Projected fall opening for Clarendon Park Community Center

The Clarendon Park Advisory Council is estimating that the 108-year-old Clarendon Park Community Center, 4501 N. Clarendon Ave., will be opening late fall or early winter.

The magnificent $13 million renovation includes the Garfield-Clarendon Model Railroad Club, new teen lounge, dance studio and an expansive special events space for concerts, private parties and more.

Work on the facility began in late 2022, but at one time the property was threatened with demolition. In 2019, Chicago Park District [CPD] officials unveiled multiple proposals for the site, one being just demolishing and replacing the structure. Neighbors and preservationists rallied to save the building, helping convince the CPD to invest in its restoration.

Located in the East Uptown community just west of Lake Shore Dr., Clarendon Community Center Park sits on 12.64 acres of land. The fieldhouse contains a fitness center, a gymnasium, and several clubrooms available for rental. Outside features two junior baseball fields and two softball fields, a two-hoop basketball court, new dog-friendly area and a playground with an interactive water play area.

Clarendon Community Center takes its name from the adjoining avenue, honoring English statesman Edward Hyde (1609-1674), first Earl of Clarendon. Clarendon originated as a municipal beach.

The Clarendon Community Center was built in 1916 as a bath house to serve the Clarendon Municipal Beach. At the time, Lake Michigan's shores abutted the beach bath house.

The construction of Lake Shore Dr. and Lincoln Park pushed the beach further to the east.

During the 19th century, Lake Michigan was rarely used for swimming because the heavily polluted Chicago River flowed into it. The new Sanitary Canal corrected the problem in 1900, and the city's Health Dept. began creating municipal beaches to provide the city's growing population with access to swimming as well as showers and changing facilities.

The Battle of Old Town

Residents fight proposed high-density, low-parking skyscraper

BY DON DEBAT
The Home Front

First of two articles on high-rise development in the Old Town neighborhood.

The Battle of Old Town, circa 2024, is underway as residents and building owners in the coveted landmark historic district push back against a proposed 44-story apartment tower on the eastern edge of the neighborhood.

If you were born in Milwaukee or Cincinnati, and are not familiar with this architectural treasure-trove neighborhood, listen up. The charming Old Town Historic District contains 523 magnificently restored Victorian buildings—some museum quality.

The Old Town Triangle, bounded roughly by North Ave., Wells St., Lincoln Ave., Clark St. and a string of side streets on the west, is home to the annual Old Town Art Fair and Garden Walk.

Opponents of the 500-unit project, dubbed the "Old Town Canvas," at 1610 N. LaSalle Ave., have formed a coalition, citing concerns about its size, public safety, lack of suitable parking and probable impact on traffic.

The developer's recently updated plan for the project calls for adding eight floors—85 feet in height—to the proposed tower in exchange for a greater upper-floor setback over a planned Walgreens store.

The developer, Chicago-based Fern Hill Co., says the additional height on the proposed building at the northeast corner of North and Wells is designed to free up neighboring high-rise views, by reducing the tower's width by 15% to 164 feet. The tower would have 450 parking spaces—but only 150 reserved for the tower's 500 apartment units.

The Old Town Friends for Responsible Development [OTFRD], argue that the proposed building, with its large number of rental Metra's Peterson Ridge Station, 1810 W. Peterson.

New May 20 opening date set for new Metra station

A new May 20 opening date has been announced for Metra's Peterson Ridge station, 1810 W. Peterson Ave., on the boundary.

Bound by Ravenswood Ave. to the west, the new station will be served by the Union Pacific North Line.

The opening of the $15 million station marks the end of a long development process.

Plans for the new station were first announced back in 2009 as part of a state bond program. But like any big infrastructure project, it ran into many bureaucratic delays with the site, including issues with groundwater run-off.

A groundbreaking was held back in 2021, with the station filling a 2.8-mile gap between the Rogers Park station to the north and Ravenswood station to the south.

The station includes two new six-vehicle platforms for travel in both directions with an emphasis on downtown-bound traffic. The south-bound platform will include the station building with both sides featuring warming shelters. There will also be 49 vehicle parking spaces added for the facility. A new drop-off and pick-up area has been added with a turnaround for cars.

Lake Shore Dr. repairs began Monday

The City began conducting pavement repairs on N. Lake Shore Dr. on Monday as part of its 2024 Arterial Resurfacing program. Pavement patching and other roadway repairs will occur throughout May and June in advance of resurfacing that is scheduled to take place in the fall.

The first phase of the project is expected to last until late June and will impact the following sections of N. Lake Shore Dr.: Northbound lanes from Lawrence to Hollywood avenues, and Southbound lanes from Hollywood Ave. to LaSalle Dr.

Now through May 17, two northbound lanes between Lawrence and Hollywood avenues will be closed to traffic daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. One lane will remain closed continuously throughout the week.

From May 20 to May 24, two southbound lanes between Hollywood Ave. and LaSalle Dr. will be closed to traffic daily from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. One lane will remain closed continuously throughout the week.

Lane closure schedules and work timings are subject to change due to weather conditions or other unforeseen circumstances.

Let's help our city get on even footing once again

Placing the Mother Jones monument at the Water Tower is a deeply disturbing action. Not many Chicagoans were even aware such plans were underway.

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Chicago has always been a place that understands the significance of balance.

You know, that sense of human evenness. Fair play. And effective living from the equilibrium that maintains the stability of the ground we stand on, when off-kilter just won't work.

Some eras of Chicago life have maintained such balance better than others. Early Chicago was famous for the struggle with urban equilibrium. In a more primitive setting of history it was more vital.

Take the era of Chicago's founding. The late 1830s when William Butler Ogden was our first mayor. A transplanted New Yorker, he discovered that if Chicagoans didn't maintain their equilibrium they could easily run out of vittles. Or drinkable water. Or protection in the wilderness from the nation's military at Ft. Dearborn.

Or your horse might go unshod and unshod. You might just get left out in the cold. Balance was an essential preventive measure.

A couple of decades later, in 1853, during the time of Mayor Long John Wentworth (all 6-foot 8-inches of him), an Irish-born Chicago policeman, Constable James Quinn, was mercilessly beaten to death by a well-known Chicago saloon-keeper in the tavern district known as the Sands. It was a horrific loss of urban equilibrium.

Mayor Wentworth was so enraged by the act that he deputized a large army of men to assist in the search for the killer. Armed with torches the mayor led the men through the Sands hunting the killer.

In the process the deputies and the mayor torched the killer's saloon, and several others. They captured the killer in the process. He had upset the human balance in Chicago, damaging the soul of the city. Crushing him leveled the balance, not of revenge, but of justice.

As Chicago grew and expanded on the flat land of the Prairie, culturally and economically, that balance would become critical. Balance would become Chicago's code of lake-side living. Essential.

Between 1850 and 1910 Chicago was the fastest growing city in America. The population of Chicago doubled every 10 years. I believe it was in part our heartland sense of balance that permitted Chicago to grow from 40,000 residents to 1.3 million in 60 years.

