Outcry over Mamby Music Fest move to Montrose Beach

Festival moved to park with no prior public notice

BY JIM VAIL

A two-day music festival coming to Montrose Beach this August is not for the birds.

At least that's what a group of concerned residents believe when it was announced that Mamby on the Beach will be moved from the Oakwood Beach on the South Side to the North Side beach adjacent to Uptown. Organizers said it outgrew its former site.

"Montrose Point, the top ranked bird sanctuary in Illinois, is located right next to Montrose Beach—the negative impact for the bird sanctuary would be severe," said Katharine Boyda, who is on the Clarendon Park advisory board.

Riot Fest was moved from Humboldt Park on the North Side to Douglas Park on the South Side after organizers complained that the music festival was problematic.

"Will the Montrose Bird Sanctuary and our public beach be bombarded with noise, and closed to the public" by the Chicago Park District [CPD] asked Boyda? "Who signed off on this?"

There has been no community input into moving the festival. Several who are opposed to the move are now organizing for a fight.

"I was told the police did not sign off on it," wrote Nicole Machuca, the director of environknows if that's true). I also heard that because of the new aldermanic prerogative law that perhaps (Ald. James) Cappleman's opinion doesn't count anymore. I've heard so many things, who knows what's true and what's not."

Pamela Merema, a lakefront high-rise neighbor who is against the move, said parking in the area near the beach is also a big problem after aldermen north and south of the area purposely killed off their open space for special events.

"That squeezed all the special events that used to be held from Addison to Foster into the only remaining open space, i.e. next to the bird sanctuary," Merema wrote in an email. "How nuts is that?"

Another problem, Merema said, is that the event is very far from public transportation. She said when Ald. Cappleman suggested in 2014 that all parking be removed to make more space, he did not consider that, unlike Oak Street Beach, there are no adjacent streets with CTA bus routes

Man charged with breaking car windows

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Charges have been filed against a man who police say may be responsible for breaking out the windows of nearly 20 vehicles on the Far North Side. Investigators briefly considered the possibility that the crimes were anti-Semitic because many of the damaged cars were located near Jewish establishments. Police now believe the locations to be coincidental.

Patrick Newton, 29, was taken into custody around 5:30 a.m. May 22nd after a caller reported seeing someone breaking the windows of a Toyota SUV in the 6700 block of N. Greenview.

Cops monitoring surveillance cameras in the 24th Rogers Park District spotted Newton as he walked in the 2300 block of W. Howard and led patrol units to his location.

Investigators determined that Newton matches the description of the offender who was being sought in a series of criminal damage cases that was the subject of a community alert that cops released to the public on May 19.

Newton is charged with six counts of criminal damage to property for breaking out the rear windows of cars in the 2900 block of W. Birchwood and the 2800 block of W. Touhy on May 18 and in the 6700 block of N. Greenview on May 22.

Judge John Lyke released him on a recognizance bond.

Public hears new Lincoln Square Master Plan

BY JIM VAIL

The Lincoln Square community heard a variety of options to make their neighborhood a more attractive place for families at the Old Town School of Folk Music on May 30.

After months of feedback, including four committee meetings, three online polls and 25 community meetings, residents can continue to voice their opinions about which plans are best under the Lincoln Square Master Plan.

"We want to reclaim the sidewalks," said Jodi Mariano, the project manager who presented the plan to a packed auditorium of over 100 people. "There are more pedestrian friendly areas, but it can be even more so."

Mariano showed a Powerpoint presentation that featured different improvement ideas for Lincoln Square, including developing a market street that calms traffic and supports festivals, creates bump outs and widened sidewalks on Lincoln Ave., buffering the alley and adding overhead light canopy in Giddings Plaza and enhancing the alleys with improved building facades.

Mariano said they also worked on a vision to improve private development, along with moving parking to the back areas.

She said people are excited about clearing up the sidewalks and providing more public art and murals, providing mosaic planters, bike racks, and parklets (a seating area or perhaps some trees in one parking space), and public kiosks that tell people where to find certain stores or public entities, just like in the malls.

The Lincoln Square private development guidelines include encouraging public seating at corner lots, second floor setbacks of five feet, and operable glass doors that activate the sidewalk.

"Sidewalks are so narrow on Lincoln, so we would like the businesses to have open windows," she said.

Mariano said the funds collected through their Special Service Area tax [SSA], that will be spent over the next five to 10 years, will only include a slight portion on the north side of Montrose Ave. near Western Ave. The SSA is a tax on property owners and lease holders for communal services such as landscaping, sidewalk cleaning and marketing.

"We want to minimize parking lots," she said. "They recommended outdoor cafes on Mon-

Making plans for the day starts with breakfast

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

If you had one last meal, what would it be? Caviar, lobster and a bottle of Olivier Leflaive Puligny-Montrachet Les Pucelles Premier Cru 2016?

Or maybe a rare Gibson's steak with french fries and three Grey Goose martinis?

What about the homemade eggplant at Tufano's with some top shelf Chianti, or the whole roast duck at Le Bouchon with ramps, truffle butter and bread crumbs? And a wallet-ripping Chablis?

Even though I'd enjoy feasting on any of these superb vittles, I'd take a pass. Instead I'd choose some really wet scrambled eggs and two sausages. With a little bit of hash browns. Greek toast with marmalade and Lou Mitchell's coffee. See, I'm really a breakfast guy. Give me bacon and eggs in the morning and I don't have to eat the rest of the day. Poached eggs on toast? That's for me. Pure comfort.

Why breakfast? Well the variety can't be matched. You can always slip in a waffle. A slice of ham. Toasted bagel. Strawberry jam. A duck egg. Irish tea. And fresh orange juice. Did I mention French toast and pancakes?

Breakfast foods are the road map of my childhood. The O'Gormans always appreciated a fine meal to start the day. Grandmas' warm scones set the tone. So did the Belleek mugs of tea with heavy cream and sugar. From early days we had our pajama sleeves rolled up, joining in the cooking of this meal. Breakfasts are easy foods to cook. Flawless eggs are child's play. In our house children knew how to soft boil an egg, broil bacon, make a baking powder biscuit and flip a flap Jack.

Travel gave us a peek at what was fashionable and popular on the breakfast table. Though omelets, corned beef hash and fruit and cereal were frequent menu items that I just wasn't crazy about. The avocado toast of their day. But homemade Irish sausages from Winston's Butcher Shop, on the South Side, were a different matter. Grilled tomatoes (another delight) was also high on the list of favorites.

When we were little we loved traveling through the Ozarks. We stayed at a small resort outside a little town called Eldon in Mason County, MO. An old-fashioned, three-story, white clapboard hotel, the Eldon, was our favorite place for breakfast. We drove three miles in our Plymouth just to get there. The counter space and tables spelled out Southern regional America. We loved the bountiful breakfasts. Everyone was so obliging. Simple. I always ordered two tea bags for my tea. No problem. My sister, Mary Regina, was strictly a no butter on anything-girl. My Pop was a steak and egg guy and mom loved anything poached. And granny loved the butter. The thicker the better on her toast and boiled eggs. She had free reign with the salt shaker.

We'd get there around 9 a.m. and would be finishing up around 10 a.m. Making plans for the day which always revolved around swimming in the pool while not getting sunburned, and having enough books to read. At the same time, the hotel kitchen was putting out freshly baked pie slices. But when we would sometimes return at dinner there wasn't a crumb of pie left over. Gone. All gone.

One morning, after we realized that no amount of pie could last the day there, we persuaded our mom to allow us the luxury of eating the pie at breakfast. Not a difficult undertaking. So began the O'Gormans' summer adventure of eating pie at our morning feast. Blueberry. Strawberry. Jumble Berry. Apple. Coconut Cream. And our Mama's favorite, Lemon Meringue. Of course that pie eating was the hit of the Summer. And we've never forgotten

My last meal.

it. I can still taste those sweet blueberries.

