Western Ave. getting a 5.8-mile upzone

Last week three North Side aldermen proposed an extensive upzoning of a large section of Western Ave. This may be the first, multi-ward, nearly 6-mile long mass upzoning in Chicago in decades. This upzoning is due to the Chicago Dept. of Planning & Development's Western Ave. Corridor Study, an 18-month, planning initiative based on the World Economic Forum's [WEF] 15-minute city concept.

The Western Ave. Corridor Study goals are to increase density, promote a greater mix of land uses and improve how development relates to the surrounding, lower-scaled residential areas adjacent to a 5.8-miles stretch of Western Ave., which include portions of North Center, Ravenswood, Lincoln Square, West Ridge and West Rogers Park.

The main goal of the WEF's 15-minute city plan is to reduce carbon emissions by 45% by 2030 and be net-zero by 2050. The idea is that everyone should be able to access the key destinations in their day-to-day life—work, food, schools and recreation—within a 15-minute walk, bike ride, or mass transit ride of their residence. Cars would then be unnecessary for many daily tasks.

But a major flaw of the WEF's plan to move consumer activities toward pedestrians on bikes and scooters is that most modern cities are serviced by big box stores or catch-alls for “convenience” like Walmart, Target and various super markets; if you're buying a week's worth of goods in one trip you're going to need a car. It's hard to bring large quantities of

Rogers Park housing group settles two complaints

Northside Community Resources Fair Housing Program [NCR] in Rogers Park recently negotiated settlement of two complaints alleging that landlords and their agents refused to rent to tenants because of their source of income, a Housing Choice Voucher. The combined terms include $11,250 in damages and attorneys' fees, fair housing training, and fair housing marketing.

In the first case, the tenant alleged that the owner of a house in Jefferson Park told her that he didn't accept Chicago Housing Authority Housing Choice Vouchers (HCVs) when she asked.

The tenant, who is African American, was searching for a home for herself and her family. The HCV program provides subsidies to tenants enabling them to move to areas with more amenities. It is illegal under Illinois, Cook County, and Chicago law to refuse to rent to tenants because they use HCVs to help pay the rent.

In the second case, an African-American mother alleged that a real estate agent told her that the owner of the house in the Tri-Taylor neighborhood in the listing she asked about would not rent to tenants with vouchers.

NCR's Program filed discrimination complaints for both families at the Chicago Commission on Human Relations.

The first landlord agreed to a settlement in which he paid the tenant $8,250 in money damages and attorneys' fees. The landlord also agreed to attend fair housing and property management training and to use a non-discrimination statement in his housing ads.

The settlement in the second case provided for similar actions but a lower financial penalty due to other circumstances.

Female Genital Mutilation/Cutting is a local problem

Estimated 4000-plus cases on North Side

BY OLUWADAMILOLA ALABI

Female Genital Mutilation/Cutting [FGM/C] might seem far removed from the daily lives of many residents of Chicago's North Side, but it is going on. The reality is that the practice persists within certain communities here even today.

FGM/C involves the partial or total removal of the external female genitalia, or other injury to the external female genitalia, for non-medical reasons.

FGM/C is a deeply rooted cultural practice that affects millions of women and girls worldwide, including some living on Chicago's North Side.

The population estimated to be living with FGM/C in the U.S. is ethnically diverse—including those with Egyptian, Ethiopian, Nigerian, Somali, and Indonesian backgrounds—while the largest proportion of girls at risk of being forced to undergo future FGM/C has ancestral ties to the wider Horn of Africa, including the Somali, Egyptian, Ethiopian, and Sudanese communities.

While this practice is often associated with cultural traditions, it is important to understand that any religion does not require FGM/C. Instead, it continues largely due to a lack of awareness about its harmful consequences and a hesitation to question longstanding ethnic customs.

It is typically performed on young girls between infancy and the age of 15. This practice is associated with numerous health complications, including chronic pain, infections, menstrual problems, complications during childbirth, and even death. Moreover, the psychological impact can be profound and long-lasting, affecting the mental well-being of survivors.

Despite global efforts to eradicate this harmful practice, FGM/C remains prevalent in many communities, including in the U.S. According to a recent study, there are allegedly an estimated 14,202 survivors of FGM and girls at risk in Illinois, 4,075 of whom are in Chicago's North Side alone.

For the past three years, Sean Callaghan, a PhD candidate at the Univ. of Leicester in the UK, has been researching FGM/C trends in the U.S. with AHA Foundation's support. Ayaan Hirsi Ali, the Founder of AHA Foundation, is a women's rights activist, champion of free speech, and best-selling author.

AHA published Callaghan's report, and his analysis breaks new ground in understanding the prevalence, distribution, and impact of FGM/C in the U.S.

Callaghan's study broke new ground in understanding FGM/C in the U.S. and helped create awareness with frontline professionals likely to encounter FGM/C cases, community leaders, legislators, and all others dedicated to ending this practice.

The study builds upon previous methodologies used by the Population Reference Bureau and Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, but takes them further by factoring in the effects of migration on the practice of FGM/C. The resulting report provides highly precise data on the practice's prevalence, distribution, and impact.