Of course it was Chicago's sense of urban balance that attracted so many people of ideas, skills, attitudes and dreams with which folk could recognize the possibilities and opportunities at hand.

The great success of so many enterprises like the meat-packing industry all centered in Chicago; the dynamic vitality of the railroad industry with Chicago as its national hub; and the deeply influential "futures" trading markets, first begun in Chicago, all enhanced this city's influence with balance. On the flatland of the Prairie Chicago transformed the nation's understanding of what a modern city could be.

Chicago politics were deeply shaped by our sense of balance. Our political life had a fine-tuned sense of equilibrium. The organization of Chicago political life stood upon a culturally diverse, ethnically mixed composition. Originally Old Yankee New England transplants, mixed later with new immigrants longing to be American.

Chicago evolved politically with a wide consortium of differing experiences of politics, especially among those who came from Europe where peasants especially had few rights or freedoms with no say in the governments that ruled them.

No one took to life in Chicago more than the Irish, who back in the 19th century, after years of immigration, discovered the wide advantage to speaking the language of American political life. No interpreter was needed. The Irish embraced that balance.

Here the Irish also discovered another political advantage. Unlike many of the ethnic immigrants of other cultures, the Irish did not ghettoize. They did not settle in only Irish enclaves, but rather took up residence in many neighborhoods throughout the city. They often became brokers for those who spoke no English. They interpreted for their non-English speaking neighbors. Often helping to settle simple conflicts and problems for neighbors. This earned the Irish not only the gratitude of their neighbors, but their vote when the time came.

Being of service to a neighbor touched the very heart of what Chicago's equilibrium was all about. Pragmatic engagement. Episodic loyalty. Urban unity.

Sorting out the detail of living in a new country. Discovering the confidence to be an American. It was the balance everyone longed for.

We see that balance expressed in the soaring architecture that has given Chicago its unique American identity. We see it in the dynamism of political leadership that Chicago politicians offered to everyone from Abe Lincoln in his run for the presidency in 1860 to John Fitzgerald Kennedy in his run in 1960.

Chicago offered pragmatic political intelligence to Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Harry Truman and Dwight Eisenhower. Party affiliations and sympathies demonstrated the power of balance. The manner in which leaders like Richard J. Daley and Richard M. Daley mobilized Chicago citizens to create government that worked. And it did work as long as the balance was maintained.

Back in Nov. 2023, in this column, I wrote outlining a plan that, unknown to the general public, would sideline the city's memorial to the late Mayor Jane Burke Byrne.

Without any public awareness the present mayor, Brandon Johnson, agreed to a concocted proposal to create a memorial to the Irish labor organizer "Mother Jones." The project calls for a statue of Mother Jones using a $36,000 gift to the city from the Irish government.

Mayor Johnson empowered a placement committee to find an appropriate location for the statue. I'm told that Wacker Dr. along the riverfront was the early favorite location of choice.

But when the location was finally announced, to the shock of many, the Chicago Water Tower was named. Even though it was already the location of Chicago's wonderful memorial garden honoring Mayor Jane Byrne.

Byrne's memorial is elegant and uncommonly simple. At no time in Chicago's history has anyone attempted to use the Water Tower to showcase any individual or cause.

The honorary co-chairs of this project are Cecil Roberts, President of the United Mine Workers of America, and Sarah Nelson, President, Assoc. of Flight Attendants-CWA. I am not surprised that they appear to have little appreciation for Mayor Byrne's memory or Chicago's political equilibrium for which they also have little sensitivity.

Geraldine Byrne Nason, Ireland's Ambassador to the United States, also serves as an honorary co-chair.

But I fear the union presidents are not innocent parties in this action. The United Mine Workers and the Flight Attendants Unions are much more apt to cross the boundaries of local Chicago politics. It would be naive to think Chicagoans are clamoring for a statue of Mother Jones on Michigan Ave. Wrecking the space set aside for memorializing Chicago's first female mayor. Supposedly another $175,000 has been union-raised to support the project.

Something seems out of sync. One more sad disaster for Mayor Johnson.

While Mother Jones did live in Chicago during the Great Fire of 1871, a terrible loss of Chicago "balance" is created, now, in trying to make the Water Tower a monument for Jones. It has always been a monument to Chicago itself.

How is City Hall not able to understand how shabby the process of placement has been? Placing the Mother Jones monument at the Water Tower is a deeply disturbing action.

Not many Chicagoans were even aware such plans were underway.

Mayor Byrne was Chicago's 50th mayor. Her memorial garden deserves its chance to quietly bloom surrounding the epic tower to remind Chicagoans of our worst urban disaster in our history. And

Alderman defends his “no” vote on Mayor’s RTA appointment

BY ALD. SCOTT WAGUESPACK [32ND]

The Regional Transportation Authority [RTA] is the unit of local government created to oversee finances, secure funding, and to conduct transit planning for the Chicago Transit Authority [CTA], Metra, and Pace.

It has been well documented that the northeast region transit agencies are facing a pretty dire fiscal cliff. No solutions are up for a vote yet, but ideas on how to close this gap are circulating in the state.

The shortfall by the end of 2025 is expected to hit $730 million. Pandemic funding that bolstered agencies for the past few years is drying up across all governmental agencies including the CTA, RTA agencies and City of Chicago.

With this background I questioned the mayor’s appointee to the RTA board, Pastor Ira Acree at the Transportation Committee on May 9. This RTA position is a $25,000 job that has a five year term.

After listening, I had to vote no on the appointment.

My first point was to question the appointee of the Mayor on his discussions with the Mayor. The Mayor is allotted several appointments to the RTA Board and has a significant power to bring change to the RTA.

I asked why he had not met with Mayor Johnson on such an important appointment. That he had not, sent a signal about 1) lack of preparation by the administration, 2) lack of concern by the administration and 3) the need for experienced people on the boards who could answer the questions to come about their positions as well the vision for regional transit by the Mayor. There was none.

The pastor said he had not had a conversation with the Mayor about this appointment. His response was that “[The Mayor is] the leader of a busy city. I have talked with somebody from his staff. I talked with Audrey. I talked but I haven’t talked with him about this position. I mean, this is very important but he’s got much bigger fish to fry or I would disagree with you.”

Pastor Ira Acree. Image courtesy WTTW News

My second question was the issue of the financial shortfall, “what is your position on the $730 million shortfall for this agency by the end of 2025?”

He stated he was unaware of the shortfall, saying that it was the first time he heard about it.

I followed up with a question on fare integration, (a merging of the agencies fares, that has been discussed for years) and if he has spoken to employees of the CTA and RTA about issues in general.

Finally, I asked about CTA leadership and if he felt it was time for a change of the leadership of CTA President Dorval Carter. Some of us have publicly called for a change in CTA leadership, but that was not the focus of this appointees process.

