Florida's Pythons Coming To Eat Us?

ANN GERBER

GOT YOUR ATTENTION? Deadly Burmese pythons, thousands of them, are breeding in the Everglades and there is no effective plan to get rid of them. Since turning up in 2000, the Burmese python has become the face of South Florida's losing battle against invasive species, blamed for wiping out small mammals in Everglades National Park.

WHILE THE BURMESE has spread across hundreds of miles, recent sightings south of Lake Okeechobee suggest it is staking out new territory. Its cousin, the rock python, another invasive snake, has largely stayed in the small remnant marsh and nearby neighborhoods just east of Krome Avenue, under the watchful eye of state wildlife officers. Both are ambush predators, so camouflage is their currency. And like so many others before them, South Florida swampland has made them rich, with its tangle of high grasses and shallow marshes.

STORIES of the Burmese's ability to hide are legendary. Liz Barraco, who runs FWC's pet amnesty program, said state wildlife officers were trying to find a wood rat tagged with a tracker, once walked in circles after they located the tracker but no wood rat. Finally they realized the rat was inside the belly of a Burmese

Will 2015 be the last Pride Parade in Lakeview?

BY BIANCA MARTINEZ
Columbia Chronicle

The 46th annual Chicago Pride Parade, scheduled for June 28, may leave its usual Lakeview location after this year. The Mayor's Office and aldermen Tom Tunney (44th) and James Cappleman (46th) have recently been discussing the future of the parade, said Jamey Lundblad, director of Marketing and Communications for the Chicago Department of Cultural Affairs and Special Events.

How organizers will address concerns of overcrowding, brawls, medical response difficulties and persistent post-parade crime concerns remains to be seen.

Parade organizers and local politicians had been surveying the community and a variety of city departments about a proposal to move the popular, annual parade to a downtown location. City Hall sources who spoke with reporters stated unequivocally that every city department involved in the parade, including emergency services, has expressed the conviction that the parade should be moved to a more manageable location.

Changes to this year's parade include a stricter public safety plan, enhanced enforcement against drinking of alcoholic beverages in public and overall improvements to parade operations, Lundblad said. Unless the parade's impact on area residents' quality of life is seriously minimized this year, Lundblad said an advisory group will be assembled to make recommendations to relocate the parade to a different neighborhood.

The Pride Parade's troubles seem to date back to 2011 when large crowds packed Halsted St.

Three-mile long festival marks 606 Bloomingdale Trail Opening June 6-7

BY KATIE ROENIGK

The public is invited to enjoy music, dancing, processions and hands-on family activities as four of six ground-level parks that make up the 606 Bloomingdale Park and Trail project open on June 6 and 7. The three-mile, $95 million elevated 606 park, Chicago's newest park, also called the Bloomingdale Trail, runs through the Logan Square and Bucktown neighborhoods along the unused, elevated Bloomingdale rail line.

The opening weekend festival will take place across the full three miles of The 606 on Saturday, June 6 from 8:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., an expanse that stretches between Ashland Ave.(1600W) and Ridgeway Ave.(3750W) at Bloomingdale Ave.(1800N). A map is found at The606.org/map

For the festivities, the public may join one of the dozens of processions that will crisscross on the trail-top throughout the day, or plan their own processions by registering at The606.org/events.

There also will be sports, arts, and nature-centered activities underway at Walsh, Churchill, Milwaukee/Leavitt and Julia de Burgos, the four street-level parks that will open with the 606 Trail June

Wilson "El" station's art will combine old and new and reflect diverse tastes

BY PATRICK BUTLER

The CTA and the neighbors around the century-old Wilson Avenue Red Line station took the first step toward a $240,000 public art project last week. They met the artist who will be doing the job.

Cecil Balmond said he had no idea what he was going to do or how he was going to do it. "But rest assured I will find something that really works in that station in that area, with its history somehow impregnated in the work," the Sri Lankan-born artist/architect promised more than 30 residents and community leaders at a May 12, meeting at Brightview Healthcare Center, 4538 N. Beacon St.

Balmond admits it will be a stretch trying to blend "the modern with the classical" and jazz age flappers with 1960s civil rights activists, but the internationally-renowned artist, who was chosen from more than 200 applicants for the job, is no stranger to challenges.

One of his more recent commissions was to create an illuminated sculpture at Gretna, a town along the Anglo-Scottish border. "As you know, Scotland and England have had their issues," Balmond smiled.

The day of the meeting, Balmond had been checking out the old CTA station and the surrounding neighborhood, trying to get a feel for what he described as a complex area.

"There are lots of spaces and gaps here. Big swings from poor to affluent. It's not a complete town," he said. Balmond says he maintains a clear sense of the importance and challenges of public

Celebrate Sinatra's 100th at "The Carnegie Hall of Chicago"

Mariano Park, Merchant Marines and more

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Looking to have one classic, cool, and definitely hot evening? Because if you head to the Auditorium Theatre, 50 E. Congress Pkwy on May 30, you are sure to have all of those. That night, beautiful music and retro glam will fill the air with, "His Way--Sinatra's Centennial Celebration," which marks what would be the 100th birthday of Old Blue Eyes, Frank Sinatra. The always-great entertainer, Ron Hawking, will bring Sinatra and his songs back to life---his way. I'm already snapping my fingers and ready to groove with Hawking on Saturday.

Hawking created and produced "His Way" in 1998, to honor the late-great Chairman of the Board. His show has since played in major cities all over America, including a very successful run here at NBC Tower.

And he wants to be sure you know that his show is not just some run-of-the-mill Sinatra impersonation act. (After seeing Hawking in two shows in the past, I can vouch that it won't be).

"First of all, don't expect to come and see a Frank Sinatra impersonator, 'cause that's not what my show is about," said Hawking, a Grammy-nominated vocalist who was presented with the Chicago Music Award's 2014 Lifetime Achievement Award. "No, I like to think of myself as the musical messenger and that's really the cool part. I get a chance to use my own voice and add my own style, to interpret all of these wonderful songs.

"You can expect, however, to be tapping your fingers and toes and don't be surprised if you find yourself singing along with me, cause we have great musicians, playing great arrangements and together we will make a lot of music come to life," said Hawking. "You can also expect to laugh, and maybe even wipe a tear from your eye, but definitely expect to walk out of the theater thoroughly entertained."

natra, that his musical roots run very deep in our American culture and there will never be anyone like him again. "His larger than life persona, and the era in which he lived, it's all a part of our American history," said Hawking, who has had bit roles in a couple of movies and who also studied improv at Second City. "Whether you like Sinatra or not, he is a genuine musical work of art, and like all genuine articles, his roots are so strong and so embedded in our culture, it's my belief, they should always be cherished a remembered."

Music lovers, romantics, the young-at-heart, "anyone that likes to get dressed up, grab a cocktail and listen to the classic songs of the great American songbook," should come, Hawking said.

"This is my first time performing at the Auditorium Theatre," said Hawking. "Its history is so rich I like to call it the Carnegie Hall of Chicago. As they celebrate their 125th anniversary season, I think of all the wonderful artists that have graced the stage with their presence and I'm so honored to be performing on that very same stage."

"It's made this Chicago boy feel very proud, very proud indeed."

Chicago's revenue needs say it's time to open a casino, but where?

BY DON DeBAT

With Chicago's bond rating down to junk levels and the city going broke, is a downtown casino a gamble? Or is it a sure way to raise the millions of dollars in tax revenue the Windy City needs?

City property owners know they are facing a hefty property-tax hike next year. From a homeowner's point of view, Chicagoans agree Mayor Rahm Emanuel should do everything possible to raise the money needed to bail out the city's $30-billion pension fund debt without hiking property taxes.

The city's new junk-bond rating from Moody's Investor Service applies to a whopping $8.1 billion in general-obligation debt, $542 million in outstanding sales tax revenue debt and $268 million in outstanding and authorized motor fuel tax revenue. Experts say real estate taxes may have to be increased 40 percent or more to help pay down the debt. That means the $6,000 tax bill on a typical Chicago bungalow could jump to $8,400. This could force homeowners on fixed incomes into bankruptcy. Landlords will have to pass along hefty rent increases to pay their real estate tax bills. It is possible that rent on a typical one-bedroom apartment in Lincoln Park could rise to an astronomical $2,362 a month from the current $1,680.

It's no wonder every politician in Springfield is hoping to find a way to generate millions of dollars in revenue for the city and state without raising taxes.

The Chicago casino questions are many. How much tax money could the city and state of Illinois collect off of a downtown gambling casino? What does a new casino cost? Where's the best place to build it? What is the impact on Chicagoans?

According to input and data presented recently at an Illinois legislative hearing by experts from the hotel industry, labor unions, race-horse breeders, video-gaming specialists, and saloon and bar owners, almost everyone sees a Chicago casino as a godsend.

The lobbyists testified that downtown gaming could help expand convention and tourist business with spin-off revenue flowing to hotels, restaurants, museums and Michigan Avenue shopping generating up to $6.6 billion in annual revenue, with direct tax revenue of $3 billion to $4 billion to the city and state.

Building trade unions would love to see a $300-million casino erected in the heart of the Loop near Block 37 and the Cadillac Theatre to create thousands of construction jobs.

Other lobbyists wouldn't mind seeing the casino at Navy Pier, near the new arena site at McCormick Place, or at the former Olympic Village site, formerly Michael Reese Hospital, where the city already has spent $100-million for site acquisition and development.

"Everyone wants a piece of the action because gaming profits are huge," noted Roger Zak, a twice-a-week casino gambler who plays for entertainment and perks. "Three video poker machines in a Chicago bar can generate $100,000 in annual profit for just one small saloon keeper."

However, with the city and state revenue needs so dire, why build a new casino?

The obvious solution is adaptive reuse of the existing original McCormick Place East building, which looks a lot like an aircraft carrier and already is anchored on the shore overlooking Lake Michigan. Move in 1,000 slots and video poker machines, add 200 manned gaming tables, toss in a few restaurants and bars and Black Jack Emanuel could be in business.

action and the fun of downtown gambling.

"Everyone from Chicago will travel downtown to the casino," predicts Zak. "It's all about money. I'm betting on the Chicago casino, and the odds of it getting built are 100 percent."

Cecil Balmond ponders a question about plans for a major art project at the Wilson Avenue CTA station during a recent community meeting. art. "I don't take public art lightly. It's for the public. But I'm also aware the public has many different tastes," Balmond said.

As expected, there was no shortage of questions and advice from the audience. Uptown Historical Society President Martin Tangora wanted to know how Balmond plans to achieve his goal of "becoming modern while staying classical" when the areas "great buildings are from the 1920s and the new station will be very modern. I'm going to be very impressed if you can capture both of these themes" in the same project, Tangora told Balmond.

