City proposes debt forgiveness for former Heartland Housing properties in Uptown

Leland Apartments

Leland Apartments, a historic 137-unit, six-story building in the Uptown neighborhood, will soon undergo a transformation and have $2 million in debt forgiven by the taxpayers.

The property at 1207 W. Leland Ave. was part of Heartland Housing, a nonprofit developer that collapsed in 2023, placing the building under the threat of foreclosure.

The six-story Uptown building is one of more than a dozen former Heartland Housing properties that collectively provide hundreds of units to shelter the homelessness, veterans those with disabilities, addictions or mental health issues.

The non-profit developer Heartland Housing had a financial collapse in 2023. City and state officials, worked with the mortgage holder to come up with a plan for Mercy Housing, an affordable housing nonprofit that owns and operates dozens of Chicagoland properties, to take over the 1920s-era property.

The Chicago Dept. of Housing

[DOH] is petitioning City Council to forgive the existing debt and release the apartment complex from its Regulatory Agreement. Mercy Community Capital, the nonprofit lending arm of Denver-based Mercy Housing, holds the Leland's mortgage. The proposed loan forgiveness would occur via the transfer of the property to Mercy Housing Lakefront through a three-step process:

Town Hall meeting held at Waldorf School

Ald. Vasquez on development: 'People love progress, not change'

BY BOB ZULEY

Upwards of nearly 100 people attended the 40th Ward Development Town Hall meeting convened on a rainy Tuesday evening at the Waldorf School, 5200 N. Ashland Ave.

Ald. Andre Vasquez and his staff gave a traditional presentation and answered questions for more than 90 minutes in the school auditorium of the perhaps better known former Trumbull Elementary School, designed by architect Dwight H. Perkins in 1908.

Vasquez was noted for being in full command of the issues at hand. He explained the dilemma of development by relaying advice he received from former Ald. Harry Osterman [48th]. 'People love progress but they don't like change.'

The meeting agenda included infrastructure and development plans for ward parks, streets, arts and culture, and housing projects. A large segment of time was given to the "People's Budget," the local iteration of participatory budgeting that initially began in the 49th Ward under then-Ald. Joe Moore.

The socialist term "People's" gained traction through various historical contexts, primarily in the 20th century, following the development of socialist and communist ideologies. It emerged as a way to emphasize the state's role as representing the interests and aspirations of the people, often in the context of revolutionary movements and the establishment of socialist states.

For the alderman and his staff, their primary purpose is deliver-

The mural, "Our Way Bloom," by Brooklyn artist Tomokazu Matsuyama will be officially dedicated 3 p.m. Monday, June 2, at the Edgewater Branch Library, 6000 N. Broadway in the Edgewater.

Mayor Brandon Johnson, Ald. Leni Manaa-Hoppenworth [48th], Chicago Public Library Cmsr. Chris Brown, and the artist will be on-hand to announce the mural is now viewable. An announcement at the Edgewater Library invites patrons to join a fun afternoon of crafts, music and snacks.

Noticeably absent from the announcement of dignitaries attending the dedication is Cmsr. Clinee Hedspeth of the Dept. of Cultural Affairs and Special Events [DCASE], a former protege of Johnson when he served on the Cook County Board of Commissioners.

DCASE commissioned the artwork in a secretive process to commission a New York City-based artist over local talent.

DCASE underwent an exodus of staff members after Hedspeth's appointment amid rumors of confusion, conflict and mismanagement at the agency.

On April 29, Axios Chicago reported that more than 200 artists and arts organizations signed a letter to Mayor Johnson criticizing DCASE Cmsr. Hedspeth "for budget and staff mismanagement and lack of transparency."

Matsuyama, the artist, was awarded $100,000 in Chicago taxpayer funds to complete the project. In email records obtained

Lincoln Haven project, street resurfacing, lost commercial parking planned in 40th Ward

BY SOFIE KELLAR

Ald. Andre Vasquez [40th], described new projects in infrastructure at the May 20 town hall meeting, covering improvements in pedestrian safety, housing, and the arts.

He said that borrowed money from bonds will cover the cost, including the Capital Improvement Program and the Housing and Economic Development bonds. Other funding sources come from Tax Increment Financing or grants.

Ald. Vasquez described the Haven on Lincoln Project, which will include supportive housing for troubled souls, with the help of 24-7 on-site staffing, and a community referral plan with the CARES team and his Ward Office.

Haven on Lincoln is Chicago's first stabilization housing pilot test. He said that the city hopes to convert other motels into stabilization housing around transit areas. Apartment buildings at the intersections of Farragut and Foster may also become more affordable with two new living/working spaces, offering rents of $1,000 per month, which "will be going pretty soon," he said.

Deidre O'Connor, director of public safety and infrastructure, covered other developments like street resurfacing and park improvement. "The pathways around Mather Park, if you've been there, are treacherous," she said.

Pedestrian islands and bicycle lanes will be resurfaced on Western Ave. from Foster to Leland; on Damen Ave. from Farragut to Bryn Mawr; on Bryn Mawr Ave. from Damen to Ravenswood, and Ravenswood from Peterson to Eastwood.

"It's going to be a little painful, but when it's finished, it'll be really beautiful," said O'Connor.

Reinforcements such as curb extension roadway barriers will extend from School to Ridge on Ashland, which she says they anticipate will start in July.

"We take pedestrian safety really seriously," she said.

Kat Sharper, 40th Ward chief of staff, also covered zoning and public safety in the ward.

The ways to improve pedestrian and cyclist safety will be through reconfiguring the street network and segregating non-local traffic, enforcing safer speeds, improving school pick-up/drop-off areas, and enhancing access for pedestrians.

The bike network on the North Side will be reinforced with concrete curb traffic barriers on Lincoln and Pratt, Ainslie, and several other streets in the area, and a painted bike lane will be added to Granville due to "severe traffic safety concerns we've noted from neighbors," she said, without offering any raw data or proof.

"We are really looking forward to the safety measures they will bring, especially with so many young people in the area," she said.

The meaning of life is as close as some buttermilk, raisins, caraway seeds and crunchy fresh baked crusts

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

As humans we repeat the circle of nourishment continuously throughout our day, ending the yearnings from hunger. Our ability to quiet the need to be filled, means most of us never know the real reach of human hunger.

When hungry, choices include waiting for something we crave, or sacrifice to fit our tight 'skinny' jeans.

In our plentitude, food not only brings restorative satisfaction, it can bring delight and harmony. Whether it is rugged, refined, complex or simple.

The concoction of food is a major element of life in the post-modern age. The quality and variety of food has altered the creation and abilities of efforts in our kitchens. Cooking is a singular pursuit filled with reason, intelligence, imagination and creative ability. It ties us to the past, historically. Favorite foods from childhood. Longed-for meals of memory, enhanced perhaps by parents and ancestors skilled in the kitchen.

We are a nation filled with citizen cooks adept at oven and stove. Filling memories and tummies with the meals that please. Reminders from another era of life. A more languid period of appreciation of foods and customs. When families actually ate together, relishing their ability to share a table. With stunning family recipes and the expansive human embrace of happy dinners nourishing not only the body, but the soul.

As I continue to work away at what I call "a cookery book," I am certain such a book might enhance such needs still.

For all the rush and mayhem of everyday life, the establishment of an eating custom is one richly necessary to sustain the bonds of family and friendship. Meals are opportunities to share deeply personal moments of time. Our resourcefulness can allow them to deepen the bonds of human companionship and family vitality.

We believe that around such tables real human health is restored. Where it happens, restorative life is unleashed. Whether in the family home or in small apartments. Wherever the fire is lit. The oven is hot. The kitchen is warm and the table is welcoming, with room for all.

Accompanied by the ability to boil water. Cook pasta. Slice some good bread and open a nice bottle of wine.

The menu need not be complex. A plate of stew and a garden fresh salad. With house-made dressing, as simple as balsamic vinegar and olive oil.

This writer's grandmother baked her own supply of daily bread. She preferred bread mixed, kneaded, rolled out and rising in the warmth of her own kitchen.

In such moments of civility we discover the importance of the food we share. And the scope of our cooking abilities. Without much complexity, that ability just needs to be nudged. It will surprisingly grow. With calm patience. Aptitude. Utilizing basic skills, and a commitment to take the time needed to make cookery a rational and reasoned part of life. Not just grilling steaks with an hour free. But enhancing your menu with treasured sauces. Timeless classics. Romantic platters of savory favorites. Roasting more. Sautéing more creatively. Baking more fruit. Making more historic meat pies. Using fresh herbs.

Balancing the menu for yourself begins with better grocery shopping, kitchen organizing and letting the world of food enwrap you.

Oh yeah, buying better wines. Or even more, know the wines you buy.

Cookery is fun. Concocting. Enchanting. What works with what? What compliments what? It's even intellectually challenging. It lets you concoct that meal you ate in Venice, in the comfort of your own kitchen. Or make the Irish soda bread you remember your grandmother making when you were a child.

So why not discover the outrageous drama of making your own fabulous French onion soup? This should keep your children coming back to the table with smiles on their faces, without their phones.

Imagine when you take the time to concoct a scrumptious Chicken Cacciatore, classic Boeuf Bourguignon or a pork and mushroom pie with roasted gingered carrots.

What amazing meals you can easily prepare. Not to mention the best of all garlic breads.

