Stricter TOD street limitations proposed for commercial corridors

Zoning would prohibit many commercial uses

Hundreds of North Side businesses would not exist today had Transit Oriented and Pedestrian Oriented Development [TOD and POD] zoning laws existed in the past.

TOD and POD zoning classifications may be some of the least understood zoning designations in Chicago. Many savvy developers and real estate executives understand what the designations entail, but likely not the average citizen who doesn't make a living in real estate.

That may be something North Side property owners and real estate investors should bone up on, as going forward the two zoning designations will have broad impact on what owners can and can't do with their private property.

A drive-through fast food seller, or pizza parlor with delivery drivers? Forget about it. Quick oil change for your car? No way. A drive-through pharmacy? Not on your life. All are to be banned under the newly proposed TOD, and existing POD zoning classifications.

TOD and POD zones apply to a quarter to a half-mile radius around public transportation corridors (bus and train lines). Commercial corridors in transit-served locations would be eligible for a new zoning designation promoting POD under a measure introduced to City Council last week by Mayor Brandon Johnson.

That means it applies to a gigantic portion of Chicago's Central Business District, and North Side, as almost all of it is located within a half to quarter mile of a train or bus line.

Corridors designated by the City as TOD Streets would carry zoning standards intended to encourage walkable, mixed-use development and higher-density housing near transit. Corridors located within .5 miles of a CTA or Metra train station or .25 miles of a qualifying CTA bus line would be eligible for TOD Street designation. That means a mile-wide swath of the areas surrounding the entire CTA Red and Brown lines and all Metra lines; and a half-mile wide swath adjacent to bus routes.

The real problem for future commercial development is that the TOD Street designation would establish a series of prohibited

Werner Bldg. development plans moving forward

The Werner development, located at the intersection of Howard and Paulina, passed the Zoning Committee on May 20, and is now a go after getting approved earlier in the month by the city's Committee on Landmarks and Building Standards.

This affordable housing project plans to break ground in September. The project is being developed by Housing For All as a $56 million mixed-use project with 80 apartments, across the street from the Howard Red Line station in Rogers Park.

The development was announced in Oct. 2022, but faced some criticism from neighbors who said it would further concentrate poverty in North Rogers Park, by warehousing the poor in

City delays end of sub-minimum wage, full parity in 2033

Tipped workers now at $12.62 hourly; minimum wage $16.60

BY BOB ZULEY

The Chicago City Council approved a compromise measure on May 20, to delay the city's planned phase-out of the subminimum wage for tipped workers. The deal, brokered by Ald. Walter "Red" Burnett [27th], freezes the mandated subminimum wage at the current level and delays full-wage parity until 2030 for larger businesses and 2033 for small businesses.

In 2023, the Council originally approved the "One Fair Wage" ordinance at the urging of Ald. Jessie Fuentes [26th]. The measure was viewed as a key hallmark in Mayor Brandon Johnson's progressive portfolio. The legislation aimed to incrementally raise the subminimum wage for tipped workers by 2028.

However, following intense pushback from the restaurant industry citing high operating costs, the City Council attempted to halt these increases entirely in March 2026. Mayor Johnson vetoed that freeze, and the full Council failed to override the veto.

One issue contributing to the confusion was that the effort painted the industry with a broad brush and failed to identify and differentiate between different types of tipped workers eligible for wage parity in the service industry. For example tipped workers in some establishments earn well above minimum wage when tips are included while working short shifts, several days per week. Others work long hours nearly daily and receive minimal tips.

Rising operating costs, driven by inflation and supply chain issues, are currently the top threat to small businesses, with over 50% of owners identifying it as their primary challenge. This pressure squeezes profit margins, forces price increases, and leads to reduced hiring or business closures. In 2026, 65% of small business owners have reportedly increased prices on goods or services to cope, while 37% delayed investments.

Higher operating costs including purveyor expenses and wages have already caused some operators to reduce menu options, reduce hours of operation, and

Honorary Lori Cannon street sign unveiled on Broadway

Large crowd honors longtime activist, caregiver

BY BOB ZULEY

'It was a disposable population. Who the hell cared if a few faggots or junkies died.' This was the prevailing attitude by the government and many in the population-at-large during the early 1980s that gave cause to a battle that the AIDS Angel of Chicago, the fire-haired Lori Cannon successfully waged for 40-plus years.

Cannon, 74, died in Aug. 2025 after a short battle with pancreatic cancer. She was a tireless activist and caregiver. During the height of the HIV/AIDS crisis in the 1980s, she provided essential support to sick and dying people ignored by the government, including delivering more than 3 million meals, providing end-of-life care, and co-founding the Open Hand food pantry in Chicago.

Last week, a large crowd of friends, volunteers, activists and organizers gathered Friday morning outside her Groceryland Food Pantry, 5543 N. Broadway, for the unveiling of an honorary street sign celebrating her work. The sign was unveiled by Victor Salvo, founder of The Legacy Project Chicago.

"Lori Cannon was a true ally in Illinois from her organizing days to founding Open Hand Chicago — she led the way with chutzpah and humor," Gov. JB Pritzker noted on her passing.

"I entered (Cannon's) story into the Congressional Record so every American can celebrate her life work, and her dedication to the LGBT+ community," said

Rogers and Howard Beaches to remain closed

Howard Beach, 7519 N. Eastlake Terrace, is closed indefinitely and the entire beach area is off-limits. No lifeguards are present. Swimming is strictly prohibited and dangerous.

The Rogers Ave. Beach, 7705 N. Eastlake Terrace, is also closed.

The two sites experienced significant erosion when the lake was near 100-year high water levels in 2019-20, leading to the installation of riprap (boulders) in 2020 for protection rather than keeping the beach open for recreational use.

The Army Corps of Engineers installed the rocks to address lakefront erosion and flooding issues experienced by local homeowners. The lake has since receded but the beach will remain off-limits with no swimming allowed.

Where's the gossip coming from?

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

While gossip is frequently viewed as malicious or trivial, sociologists note that it often serves important social functions like community bonding, enforcing social norms, and establishing trust.

Newspaper work requires a good bit of gossiping, such as dining with members of the lunch brigade.

Recently two wonderful friends back in town, invited me to a lunch at RL on Chicago Ave.

I cherished the invite, looking forward to our noontime lunch conversation which I've always found wondrous, erudite and no-holds-barred.

We usually sit at a banquette just inside the dining room entrance. It's perfect, comfortable and there's always room for my Irish blackthorn walking stick.

When my lunch companions arrived the dining room was already filling up with conversations. Loud, unruly gossip filled the air.

Friends sharing their latest tidbits and tall tales. Who they suspected of naughtiness, low values and hodgepodge fashion.

As the decibels rose all clarity in conversation seemed to disappear. As a frequent flyer at RL, I was calmed by the wait staff who have become treasured colleagues and trusted friends. They are not just attentive, but major contributors to our social soiree's peace.

The restaurant is a critical part of my world. The good food of course, but also the stable nature of the staff who long ago made it a second home. They fill the environment with easy conversation and nuanced chit chat, catching us up on what's been happening. Who's where. Who's gone. Who's new. And what's best on the menu.

There was a time when Gold Coast folk would see neighbors in the banquettes. Longtime bridge friends and canasta pals filling the tables. We think back, now, in reverie to the many friends no longer with us whose happy faces sipped Brandy Alexanders and Cosmos from one corner of the room to another. Like Ann Gerber, of course, the Queen of Chicago Gossip, whose Skyline column I now write. Remembering how kind she was to me when starting out 11 years ago.

Our dear best friend Rose O'Neill, who always had a table of social movers and shakers from among Chicago greats. Her favorites included the Irish Counsel General, plus Mary Jo McGuire and husband, Butch. Bishop Tim Lyne, her Cathedral pastor. Her dear friends, Barb Stevens, Bridget Flanagan and John David Mooney, the sculptor, for starters. We also took delight in her gracious dinners with Desmond Guinness and Desmond Fitzgerald, the last Knight of Glin, when in town.