Another man in the audience said that while Uptown has a lot of history, "it's more important to look to the future, to where the community is going, not just where it's been."

Still another resident advised Balmond that "one of the things you should be aware of is that this area has a lot of heart. We have more non-profit organizations here than anywhere else in the city. I just thought you should be aware of that."

CTA spokesman Catherine Hosinski said all the give-and-take is part of an ongoing effort to keep the artist and the community talking to one another. "We want this to continue to be a two-way conversation."

The art project is part of the CTA's $203 million reconstruction of the Wilson elevated station that started last year and is expected to be completed by the end of 2017. Every weekday, 19,600 passengers ride past the Wilson station on the CTA's Red and Purple line trains. Once the 92-year-old Wilson station is renovated, it will serve as a transfer point between the two lines and be wheelchair-accessible for the first time.

In addition to upgraded train operations that will make travel more convenient and pleasant for passengers, business leaders think the upgrade will help spur economic development and serve as a gateway giving new presence to the Uptown neighborhood.

When the renovation is complete, it will be time for Balmond's job to begin, Hosinski said.

Bi-partisan Congressional legislation aims to curb millions of bird deaths in the U.S.

BY PETER VON BUOL

Supporters of a recent bi-partisan bill recently introduced by Rep. Michael Quigley (D. Ill/5) and Rep. Morgan Griffith (R. Va/9) believe that, if adopted, the legislation would help reduce many of the millions of bird deaths that occur annually throughout the nation.

Introduced as the Federal Bird-Safe Buildings Act (HR 2280), the legislation would require federal buildings to incorporate features which would make them more “bird-friendly” and help reduce the up to one-billion bird deaths that occur on an annual basis throughout the nation (most of these occur in migratory seasons of spring and fall).

For the past few decades, scientists at Chicago’s Field Museum of Natural History have studied bird-collisions at Chicago’s McCormick Place. These scientists have noticed that during migratory season, bird species rarely seen in the area fly along the lakefront. Some, unfortunately crash into buildings and it is speculated they are birds that navigate using stars and large bodies of water.

Earlier, Quigley had accompanied these scientists and had found the experience to be particularly sad and helped inspire legislation he sponsored while he was a Cook County Commissioner. “It was incredibly sad to see hundreds of these birds killed by the collisions with buildings,” said Quigley.

Supporters of the bill believe it will not add additional costs to the federal budget. In fact, some believe that because it includes simple measures such as turning lights off at night during migratory seasons in federal offices, it may actually save taxpayers money.

“It’s real simple; you either turn lights off or close blinds during the migratory season. There is also bird-safe glass and netting,” Quigley said.

“Collisions with glass-buildings claim hundreds of millions of bird lives each year in the U.S. The Federal Bird-Safe Buildings Act, a cost neutral bill, would help prevent these deaths by including bird-safe materials and design features across federal buildings,” Quigley added.

Rep. Griffith, the bill’s co-sponsor, adds the bill will only apply to federal buildings and will help protect the lives of many birds.

“This bill is a balanced approach, applying strictly to federal government buildings. It is a simple, cost neutral legislation that will protect millions of birds. I am proud to support this reasonable and practical step to curb unnecessary harm to our nation’s wild animals,” said Griffith in a written statement. Griffith’s district includes a large portion of western Virginia.

Dr. Christine Sheppard, a scientist who is affiliated with the bird-advocacy group the American Bird Conservancy, added that she believes the adoption of federal rules will encourage others to follow its lead.

“While only limited to federal buildings, it is a very good start that could lead to more wide-spread applications of bird-friendly designs elsewhere,” Sheppard said in a statement released by the ABC.

Another chief concern for the wildlife conservation is the death total in the nation due to the proliferation of wind-turbines. Each year, ABC scientists estimate millions of bird deaths are caused by spinning blades that when moving rapidly, seem to remain invisible to birds.

Community input shaping North Lake Shore Drive project

Numerous public meetings have been held since the North Lake Shore Drive [NLSD] Phase I Study kickoff in 2013 and a purpose and need statement based on existing conditions and transportation needs has been drafted and approved.

The project study group, consisting of the Illinois Department of Transportation [IDOT], the Chicago Department of Transportation [CDOT], the Federal Highway Administration [FHA], the Chicago Park District and the Chicago Transit Authority [CTA], now is in the process of identifying, developing and evaluating alternatives.

In 2015, the group anticipates hosting its fourth task force meeting and third public meeting. These meetings will be a chance for task force members and the general public to review the initial range of alternatives developed by the project study group. The alternatives will address improvements needed along NLSD as documented in the purpose and need statement.

After these meetings are held, the project study group will review the public input and select alternatives to be carried forward for more detailed study. Additional public meetings will be held during the subsequent steps as well.

Many Comments

Since the second NLSD public meeting in July 2014, the project team has reviewed more than 1,500 comments that describe

Chicago birds losing fear of people

BY MARTHA ROSENBERG

I have been a bird watcher for many years and name among my sightings rare green and tricolored herons, Mississippi kites, yellow crown herons, great horned owls and more. Last year I saw some newborn eaglets in a huge eagle’s nest. But I don’t have to travel too far to see another interesting bird phenomenon right here in Chicago--wild birds are becoming tame and even bold.

Twenty years ago, sea gulls abounded on Lake Michigan as they do now. But only recently do they approach and beg from people. Anyone who goes to the beach during the summer has experienced sea gulls brazenly walking on their beach towels and raiding any food they have left while they are taking dip in the water. Sea gulls now come within a foot of humans when food is offered.

And speaking of practically eating out of your hand, house sparrows actually do when you are seated at Starbucks or other outdoor cafes. Not a true sparrow but actually a member of the weaver finch family, diminutive house sparrows now “beg” next to your coffee and croissant and eat out of your hand, if you so offer.

At Millennium Park these new bold avians are especially apparent thriving on the tourists, food and the lack of natural predators. Red-winged blackbirds, which have agricultural roots though they have certainly adapted to urban environments, have also become fearless. They beg on outdoor tables where people are eating and eat out of people’s hands like the house sparrow, if people feed them.

And pigeons? Rock doves of course are plentiful in Chicago and other urban environments and have adapted to being fed by man for years. During the cold weather, they warm themselves under the CTA heat lamps at the transit stations and try to keep their babies warm since they can breed all year, not just in the spring.

The cold weather is rough on Chicago’s pigeons. As many as 25 percent seem to have missing toes or even feet from freezing to metal during the winter when they tried to perch and ending up stuck. These amputee birds stay with the flock and continue to beg and forage for food despite only having the full use of one foot.

Chicago pigeons, at least the ones on the CTA platforms, have also learned a new trick. While pigeons certainly know the sound and sight of potato chips, cookies or granola bars and beg, the smarter ones have begun to play “helicopter.” At exactly the height of your hand with a snack in it they will hover in place as if to say--“notice anything”? “Hey--over here!”

Certainly the bird six inches from your hand--or less--is more likely to get a morsel from your granola bar than his brethren on the ground. So losing the fear of man is clearly evolutionary behavior for these urban birds.

Sheila von Wiese-Mack memorial and dedication event to be held in Evanston on June 13

Sheila von Wiese-Mack

A grand piano and memorial plaque dedication ceremony and inaugural memorial concert for the late Sheila von Wiese-Mack will be held on Saturday, June 13 at 2:00 pm in the Community Room of Evanston Public Library, 1703 Orrington Avenue. David Yonan, violin, Steven Greene, piano and musicians of the Fine Arts Music Society will perform works by Schubert, Mendelssohn, Ilya Levinson, Arvo Paert and Gershwin at the event, timed to coincide with von Wiese-Mack's birthday weekend. Von Wiese-Mack lost her life in Bali last August due to criminal violence.

"Last December, I was honored and touched when Sheila's brother Bill Wiese and her sister Debbi Curran bequeathed Sheila and James Mack's baby grand piano to me, as I had performed many times in Sheila's home accompanied by various pianists, including Jim," says David Yonan, founder and president of the Fine Arts Music Society. "In light of this and to pay tribute to Sheila, I decided that the most appropriate way to honor Sheila's memory and her beautiful, loving personality, was for us to donate the piano to the Evanston Public Library (EPL), which had no grand piano before." A memorial plaque dedicated to Sheila will also be displayed in the Evanston Public Library.

Von Wiese-Mack was known for her love of music, books and the fine arts and worked closely with Senator Ted Kennedy, Jacqueline Onassis and Saul Bellow during her life. Her late husband James (Jim) L. Mack was a well-known composer and producer who worked with artists like Nancy Wilson and Tyrone Davis and chaired the music department at Harold Washington College for more than 30 years.

The public library venue in diverse Evanston would be Sheila's idea of a "perfect party," says Yonan. "It will be lovely to celebrate her life, sharing our memories of her surrounded by her close friends and family." Organizers hope to make a memorial concert a yearly event.

People wishing to make tax-deductible donations to a memorial fund for von Wiese-Mack may send checks written out to the Evanston Public Library and earmarked "Sheila von Wiese-Mack Memorial Concert" to Evanston Public Library, Attn: Lynn Shawyer, Development Officer, 1703 Orrington Avenue, Evanston, IL 60201 (847-448-8657).

To attend the memorial concert and dedication event, please RSVP by June 1 to merylgale@aol.com (847-966-1237).

Officials and parents voice Noble charter school objections

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Putting a charter school at 640 W. Irving Park would “suck the life blood from surrounding local high schools, Ald. James Cappleman (46th) warned last week.

Cappleman was one of two aldermen and five public school principals at a Friday, May 21 news conference outside the Chicago Public Schools’ (CPS) headquarters at 43 W. Madison St., where a hearing was being held into whether Noble Academy should be allowed to move into Lake View from 17 N. State Street.

“We have done the heavy lifting because we have volunteered in the classrooms, chaperoned on the field, done fundraising because our budgets are constantly under attack because we believe in a comprehensive K through 12 neighborhood experience,” said Jeff Jenkins, a Coonley School parent and local school council (LSC) member.

Amundsen Principal Anna Pavichevich said a charter school in the surrounding neighborhood would only be a “distraction” from what should be CPS commitment to beef up existing neighborhood public schools.

It’s bad enough that bringing in Noble would adversely impact Lake View, Lane, Senn and Amundsen high schools, “but now we’ve learned that Intrinsic, another charter school, is trying to open near Rosehill Cemetery, which again would impact us all,” said Senn principal Susan Lofton.