These are all dishes rooted in classic food history. So I continue to shape and devise my cookery book. I hope it will eventually give a fresh understanding of such books occupying an important place, as well, in poetry and verse. Or the literature and tales of other days and other cultures. From looking at the people who invented cheese, smoked salmon, and brined turkey, to the people who cherished every detail of the process. Remembering the tastiest meals from inventive chefs in great cities of the world - Chicago included. In favorite bistros, trattorias, country inns and glamorous hotels. Cookery books should be about discovering the ascetic value of favorite foods.

Recently, my sister, Mary Regina's arrival at my house for dinner heralded the arrival of the family "scones." Actually they're more of a yeasty muffin. Always a familial and historic addition to our family dinners that cannot be measured in mere human proportions. Cuz to me it always marks a cosmic moment. The chance to sample a long-standing part of our family's heritage. What, as an arrogant teen, I took for granted with disdainful cynicism. But now in my mature years I recognize in culinary and cultural proportions that leave me grateful and pampered.

Mary Regina has remained very faithful to the simple Irish recipe by which our grandmother, Nora O'Connor, baked her supply of daily bread. No store-bought substitutions for her. She preferred the real stuff. Bread mixed, kneaded, rolled out and rising in the warmth of her kitchen. Bread sweet and delectable right out of the oven, usually with someone waiting for it to cool down enough so the rich butter would just ooze its way into your mouth.

These are thoughts that shape the memory of days gone by and galvanize nostalgic traditions, tastes and a sense of appreciation for the past.

Who knew the meaning of life was as close as some buttermilk, raisins, caraway seeds and crunchy fresh baked crusts?

HOME GROWN HATE: Ald. Debra Silverstein [50th] is suddenly our "It" girl, with her strong statement against hate. "I am deeply concerned to learn that the attacker came from Chicago. I am horrified by the antisemitic terrorist attack outside the Capital Jewish Museum in Washington D.C. My deepest sympathies are with the victims, their families, and the entire Jewish and Israeli communities as they deal with the aftermath of this horrific attack. I call on Mayor Johnson and our leadership in Chicago to take real action to protect our Jewish residents. Statements condemning antisemitism are not enough. Thoughts and prayers are not enough. We need action, and we need it now. Anti-

Jewish hate is at an all-time high in the City of Chicago, and now is the time to take a public stand. Highlighting the rich and unique Jewish culture and the contributions of Jewish Americans to the United States is one of the greatest ways to combat the rising wave of antisemitism."

State officials offer stark 'urgent challenge' during public transit funding meeting

BY SOFIE KELLAR

Illinois State Sen. Sarah Feigenholtz [6th] spoke on a webinar May 22 to address severe funding issues with public transportation in Illinois. She was joined by Rep. Ann M. Williams [11th] and Chair of the Transportation, Sen. Ram Villivalam [8th].

"We are definitely facing an urgent challenge," said Sen. Feigenholtz. "Our office has received over a thousand emails."

She said that 40% of the residents in her district rely on public transportation as their primary form of transit, but the efficiency, use and safety of public transit has declined sharply since the pandemic.

Real or imagined, the fear of criminal activity is keeping many riders off trains and buses, to the benefit of ride share services.

Indeed the options are stark, and the problem has now been punted down to Springfield, where there is no clear path to funding the current level of services. It's a problem that nobody in city, state or federal government really wants.

What local public transportation users may soon own is a dire mix of fair increases, new transportation taxes, service cuts and reduced overhead.

Part of the problems cultural, in that the work-at-home trend has left the North Side's public transportation systems lightly used.

Improving the efficiency, accessibility, and safety of public transit relies on increasing ridership across the region, explained Sen. Villivalam.

Local public officials have mostly ignored known problems. Instead they've gone begging for a state to bail out, now that federal pandemic funds have dried up.

Systemic inefficiencies exist in all bureaucratic organizations and they certainly plague the current public transportation system.

"We have four agencies—RTA, CTA, Metra, and PACE—and we have 21 different appointing authorities to appoint 47 different people to all of these boards," he said. "That leaves a structure where everybody is accountable and no one is accountable." And everyone gets pay and benefits that cost real money.

While federal funding for Chicago transit has screeched to a stop, the screeching over crashing budgets continues in City Hall and the Statehouse.

Proposed solutions include the Metropolitan Mobility Act (Senate Bill 5), which emphasizes public funding and a central authority for transit. Senate Bill 1938 also "empowers a central authority to make decisions as it relates to fair policy, to service planning, capital planning, customer service, safety, all the issues that we care about."

"We're going to introduce a bill, or a merged version of both bills," said Sen. Villivalam.

CTA, Metra, and PACE will answer to a central authority. For riders, this means using one app or ticket instead of multi-

Assessment cuts on commercial property raise home taxes

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

Thousands of Chicago and Cook County homeowners soon may feel the tax bite caused by empty offices and sinking commercial real estate values downtown.

According to Cook County Assessor Fritz Kaegi, many North Side Chicago homeowners could see their property taxes increase this year because residential property took on a greater share of the city's tax burden after appeals for the 2024 reassessment cycle were finalized at the Cook County Board of Review [CCBR].

When the Cook County Assessor's Office completed its triennial reassessment of Chicago in 2024, total assessed value in-

BOARD OF REVIEW APPEAL CHANGES BY TOWNSHIP
Chicago Township	Assessed Value Change	Percentage change
South Chicago	-$1.6 billion	-21%
North Chicago	-$1.1 billion	-19%
West Chicago	-$0.8 billion	-15%
Lake View	-$0.3 billion	-14%
Lake	-$0.2 billion	-13%
Jefferson	-$0.2 billion	-13%
Hyde Park	-$0.2 billion	-13%

The largest assessment reductions by the Board of Review for commercial properties came in three townships that cover Chicago's downtown—North Chicago, South Chicago and West Chicago.

creased $5.4 billion. Residential values set by the Assessor's office decreased by 1% in all townships except Lake View and West Chicago, where they decreased by 2%.

"Because the total value of non-residential and commercial property in Chicago increased slightly more than residential value, homeowners saw their share of assessed value decrease from 51% to 49%," Kaegi explained.

"This could have reduced homeowners' share of the property tax burden," Kaegi said. "However, the Assessor's Office is not the final word on a property's taxable value."

The CCBR, a separate office within the property tax system, has the final authority to alter assessments appealed to their office before tax bills are calculated, Kaegi said.

However, this year, the CCBR cut commercial property values in Chicago by 17%, or a whopping $4.3 billion in assessed value. By contrast, the CCBR only decreased residential property values by 1%, or $0.4 billion.

These commercial cuts by the CCBR mean that homeowners saw their share of assessed value—which correlates with the overall property tax burden—jump to 54% from 49% under the Assessor's assessments.

For the Class 5A properties that make up the majority of commercial property in Chicago—such as office buildings, retail stores, and hotels—total assessed value at the end of the 2024 reassessment and appeals cycle was $14.3 billion. This was lower than the $14.4 billion value of these properties when the reassessment cycle began.

While the Assessor's office increased the value of Class 5A property by 21% initially, the CCBR reduced values for properties in this class that appealed their assessments by more than $3 billion.

This burden-shifting is not new," said Kaegi about the ongoing battle between his office and the Board of Appeals. "During the last Chicago reassessment in 2021, residential properties made up 53% of citywide assessed value after appeals to the Board of Review were finalized, in large part due to $6.2 billion in cuts for commercial properties on appeal."

In the intervening years, reassessments in the suburbs of Cook County have also seen the tax burden shift onto homeowners. A recent study from the Cook County Treasurer's Office showed that homeowners in Cook County saw nearly $2 billion added to tax bills over a period of three years after "businesses found particular success appealing to the CCBR."

Chicago's total assessed value, a proxy for its tax base, could have grown 22%, or $9 billion, under the Assessor's values. After the CCBR's appeals were finalized, the tax base instead increased by 11%, or $4.4 billion.

The largest reductions from the CCBR for commercial properties, both by percentage and As-essed Value, came in the three townships that cover Chicago's downtown: North Chicago, South Chicago, and West Chicago.

More detailed data on these changes is available at the Data Dashboards on the Assessor's Office website or <https://www.cookcountyassessor.com/dashboard> and <https://www.cookcountyassessor.com/data-dashboard-municipalities>.

FUNDING from p. 3

ple. "We did have federal funding that was able to assist through the pandemic, and that is now being eliminated."

Nikolas Merten, policy analyst at Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning [CMAP], addressed the budget gap in more detail.

The budget deficit amounts to 17%, (estimated $771 million) which, he said, would result in 30%–40% drop in service, due to the fixed expenses.

This means that "more than 20 neighborhoods and six suburban communities could soon be losing access" to some public transportation, and "more than 150 bus routes would be cut across the region," said Merten.

To combat this, the Illinois General Assembly directed CMAP to complete an innovative report. "We produced tons of subreports and analyses to really dig into the core issues facing our transit system and how to resolve them in a durable way," said Merten.

Highlights of the report include improving transit beyond pre-pandemic levels while maintaining financial stability.

"First we need to solve the budget gap; then money will go towards improving the transit system," he said.

Covering this gap will rely on the transit agencies themselves cutting spending and overhead costs, increased riders' fare, regional taxpayers, and the state of Illinois to match sales tax and raise transportation fees.