The CTA has had well documented problems with ridership lows, cleanliness, timeliness, and both by agencies and the local media to suggest that important changes to the CTA and RTA must happen soon before the fiscal cliff hits, and before the operations of the entire system degrade any further.

Chicagoland has many experts

The pastor said he had not had a conversation with the Mayor about this appointment. His response was that “[The Mayor is] the leader of a busy city. I have talked with somebody from his staff. I talked but I haven’t talked with him about this position. I mean, this is very important but he’s got much bigger fish to fry or I would disagree with you.”

overall operational and leadership dysfunction going back several years as aldermen have had to fight to get Carter to testify publicly on the state of the CTA. The CTA is not alone in this fiscal and operational state. Public transit systems across the US are looking for change in operations and leadership.

The appointee in this meeting said it was unfair to grade the CTA leadership and he would withhold judgment. While I understand the need to evaluate and get a sense of the needs of the RTA as a new member of a board, that’s a job that could have easily been done before the appointment process.

There is plenty of reporting, in transit that could do this job; to see that none of them have been considered is alarming.

I don’t expect the appointee to know everything, as the state of affairs within government bodies are constantly changing, but this meeting was another glaring example of the lack of seriousness and readiness by the administration.

For the Mayor himself not to speak to the appointee and to offer no vision or sense of direction from the 5th floor is damaging to the taxpayers and users of the public transportation systems. I will be voting against the appointee again in the full council vote.

The Discovery of 505 Stratford Place

Any takers?

BY GARRY ALBRECHT

I resided on Stratford Place for over 20 years. During those years I would walk to my bus stop on Lake Shore Dr. to catch the 145 Bus to the Loop always wondering what lie beyond an ornate metal fence near the bus stop. The space within is a parking lot, but what was in that space ages ago?

One night in my modest studio I began an online search for that parking lot and the history surrounding it.

I always thought the process of discovery was more important than the discovery itself. I was not wrong on this mission either. After a few weeks I would discover what once was within that ornate fence, but discovered much more during that time – the rich history of my community of Lake View from its days as a township to its current status within Chicago.

I engulfed my spare time in research of my community and neighborhood that I called home. I decided to record my findings in a blog called the LakeView Historical Chronicles. It's a topical blog with historical stories about every aspect of Lake View. During my research I discovered ebay, and over a 10-year period I purchased $20,000 of anything Lake View, postcards, press photos, newspapers and magazines, and various objects to support my blog.

Today, my blog is done for the most part and so is my collecting. Now my blog and my private collection need a permanent home, a library or university that will preserve it and view it on occasion to the public when I am long gone from this Earth.

Any takers? If so, contact this newspaper.

Oh, by the way, a two-story mansion that once stood at 505 Stratford Place was owned by one of the richest families of Chicago.

Commentary

apartment units, is excessive for the neighborhood. The group is advocating for a reduced height of no more than 10 stories.

The opposition says the massive multifamily project would be too large and disruptive. In addition, they are seeking assurances regarding mitigated traffic and disruption to local businesses during construction.

Old Town resident, attorney and lobbyist Jordan Matyas said the OTFRD is a grassroots coalition comprising more than 1,500 residents of Old Town, the Gold Coast, and Lincoln Park, including condo boards and businesses. Visit: www.oldtownfriends.com.

The project also will include the rezoning of Piper's Alley, Moody Church, and two neighboring gas stations. Those properties allegedly would not be allowed to have residential units. However, there is no prohibition on Fern Hill or any other developer from changing the later phases of the planned development in the future.

Matyas said OTFRD supports responsible development. However, Matyas says as currently proposed, Fern Hill's plans will overwhelm the community, cause traffic nightmares, and forever change the charm and character of Old Town.

On April 23, the Old Town Triangle Assn. [OTTA], released a property-owner survey. "A total of 84% of all OTTA survey respondents expressed opposition to the Fern Hill's high-rise project density and rezoning application," noted Raymond Clark, president of the OTTA. Visit: www.oldtowntriangle.com.

Launched in 1948, the respected neighborhood organization fought in 1977 for Old Town to be designated as a city Historic Landmark District, and in 1984 it was listed on the National Register of Historic District places.

The OTTA survey listed the following reasons for the thumbs-down vote on the Old Town Canvas proposal:

Scale and density of the planned development and/or height of the tower, traffic congestion, incompatibility with the neighborhood, general opposition, lack of justification for zoning change, design and/or aesthetics of the tower, parking and safety.

The proposed tower would be built less than 1.5 blocks from the Latin School with nearly 1,200 students potentially affected in terms of safe ingress and egress. Fern Hill has not provided a certified traffic impact study.

"Our recent survey reflects input of professional architects who sit on the OTTA board or its Historic District/Planning & Development Committee, including one architect with direct experience in high-rise development," Clark noted.

"It is the unique architectural characteristic of our neighborhood, resulting in small lots of low density, that we believe drives many OTTA members' strong opposition to the proposal," Clark said.

"We sent our survey results along with 37 pages of historical Old Town zoning and development data to the alderman and all relevant city planning and zoning departments. To date, we have received no response," Clark said.

Diane Gonzalas, a preservationist and architectural historian, who was involved in the landmarking of the Old Town Triangle, said: "We don't want Old Town to become Sandburg Village. I can't imagine a mammoth high-rise casting a shadow over these historic landmark properties. This development will take away from the character and beauty of Old Town."

"Nick Anderson, the developer of Old Town Canvas, unveiled his dreams for a massive tower only months ago, and since that date, residents of Old Town and the neighboring community have joined together in opposition to this project," said Matyas of OTFRD.

"The developer's lack of transparency and refusal to respond to OTFRD's numerous requests for details and documents continues to undermine the community's ability to review and analyze this proposal," Matyas said.

Cathy Roesch, a member of the Old Town Friends group, and a management executive, said: "We are being gaslighted. We seek transparency. We don't want to be psychologically manipulated or misled.

The developer is lying to us."

(Full disclosure, this newspaper's publisher met with Anderson and his PR consultant for a private, off-the-record meeting earlier this year. Nothing from that conversation was used in this story.)

OTFRD said any revised plans must include the following:

- The density of the building and the proposed traffic plan must ensure that there is either no change in traffic or an improvement in traffic flow.
- Construction of 500 units is unacceptable. The massive tower does not belong in the middle of Old Town. The developer needs to work with—and not against—the community to develop a transparent process that will support his business needs while not harming the community.
- The building's height should be consistent with similar new construction in Old Town and no more than 8 to 10 stories tall.
- The developer should work with businesses on a plan to ensure minimal disruption to restaurants and stores during construction.
- The plans must include additional details on the two gas stations—including an environmental site assessment for removal of underground fuel-storage tanks, as well as restrictions on the use of the land—and a timeframe for removing them.

Dan Baldwin, former president and board member of OTTA, labeled the Old Town Canvas as a "Trojan horse" development plan. "The real plans for Old Town Canvas, which calls for up to 1,400 units along North Ave., were fitted inside the first presentation plan, like a Trojan horse," Baldwin surmised.