But it gets even worse said a dozen of local elected officials including U.S. Rep. Jan Shakowsky (D-9th). In a letter to Mayor Rahm Emanuel and CPS President David Vitale and CEO Jesse Ruiz, they noted the same thing could be happening in Rogers Park where Noble is considering opening still another school in the vacant St. Jerome’s school building, not far from Sullivan High School.

Charles Tocci, another Coonley LSC member, said charter schools like Noble just wouldn’t fit in the neighborhood. “They have admitted to issuing fines for minor infractions and they have admitted to expelling or ‘counseling out’ students they don’t want. This is not how you run a neighborhood high school. It’s more like [how] you run a nightclub where they choose who gets in, charge them every chance you get, then toss out the ones you don’t want,” he said.

According to Noble Academy’s website, the school was founded in 1999 by two former CPS teachers in cooperation with the Northwestern University Settlement Association.

Its stated goals are to “prepare low-income students with the scholarship, discipline and honor necessary to succeed in college and lead exemplary lives and serve as a catalyst for education reform in Chicago.” Noble’s relatively strict discipline code forbids tardiness, requires uniforms and imposes fines for misbehavior. The school offers longer class periods, a longer school day and a longer school year than the traditional public high school. According to its website, the school is modeled after Philip Exeter Academy, an elite New England boarding school. A decision on whether to give Noble Academy the green light to move into 640 W. Irving Park could come as early as this week when the school board holds its next meeting.

Police Beat

Man pummeled during robbery
A 56-year-old man was punched, kicked and pummeled May 19 during a robbery on a sidewalk near the lakefront in Rogers Park. He was attacked by three men around 11:20 p.m. in the 7300 block of N. Sheridan Rd., police said. One of the robbers dug $20 cash out of the victim's pocket before the group fled the area on foot and escaped.

He was treated at St. Francis Hospital in Evanston for a dislocated shoulder, fractured right hand and a laceration around his eye, according to hospital physicians. He was being kept in stable condition when the report was made, police said.

The attackers were described as black males in their middle-20s. Two of the men were wearing black hooded sweatshirts while the third man's clothing wasn't described.

Police arrest man after he threatened woman with knife
Rogers Park police arrested a man May 18 after his girlfriend claimed he attacked her with a steak knife. Officers investigating an assault in progress found a crying, hysterical woman around 10 p.m. in the 6900 block of N. Ashland Blvd. The woman said after a fight that her 48-year-old boyfriend had chased her through the apartment with a knife and threatened to cut her up, according to the report.

At first, the woman had been prevented by her boyfriend from leaving the apartment. When she threatened to call 911, the man allegedly said, "Well if I'm going to jail I'm going to make it worthwhile," according to police.

He then fished out the steak knife from the kitchen and swung it at the woman as she raced for the door, police said. Officers found the knife under a mattress while the victim helped them search the house. The attacker was arrested and charged with aggravated assault with a knife, police said.

Police see man hit with car during domestic argument
A 21-year-old was hit by a car driven by a gang member and needed 21 stitches in his nose to close a wound after a May 16 quarrel in West Ridge.

Officers investigating an aggravated battery call in the 6000 block of N. Washtenaw Ave. found several members of a family along with several outsiders in the street after 4 a.m. The mother of the woman involved told police her daughter had been fighting with her boyfriend and went out into the street to continue fighting.

While officers were outside looking for the girl she returned alone and began talking with her brother in the street. They told the pair to go back inside the house, which they began doing, when the boyfriend drove out of an alley in his vehicle and struck the girl's brother, according to police.

The driver of the vehicle, who police have identified and say belongs to the Latin Kings gang, fled the scene when he saw officers were there and escaped.

An ambulance took the brother to Swedish Covenant Hospital to receive the stitches. He was in good condition and released a short time later, police said. A warrant was issued for the arrest of the driver of the vehicle, according to police.

Man caught buying cocaine had several serious arrest alerts to his name
A man arrested May 16 in West Ridge for buying and possessing cocaine had two investigative alerts against him, the first for robbery and the second for aggravated kidnapping, police said. Officers had stopped the 44-year-old on his bicycle around 1:40 p.m. in an alley near 6300 N. Fairfield Ave. Tactical officers working a narcotics surveillance had spotted him several minutes earlier making hand-to-hand transactions with drug dealers near the intersection of N. Washtenaw and Rosemont Avenues, police said.

The cocaine was found in the man's clothing after he consented to a search. He admitted to buying the drugs on the street and claimed he used them once or twice a week, according to the report. Detectives were called to the 24th District lock-up to interview the man, police said.

Teenager hit with bullet
A 19-year-old suffered minor injuries May 15 when he was hit with a bullet south of Warren Park in West Ridge. Two men had confronted a group of five around 1:30 a.m. in the 6400 block of N. Leavitt St., according to police. The lead man had pulled a handgun and fired several shots at the group before fleeing through a gangway and escaping.

The victim suffered a bullet wound through the muscle of the right thigh and was taken to St. Francis Hospital in Evanston for treatment. He was released a short time later in good condition, according to the emergency room physician.

Officers said the victim gave conflicting statements about the circumstances of the shooting. Police were unable to locate evidence of a crime scene. Several witnesses located near the scene said they'd heard multiple shots fired but didn't see anything, according to police.

Man beaten with baseball bat
A 49-year-old South Side Chicago man was beaten with a baseball bat May 13 near the north end of Rogers Park. A man and a woman cracked the victim with the bat, then punched and kicked him in the head and chest sometime around 4 a.m. on the 7600 block of N. Sheridan Rd. during a fight over money, police said. The victim said he knew the woman but had never seen the man.

The victim was taken to St. Francis Hospital in Evanston with a laceration to the head and lips and bruising to the chest. He was released later the same morning, police said. The two attackers ran after the attack and could not be found that night, police said.

Man robbed bringing in the groceries
A man bringing groceries into his apartment was robbed at gunpoint on Pratt Blvd in West Ridge the night of May 11. The 45-year-old victim was on the 2300 block hauling up bags of groceries with his girlfriend when two men charged him. The man's girlfriend was inside the apartment when the men confronted him, according to the report.

The first man, who was pointing a handgun, demanded money, police said. The victim gave them a debit card and social security card.

Before leaving, the gunman demanded the pin number to the card, which the victim gave him, police said. The men ran west on Pratt Blvd and escaped. No one was injured in the incident.

Woman robbed in tough section of Rogers Park
A woman told police she had her purse taken at gunpoint in the hardscrabble section of Rogers Park between W. Juneway and W. Jonquil Terraces. The 27-year-old called 911 around 3:45 a.m. on May 11 to say she'd been robbed walking home from the Howard CTA Red Line station.

A man dressed in all black had approached her as she walked south in the 7700 block of N. Paulina St. and pointed a handgun at her, police said. The man was given her purse which contained $40 cash and several credit cards. Officers made a tour of the neighborhood afterwards but did not arrest anybody, according to the department.

Safe cycling classes offered for aspiring cyclists

The public can learn rules of the road for city cycling

With the city of Chicago installing nearly 100 miles of protected and buffered bike lanes in recent years and many suburbs adding more biking infrastructure, there's no doubt the region is becoming a friendlier place to ride a bike. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the percentage of Chicagoans biking to work has risen more than 150 percent in the past fifteen years.

Despite these advances, many people are nervous about getting on two wheels. Beginning this spring, the Active Transportation Alliance is hoping to change that by offering City Cycling classes. The Active Transportation Alliance, formerly the Chicagoland Bicycle Federation, works to make bicycling, walking and public transit safe, convenient and fun to promote clean, active travel and a shift from environmentally harmful, sedentary travel.

While there's no question that Chicago and many suburban communities are more bikable than ever, it's perfectly natural to have some anxiety about sharing the roadway with motor traffic.

On Saturday June 13, July 11 and August 8 and on dates in the fall, the Active Transportation Alliance will host City Cycling classes at its River North headquarters, 9 West Hubbard Street, Suite 402, from 9:00 am to noon. The classes are open to adults and teenagers and will consist of 1.5 hours of classroom instruction and 1.5 hours of on-street instruction.

"While there's no question that Chicago and many suburban communities are more bikable than ever, it's perfectly natural to have some anxiety about sharing the roadway with motor traffic," says Active Transportation Alliance's Executive Director Ron Burke. "Our aim is to reach out to those individuals who see all the fun and convenience of city cycling, but would like to learn some 'tricks of the trade' before trekking out on their own."

Attendees can expect to learn basic traffic skills, tips on choosing a bike, basic maintenance and plenty of advice on staying safe while riding. Classes will be taught by instructors licensed by the League of American Bicyclists. "We want to keep classes relatively low-cost and accessible to anyone wanting to get on two wheels," says instructor Jason Jenkins. Classes cost $15 for members of the Active Transportation Alliance and $50 for non-members (the non-member fee includes a $35 tax-deductible membership fee in the purchase price).

To sign up for classes visit activetrans.org/safecyclingclass. For more information about the Active Transportation Alliance and tips on safe and smart riding visit www.activetrans.org or call 312-427-3325.

Swedish Covenant Hospital receives nursing excellence award

Swedish Covenant Hospital, Chicago's leading independent teaching hospital located on the city's north side, has again been granted Magnet Recognition by the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC). The voluntary credentialing program for hospitals recognizes excellence in nursing. This credential is the highest honor an organization can receive for professional nursing practice.

The hospital first received Magnet designation in May 2010. Swedish Covenant Hospital is one of only 38 Magnet recognized hospitals in Illinois, and just six in Chicago.

"We are proud to be recognized once again by the American Nurses Credentialing Center for the quality of our nursing care," says Swedish Covenant Hospital President and CEO Mark Newton. "This achievement highlights our belief in the importance and value of excellent nursing care for our patients and their families."

To achieve initial Magnet recognition, organizations must pass a rigorous and lengthy process that demands widespread participation from leadership and staff. The process begins with the submission of an electronic application, followed by written documentation demonstrating qualitative and quantitative evidence regarding patient care and outcomes. If scores from the written documentation fall within a range of excellence, an on-site visit will occur to thoroughly assess the applicant. After this rigorous on-site review process, the Commission on Magnet will review the completed appraisal report and vote to determine whether Magnet recognition will be granted.

According to the ANCC, Magnet recognition has been shown to provide specific benefits to hospitals and their communities, such as:

- Higher patient satisfaction with nurse communication, availability of help and receipt of discharge information
- Lower risk of 30-day mortality and lower failure to rescue
- Higher job satisfaction among nurses
- Lower nurse reports of intentions to leave position

"Being recognized as a Magnet facility for the second time is a tremendous achievement for Swedish Covenant Hospital," says Senior Vice President of Nursing/Chief Nursing Officer Mary Shehan. "It demonstrates our ongoing commitment to quality patient outcomes, multi-disciplinary team work and support for professional development. Thank you to our entire nursing staff for the work you do day in and day out to provide our patients with the very best care and support."