Certainly the future will also include advanced use of robotics, AI and driverless vehicles to lower labor costs.

Transit-oriented development will also "help the whole ecosystem," claimed Sen. Feigenholtz, of the concept of piling people who do not own cars into high-density buildings near train stations and bus lines. The more riders, the better the transit, she said.

"That's the vision," she said. "Bringing the walls of these silos down, and increased accessibility to transit."

But the consumer is fickle, and many are choosing to work from home, eliminating the need to use public transportation. While others will choose to use private vehicles and/or ride share services over trains and buses. In the end, cutting back on service and overhead may only hasten the move - already underway - away from public transportation into more private travel.

Homeowners see tax burden increase after appeals finish

Commercial values cut by $4.3 billion

Let's face it, Chicago and Illinois have a spending problem, and that money has to come from somewhere. For almost every North Side resident, whether they be a property owner or renter, after income taxes, the foremost burden we all share is the property tax levy.

Many Chicago homeowners could see their property taxes increase this year, as residential property took on a greater share of the city's tax burden after appeals for the 2024 reassessment cycle were finalized at the Cook County Board of Review.

When the Cook County Assessor's Office [CCAO] completed its triennial reassessment of Chicago in 2024, total assessed value increased $5.4 billion.

Because the total value of non-residential and commercial property in Chicago increased slightly more than residential value, homeowners saw their share of assessed value decrease from 51% to 49%. This could have reduced homeowners' share of the property tax burden.

However, the CCAO is not the final word on a property's taxable value. The Cook County Board of Review [BOR], a separate office within the property tax system, has the final authority to alter assessments appealed to their office before tax bills are calculated.

This year, the BOR cut commercial property values in Chicago by 17%, or $4.3 billion in assessed value. By contrast, the BOR only decreased residential property values by 1%, or $0.4 billion.

More detailed data on these changes is available at the Data Dashboards on the CCAO website or www.cookcountyassessor.com/dashboard.

These commercial cuts by the BOR meant that homeowners saw their share of assessed value – which correlates with the overall property tax burden – jump to 54% from 49% under the CCAO's assessments.

For the Class 5A properties that make up the majority of commercial property in Chicago – such as office buildings, retail stores, and hotels – total assessed value at the end of the 2024 reassessment and appeals cycle was $14.3 billion. This was lower than the $14.4 billion value of these properties when the reassessment cycle began.

While the CCAO's increased the value of Class 5A property by 21% initially, the BOR reduced values for properties in this class that appealed their assessments by more than $3 billion.

This burden-shifting is not new. During the last Chicago reassessment in 2021, residential properties made up 53% of city-wide assessed value after appeals to the BOR were finalized, in large part due to $6.2 billion in cuts for commercial properties on appeal.

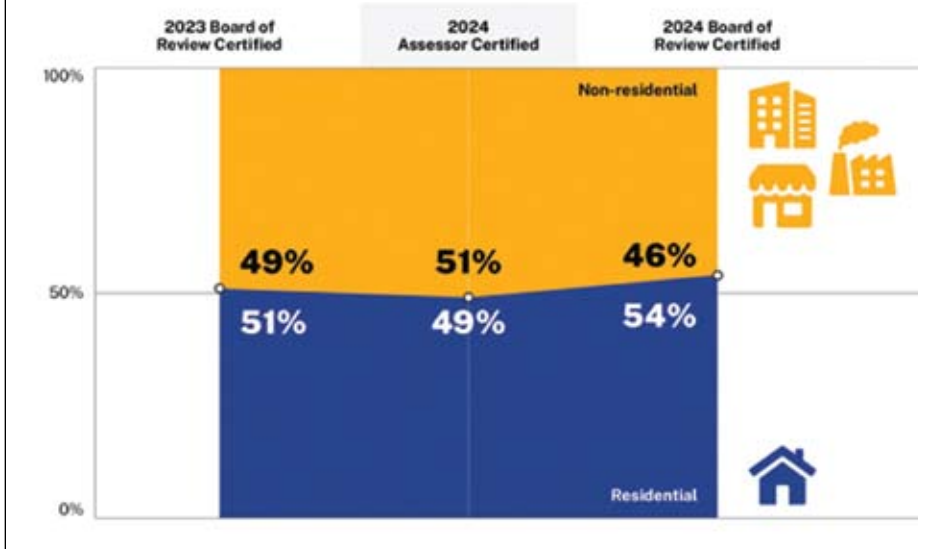

This burden-shifting is not new. During the last Chicago reassessment in 2021, residential properties made up 53% of citywide assessed value after appeals to the BOR were finalized, in large part due to $6.2 billion in cuts for commercial properties on appeal.

In the intervening years, reassessments in the suburbs of Cook County have also seen the tax burden shift onto homeowners. A recent study from the Cook County Treasurer's Office showed that homeowners in Cook County saw nearly $2 billion added to tax bills over a period of 3 years after "businesses found particular success appealing to the BOR."

Board of Review appeal shifts

• Chicago's total assessed value, a proxy for its tax base, could have grown 22%, or $9 billion, under the CCAO's values. After the BOR's appeals were finalized, the tax base instead increased by 11%, or $4.4 billion.

Chicago: Percentage share of total assessed value

• The largest reductions from the BOR for commercial properties, both by percentage and Assessed Value, came in the three townships that cover Chicago's downtown: North Chicago, South Chicago, and West Chicago.

On the North Side, North Chicago Township was down 19% (-$1.1 billion), Lake View Township was down 14% ($300 million), while Rogers Park Township was down $100 million.

The major property classes with the largest percentage reductions were Class 5B Industrial (22% reduction) and Class 5A Commercial (17% reduction). The major property classes with the largest assessed value reductions were Class 5A commercial ($3.0 billion reduction) and Class 3 Large Multi-Family ($0.6 billion reduction).

Residential values set by the CCAO decreased by 1% in all townships except Lake View and West Chicago, where they decreased by 2%.

Residential properties made up 51% of the city's share of assessed value before the 2024 reassessment. This increased to 54% after the BOR's appeals were finalized.

There is currently no mechanism in place to protect Cook County homeowners who experience significant property tax increases.

According to recent data released by the CCAO, 240,000 households in Cook County have recently seen their tax bills spike by 25% or more in a single year.

The CCAO has worked on state legislation to create a property tax relief initiative for homeowners. This "circuit breaker" program would provide relief to qualifying homeowners with a 25% bill spike. Credits given to homeowners would cover up to half of the tax bill increase.

The Circuit Breaker Property Tax Relief Act was filed in the Illinois Senate as SB1978 by Sen. Patrick Joyce [40th] and in the House as HB3808 by Rep. Justin Slaughter [27th].

Chicago 'climate disinfo' suit should be in Cook County court, not federal, judge says

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

Chicago City Hall has won clearance from a federal judge to move ahead in Cook County's Democrat-stacked and famously plaintiff-friendly courts with a lawsuit seeking to extract a potentially massive payout from oil and gas companies for allegedly "deceiving" people and businesses into using oil and gas to heat and power their homes, cars, factories and other necessities of modern life.

On May 16, U.S. District Judge Franklin U. Valderrama ruled against a collection of petroleum companies, including Chevron and BP, and granted the city of Chicago's request to send the case back to Cook County Circuit Court.

The city had initially filed the case in Cook County court in Feb. 2024.

In that lawsuit, the city, joined by a collection of prominent trial lawyers, seeks to make Chevron, BP and other petroleum producers and distributors pay for allegedly misleading consumers and the public for decades about the alleged climate altering affects of using oil and gas products in transportation and many other economic sectors.

The lawsuit claims so-called "climate change" has in turn led to more frequent bad weather events, such as floods, droughts and severe storms, among other alleged harms, costing the city large amounts of money to address.

The Chicago lawsuit asserts this makes oil and gas use a "public nuisance" by allegedly also contributing to racial and social "inequities" for the city's low income and minority communities.

The lawsuit particularly takes aim at what it calls "disinformation" from the oil companies, which the city claims has misled consumers into continuing to use the products for decades after the energy companies allegedly knew of the supposed harms caused by the use of their fuels.

"This successful climate deception campaign had the purpose and effect of inflating and sustaining the market for fossil fuels, which - in turn - drove up greenhouse gas emissions, accelerated global warming, and brought about devastating climate change impacts to the city of Chicago," the city wrote in its lawsuit at the time.

The city's lawsuit largely copies a path blazed by other local government lawsuits against the same energy companies, as well as by earlier litigation against tobacco companies, pharmaceutical companies and others who have supplied many of the products common to American life.

The city is joined in the action by trial lawyers from the firms of DiCello Levitt LLP, of Chicago, and Sher Edling LLP, of San Francisco.

The Sher Edling firm has also served as counsel on dozens of virtually identical climate-related lawsuits against the oil and gas industry throughout the country. Published reports indicate Sher Edling has received millions of dollars in funding from a dark money group backed by billionaires, known as the Collective Action Fund for Accountability, Resilience and Adaptation." That funding has drawn scrutiny from members of Congress, who have noted it pays for the firm's lawsuits on behalf of local governments aimed at bankrupting the nation's oil and gas companies.

To date, those claims have met with mixed results in court, at best.

On May 16, for example, as Judge Valderrama was sending Chicago's case back to Cook County court, a judge in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, tossed a similar lawsuit brought by the Bucks County government and their hired trial lawyers against Exxon, Chevron and other energy companies.