Notably, the study showed that 91% of those estimated to be already living with FGM/C in the West Ridge will soon have a new $14 million Lubavitch Girls High School building at 6350 N. Whipple St. The founders held a groundbreaking ceremony last week to celebrate their future home.

Girls high school breaks ground on new $14M building

West Ridge's Lubavitch Girls High School [LGHS], 6350 N. Whipple St., held a groundbreaking ceremony last week celebrating their future $14 million home, a vast new building designed to strengthen every area of a student's academic, social, spiritual, and emotional growth.

In total, the new school building will cover 30,000 square feet, almost all of it above ground, designed by architects of Morgante Wilson Architects. Later phases of the wide-ranging project will include an additional 30,000 square feet and will add a gym, kitchen, and social hall.

The new campus is being built on a residential street, right next to Congregation Bnei Ruven, on the site of three private homes that had previously served as dorms. The homes were made vacant following the purchase of a nearby three-story commercial dorm facility, which took the place of several private houses scattered throughout the neighborhood.

That phase will also bring an overhaul to Bnei Ruven's building, which has become too small for the community's burgeoning needs. The school was founded in 1990 with less than 10 students in the classrooms of Bnei Ruven and has occupied several temporary locations before returning to Bnei Ruven, where it has been housed for the past 16 years.

The groundbreaking brought together a crowd of excited community members, students, staff, supporters, Rabbinic leaders and government officials showing a commitment to build and to strengthen in the face of ongoing sorrow and adversity.

“[Israel] is fighting for survival surrounded by a sea of enemies,” said Rabbi Baruch Hertz, Rav of the Chabad community and Dean of LGHS, addressing the crowd. “We are in pain, and we are even experiencing anti-Semitism in our community. As we lay the cornerstone of a building which is going to bring so much good and light, where even one student will make a difference and inspire thousands, this is our response. We are not deterred. We are going to continue to build and to grow together.”

The new school building will accommodate up to 200 students, will have 12 classrooms, a fully-stocked resource room, state-of-the-art laboratories for chemistry, biology and STEM, an extensive suite of rooms for extracurricular activities, and spaces designed to enhance student life, support students' mental health, and enhance faculty and staff.

The state-of-the-art campus is supported, in part, by Walder Foundation, which was founded by Joseph and Elizabeth Walder to address critical issues impacting our world.

“[We] have supported Jewish education initiatives for many years because we recognize that a high-quality day school education is key to the continuity of the Jewish people,” said Elizabeth Walder, president of Walder Foundation. “We are drawn to opportunities to create enriching learning environments where young people can flourish. LGHS already contributes greatly to our community, and we look forward to seeing them move in to this inviting new campus, where both faculty life and student life can blossom.”

The ceremony concluded with community members getting a first look at the nearly finished new LGHS Student Center and

The single diner is a great advantage

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Do you ever dine alone in a restaurant? Do you fear such an experience? Or thrive on the chance?

As someone who enjoys solitary restaurant eating, I relish the opportunity and the tranquility.

Americans have been witnessing a disintegration of socially stable dining for generations. Gone is the gracious gathering around the family dinner table. The enjoyment of the experience of cohesive and emotionally nourishing eating.

Once the glue of family life, the rubric of 21st century dining in many places, now, is simply too awful to endure.

Prized seating at a grand dinner on a regular basis has been replaced with eating straight out of the refrigerator, while children have been taught soccer rules instead of good manners.

Reduced to a life of chicken nuggets or pizza instead of the fashioning of family favorite recipes from childhoods long ago. Who has time for the family red sauce, or homemade vegetable soup or chicken pot pie that grandma always made?

Now we have more important things than good food. We have emails to answer, photos to post on social media, annoying texts to send and soccer practice to endure.

The lack of potable vittles served on a clean tablecloth with children assembled 'round the dinner table with napkins on their laps - and no cell phones in hand - is more than a culinary error in family judgement. I believe it is a corrosive error whose judgement is palpable in the regular inability of families to know how to engage one another in civil conversation.

In public settings you can spot the families with the skills and capacity to engage one another in conversation. Dialogue. Active progressive conversation that is natural. Humor-tinged, culturally creative and thoughtful. Folk who have an emotional investment in one another. And what we eat.

The sad reality of the absence of such youthful natural education is all too plain to see. I recognize it every time I'm in a restaurant and the people at nearby tables don't have a clue how poorly they handle the environment.

Regretfully 25-35 year old females are the champs at this. I notice this especially at Ralph Lauren Bar & Grill where they may dress well, but they make bleak candidates for wholesome posh lunches.

At a table of six, for instance, everyone is trying to out shout one another for high pitched voices. Overacting with hyper responses to funny moments, secrets revealed or gossip exchanged. Loud laughter, better kept for binge drinking in saloons, becomes a personality differential. They almost pop their add-a-pearl necklaces.

Conversations can be overheard with ease. These wanna-be debutants must have learned to communicate in college cafeterias and dining halls far from Ivy League walls. I wonder at all the missed moments when they might have learned some social grace and public manners.

The rolling of the waitstaffs' eyes says it all. These diners are crude and socially inept. I can only imagine the children they are raising.