Food is a swell arranger of our perspectives and visions. It realigns our focus. Places everything in balance. So what better way to start the day but with an American breakfast.

To this day, some 30-years later, I remember boarding a train, "The Highland Express," somewhere north of Inverness, bound for London. It was before 6 a.m. and the trip to London would take 11 hours. It was October, so it was really cold in the Highlands. I had a heavy tweed topcoat on and a hat and scarf. When I boarded the train it was pouring. I was starving. It took a good hour, say 6:30 a.m. before any sign of breakfast reared its head. But, when it did, it turned out to be one of the great moments of my life.

The view outside was thick with fog and rain. I craved a hot cup of tea, which the steward in our car actually brought to me unasked for. I must have looked cold. He suggested that I reserve a table for breakfast. I took his advice. By 7 a.m. I was up to my eyes in good silver and linen, eggs, Scottish sausage and bacon, fried tomatoes and heavily buttered toast and marmalade. There were even warm scones. The tea was sweet and black and very strong. I feasted, and then watched the mist lift off the the floor of the highland carpet like I was in an episode of 'The Crown.' I had newspapers and some fine literature. I know I had a Barbara Pym in the pile. And that's how it went through the day. Plenty more tea as I choo-chooed. All that was missing was a piper.

Hard to imagine how breakfast is able to contain such whimsy and romance, like it was the curtain going up on a West End play.

For me and many others, breakfast punches all the right buttons for nutrition and drama. The Highland Express travels through its own time warp, taking me, then, to Claridges, through at least two novels that I read. With the revelation that sometimes you just have to let go and realize that it's about more than scrambled eggs.

EXCELLANT!: North Side State Sen. Heather Steans received high fives and congratulations on the Senate floor from her colleagues and legislative aides after the Senate voted to pass her bill legalizing adult-use recreational marijuana on May 29. Major provisions in the bill appeared to be key to gaining support and diffusing some opposition. For example, instead of enacting blanket, mass expungements of previous criminal records for minor pot-related violations, the new bill allows for expungement through the governor's clemency process if the case involves less than 30 grams of weed. For cases involving amounts greater than that, up to 500 grams, individuals and state's attorneys would be allowed to petition a court to vacate a conviction. We want to party with you Sen. Steans.

Teach your children well... their life could depend on it

One-hundred-seventeen people drowned in the Great Lakes in 2018. Since 2012, three young, teenage girls have drowned off the beaches of Rogers Park, their lives snuffed out by Lake Michigan, whose inviting, shimmering water can be so enticing.

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

And here's another Summer creeping up on us again. Please, watch your children in the lake.

For the last nearly four decades, I've lived steps from the beach and I've seen the fire trucks and ambulances and Coast Guard helicopters come down pretty much every year. I've seen the divers too, pulling lifeless bodies out.

West Ridge resident Halle Quezada was at the lake last year with her two children when 13-year-old Darihanne Torres drowned at a Rogers Park beach. Torres' teenage friend, who was rescued alive, was handed to Quezada and her husband. Quezada, a Chicago Public Schools teacher, soon realized that the girl who was pulled out alive was a former student's younger sister.

"Technically, I did not witness a drowning," Quezada said at a press conference at the end of April. "Darihanne submerged before I even knew to look. What I witnessed was her friend's rescue and the painful battle between hope and time when a child submerged in our waters and time won. I have learned since that my experience is not in isolation."

Darihanne's drowning prompted Quezada and other activists to form the Chicago Alliance for Waterfront Safety (CAWS). Drowning, she said, is a leading cause of death in every age group for children and adults alike. It's the No. 1 cause of death for children under five; the No. 2 cause for children between 1 and 14; and adolescents between 15 and 24 years of age have among the highest rates of drowning, and they usually occur in open water.

Additionally, 80% of drowning victims are male, and black and brown youth are drowning at higher rates, said Quezada. The greatest disparity is for black boys between the ages of 10 and 11, who are drowning at 10 times the rate of their white peers in lifeguarded pools. Also, autistic children drown at 160 times the rate of their typically developing peers, she said.

Quezada's children playing on the beach five minutes prior to Darihanne Torres drowning. The water was fairly calm, the skies were clear and blue.

You don't think it will happen to your child until it does, said Quezada.

"I think drownings happen to real people who never thought they can drown," said Quezada, "It happens to real people, it happens to real kids, and it's totally silent and final. It happens so quickly."

We are around water all the time and usually we don't drown, said Quezada. But we're facing an "epidemic," she said. She asks that people let their alderman know the issue matters to them and with drowning season upon us, they want changes immediately.

Drowning doesn't look like drowning, said Quezada. There is only 12 seconds once the drowning process begins in fresh water before you submerge.

"Drowning can happen in seconds," said Quezada. "It happens to people who never even expected to be in the water. It happens to strong swimmers. It happens to would-be rescuers.

"And on July 6, 2018 it happened to a 13-year-old girl with a family who adored her, with family who would likely do anything to get 30 seconds back and decide to keep her home that beautiful summer evening."

The biggest progress that has been made is the chipping away at the stigma of drowning among heads of city agencies and legislators to really see the epidemic for what it is, a public health and safety issue, said Quezada.

"At the end of the day, our lake front is a public park with a known hazard," she said.

Divers search for the body of another young woman who drowned a few years ago at a Rogers Park beach.

"No one should drown, because drowning is preventable, but we especially have a responsibility to protect our children and as long as kids are dying on public parks during daylight hours in Summer months, we are failing them, and that failure is so final. There is nothing we can do now that will bring Darihanne back," Quezada added. "We will never know who these efforts will save, but I am no longer comfortable waiting to find out. There is a national momentum in the U.S. to address drownings and Chicago is poised to be a leading city in the efforts."

We are a city on a lake. There is no question about it: We need to teach our children well where water safety is concerned.

Next time you're giving a gift, give a month of swim lessons. Not the ones that sing and play but the ones that will teach water safety and survival skills, said Quezada. "Dance and soccer isn't going to save your life," she said. "Make sure you get lessons where your child learns vital skills."

Tangible changes from the city are still slow to see, but are happening nonetheless; the signage to inform the public about structural currents are printed and the park district is doing inventory with lifeguards to determine install locations. Moreover, CPS now has one of the strongest aquatics policies and is working with the equity department to help address some of the racial disparities in national drowning statistics, the fire department has gotten more equipment and updating response procedures, and the conversation of equipping and training police for water emergencies is happening.

Extended lifeguard hours is also forefront and parks are looking at a system for beach-goers to easily identify where they are to 911 dispatch, said Quezada. Lurie Children's Hospital is working on data collection, which is a national problem, and identifying university partners to help overcome some of the obstacles around understanding the scope of Chicago drownings. The Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources Coastal Management Program is also helping with coordination across Great Lakes states in consistent messaging.

Former 49th Ward Ald. Joe Moore had set up the Lakefront Safety Task Force, which is dedicated to reducing drownings. Quezada is also a member of that group, which has made numerous crucial and critical recommendations to the city including expanding lifeguard hours and capacity, training residents in water safety, having life jacket loaners stations at beaches and many more.

"Chicago can lead the way, and as long as we are investing in tourism, recreation and costly rescues on the beach, we owe it

New mayor ponders changes to old city policy

Chicago non-profits to continue to receive free trash pick-up

BY PETER VON BUOL

A spokesperson for Mayor Lori Lightfoot has told Inside Publications the new mayor has not made any decision about charging churches, synagogues, orphanages and other non-profits organizations for garbage pick-up. About 2,400 properties now receive free garbage pick-up, and have for generations.

According to a March 2014 audit by the city's office of inspector general, the free garbage pick-up costs city taxpayers more than $6.5 million annually.