In that ruling, Judge Stephen Corr said his court would "join a growing chorus of state and federal courts across the U.S., singing from the same hymnal, in concluding that the claims raised by Bucks County are not judicable by any court in Pennsylvania."

While cases in Hawaii and Boulder, CO, have survived attempts to snuff them out in the initial stages, judges in New York, Maryland, New Jersey and Delaware have dismissed so-called "climate disinformation" suits as improper attempts to use lawsuits to regulate federally controlled emissions standards.

In Chicago, the oil and gas companies sought to remove the case from Cook County court to federal court. They also argued the lawsuit amounted to an illegal attempt by progressives at City Hall, including Mayor Brandon Johnson, to use state courts to force energy companies which operate globally and are regulated by federal law to comply with the political demands of anti-oil activists and politicians in the notoriously Democrat-dominated city of Chicago and state of Illinois, and then pay large sums of money in the process for their alleged past transgressions.

"The scope of Plaintiff's (Chicago's) theory is breathtaking — it seeks to regulate the sale of oil and gas anywhere in the world, including all past and otherwise lawful sales, including sales to the federal government," the energy companies said in their petition in federal court, filed in April 2024.

"Because Plaintiff challenges the extraction, sale, and consumption of fossil fuels over the past several decades, the Complaint necessarily calls into question longstanding decisions by the federal government regarding, among other things, national security, national energy policy, environmental protection, the maintenance of a national strategic petroleum reserve program, development of energy resources on the United States' outer continental shelf lands, mineral extraction on federal lands (which has produced billions of dollars in revenue for the federal government), and the negotiation of international agreements bearing on the development and use of fossil fuels and the appropriate response to the problem of global climate change."

After more than a year of proceedings over that dispute in federal court, Judge Valderrama sided with the city, sending the case back to Cook County court.

In his ruling, Valderrama noted the oil and gas companies have consistently failed throughout the rest of the country to bump local governments' "climate disinformation" lawsuits into federal court.

In this case, Valderrama similarly rejected the companies' attempts to argue federal regulations, federal contracts and federal government directives concerning the extraction of oil and production of fuels should mean the case belongs in federal court under the so-called "federal officer" theory.

The judge agreed with the city that the regulations and directives do not "demonstrate ... (the companies were) closely controlled by the government, but rather demonstrate 'the story of a narrow business relationship'" which he said he and other courts "found to be insufficient" to hold up their "federal officer" theory claims.

Further, the judge agreed with the city that its lawsuit "does not take aim" at the companies' "production of fossil fuels."

"Instead, the Complaint takes issue with Defendants' alleged campaign of deception and misrepresentation in the 1980s of the dangers of fossil fuel vis-à-vis the environment. The fact that Defendants acted under the federal government by operating and managing government-owned and/or government-funded petroleum production facilities is of no import.

"... This case is about Defendants' alleged misrepresentations; not their work with or on behalf of the government that led to or contributed to fossil fuel emissions," Valderrama wrote.

Valderrama was appointed to the federal bench in 2020 by President Donald Trump during his first term in office. Valderrama had previously served as a Cook County Circuit Court judge.

Cook County courts have consistently been named among the top destinations of choice for trial lawyers suing businesses. The American Tort Reform Association, for instance, has consistently awarded Cook County's courts the distinction of standing as one of America's worst "judicial hellholes." Court systems are selected for such criticism by business advocates and court reformers because they assert business defendants struggle to receive a fair opportunity to defend themselves against lawsuits.

Cook County's courts are also heavily dominated by Democrats. In 2024, for instance, a Republi-

Former site of Lincoln Park WAX TRAX! record store approved as landmark

The former WAX TRAX! Records building in Lincoln Park was designated an official Chicago landmark May 21 following approval by City Council.

The two-story, Renaissance Revival-style building at 2449 N. Lincoln Ave., was constructed in the 1880s. In 1978, WAX TRAX! opened in the building and quickly became an international destination for an eclectic variety of music genres including punk, new wave, rockabilly and dance.

WAX TRAX! subsequently launched its own record label and helped establish Chicago as the birthplace of industrial music. Until its closing in 1993, the store also offered clothing, fanzines, concert tickets and other items that made it a gathering place for musicians and music lovers.

The landmark designation protects all exterior elevations of the building.

After 150 years, Mary Lincoln's 'madness' still haunts American psyche

Mrs. Lincoln's own words offer insight into her sometimes tortured mind

BY PETER HANCOCK
Capital News Service

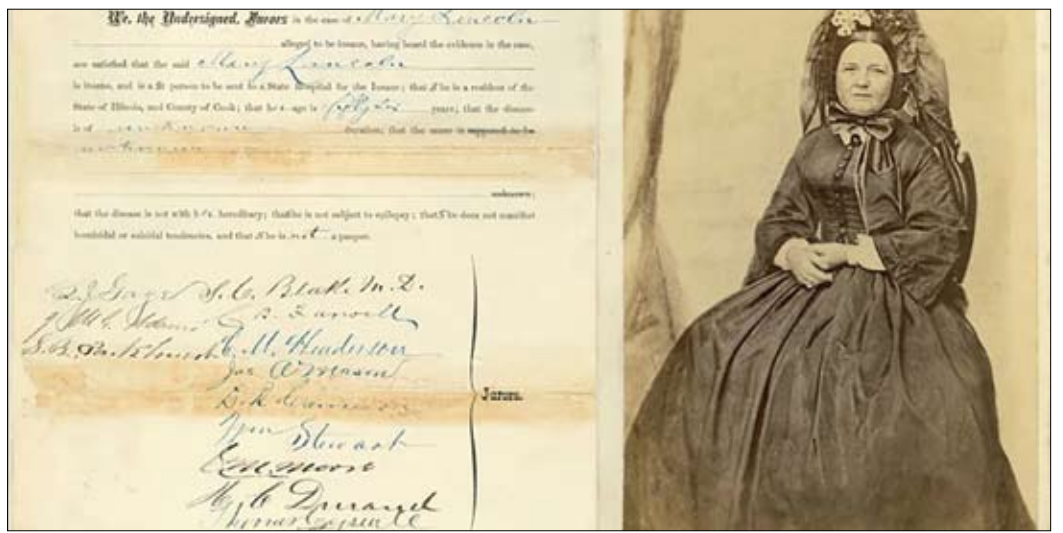

On May 19, 1875, a Cook County jury handed down a verdict in a case concerning the health and welfare of Mary Lincoln, widow of the former president who had been assassinated a decade earlier.

After listening to only a single day of testimony, the 12 men on the jury signed the standard verdict form stating simply that they "are satisfied that said Mary Lincoln is insane, and is a fit person to be sent to a State Hospital for the Insane ..."

The case had been brought to court by her surviving son, Robert Todd Lincoln, then just 31 years old and a successful practicing attorney in Chicago. At his request, the court ordered her committed to the Bellevue Place Sanitarium in Batavia, west of Chicago, and named him conservator of her estate for a period of one year, based on the finding that she was at the time incapable of managing her own affairs.

But Mrs. Lincoln would not spend a full year in the facility. With the help of two of her closest and only remaining friends, James and Myra Bradwell, of Chicago – and against the strong protests of Robert Lincoln – Mary Lincoln would be released after only four months to the custody of her sister in Springfield, Elizabeth Edwards.

The subject of Mary Lincoln's mental health has long been the subject of public debate. Was she, in fact, a danger to herself and others, and was her son truly acting in her best interests? Or was Robert Lincoln, as his mother would sometimes allege, scheming to shove her aside in order to take over her money and property?

(L) The Dark Days of Abraham Lincoln's Widow, As Revealed by Her Own Letters," edited by Jason Emerson and published by Southern Illinois University Press. Images courtesy of the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum (R) A verdict form, left, from a Cook County jury dated May 19, 1875, officially declared Mary Todd Lincoln "insane" and ordered her commitment to a sanitarium. At right, is a portrait of Mary Todd Lincoln, circa 1869.

Now, 150 years after her commitment, a newly rediscovered collection of correspondence between Mrs. Lincoln and her friends and family – letters long assumed to have been lost or destroyed – shed new light on the nature of her illness as well as the nature of her relationships with the few friends and family she had left by that time.

"People have always wondered if these missing letters, if they showed that, in fact, she was perfectly sane, that her son Robert did actually railroad her, bribe the judge and jury because he wanted to steal her money," Emerson said in a podcast interview with this reporter. "And they do not show that at all. They show that Mary thought that's what was happening – which, in my opinion, and the opinions of psychiatrists I've consulted – that was one of her delusions, that everyone was trying to steal her money, not just Robert." The book was actually first compiled a century ago by Myra Helmer Pritchard, granddaughter of James and Myra Bradwell, and they were scheduled for publication in 1927, first in installments in the magazine "Liberty," and then as a book.

Before the publication, however, Pritchard, as a courtesy, offered to show them to Mary Harlan Lincoln, widow of Robert Lincoln, who had just died the year before. Although she was initially agreeable to the project and even offered to add additional information, after reading the manuscript, Mary Harlan Lincoln withdrew her consent and launched a series of legal efforts to suppress their publication.

Pritchard eventually agreed to hand over the material and never publish them in any form, in exchange for a payment of $22,500.