Bezazian Branch to Screen Academy Award Nominated Comedy on May 30

The Bezazian Branch of the Chicago Public Library, 1226 W. Ainslie Street (west of Broadway), will screen the Grand Budapest Hotel, a 2015 Academy Award nominee for best picture on Saturday, May 30th at 2 pm. Ralph Fiennes stars in this whimsical comedy about a concierge at a European hotel and his misadventures with the lobby boy, the future owner of the hotel. It includes performances and cameo appearances by Edward Norton, Bill Murray, Harvey Keitel, Jason Schwartzman, Tilda Swinton and Jude Law among others. The movie runs 110 minutes and is Rated "R" because of language, some sexual content and violence. For additional information, call the Bezazian Branch at (312) 744-0019.

Senior LIVING

Tips for 'retirement living'

With all the talk—and concern—about dwindling retirement funds and our shaky economy, many retirees and soon-to-be-retired boomers are concerned about the financial aspects of retirement planning.

But what about retirement living?

In other words, what would you like to do with the rest of your life?

Financial issues aside, there's a lot to be done to make retirement living a great time of life.

"When I was younger, I thought retirement living would be boring," said John Handler, 76, of Seattle.

"But I'm taking a watercolor class, meeting new people, and I have a part-time job I like. My days have a variety I never had before."

Here are a few retirement living tips, from suggestions by Joan Carter, cofounder of Life Options Institute. As you read these tips, think about how they apply to your life.

Retirement living is about more than money. Financial planners tell us to start thinking about retirement living decades before we're ready to retire, and it's good to make a retirement planning checklist about five years before your retirement date.

While thinking about how much money is needed in retirement, think about what life will look like, and how it should feel.

Make life plans

It's important to plan for the non-financial aspect of retirement living by considering what will make you happy. Maybe you'll climb Mt. Kilimanjaro, go dog sledding in Alaska, make time lifelong learning classes offered by your local community center or college?

Volunteer

Getting involved in your community is a great way to give back, and it's a wonderful opportunity to interact with people and make new friends. Senior Corps offers volunteer opportunities tailored for older adults.

Develop new friendships

A measurement of whether people are successful at retirement living is the strength of their social network—that includes family and friends. Check out groups that help you meet new people or join community or religious organizations that have members who share your interests. It's possible to meet people and make new friends even if it's difficult to get around. Did you know that friendship helps to increase longevity?

Ask your spouse or partner

If you live with someone or have a close partner, retirement living becomes a shared experience. It's important to make time for you and your partner to both share your dreams—you might be pleasantly surprised to learn that your partner wants to join you on that Mt. Kilimanjaro climb, and he or she may have ideas you'll enjoy.

Increase your financial stability

If you can't afford to retire yet, what about partial retirement? This can include working part-time in your current job or finding a retirement job that's new and interesting—and will also help you earn money.

Keep your spirits up

The life changes that come with retirement living can be challenging, but your attitude plays a big part in whether you'll find happiness in retirement living or not.

Check in with yourself to assess your mood; if you feel sad or hopeless, it's important to see your doctor or a professional counselor. Learn the signs of and senior depression, or ask a friend or family member to assess your mood, and don't be afraid to ask for help.

Remain healthy

Carter brought up an old adage: A lean horse for a long race. With increasing life spans, retirement living can be a long race, so get yourself in shape. That means eating well, watching your weight and staying active. When you feel good, it's easier to stay positive and open to new experiences.

Handler, who retired at 66, says he's looking forward to his next decade of retirement living.

"I wake up every morning and wonder what I'll learn today," he said.

Senior LIVING

How to be good to yourself

We rush around taking care of others, our jobs, children, grandchildren and even our parents. We struggle to pay off credit card debt and keep up with rising costs. As we go about our busy day, meeting the demands of life, we forget how important it is to not only be good to others but to be good to ourselves. It is important to take care of our own well being. Here are a few easy and simple things that we can do that will help each of us to be good to ourselves in our daily living.

When bathing, take the time to relax. Feel the warmth of the water on your body. Allow your muscles to relax. This is your own personal time so use it to your best advantage.

If you are a working person, take a few extra minutes the night before to lay out your work clothes and things that you will need for the next day before going to bed. This way you have an extra few minutes in the morning and will be more relaxed as you head out to work.

Each day, give yourself some time that is yours and yours alone to read, stretch, meditate or reflect on a positive experience or thought.

Take time to enjoy your meals. Allow yourself to actually feel the taste and flavor before swallowing.

Be nice - but sometimes we can be too nice. If you have a choice and you are with someone that consistently chooses to be in a negative mood, try to detach from that person's emotional turmoil. It is good to listen and be of moral support to another, but if that person chooses to continue to be negative that is their choice, not yours. Be good to yourself.

Take time to look at nature. Look at the sky, the shape of a tree, or the way a frog jumps.

Smile, even when you do not want to do it. Not only will it be pleasing to others, you might just find out how that smile will come back to you.

Our feet can give us pain, but a good foot rub can relax other parts of the body. Take a little time to rub lotion on your feet. Move your hands slowly and massage the feet. Just before bedtime is a good time to do this. It feels so good!

Treat yourself now and then with something special. It doesn't have to cost a lot of money. It might be something as simple as listening to your favorite music that you haven't played for awhile. Just know that it is special to you.

Last but not least, always remember that you are important, you are alive, you are loved and you are special. Above all, treat yourself treat yourself that way. That is how to be good to yourself.

Three reasons aging may not be so bad

BY ISABEL TOM

As they inch closer to their 30th birthday, I often hear my friends say they're feeling "old."

My birthday is drawing closer, and I'll be honest - 28 sounds so much older and less adventurous than 27 does. It's true, in today's society, youth is perceived as golden, and being old...well, that's like a death sentence. I know it's not really true, but when everyone else believes that aging sucks, well, it's hard not to believe it too. So for those of you out there who just can't bear getting one year older, here are some reasons why I believe aging is not so bad after all.

1. Senior citizen discounts. Let's first be real. Who doesn't like getting a discount? Senior citizens happen to get some of the best discounts around, and I think these are reminders that getting older comes with some great perks. One of the discounts that I am looking forward to (in years to come) is from the National Parks Service (NPS). The NPS provides an annual parks pass allowing entry into national parks for $80 per year. If you're over 62, you pay $10 - not for an annual pass, but for a LIFETIME pass. Other great deals exist at hotels, restaurants and stores.

2. You get to be yourself. When you're young, you've got something to prove, and life can be tough because there are often times when you do need to impress the boss, the prospective spouse or your peers. It can be so stressful. But imagine, once you're 75, 80 or 92, you're allowed to truly be yourself. One thing I've learned, and I love about being with seniors, is that they are genuine. Why? My reasoning is that, by that age, you are comfortable in your own skin, and you can be who you really are. How refreshing huh?

3. Reaping what you sow. The 20s, in my opinion, are probably the toughest time in life, but when you reach your later years, you truly get to reap what you sow. From 20 to 30, you make a lot of decisions that affect the rest of your life. What will you become careerwise? Who will you spend the rest of your life with? Where do you want to live? What stressful and tough decisions to make! But fast forward a few decades, and you come to the point where you get to see the fruit of your hard work. When do people get into the Hall of Fame? When do people get to enjoy grandkids? When does retirement begin? Yes, later in life, and while you will have wrinkles and maybe white hair, think about the satisfaction you will get from seeing the results of your hard work.

So there you go. Enjoy your life now, but look forward to what life will bring, because there is a lot more to look forward to, even in the last third of your life.

AARP seeks nominees for community award

The AARP is accepting nominations for its 2015 Illinois Andrus Award for Community Service honoring 50-plus residents who share their experience, talent and skills to enrich the lives of community members.

Named for the founder of the AARP, the Andrus Award is the association's most prestigious and visible volunteer honor.

"AARP's strong commitment to volunteer service traces back to our founder, Dr. Ethel Percy Andrus," AARP Illinois State President Rosanna Márquez said. "The Andrus Award recognizes those who diligently give in ways that significantly impact the lives of others and their communities in a manner that reflects AARP's vision."

AARP selects one Andrus Award volunteer per state. Couples performing service together also are eligible for the award, but teams are not eligible.

Nominees do not need to be AARP members, nor do they need to have partaken in AARP volunteer work to receive the award.

Nominations will be evaluated by a panel of AARP Illinois volunteers and staff. The selection will be made based on the volunteer's work to improve the community, support AARP's vision and mission and inspire others.

Nominees must meet the following eligibility requirements:

- Nominees must be 50 years old or older.
- The achievements, accomplishments, or service on which the nomination is based must have been performed on a volunteer basis, without pay.
- The achievements, accomplishments, or service on which the nomination is based must reflect AARP's vision and mission.
- The recipient must live in Illinois.

This is not a posthumous award.

Individuals and organizations can submit nominations for the 2015 Andrus Award for Community Service by visiting aarp.org/AndrusAward. The application deadline is Tuesday, June 2. More information is available by calling 1-866-448-3613.

One resident's philosophy: the best is yet to come

In 1985, Ronald Regan was sworn in for his second term as President of the United States; the Chicago Bears had their most successful season ever, culminating in their only Super Bowl victory; and Clare resident Joyce Saxon was wowing the advertising industry by paying $1 million for a 30-second ad in that '85 Super Bowl telecast to launch Discover Card, then owned by Sears.

As women still struggle to receive equal pay today, 30 years ago Joyce was a top earner in a male-dominated field. For decades, she enjoyed a successful career at the premier advertising agency J. Walter Thompson, working her way up to the title of senior vice president.

For anyone who has shared a meal with Joyce in The Clare's sumptuous Grafton Room, it's easy to see why she was the No. 1 media buyer in Illinois, Indiana, and other Midwest states. Engaging and animated, her vivacious personality shines though as she enthusiastically shares stories of her fascinating life hobnobbing with celebrities and rubbing elbows with the country's broadcast elite.

Growing up in Old Town and living most of her life in the city, Joyce has become as much of an institution here as the Chicago Bears themselves. Just mention Joyce's name to any Clare resident (or most of Chicago's veteran broadcasters, for that matter), and you'll get a knowing nod and a fun story involving one of Joyce's favorite restaurants or enjoying an exquisite bottle of wine with Joyce before heading out to a show or an art opening. At 86, Joyce has compiled an encyclopedia of juicy anecdotes from her exciting life. But don't ask her favorite experience. As a self-proclaimed "tomorrow person," Joyce doesn't believe in yesterday.