The mayor's office deferred to the city's Dept. of Streets and Sanitation [DSS] and that department's spokesperson said Streets and Sanitation has no plans to begin charging the non-profits for refuse pick-up.

In March 2014, sources had told Inside Publications the DSS had been engaged in a review of its long-standing policy of providing free trash pick-up to churches and non-profits, as well as other properties.

In a written-statement, Inspector General Joe Ferguson raised questions about the continued existence of the so-called grandfather list.

"The DSS did not know why or when service to non-for-profits began or how the current list was created. There is no documentation setting forth the legal authority for this service, or the criteria or procedures for providing and tracking it. This is ultimately a provision of free service at taxpayer expense, provided without legal authority," Ferguson said.

While not directly advocating for the elimination of the courtesy extended to non-profits, Ferguson suggested that the DSS establish guidelines similar to those implemented for the provision of free water service to these same non-profits.

Churches and other religious organizations are classified as public charities (Section 501(c)(3) organizations. Churches and not-for-profit organizations are generally exempt from federal, state and local income taxes as well as property taxes.

Interest rates below 4% could give market a boost

Chicago's late spring housing market may soon receive a shot in the arm as home-loan interest rates quietly slipped below 4% for the first time since January 2018.

Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey reported that benchmark 30-year fixed home loans averaged 3.99% for the week ending May 30, down from 4.06% a week earlier. Last year at this time, lenders were quoting an average rate of 4.56% on 30-year fixed mortgages. Rates on 15-year fixed mortgages eased to an average of 3.46% from 3.51% a week earlier. A year ago at this time, the 15-year fixed mortgages averaged 4.06%.

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

On May 30 Chicago-area lenders were charging from 3.983% to 4.192% on 30-year fixed loans, reported rateSeeker.com.

"Lower mortgage rates should give a boost to the late spring housing market, which has been on the upswing nationwide with both existing and new home sales picking up recently," said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's chief economist.

"While economic data points to continued strength, financial sentiment is weakening," Khater noted. "The rate spread between 10-year and 3-month Treasury bills is narrowing on fears of the impact of the trade war with China grow."

Although mortgage rates have been gradually falling this spring, Chicago's home sales numbers have not yet rebounded, experts say.

The city of Chicago saw year-over-year home sales decrease 5.4% with 2,555 single-family homes and condominiums changing hands in April, compared with 2,700 units a year ago. While sales numbers are shrinking, prices are rising. The median price of a home in the city of Chicago in April rose 0.8 of 1% to $310,000, compared with April, 2018 when the median price was $307,500.

"April's home sales showed significant improvement over March as sellers began to stream back into the market for the warmer-weather selling season," said Ed Neaves.

"Sales prices rose but were still relatively low in April, incentivizing buyers to act more quickly on homes they're watching," said Tommy Choi, president of the Chicago Assoc. of Realtors and broker at Keller Williams Chicago-Lincoln Park.

"There continues to be more options as inventory is on the rise. As we get closer to summer, we'll see a balanced market with benefits for buyers and sellers alike," Choi predicted.

In the nine-county Chicago Metro Area, sales of homes and condominiums in April totaled 10,093 units, down 5.9% from April, 2018, when 10,725 units changed hands. The median price in April was $253,000 in the Chicago Metro Area, an increase of 1.2% from $250,000 in April, 2018.

"Prices continue to increase at a modest rate and month-to-month sales have continued to increase, however year-over-year sales are down reflecting the uncertainties in consumer behavior towards house purchases" noted Geoffrey J.D. Hewings, a Univ. of Illinois economist.

Are Pirates taking on a towing alias?

Next ICC hearing could be on June 12

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Has the notorious Lincoln Towing taken on an alias?

The “Pirates of Lincoln Park” appear to be operating under a different name – its corporate moniker – Protective Parking Service – as the controversial company continues fighting to regain its license to tow cars from private property.

But according to Allen Perl, a one of Lincoln Towing’s lawyers, Protective Parking Service has been the company’s legal name since day one.

Lincoln Park Towing is apparently just the everyday, informal name.

But whatever name the “Pirates” go by, some long-suffering motorists are hoping this may finally be the beginning of the end for the notorious, nearly six-decade-old parking-lot-prowlers located at 4882 N. Clark St., now that the Illinois Commerce Commission has yanked the company’s license.

But a ruling by Cook County Judge Neil Cohen allows Lincoln Towing to stay in business pending a rehearing before the ICC. According to ICC spokeswoman Victoria Crawford, the earliest opportunity for a rehearing would be June 12. And if the ICC denies a rehearing, some observers believe Lincoln Towing could conceivably return to court to challenge the ICC’s earlier decision – while Lincoln Towing continues to operate.

After a two-year investigation of 462 unauthorized tows, the ICC yanked Lincoln Towing’s business license last September following testimony by dozens of aggrieved witnesses, most of the complainants’ money was eventually refunded. During that hearing six months ago, the “Pirates” appealed what amounted to an order to walk the plank.

According to a statement read by ICC Chairman Brian Sheahan at the end of last September’s hearing, “a preponderance of evidence showed Lincoln Towing has not conducted its business with honesty and integrity” and is “in fact unworthy to be entitled to hold a Commercial Vehicle Relocation License.”

Lincoln Towing – or the Protective Parking Service – is considered the largest “relocation towing” service in the state.

According to the ICC, there are nearly 60 other towing companies operating in Illinois.

Learn more about TIF districts at June 6 talk

Two super Tax Increment Financing districts [TIF] were recently approved by City Council and a third existing super TIF spans a mile-wide swath of the North Side adjacent to the CTA’s Red Line from North to Devon avenues.

But what, exactly are TIFs and how big a deal are they in Chicago, and how do these two new TIFs fit in?

TIF activist Tom Tresser will summarize all he knows about TIF districts at an upcoming event sponsored by Move To Amend [MTA] 5:30 p.m. Thursday, June 6, at the Lincoln Park Library, 1150 W. Fullerton Ave. MTA’s Outreach Director Greg Coleridge will also be speaking on corporate rule with a talk titled “We The People vs. Corporate Rule: It’s Up To Us!”

TIF districts in Cook County generated a record $1 billion in 2017, up nearly 18% from 2016, according to the Cook County clerk. In Chicago today, one in four properties are located in one of the city’s 148 TIF districts. Many of the 10 city TIF districts generating the most revenue were on the North Side; others are in or around the Loop, or the central business district.

Chicago accounted for most of these gains by generating $660 million, an 18% increase from 2016. As long as these TIF districts exist, however, struggling school districts in those districts won’t see a dime of this revenue. This comes at a time when Chicago face budget shortfalls of $700 million this year and up to $812 million by 2020. Nearly a third of property taxes now collected by City Hall go into 143 special taxing districts controlled mostly by the Mayor’s Office.

Tresser has been leading the TIF Illumination Project since 2013 and has been invited to present at 75 public meetings all over the city.

Lit Fest on this weekend

The anticipated 35th annual Printers Row Lit Fest, presented by the Near South Planning Board [NSPB], will be held rain or shine, this Saturday - Sunday, from 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. It is the largest free outdoor literary showcase in the Midwest and will have an expanded outdoor presence this year, taking place along Dearborn St. from Dearborn Station to the newly named Ida B. Wells Dr. (formerly Congress Pkwy.).

LitFest will once again be owned and managed by the NSPB which founded the Book Fair in 1985.

The fate of the erudite gathering of the well read was in question as their previous owner - The Chicago Tribune - transitioned through financial difficulties, a change in ownership, and relocation from their long time home on Michigan Ave.

Returning to a great tradition, the Fest will also bring back its outdoor stages and tents, including one sponsored by the Poetry Foundation.

Alex Kotlowitz, who will be awarded the Harold Washington Literary Award, and will kick off the Fest programs on June 8. A series of talks around themes Kotlowitz writes about will occur throughout the Fest.