Emerson's book recompiles that material and presents it as it was intended to be published in 1927, including Pritchard's comments on the letters. But it also includes Emerson's own annotations and footnotes that provide context, as well as clarifications and corrections to some of Pritchard's commentaries.

The letters reveal her to be lonely, occasionally depressed and at times desperate for companionship. But on their surface, do not necessarily portray someone of an unsound mind, especially considering the traumas she had endured through much of her life.

"Pray for me that I may be able to leave such a place as this," she wrote to Myra Bradwell on Aug. 3, 1875. "Let me see Judge Bradwell. I beg you to come on Friday morning. I should like to see Dr. Evarts. I feel I must have some further conversation with him. Write me, your heart-

Deaths of Great Horned Owls was driving force behind use of birth control

The never-ending war on rats, and the City's use of rodenticide (rat poison) has taken innocent victims, which is one of the reasons why the city is seeking a new process for controlling the spread of rodents.

It turns out that rat poison is neither the most effective approach nor is it the safest for the other mammals and birds natural to our lakefront community.

In the spring of 2024, a pair of beloved Great Horned owls and their owlet living in Lincoln Park died one after the other. Tests confirmed that all three died from eating poisoned rats.

Theirs was a slow painful death.

The Willowbrook Wildlife Center has confirmed other raptor deaths due to rodenticide poisoning. Limiting the use of rodenticides would help local hawks, eagles and owls to live longer lives, as they all dine daily on fresh rodent kills.

The truth is that rat poison isn't fixing Chicago's rat problems, and it kills more than just rats. It can be lethal to birds and mammals, including children and pets.

That's why animal supporters from the Lincoln Park Zoo, Chicago Bird Alliance [CBA] and Dept. of Streets and Sanitation sought out an experiment in using birth control rather than poison to try and mitigate the rat menace.

Local wildlife — from owls and hawks, to squirrels, foxes, coyotes, raccoons, opossums and even family pets - are also likely to consume this poison.

We've all heard about the food chain, and rat poison creates a toxic food link in that chain and ends up in the water and soil. This is bad for people and animals alike.

That risk has lead to the use of alternative rat control methods such as contraception and carbon dioxide or carbon monoxide, which have been successful in other locations. The CBS is calling for funds currently spent on

Anticoagulant rodenticides [AR] toward alternative methods of controlling rats such as birth control pellets.

The Willowbrook Wildlife Center has confirmed other raptor deaths due to rodenticide poisoning. Limiting the use of rodenticides would help local hawks, eagles and owls to live longer lives, as they all dine daily on fresh rodent kills.

The City of Chicago is now working with the CBA to run a pilot study near Lincoln Park using these pellets, and conducting a fundraiser to help pay for the test. They are hoping to raise $32,100 to fund a year-long rat contraceptive pilot program. Right now they are at about $29,000.

Ald. Timmy Knudsen [43rd] and the Lincoln Park Conservancy are helping raise funds along with private citizens. The results of the pilot test will no doubt be shared wide and far.

CBA's position on anticoagulant rodenticides

ARs are not an effective means of controlling urban rat populations, reports the CBA, and are harmful to non-target animals.

They recommend we reduce the use of anticoagulant rodenticides as a method to control Chicago's rats in favor of alternatives, while growing resources and public education focused on eliminating environmental conditions that favor rats.

Rats thrive in cities because they can access human-associated resources such as food waste in garbage.

CBS suggests that enabling Streets and Sanitation staff to automatically replace damaged garbage receptacles as they are noticed during garbage collection; increase the frequency of garbage collection in wards and parks with proportionately more rat complaints, and invest in the development of rat-proof garbage receptacles that are feasible with garbage collection systems.

Police Beat...

Cops detain 3 following separate stabbings in River North, South Loop

Chicago police detained three individuals in connection with two separate stabbing incidents that injured victims in the South Loop and River North neighborhoods on May 25.

At approximately 6:30 p.m., a 35-year-old man was stabbed in the arm and back during an argument at a bus stop in the 500 block of W. Roosevelt Rd. in the South Loop. CPD said that the suspect, a 65-year-old man, used a sharp object to attack the victim before leaving the scene.

Officers located and detained the suspect during a search of the area. The victim was transported to Stroger Hospital in fair condition.

In an unrelated incident, at around 9:20 p.m., a 22-year-old man was stabbed in the 700 block of N. State St. in River North.

According to CPD, the victim was involved in an argument with a 24-year-old man and a 17-year-old female. The altercation escalated, and the suspects allegedly punched the victim repeatedly, causing him to fall.

The pair then stabbed the victim while he was on the ground and stabbed him twice more as he attempted to flee. Officers applied a chest seal to the victim to control bleeding until paramedics arrived. He victim was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in critical condition.

Using surveillance camera feeds, police identified and located the suspects at the Grand Red Line station before they could board a train. Charges were pending against all three suspects.

Man seriously injured in Ashland Ave. beating

A 34-year-old man was seriously injured in an attack Sunday morning, say Chicago police. The man was battered at 5:25 a.m. May 25 in the 1200 block of N. Ashland Ave. He has been hospitalized at Northwestern Hospital in serious condition. The attacker fled in an unknown direction say police. Area 5 detectives are investigating.

Parents can't sue Teachers Union for illegal COVID strike

Parents of school children enrolled in Chicago's Public Schools don't have the legal ability to sue the Chicago Teachers Union [CTU] for illegal strikes, such as the one the parents said CTU staged in early 2022 in a bid to keep Chicago's schools closed amid the COVID pandemic, even as the rest of the country was returning to normalcy, a Cook County judge has ruled.

On May 8, Cook County Circuit Judge Daniel Kubasiak sided with the CTU and its current and former union presidents, dismissing the lawsuit brought by parents over the allegedly illegal strike.

In the ruling, Kubasiak agreed that allowing the parents' lawsuit to continue would conflict with state educational labor law and would undermine the ability of the CTU and other teachers unions to deal directly with school boards to resolve supposed conflicts, no matter if those disputes are genuine and legal or manufactured and outside the law.

The lawsuit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court in Feb. 2024, sought to make the CTU and current and former presidents Stacey Davis Gates and Jesse Sharkey, pay at least $250 million for causing learning loss, income loss and general headaches for Chicago Public Schools students and their families when the union executed a labor action in 2022 to protest CPS' return to full-time, in-person learning.

Chicago cops abused rights of street preachers

A group of Christian street preachers are suing the city of Chicago, claiming Chicago Police wrongly detained or arrested them under the guise of an ordinance regulating amplified noise, as part of an alleged unwritten discriminatory policy hostile to religious speakers.

Two separate lawsuits have been lodged against the city and various Chicago Police officers.

The first was filed in Dec. 2024 by Moody Bible Institute student Ethan Acevedo, of Chicago.

It was followed in March by a separate lawsuit filed by attorneys for traveling street preacher Brett Raio, of Maine; Chicago street evangelist Perez Ndi; and street preacher Reetik Dhamala, of Wheaton. Those three men renewed their claims against the city and four Chicago Police officers in an amended complaint filed April 17.

According to Acevedo's lawsuit, he was part of a group speaking on a religious basis against abortion while near a Planned Parenthood clinic at 1200 N. La Salle on March 30, 2024.

According to the lawsuits, all of the allegedly wrongly detained Christian street preachers were standing on public sidewalks in Chicago when they were engaged by police.

According to the other lawsuit, Raio and Ndi were accosted, handcuffed and cited by Chicago Police while proselytizing at the intersection of E. Madison St. and N. Michigan Ave. near Millenium Park on Dec. 21, 2024. Ndi and Dhamala were later arrested at the same location and detained for seven hours by Chicago Police on Feb. 24, 2025.

According to the complaints, all were arrested, detained or cited by police claiming authority under a Chicago city ordinance which the officers allegedly said prohibited speaking using amplification without permits on public streets.

The lawsuits seek court orders blocking the city from wrongly enforcing the sound amplification ordinance to allegedly target street evangelists near Millenium Park or the Planned Parenthood facility at 1200 N. LaSalle.

Rental car records, video, phone data identify Wisconsin man as gunman in Rogers Park murder

A Wisconsin man has been charged with committing the first murder of 2025 in Rogers Park thanks to rental car records, phone location data, and volumes of video.

Antwon Jackson, 31, was detained by Judge Dedire Dyer over May 18 after prosecutors detailed why they believe Jackson is the man who killed 28-year-old Jakobe Barker in the 1300 block of W. Estes.

Officials said Jackson rented a blue Buick Encore from Hertz on Valentine's Day in Madison and was seen on video two days later at the Sonic restaurant, 1022 W. Wilson, in Uptown. Detectives found at least two other videos linking Jackson to the car, according to a proffer filed by prosecutors.

Very late that night, about 25 minutes before the murder, another video showed Jackson outside with a man who had a gun, the proffer said.

At about 12:25 a.m. Feb. 17, video showed Barker driving near the Encore and the two vehicles seeming to overtake each other, prosecutors said.

When Barker turned to go to his girlfriend's house on Estes, the Encore continued going straight and then turned around at a gas station to follow him.

As Barker stopped in front of his girlfriend's house, the Encore drove alongside him, and someone in the Encore fired multiple shots, killing him. Prosecutors believe Jackson fired those shots from the passenger side while a witness was in the driver's seat.

