop in the 3400 block of W. Montrose around 6:15 a.m. when two men in a silver sedan pulled into a nearby parking lot and tried to lure the woman into their car. When she refused, the men approached her on foot, took her by the hand and put her in the vehicle's back seat.

One offender drove the vehicle while the other sat in the back seat with the victim, police said. Moments later, the man in the back seat attempted to rape the woman while the vehicle was in motion. The woman fought the man off and jumped from the car while it was moving in traffic, police said.

She was treated for her injuries at Swedish Covenant Hospital.

The attackers are described as two male Hispanics in their mid-20's to early 30's. One was 5'10" to 6'2" tall, 180 lbs., with a shag hair style. The other was younger, stood about 5'6" tall, and weighed about 155 lbs.

The abduction was captured on a Chicago Police Dept. pod camera, a source said.

Lakeview fire displaces 2, suspect arrested

Arson charges have been filed against a Lincoln Park man in connection with a fire that displaced two residents from their home in the 900 block of W. Belmont at 2 p.m. on May 7.

Bobby Idaka, 54, has been charged with one count of residential arson for setting fire to a dumpster and furniture that was lying in an alley behind the Belmont Army retail store. The fire quickly spread to a nearby coach house. No one was injured, but two people who lived in the home were forced to find other housing. One of the victims relies on a wheelchair.

Idaka was arrested on the day after the fire outside of the Elks Veterans Memorial at Diversey and Sheridan, police said. He has an extensive arrest record dating back to the early 1990s. Idaka lists a church in the 600 block of W. Deming as his home.

Second incident

On Thursday, a woman fled into a Lincoln Square Starbucks after an unknown man tried to force her into his car near Wilson and Lincoln around 5:10 p.m., according to a police source.

The offender parked a red four-door Nissan, got out, and grabbed the woman by the arm in an attempt to make her go with him. The woman struck the man and fled into the coffee shop, the source said.

This attacker is also described as a Hispanic man. He's 30-38 years-old, stands 5'7" tall, and weighs about 200 lbs.

Investigators are asking for the public's help in solving these crimes. Detectives may be reached at 312-744-8261.

The case number for the first incident is HZ249279. The second incident is case HZ252664.

Financial advisor admits steering clients into phony investments and pocketing cash

A Chicago-based financial advisor pleaded guilty in federal court last week to pocketing her clients' money after counseling them to purchase phony securities.

Delores J. Mosier, admitted in court that she advised her clients to invest in bogus debt securities purportedly called "Chicago Anticipatory Notes." Mosier falsely represented that the notes were issued by the City of Chicago and would earn annual interest of seven percent or higher, according to her plea. The securities did not exist, and Mosier pocketed the investment money. The suit contends that Mosier fraudulently obtained more than $4.2 million from at least nine victims.

Mosier, 72, pleaded guilty to one count of mail fraud. The conviction carries a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison and a maximum fine of $250,000.

Mosier operated Chicago-based D.J. Mosier and Associates Inc. According to her plea, Mosier told her clients to make their investment checks payable to "Chicago Anticipatory Note," knowing that she had opened a bank account in her name that was titled "CAN."

Mosier deposited the clients' checks into the account and used the money for her own benefit, including purchasing household expenses and making mortgage payments.

Mosier concealed the scheme by using some of the money to make purported interest payments to other victims who had also purchased the fictitious notes. She tried to make the scam appear legitimate by providing the victims with fraudulent documents that she created, including fake disclosure statements, phony quarterly interest statements, and bogus balance statements.

Cab disagreement ends with three arrested, one tazed in Wrigleyville

Chicago police assigned to a patrol Wrigleyville after the May 1 Cubs game say they came upon a cab disturbance in the 3400 block of N. Clark St. that escalated so far, they had to zap one man with a Taser and three people were arrested.

Officers say they asked three passengers to exit the cab, but one of them, Kyle Weber, refused. The other two intervened and tried to prevent Weber from being arrested, court records say.