Adventures for children and young adults will offer an array of programs for and by kids while world renowned chef Rick Bayless is welcomed back for the gourmets.

"While we are grateful for the support of the Tribune and the public awareness they brought to the event, it is energizing to once more welcome the booksellers and the public and the authors and the book loving public who will fill the streets to celebrate all things literature," said Bette Cerf Hill, the founder of the Printers Row Book Fair in 1985.

Printers Row Lit Fest programming features special "Year of Chicago Theatre" presentations, including theatrical readings with ensemble members from Steppenwolf and Goodman Theatres; a staged adaptation of Anne K. Ream's Lived Through This, a #MeToo era memoir of a global journey spent listening to sexual violence survivors that Enslar calls "heartbreaking and beautifully rendered;" and Chicago Tribune's Chris Jones, author of Rise Up!, in conversation with Hamilton Chicago Company's Miguel Cervantes (Alexander Hamilton) and Jeremy McCarter, co-author (with Lin-Manuel Miranda) of Hamilton: The Revolution and founder/executive director of Make-Believe Association.

'Emma Fest' coming to the Edgewater Library

Jane Austen fans and those who haven't read her novels -- but want to know about the novelist and her works -- are in for a treat this month.

Edgewater Library, 6000 N. Broadway, will feature Austen's fourth novel, Emma, in several free programs in partnership with other local organizations.

Austen is an English novelist who published Emma in 1815. Prior to that she published Sense and Sensibility, Pride and Prejudice and Mansfield Park; two other novels were printed posthumously. Austen's characters often reflect on women, marriage and social standing.

Before she started to write Emma, Austen wrote, "I am going to take a heroine whom no one but myself will much like."

On June 7, Lydia Craig presents "Jane Austen: Romance and Rebellion" to begin Emma Fest.

The 21-year-old title character mistakenly thinks she is skilled at matchmaking, but her attempts are met with humorous and disastrous results.

Kicking off Emma Fest at 2 p.m. on Friday, is "Jane Austen" Romance and Rebellion." The presentation will be made by Lydia Craig, Ph.D. candidate in Victorian Studies, Loyola Univ. Chicago. Craig said, "Jane Austen is devoted to her family and friends, but there are two things that kept her from being the perfect Regency woman: a sarcastic sense of humor and her refusal to marry without love. Austen's devastating appraisals of contemporary society guaranteed her success and even gained her the favor of the Prince Regent." The program is in partnership with Edgewater

Village Chicago.

There have been several adaptations of the novel, Emma. On Monday, June 10, at 2 p.m., the Edgewater Library will show the 1996 version starring Gwyneth Paltrow.

Rounding out Emma Fest is "Estimating Lace and Muslin: Dress and Fashion in Jane Austen and her World" on Thursday, June 20. The visual presentation begins at 6:30 p.m. with art historian Jeffrey Nigro who will look at the development of British and French fashions during Austen's era. He'll also refer to her witty and perceptive comments about fashion during this fascinating period. This program is sponsored by Friends of the Edgewater Library.

Theatregoers will be interested in seeing Emma in action at Life-line Theatre, 6912 N. Glenwood, one block south of the Morse El. The world premiere production based on the novel runs through July 14.

to all people, but at the very least to our children, to invest in prevention," said Quezada, who also recently participated in a round table discussion hosted by the Zac Foundation which included task force members and other community partners. (Similar round tables are also being held in other US cities.)

Water safety starts before you leave the house. Look at the water conditions, use Coast Guard approved water floats, provide arm's length supervision to your children. Learn CPR. Blow into someone's mouth two times and do 30 chest compressions if you're trying to rescue, said Quezada.

If there's wind there's waves and when there's waves there are currents, said Quezada.

Stay away from piers and breakwalls and structures. Listen to the lifeguards.

I asked Quezada, in a perfect world, what would or should Chicago do to help this urgent situation?

"Water safety is complicated in Chicago," she said. "We have identified immediate changes to address with the lakefront, but our rivers, pools, parks, etc. remain part of the national drowning conversation. As we have seen, many agencies touch a piece of the drowning prevention plan, but there is no designee for coordination or direct oversight/accountability," said Quezada.

When a Longshore Current hits a Structural, the Structural Current may flow parallel to the structure. Approximately 50% of all Dangerous Currents crownings happen around piers/structures.

"In a perfect world, we would have this. We would also have a budget line for these coordinated efforts. Fire prevention has a designated line of $11 million and is largely successful, every school child knows stop, drop, and roll, but they don't know flip, float, and follow."

"Water safety isn't actually common sense," Quezada added. "Every time you play with fire you get burned, but water is all around us and we usually don't drown. Drowning doesn't even look like what Hollywood would train us to think -- so bystander response is not common sense either. We need a culture shift, and that takes investment."

Out-of-state college graduates fuel Chicago's affluent North Side

BY JIM VAIL

Chicago used to be a working class city, the city of big shoulders and hog butcher to the world.

Alas, that was two generations or more ago and is no longer the case. In fact, very little butchering of anything (but perhaps the English language) happens in Chicago anymore.

The new world economy has ushered in gentrified neighborhoods, tech companies, code writers and dog parks.

Today a lot more people, particularly those living on the North Side, have college degrees and hail from other states.

According to the Chicago Federal Reserve, 39% of Chicago residents in 2016 had a college degree, whereas in 1990 only 19% people had their bachelor's degree.

However, that 20% increase in university people living here has not spread around this fine metropolis, but has segregated in "a growing but modest slice of the city, running roughly from the South and West Loop to Andersonville, and west to Logan Square."

"These neighborhoods have seen massive demographic and economic change in the last two or three generations, largely because of a massive influx of college-degree-holding residents," wrote Daniel Kay Hertz, on his blog danielkayhertz.com.

Hertz is a policy analyst and writer who focuses on urban public finance, housing, and transportation, and is the Research Director at the Center for Tax and Budget Accountability in Chicago.

Much has been said about the outflow of residents, where Chicago has lost close to 250,000 black people over the last 10 years. Some say a lack of affordable housing is a big reason many people cannot live here.

However, Chicago is also experiencing the reverse when it comes to a city attractive to those with a higher level of education wanting to move here.

According to census figures compiled by Hertz, more than half of all city residents have a four-year college degree and were born in Illinois.

But the city's North Side has attracted most of the people who moved here with college degrees from outside Illinois. Neighborhoods such as Lincoln Park, Lakeview and Wicker Park, 30-

"People moving from other parts of the city are likely to know less about the region, and follow recommendations about where to live from their social circles, who are also likely to be from outside the region, leading to clusters," said Daniel Kay Hertz.

50% of all residents are college graduates who were born in the U.S. but outside Illinois, Hertz writes.

Still, there are "much more" Illinois-born college graduates living in the city than those hailing from other states. That makes sense, Hertz writes, because you would expect many of them to stay near where they grew up.

"People moving from other parts of the city are likely to know less about the region, and follow recommendations about where to live from their social circles, who are also likely to be from outside the region, leading to clusters, Hertz writes.

However, there is one difference when it comes to educated outsiders setting up shop in the Second City.

Foreign-born residents with college degrees do not follow the pattern and live in the North Side clusters that the others have chosen.

According to Hertz, there is a central cluster, where many live in an area that runs from the Loop to the South Loop and to northern Bronzeville, with another spike in Hyde Park, and another one on the West Side near the Medical District and UIC.

Well-educated foreigners are also continuing to move to the suburbs, more so than the people who move here from other states. The northern inland suburbs, like Skokie or Des Plaines, show up strongly, while Naperville which is much further out is an outlier 'hot spot,' unlike many of the western suburbs where less immigrants locate, according to the census figures.