Cops found the Encore abandoned in the 1400 block of W. Catalpa and staked it out. Someone who knows Jackson tried to retrieve the Encore on the day after the murder, but the police arrested him when he got inside, the proffer said.

That man and four separate law enforcement officers identified Jackson from images recorded at Hertz and elsewhere, according to prosecutors. GPS from the Encore and Jackson's phone location history tracked together "at all the locations, including the scene of the murder," said the proffer, which did not provide a clear motive for the crime.

Man found shot at Uptown intersection May 25

A man was found shot at an Uptown intersection on May 25, but he didn't want to cooperate with the Chicago cops who showed up to help him.

Officers responded to a 911 call about a man who fell out of an SUV in the 4800 block of N. Sheridan around 5:12 a.m. It turned out that the man had a gunshot wound in his lower right leg, according to CPD.

An officer who reviewed surveillance video said the footage showed the injured man pull up to the intersection in an SUV, get out, and sit down on the ground around 5:03 a.m. He was already shot when he arrived, according to the officer. CPD said he was in good condition at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center.

Investigators suspect the man was shot near the 4900 block of N. Winthrop around 5 a.m. That's because they received calls of shots fired in that area, which is only a block or two from where the man was found.

So far this year, only two people have been shot in Uptown. That's down from seven victims at this point last year.

DC shooting suspect protested outside Mayor's Ravenswood home after McDonald killing

Years before he allegedly shot and killed two Israeli Embassy employees in Washington D.C., Elias Rodriguez was an active member of left-wing groups in Chicago. Among his targets were police violence and a proposed Amazon headquarters in Chicago.

Elias Rodriguez, 31, was charged May 22 with the murder of foreign officials and other crimes in connection with the deaths of Israeli citizen Yaron Lischinsky and American Sarah Milgrim. He lived in a modest 850-square-foot apartment in Albany Park and worked as an administrative assistant at a medical trade group.

On Sunday, the Chicago Sun-Times reported that an Oct. 2017 article in Liberation, the online newspaper for the Party for Socialism and Liberation, quoted Rodriguez as a member of the group participating in a protest outside the Ravenswood home of then-Mayor Rahm Emanuel over the police shooting of teenager Laquan McDonald and the city's bid to be the site for a new Amazon headquarters.

A photo of a man holding a protest sign published with the article appeared to match photos of Rodriguez posted on social media. Video of him protesting in Downtown Chicago for Palestinian refugees and against Israel has also been posted online.

Last week the organization denied that Rodriguez was an active member, though it acknowledged a "brief association" in the past. The group also scrubbed the 2017 article identifying Rodriguez as a member from its website.

Mom stabbed 7-year-old son for making a mess in their Rogers Park apartment

A woman was jailed after prosecutors accused her of stabbing her 7-year-old son for making a mess in their Rogers Park apartment May 17.

Chicago police arrested the woman at Evanston Hospital after she went there to have her son treated for a stab wound.

On May 18, prosecutors said Llovana Torres, 26, who stayed up late on May 16 cleaning her apartment in the 1700 block of W. Touhy. But she awoke on May 17 to discover that her son had made another mess.

She struck her son a number of times, and he hid in a cabinet under the kitchen sink to get away, according to the allegations.

Torres tried to pull him out, but when those efforts failed, she grabbed a kitchen knife and repeatedly stabbed him, prosecutors claimed.

After the boy screamed, Torres took him to her mother's apartment downstairs, and the grandmother ordered her to take him to the hospital, officials said.

Evanston Hospital transferred the boy to Lurie Children's Hospital by air ambulance, and he remained on a ventilator as his mother stood in court yesterday.

Prosecutors said Torres told a hospital employee that she had stabbed the boy and later told CPD that she accidentally struck him with the blade.

Judge Sabra Ebersole ordered her detention on a charge of aggravated battery of a child under 13.

Anonymous tipster leads to arrest of suspect in violent robbery of two women in the Loop Surveillance images of the suspects.

A twice-convicted robber is once again facing robbery charges after an anonymous tipster recognized him in CTA surveillance that Chicago police released to the media earlier this year. Both victims suffered concussions during the attack.

Tremain Giles, 26, violently attacked two Lakeview women inside the Jackson pedway late on Jan. 24, prosecutors say. Two men who remain at large helped.

Officials said the women, ages 22 and 25, were walking through the pedway between the Blue and Red Lines when Giles spread his arms to keep them from passing.

He allegedly put his arms around the younger woman's chest and pushed her against the wall while calling her "bh" and trying to rip her bag away. As he did that, the other two men blocked the second victim, according to prosecutors.

When the second woman tried to intervene in the robbery, Giles slapped her across the face, grabbed her by her hair, and threw her into the pedway wall, officials said.

He ultimately got away with the older woman's purse but failed to get the first victim's backpack, according to court filings.

Judge James Costello detained Giles, saying he "exhibited far more violence than necessary to achieve [the] robbery." Costello said an anonymous 311 caller identified Giles, and one of the victims subsequently picked him out of a photo lineup.

Chicago cops recently arrested him after they saw him jump a turnstile at the Roosevelt CTA station and realized he was wanted for the robbery, according to his arrest report.

Both victims required medical treatment for concussions and one of them has suffered hearing loss, Costello wrote in a detention order.

Giles received a six-year prison sentence for robbing a victim older than 60 in Bridgeview. He pleaded guilty to robbery as a juvenile, too, prosecutors said.

He's now charged with robbery, attempted robbery, and two counts of aggravated battery.

The City Council Public Safety Committee voted May 20 to pass Ald. Brian Hopkins' [2nd] curfew ordinance out of the committee. The ordinance was "deferred and published," delaying a full vote until the next City Council meeting on June 18.

The ordinance allows the CPD Superintendent and the Deputy Mayor for Public Safety to declare a curfew for minors when groups of 20 or more have the potential to cause a danger to public safety.

North Side cosponsors of the ordinance right now include and Brendan Reilly [42nd], Timmy Knudsen [43rd], Bennett Lawson [44th] and Scott Waguespack [32].

Get Behind The Vest fundraiser June 25

A Get Behind The Vest fundraiser will be held 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 25, hosted by Mario Stefanini of Mario's Table, 21 W. Goethe St.

A policeman's vest is not bulletproof forever. It wears out and breaks down, and it needs to be replaced every 5 years. Just one bullet permanently damages a vest, making it unusable.

At $500 or more per vest, in addition to other equipment and uniform expenses, the costs can quickly add up. That is why a group forms every year to help raise money to buy new vests. These donations ensure that every officer out protecting Chicago citizens is protected.

This is the 4th Annual Get Behind the Vest event. Since 2022, they have raised over $200,000.

The event is co-sponsored by Gold Coast Neighbors Assoc. and the 2nd Ward Office. For tickets or more information call 312-643-2299.

Survey underway for agriculture plan

Chicago is creating its first Urban Agriculture Plan, and is conducting a public survey to help guide in its formation.

Over the next few years, Advocates for Urban Agriculture and Chicago Community Gardeners Assoc., will be focusing their efforts on co-creating this plan. The purpose of their survey is to receive community feedback on what focus areas should be included in the urban agriculture plan.

They endeavor to shift policy to reduce red tape in the City to be more supportive of individuals, organizations and businesses growing food, medicine, flowers, and other pollinator habitats within the city; identify challenges within departments of the City of Chicago and sister agencies to better serve growers; and encourage improved resources. Steppenwolf Theatre Company wins Pulitzer Prize

Chicago's Steppenwolf Theatre Company celebrated the announcement earlier this month by the Pulitzer Prize Board that playwright Branden Jacobs-Jenkins won the 2025 Pulitzer Prize for Drama for "Purpose."

The play, commissioned by Steppenwolf Theatre Company, is a fictional work that debuted in Chicago in 2024 and moved earlier this year from Steppenwolf to Broadway in New York City, where it is still being staged today with the original Chicago cast.

Directed in New York and Chicago by Phylicia Rashad, it's loosely based on the family of civil rights leader Jesse Jackson.

This marks the first time a play that grew out of Steppenwolf has won the Pulitzer Prize since Tracy Letts' "August: Osage County" in 2008.

Jacobs-Jenkins was also named one of Time's 100 Most Influential People of 2025.

Wilding alert: 14 suspects sought in violent robbery, battery aboard CTA train in downtown Surveillance images of 14 people identified as suspects in a robbery and battery aboard the Red Line downtown. Courtesy Chicago Police Dept.

BY CWBCHICAGO

It may be the most individuals sought in a single Chicago Police Dept. bulletin in years. Cops are looking for at least 14 people who were involved in the armed robbery and physical attack of two passengers on a Red Line train in the Loop.

CPD said the group "aggressively battered" a couple on the train at Harrison around 11:23 p.m. May 7.

The crowd battered and pepper-sprayed the victims and took their valuables while at least one offender displayed a knife.

According to the alert released Friday evening, all of the suspects are Black and 15 to 25 years old.

Anyone who recognizes someone in the CTA surveillance images can contact detectives at 312-745-4447 regarding case #JJ246554.

Serious concerns about proposed relocation of Old Town Walgreens

As a long-time Old Town resident and neighbor at 1660 N. La-Salle, I'm writing to express serious concerns about the proposed relocation of Walgreens into the former Treasure Island grocery space. This isn't just a change in tenancy—it raises real questions about safety and transparency.