Police zapped Weber with a Taser after he "continued to disobey... pulled away and stiffened up" to prevent being arrested, according to a police report.

Weber, 29, of Norwood Park, is charged with resisting police and criminal trespass to vehicle.

Weber's friend, 24-year-old John Bryne of Brooklyn, NY, is charged with aggravated battery of a police officer and resisting police for allegedly interfering with Weber's arrest and pushing a cop who was trying to get Weber out of the cab.

While that was going down, police say, Courtney Weber, 27, tried to block officers from making the arrest while telling the male cops, "you can't touch me or arrest me because I am a female." Weber quickly learned that she was mistaken. Weber of Edison Park is charged with obstructing police.

Robbers beat victim, put gun in his mouth

Two offenders punched a man in the face and placed a silver handgun in his mouth during a robbery in the heart of Lakeview East.

The victim told police that he was walking from Halsted to Broadway on Roscoe St. when the robbery took place around 2:05 a.m., May 6. It was at least the 56th robbery in the entertainment area that centers around Wrigley Field and the neighboring Boystown bar district.

Both offenders fled toward Halsted St. after the crime.

The gunman is described as a male white wearing a gray hoodie and hat. The second offender is described only as a male black. No one is in custody.

Two other robberies were reported in Wrigleyville in the days before the May 6 attack.

On April 30, a woman reported being robbed near her home by three men at 10:45 p.m. She told police that the three attacked her near Newport and Racine, then fled with her laptop and purse.

All three men were last seen running southbound on Racine, according to a witness.

The three offenders are described as male blacks with slim builds who stand about 6' tall. Two wore dark hoodies and one wore a gray hoodie.

That same day, a Wrigleyville man was punched in the face and robbed in the 1000 block of W. Grace as he walked near his home around 3:30 a.m. He described the offender as a 29-year-old male Hispanic who stands about 6'2" tall. The offender was last seen running northbound on Kenmore from Grace.

Hospital sued over knee injury when tossing patient out

An individual alleges that Advocate Illinois Masonic Hospital's employees used excessive force in attempting to remove him from the facility.

Jean Saintilus filed a complaint on April 6 in the Cook County Circuit Court against Advocate North Side Health Network, citing alleged assault, battery, excessive force and negligence.

According to the complaint, the plaintiff alleges that on Feb. 4, he was at the defendant's facility for treatment for anemia. The plaintiff holds Advocate North Side Health Network responsible because the defendant's employees allegedly used excessive force when asking plaintiff to leave the hospital before he was discharged by a physician, causing injuries to plaintiff. He alleges that he suffered personal injuries as a result being thrown to the ground and being struck on the knee.

Gold Coast teen charged in DePaul U. dorm thefts

Prosecutors say a second person was involved in some of the thefts from dorm rooms on DePaul University's Lincoln Park campus in March.

As this newspaper previously reported, DePaul student Dillon Barrett-Rao, 19, is already charged with two counts of burglary and one count of theft in the cases.

Now, 18-year-old Maksymillian Fraszka of the 1300 block of N. Astor in the Gold Coast is charged with two counts of theft after allegedly making incriminating statements during a police interview.

A Chicago police detective said Fraszka admitted to being with Barrett-Rao when items were taken from two DePaul victims' rooms, according to court filings.

The two victims reported more than $3,000 in losses from the alleged burglaries, including a MacBook, an iPad Mini, other electronics and designer shoes.

Fraszka is listed as a Lincoln Park High School student in police records.

Maksymillian Fraszka

Lakeview prowler tells police he "fell" into apartment

Tactical officers responding to a suspicious person call arrived just in time to see a man peering into an apartment window in the 3100 block of N. Clifton on April 27. The suspect fled, but cops eventually found him hiding in a nearby yard.

After telling cops that he saw a $20 bill inside a basement apartment and subsequently "fell into" the window, 31-year-old Joshua Davis was charged with attempted burglary and trespassing, according to court records.

Bail for Davis, who lists a church in the 600 block of W. Deming as his home, is set at $100,000.