While Chicago seems to be getting smarter, especially on the North Side, the suburbs haven't kept pace. While the number of college-educated residents living here from 1990 - 2016 has increased 20-percentage points, college-educated residents living in the suburbs has only increased 13-percentage points.

Neighborhood Boys and Girls Club awards scholarships

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Wrestling superstar, actor and Harvard trained lawyer David Otunga doesn't look like someone who regularly had to face neighborhood bullies when he was growing up.

But he did.

So he started working out and pursuing a once-unlikely dream of becoming a movie star and professional wrestler. From there, it was off to the Univ. of Illinois and Harvard Law School, then on to the Sidley Austin law firm and eventually an even more unlikely second chapter of his life starring alongside Halle Berry in "The Call" and Tyler Perry's "The Haves and Have-Nots" and as a frequent feature on "Oprah" and Steve Harvey's personal fitness guru.

But as far as David Otunga is concerned, raising his son David Jr. has always been his most important job, Otunga - the banquet's keynote speaker - told the Neighborhood Boys and Girls Club's [NBGC] May 10 "Leaders of the Future Scholarship Awards Dinner" at Dank Haus, 4740 N. Western Ave.

Other speakers included Barbara Baumhart, sponsor of the James Baumhart Leadership Award named for Rev. James Baumhart, retired president of DePaul Univ., and Tom Van Den Bosch, president of the Neighborhood Boys and Girls Club board.

But most of the evening's speakers were local students themselves such as Laila Hollis, an eighth grader from Albany Park Multicultural Academy, an eighth-grade scholarship recipient; Adalyce Hollis, a freshman at Lane Tech High School; Addison Taylor, a sophomore at Lake View High School; Luis Mazon, a senior at Chicago Bulls College Prep High School.

Almost 30 other students ranging from grade school through high school - many of them also working at the NBGC - received scholarship awards thanks to organizations ranging from the Lake View and Ravenswood Kiwanis clubs and the Sulzer Family Foundation to local businesses.

The awards banquet is the NBGC's largest fundraiser event of the year, and over 200 supporters attend the annual dinner. By awarding the scholarships, the NBGC and scholarship donors are investing in higher education for future leaders and providing resources for their long-term successes. The NBGC serves over 1,600 local youth and teenagers each year through its' out-of-school, athletic, and signature leadership programs at a stand-alone club location on Irving Park Rd. by Western Ave. in North Center.

A visit to the dentist could save your life

Cases of oral cancer increased 52% in Illinois in the last three decades, and oral cancer remains one of the top 10 types of cancer among men.

Oral cancer can develop in the mouth and back of the throat, and regular dental visits can help detect symptoms early.

Tobacco, alcohol, sun exposure and the human papillomavirus (HPV) are the largest risk factors for oral cancer. Tobacco users are 10 times more likely to develop cancer of the head or neck than those who do not use tobacco. Those who use smokeless tobacco are almost 50 times more likely to develop cancer of the cheek and gum.

"Oral cancer is often considered a lifestyle disease because you can reduce your risk by abstaining from tobacco, avoiding heavy alcohol consumption, applying lip balm with SPF and visiting the dentist regularly," said Dr. Sheila Strock, science officer at Delta Dental of Illinois.

It's estimated that HPV causes 70% of oropharyngeal cancers, or cancers affecting the back of the mouth and throat, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

"Being exposed to HPV is also a risk factor for oral cancer," Strock said. "Since HPV can often go undetected, visiting your dentist regularly is essential for the early detection of oral cancer, which is most treatable in its early stages."

State warns consumers about unproven stem cell therapy

The Illinois Dept. of Financial and Professional Regulation (IDFPR) is warning consumers about unproven stem cell therapy treatments and those administered by providers who may not be licensed to do so. This follows warnings provided by both the Food and Drug Admin. (FDA) and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

The IDFPR is currently investigating several consumer complaints related to this practice. In particular, the department urges consumers to avoid stem cell therapy treatments administered by chiropractors or others who are not licensed to provide such therapy absent collaboration with a medical doctor, doctor of osteopathy or other authorized health care provider.

"Stem cell therapy is largely an unproven and potentially dangerous treatment," said Dr. Brian Zachariah, IDFPR's Chief Medical Coordinator. "Our department will take all available action to protect consumers and ensure providers obey the law, but we urge consumers to proceed with caution. Check that the provider is properly licensed and trained to administer the treatments and be aware of the risks associated with stem cell therapy."

IDFPR advises consumers who are considering stem cell therapy of the following:

- Before undergoing stem cell treatment, be sure of the credentials of the provider offering this therapy. Per the State's Medical Practice Act, stem cell injections can only be ordered and administered by physicians licensed to practice medicine in all its branches (MDs and DOs). The Illinois Medical Practice Act does permit an Advanced Practice Registered Nurse or Physician Assistant to administer injectables under certain circumstances.

- Ask about the products to be used for the proposed treatment. The only stem cell-based products that are FDA-approved consist of blood-forming stem cells derived from cord blood and these are approved for only limited use to treat disorders of the body's blood production (hematopoietic) system. There are certain exceptions to the FDA's guidance for blood removed from the patient's body. The FDA does not prohibit this procedure.

- Ask what the proposed treatment is supposed to do. Even properly licensed providers must not make unsupported claims regarding the efficacy of stem cells or any other treatment. Stem cells are only known to be effective in a very limited number of diseases. While providers may market their treatments as useful for a variety of conditions such as joint pain or neurological problems, they should not claim efficacy for the treatment of any particular disease other than hematopoietic disorders.

- Be sure you understand the risks and benefits of the proposed treatment. While state law allows so-called "off label" use of approved products for the treatment of other health conditions, patients should be aware that any such use of stem cells is unproven and should be thoroughly apprised of the risks and benefits of the proposed treatment before consenting to it. If the planned treatment is part of an FDA-proved clinical trial, you should be informed of this and formally consent to participating in the study.

All medical treatments have potential risks and benefits, but unapproved and unproven stem cell therapies can be particularly unsafe. The CDC has investigated an outbreak of bacterial infections in patients who received one form of stem cell therapy and the FDA found that the company processing this product was not adequately screening cord blood donors. Some patients have gone blind or had the growth of new tumors after stem cell treatments. Failure of the cells to work as expected is a common complaint among stem cell treatment recipients. Statutorily, IDFPR cannot take adverse action against a licensee based solely on the use of a medical procedure performed within the standard of care that fails to provide ideal results. However, medical providers cannot make claims for their products that are untrue and lack scientific support.

If a patient or member of the public believes a provider is not properly licensed to administer stem cell treatments, that the licensee's action has caused harm, that it was not performed with the requisite standard of care or that the claims for the product are untrue, he or she may file a complaint with IDFPR at www.idfpr.com.

Susie Kealy: When a dream becomes art

One night a few years back, as Clare resident Susie Kealy slept, she dreamt about her cat.

It was an unusual dream. The Maine Coon cat has a line along the length of her belly, and she enjoys rolling over, exposing this feature. In the dream, the cat instead had a zipper down her stomach, with the ability to remove her fur.

When Kealy awoke, she had the idea for her first children's book.

In the story, entitled Mrs. Woolie's Wardrobe, the cat can remove her coat to try on the fur of other animals. On one page, she is a zebra, but she realizes the skin is too hot. On another, she is a chin-chilla, but she dislikes so many people pawing at her. In the end, the cat decides that she prefers her own fur exactly as it is.

Once she had her ideas down on paper, Kealy enlisted the help of an illustrator, a woman named Cheryl Rausch who she had met at a luncheon at the Art Institute of Chicago a few years back.

"If I were trying to find a needle in a haystack to find the perfect illustrator for my book, in the kind of style that I imagined, she was the one," Kealy says.

Now, Kealy and Rausch have found a publisher for the book. And the concept and process are artistic endeavors consistent with Kealy's lifelong knack for creativity.