In our luncheon room I still see the faces of Leslie Hindman, Mike Sneed, Bill Zwecker, Candace Jordan and Chicago celebrities of the highest order, like Myra Reilly, Susan Regenstein, Cynthia Olson and Mamie Walton, in the past all lost in festive conversation with now-gone Dori Wilson and Bunky Cushing, himself, a man of polished disposition and fertile Chicago sensibilities.

How happy their meals would be as Bunky regulated the flow of Lake Shore Dr. gossip and Gold Coast social candor. Titillating revelations perfectly accompanied the lobster bisque and the Dover sole.

We all have differential understandings of what true gossip is. Not just revealing something secret and hidden. Many gossip items that were shocking in the past are no longer of interest to a more shock-proof audience of social media veterans.

For me there are only two shreds of Chicago gossip that still titillate and surprise. The first is the details of some Lake Shore Dr. ladies who when packing for winter in Florida always seem to work out a way to take a young man from their building with them for any needed assistance.

The second one is also a barn burner. That's when a successful young male attorney from a silk stocking law firm manages to purchase a car for a young handsome busboy from a restaurant he frequents.

You see, hospitality and generosity still can often be misunderstood and inspire idle talk.

Chicago has always been a gossip town. That was true for the Potter Palmers, the Armour's, the Swifts, the McCormicks, and the Pullmans. And it is true for you and for me. People whose lives always look fuller, more abundant, more elegant and more at ease. Or more fragrant and elegant with our lunches at a Ralph Lauren.

OUR PAL PAT: As we have now lost our dear old friend Patricia M. Peterson, it can be told. She was a frequent source for items in this column. For this writer and for my predecessor Ann Gerber. Only Pat never shared bad gossip, she only had kind things to offer about others. Pat was very fond of this newspaper and helped to promote Skyline out of enjoyment of its contents and impact on the community. Pat, of Galesburg, IL, died unexpectedly at 94, on Saturday, May 16. Pat is survived by her husband, Jim Peterson, who is not a bad fellow himself.

It's a very long list of volunteer and professional events and causes she was a champion of. The world needs women like Pat to survive and thrive. Our pal Pat was a frequent caller to the newspaper, and you always hung up the phone after conversations feeling a little better about things thanks to her kind words. Farewell to a good friend.

Call 988... City expands scope of CARE mental health crisis response

Limited hours don't reflect when depressive symptoms are common

BY BOB ZULEY

The Mayor and the Chicago Dept. of Public Health [CDPH] announced recently the citywide expansion of the Crisis Assistance Response and Engagement [CARE] program. The newly expanded scope of the program now reaches all 22 police districts bringing non-police crisis response services.

The program now allows residents experiencing a mental health crises and socio-emotional distress to receive assistance in every community of Chicago.

U.S. cities and states have increasingly faced reductions in mental health treatment capacity driven by local, county, state and federal funding cuts, Illinois' massive state deficits, and the closure of community clinics.

U.S. cities and states have increasingly faced reductions in mental health treatment capacity driven by local, county, state and federal funding cuts, Illinois' massive state deficits, and the closure of community clinics.

The cutbacks have many times left the mentally ill uncared for, wandering Chicago streets and lashing out at moments, causing harm to themselves and others... forcing a police action.

In Chicago, the issue is close to the heart of Mayor Brandon Johnson as he had an older brother, Leon, who struggled with severe mental illness, trauma, and addiction. He ultimately died unhoused. Leon's death heavily influenced his advocacy.

"Every Chicagoan deserves to be met with dignity, compassion, and care during moments of crisis," said Johnson. "The citywide expansion of the CARE program reflects our commitment to a public health and safety approach that emphasizes connecting residents to support, reduces harm, ..."

The CARE program deploys trained behavioral health professionals and EMT's to respond to individuals experiencing mental health crises and socio-emotional distress with compassionate care, crisis intervention, and basic mental support.

CARE mental health services are now available citywide. It is not immediately known how many more trained staff and vehicles were acquired, or if this is an example of doing more with less.

Emergency response services are available Monday through Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Clinician-only non-emergent services are available citywide within 72-hours. Call or text 988 to reach trained crisis counselors confidentially.

Mental health crises and negative moods display distinct daily patterns. Research indicates that general mental well-being and depressive symptoms typically worsen as the day goes on, reaching their lowest point around midnight.

Studies have identified specific vulnerability windows for crises, with suicidal thoughts peaking around midnight, 6 a.m., and noon, and specific peaks around 4 a.m.-to-5 a.m.

Anxiety often peaks shortly after waking. This is largely biological, as cortisol [the stress hormone] naturally surges during the first hour of the day in individuals experiencing stress.

The Chicago Police Dept. FOP Lodge 7 has maintained a stance of cautious skepticism of the CARE program and concern about the city's expansion of alternative, non-police mental health care teams, specifically the rollout of the CARE program.

Emergency response services are available Monday through Friday from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Lawmakers end push to stop police from using facial recognition to catch violent criminals

BY CWBCHICAGO

A group of Illinois lawmakers is ending their effort to pass legislation that would have prohibited state and local police agencies from using facial recognition to develop leads in criminal investigations.

The Illinois Biometric Surveillance Act, pushed by North Side Rep. Kelly Cassidy, who represents most of Rogers Park and Edgewater in Springfield, picked up three co-sponsors along the way. But the lawmakers failed to gather enough support among their colleagues as news reports highlighted the technology's role in solving difficult, random violent crimes.

Now, Capitol News Illinois reports that Cassidy is "not looking to move the measure this legislative session" because they are "wary of debates happening in the wake of major news events, which can emphasize the technology's role in investigations over its risks, including misidentification of individuals and expanded surveillance."

CWB Chicago first reported on Cassidy's efforts March 22 in a story detailing a variety of major crimes that Chicago police detectives solved by generating leads through facial recognition. Many of those crimes occurred on the CTA system, which is covered by high-quality surveillance cameras that provide strong source material for facial recognition searches.

As that story was being written, Chicago police were again using facial recognition to confirm the identity of the gunman who killed Sheridan Gorman, a Loyola Univ. freshman, on the pier at Loyola Beach March 19, according to prosecutors. Gorman's murder occurred in Cassidy's district.

"Imagine having to tell a victim's family the technology that could have identified the suspect was taken off the table by lawmakers," State Rep. Patrick Sheehan of Homer Glen said on social media last month.

A possible facial recognition match alone is not sufficient for police to file charges. Detectives use a "hit" as a starting point to generate leads and identify potential suspects. But investigators still have to build a case proving the facial recognition match is accurate and then convince prosecutors they have identified the correct person.

Tom Weitzel, the retired police chief in suburban Riverside, called facial recognition "one of

Cook County judge releases serious felony defendants nearly twice as often as his peers

BY CWBCHICAGO

When prosecutors ask a judge to detain someone during their first appearance on a new felony charge at the Leighton Criminal Courthouse in Chicago, the judge will side with prosecutors nearly 7 out of 10 times. That is, unless prosecutors are asking Judge D'Anthony Thedford.

Thedford, who began hearing pretrial cases at 26th St. on Feb. 5, sides with defendants more than half the time. And in recent weeks, he has sided with defendants nearly six out of 10 times, court records show.

Appointed to the bench in 2024, Thedford started in the Traffic Division, but Cook County's new Chief Judge, Charles Beach, reassigned him to the Pretrial Division in January, and Thedford began hearing cases on Feb. 5.

During his first few weeks of

handling pretrial matters, Thedford approved 61% of detention filings — comparable to the 69% approval rate since cash bail was eliminated. But that changed after March 17, when he won an unopposed campaign to become a full circuit court judge. Since winning the election, he has approved just 42% of detention petitions presented to him for non-domestic city felony cases, according to court files.

One of Thedford's highest-profile detention rulings came in the case of Alphonso Talley, who is accused of escaping electronic monitoring and then murdering John Bartholomew and critically injuring Bartholomew's partner at Swedish Hospital last month. Thedford detained Talley and one other defendant that prosecutors sought to keep in jail that day.