The property at 1639 N. Wells St. has only one customer entrance and exit. The southern wall faces an enclosed, windowless zone with no active security features, no direct visibility from the street, and no natural foot traffic.

Introducing a late-night or 24-hour retail use in this uniquely constrained setting—without transparent planning or public input—raises understandable questions.

How will access, deliveries, and pedestrian flow be handled? What steps will be taken to ensure pedestrian safety, minimize disruption, and provide necessary security for those parking in the former Treasure Island parking lot, customers on foot or all pedestrians?

It has been widely reported that safety, violence and theft issues continue to plague Walgreens at 1200 N. Dearborn. Is the current proposed relocation of the Old Town Walgreens into 1639 N. Wells factoring in these well-reported issues?

Those of us living next door should be a part of any conversation about how this space will be used.

To my neighbors at 1660 and throughout Old Town: for over 50 years, this site supported a full-service grocery store that served the community's daily needs. Temporarily replacing it with a pharmacy store that may bring more traffic, new issues, and fewer tangible neighborhood benefits has left many of us questioning the direction and process behind this change. We deserve transparency—and a seat at the table for discussion.

It's time for kids to walk or bike to school

As a mother to a toddler, I am excited to see the installation of a protected bike lane on Clark St. I hope that the city continues to install more protected bike lanes on our streets to create a connected network that people can safely use to get to many destinations.

In the past, I never thought of biking to get around the city; it seemed too dangerous. But when the city installed a protected bike lane in front of my home, I started using a Divvy bike. Being an exhausted new mom, I was very happy to have a safe, inexpensive, quick, reliable way to travel that did not require me to drive. Now, I use a bike to get to shopping, restaurants, and appointments on a weekly basis. If even a fraction of drivers are enticed to switch to biking during rush hour, it would ease congestion.

For decades, American cities have been prioritizing driving at the expense of all other modes of transportation in order to combat congestion. That approach has utterly failed, and I can think of no better example of this than school drop-off. According to the National Household Travel Survey run by the U.S. Dept. of Transportation, in 1969, 48% of kids aged 5-14 walked or cycled to school, and only 12% were driven by their parents. In 2009, only 13% of kids aged 5-14 walked or cycled, and 44% were driven by their parents. That is a massive increase in cars crowded around schools in the morning, and a massive increase in congestion. Not only is this terrible for traffic, but it creates danger for our kids. The situation has gotten so bad that more and more schools are pushing for traffic calming.

Multiple studies have shown that kids who walk to school have better physical and mental health and feel more connected to their community. At a time when kids are struggling with loneliness and not getting enough exercise, we should be making it easy for them to get around independently. Protected bike lanes, which increase safety for pedestrians as well as cyclists, are an obvious choice.

My dad tells a funny story about being tricked into walking across the city of Dhaka when he was 10 years old. When I first heard the story, I couldn't imagine how a kid could be so free. I was driven everywhere by my parents, so I had no idea how to get around by myself or how I would even navigate a big city. Now that I am a parent, I know that I want my son to have some taste of the freedom his grandfather had. I accept that he won't be able to cross the city when he is 10, but I have hope that we will have improved traffic safety enough that he can at least walk to school.

Coyotes are typically shy and nocturnal, but become bolder during mating season.

Coyote pupping season underway on North Side

Pupping season is now underway for coyotes in the Chicago area, meaning that many new infants are being born and there are increased chances that you could come across one in your community.

There are an estimated 2,000 coyotes in the Chicagoland area in parks, cemeteries and woodlands, but they are normally reclusive and try to avoid human contact at all times.

Coyotes are a natural part of the local ecosystem not unlike pigeons, squirrels, or rabbits but often raise special attention and concern among residents. Just seeing a coyote does not warrant a report to the city through 311 or 911. But do report an injured, sick, viscous animal, or any animal on the public way, in a public place including city parks.

Typically coyotes will only be seen in human spaces if they are expecting food, chasing food down, or desperate for it. However, pup rearing season can cause an increase in sightings and interactions as parents becoming more desperate to provide food for their pups may take otherwise unlikely risks.

Residents are advised to take special precautions, especially those with small pets. Cats and small dogs should be kept inside or monitored, as should their food and water bowls. Food waste can also be a draw for coyotes, so keep waste in high-quality, lidded containers when outside.

How the railroads shaped Chicago

The Edgewater Historical Assoc. will be hosting a free book discussion 10 a.m., Saturday, June 14 on the book The Iron Horse and the Windy City: How Railroads Shaped Chicago, by author David M. Young.

The talk will be held at the Edgewater Branch, Chicago Public Library, Betty A. Barclay Community Room, 6000 N. Broadway.

Railroads were instrumental in shaping Chicago's early growth and development, transforming it from a small settlement into a major urban center and industrial powerhouse. Rail enabled the city to become a hub for grain and meatpacking industries, fueled suburban expansion, and facilitated trade and commerce across the Midwest that continues to this day.

In addition to a tour of railroad history, the book also covers its importance to Chicago's economic and physical development. It was also one of the first books to deal with the history of accidents and issues of safety.

Books will be available at the first floor circulation desk. This program is in partnership with the Edgewater Branch Library.

Maifest this weekend in Lincoln Square

Ethnic celebration has been an annual festival

Maifest will be celebrated this year in Lincoln Square, a cultural event brought to you by the Maifest Committee and Ald. Matt Martin [47th], taking place in Lincoln Square, Chicago's original German neighborhood.

Maifest is the traditional German celebration of the arrival of spring. Maifest is still celebrated throughout Germany with the maypole (maibaum) decorated to show off the history and crafts of the local village or town.

It's a time for community festivities, including parades, dances around decorated maypoles, and traditional German foods. The origins of Maifest can be traced back to ancient pagan celebrations of spring, with some sources suggesting it may have been celebrated as early as the 6th century BC.

While the famous Lincoln Square maibaum is missing this year (due to road construction), the celebration remains. But due to that road construction, this year's events will be centered at 4521 N. Lincoln Ave.

across from The Old Town School of Music.

Like Oktoberfest, Maifest has now become a popular celebration throughout the world. Chicago's German community welcomes all to the heart of Chicago's German Community in Lincoln Square.

Festivities start at 5 p.m. Thursday, May 29 and run through 10 p.m. Sunday, June 1.

The event is organized by Committee President Joe Matuschka and Vice President Joe Bradtk, and is a 501(c)(3) organization founded to promote Chicago's German heritage. The four-day fest benefits German-American organizations including The Rheinischer Verein, St. Hubertus Jagd Club, the American Aid Society, the Donauschwaben Youth Group, Edelweiss Trachten Verein, D'Lustigen Holzacker Buam, Egerlander Dance Group, Dank Haus and others.

Admission to Maifest Chicago is free and open to all ages. Outstanding German and American food and beer are available for purchase. German and American bands provide entertainment throughout the fest.

You have 30 calendar days after this Summons and Petition are served on you to file a Response (form FL-120) at the court and have a copy served on the petitioner. A letter, phone call, or court appearance will not protect you. If you do not file your Response on time, the court may make orders affecting your marriage or domestic partnership, your property, and custody of your children. You may be ordered to pay support and attorney fees and costs. For legal advice, contact a lawyer immediately. Get help finding a lawyer at the California Courts Online Self-Help Center (www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp), at the California Legal Services website (www.lawhelpca.org), or by contacting your local county bar association.

These restraining orders are effective against both spouses or domestic partners until the petition is dismissed, a judgment is entered, or the court makes further orders. They are enforceable anywhere in California by any law enforcement officer who has received or seen a copy of them.

If you cannot pay the filing fee, ask the clerk for a fee waiver form. The court may order you to pay back all or part of the fees and costs that the court waived for you or the other party.

broken friend, frequently, daily. But come to me. Will you kindly bring out some samples of black alpaca a best quality without luster and without cotton. Also some samples of heavier black woolen goods.”

The book is Emerson’s second work on the subject of the lost letters, which he uncovered in 2005. He found them locked away in a trunk that had once belonged to one of Robert Lincoln’s personal attorneys, Frederick Towers.

Using those letters and a wealth of other material, Emerson wrote his first book on the subject, “The Madness of Mary Lincoln.” in 2007.

In that book, Emerson cites a modern psychiatric expert who called “climate change” to enact laws and regulations that increasingly force Americans to abandon the use of internal combustion powered cars, landscaping tools and other implements, while also shutting down reliable traditional power plants in favor of so-called “renewable” energy sources, such as solar and wind.

Following the ruling, the energy companies told the court theorized that Mary Lincoln suffered from what would likely be diagnosed today as bipolar disorder.

“And he told me that today, Mary would be committed involuntarily for probably about seven days,” he said. “Doctors would look at her. They’d give her medication, and she’d be fine today, as long as she took the medication.”

“But back then, they didn’t have that,” Emerson said. “But if you look at her whole life, it’s very clear the incidence of bipolar disorder, or what used to be called manic depressive illness, where she’s high and she’s low, and she’s wonderfully loving and horribly mean. Her spending could be considered a manic action. She was depressed a lot. So it’s clear throughout her whole life.”

they intend to appeal the ruling to the U.S. Seventh Circuit Court of Appeals. They have requested Valderrama put a hold on enforcing his ruling until they have filed their appeal.

The city has opposed that request. As of May 20, Valderrama had not yet ruled on the motion to stay pending appeal.