"I've always been interested in art," she says. "It just came to me as something that was very easy. I have it in my blood."

A career in art

Kealy's art career began when she studied at Parsons School of Design and the New York School of Interior Design. However, she initially worked in the retail industry at stores like Lord & Taylor and Tiffany's, and she was also a fashion and sales consultant for Carlisle.

It wasn't until she relocated to Chicago and was living in Streeterville in the 1980s that she dabbled in interior design. She took an architectural drawing course at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago. From there, rather than becoming a proper interior designer, Kealy created her own business that involved producing architectural renderings of interiors or buildings using watercolor for homeowners, realtors and private clients who then took these images to use for event invitations, programs and greeting cards.

"Having an interest in architecture, I find great satisfaction in combining this interest with my art," Kealy says in an artist's statement. "In the activity of painting, I am free to create what I desire without the time-consuming effort of piecing together the actual living space."

As time went on, Kealy continued to hone her craft, narrowing her focus from entire rooms or buildings to specific details, like the roof of a house or a corner of a rug. She called this "abstract realism." With watercolor, Kealy was self-taught, but she took classes at the Palette & Chisel

Art Academy and tried her hand at still-life oil paintings. She has even copied the work of the Old Masters, or those who painted before the 18th century, at the Art Institute of Chicago.

Her commitment to creativity resulted in her participation in a number of exhibitions,

"I like very realistic, detailed paintings," she says. "I don't want to have to explain my art."

New inspiration

After completing so many works over the years, Kealy had a significant collection of her own large paintings. Bringing them with her when she moved to The Clare didn't make spacial sense. So she gave most of them away, and it left her feeling disheartened.

But fellow residents at The Clare encouraged her to keep at it. They suggested that she create smaller paintings.

Kealy now intends to use The Studio at The Clare to do acrylics, and she returned to Palette & Chisel. She also submitted a piece for The Clare Spring Art Exhibition, which features resident works in a variety of formats.

Writing a children's book, too, has been a way to stay involved in art. No matter the medium, art simply brings joy to Kealy's life.

DENTIST from p. 8

During a routine dental checkup, your dentist will perform an oral cancer screening and look for any symptoms that may cause concern. Symptoms include irritation, soreness or swelling in the jaw or throat; red or white patches in the mouth; and difficulty chewing, swallowing or speaking. A dental visit should also be scheduled if any of these symptoms arise and last for more than two weeks.

Going to the dentist should be a part of your oral health regimen in addition to brushing twice and flossing once daily. Regular dental visits not only help you maintain a healthy smile, they can lead to early detection of oral cancer and save your life.

Police later spotted the vehicle and the suspects near a Target store in the 2600 block of N. Clark, but the crew managed to slide away again. Witnesses reported seeing the car entering southbound Lake Shore Dr. at a high rate of speed around 12:30 p.m.

Both robbers were described as black men wearing camouflage hoodies that have snake-like emblems on the side.

FedEx thief gets probation for inside job

A FedEx driver has pleaded guilty to stealing over $20,000 worth of packages from businesses on his Magnificent Mile route.

FedEx security detained driver Regulo Hernandez in the 500 block of N. Michigan last May after he allegedly “withheld” numerous packages that were sent out for delivery.

Hernandez, 31, allegedly removed the undelivered boxes from shipping pallets, unsealed them, and placed the contents into a trash bag, according to a complaint. FedEx claims the value of the stolen goods is $20,271.40, but court records do not include a detailed list of what the packages contained.

Hernandez received two years of second chance probation from Judge William O’Brien in exchange for his plea.

At least two women have reported being robbed in River North and nearby Streeterville since May 28:

- Police said a woman was knocked to the ground and robbed of her purse as she walked in the 200 block of E. Pearson around 8:35 p.m. May 28. The offender then climbed into a white car that sped away eastbound on Pearson. Police said the robber is a black man who wore a white hoodie.

- A woman reported that two men battered her and tried to take her purse as she stood on the Grand Red Line platform, 521 N. State, around 12:15 a.m. May 30. The victim chased the offenders to street level and was able to get her purse returned, a witness said.

Police described the offenders as two young black men who stand 6’-3” to 6’-5” tall. One wore a white polo shirt with black pants and black shoes. The other wore all black.

On the evening of May 23, a woman told police that she was robbed by a man and woman as she walked down the stairs to board a train at the Jackson Red Line station, 247 S. State, around 8 p.m. The victim said the couple approached her from behind, punched her repeatedly, and then took her backpack. She said the robbers then fled southbound on State St.

Police said the offenders were a black male and a black female between 16-20 years old. The man wore stone wash jeans and the woman had long braids.

Throwing snowball at judge earns man 2 years probation

A Chicago man who was charged with throwing a snowball at a Cook County judge and threatening her as she hung up campaign signs in Feb. 2018 has received a sentence of two years of second chance probation.

Prosecutors said Associate Judge Stephanie Miller was hanging an election sign on a friend’s fence when Michael Laureto drove by, called out her name, and threw a snowball that shattered a window on Miller’s home. Miller memorized Laureto’s license plate number and called the police.

Lakeview break-ins

A 50-year-old Lakeview woman told police that she was taking a nap in the 600 block of W. Wellington around 2:30 p.m. May 29 when an intruder cut her window screen, climbed into her house, and burglarized it while she hid under her blankets in the bedroom.

The woman said the prowler was a black male who stands 5’-8” to 5’-10” tall and weighs about 160 lbs. He was wearing a black knit cap and a yellow shirt. He was last seen walking out the front door of the woman’s residence.

Meanwhile, another Lakeview resident’s surveillance cameras captured images of a three-man burglary team that targeted his home May 28 near Kenmore and Grace.

Home surveillance video captured images of three men as they burglarized a man’s home near Kenmore and Grace at 4:45 p.m. The victim told this reporter that the offenders broke through an unlocked window of the second-floor apartment to steal two laptops, cash, and a high-end camera.

The crew left the scene in a silver Chrysler 300M bearing Illinois license plate BF31611, according to a surveillance image provided by the victim.

Another woman reported being sexually attacked in the Lincoln Park neighborhood late on May 30, according to Chicago police. It is the third incident in the area since May 23, but police have yet to make a public connection between the attacks.

The most recent victim was walking on the 1800 block of N. Burling at 10:36 p.m. May 30 when a man approached her from behind, grabbed her, and pushed her to the ground, police said. The offender then sexually abused the 26-year-old woman and fled the scene on foot.

Police said the attacker is a Hispanic man with a medium build who’s between 30- and 40-years-old. He stands 5’-6” to 5’-10” tall and wore a black baseball cap backward with a black t-shirt and black pants. He was last seen heading north on Burling after the attack.

Two other sexual attacks of women have been reported in Lincoln Park since May 23:

Two women were standing in an alley in the 2200 block of N. Orchard around 4:30 a.m. May 25 when a man approached and shoved both of them to the ground, police said. He then sexually assaulted one of the women. The other woman was able to fight the

Two shot dead in Old Town; Victims’ car struck by more than 12 rounds

Witnesses reported hearing shots near a Shell gas station around 5:55 a.m. The victims’ red Buick crashed into a light pole in the 1600 block of N. Sedgwick moments later while the offender’s car turned north on La Salle Dr., police said. At least a dozen bullet holes were in the sedan, according to CPD, and the occupant of a second-floor apartment reported their window shot out in the 1500 block of N. La Salle.

Officials identified the victims as Tavion Matthews, 22, and Marcus Walker, Jr., 25, of the 1400 block of N. Sedgwick. Walker is believed to be an Old Town resident and the owner of the victims’ car.

Matthews suffered multiple gunshot wounds to the upper back while Walker succumbed to multiple gunshot wounds to his body, according to police.

The shooting took place near a Shell gas station in the 100 block of W. North.