However, he released the other four defendants brought before him. He released a man on an ankle monitor to await trial on charges of criminal sexual assault causing bodily harm. He also put an ankle monitor on a man charged with possessing child sexual abuse material. He released two men charged with sex crimes against children without electronic monitoring that day,

The primary difference between Thedford and the other nine judges who actively hear cases in the 26th Street Pretrial Division is that Thedford is far more likely to release people facing firearms possession charges, even if they are convicted felons.

according to court files.

The primary difference between Thedford and the other nine judges who actively hear cases in the 26th Street Pretrial Division is that Thedford is far more likely to release people facing firearms possession charges, even if they are convicted felons.

Another difference: For most judges in the Pretrial Division, being accused of committing a violent crime on the CTA qualifies defendants for detention as a public safety threat. For Thedford, that line is not so clearly drawn.

Last week, prosecutors charged a 67-year-old man with attacking a CTA employee with his cane at the O'Hare Blue Line station. They said the victim told the man he had to exit the train so workers could mop the train car. An argument ensued, and when the man tried to move, he pushed the CTA employee and hit him in the face with his cane, causing a cut and swelling to his left eye. The incident was recorded by CTA cameras. Thedford denied the detention request and released the accused man.

In another CTA case on March 5, prosecutors brought a 29-year-old man with attempted robbery, saying he and an accomplice tried to rob a 46-year-old woman aboard a Red Line train at 69th St. on Jan. 28. The man pulled the woman's backpack to keep her from exiting the train while his partner hit her in the face and tried to take her phone, prosecutors told Thedford. The robbery attempt was recorded by CTA security cameras, and the man, who has two previous forcible felony convictions, was arrested for domestic battery two days after the robbery, prosecutors said. Thedford rejected the detention request and put him on an ankle monitor.

Having a gun on the CTA is also serious business for most judges, a very good way to get yourself locked up or put on an ankle monitor.

Last month, the sheriff's new public transit patrol stopped Vincent Jones at the 69th Street Red Line station for playing loud music on a portable speaker, officials said. They detained him for disorderly conduct, and a search of his belongings turned up a loaded

Report calls out hidden data center tax breaks; Cook County Assessor begs to differ

BY JUDITH RUIZ-BRANCH

A new report says Midwest states such as Illinois are doing a poor job of disclosing the amount of money that local data centers are saving from tax breaks, and researchers are calling for greater transparency.

But in Cook County, the County Assessor's office has successfully defended its assessments of data centers and other large commercial properties during 2025 Cook County Board of Review appeal hearings, and wants them to pay more of the property tax burden.

Supporters of data center facilities argue they're good for economic development, bringing high-paying jobs, tax revenue and capital investment to communities, with many states giving special tax breaks to big companies that build them. But Kasia Tarczynska, a senior research analyst for Good Jobs First, said the industry's operations continue to lack transparency, and some states are withholding how much money is going to tax breaks for these facilities.

Good Jobs First is a national policy resource center that promotes corporate and government accountability in economic development.

From all reports, cities and states across the nation - Chicago included - are now being inundated by demands from new data centers.

In northwest suburban Elk Grove Township, hearings helped prevent increases in homeowners' share of the property tax base during the 2025 reassessment cycle in part by shifting them to data centers and other large commercial interests. This result contrasted with the previous reassessment cycle, when homeowners saw their share of the tax base increase by four percentage points, which contributed to increases in their tax bills.

While property tax bills that reflect this reassessment will not come out until later in 2026, these results could mean fewer homeowners end up with spiking tax bills.

Property taxes are just one aspect of the complex tax collecting matrix in Illinois, a state known globally for its vast multiple levels of taxation and complex myriad of taxing initiatives and government bodies. But local property taxes are for many people the largest single tax bill Illinois residents face each year.

Over the past year, Cook County Assessor Fritz Kaegi hired additional staff and created a new team to defend more of their office's commercial property assessments, including those for data centers.

"We've poured a lot of resources into building out a team that can make sure big commercial properties are assessed fairly," said Kaegi. "That's going to help keep tax bills manageable for homeowners struggling with affordability right now."

The new appeal hearings initiative is part of the office's implementation of the Cook County Roadmap, a set of recommendations from a 2024 study of commercial valuations put out by the county's Property Tax Reform Group.

Property owners in Cook County can appeal their assessments with both the Assessor's Office and Cook County Board of Review, a separate elected body. For most commercial properties, owners file an appeal with the Board of Review.

"Some states are doing a little bit better job than other states," said Tarczynska, "but generally speaking, states in [the] Midwest really need to step up and disclose way more information about data center subsidies, because the transparency is quite poor."

Tarczynska said while Illinois does disclose some information, it doesn't include annual incentives for local facilities. In states that do provide this information, she said revenue losses are soaring, with three states already losing $1 billion or more per year.

Tarczynska said data centers often don't pay sales taxes on equipment such as servers, computers and cooling systems because of state-level economic development incentives.

Under House Bill 1405, which was passed by the Illinois Senate on April 4, in Illinois, servers, routers, wiring, software and other like components would be exempt from business personal property tax and the state's sales tax.

As lawmakers weigh multiple proposals to regulate the rapidly expanding industry, a recent poll shows nearly 70% of Illinois voters support regulations to minimize the impacts of these facilities on utility bills, climate and water.

Tarczynska said fiscal clarity should also be regulated, since better transparency would help people understand how these projects affect their communities.

"Besides receiving state level subsidies, they also receive local subsidies," she said, "and local governments should be disclosing any property tax breaks that these companies are receiving as well because most of [the] time, that money directly supports schools."

Illinois has experienced a sharp increase in data-center investments since 2019. More than 200 facilities now operate across the state. Lawmakers are considering a two-year freeze on state tax incentives for new data centers following a rapid surge in costs that resulted in a 628% increase in lost tax revenue for the state between 2022 and 2023.

The 2024 study by the Cook County Assessor found commercial properties were typically assessed below fair market value once appeals with the Cook County Assessor's Office and Board of Review were complete.

Maifest this weekend in Lincoln Square

Maifest is this weekend in the Lincoln Square neighborhood, May 29 through May 31. It is an annual free ethnic festival brought to you by the Maifest Committee, President Joe Matuschka and Vice President Joe Bradtke.

The annual Manifest is widely celebrated in Germany and has now spread across the globe. The festival's goal is to share German heritage and culture with other communities. This year the festival is moving back to its traditional location right at Lincoln, Leland and Western avenues.

Maifest is the traditional German celebration of the arrival of spring. It is still celebrated throughout Germany with the maypole (maibaum) decorated to show off the history and crafts of the local village or town.

In Chicago Maifest starts with the Lincoln Square neighborhood, which was founded by Northern European immigrants, and has been adopted by the German community as a place for German culture and tradition for over 100 years.

Admission to Maifest Chicago is open to all ages. German and American bands provide entertainment throughout the fest, and German cuisine and beers will be part of the fun.

Maifest Chicago is a 501(c)(3) organization and the four-day fest benefits German-American organizations including The Rheinischer Verein, St. Hubertus Jagd Club, the American Aid Society, the Donauschwaben Youth Group, Edelweiss Trachten Verein, D'Lustigen Holzacker Buam, Egerlander Dance Group, Dank Haus and others.

Maifest, like Oktoberfest, has now become a popular celebration throughout the world.

City passes affordable housing ordinance, Mayor given 45 days to act

Establishes pilot program, working group aimed at streamlining access to housing

Last week the City Council approved an ordinance introduced by Ald. Maria Hadden [49th] establishing the Centralized Listing Portal Working Group, which they think is a step toward improving access, transparency, and accountability in Chicago's affordable housing system.

Ordinance O2024-0012422 establishes a working group and pilot program to develop a centralized online portal listing available affordable housing units across the city. The measure demands that the Mayor's office convene the group within 45 days.

The ordinance hopes to address difficulties some people have faced while navigating fragmented systems with separate applications, disconnected waitlists, and inconsistent access to information while seeking housing. The measure seeks to modernize and streamline that process through a centralized, accessible platform designed to connect residents to available affordable housing opportunities more efficiently and equitably.

"After years of tireless advocacy, I'm thrilled with today's passage of the Centralized Affordable Housing Portal Ordinance," said Ald. Hadden.