"If a developer wants to build a 20-story high-rise, he asks for 40 stories, so 20 stories looks like a giant concession. Reducing the final size of the project is a big victory by the alderman, while in reality, a 10-story building is more suitable to the neighborhood," Baldwin said.

"Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd], who represents a portion of Old Town, must balance the ongoing need for development with the vast concerns expressed by neighbors," Matyas said.

"The community is relying on the alderman to take the developer's massive tower, which includes enormous density, and tone it down to a development that will become part of Old Town, and not an eye sore and ongoing problem for the residents," Matyas concluded.

NEXT WEEK: Are there undisclosed plans for future high-rise developments in Old Town?

Ex-Onward restaurant owner pressing on with court fight vs Loyola over restaurant's demise

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

A Chicago businessman and restaurateur is trying to keep alive his case claiming Loyola Univ. violated the law and their word when they evicted his fine dining restaurant, Onward, from a university-owned building in Rogers Park after allegedly keeping the restaurant closed for more than a year amid the COVID pandemic.

Since last fall, restaurateur Michael Olszewski has been in court, attempting to secure court orders requiring Loyola to pay him as much as $1.5 million to cover the amount Olszewski claims he sunk into the Onward restaurant property, allegedly at Loyola's request nearly six years ago.

In response, however, Loyola has asked a Cook County judge to toss Olszewski's claim, saying the university justly evicted Olszewski's restaurant, claiming Olszewski and Onward have allegedly caused Loyola "problems ... for years."

In court documents, Loyola asserts Onward notably struggled to pay rent consistently, and allegedly did not pay rent at all after Onward shut down, never to reopen, in March 2020, at the onset of the societal and economic restrictions imposed in Illinois by Gov. JB Pritzker and strictly adhered to by Loyola throughout 2020 and into 2021.

After School Matters announces summer schedule

After School Matters [ASM], the non-profit organization dedicated to providing out-of-school time programs for Chicago teens, has announced its summer schedule for 2024. The programs will run between the weeks of June 24 and Aug. 2, offering hundreds of opportunities to youth across the city.

The summer programs are open to Chicago high school students aged 14-18. Each program is designed to encourage teens to explore new interests, build community, and earn money simultaneously.

Chicago teens ages 14 and 15 can choose from programs offering stipends for participation. Chicago teens ages 16+ can choose from Internship programs which will provide an hourly wage of $15.80/hour.

In the previous year, ASM successfully provided opportunities for teens from the 20th District to delve into their interests, develop their skills, and envision their futures through programs tailored to their unique social and emotional needs. The organization partnered with hundreds of schools and community-based organizations, establishing a citywide network of support for young people.

Teens interested in applying can do so at www.afterschoolmatters.org/teens/apply.

Man who attacked, robbed women downtown threatened to have his mom beat up the cops who arrested him

Ldarius Jenkins, inset, is seen with surveillance images of the attack suspect.

A man accused of randomly attacking women in the downtown area, including one he robbed on a subway platform, threatened to have his mom beat up the cops who arrested him, Chicago police officers say. Ldarius Jenkins, 31, is accused of punching two women at random on different dates and also attacking, chasing, and trying to rob a third woman at the Harrison Red Line CTA station.

The 21-year-old victim was on the Harrison platform around 5 a.m. April 29 when Jenkins started punching her in the body, prosecutors said in a detention petition. She tried to run away, but Jenkins chased her until she fell. While she was down, he stood over her, continued to hit her, and threatened to kill her if she did not give him money, the petition said.

Prosecutors said the robbery victim suffered a concussion and bruises on her face.

He is also accused of striking a 27-year-old woman in the back of the head multiple times in the 1200 block of S. Clinton on April 23. And he's accused of punching a 25-year-old woman and pushing her into a wall in the 900 block of S. Wabash on May 1.

CPD's Mass Transit Unit released surveillance images of the robbery suspect May 2, hoping someone would recognize the attacker. Chicago cops spotted Jenkins walking in the 200 block of S. State a couple of hours later and took him into custody.

"If I call my mom, she'll come to beat your a and she'll kill your retard a," Jenkins allegedly told one of the officers. He was also accused of threatening to take matters into his own hands, telling the cop, "I'm finna beat your a." However, neither he nor his mother followed through on those alleged threats.

Judge Mary Marubio detained Jenkins because he was a safety risk. The charges against him include attempted robbery, aggravated battery of a transit passenger, and misdemeanor counts of battery, aggravated assault, and resisting police.

Jenkins received probation in 2015 after pleading guilty to robbing a woman of her iPhone in the 1600 block of S. Jefferson, according to court records.

'Unsophisticated' burglary team strikes five more times, mostly in Lincoln Park

A burglary team that a Lincoln Park alderman called not "sophisticated" struck five more times on May 8. While they may lack the pizzazz the alderman expects from break-in crews, they're certainly making up for it in volume.

Chicago police say the men started their spree at 2:43 a.m. at Hooter's, 660 N. Wells. Then, between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m., they broke into four more businesses, all in the 900 and 1000 blocks of W. North Ave.: Sweetgreen, Potbelly, Burrito Beach, and Roti.

On May 3, the men broke into four businesses near Webster and Halsted: Athenian Room, Shine Restaurant, Underthings, and Kameya Sushi. That same morning, they burglarized a car dealership in the 1500 block of N. Dayton and an unidentified business in the 500 block of W. Dickens.

Ald. Timmy Knudsen [43rd], who represents much of Lincoln Park, told his constituents last week that the burglars "do not seem to be a part of the more sophisticated 'robbery crew' trend that other areas on the North Side have experienced."

According to CPD, each break-in involves one or two men breaking glass doors to enter businesses. Once inside, they ransack the place and take whatever they want.

Area Three detectives are in charge of the investigation. Their number is 312-744-8263.

Gunmen rob seven businesses, engage store owner in shootout during four-hour crime spree

Armed men robbed at least seven businesses, mugged store customers, and exchanged gunfire with a store owner during a four-hour crime spree across the north and northwest sides on May 9, according to Chicago police. The most frequent targets were liquor stores, but they also targeted at least two Subway sandwich shops and a convenience store.

The crimes began just after 8 p.m. at Leland Liquors, 4662 N. Western, in Lincoln Square. Two men, armed with guns, pistol-whipped the store's owner, taking cash from the register and a victim's car keys.

According to an officer who responded to the scene, the robbers were two black men wearing all black clothing: one in his 20s, standing about 5'-6" tall and weighing 140 to 160 lbs; the other 6-feet tall or slightly taller, 180 lbs, with dreadlocks and freckles. They both wore masks and gloves. Victims of subsequent robberies provided similar suspect descriptions.

A similar robbery occurred at 9:38 p.m. at Winnemac Food & Liquor, 5029 N. Western, also in Lincoln Square. Two men armed with guns forced a man and his girlfriend to lie on the floor. They took the couple's wallets and robbed the store's cashier.