Chicago police said in a statement that both victims are “known to police.” State and CPD records show that Matthews served prison time for a gun charge and he was charged with another felony gun violation after being paroled last year.

man off by kicking him in the face, police said.

The offender is described as a white or Hispanic man in his late 20’s or early 30’s who stands about 5’-6” tall, weighs 150 lbs, and has dark hair. He was last seen on a bicycle wearing a white t-shirt and shorts. Police said he may have cuts on his face.

Police said a DePaul University student was “inappropriately touched” by an unknown man on the street May 24. CPD and DePaul’s public safety office said the woman was walking with a friend around 1:45 a.m. near the corner of Sheffield and Montana, just north of Fullerton, when she was approached from behind by the man who proceeded to touch her. The offender then fled north from the scene, police said.

The offender was described as a man in his mid-20’s who stands about 5’-10” tall and has a small build. He has black hair, could be Asian, and was reportedly wearing a gray sweatshirt and black shorts, police said.

Police are encouraging Lincoln Park residents to tell their neighbors about these incidents and to identify safe havens.

Four robberies reported in Lakeview East, Uptown last weekend

Two robberies have been reported this weekend in Lakeview East, and two more went down in nearby Uptown, according to Chicago police. Offenders are in custody for one of the crimes. Here are the details:

A Lakeview man was jumped by two offenders as he walked in the 3800 block of N. Fremont around 2:15 a.m. on Saturday. The victim said the men pinned him to the ground and took his valuables, including a debit card and $30 cash.

He said one robber was a heavy-set black man in a white t-shirt who fled with an accomplice in a small red car that was occupied by three other black males. The vehicle was last seen heading west on Grace.

Three robberies were reported on Friday evening:

Charges are pending against two men who allegedly robbed a man at gunpoint in Uptown on May 31. The victim waved down a patrol officer around 6:40 p.m. and reported that the offenders took $100 cash from him near Sunnyside and Sheridan. And, he said, one of the men had a chrome pistol in his waistband. Police arrested two suspects in the area and recovered a handgun just after 7 p.m. We’ll post an update when charging details are available.

About two hours later, another man was robbed at gunpoint after he agreed to go into an alley near Buena and Sheridan to smoke up with the offenders. The man said he walked into the alley to “puff” with the duo, but instead of getting high, the man said he wound up having a handgun placed against his head. The offenders took the man’s wallet and phone, grabbed about $90 from the billfold, then threw the phone and empty wallet back at the victim and fled the scene.

The offenders were two black males in their early or mid-20’s, according to the victim. One stands about 5’-11” tall, weighs 150 lbs, had dreads, and wore a white sweatshirt with blue jeans. The other is approximately 6’ tall, 150 lbs, and he wore a black t-shirt with a gold “DC” logo and blue jeans. Both men were last seen heading eastbound on Buena.

A woman was robbed of her laptop bag, cash, wallet, keys, and phone by two men who confronted her outside of Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center around 9:10 p.m. Friday. The woman said she was near Mildred and Wellington when the two men approached her, took her valuables, then fled south on Mildred.

She said the robbers were two black men in their early 20’s who are of average height and have slender builds. One had short dreadlocks and wore a black shirt. The other offender had short black hair and wore a dark baseball cap with a red shirt.

Armed video shoot ends with felony charges

An Uptown man is facing multiple felony charges after witnesses reported seeing a group of men walking down the street with guns while filming a video on May 29.

Police said callers reported seeing a group of men, including three who were armed with handguns, walking in the 4700 block of N. Winthrop while recording themselves on video around 6:45 p.m. Officers said about 10 men ran from the scene as they arrived and police began chasing one man who was seen with a gun, according to CPD.

Cops caught up with Shawn M. Moore, 20, in the 4400 block of N. Racine after a short foot pursuit. A loaded handgun and laser sight were recovered, police said.

Prosecutors charged Moore with felony unlawful use of a weapon on school or park grounds; felony possession of a firearm without a Firearm Owner’s ID (FOID) card; possession of a laser sight; and possession of ammunition without a FOID.

Terms of his bail were not immediately available, but Cook County records show that he is no longer in custody.

Probation for Streeterville robbery, beating

One of four persons accused of participating in the beating and robbery of a man near Water Tower Place early this year has pleaded guilty to a lesser charge in exchange for two years of probation.

Jason Hunley, 19, agreed to plead guilty to one count of aggravated battery in the deal that has prosecutors dropping a robbery charge. Judge Earl Hoffenberg approved the agreement.

In early January, Hunley was arrested along with Veshonae Holt, 18, and two juveniles after the victim was jumped, beaten, and robbed near the intersection of Pearson and Mies van der Rohe in Streeterville. Holt is due back in court next month.

$34K purse scheme sends man to prison, woman to probation

A man and woman who were part of a scheme to steal a one-of-a-kind $34,000 purse from the Mag Mile’s Christian Dior store and then re-sell the handbag at a discount online have reached plea deals in the case.

Lawerance Hall, 20, and Tia Jennings, 20, each pleaded guilty to felony theft in the case. Judge Alfredo Maldonado sentenced Hall to four years in prison with credit for 222 days time served. Jennings was sentenced to two years of probation.

Last Oct. 8, four teenage women or girls entered the Dior store at 931 N. Rush and ran out with a collection of purses. Store management estimated more than $67,000 worth of merchandise was taken, including the one-of-a-kind purse.

Days later, Hall, Jennings and Tishawn Holliday, 20, met with undercover police in the South Loop to sell the $34,000 handbag for the discounted price of $9,000 prosecutors said.

Hall was on probation for the robbery of Saks Fifth Avenue on the Mag Mile at the time of his arrest in the Christian Dior case, according to court records.

Holliday pleaded guilty to felony theft earlier this year and received a sentence of two years probation from Maldonado.

Cops investigating two Rogers Park shootings

Chicago police are investigating two shootings reported in the Rogers Park neighborhood since May 30. No one is in custody for either crime.

Most recently, a 53-year-old woman was shot in the abdomen as she prepared to enter the Jonquil Hotel, 1600 W. Jonquil Terrace, at 1:46 a.m. Saturday. Accused DSW flash mob perps have 14 combined shoplifting arrests in 10 months; given court supervision

Saige Dean David Hall Charlie Holloworth Kevin Johnson Taurus Young

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Five adults who are charged in connection with two mob shoplifting incidents at a Lakeview shoe store collected 14 separate retail theft charges over the past 10 months, according to court records.

And, records show two of the accused are on court supervision for retail theft while a third had a retail theft case dropped just days before he was arrested for striking the Lakeview shop.

Last week we reported about the series of at least five recent mob thefts from DSW, 3131 N. Clark St., on May 22. Now we've learned more about the adults who have been accused of participating in two of the theft strikes along with two unnamed juveniles.

Charlie Holloworth, 21, Saige Dean, 18, and Taurus Young, 20, were arrested after leading police on a foot chase through the streets of Lakeview after the DSW was struck by a shoplifting mob on Sunday, May 19.

Holloworth, who was charged with trespassing in the DSW incident, received a sentence of four month's court supervision on March 13 after he pleaded guilty to shoplifting from a store in Orland Park. Last Summer, he was charged with being part of a "large group" that knocked over displays and stole merchandise from the Marc Jacobs store, 11 E. Walton. Those charges were dropped when the store failed to show up in court.

Dean was charged with trespassing, retail theft, and possession of lost or mislaid property in the DSW case. She is also on four month's court supervision for participating in the Orland Park shoplifting incident with Holloworth, according to court records. While on that four-month court supervision, she received a separate one-month court supervision on April 18 for stealing a backpack and jeans from the Michigan Ave. Topman store.

Even though Dean was on court supervision when she received the second court supervision and that she was again accused of shoplifting three days before the one-month term expired, a judge granted her "satisfactory completion" of the sentence on May 20.