Under the ordinance, affordable housing developments receiving City financing and residential developments subject to the Affordable Requirements Ordinance will be required to list eligible affordable units through the centralized portal.

City officials hope the system will allow applicants to identify affordable housing opportunities citywide, access waitlist and application information in one place, and apply for multiple housing opportunities for which they qualify.

City officials hope the system will allow applicants to identify affordable housing opportunities citywide, access waitlist and application information in one place, and apply for multiple housing opportunities for which they qualify.

The ordinance directs the Mayor to convene a multi-sector working group comprised of representatives from the Dept. of Housing, Chicago Housing Authority, Illinois Housing Development Authority, housing advocates, community organizations, philanthropy partners, and affordable housing providers. The group will develop recommendations for implementation of the citywide pilot program.

Participating property owners will also report vacancy data and unit turnover timelines to reduce delays in filling affordable housing units.

Additional provisions ensure accessibility related to disability access, affirmative marketing practices, multilingual options, waitlist transparency, appeals processes, and fair housing protections.

The group will be required to consult directly with community members in need of - or already living in - affordable housing, including the homeless, accessibility advocates, affordable housing providers, and community organizations.

TAX BREAKS from p. 5

Higher-value commercial properties were especially likely to be underassessed.

For the 2025 tax year, the CCAO selected 14 large commercial property assessments to defend at appeal hearings at the Board of Review. Almost all of them are large data centers built in northwest suburban municipalities within Elk Grove and Leyden townships. Two other properties included an industrial park and an oil tank farm.

Of the 14 property assessments defended by the Assessor's Office, four did not receive any reduction at all from the Board of Review and kept their original assessment from the Assessor's Office:

- T5 Chicago II Data Center in Elk Grove Village, $106 million market value
- Skybox Chicago 1 Data Center

in Elk Grove Village, $102 million market value

- EdgeConnex CHI 01 Data Center in Elk Grove Village, $70 million market value

- Bridge Point Industrial Park in Melrose Park, $179 million market value

The property owners requested assessment reductions for these properties that ranged from 24% to 90%.

Another four properties received reductions in their assessments of less than 25%, though appellants requested reductions as high as 86%.

It will be the city of Chicago's turn to be reassessed in 2027, so local taxpayers should keep an eye on this process. A larger tax base can protect homeowners and small commercial property owners from property tax increases caused by burden-shifting.

What the Assessor's office has discovered is that those reductions contributed to significant property tax spikes for residents: In recent years, nearly 7,000 homeowners in Elk Grove Township have seen their property tax bills increase by 25% or more. For the typical homeowner, that increase was over $1,800.

owners enter into settlement agreements with local taxing districts. These settlement agreements fix the assessment of the property for several years at a value that is typically far below the assessor's certified value.

Settlement agreements help taxing districts avoid having to issue refunds years later for those properties that successfully appeal their assessments to the statewide Property Tax Appeals Board.

For three of the 14 properties that were targeted, the property owners entered into settlement agreements with local school districts that led to large assessment reductions.

These were all data center properties located in Franklin Park and Northlake: Digital Realty ORD-15 Data Center, 28.94% reduction in assessment; Digital Realty ORD-12/ORD-13 and ORD-14 Data Centers, 33.91% reduction in assessment, and Digital Realty ORD-23 Data Center, with a 67.75% reduction in assessment.

The Assessor's office is only able to participate in hearings for a small fraction of the appeals filed in front of the Board of Review each year. In Tax Year 2024, there were 35,600 commercial appeals filed.

These appeals rely on appraisals that often systematically underestimate the market value of commercial property like a data center. In the 14 cases the Assessor defended, appraisals were submitted that often called for reductions well beyond what the Board of Review granted. It found that these appraisals underestimated the market value of properties by 38%.

Property tax pointers: 10 must-know tips for homeowners

BY MARIA PAPPAS

As Cook County Treasurer, I've learned that the property tax system can be confusing and intimidating. To help, I've created 10 tips to better understand your property taxes.

1. Familiarize yourself with the Cook County Treasurer's Office website

Visit cookcountytreasurer.com, your one-stop shop for property taxes. That's where you can pay online for free, change your name and address and find out if any money is owed to you. It's also where you can access and download your bills and review the tax history of your property going back 20 years.

2. Know your PIN

Your 14-digit Property Identification Number [PIN] is on your tax bill and property deed. It is unique to each of the 1.8 million properties in Cook County. You will need your PIN to pay your bill, so keep it handy.

3. Understand the billing cycle

Property tax bills are divided into two installments a year. The first installment covers 55% of the previous year's taxes and is typically due in early March. The second installment includes your exemptions. It's usually due around Aug. 1.

4. Check for refunds and exemptions

Our office has over $150 million in unclaimed refunds. Check cookcountytreasurer.com to see if you've overpaid in the past 20 years or missed any exemptions. Homeowners, senior citizens and disabled persons and veterans may be eligible for missing exemptions going back four years. No third-party assistance is needed to apply for refunds or missing exemptions.

5. Keep your information current

It's important to keep your information up to date to ensure that you receive your bill on time. If you moved or changed your name, update your contact information at cookcountytreasurer.com.

6. Find 24/7 support in your language

It's a priority for our office to reach people in their own language. That's why our phone system operates 24/7 in English, Spanish and Polish at (312-443-5100).

Our website can be translated into over 240 languages. We also offer informational brochures that can be downloaded in English and 27 other languages.

7. Decide how you want to pay

You can pay online through your bank account for free. If you pay with a credit card, a 2.1% fee is charged by the card company. Payments are also accepted at nearly 400 Chase Bank branches and 160 community banks across the region. You can also drop your bill in the mail or pay at our office located on the first floor of the County building at 118 N. Clark St.

8. Determine if you need a payment plan

If you get behind on your taxes, you can set up a payment plan by using our free Payment Plan Calculator at cookcountytreasurer.com. This tool helps you set up monthly or bi-monthly payments.

9. Monitor your mortgage escrow account

If your property taxes are paid through an escrow account, ensure timely and accurate payments are being made by regularly checking the account.

10. See where your money goes

The first installment features

your taxing district debt and shows whether obligations to the school district, town or other taxing district are unfunded. The second installment has a taxing district breakdown that shows how much each agency is taxing your property and where those tax dollars are being spent.

By following these tips, you'll be better equipped to navigate the Cook County property tax system and hopefully save some money.

West Ridge scammer bilked millions violating consumer protection laws

A West Ridge business accused of bilking millions from customers in nationwide scam

The Federal Trade Commission [FTC] and the state of Illinois are suing Premium Home Service and founder Yosef Bernath for violating consumer protection laws.

According to reports in the Chicago Sun Times, Premium Home Service [PHS] is facing a lawsuit over fraudulent business practices. PHS lists its principal place of business as a home at 6723 N. Sacramento Ave.

The founder of a West Ridge company has been accused of running a massive nationwide scam that netted tens of millions of dollars from over 100,000 consumers, according to a lawsuit filed by the FTC and state of Illinois.

Bernath, 34, and his company B.E.S.T. GDR, operating as PHS, created more than 15,000 fake businesses that would appear on search engines, such as Google, to entice consumers needing home repairs, according to the complaint filed May 18 in U.S. District Court.

PHS is accused of violating consumer protection laws. Records show the home is owned by Howard and Jeanne Bernath, also known as Chaim and Rivkah Leah Bernath, who purchased the home in 1994.

Since at least 2018, Bernath has operated fake business profiles, with at least hundreds in the Chicago area, that would appear as local companies offering same-day services for plumbing, HVAC or electrical work.

Armed robbery on Red Line at Thorndale

Chicago police are warning residents of a recent armed robbery at 12:49 p.m. on May 1 in the Edgewater neighborhood on the CTA Red Line.

In the incident, several individuals committed an armed robbery at a CTA Red Line station in the 1100 block of W. Thorndale Ave. in Edgewater.

The offenders are described as six male Hispanic, one unknown male and an African American male.

Those who have any information on these crimes may contact Public Transportation Detectives at 312-745-4447 or submit an anonymous tip at CPDTIP.com and use reference RD: JK238303.