In fact, she's always trying new things. After 25 years at J. Walter Thompson, Joyce found success as the personnel director of Culinary Enterprises (better known as Gaper's Caterers), which led to her staffing the U.S. Senior Open, part of the Kentucky Derby, and nightly Ravinia Park concerts.

Having spent years being wined and dined at some of America's most renowned restaurants, Joyce quickly became a qualified food critic and prides herself on her deep understanding of quality cuisine and fine wines. To this day Saxon loves entertaining at her home in The Clare, ordering exquisite meals paired with wines from her own cuvée.

How does Joyce define retirement? Certainly not by napping! Joyce believes remaining active is key to longevity. And she's living proof. Her long list of responsibilities includes heavy involvement in the Chicago art and music community and at The Clare. In addition to writing restaurant reviews and conducting interviews for the monthly newsletter, The Clarion, she plans an impressive eight monthly events for residents that include every topic from Lyric Opera lectures to theatrical performances.

And wait, there's more! Joyce also serves as a Newberry Library President's Fellow, founding member of Chicago Gourmets board of directors, and board member of the Dead Writers Theatre Collective. Saxon is also heavily involved in the arts and is a Chicago Art Institute Sustaining Fellow, attending more than 75 trips with the Institute over the past 20 years. Then there's the prestigious City Club of Chicago board membership.

And if all that hasn't thoroughly exhausted the reader, Joyce still finds time for one of her great loves: the theater. More than an avid theater-goer and subscriber, Joyce made her stage debut with the Dead Writers Theatre Collective in 2013. This year, through June 7, she's at it again, playing the role of Lady Jethburgh in their latest production of Oscar Wilde's four-act play, Lady Windermere's Fan.

Every month, a Clare resident's artwork is celebrated with a featured piece displayed in the community library.

This spring, resident Fay Stern exhibited a sample of her found-object sculpture. "I never named any of my pieces," Mrs. Stern said. "This one is composed of a bell, hinges, nails, and other found pieces welded together and polished. I don't think she really needs a name."

After studying art in college, Stern's career turned to interior design. She worked for Hermann Miller in the Merchandise Mart and was the first woman ever hired there. Her primary role was working on other designer's floor plans to help them maximize use of Herman Miller furniture.

She began doing her found-object sculptures more than 50 years ago. "I was in an art class and there were artist spaces in one section of the room. I said to the instructor, 'If any of those are ever vacant, it's mine!'" It wasn't long until she had her own work space.

"John Kearney, a wonderful man and very influential Chicago sculptor -- who recently passed away -- was known for his work using metal bumpers from automobiles, and he taught me how to weld," Stern said. "He was my inspiration."

Stern recalled how much she enjoyed hunting through the immense piles of junk in scrap yards to find just the right objects for her work. "I tromped around in tall rubber boots, and I would pick out only the pieces that 'spoke' to me," she said, smiling.

Stern has always thought of her artwork as a hobby. She kept a studio for almost 20 years. "But I never tried to sell any of my work," she said. "I found out a long time ago -- from a friend who used to send me battery clips for my welding projects -- that someone offered several thousand dollars for an art installation I had created for McCormick Place. He told the potential buyer that I wouldn't even be interested!" Stern shrugged and laughed.

"I enjoy giving my sculptures away," Stern said. "It's such a pleasure to be able to share my artwork with family and friends."

"I found much joy in the welding and construction process. But as I've gotten older, I had to give it up. I do a bit of painting now and am looking for another medium to work in."

"Nonetheless," she said, "I do love having my found-object art pieces around me. They're like old friends."

Boomers revisit retirement expectations

BY AL KERNEK

It is no secret that the “Great Recession” has had a devastating impact on baby boomers, especially those among the leading edge of that generation coming up on retirement. Lifetime savings were impacted as the stock market crash drove down 401k's. Home equities vanished, and many boomers suddenly found themselves upside-down on their mortgages rather than having an anticipated nest egg for retirement. So where does the Boomer generation go from here?

A lot depends on their age. The 78 million-strong boomer generation covers a large age span, comprised of births 1946-1964. So while the leading edge is turning 65 and may already be retired, the other end of the spectrum has 10-15 years of employment left. Younger boomers have the time to recover a good portion of their lost assets. Older boomers, on the other hand, face a darker outlook.

Boomers in their 60s who have suffered financial setbacks have pretty well reconciled themselves to the idea that they are never going to fully recover their assets. By some estimates, the housing market will take 10 years to fully recover, and even then it is unlikely to return to pre-implosion levels. The stock market has enjoyed a bumpy recovery, but boomers in their 60s are reluctant to put the remainder of their lifetime savings into jeopardy again. At most, a conservative blend of bonds and mutual funds will define their diminished portfolios.

For those baby boomers who do not have the time to recover their losses, this is a time of soul searching.

Some are attempting to delay retirement if they already have a job. Putting off retirement does add more bucks to the retirement cookie jar, and delaying tapping into Social Security means a bigger allotment down the road. But hanging in there at an existing job is not as easy as it sounds. In many instances, older workers are being pressured to retire or are laid off to make way for less-expensive junior workers coming up through the ranks.

Three More Reasons Why Getting Older is Great

BY ALEXA ELHEART

It is very accurate to describe current society as “youth-obsessed.” Many people feel embarrassed to reveal their true ages, pressured to dress like middle school-aged kids, and live in fear of their next birthday.

The truth is that society has it completely backwards: getting older is actually the best part of life! Don't believe me?

1) You Have Better Social Skills

It's proven to be true: as people age, their social skills increase. In a study conducted in 2010 at the University of Michigan, 200 people were given “Dear Abby”-style letters asking for advice. Researchers found that “Subjects in their 60s were better than younger ones at imagining different points of view, thinking of multiple resolutions and suggesting compromises.”

2) You Gain Perspective

Another great part of getting older is that you realize what's most important and what you don't really need to spend time worrying about. As Oprah Winfrey put it, one of the hardest—but most rewarding—part of aging is “recognizing the time that you wasted and the things that you worried about that really didn't matter...that's really the hardest part, that's really the only regret that I have.”

Boomers who had already retired or lost their jobs are in dire straits. Many operate home businesses, but the down economy has impacted that sector as well. And landing a job when you are in your late 50s or early 60s is almost impossible. These are the boomers who are really hurting, many losing their homes and trying to figure out how to simply survive. This is a shell-shocked segment that is suddenly faced with tough decisions after the financial rug has been pulled out from under them.

Older boomers are going through the process of accepting their fate and making adjustments. Never a generation to wallow in self-pity, these boomers who raised families, built our economy and fought in the jungles of Vietnam are catching their second breath and developing “what now” strategies.

Most eventually realize that retirement is still possible if they downsize or modify their expectations. That does not mean that they must forego a comfortable retirement. It is simply a matter of surveying what assets are left and determining how those can be optimized to achieve the best possible retirement. For many, this means relocating to less expensive areas or moving to a foreign country where retirement dollars go further. Some will start businesses or work part-time, never fully retiring. Others will discover that the pleasure of controlling their own time overrides disappointments and pre-conceived retirement notions, engaging in new activities and volunteerism during their golden years.

One thing is certain: Baby boomers will enjoy active lifestyles during retirement regardless of their financial circumstances. Despite popular misconceptions, this is not a generation that gives up or focuses on hedonistic pursuits. It is a tough bunch that has overcome life's adversities time and again. And we are not through yet. Just wait - baby boomers are picking themselves up and healing their wounds. No matter the state of their retirement, they are going to make more contributions to the country and younger generations than any previous group of senior citizens.

When you're young, you tend to give yourself an inordinate amount of stress; however, as you get older and have the luxury of looking back on your experiences from early adulthood, you can start to see how much unnecessary pressure you may have put on yourself. When you are older, you can finally free yourself of that stress and save it for things that actually matter.

3) You Have the Opportunity to Give Back

While there are some twentysomethings who have the means to give back substantially to their communities, the majority of people in their twenties just don't have that privilege—whether that's due to a lack of funds or an inflexible work schedule. However, when you get older and find yourself with a much more stable lifestyle, both professionally and economically, it becomes less prohibitive to donate money or time to your community.

Get Out There and Thrive!

Go on—take your superior social skills, perspective, and sense of community and make the world a better place! You have amazing and unique things to offer, and your experiences really have the capability to improve the world around you.

New Cook County House Price Index shows divide among neighborhoods

As house prices rebound in communities across Cook County, the divide between areas that are thriving and those that are struggling persists, according to the May 13 release of the Cook County House Price Index [CCHPI] from the Institute for Housing Studies [IHS] at DePaul University.

This release of the CCHPI tracks quarterly price trends for typical, non-distressed single-family homes in 33 Cook County submarkets from 1997 through the fourth quarter of 2014.

Findings from new CCHPI show that the average submarket in Cook County has seen prices of single-family homes increase by 18 percent as of the fourth quarter of 2014 since hitting the bottom of the market.

The strongest recoveries have been experienced in Logan Square/Avondale and Humboldt Park/Garfield Park, both of which experienced increases of more than 40 percent since reaching their bottom points.

The slowest progress since reaching bottom was in South Chicago/West Pullman, which has seen a recovery of roughly 6 percent.

Other findings show that, despite recent price recoveries in all markets, most communities still are dealing with the legacy of the foreclosure crisis. On average, prices of single-family homes in Cook County communities were 30 percent lower in the fourth quarter of 2014 than they were at the peak of the market in early 2007.

Prices in Englewood/Great Grand Crossing were 63 percent lower in the fourth quarter than at peak levels, and prices Humboldt Park/Garfield Park remain nearly 60 percent less than they were at the market peak.

Other communities in Cook County have come close to a full price recovery: Prices in Lincoln Park/Lakeview and Lincoln Square/North Center have effectively returned to peak levels.

Appreciation is uneven since 2000

The analysis shows that many of the hardest-hit submarkets have not seen any house price appreciation in as many as 15 years.

In the average submarket, prices of single-family homes have appreciated by 40 percent since 2000, but prices in distressed areas of south suburban Cook County are well below 2000 levels.

In the fourth quarter, prices in Calumet City/Harvey were 22 percent lower than they were in 2000, and prices in Chicago Heights/Park Forest were 11 percent lower.

"These recent price recoveries are encouraging but must be considered in the context of longer-term trends," IHS executive director Geoff Smith said. "While many areas are close to achieving a full recovery from price declines experienced during the housing crisis, many other areas - particularly those on the South and West sides of Chicago and in south Cook County - have seen their housing markets set back by 15 years."

The analysis shows that a lack of long-term price appreciation has implications for homeowners trying to build equity and could lead to an increasingly divided housing market. For example, a homeowner who purchased the average home in Auburn Gresham/Chatham in 2000 paid $85,500. As of the fourth quarter of 2014, prices for homes in the same area had increased by less than 2 percent, meaning the average home would be worth roughly $87,000 - only $1,500 more.