Young is charged with shoplifting and theft of lost or mislaid property in the DSW incident. Court records show that Young was accused of being a member of a mob that stole merchandise on April 8 from the Circle K at 801 W. Addison. Those charges were dropped when the store failed to show up in court. Young was also accused last year of shoplifting merchandise from the Chicago Ave. location of Nordstrom Rack, according to court documents. Those charges were also dropped because the store failed to appear in court.

Two days after Holloworth, Dean, and Young were arrested, a juvenile female and 18-year-olds Kevin Johnson and David Hall were charged with a similar "flash mob" incident at the same DSW store. The trio is accused of taking more than $1,600 worth of shoes by stuffing merchandise into duffle bags and running out the door.

Johnson was charged with retail theft in the case, just five days after he was arrested and charged with shoplifting eight purses as part of a group theft from the Loop's Ross Dress For Less on May 16.

Hall was also charged with retail theft in the DSW matter—just four days after the South Loop Marshall's store failed to show up in court after it accused him of shoplifting purses with two other men on April 13.

All of the accused have been released on recognizance bonds.

Boystown crowd takes over Halsted St., dances on cars

A crowd of at least two dozen men and women overtook Halsted St. in Boystown June 1, dancing on cars and obstructing traffic as video cameras rolled and one onlooker proudly screamed, "We f*cking sh*t up!"

One man mounts an SUV in the 3300 block of N. Halsted as others block the vehicle's path. The man begins "twerking" on the hood, jumping up and down, then slams himself down onto the hood.

"We gone crazy! Say something to the camera baby!"

The incident was reported to police at 2:57 a.m., but no arrests were made.

A second video that was posted to Twitter shows other drivers backing up on Halsted St. to avoid the crowd. Some drivers chose to zoom through the crowd instead.

Letter to the Editor

There is reason for hope...

Yesterday, as I was shopping in a neighborhood store, I noticed an unattended shopping cart with a woman's purse lying there with no one around. I brought the purse to the manager - who I know - and within seconds a frantic young woman came rushing up to him asking if anyone had found her purse? The manager immediately gave it to her at which time he looked at me and said, "Dr. Hoffman, did you leave your glasses here last week?" which I had done, and did not know what had happened to them. He gave me my lost glasses still in their box. They had cost close to $1000. All of this remarkable episode occurred with 2-3 minutes. A remarkable, wonderful human connection. There is indeed reason for hope.

Duo who went to prison for robbing man in 2015 goes back to prison for robbing another man after being released

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Two men who were on parole for beating and robbing a man together near Wrigleyville in 2015 are heading back to prison for reuniting to rob another man together in Uptown.

Titus Meadows

Joshua Tucker

After being released from prison after each served half of their 54-month sentences for the Wrigleyville robbery, Titus Meadows and Joshua Tucker mugged a 21-year-old man in 4100 block of N. Marine Dr. on Dec. 21, 2017, prosecutors said. Tucker, 25, and 26-year-old Meadows allegedly approached the man, pushed him to the ground, punched him repeatedly, and took his phone and wallet.

In exchange for their pleas, Tucker received a six-year prison sentence for robbery while Meadows pleaded guilty to theft from person to get a four-year term. Both will receive 362 days credit for time served. Judge Catherine Haberkorn approved the deal.

Meadows is scheduled to be released early from prison on May 20, 2021. Tucker's release date is set for May 12, 2024.

serving the event area. The Montrose event is more than a half mile from Lake Shore Dr.

Melanie Eckner, another Uptown activist, is concerned about relocating the festival to Montrose. She said the alderman recently sent the head of Jam Productions - the event organizer - to the Montrose Lakefront Coalition (MLC) to set up a meeting about the idea of moving the festival. MLC polled its membership and the consensus was overwhelmingly against bringing the festival here. MLC met with the CPD recently and explained the consensus opposing the move and indicated they would meet with Jam as asked by the alderman, she said.

"Not only are there federally endangered birds trying to nest at Montrose right now, the committed concessionaires lost significant business during the Mumford and Sons show," Eckner wrote. "That is also the weekend that the Chicago Triathlon will be holding its children's events on our lakefront. With the regular Summer traffic, the area will be at capacity even without this show."

Merema said there used to be events held down at the south end of the golf course along the lake next to the parking lot on the north end of the bird sanctuary. She said Charlotte Neufeld, who was a leader of the Lakeview Citizen Council and a bird watcher, complained loudly and often that events held in that Addison area were bad for the birds.

She added that the parking woes in the area had a ripple effect. All events for the entire Addison to Foster parkland area were trose, but they need protection."

The master plan is closely tied to sprucing up Lincoln Square's transportation amenities.

"We want it to be more welcoming under the L tracks which is not very inviting right now," Mariano said, to some laughter from the audience in agreement.

People are excited about shared streets, where people as well as cars will have access to Lincoln Ave. Some people would have preferred no cars having access to Lincoln Ave, but "that was not realistic," Mariano said.

The shared streets concept is similar to Argyle St. in Uptown, where cobblestone streets have no curbs, and the street filled with Vietnamese shops between Broadway and Sheridan is only open to pedestrians on Thursday nights throughout the summer during the Argyle Night Market.

Sixty-five percent of respondents wanted to improve the CTA Station Plaza, while a gateway sign near the CTA viaduct could look similar to Asia on Argyle under the Red Line tracks on Argyle, Mariano said.

She said they want the Abraham Lincoln statue - otherwise known as 'pigeon plaza' - at the northeast corner of Western and Lawrence avenues in front of the Walgreens - to be a little more greener and a little more welcoming.

Mariano noted that the Lincoln statue once stood in the intersection, and has been moved several times. However, Lincoln should continue to rest where he is. A funeral procession for the president in 1865 saw the street packed with hundreds of thousands of people who mourned the man who helped preserve the union and end slavery. The street, as well as our parks along the lakefront, were all later named after him.

Mariano took note that the rather rigid, albeit aesthetically pleasing, blue chairs lined along Lawrence Ave. could be improved in terms of comfort.

relocated to Montrose Beach and Montrose Harbor Drive, where a small parking lot served that area. Fed up with events taking up all the parking, the Montrose Boat Club successfully argued to have one third of that parking lot reserved for its members. Next, the lot was completely fenced in and used for winter boat storage over the objection of community members.

"We were promised that the parking lot would only be used in the winter," Merema wrote. "Well, after a few years that changed and all parking in the south lot was dedicated to Harbor use."

In 2018, tickets to attend the festival cost $99 for two-day passes, $149 two-day VIP passes, $69 single-day and $109 single-day VIP tickets.

The Lawrence Ave./Rockwell Crossing plan includes, in addition to the statue, adding comfortable seating areas, reinforcing the bus shelter, and reinventing the community garden (north of Walgreens) into a dog park.

People at the master plan unveiling last week voted on the different plans.

"We still want to leave room for public comment," said Ryan Warsing, an employee of the Lincoln Square Ravenswood Chamber of Commerce. "Because we've had a really high level of public involvement up to this point."

Once the plan is finalized, the organizers will invite developers and real estate brokers to discuss the results. While developers aren't mandated to follow the plan, they say it's an important tool that lets them know what the community wants.

Three polls used to help the designers understand what residents want drew more than 1,700 responses.

Once the plan is finalized, the organizers will invite developers and real estate brokers to discuss the results. While developers aren't mandated to follow the plan, they say it's an important tool that lets them know what the community wants.

People can view the different options online at yourlincolnsquare.org.

During the meeting, folks participated in activities to make comments and selections on components of the plan. At this time, the concept plan materials have been posted to the project website (yourlincolnsquare.org) and the public input period is open until June 14. After that time, a summary of inputs will be publicly available. Once all public inputs are gathered and reviewed, the plans will be finalized. The SSA Commission plans to formally review the final plan towards approval.