Rogers Park man charged with shooting two women

William Hall, 34, of the 1600 block of W. Juneway Terrace in Rogers Park, has been charged with two felony counts of Aggravated Battery/Use Deadly Weapon and Aggravated Battery/Discharge Firearm after a hearing on May 20.

William Hall

Hall was arrested at 8:11 p.m. May 17, in the 100 block of N. Mayfield Ave. He was identified as the offender who, several minutes earlier, shot and seriously injured a 36-year-old female victim and a 44-year-old female victim in the 100 block of N. Mayfield Ave.

Hall was quickly placed in custody and subsequently charged accordingly.

Kidnap-and-rob crew targeting Chicago nightlife districts strikes again

An armed robbery crew that kidnaps victims and drains their bank accounts struck three more times in Chicago nightlife districts on May 17, stretching its weeks-long victim count to at least 15, according to Chicago police. The group remains at large.

The robberies began around 2 a.m. May 17 in the 3600 block of N. Clark St. in Wrigleyville, followed by two incidents in River North, one in the 600 block of N. La Salle around 4 a.m. and another in the first block of E. Ohio St. around 4:45 a.m., police said.

The crew's methods are brazen. Police say the robbers approach victims in nightlife areas, take their phones and other property by force or at gunpoint, then use the stolen devices to conduct unauthorized financial transactions. In five incidents, including one on Sunday, victims were "coerced" into the crew's vehicle and driven around while the group carried out fraudulent banking transactions on their phones, a CPD alert said.

In an initial alert issued last week, police said the pattern began with a robbery in the 100 block of W. Ontario St. at 12:35 a.m. April 5. Since then, police have linked the crew to a string of holdups across the North Side and Near North Side.

Four of the robberies occurred in the 3500 block of N. Clark St. in Wrigleyville: at 12:22 a.m. April 22; 11:30 p.m. May 2; 1 a.m. May 3; and 10 p.m. May 4.

Two others took place in the first block of W. Hubbard St. in River North: at 2:30 a.m. April 26 and between 1 a.m. and 3 a.m. May 10.

Police also connected the crew to robberies in the 200 block of E. Ohio St. on April 18 between 3:30 a.m. and 3:45 a.m.; the 3700 block of North Broadway on April 23 at 9:30 p.m.; the 600 block of N. Dearborn St. April 26 at 2:30 a.m.; the 600 block of N. Wabash Ave. May 3 at 3 a.m.; and the 400 block of N. Clark St. May 8 at 1 a.m.

CPD's latest alert describes the robbers as up to four Black men between 25 and 40 years old, ranging from 5-foot-6 to 6-foot-5 and 140 to 250 pounds. The crew has used several vehicles, including a dark-colored SUV, a silver four-door sedan, a dark-colored four-door sedan, and a black BMW SUV.

Anyone with information is asked to contact Area Three detectives at 312-744-8263 or submit an anonymous tip at CPDTIP.com, referencing crime pattern #P26-3-015.

Man gets four years for Cyberstalking former romantic partners

A Chicago man has been sentenced to four years in federal prison for cyberstalking and harassing former romantic partners.

Vincent Storme threatened and harassed six women after they ended their relationships with him. Storme stalked his victims both online and in person, with the harassment and threats often extending to the victims' families, employers, and friends.

In one instance, Storme accessed and searched a former girlfriend's phone without her knowledge and then published a semi-nude photograph of the victim that could be seen by her family, friends, and co-workers.

Storme also created a website and social media accounts bearing her name and used the accounts to further embarrass and harass her.

While on bond in this case, police arrested Storme for stalking another victim by following her home in his car. Another victim reported that after breaking up with Storme, he often arrived at her home unannounced.

Storme, 38, pleaded guilty earlier this year to a federal charge of accessing a computer without authorization in furtherance of a criminal and tortious act. On May 15, U.S. District Judge John Robert Blakey imposed the four-year prison term and ordered Storme to pay a total of $11,318.39 in restitution to three of his victims. The sentence was announced by Andrew S. Boutros, United States Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois.

"With each relationship and each victim, defendant's methods grew more prolific," Assistant U.S. Attorney Jill J. Bhalakia argued in the government's sentencing memorandum. "Computer intrusion and cyberstalking will not be tolerated by the criminal justice system."

Galena man gets 5 years for Loop carjacking that ended in Kennedy crash

A Galena man who carjacked a woman in the Loop and then crashed the hijacked car on the Kennedy Expressway during a chaotic getaway in 2024 has been sentenced to prison.

Judge Michael Clancy sentenced Forrest Wagner to five years on May 18 after the 31-year-old pleaded guilty to one count of vehicular hijacking, according to court records. With the state's standard 50% sentence reduction and credit for 530 days earned while in jail, Wagner is expected to be released on parole in about a year.

The charges stem from an incident in Dec. 2024 that began with a 31-year-old woman sitting in the passenger seat of a 2015 Dodge Dart in the first block of N. State St. while her companion stepped inside a nearby restaurant.

Prosecutors said Wagner approached the car, looked inside, and climbed into the driver's seat. When the woman tried to escape, he allegedly pulled her hair and grabbed her to stop her from getting out of the vehicle. The woman managed to break free when Wagner released his grip to fasten his seat belt, according to a CPD report.

The car's owner, a 30-year-old man, returned as the hijacking unfolded and tried to pull Wagner from the vehicle, prosecutors said. Wagner allegedly struck him before speeding away.

A short time later, an off-duty Chicago police officer spotted the stolen car after it collided with several vehicles on the outbound Kennedy Expy. between Diversey Ave. and Kedzie Ave, according to police. Wagner got out and fled into a fast-food restaurant in Avondale, where the off-duty officer and on-duty cops took him into custody.

Teen boy shot while sleeping in Edgewater

A 17-year-old boy was shot in the ankle after someone fired gunshots through a basement window while he slept May 24 in Edgewater, according to Chicago police.

The teen was asleep in the basement of a home in the 1000 block of W. Thorndale Ave. when someone opened fire in the alley around 3:34 a.m., police said. At least one bullet pierced the basement window and struck the boy in the ankle, according to CPD. Paramedics took him to St. Francis Hospital, where he was listed in good condition.

Investigators recovered four shell casings in the alley and were working to determine whether the shooting was connected to a black Jeep Grand Cherokee that officers saw speeding away from the area moments before the teen's 911 call, police said.

The boy is the third person shot in Edgewater this year, excluding self-inflicted wounds.

'Art student' ruse: prosecutors say Chicago man posed as photographer to assault multiple women

Gabriel Wilkins, inset, and a CTA surveillance image of the suspect.

A man who allegedly used a fake art school photography project to lure women into exposing themselves — then sexually molested them — has been charged in connection with incidents involving two women, while prosecutors say Chicago police are actively investigating claims from six more possible victims.

Gabriel Wilkins, 41, is currently detained by order of Judge Rivanda Doss Beal on charges of criminal sexual abuse and public indecency, court records show. The charges stem from incidents prosecutors say took place in the Boystown neighborhood last summer and on a CTA Brown Line train last month.

Chicago police had issued two community alerts in recent weeks featuring CTA surveillance images of the suspect, but the alerts contained no details about what allegedly occurred on the train.

Those disturbing details were finally revealed in a detention filing by Assistant State's Attorney Karen Crothers, who described a pattern in which Wilkins allegedly targeted women across the North Side, only to be caught after a woman posted a warning on TikTok in January.

The earliest case that Wilkins is charged with involves a 28-year-old Noel Centeno, inset, and a video image of the 2022 incident in the Loop.

Man at wheel in 2022 Loop shootout jailed again after gun allegedly found in bar microwave

The man who was driving a hijacked car when his passenger opened fire on Chicago police officers in the Loop, prompting officers to shoot the gunman, is back in jail after prosecutors said CPD officers saw him pointing a gun at someone outside a North Side bar last weekend.

Noel Centeno, 24, was AWOL from a pending gun case at the time of the Jan. 2022 shootout with Chicago police at Lower Wacker Dr. and Columbus Dr. that ended with his passenger, Edgardo Perez, receiving a 40-year prison sentence. Centeno, who prosecutors said was unarmed during the Loop incident, received a four-year sentence.