By comparison, a homeowner who purchased the average home in West Town/Near live in struggling neighborhoods have not benefited from increased home equity built up through price appreciation."

IHS has developed a new price index model to provide a more stable mechanism for tracking submarket-level price trends.

Despite recent price recoveries in all markets, most communities still are dealing with the legacy of the foreclosure crisis.

West Side would have paid $330,000. As of the fourth quarter of 2014, that home would have appreciated by nearly 120 percent and would be worth an estimated $723,000 - or $393,000 more than in 2000.

"Long-term price trends have implications not just for neighborhoods, but also for homeowners - their financial conditions and their opportunities to build wealth," Smith said. "Long-time homeowners who

The model controls for factors that contribute to a property's sale price, like the physical characteristics of the property, and the property's location relative to key amenities. By isolating these effects, the new model allows for the development of an index that tracks price changes of the typical, non-distressed single-family home over time while also tracking price trends at the submarket level.

Group allows “greatest generation” veterans to visit National World War II Memorial for free

Honor Flight Chicago has flown more than 5,500 World War II veterans to Washington, D.C., for a day of recognition and remembrance

There are an estimated 17,000 World War II veterans living in the Chicago area who have not yet received their well-earned “day of honor” in Washington, D.C. Honor Flight Chicago is a not-for-profit that provides free trips for World War II veterans to visit the National World War II Memorial built in their honor.

“As the anniversary of D-Day approaches (June 6), we are all reminded of those who made the ultimate sacrifice in support of our freedom,” said Mary Pettinato, co-founder and CEO of Honor Flight Chicago. “Our veterans live with those memories every day. Visiting their memorial with others who shared their experience is an opportunity for these senior heroes to pay tribute to fallen brothers and sisters, and for us to show the greatest generation we will never forget their service.”

To date, Honor Flight Chicago has flown more than 5,500 World War II veterans to Washington, D.C., for a day of recognition and families to understand that Honor Flight Chicago is prepared for the challenges and has safely traveled with thousands of individuals just like them. On each trip, we have veterans who cannot see, veterans who have difficulty hearing (most), and veterans who cannot walk,” explained Pettinato. “Yet after the trip, just about every veteran tells us that their day with Honor Flight Chicago was by far one of the best days of their lives.”

An early morning departure from Midway Airport begins a day of reminiscing for veterans who waited almost 60 years to see their World War II Memorial built. A short ceremony at the Memorial provides traveling veterans with an opportunity to pay tribute to comrades whose dreams and aspirations were cut short by the war. There are also visits to the Lincoln, Korean and Vietnam memorials and, as time permits, the Enola Gay at the Air and Space Museum.

Health and mobility concerns are the number one barrier for many World War II veterans remembrance. While waiting lists for these free honor flights exceeded 2,000 in 2013, these aging heroes have become increasingly difficult to reach.

Health and mobility concerns are the number one barrier for many World War II veterans who otherwise want to take an honor flight, according to Pettinato. “These concerns are certainly understandable among a group whose average age is 90. But we want these senior heroes and their

The day’s adventure concludes back at Midway with a “welcome home” celebration of a lifetime.

Anyone who knows a World War II veteran living in the Chicago area, or able to travel to Chicago to board an honor flight, is encouraged to visit honorflightchicago.org or call 773-227-VETS (8387) for additional information and a veteran application. Remaining 2015 honor flights are scheduled for June 3, June 30, July 29, September 2 and September 30.

6. The festival includes fare from a mix of local restaurants. Two festival stages will be located on Humboldt Boulevard, one at Wabansia and the other at Cortland. The three-mile 606 Bloomingdale Trail park will be the first multi-use linear park of its kind in Chicago, crossing over major arterials, an historic boulevard, bus and bicycle routes and the CTA Blue Line and uniting four communities. It has created a groundswell of community support in Logan Square and Humboldt Park, Bucktown and Wicker Park which surround the rail line for its bold creation of much needed green space and design innovation. The Trail is considered the most ambitious of Mayor Emanuel’s plans to create hundreds of new parks, recreation areas and green spaces throughout Chicago over the next five years.

As crews landscape and grade the paths and trails before the gala opening, traffic closures may occur on parts of Bloomingdale Avenue, between Artesian and Kimball, Whipple and Ridgeway and on Winnebago, Western, Milwaukee and Leavitt. In addition to plantings, irrigations systems are being installed and ground-level sidewalks and curb ramps are being updated to conform with Americans with Disabilities Act standards.

Crews are also working to complete the sub-base for the nature trails at Marshfield/Paulina, Kimball, Kimball/St. Louis and Monticello/Central Park and will install benches at various points along the trail and in the parks. Guardrail foundations, benches, and lighting and sound systems will also be part of the exciting new Bloomingdale Trail 606 Park. More information on the new Chicago park amenities and the June opening is available at The 606 website under News for Neighbors or by calling 773-661-9172.

Chicago policing techniques have prevented a “Ferguson,” says Supt. Garry McCarthy

BY PATRICK BUTLER

This is probably the most challenging time for policing in America’s history, but it’s no accident that Chicago has avoided the worst of it, Chicago’s top cop told a capacity crowd at a recent City Club breakfast at Maggiano’s, 111 W. Grand.

Compare the way protests were policed in places like Ferguson with the way Chicago handled the NATO demonstrations a few years ago, Supt. Garry McCarthy said.

“Police can turn a demonstration into a riot,” he said, adding that “in Ferguson, police certainly exacerbated the situation. You don’t put SWAT units on the front lines of a protest. And you certainly don’t put snipers on top of armored vehicles pointing rifles into a crowd and expect you’re not going to aggravate the situation.”

To keep in better touch with the public, McCarthy said he has taken officers on special task forces “that had no real connection with the community” and put them back on beats where they “got to know the good kids from the bad ones.”

McCarthy said he himself has been out almost daily meeting people in communities around the city, “telling them what we’re doing and listening.”

Still, there’s a lot of room for improvement here in Chicago--and not just for the Chicago Police Department(CPD), McCarthy said. “Our war on drugs has been a wholesale failure with incredible unintended consequences” and our criminal justice system is “ineffective,” with 25 percent of Cook County Jail inmates there for narcotics offenses and only 3.8 percent there for gun offenses, he told the audience.

“Something is wrong. What’s the goal of the criminal justice system? Is it to reduce gun violence or to lock up as many narcotics offenders as possible,” McCarthy asked rhetorically. “I’m not endorsing narcotics, but the system is not getting the intended results.”

“We’re doing progressive policing in a fashion the community likes. But we still have a lot of challenges. And yes, we can do better,” Police Supt. Garry McCarthy told a capacity crowd at a City Club of Chicago breakfast at Maggiano’s, 111 W. Grand.

McCarthy said it’s time to get the priorities straight by “arresting the right people, at the right time, in the right place, for the right reasons. The community wants us quarter of this year and locked up 688 people. Why only 688? We locked up four people twice (for separate gun offenses).”

Unfortunately, he added,”70 percent of these people are back on the street right now. It’s like fishing. Catch and release. Catch and release. Catch and release. But think of what would have happened if we didn’t have these 688 people locked up even for a short time,” McCarthy added.

Chicago police are also going through special training in dealing with people with mental illness, terrorists and reaching out to young people through neighborhood programs run by off-duty cops, said McCarthy.

Moving on to urban terrorism, McCarthy said that while there hasn’t been a “credible” threat since he came here to Chicago four years ago, “we’re so much better at counter-terrorism measures today than we were back on to get the criminals off the street. They don’t want us to get everyone off the street. That doesn’t serve our purpose.”

Clearly, more arrests are not the answer said the superintendent.

Clearly, more arrests are not the answer said the superintendent. “We’ve reduced crime by arresting less people. We’ve made 17,000 fewer arrests over the past two years. At the end of the day, it’s not about arresting everyone and filling up the jails.”

By providing “respectful policing,” the CPD is gaining the trust of the public in troubled areas and “complaints against our officers are down 20 percent over the past two years,” said McCarthy. As a result, “we seize more guns than any city. We seize seven guns to every one New York seizes and two for every one Los Angeles seizes. We made 692 gun arrests in the first 9/11.” McCarthy has first-hand experience with terrorism; he was the third ranking NYPD officer at the time of the World Trade Center attacks!

Senior CPD officers have top secret clearances “and we actually have something I probably shouldn’t talk about. We have a secure room where we can share information. I get a weekly briefing on all the terrorism threats and everything that’s going on across the country,” said McCarthy.

To never forget the 9/11 terror attacks and remain vigilant, McCarthy keeps a grim reminder of that day in his office at CPD headquarters--the license plate on his Ford Crown Victoria that was crushed when the Twin Towers collapsed.

Lincoln, Clark, Broadway restaurant robberies

There have been three recent overnight burglaries to restaurants in District 019, say police, in which offenders pried open the doors after business hours.

- The incidents occurred at these times and locations:
 - 2500 block of N. Lincoln on 15-16 May 2015.
 - 2400 block of N. Clark on 15-16 May 2015.
 - 3100 block of N. Broadway on 16-17 March 2015.

In the incident on Broadway, the offender who was observed was described as a black male, approximately 40 years old, 5’ 06, slim build, wearing a green shirt and carrying a toolbox. This offender fled in a white work van, and an accomplice fled in a blue/green van.

Chicago police have the following recommendations for business owners to avert similar crimes.

- Be aware of these recent crimes and alert other businesses.
- Ensure your business is equipped with a working video surveillance system and alarm.

Report any suspicious activity immediately to 911 and provide a detailed description of any offender(s) when possible. Include any vehicle description and license plate information as well and the direction of the offenders’ flight, if known.

College of DuPage defensive line coach dies in mishap

Friends of Kyle Kirchhoff are remembering him as a good friend, a “gentle soul” and someone with “tremendous values” admired by the many kids he mentored. The 24-year-old defensive line coach for the College of DuPage died in a freak accident on Friday at the Aragon Ballroom, 1106 West Lawrence Ave, during a Chevelle concert.

Kirchhoff was reportedly with two friends on the Aragon’s second-floor balcony when the trio wandered through a door where they found a catwalk from where they could watch the show. After the friends noticed Kirchhoff was missing he was found to have fallen 6 to 8 feet from the catwalk onto two metal rods.

Kirchhoff was transported to Weiss Memorial Hospital, 4646 North Marine Drive, where he was pronounced dead. Police are investigating his death.

Kirchhoff graduated from Bartlett High School where he later coached. He was a four-year football player at Loras College in Dubuque, Iowa, where he majored in sports management and interned in the intercollegiate athletics office.