• Meanwhile, 32-year-old Vincente Canibano of the 3700 block of N. Damen in North Center is charged with possessing burglary tools, theft of lost or mislaid property, and two counts of trespassing after police arrested him in the 1400 block of W. Addison on April 20.

Officers responding to reports of a suspicious person in the area saw Canibano hiding behind a garage and peeking into yards, court records say. Canibano "made direct eye contact with [officers] and fled" with a bicycle, backpack, and bottle of wine, according to the police report. He was quickly apprehended.

Police said Canibano was unable to explain how he came to possess the bicycle and he "freely admitted" to having a pair of bolt cutters in his backpack.

child taking that test to exposure to exhaust fumes, which got him a reprimand.

Predictably, the powers-that-be struck even harder after he ignored a warning resolution from the Board of Education. LaRaviere was formally charged with insubordination and "conduct unbecoming a principal."

But he assured about 40 Rogers Park residents during a May 9 Network 49 meeting at Willye White Fieldhouse, 1610 W. Howard St., that he's anything but an ideologue.

"Some people might be surprised to learn I supported charter schools, served as principal of a private school and once sent my son to a private school."

"I don't do that any longer because I learned better," said LaRaviere, who lost his job as Blaine principal late last month and is currently "reassigned" on paid leave while awaiting the CPS equivalent of a court martial.

"What I'm interested in is finding what works and using that," he told the far left-leaning Network 49 not to be confused with the regular 49th Ward Democratic organization.

"You try to learn from the best and implement what you've learned from the wisdom of 1,000 years" - wherever that may come from, he said.

Which is different from the establishment's belief in letting parents choose what they think is best for their children, in the expectation that "the worst schools will go out of business and the good ones will flourish," LaRaviere told the group, which was launching a 90-day campaign that very evening to get a referendum on the Nov. 4 ballot barring any new charter schools in the 49th Ward, if not the entire city.

Asked about his own still-unsettled "situation," LaRaviere declined to comment. "I'll be addressing that in a couple of days. And when I do, those of you who support me will not be disappointed."

So what advice would he give Mayor Emanuel if he met him in person?

"I don't think I'd give him any advice. He picked his side. He's got his goals, I have mine," LaRaviere said.

City tourism execs float idea for aerial gondolas over Chicago River

Rendering by F10 Studios Ltd., of Brighton, United Kingdom, of an aerial gondola imagined floating by cable over Wacker Dr., approaching Michigan Ave.

Path of Chicago Skyline from Navy Pier at upper right, across the Chicago River, then over the Riverwalk and west to Lake Street at lower left.

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

Aerial gondolas floating by cable 17 stories above the Chicago River are part of the “new vision for tourism,” according to two directors of Choose Chicago, the organization that markets Chicago as a destination.

Speaking to members of City Club of Chicago on Tuesday, Laurence Geller and Lou Raizin presented ideas to attract more tourists to the city with projects that “capture the mind and inspire the soul of both residents and visitors alike.”

“Chicago is the most underrated world-class city,” says Geller. “We have to re-think how we present ourselves to the world, because if you stand still in this industry, you have already fallen behind.”

Costing $250 million but paid for by private sources, the aerial gondolas, an attraction called Chicago Skyline, would connect Navy Pier, Millennium Park, and the Riverwalk.

According to Geller, starting in 2012, he and Raizin studied the most successful tourism cities in the world and identified 50 of the most attractive concepts. They then hired a consultant to determine which concepts would increase the number of visitors to Chicago, along with the time and money they spent. They say their ideas, by 2020, can attract 76 million tourists each year, increase tourist spending by $26 billion, and create 135,000 jobs.

“We realized that if the city executed these plans, and these plans alone,” says Geller, “many of the city’s economic woes would disappear.”

Chicago Skyline, according to Raizin, was inspired by the need to connect Navy Pier, Millennium Park, and the Riverwalk. The aerial gondolas, he says, will transport 3,000 people per hour and operate “in most weather conditions.”