But prosecutors now say Centeno did have a gun around 11:12 p.m. Saturday, May 16 in the 2700 block of W. Devon Ave. CPD officers monitoring a surveillance camera allegedly saw Centeno point a firearm at another person, described in a police report as his "friend," before putting the weapon away.

When patrol officers arrived, they saw Centeno walk into Casey's Corner, 2733 W. Devon Ave., so they entered the bar and removed him from the premises, according to the report. Officers did not find a gun on him. Police then returned inside the tavern and found a loaded 9-millimeter pistol inside a microwave near the front door, not far from where Centeno had been detained, the report said.

Judge Ankur Srivastava ordered Centeno held pending trial, noting that he has seven felony convictions over the past nine years, along with juvenile adjudications for four armed robberies.

Back in 2022, CPD said Centeno denied that he carjacked the vehicle that he and his friends were riding in at the time of the shooting. Rather, he allegedly claimed he found the vehicle on Howard St. with the keys inside.

woman who went out to Boystown with a female friend on July 5 last year. They were outside a tavern in the 3300 block of N. Halsted St. when Wilkins introduced himself as "David" and spoke in a way that made both women believe he was not a threat, Carothers said.

He allegedly told the women he was an art student who needed photographs of a woman's breasts for a school project and asked if the 28-year-old would participate. She agreed. The group moved away from the street, supposedly for privacy, and Wilkins allegedly took several photos, then asked the woman's friend to photograph him standing next to the woman. As he moved toward her, Crothers alleged, Wilkins exposed himself and performed a sex act until he finished on the woman's abdomen.

Both women ran away to the Red Line to escape. Carothers said the victim texted a friend about the incident immediately but did not report it to police until January 17 of this year, after she saw accounts from other women describing the same ruse on TikTok.

Wilkins is also charged with the CTA case. On April 13, a 21-year-old woman was riding the Brown Line near Diversey when she noticed Wilkins sitting across the aisle, recording her on his phone, Crothers said. He then exposed himself and began performing a sex act before fleeing the train at the Fullerton stop, according to Carothers. That woman reported the incident to the police the same day.

Crothers told the court those two cases represent only part of what investigators have found. She said six other active investigations may involve Wilkins. According to the detention filing, the alleged incidents stretch from the summer of 2025 through January of this year. He is not charged with any of the cases under investigation.

In Aug. 2025, a 31-year-old woman was smoking outside her home in the 2300 block of N. California Ave. when Wilkins approached and told her he needed photographs of a woman's breasts for an exhibit at the Art Institute of Chicago, Carothers said. He told her he was gay and safe to be around, Crothers said, and the woman agreed to help, on the condition her face would not appear in the images. While taking the photos, Wilkins allegedly reached over and grabbed her breast — something her roommate witnessed. He then told the woman he also needed a photograph of his own private part for the same exhibit and removed his clothing, Carothers said, and he asked the roommate to take the picture, which she did, before he left. The woman reported the incident on Jan. 17 of this year.

On Sept. 7, Wilkins allegedly asked another 31-year-old woman if he could photograph her breasts for a school project. She agreed and went to his apartment, where she removed her shirt as instructed, Carothers said. While photographing her, Wilkins began touching her, exposing himself and placed her hand on his private area, Crothers alleged. The woman reported the incident to police on Jan. 26.

On Oct. 18, a 30-year-old woman was walking alone near the intersection of North and Dearborn when Wilkins approached her, again identifying himself as an Art Institute student in need of a model, said Carothers. She agreed to help but told him she would remain clothed and insisted they stay in a public place. They moved to a nearby alley, where Wilkins pulled down her shirt and photographed her, then exposed himself and performed a sex act, Crothers said. The woman reported the incident the same day.

On Nov. 15, a woman leaving a concert at Metro, 3730 N. Clark St., was approached by Wilkins, who told her he was working on a photography project about the human body and needed to photograph a woman's breasts, Carothers said. She agreed and allowed him to take pictures, but while doing so, Wilkins reached out and grabbed her chest, then left, Crothers alleged. That woman reported the incident on

Billy Goat's Sam Sianis was Chicago's AAA-softball sponsor

Passing of the legendary proprietor of the Billy Goat Tavern

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

Chicago-style 16-inch softball team managers and players might tell you losing a good sponsor is worse than losing a wife or a brother.

Well, with the passing of the great Sam Sianis, 91, legendary proprietor of the famous Billy Goat Tavern, no statement could be truer.

After reading Chicago Tribune columnist Rick Kogan's eloquent, May 15 obituary on the life Sam, as a 55-year friend of Sam's this writer quickly sent the following text to William Sianis, Sam's oldest son: "Dear Bill, I'm so sorry to learn about your father's passing. Sam was always an upbeat, fun guy who loved his saloon and his customers. I'm proud to have my byline posted behind the Billy Goat bar."

Bill's reply: "Thank you, Don, for all the kind words. He loved all the journalists, and they treated the place like it was theirs. He was a great father and a one-of-a-kind person."

Greatest of All Time

The legendary Billy Goat Tavern—located on lower-level Hubbard St. near Michigan Ave.'s wealthy "Magnificent Mile"—is perhaps one of the most genuine 16-inch softball bars in Chicago. People say G.O.A.T stands for "Greatest of All Time." On the door is a sign, "Butt in Anytime," and once you step through this immortal portal, you'll find yourself in a newspaper, sports and softball museum.

The Billy Goat saloon really started as an Old-School newspaper hangout and perhaps one of the most genuine blue-collar bars in Chicago. It is a place where men wearing three-piece suits once sat side-by-side with ink-stained pressmen wearing jeans and hats made from a full sheet of newsprint.

The Billy Goat is a sacred place to newspaper people, a haunted site where the ghosts of Ben Hecht's "The Front Page," likely still roam. Hecht probably hoisted a few at the original Billy Goat, across the street from the Chicago Daily News Building at 400 W. Madison, before Sortirios Athanasios Sianis was born in the Greek village of Palaioyrgos on Dec. 12, 1934.

Sam immigrated to America on May 15, 1955, and started working in 1960 for his uncle William Sianis at the W. Madison location near the Chicago Stadium.

Built and grand opened in 1964, the now historic Hubbard St. Billy Goat is celebrating its 62nd anniversary this year. Over six decades, dozens of photos of long-gone newspaper reporters, columnists and editors were hung on the smoky walls of this establishment.

A perfect newsman's hangout

Located between four daily newspapers—the Chicago Daily News and Sun-Times on one side of Michigan Avenue and the Mike Roko and the Chicago Daily news softball team, 1975. Sam Sianis holds the team's trophy (center).

Tribune and Chicago Today on the other, the Goat was the perfect hangout for journalists. Behind the bar, owner and proprietor Sam also posted dozens of bylines from veteran reporters, including mine.

Regarding the tavern's interior decor, Sam always preferred his humble surroundings. "No fancy," Sam said. "I want it to be the same."

This writer was formerly introduced to Sam in 1970 when I founded the Chicago Daily News softball team by placing a note on the newsroom bulletin board.

Moments later, Mike Royko walked up to me and said: "Lad, I understand you are starting a softball team. Here's how we'll do it." Royko promptly named himself manager, and demoted me from founder to captain.

Sam Sianis immigrated to America on May 15, 1955, and started working in 1960 for his uncle William Sianis at the W. Madison location near the Chicago Stadium.

Then Royko listed the captain's duties, which included recruiting players, making all the phone calls, organizing the practices and dragging his Korean War military bag filled with bats and balls to the field. However, there were perks. The captain, now nicknamed "Batman," was allowed to design the coveted jerseys with "Billy Goat Saloon," our sponsor, advertised on the back.

And, every spring for 25 years, as captain and later as pitcher and manager, Batman marched into Sam's cluttered office behind the grill to pick up a blank softball sponsorship check, which he signed, then asked me to fill in the dollar amount—usually about $300 to $400, depending on the league.

'Cheeseborger, cheeseborger'

Historians say the Billy Goat really was made famous by John Belushi's "Cheeseborger, cheeseborger, Pepsi, no Coke," quip, which was a Saturday Night Live TV parody of Billy Goat's Greek owner and proprietor Sam.