“He was a tireless worker. Anything you had to get done, he wouldn’t bat an eye, he’d just jump in and do it,” remembered Matt Foster, Head Football Coach at College of DuPage.

Chicago stargazers want to bring back the night sky

Medill News Service

Chicago is missing the stars, and Audrey Fischer wants them back. As the President of Chicago Astronomical Society, Fischer started a project called “One Star at a Time” to raise awareness about the need to reduce light pollution and bring back starlight for future generations. Serious light pollution has made star gazing in a city like Chicago nearly impossible for the unaided eye. “Children asked me: Did our stars die?” Fischer said. “This is so sad because we are now raising the first generation that neither have they seen beautiful starlight, but their parents didn’t see either.” She calls the city light that engulfs the stars “Chicaglow.” And it’s been getting worse for decades.

“I’ve never seen beautiful star skies in Chicago,” stargazer Bob Gadbois said. “I was born in the 40s and the streets were lit then. They’ve got worse and worse. To get to where you can see stars, you have to go to 50 to 100 miles away from the cities into dark areas.” “That’s pretty sad,” astronomy enthusiast Larry Silvestri said. “There should be at least 600 or more stars in the sky if properly lit or unlit.” The stars are fading out across the country. According to the National Park Service, at the current rate of increasing light pollution, no dark skies will remain in the continental U.S. by the year 2025. Not only is the starry night lost, but with it goes the culture heritage that has been passed down for centuries. “Every culture in existence has stories about the stars,” said Tony Harris, a member of Chicago Astronomical Society. “For over a thousand years, our ancestors have looked at the skies and wondered what the stars were and how far away they were. And just in the last hundred years or so, we really started to know these things really well. And it’s this point of time that we are erasing the skies from our

that spark of interest in the natural world around them that let them discover the things are amazingly important?” The largest contributor of light pollution in the city is outdoor lighting on streets and homes, especially those lights that are poorly designed and emit light sideways and upwards. “[The] simple thing that we have to do is put a cap on them so they are directed to go down on target to the streets and sidewalks,” Fischer said. “They need a lamp shade.” Carhart agreed, but he pointed out that it’s actually better to take the direction of the light into consideration when designing the fixtures themselves. In Disney’s television programs, the fairy Tinkerbell splashes stars onto the skies over Cinderella’s castle. Fischer grew up in that cultures and from our heritage. “I think it’s every child’s birth right to be able to look at the night sky light and see stars.” he said. “What if Galileo grew up and has never seen stars in the sky? What if Isaac Newton grew up and has never seen stars in the sky?” said Drew Carhart, head of Illinois Coalition for Responsible Outdoor Lighting. “Would they ever have world, and she sometimes wishes she had Tinkerbell’s magic wand. But she knows that’s not the real solution. “There’s no longer a need for compromise,” Fischer said. “We don’t need Tinkerbell to come here and splash [the] sky with stars. We can have our starlight and our city light too. We have the smarts to do it.”

“FUNNYMAN.” Sounds like the perfect title for a play starring our Tim Kazurinsky. He will head the cast in Northlight’s Bruce Graham’s new play of that name. Another old favorite, George Wendt will be on board as well, with Amanda Drinkall, Steve Haggard, Rob Lindley. It will be on stage Sept.11. THE SAD STORY of Meredith has ended with her death. Several years ago we wrote about our sister-in-law. She was happily married to my husband’s brother. At the funeral for her oil-rich father, she looked at him in his coffin, screamed and fainted. Meredith had suddenly recalled being sexually abused by him after her mother died when she was six. It was a classic case of traumatic post-stress syndrome and although her husband supported her emotionally and financially Meredith refused to have anything to do with him or their friends and our family. So deeply traumatized was she. Adding to her torment was the returned memory of her older brother sexually abusing her as well. Meredith received professional help and retreated into her love of piano music, giving children lessons, and rehabbed a small home on the near north side. She is finally at peace. “The secret of being a bore is to tell everything.” -- Voltaire annbgerber@gmail.com... 847-677-2232

Surf may be up--but probably not at Foster Ave. Beach

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Looks like K.C. Hoos won’t be bringing his surf park to Foster Avenue Beach this summer after all.

The Chicago Surf LLC CEO said last week he tabled plans to install a “Flowrider” surfing machine, beachfront café, and retail shop at Montrose Beach sometime in May. He blamed the delay on objections from “a group” he declined to identify or say what the objections were.

Hoos said he still hopes to open a surf park, but possibly not on Montrose or Foster beaches, adding that he’s looking at other locations, but declined to go into detail.

He added, however that at this point, he’s looking at a May 2016 opening.

Real surfing is allowed at the Montrose and Osterman beaches between Memorial Day and Labor Day. In the off-season, surfers can use the Osterman Beach, Hoos said.

The Lake Michigan waves can be challenging enough to discourage many Chicago surfers, Hoos added as he first unveiled his plans at a Nov. 12 Lincoln Park Advisory Council meeting at the Notebart Nature Museum, 2430 N. Cannon Dr.

For those hardy enough to test themselves despite the sometimes rough waves here, the beaches open May 22.

Hoos was seeking a 10-year contract (with an additional five-year renewal option) from the Chicago Park District to build his 30-by-60-foot pool next to an existing beach house where his associates at Park Concessions Management plan to open a refreshment stand at the beach house offering salads, brats or a sandwich wraps and giving people a place to sit down.

The pool will be five feet deep, but the “riding surface” will be between two inches and a foot deep, he said. Hoos said the Flowrider would be adjustable to produce waves for all skill levels.

Hoos said back in November he’ll probably charge around $40 an hour at peak seasons, “and different rates for neighborhood residents and visitors.”

But not everyone was sold on Hoos’ idea when he first unveiled it back in November. “I’m not sure people need something like this at Foster Avenue Beach” where there’s already kayak launching and other amenities, one woman said. “I think your project’s great, but maybe in an empty warehouse further west; I think people would really enjoy it there,” she said.

Construction of his surf park is expected to take between 45 and 90 days, Hoos said, adding the surfing pool would be the first of its kind in Chicago.

how NLSD should be redefined. The project study group has outlined the “top” comments compiled from the July 2014 public meeting- during which almost 400 ideas were submitted--and the third task force meeting in April 2014--during which more than 1,200 ideas were submitted.

Ideas include: improving transit service, improving east-west pedestrian/bike connections and facilities, separating bike and pedestrian users on the Lakefront Trail, adding trees and natural landscaping areas, adding green space east of NLSD, grading a separate Lakefront Trail at junctions and pedestrian tunnels, adding green space between the inner and outer drives, reducing and enforcing the speed limit on NLSD, separating the inner and outer drives, realigning the Oak Street curve, expanding the lake fill to improve shoreline flood protection, relocating and/or expanding Oak Street Beach, improving signage and way-finding including path mile markers, adding more pedestrian and bicycle access points to the lakefront, expanding park space at Oak Street and Michigan Avenue, adding a west side bicycle highway, reconfiguring the NLSD tunnel and boulevard, narrowing the inner drive, improving storm water management by adding bio-swales and constructing a Chicago Avenue junction.

Another component of the NLSD project includes the effect of water on the corridor. On Oct. 31, 2014, high winds caused waves from Lake Michigan to crash onto NLSD and close lanes. The National Weather Service reported winds up to 50 mph and 23-foot waves. Large slabs of asphalt pavement were broken along the trail, resulting in around $200,000 worth of damage. The Chicago Park District has since repaired the trail and cleared the debris, but residents have expressed concerns about flood-related issues throughout the Phase I process. Flooding in the study area can occur due to storm-water runoff and Lake Michigan wave action. As a result, coastal considerations are an integral component of the NLSD Phase I Study.

Baird & Associates, a company of experts in the field of coastal engineering, has undertaken an analysis to better understand these conditions and the impacts on potential alternatives. This analysis includes multiple surveys to document existing water depths and shoreline conditions. It also includes an evaluation of wind, waves and water levels. These parameters have been utilized to generate computer models of the existing conditions. These models will serve as technical tools to assist the design team and the public with understanding the existing wave climate and currents in the project area. The models also will be used to evaluate the impacts of these conditions on proposed alternatives.

One of the primary considerations of any improvements will be the exposure of NLSD, the Lakefront Trail and Lincoln Park to wave overtopping and flooding. The prevention of flooding due to wave overtopping would require a tall shoreline structure to protect against extreme wave events. However, the structure would impact views of the lake. In locations where the view-shed is important, it will be necessary to provide a setback that will accommodate flood waters as they recede back into the lake during extreme storm events.

In December 2014, the NLSD purpose and need statement was approved by the necessary regulatory and resource agencies, including the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. The purpose and need statement has changed significantly since it was posted in May 2014. Public input from project stakeholders and residents allowed the project study group to enhance the draft purpose and need statement and better focus the document on the diverse needs that exist in the project area. A copy of the recently updated and approved purpose and need statement is posted on the project website at <http://www.northlakeshoredrive.org>.

In October 2014, though it was a cold and blustery day, the NLSD project team and some critical regulatory agencies participated in a day-long tour of the NLSD study area and Northerly Island. Participants walked, rode bikes and took buses to see first-hand some of the challenges and opportunities within the study area including the Chicago Avenue intersection, Oak Street curve, numerous underpasses, the Passerelle bridge, the Belmont Avenue bus stop, the Lakefront Trail, Montrose Harbor and the northern terminus at Hollywood Avenue. The project team observed peak rush hour congestion to better understand all modes of transportation and their conflict areas. Many are pleased that the North Lake Shore Drive project is being shaped by strong community input.

Hopes for “Crosstown” buses continue

Activists hope to see No.11 and 31st St. busses reinstated

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Local activists battling for reinstatement of the No. 11 Lincoln Avenue bus route have joined forces with kindred spirits fighting for the return of 31st Street bus service on the South Side.

Ald. Ameya Pawar (47th) said he’ll be pressing to get the buses back on Lincoln Avenue while groups like the Bridgeport Alliance and the Coalition for a Better Chinese-American Community will be working to get the 31st St. bus back at work after an eight-year absence.

Pawar and his South Side counterparts plan to make their case at the next CTA board meeting, set for 10 a.m. Wednesday, June 10, in the CTA’s board room, 567 W. Lake Street.

Ald. Ameya Pawar (47th) says he’s never given up hope of getting the No. 11 Lincoln Avenue bus restored and thinks the chances may be better than ever as part of a Crosstown Bus Coalition. Pawar plans to make his case once again at the CTA’s June board meeting. Photo by Patrick Butler

He added the Crosstown Bus Coalition also plans to be at future CTA meetings when the selection of the next CTA president to replace Forrest Claypool, who recently resigned to become Mayor Rahm Emanuel’s chief of staff, is addressed.