It was designed by David Marks of London’s Marks Barfield Architects, designers of London Eye, a 394-foot-diameter Ferris wheel on the south bank of the River Thames, and Steven Davis of Davis Brody Bond, based in New York.

Geller and Raizin say the Skyline attraction alone will attract 1.4 million people to Chicago each year, create 8,400 jobs, and generate $330 million annually in taxes, rent paid to the city, and spending by tourists.

“We kept coming back to the same question,” says Raizin, “What’s our unique feature? Where’s our Eiffel Tower? Where’s our Big Ben? These ideas are our attempt to answer this question and are intended to start a conversation in the city about what we would like our reputation to be in the future.”

Red tape to cut, then 18 months to build

“This is no pipe dream,” insists Geller. “After four years of study, working with some of the best experts anywhere in the world, and frankly, millions of dollars of expense, we know this is real, very real, and can be done.”

Sources of money, he says, would include bank loans, corporate bonds, and private investors.

Raizin estimates construction could start in about two years and take 18 months to complete.

“There’s a number of hurdles that we have to jump... and we’ve invested a lot of money testing those hurdles.”

Raizin is founder of Broadway in Chicago, a theatrical production company that presents touring Broadway productions at five local theatres. Following the 45-minute presentation to City Club of Chicago, he addressed the recent departure of Don Welsh, CEO of Choose Chicago, and five of its executives.

“Choose Chicago, which we sit on the executive committee, their entire focus is marketing. They’re in a transition and we’re convinced we’re headed to bigger and better things. Don was wonderful but we’re just as convinced what comes following Don will be as wonderful.”

Geller is chairman and CEO of Geller Capital Partners and was recently president and CEO of Strategic Hotels & Resorts, owner of 18 luxury hotels. A native of the United Kingdom, he has the honorary title of Commander of the Order of the British Empire.

Eamon McDonogh reads the Irish independence proclamation at the start of a day-long observance of the 1916 Easter Rising that kicked off the War for Independence.

Several hundred packed Knox Ave. April 26 at the start of observances marking the centennial of the 1916 Easter Rising.

At first glance, Sean Trone wouldn't seem like someone you'd find at a day-long observance of the 100th anniversary of the "Easter Rising" that triggered Ireland's War for Independence.

After all, he's a Protestant whose uncle was grand master of the anti-Catholic Orange Order in East Donegal and was an avowed "international revolutionary socialist" in what was long a very traditionalist country where church, state and the capitalist "establishment" often worked hand in hand even after most of Ireland won its freedom in the early 1920s.

But things aren't always as they seem, said Trone and several other panelists at an April 24 "Day of Remembrance" at the Irish American Heritage Center, 4626 N. Knox.

After all, said Trone and fellow panelist Terry Boyle, an Irish-born teacher at Loyola Univ., the top leaders of many of the Irish revolts in recent centuries had been led by Presbyterian Protestants, who were also treated as second-class citizens by Ireland's British overlords.

But during those six days that shook the world in late April, 1916, an estimated 1,200 Irish rebels, including a 200-member women's brigade held off some 1,600 British troops — many of them hastily transferred from World War I combat in France — along with 1,000 police.

While the Rising failed, Boyle said, "this single event caught the imagination not only of Ireland, but Illinois and the world.

Here in Illinois an Irish Catholic Democrat from Chicago, Edward Dunne, was the only man to have served as both Mayor of Chicago and Governor of Illinois. Dunne was appointed by the Irish Race Convention to serve on the American Commission of Irish Independence. As part of this commission, Dunne traveled to the Paris Peace Conference of 1919 in order to voice Irish-American desires for an independent Irish nation. Dunne also signed into law an act giving women in Illinois the right to vote for the U.S. Presidency, making Illinois the first state east of the Mississippi to give women the right to vote for the U.S. President.

Possibly part of the reason was the rebels' moving Declaration of Independence or simply "the Proclamation" as it is often called. It was "such a progressive statement for its time. But it was something we would readily accept today. It called for religious and civil liberties, equal opportunities and equal rights for women.