Aired on Jan. 28, 1978, the sketch on what was called the Olympia Restaurant, was written by Don Novello, a Chicago advertising executive who frequented the Billy Goat for lunch in the 1970s.

While Dan Akroyd, Bill Murray and guest host Robert Klein, stood nearby, Belushi firearm, according to the sheriff's office.

Prosecutors asked Thedford to keep Jones in jail, citing the inherent danger of someone carrying a firearm on public transportation, according to court records. He rejected their request and released Jones instead. Two weeks later, sheriff's police stopped Jones at the same CTA station for crossing between train cars in violation of CTA rules, officials said. When they searched his backpack, they allegedly found nearly 80 grams of suspect cannabis, rolling papers, and a scale. Jones is now detained for violating pretrial release conditions — and he's facing charges of manufacture-delivery of cannabis.

If you want to get locked up, being accused of firing a gun in Chicago is one of the easiest ways to make sure that happens. Unless you wind up in front of Thedford. On Friday, prosecutors charged a 36-year-old man with shooting at two women in the 1200 block of N. Lamon Av. the night before.

Prosecutors told Thedford that the man and two other people had harassed a woman as she walked home and punched her in the head and back. She ran to a relative's home, and they called police. While waiting outside for officers to arrive, the man emerged from the mouth of a nearby alley and fired five shots toward the woman, prosecutors alleged.

After CPD arrived, the man came out of the alley again, and officers arrested him. Police found five shell casings at the mouth of the alley, but they did not recover a gun. Thedford denied the state's detention petition and released the man on an ankle monitor.

In another shooting case, on April 8, prosecutors asked Thedford to detain a man on attempted murder charges. They said the man and an accomplice were at a party for hearing-impaired individuals where they confronted two victims, who are deaf. The man before Thedford, armed with a rifle, patted down one of the victims and then ordered the accomplice, who was armed with a pistol, to shoot one of the men, prosecutors said. The accomplice allegedly followed the order, shooting the victim in the side. Both victims knew the accused man and identified him. Thedford put him on an ankle monitor.

Last month, prosecutors asked Thedford to detain a 34-year-old woman on aggravated battery charges, saying she punched another woman and struck her in the head with a wrench, fracturing the top of her the most important investigative tools to come along in policing in 50 years."

But supporters of the bill raised concerns about people being charged solely because they were misidentified by facial recognition or detained for days because of a faulty match. However, they were unable to provide examples of such incidents occurring in Illinois.

In fact, the lack of Illinois cases was apparent in a form email the ACLU of Illinois suggested supporters send to lawmakers. The message referenced only a "man in Detroit [who] was arrested and held for more than a day a few years ago because a biometric system was used, based on grainy surveillance footage at a retail store, to falsely identify him."

A spokesperson for the organization confirmed it had found no examples of anyone in Illinois being criminally charged based solely on a facial recognition match without corroborating evidence, though he added that limited public reporting about how the technology is used makes it difficult to fully assess the issue.

When Cassidy's bill came before the Illinois House Judiciary-Civil Committee in March, 227 people submitted witness slips opposing the measure, while only one person submitted a slip in support.

What comes next remains unclear. Capitol News Illinois spoke with Matthew Kugler, a professor at Northwestern Univ. Pritzker School of Law.

"I'm in favor of the government pulling out all the stops to solve a murder. I don't want to create an entire surveillance state to prevent retail theft," Kugler said. "I would personally favor a warrant requirement or some other kind of due process protection rather than an out-and-out ban, but I can understand the rationale behind the simplicity of a ban, particularly if you are skeptical that law enforcement will use it intelligently."

Other observers have suggested codifying best practices, explicitly prohibiting arrests based solely on facial recognition, and requiring regular training and certification for officers who use the technology. Another proposal would require biometric data belonging to people cleared as suspects, or found irrelevant to a case, to be purged within 72 hours.

Before the bench

According to a profile published by Injustice Watch, Thedford served as an assistant public defender from 1997 to 2005 and then worked in private practice handling criminal defense, civil rights, and personal injury cases.

"Between 2011 and 2018, the state and federal governments filed liens against Thedford and his wife seeking to collect about $249,000 in unpaid taxes, interest, and penalties," Injustice Watch reported. "In 2020, the couple declared bankruptcy and reported that they owed the IRS some $220,000 and owed the Illinois Dept. of Revenue about $10,000."

"Thedford said his debts ballooned after he and his wife bought a home and borrowed money to improve it shortly before the 2008 housing crisis tanked its value. He noted that the Illinois Supreme Court vetted him before appointing him to the bench," the outlet reported.

service representatives, who typically have been located outside of the United States," the complaint states.

The agent would schedule the requested service, usually within a three-hour window, and require customers to pay a service fee ranging from $49 to $149. Customers could instead sign up for an annual membership for about the same price as the service fee, receiving benefits such as no service fees on additional visits. Once booked, PHS would attempt to find subcontractors to perform the work.

POLICE BEAT from p. 8

January 17 of this year.

On Dec. 20, a 28-year-old woman met Wilkins at work. He allegedly told her he was an art student and asked whether she would be interested in posing for a photo shoot. She initially agreed, but later saw similar accounts circulating on social media and reported the interaction to police on Jan. 15, according to Carothers.

The most recent incident in Carothers' filing occurred on Jan. 18, when a 28-year-old woman was engaged in consensual sex with Wilkins.

That woman reported that Wilkins suddenly began striking her in the face, Crothers alleged. The woman tried to stop the sex act, but Wilkins refused, according to Carothers. She reported the assault two days later but indicated at the time that she did not want to pursue charges because she was concerned Wilkins might be required to register as a sex offender, according to Carothers.

Court records show Wilkins has no prior arrests.

TOD may replace bank building at Western / Lawrence avenues

BY PETER VON BUOL

A massive 300-unit Transit Oriented Development [TOD] may soon replace the still-open Fifth Third Bank building at 4800 N. Western Ave., according to Ald. Andre Vasquez [40th].

Speaking at a 40th Ward Town Hall held May 12, Vasquez revealed to those in attendance that he has been approached by a developer who is seeking his favor to redevelop the site.

The Alderman's comment had not been planned. It came during the question and answer portion of the meeting and had not been part of his formal presentation.

"According to Vasquez, the proposal has not been formally submitted yet, but the early concept could include at least 60 affordable housing units under current Chicago requirements," according to a social media posting by John Grafft, a real estate agent at Compass Real Estate.

In 2021/2022 (which would have made the project eligible for funding from the then-still-in-existence Western Ave. North Tax Increment Financing District), a local developer had attempted to redevelop the same bank property. That project was stopped by Vasquez because he was angry the developer would not reveal the name of his grocery-store operator client (he did not have permission from his client to do so).

That project, which would have been built in phases, would have included not only a new Fifth Third Bank branch and a large grocery store (most likely an Amazon Fresh or Whole Foods) but also residential units.

Had that project been built, it would have already been generating millions of dollars

The drive through at the Fifth Third Bank building at 4800 N. Western Ave., enters and exits on Lawrence Ave.

in tax revenue and commercial real estate taxes each year.

Residential units would have included not only market rate units but also publicly-supported units that would have been rented to tenants at below-market rates.

"Nothing has been submitted yet. Vasquez said the project will still need to go through the ward's zoning process and the city's planned development process, before anything moves forward," said Grafft. "This intersection keeps coming up for a reason. The property sits steps away from the CTA Brown Line and [several] nearby bus stops and developers keep circling corners like this all across the North Side."

The site includes the parcels occupied by the bank, its drive-thru and parking lot, but also two alleys (including one in which a bridge crosses over an alley to connect the main bank building with its drive-thru).

Despite the lost opportunity of the expiration of the Western Ave. North TIF district, Vasquez believes he will somehow be able to secure government funding for the construction of subsidized housing units that will be rented at below-market value.