About eight minutes later, two men armed with guns robbed A&P Food and Liquor, 1968 W. Peterson, in West Rogers Park. They robbed four customers and took two cash drawers, according to Chicago police.

Two men robbed the 7-Eleven at 4771 N. Western in Lincoln Square around 10:46 p.m. They fled in a dark-colored sedan, CPD said.

The situation became especially dangerous shortly after 11 p.m. when three men wearing all black clothing entered Basil Food and Liquor, 7446 N. Western, in West Rogers Park. Police said one of the robbers fired a shot at the store's clerk, and the worker returned fire. No injuries were reported. The police said the robbers escaped in a silver SUV this time.

Then, in a bold move, two men robbed the Subway at 1958 W. Peterson, just a couple of doors down from A&P Food and Liquor. They took cash from the register at gunpoint and fled in a dark-colored sedan. Investigators believe the getaway car was a dark blue 2013 Hyundai Sonata stolen last night from the 2600 block of W. Balmoral, according to a source.

Finally, just before midnight, two men robbed the Subway at 5232 N. Nagle in Norwood Park. They took cash from the register and fled in a dark-colored sedan.

Police have been looking for at least three armed robbery crews that have targeted Subway restaurants, convenience stores, bars, and liquor stores. Shots were fired during some of the crimes, but no one has been struck by gunfire so far.

$500,000 jewelry store smash-and-grab caught on video

Smash-and-grab burglars gather jewelry from the display windows at Zar Jewelers on May 5.

Smash-and-grab burglars busted through the front windows of a Far North Side jewelry store on May 5, getting away with merchandise worth an estimated $500,000. A passing motorist stopped to record the burglary on his phone.

Around 5:50 p.m., three masked men dressed in black used a heavy tool to break through the display windows at Zar Jewelers, 2643 W. Devon. As the crew loaded jewelry from the windows into bags, store employees activated a silent alarm.

A Chicago police evidence technician recovered a pair of sunglasses and a hammer that the men left behind. Store management told police they estimated their losses at $500,000.

After the burglary, the crew escaped in a white Jeep Grand Cherokee. It was last seen heading north on Washtenaw and then turning onto Arthur.

No arrests have been announced.

River North hotel guest declines police service after being robbed, carjacked

A River North hotel guest was robbed and carjacked at gunpoint on May 8, but he decided not to get the police involved. Witnesses saw the robbery go down in front of the Godfrey Hotel, 127 W. Huron, around 4 a.m.

They told Chicago cops that two men got out of a gray SUV, possibly a Jeep Grand Cherokee, and robbed the man of his property at gunpoint, a CPD spokesperson confirmed. The robbers proceeded to drive away with the victim's car, which a witness described as a "black big SUV," the spokesperson said.

According to the witness, the victim went up to his hotel room, saying he didn't want to get the police involved. They described the robbers as two Black men wearing ski masks: one dressed in white clothing and armed with a pistol, along with one who was shirtless and armed with a "machine gun."

Robberies are up 31% this year and sit at the highest level since at least 2020 in CPD's Near North 18th District, which includes River North. Of course, the hijacking and robbery of the hotel guest will not count unless the victim decides to file a complaint.

Man robbed Lakeview smoke shop while on federal parole for robbing six NYC stores

A man on federal parole for robbing six businesses across New York City robbed a Lakeview smoke shop and threatened to kill the store's cashier, prosecutors say.

Judge Charles Beach detained Idris Browning, 24, on charges of armed robbery with a firearm and kidnapping with a firearm.

Surveillance video showed Browning pointing an object that appeared to be a gun through his pocket as he demanded proceeds from the 22-year-old clerk at Urban Puff & Stuff, 3110 N. Broadway, on April 29, officials said.

The victim tried to run away, but Browning chased him and continually threatened to kill him while pointing the gun at him, prosecutors said. He eventually took cash, cigarettes, flowers, mushrooms, a grinder, and a fanny pack from the store, according to a criminal complaint. Prosecutors said Browning still had some of the property when Chicago police arrested him.

In 2021, Browning pleaded guilty to six counts of Hobbs Act robbery in New York City. A federal judge sentenced him to six concurrent 50-month sentences, and he remains on supervised release, according to Cook County prosecutors and federal court records.

The federal charges stemmed from allegations that Browning robbed "multiple" businesses in the Bronx, Manhattan, and Brooklyn within about two weeks during Nov. and Dec. 2019.

Each time, Browning allegedly brandished "what appeared to be a firearm" while taking cash, merchandise, and store employees' property, a federal sentencing memo said. A federal task force identified Browning by running a surveillance image of the robber through an NYPD facial recognition program, according to a federal court filing.

Federal prosecutors said Browning had one of the store clerk's phones when police arrested him in New York. They said he also had a silver and black lighter shaped like a gun.

His attorneys asked the federal judge for leniency, claiming that Browning's time in the federal detention center in Manhattan had already set him on the right path. Prosecutors rejected this argument, pointing out that Browning faced discipline in the federal jail for attempting to bribe a guard.

They said he passed a note to the corrections worker saying, "We can get rich" by selling contraband inside the jail.

"Cig's go for $500 a pack in here an 8th go for $1000-$1100 a pack in here," he allegedly wrote. "All I need is your Cashapp and we can get rich."

"If you say no," Browning continued, "still send me your Cashapp and I'll send you money to forget this conversation."

30+ shots fired leaving man injured near downtown diner

At least 30 shots were fired near a popular all-night diner on the Near North Side May 11, leaving a 34-year-old man injured. Chicago police said the shooting began as a "verbal altercation."

The victim, 34, encountered the other man in the 300 block of W. Locust around 2:05 a.m., according to CPD. Police said the altercation ensued, and the other man pulled out a gun. Moments later, authorities found the victim, who had sustained a gunshot wound to his foot, near the corner of Chicago and Orleans. CPD did not provide any details about what led up to the confrontation.

Officers at the scene said they found at least 30 shell casings along Orleans, as well as several bullet fragments. Gunfire also struck cars in the area.

The gunman was described as a Black man with dreadlocks in his mid- to late 20s wearing dark clothing. He fled the scene in a vehicle, according to a witness.

So far this year, eight people have been shot on the Near North Side. That includes a Chicago police officer and a suspected burglar who exchanged gunfire near the Magnificent Mile on Jan. 8.

Driver charged with DUI, reckless homicide for crash that killed passenger near Belmont Harbor

Authorities have filed reckless homicide and DUI charges in connection with this week's fatal car crash on Lake Shore Dr. near Belmont Harbor. Jaime Torres Jr. of the 7100 block of S. California was scheduled to appear for a detention hearing at the Leighton Criminal Courthouse on May 11.

In a preliminary statement, Chicago police said Torres, 20, was driving northbound on the drive when he swerved to avoid another car just south of Belmont around 12:15 a.m. Thursday. Torres' car struck a curb and then collided with a light pole, police said.