After her release, Mary Todd Lincoln lived a relatively quiet life, although she remained plagued by both psychiatric and physical ailments. She died in 1882 at the age of 63. She is buried next to her husband at the Lincoln Tomb in Springfield, along with three of their sons: Edward, William and Thomas.

Robert Lincoln went on to lead a distinguished career of his own. In addition to his legal career, he served as secretary of war under President James Garfield and continued in that post under President Chester A. Arthur after Garfield’s assassination. He also served as minister to Great Britain in the Benjamin Harrison administration. He died in 1926 at age 82.

Walk Edgewater routes announced

The walking tours hosted by the Edgewater Historical Assoc. are back, and they are allowing up to 20 participants on each tour.

The fee for each tour is $15, and the schedule is subject to change.

- Surprising Broadway: This tour of the main business area of Edgewater has many surprises because it features several of the significant Motor Row buildings and a collection of two-flats built before the street was designated commercial. This tour captures a moment in Edgewater history when homes and businesses were side by side. Date: June 8; 1 p.m.
- Andersonville Historic District: This district exhibits some of the finest commercial architecture built by Swedish architects at the beginning of the 20th century. Also included are a few residential buildings of early construction. The walk begins at the Edgewater Historical Society Museum garden at Balmoral and Ashland, and ends at Foster and Clark. Date: June 22; 11 a.m.
- Lakewood Balmoral Historic District: Designated in 1999, this district displays many of Edgewater's finest architectural gems in residential housing. Many are locally important landmarks on the Chicago Historic Resources survey of 1986. Date: July 9; 5 p.m.
- North Edgewater Beach: You will see seven Chicago landmarks and homes from the 1890s in the area around Granville and Kenmore. Learn from discussion of examples of each major residential building boom and housing transition in Edgewater since the 1890s. Date: July 10; 6 p.m.
- Magnolia Glen: This neighborhood is one of Edgewater's oldest, developed by William H. Cairnduff in 1888 as an addition to J.L. Cochran's Edgewater. The homes are well cared for and show some interesting architectural details. The tour booklet includes an early map. Date: July 12, 11 a.m.
- Discover the Art Underfoot: This is a unique exploration of the hidden artwork along Edgewater's lakefront. Join Edgewater's Bill Swislow in the walk along the shore. The July 19 tour begins near Bryn Mawr, at the Osterman Beach pier. The August 24 tour begins at the Foster Ave. beach house. Date: July 19, 10:30 a.m., and Aug. 24, 10:30 a.m.
- Bryn Mawr Historic District: The center of Edgewater and Edgewater's main street. Learn how J.L. Cochran planned to develop Edgewater as a suburb until urbanization happened. The street has a unique mix of what are called hybrid buildings, including luxury apartments and stores. Many of the buildings are named Chicago landmarks. Date: Aug. 2, 11 a.m.
- Edgewater Glen Historic District: This neighborhood is a popular section of single family homes and two-flats developed from some of the Kransz family original farm at the end of the 19th century. In 1903 one architect, A.E. Norman, was hired to build almost two blocks of homes. Other specialties are homes of the Kransz family and some early homes by J.L. Cochran. Date: Aug. 9, 11 a.m.

ministrative Coordinator, covered some of the upcoming arts and culture projects.

The long-delayed Ainslie Arts Plaza near Western Ave., which has been under construction for two years, will someday have performance stages, festival tents, landscaping, and increased pedestrian protection, said Gendy. They will also remove 50 metered public commercial parking spaces on Catalpa Ave. in Andersonville to add a public plaza between Ashland and Clark, which is targeted to be completed by the spring of 2026. tommer parking is a critical infrastructure need for a destination commercial district like Andersonville that draws-in customers from all over the six-county Chicagoland region.

- Donation Tax Credit allocations
- Debt assumption and long-term financing

The current First Mortgage lender will take possession of the property through a Deed in Lieu of Foreclosure, agreed upon by Heartland Housing.

The property currently provides affordable housing to individuals facing homelessness, veterans and low-income residents with addiction and psychological issues.

Fifty units are managed and operated by Trilogy under the Pathways Program to provide supportive services to formerly homeless residents. The 87 non-Pathways units house individuals that are at risk of homelessness.

Heartland's San Miguel Apartments to get $1.75M debt forgiveness

The DOH is also seeking approval from City Council for an ordinance that would allow the sale and transfer of San Miguel Apartments located at 907 W. Argyle in Uptown. Additionally, they are seeking approval for debt forgiveness of $1.75 million, and the change in income restriction of the units.

The sale of this multi-family building would preserve 53 units of affordable housing for a minimum of 15 more years with no additional funding from the City. By allowing the requested actions, the City would be able to help transfer the building from Heartland Housing to Chicago Metro Housing Development corporation.

This property has served Chicago's residents in need of affordable housing for the past 31 years.

Other Heartland properties that are under new ownership after their financial crash include Hollywood House, a 12-story building for seniors at 5700 N. Sheridan Rd. in Edgewater, and Town Hall Apartments, 79-unit affordable building for LGBTQ seniors at 3600 N. Halsted St. in Lakeview. Both properties were taken over last year by Full Circle Communities.

the project."

This reporter contacted a noted Chicago artist about the DCASE commission process. That artist stated that payouts from DCASE jobs are typically four if not 10 times more than any other commission. The artist is not being identified so as not to harm future commissions.

ing and improving city services to ward residents. The 40th Ward believes a connected community is a safer one so they work with public safety stakeholders to address immediate incidents of crime and its root causes.

Using "root cause analysis" is also a tactic to delay decision-making, stall progress or avoid taking responsibility. While root cause analysis is a valuable tool for identifying the underlying reasons for a problem and preventing recurrence, it can also be misused to avoid making unpopular decisions.

Upcoming infrastructure projects include park improvements, street resurfacing, water/sewer projects, streetscapes, public safety improvements, and public art.

Upcoming residential street resurfacing projects include Berwyn Ave. from Washtenaw to Lincoln; Rockwell St. from Lawrence to Ainslie; Argyle St. from Rockwell to California; Rockwell St. from Lunt to Coyle; and Manor Ave. from Lawrence to Montrose.

Of interest to bicyclists and motorists concerned with losing pathways of mobility and parking was the Far Northside Bike Network. Two projects completed in 2024 are the Winnemac Greenway and the Leeland Greenway.

Six projects slated for 2025 include the Lincoln and Pratt Protected Lanes, Ainslie Greenway, and Rosehill Bikeway. Other bicycle projects include the Berwyn Bikeway Completion, Rockwell Bikeway Expansion, and the Potential Granville Bikeway.

These biking efforts all end up limiting roadway uses for motor vehicles, and are unpopular changes for those who drive in Chicago.

The Granville Bikeway plan extends from the North Branch of the Chicago River at Kedzie Ave. eastward to Lake Michigan at Sheridan Rd., and it is a particularly hard sell. Vasquez claims Granville Ave. is among the top 10% of Chicago's most dangerous streets. It is a claim being made to a suspicious community without the city providing any of their raw data support the statement.

He noted that the speed limit on Granville will be reduced to 20 MPH from the current 30 MPH and more speed humps will be added, notably near Hayt and Stone elementary schools.

Speed humps are being installed in civic duty, equity, diversity, and inclusion highlighting the themes of blues and house music in Chicago, noted Jimmy Costello, DCASE Public Art Director.

The mural was first displayed in mid-Dec. 2024 amid quite a bit of confusion. Initial dedication was delayed after scheduling delays. The mural was originally designed to align with cultural events that were happening ahead of the Democratic National Convention in Chicago and until election day 2024.

streets and alleys these days. Roadway speed humps are longer and gentler, designed to slow traffic to 12-15 MPH while speed bumps are shorter and steeper in alleys designed to slow traffic to 2-10 MPH.

The Granville Traffic Safety plan involves limiting its use as a throughway. One goal will be by reconfiguring the street with dead ends where two one-way legs meet at large intersections. The result would be that all eastbound and westbound traffic on Granville would eventually have to turn onto a major intersecting north-south street.

Six projects slated for 2025 include the Lincoln and Pratt Protected Lanes, Ainslie Greenway, and Rosehill Bikeway. Other bicycle projects include the Berwyn Bikeway Completion, Rockwell Bikeway Expansion, and the Potential Granville Bikeway.

Another will be through adding traffic barriers at targeted intersections to block or slow egress.

A third goal is improvement of school pick-up and drop-off and better circulation. Emergency access will be prioritized. A fourth and final goal will be enhancing access through improving pedestrian safety and access to transit and adding a neighborhood bicycle route that, unlike cars, will be able to move in counterflow against one-way traffic, which is a violation of state law.

Another major theme of the meeting was Haven on Lincoln, a new taxpayer-financed stabilization housing space in the former Diplomat Motel, 5230 N. Lincoln Ave. The Diplomat was one of nine such motels on U.S. Route 41 that provided shelter to tourists since the 1950s.

The Haven will offer onsite treatment and services in 37 basic units including one-third that may be double occupancy if needed. The Haven will offer case and property management on-site and referrals to other clinical and recovery services. It will have 24/7 security and construction and is slated for completion in 4th quarter of 2025.

It will be operated by Cornerstone Community Outreach, 4628 N. Clifton Ave.

Interested parties may watch the Town Hall at 40thward.org.