"He wants affordability and density for housing at the site. [He] also said operating costs at Lawrence and Western are high enough that the ground floor tenant would need to be a large retailer or grocery store. We see this pattern all over Chicago. Developers want traffic, visibility and foot traffic to support bigger projects and that is something I watch closely when working with Chicago buyers, sellers and builders," said Grafft.

Grafft also noted a nearby commercial building (now a furniture store) is being listed with a sale price of just under $5 million.

In late 1945, the Commercial National Bank of Chicago opened at this site and quickly found itself to be an integral neighborhood institution. In 1996, it was acquired by the now-defunct Corus Bank. Then, 12 years later, Corus became a victim of the subprime mortgage crisis and its assets were absorbed by Fifth Third Bank of Cincinnati.

Created in 2000 and with a 2024 expiration date, the purpose Western Avenue North TIF had been intended to encourage neighborhood redevelopment or rehabilitation. Its priorities were listed as including development of new senior housing, the reinforcement of existing retail nodes with pedestrian-friendly improvements, the creation of infill development at select locations, and the expansion of off-street parking.

After skipping school and going on adventures around town, Ferris Bueller (Matthew Broderick) finds himself taking part in a parade. The parade scene in "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" was filmed on Dearborn St. in downtown Chicago on September 28, 1985 during a genuine Von Steuben Day Parade, a German-American event.

Bueller? Bueller? Bueller?

Ferris Bueller turns 40 on June 11

Life moves pretty fast. If you don't stop and look around once in a while, you could miss a 40th anniversary walking tour.

Chicago is celebrating one of our town's most famous fictional characters in Ferris Bueller as his famous movie turns 40 years old.

On Location Tours is celebrating the 40th anniversary of Ferris Bueller's Day Off with a special Downtown Chicago walking tour on Thursday, June 11, exactly 40 years after the beloved film premiered in 1986.

The limited-time tour will run from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and will be led by a local actor tour guide, bringing guests through some of the most memorable Chicago locations connected to the classic film.

Public tickets are priced at $19.86 in honor of the film's release year.

The tour begins at Relish Chicago Hot Dogs, located at 315 S. Michigan Ave., and ends at Willis Tower / Sears Tower, at 233 S. Wacker Dr. As part of the celebration, Relish Chicago Hot Dogs will offer guests a special limited menu at a discount, featuring Chicago-style hot dogs, veggie dogs, chips, beverages, and more.

Guests will visit and learn about iconic downtown locations tied to the film, including:

- The front steps of the Art Institute of Chicago
- The Flamingo Statue
- The famous parade route
- Daley Plaza
- The parking garage where the valets took the Ferrari for a joyride
- Willis Tower / Sears Tower

In addition to the walking tour, guests can take part in a Ferris Bueller trivia contest with prizes.

Tickets are limited, visit: <https://fareharbor.com/embeds/book/onlocationtourschicago/items/468504/?full-items=yes&flow=840643>

Letter to the Editor

Appalled and outraged

As a concerned Edgewater resident, I look forward to reading the weekly publication of News-Star and gaining critical insight about matters affecting our community. My general support of your publication, notwithstanding, I was appalled and outraged after reading Bob Zuley's disgusting May 13 antisemitic article that appeared on the front page of the newspaper.

My reaction has nothing to do with the posture your newspaper has taken with respect to the propriety of the proposed Emanuel Congregation redevelopment plan. Indeed, support or opposition to the plan is wholly irrelevant to my response to your article; however, his equating the Emanuel Congregation to "money changers in the temple. . . hell-bent on monetizing their sacred space" is entirely offensive to Jews and non-Jews alike, irrespective of how they weigh in on the underlying development plan.

The newspaper goes on to trash the integrity of Emanuel's congregants stating, "[s]o much for Tikkun Olam, the Jewish commitment to ethics and social responsibility." While there is room for decent, reasonable people to have opposing views on this project, such a personal attack leveled at a Jewish faith community exploring ways to maintain their worship space and legacy is simply wrong and goes far beyond any acceptable stating of the case in opposition to the development plan.

The newspaper goes on to state that "Fern Hill will build the Congregation a brand new synagogue, debt free. Quid pro quo. Such a deal!" Do you hear the dog whistle?

Either this article eluded your editorial review process, or your editorial standards are lacking in professional integrity. In either event, the Jews, non-Jews, and most especially the Emanuel congregation are owed an apology. There is room for meaningful debate on the underlying development issue; there is, however, no room in Edgewater for such an antisemitic attack on our Jewish neighbors.

I have compiled a list of News-Star's advertisers and am poised to contact each advertiser and share with them this letter and the article.

Please find your way to take the high road and issue an apology; the high road certainly eluded your paper when it published this insulting and mean-spirited article in the first instance.

Edgewater neighbors who join me in condemning this article include:

Kathryn Zeledon Nelson, Pat Bronte, Carol & Drew DePaul, Leslee Carver, Katherine Fahey & Joe Burke, Margaret & Wayne Hansen, Mary Hickey & Grant Williams, Cindy Lawson & Joe Griffin, Jenny & Tony Maidenber, Iris Marreck, and Carol Ronen

uses along a TOD corridor, including banning all drive-throughs (think McDonald's, Dunkin Donuts, KFC), vehicle sales, car maintenance, and auto parts stores, gas stations and other critical automobile-oriented businesses.

The Lake View strip mall at Ashland Ave. and School St. is a victim of POD zoning. It was designed to be walkable, hiding the parking lot in the rear, as opposed to out front as is the industry standard, leaving customers thinking there was no parking. Even your local grocer could be considered an automobile-based business since many people drive to, and park cars at these stores.

The TOD Street designation would serve as a severe weapon for the city to use in imposing its utopian concept of a car-free pedestrian-oriented development. These regulations already exist in the present

POD-Street designation. POD has established eligibility criteria that already excludes many vehicle-oriented business along commercial corridors.

The Dept. of Planning and Development say they would work with City Council members to pair future TOD Street designation with corridor upzoning near transit, building on the City's drastic upzoning campaign, such as that now in place on Broadway and Western Ave.

reduce the number of workers. Some restaurants now operate on a take-out system only with no dining-in option.

To avoid further political gridlock, city officials, the Illinois Restaurant Assoc. [IRA], and labor advocates such as the Workforce Development Committee reached the new compromise.

U.S. Rep. Mike Quigley [5th] upon her passing and again on the unveiling of her street sign.

A lifelong Chicagoan, Lori was born in the Ravenswood neighborhood on May 22, 1951, but lived for the remainder of her life in Rogers Park across the street from Pottawattomie Park. She graduated from Sullivan H.S. and attended Columbia College. Her dad, Lee, was a film animation executive, and her mother, Bluma, was a homemaker.

Cannon's true calling as a caregiver came early, reflecting her commitment to her faith. Her brother J.H. was born with blue baby syndrome, and her older brother, Jules, suffered a life-changing bus accident in Champaign, IL.

While elected officials such as Aldermen Leni Manaa-Hoppenworth [48th], and Bennett Lawson [44th], Quigley, and former state Sen. and close friend Carol Ronen gathered to pay tribute, many pantry volunteers were also present. Lori called the compromise ordinance acceptable. "This ordinance is not the ideal outcome for our industry, but it is more workable and less harmful than allowing the current phase-out to continue. Operators need time to adjust so they can keep their doors open and their staff employed."

Lori Cannon and her best friend, political cartoonist Danny Sotomayor, joined with Paul Adams to create the grassroots ACT-Up Chicago in 1988, the same year she founded Open Hand. Cannon was inducted into the Chicago LGBT as a friend of the community in 1994.

always credited her volunteers with allowing her successes in serving the largely stigmatized population.

Lori and her best friend, political cartoonist Danny Sotomayor, joined with Paul Adams to create the grassroots ACT-Up Chicago in 1988, the same year she founded Open Hand. Cannon was inducted into the Chicago LGBT as a friend of the community in 1994.

After the remarks by dignitaries and the unveiling of the sign, the assembled guests sang Happy Birthday to Lori on her 75th birthday.

Cannon's legacy is one of radical care and relentless action. Her parents and both brothers preceded Lori in death. She was buried Aug. 20, 2025, at Shalom Memorial Park Cemetery, Arlington Heights.