His passenger, 25-year-old Jorge Castillo of Des Plaines, died in the crash.

A video posted to the Citizen App showed police removing the driver from the crashed vehicle. He did not appear to have serious injuries. Police said he was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in fair condition.

Torres faces charges of reckless homicide with a motor vehicle, aggravated DUI causing death, and misdemeanor DUI.

Teen boy stabbed in the Loop

A teen boy was stabbed May 12 in downtown in broad daylight. He was taken to a hospital with serious injuries.

The stabbing happened around 4:39 p.m. near N. Dearborn St. and W. Lake St. Chicago police are looking for at least four people involved.

The 15-year-old victim was on the sidewalk at the location when four male offenders approached him, police said. Two of the offenders stabbed the boy in the back with knives.

The youth was initially transported to Lurie Children's Hospital in critical condition. Chicago police later said his condition had stabilized.

Police scanner radio reveals the initial response to the stabbing.

"There is a knife on the ground," an officer said over the radio. "Several of the males are wearing white t-shirts and blue jeans."

Security cameras at ABC7's State Street Studio showed a group of people running away moments after the attack. Police did not immediately officially confirm they were the same group as the suspects in the stabbing.

Probation for woman who used postal service master keys to burglarize residential mailrooms

BY CWBCHICAGO

A woman accused of using U.S. Postal Service master keys to commit eight mailroom burglaries at apartment and condo buildings has been sentenced to probation.

Kalea Blanke, 33, pleaded guilty to six counts of burglary, and prosecutors dropped the other two cases, according to court records. Judge Michele Gemske put her on probation for two years with orders to participate in an “intensive drug program.” Blanke must also submit to random drug testing and provide a DNA sample for indexing by law enforcement.

For more than a year, Blanke used mail carrier master keys to access mailboxes across the city, prosecutors said. They ultimately charged her with eight cases stemming from burglaries in the 4000 block of N. Damen in North Center on May 17, 2022; the 4700 block of N. Racine in Uptown on Nov. 12, 2022; the 600 block of W. Drummond in Lincoln Park on Jan.

Kalea Blanke

24, 2023; the 4100 block of N. Sheridan in Uptown on March 9, 2023; the 2600 block of N. Clybourn in Lincoln Park on March 29, 2023; the 800 block of S. Wells in the Loop on June 22, 2023, and on the 1600 block of W. Division in Wicker Park on March 9, 2023, and again on June 11, 2023.

Chicago police arrested her in a South Side garage last August and said they found a postal service master key, also known as an “ar-rowkey,” lying in plain sight. When they searched her, police found five wrenches “filed into what appears to be various stages of arrow keys,” a CPD report said.

Mail theft by crews using stolen postal service master keys has become so widespread that the U.S. Postal Service has advised people not to put mail into its blue mailboxes after the last collection time.

Mail thieves might occasionally score a valuable package or an envelope containing a birthday gift card from someone’s grandma. However, experts say the real value comes from identity theft and check fraud mills, which use information from stolen mail to steal people’s identities and checks.

Armed men have frequently robbed mail carriers of their “arrow keys” in Chicago. Some keys are stolen from the postal service in less violent ways. Counterfeit keys have also popped up.

Highly organized identity theft and fraud organizations use stolen postal service master keys, called “arrow keys,” to steal large volumes of mail from public mailboxes and residential building mailrooms.

O’Hare Airport modernization plan could bring economic return

As the city of Chicago and partner airlines negotiate over the future of the O’Hare 21 modernization program, a new report by the nonpartisan Illinois Economic Policy Institute (ILEPI) shows that proceeding as planned would create nearly 100,000 jobs by 2033 (or almost 10,000 jobs per year) and generate more than $2 in economic return for every dollar invested. Additionally, the report finds that once completed, the program would boost revenues at Chicago O’Hare International Airport by $280 million per year, grow the Chicago metropolitan economy by more than $500 million annually, and increase state and local tax collections by more than $60 million per year.

Originally projected to be an $8.5 billion program, the O’Hare 21 modernization was undertaken through an agreement between the city of Chicago and its signature airlines in 2018. Key elements include a new Global Terminal and multiple concourse expansions to increase gate capacity by 25%, upgraded runways and baggage systems, improved pedestrian tunnels, and a variety of related transit improvements, concession upgrades, and on-property hotel developments. The project has also been supported by the Illinois Department of Transportation’s (IDOT) $900 million I-190 project, designed to improve traffic flow around the facility.

One-third of both the O’Hare 21 and I-190 projects have been completed to date. However, some airlines had recently expressed a desire to scale back the project, citing rising costs linked to inflation, supply-chain disruptions, and COVID-related reductions in passenger travel. The report notes, however, that many of the project components that have already been completed—including runway improvements and a major concourse extension—disproportionately benefit these airlines, while remaining project elements would more directly impact other airlines and the broader Chicago metropolitan region.

For this study, ILEPI compiled data from the city of Chicago’s Terminal Area Plan (TAP), Chicago Department of Aviation, annual financial reports for O’Hare Airport, and the Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning’s (CMAP) Transportation Improvement Program (TIP). It used industry-standard IMPLAN economic modeling software to assess the economic and fiscal impacts of completing the remaining projects by 2033, as well as the longer-term impacts following project completion.

RIGHTFUL RETURN: New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art has returned an ancient statue to Iraq, after the institution's newly appointed provenance researchers found it was likely looted. The Sumerian sculpture, titled "Man Carrying a Box, Possibly for Offerings," is from the third millennium BCE, and was acquired by the museum in 1955. But "after provenance research by the museum's scholars established that the works rightfully belong to

Chicago and the 1971 Mayday protests

BY HEIDI SAMUELSON
Chicago History Museum

The Vietnam War sparked a massive antiwar protest movement throughout the United States beginning in the mid-1960s, and Chicago became a major center of antiwar activity during this time. Although the activist landscape changed in the early 1970s, May 1, 1971, still saw one of the largest acts of civil disobedience in US history known as the Mayday Protest.

The protest was organized in part by Rennie Davis, better known as one of the Chicago Seven, and was supported in Chicago by the Chicago Seed, one of the nation's most widely circulated underground newspapers at the time.

Chicago became a major center of antiwar activity during this time. Perhaps most notable were the protests prior to and during the 1968 Democratic National Convention. These protests led to a federal investigation, and eight demonstrators (known as the Chicago Eight, later Seven) were famously charged with conspiring to use interstate commerce with intent to incite a riot.

Although one of the leading student activist groups that focused on antiwar actions, the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS), had split by 1969, the antiwar movement continued into the 1970s. Opposition to the war escalated after the Nixon administration ordered US ground troops to invade Cambodia on April 28, 1970. On May 4, 1970, four students at an anti-Vietnam War rally at Kent State University in Kent, Ohio, were shot and killed by National Guardsmen. The following day in Chicago, thousands of people, primarily university students, filled Grant Park in protest.