“We want a seat at the table,” Pawar said when the Crosstown Bus Coalition was organized last month.

Pawar said the Lincoln No. 11 bus is needed to better link communities like Old Town and Northcenter and to make shopping easier along the Lincoln Avenue retail strip.

But the reinstatement is not too likely, CTA officials have said, noting that service on the No. 11 bus south of the Western Avenue Brown Line stop was discontinued because of relatively low ridership along what CTA spokesman Tammy Chase called “one of the most transit-rich areas in the city.”

Despite the discouraging responses from the CTA, Pawar said he has never seriously considered giving up on the Lincoln Avenue bus.

Pawar considers himself uniquely qualified to bridge the gap between the North and South Side activists--many of them from the Chinatown area--if only because he’s the City Council’s first and only Asian-American.

Considering that the No. 11 route is relatively close to Wrigley Field and the 31st Street bus runs near U.S. Cellular Field, “It’s kind of like the Crosstown Classic (between the Cubs and White Sox) only we’re not at odds with each other,” Pawar told DNAinfo reporter Ted Cox. While bus ridership in Chicago is said to be down, transit activists say the numbers reflect lack of responsive bus service not reduced need among residents.

Chicago Math and Science Academy student receives Gates Millennium Scholarship

Denzel Akosa is Northwestern bound

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY BOB KITSOS

Chicago Math and Science Academy (CMSA) students have received their share of awards and accolades since the school opened its doors in 2004. Now, senior Denzel Akosa can be added to that class photo as the school’s first student to receive the Bill Gates Millennium Scholarship before he begins his college career at Northwestern University this fall.

CMSA is a public charter middle and high school located at 7212 N. Clark in Rogers Park; it has an enrollment of just over 600 students.

The Gates Millennium Scholars Program is funded by a grant from the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. It was established in 1999 to provide outstanding low income African-American, American/Indian, Alaska Native, Asian Pacific Islander American and Hispanic American students with an opportunity to complete an undergraduate college education in any field they choose.

The full-ride scholarship, which is awarded to 1,000 talented students throughout the U.S., pays for tuition, fees, books and living expenses that are not already paid for as part of the student’s financial aid package. Students must maintain a GPA 3.0 or higher.

The Gates Millennium Scholarship selection process requires independent readers to assess nominees based upon the following three major areas: academic achievement, community service and leadership.

“This is a significant achievement for Denzel as well as CMSA,” said Principal Aydin Kara. “Our goal is to have as many scholarships for our students as possible, and the Gates Millennium program is a prestigious program. I am very grateful to our teaching staff and counselors for helping Denzel get to this point in his academic career. I congratulate his parents on a job very well done.”

because of its outstanding biological science department.

“I like the challenge of knowing how the human body works,” said Akosa. “I feel blessed to be given this scholarship. It’s a relief for my parents as well because of the high cost of a college education.”

The Chicago Math and Science Academy is open to all students, regardless of academic achievement, race or economic background. There are no entrance exams or tuition. Its mission is to prepare students for college by offering a rigorous curriculum based on science, technology, engineering and math.

The school is managed by Concept Schools, a charter school management organization that serves 13,000 students in 30 successful charter schools throughout the Midwest and is sponsored by the Chicago Board of Education.

to watch the event and problems developed. According to reports on ABC News “...It was really bad, packed, too crowded,” said Val Tompkins, who attended the parade. “We couldn’t see it, there were 10 rows of people.”

Tompkins and Trisha George drove all the way from Coldwater, MI to Chicago to see the parade and felt that some areas were dangerous. “There were kids getting pushed,” George said.

In 2011, a combination of large rowdy crowds and lack of crowd control led to a series of mishaps including the diversion of an estimated 50 floats off the parade route. The tires on 51 floats had been slashed hours before the parade that year and streets become overly jammed with people. Some parade goers fainted and/or passed out from drugs and alcohol abuse. Even with police and parade marshals present many verbal altercations turned into physical ones.

On the west side of Halsted St. that year the crowd grew so thick that some onlookers were reportedly smashed against barricades and people began to yell for help. Despite attempts by police to hold off crowds, the sheer number of people pushing from behind forced many bystanders in the front to jump the fence barricades and stand in the streets along the actual parade route. Police continued to add barricades to create a divide between fence-jumpers and the parade itself, but eventually the crowd overtook the route, and officials with the Office of Emergency Management and Communications re-directed about 50 floats off the scheduled route, south on Clark toward Diversey.

Bernard Cherkasov, CEO of Equality Illinois, an organization that works to advance equal treatment of the LGBTQ community, said he has heard sporadic reports about the parade moving out of the traditional LGBTQ- friendly neighborhoods and does not think it’s a good idea. “[The parade] started in the LGBT neighborhoods to celebrate LGBT equality, LGBT community and neighborhoods and [that is where] it belongs,” Cherkasov said. “Boystown, Uptown and Andersonville are the [integral] parts of our community, and the parade should stay there.”

Cherkasov said the parade celebrates the life of the LGBTQ community, its diversity and the progress the community has made throughout recent decades in its fight for equality. The parade also has a favorable economic impact says Cherkasov. “People come [from all over] to Boystown and Uptown for the very first time, they support these small businesses,” he said. “The parade really contributes in a year-round way economic-wise for these wards as well.”

Cherkasov said the parade celebrates the life of the LGBTQ community, its diversity and the progress the community has made throughout recent decades in its fight for equality.

Peter Johnson, director of public relations at the Center on Halsted, 3656 N. Halsted St., an LGBTQ community center in Chicago, agreed that moving the parade out of Lakeview next year would send a different and not better message.

“The parade in Lakeview really engages a lot of the local community partners and a lot of the businesses in the area that are LGBT-owned and LGBT-centric,” Johnson said. “By moving [the parade] downtown, you would see a different level of engagement from those organizations.”

Along with the LGBTQ organizations that oppose the parade’s relocation, members of the community have spoken out against a potential relocation as well.

Jake Taylor, a Lakeview resident, said moving the parade downtown next year will not mean better behavior at the parade. “I think [St. Patrick’s Day] is a straight equivalent to Pride. They moved [St. Patrick’s Day] downtown and look what still happens—look at everyone in Wrigleyville who gets arrested. That night is crazy [and traveling on] the CTA is [also] crazy. If we move it downtown, people are going to [be drunk] on the CTA and will have to use other forms of transportation, [which will] cause more accidents.”

Taylor said he does not plan to change his Pride Parade tradition if the parade moves next year. “I am still going to stay on Halsted and celebrate,” Taylor said. “The number of people from the community who have gone to the parade has stayed the same, but the number of people not in the community has increased.”

While estimates are hard to nail down, Chicago police estimate parade crowds have grown to nearly 750,000 attendees in the last few

Taylor said there will be celebrations no matter where the parade is located because the parade is heavily publicized. “People who chose to live on Halsted and areas where the parade takes place need to realize that the parade comes here every year, so they should be aware of those consequences,” Taylor said.

Jessica Paul said moving the parade could cause more conflict for people of the community. “The area they move it to could be less accepting and more homophobic,” Paul said. “Boystown is the area for decades where people can express their sexuality safely.”

Paul said she acknowledges that there have been increasing safety concerns related to the parade. She said the public should not focus on where it is located but should instead focus on supporting the parade. “There should be more security and police involved, not to make people feel unsafe by harassing them, but to make people feel more safe by keeping the parade under control.”

Mariano Park update...There’s certainly no lack of passion about Mariano Park, aka the Viagra Triangle, 1031 N. State St.

Seems there were some pissed off neighbors at the impromptu meeting held a couple of weeks ago in the park. “People there and all were adamant in their opposition to a venue in the park that goes much beyond the current set up,” said the park’s advisory council president, Peter Spiros. “Gibson’s is on the vendor bid list and they were supposedly going to present their plans for the park at the meeting.”

Things are still in limbo with a final decision by the Chicago Park District, said Spiros. The current vendor was given a new lease through Nov. 14, “So we’re talking about next year and beyond,” said Spiros, who has written a letter to the city requesting a meeting. “By the way, I have yet to run across anyone who thinks that a venue with a liquor license is a good idea,” said Spiros. “Needless to say, the opposition is overwhelming.”

Stay tuned for more.

Fitting the Bill...Access Living is honoring President Bill Clinton at its Lead On! gala, which will celebrate both the 25th Anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act, and the 35th Anniversary of Access Living, 115 W. Chicago Ave. As the first president implementing the Americans with Disabilities Act, President Clinton’s enforcement of the law established the foundation and legal precedent that has had a transformative impact on the U.S. over the past 25 years.

“On the 25th anniversary of the Americans with Disabilities Act and the 35th Anniversary of Access Living, we are thrilled to honor President Clinton...” said Marca Bristo, president and CEO of the group. “The anniversary offers us the opportunity not only to celebrate important achievements, but to build upon the achievements, and to increase access and inclusion for future generations.”

Shirley Welsh Ryan, the chair of Pathways and a former board member for the National Council on Disability, will also be honored at the June 1, Navy Pier event.

Denied!...The Gold Coast Neighbors (GCN) and the North Dearborn Association (NDA) successfully led a team effort to stop vacation rentals at 67 E. Cedar St. After hearing from about 50 neighbors for hours, the city denied the applicant, Villa Celeste’s application.

“This is a win for maintaining the residential quality of our neighborhood,” said Carol Truesdell, a member of the NDA zoning committee. “There has been a proliferation of these vacation rental applications - especially with smaller walk-up units and their absentee landlords who are unable to secure year long leases.”

Unlike hotels, there is no 24-hour security, no on-site manager, no room occupancy restrictions and no 24-hour maintenance,” said Truesdell.

“These weekend rentals attract large groups in for bachelor parties, sporting events or concerts,” she said. “They are both a safety and quality of life issue for the neighborhood. In addition, they compete with our local hotels/ B&B’s who provide services to the neighborhood and tax dollars to the city.”

BTW -- the landmarked Three Arts Club building (RH Gallery), 1300 N. Dearborn, is looking “spectacular,” said Truesdell. “The restoration work on the exterior brick and tiles is becoming more apparent every day,” she said. “Many neighbors have not only commented on the transformation but also on the courteous work crews who shoveled and salted the alternate sidewalk all winter.”

Walk on by...oh what a beautiful morning it’s sure to be at the 22nd annual Lurie Cancer Center’s annual Cancer Survivor’s Celebration Walk & 5K in Grant Park on May 31. It doesn’t get much better than walking along the lakefront while supporting a great cause.