A year later in 1971, the activist landscape was fractured, but May 1 still saw the largest act of civil disobedience in US history—as well as the largest mass arrest. Known as the Mayday Protest, the plan was, simply, to shut down the federal government. Under the slogan "If the government won't stop the war, we'll stop the government," organizers detailed in advance 21 bridges and traffic circles in Washington, DC, for protesters to block nonviolently with vehicles, makeshift barricades, or their bodies. The immediate goal was to prevent government employees from getting to their jobs, but the larger aim was, as stated in the Mayday Tactical Manual, "to create the spectre of social chaos while maintaining the support or at least toleration of the broad masses of American people."

One of the organizers of the action was Davis, who took the idea of a nonviolent blockade from a failed attempt of the Brooklyn Chapter of the Congress of Racial Equality to stop traffic on the opening day of the 1964 New York World's Fair. Unlike many organized actions, the Mayday Protest had a decentralized structure. Rather than taking orders from leaders, tactics were shared among different "regions" of the planned action and were followed by small affinity groups.

The protest was supported by the Chicago Seed. Established as a collective in 1967, the Seed started as a newspaper about local counterculture. But police action at the 1968 Democratic National Convention radicalized the staff, and they began to focus on more serious issues, particularly the Vietnam War. At its height, the Chicago Seed, which could be purchased for 35¢ at newsstands, reached 30,000–40,000 readers, making it one of the nation's most widely circulated and influential underground newspapers before it ceased operations in 1974.

Ultimately, the Mayday Protests weren't widely considered a success. Many of the planned blockades only held for a short time, and in some cases, protesters were arrested en masse before they even got to the blockades. However, the sheer size of the action did send a message to the Nixon administration, which, according to CIA director Richard Helms was "one of the things that was putting increasing pressure on the administration to try and find some way to get out of the war."

the property, before shutting the restaurant down, evicting him when he couldn't earn any money to pay rent, and now allegedly refusing to allow him to recover some of his investment.

"This is all a shame," said Olszewski. "This would've been a great thing for Rogers Park. We would've made history there. But they never really gave me the chance."

According to court documents, the Onward restaurant venture launched around 2018. It was the result of efforts by Loyola to recruit Olszewski, a "highly accomplished restaurateur" and a self-proclaimed proud alumnus and donor to Loyola, to open a fine dining restaurant in a hotel building the university owned at the corner of Sheridan Rd. and Albion Ave.

Olszewski has a history of operating restaurants in Chicago, including the former Grace restaurant, which had secured three Michelin stars before closing in 2017 amid a falling out between Olszewski and his chefs, according to published reports. Olszewski said he is now currently working on opening a new, still unnamed restaurant in the West Loop.

According to court documents and his statements, at the time Loyola recruited him, Olszewski expressed doubts about the ability of a fine dining establishment to succeed in Rogers Park, far from the Loop and lower income demographics. Olszewski said he told the university from the beginning that the restaurant needed time to "catch on," given its location.

"I told them it would take a year or two, at least," he said.

However, Olszewski and Loyola still entered into business together. Olszewski signed a lease and claims to have sunk more than $1 million of improvements into the space, turning it from a dirt floor and bare walls to the promised white tablecloth upscale dining establishment.

According to court documents filed by Loyola, the lease included "many terms favorable to Onward, including 12 months of rent abatement, an extended term, no personal guaranty despite Onward being a sole member LLC with no other known assets, and a below-market rent."

Olszewski opened the restaurant in early 2019. Olszewski said he had targeted the opening for autumn 2018, hoping to take advantage of the busy holiday dining season. However, he blamed Loyola for allegedly slowing the opening by allegedly failing to "live up to their duties as a landlord."

He said these included an alleged mix-up in providing electricity to the restaurant site for three months; failure to secure the building, resulting in a theft of building materials; and allegedly failing to build a wall between the restaurant space and a neighboring tea shop.

Olszewski has also accused Loyola of failing to remove graffiti from the restaurant's exterior walls and "permitted vagrants to loiter" around the restaurant, harming Onward's "first class, fine dining appearance" and generating complaints from customers.

Olszewski also accused Loyola of allowing the hotel to "open a competing bar and ... a roof top restaurant," allegedly violating its assurances that Onward would face no competition from the hotel.

In the complaint now pending against the university, Olszewski claimed "Loyola seemed utterly indifferent to Onward's financial success."

According to the complaint, after it opened, Onward enjoyed a steady increase in business and traffic, allegedly achieving net cash flow for the first time in Feb. 2020.

However, a month later, as the COVID pandemic arrived, the restaurant closed, and never reopened.

About a year later, Loyola initiated eviction proceedings, and the university and Olszewski have been in court against each other ever since. Olszewski countersued at that time, claiming the university operated in bad faith and moved quickly amid the pandemic to ensure Onward never reopened.

Loyola won a judgment in its favor in the eviction case, taking full possession of the property in May 2023.

In Oct. 2023, Olszewski filed his own suit against the university. In that action, Olszewski's company, Onward MSO, claims Loyola breached their contract; wrongfully evicted Onward; has allegedly wrongfully refused to allow Olszewski to recover more than $1 million in property and improvements from the space; and allegedly engaged in a "scheme to defraud," violating Illinois' Consumer Fraud and Deceptive Business Practices Act.

Olszewski says the university owes him perhaps as much as $1.5 million.

Property in question includes three fireplaces, allegedly worth $35,000; lights and chandeliers, $30,000; three full bathrooms, $35,000; tables, chairs, couches and cabinets, $35,000; stainless steel counters, shelving and sinks, $25,000; and more.

Olszewski asserts Loyola has never given him a realistic opportunity to retrieve and remove the property from the restaurant. Further, he noted communications he has presented to the court among Loyola administrators about Onward indicate the university was long seeking "to kick Onward to the curb."

In his complaint, he noted Loyola administrators would "openly mock" Olszewski, allegedly calling him a "nut job" and a "piece of work." And he cited a March 5, 2021, communication between Loyola administrators, in which one stated the university should "be sure we get the $10,000 fireplaces in the divorce."

In response to Olszewski's claims of conversion of property, Loyola says Olszewski should have and could have removed the property at any point in the months after Loyola told him he was being evicted. Because the property remained even after a judge granted the eviction, Loyola asserts the property now belongs to the university, under the terms of the lease.

Further, Loyola says Olszewski is misinterpreting the terms of the lease, by saying he still owns the physical improvements to the site, including improvements built into the structure.

The university says this would essentially mean Olszewski is arguing the terms of his lease have made him something of a co-owner. The university says such a conclusion would be "absurd" and would allow Olszewski and Onward essentially to hold the restaurant site "hostage," unless Loyola paid Olszewski.

Loyola has asked the court to dismiss Olszewski's action.

Olszewski, however, says he is seeking the chance to "get my day in court, before a jury."

"I just want to recoup what I spent there, what I put in," Olszewski said. "And I think Loyola should be reprimanded by a jury."

Michael Olszewski

O'HARE from p. 7

portant economic asset in Illinois," said ILEPI Economist and study author Frank Manzo IV. "While the pandemic and its aftermath have impacted initial cost and timeline estimates of this project, the data reveals that completing each of O'Hare's planned infrastructure improvements will deliver the best possible return on investment for all stakeholders—including passengers, taxpayers, and the region's economy."

According to IDOT and the Chicago Department of Aviation, the remaining elements to be completed as part of the O'Hare 21 and I-190 projects total over $8 billion in 2024 dollars.

"More than $8 billion in capital improvements and enhanced capacity to serve more people translate into jobs, increased consumer spending rippling across the economy, and higher state and local tax collections," Manzo added. "The construction phase of completing these projects as planned will create 95,000 jobs, grow the economy by more than $18 billion, and generate more than $800 million in state and local tax revenues by 2033." Beyond the near-term economic impacts of creating thousands of jobs per year, the report notes that the project would continue to deliver for the region's economy well after project completion, due to expanded airport capacity and increased demand from passengers. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has projected that O'Hare will see a 20 percent growth in enplaned passengers by the end of the decade. Based on O'Hare's 2022 financial statements, that would equate to a $280 million annualized increase in operating revenues.

"This analysis shows that more capacity and more consumer demand will mean hundreds of new permanent jobs both at the airport and beyond—including baggage handlers, flight attendants, pilots, TSA agents, and airport service providers as well as at local businesses where these workers spend money as consumers across all sectors in the Chicago metropolitan area," Manzo said.

Free concert in a garden June 16

The Edgewater Historical Society is hosting another free concert in their gardens 4:30 p.m. Sunday, June 16.

Rod MacDonald, guitarist, songwriter who also plays the harmonica is giving the special free concert at 5358 N. Ashland Ave. He has recently returned from a European tour.

MacDonald was a cofounder of the Greenwich Village Folk Festival, a 1980's revival, and he has performed with Pete Seeger, Peter Yarrow, Emmy Lou Harris and Richie Havens among others.

No reservation required, BYOB and snacks.

Veterans Resources Day is June 4

The 50th Ward and West Rogers Park partnering with the US Dept. of Veterans Affairs to offer a monthly Veterans Resources Day at the Ward Office. The first of these monthly events will be 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday, June 4.

These will be held the first Tuesday of every month at the 50th Ward Office, 2949 W. Devon.

Vets will meet individually with experts and get connected to resources tailored for veterans and their families.

Veterans, or those who know a veteran in need, may come to this event and get the help. Staff from the VA will be there to assist with enrollment for health care, disability and compensation, employment, financial assistance, and more.

For more information call 773-262-1050.

Friends of the Edgewater Library wants to hear your story

Everyone loves a good story and Friends of the Edgewater Library is inviting individuals to share theirs with the community by participating in "Edgewater Stories."

"Just as books come in all shapes, sizes, colors, and genres – so do our neighbors throughout Edgewater," said Joanna Broussard, Friends' president. "Every book tells a story, and every person has a story to tell. Through Edgewater Stories, we want to share those journeys to our diverse neighborhood."

Edgewater Stories is a community outreach initiative to encourage people to write stories about what brought them to Edgewater, what they like about living in the area, or why they started their business in this neighborhood. "We know there will be captivating stories and unusual experiences," Broussard said. "We hope to learn more about our culturally rich community and encourage participation by individuals of all ages."

Stories may cover whatever the writer wants to share. A story might include where the journey to Chicago began that ultimately led to Edgewater and why they chose the Edgewater neighborhood. Writers also may share any challenges they faced and how they overcame those challenges to move here.

"We want to know what ties people to this community. What is your connection to Edgewater?" Broussard asked. "If you know someone with an interesting journey to our neighborhood – someone who moved to Edgewater from another country, a family with multiple generations living in the area, someone with a unique talent that they brought to Edgewater, please encourage them to submit their story," Broussard said.

How to submit an article

Whether you live or work on the lake side of Edgewater, in Andersonville, or in between these areas, Friends of the Edgewater Library invites all neighbors to participate.

Ideally, Friends would like articles written in English. In some cases, Friends' members may be able to help translate an article into English, offer writing assistance, or meet with individuals to hear their stories.

Individuals who are inspired to create a story in another form such as a poem or a lyric are encouraged to do so. Stories must be typed in a Word document and sent to info@foelchicago.org by July 1. Complete details about Edgewater Stories are on the website at foelchicago.org/edgewater-stories.

Friends of the Edgewater Library will share a selection of the stories with the authors at a community event on Sept. 14 at the Edgewater Branch Library, 6000 N. Broadway.

Friends of the Edgewater Library is a non-profit, volunteer organization that supports the Edgewater Branch of the Chicago Public Library. It raises funds to supplement the library's budget to provide programs for the community. The group also purchases equipment, books, and supplies for children, teens, and adult programs and activities.

Joanna Broussard, president of Friends of the Edgewater Library.

Meet the Playwright: Joshua Allen on May 17

Playwright Joshua Allen, a fourth-generation Chicagoan whose ancestors were part of the Great Migration, will share his inspiration and writing process for his latest play, "The Prodigal Daughter," which will be performed at the Raven Theatre, 6157 N. Clark St., from May 16 to June 22.

The "Meet the Playwright" program will be held at 3 p.m. on Friday, May 17, at the Edgewater Branch Library, 6000 N. Broadway. The free program is a partnership with the library, Friends of the Edgewater Library and Edgewater Village Chicago.

During the program, Allen also will discuss the tension-filled story behind "The Prodigal Daughter," which is set on Chicago's South Side against the backdrop of the Red Summer of 1919.

The Red Summer was a pattern of white-on-black violence that was partly a reaction to the large influx of Black people who migrated North. The increasing hostility culminated in riots and deaths in parts of the United States, but particularly in Chicago.

"The Prodigal Daughter" centers on a woman determined to make her way in the world in the face of racial tension and unresolved familial conduct. A Q&A, facilitated by Raven Theatre's Artistic Director Sarah Slight will follow the presentation.

The play is the final installment of Allen's series, "The Grand Boulevard Trilogy." Grand Boulevard was an area bounded by 39th and 51st streets to the north and south, and by Cottage Grove Ave. and the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad tracks to the east and west.

Joshua Allen

In 1916, the city opened the Clarendon Municipal Beach, featuring an impressive brick building with two stately towers, separate open-air locker areas for men and women, and two smaller buildings housing a laundry and a children's playroom. Accommodating more than 9,000 swimmers and a promenade for thousands of spectators, the facility provided bathing suits, towels, and lockers. The beach remained popular until the late 1930s, when the CPD expanded Lincoln Park north to Foster Ave., thereby eliminating Clarendon's lake frontage. At that time, the city converted the facility into a community center, adding gymnasiums, clubrooms, a playground, and an athletic field.

The CPD assumed ownership of the Center in 1957.