You see, I grew up in a frequent-eating restaurant family. Mom, dad, sister and usually an Irish grandmother in tow. We loved getting out to dine. It was always a social experience of great family bonding.

We went to establishments of great food and people-pleasing Chicago cuisine. We had our favorites for special fried chicken, or prime rib, or roast duck. We loved the specials. My parents always had their Brandy Alexanders and the common sense to induce the grandmothers to imbibe.

We told stories between the appetizers and the salad and the entrees. We relished our repast. We laughed. We learned who we were. We were comfortable and cozy.

That's what I carry with me, even today, when I go to a restaurant with others. But always especially with myself. Table for one?

I have dined at some of the world's finest and tastiest addresses from Paris to Warsaw, from Rome to Palm Beach. From little breakfast joints in the Ozarks to the swanky restaurants of New York City. Often with publishers, other writers, food critics, artists and loving pals.

But some things just never change. Whether on an Aer Lingus jet or a Cunard ocean liner some things remain the same. Thoughtful manners. Genteel conversational tones. The kindness of a good diner. The social is against the 8 p.m. curfew proposed for teens in the city's high crime geography like the Gold Coast and Streeterville. Meanwhile his cosmetics expenditures are upwards of $30,000, paid for from his campaign funds.

Now what's Hizzoner thinking about the 12:20 a.m. shooting, when two men, 31 and 40, were inside a downtown restaurant in awareness of where you are. Self-assurance and the sensitive feelings of those who serve you. Some dynamic self-awareness most of all.

Having the need to eat and the ability to manage a table in a good restaurant places the single diner in a great advantage. You can engage the restaurant owner in rational conversation about the food, the restaurant, the town you are in or the helpfulness of the staff. You can be a frequent diner in Paris or in Logan Square. I've had restaurants in Dublin even bring me the food they can guess I would love to try.

Crossing the boundaries of restaurant etiquettes and local customs is easy when you take time to appreciate where you are. Learn some of the local lingo, appreciate the favored wines and celebrate the special breads. Ask the owner what the best cheese is. Play with the restaurant cat.

I say all of this because I thrive in good restaurants. Relish the thoughts and effort that owners place in their chefs and staff. And welcome the process in becoming a part of the local landscape of an eatery no matter where it is.

I am grateful for the independence and self-awareness to dine out alone, from the Carlisle Hotel in New York to The Bristol Hotel in Paris. From Jack Gibbons Gardens in Oak Forest to Hackney's on Harms for burgers and onion loaves in Glenview. Whether the napkins are paper or Irish linen or the dishware be China or tin plates, its your own talent and deportment that make you a treasured guest. And a welcomed eater. That's the reason why I always get to bring my own farmer's market beefsteak tomatoes with me to Chicago's great Erie Cafe.

Some North Side Chambers in for state financial aid

Last week the State of Illinois gifted $5 million in taxpayer funding to 151 recipients through the Back to Business [B2B] local Chambers program. B2B Grants provides additional support for local chambers of commerce that lost money during the government-imposed economic shutdown from the COVID-19 pandemic.

The B2B Local Chambers money is supposed to be used by chambers to market and develop localities, provide small businesses with professional development, and more to support small businesses and entrepreneurs while bolstering economic development. The cash award amounts were determined by total annual revenue declines due to the government lockdown between 2019 and 2020, as reflected on tax returns. All eligible applicants received a grant as long as the chamber of commerce met eligibility requirements and submitted proper documentation and attestations.

“We are not immune to rising costs, so receiving the [taxpayer money] supports ongoing operations and enables us to provide high-quality, customized one-on-one support for our businesses and institutional partners,” said

Sarah Wilson, Executive Director of the Uptown United & Uptown Chamber of Commerce, who got $10,379.65.

The North Side chambers who receive money include:

- East Edgewater Chamber of Commerce, Edgewater Chamber of Commerce Chicago $50,000.
- Northalsted Area Merchants Association, Northalsted Business Alliance Chicago $50,000.
- Northcenter Chamber of Commerce Chicago $50,000.
- Old Town Merchants & Residents Association Chicago $50,000.
- Greater River North Business Association Chicago $50,000, and

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

Resale home sales on Chicago's North Side continue on a roller-coaster ride in May, with prices still trending upward while mortgage interest rates hover near 7%.

Combined May 2024 used home sales volume for Near North Side, Lincoln Park, Lakeview and North Center fell by 1.3% compared with the same month in 2023, according to the June North Side Market Analysis, co-authored by Realtors John Irwin and Jackie Lafferty of Baird & Warner.

“While there are many positive indicators, they vary by neighborhood, price point and property type,” said Irwin. “The market seems to be moving in the right direction, but progress is slower than anticipated.”

On June 13, Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey reported that benchmark 30-year fixed-rate mortgage rates averaged 6.95% down slightly from 6.99% a week earlier. A year ago, the 30-year rate was 6.69%.

“Mortgage rates continued to fall back last week as incoming data suggests the economy is cooling to a more sustainable level of growth,” said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's chief economist.

“Top-line inflation numbers were flat but shelter inflation, which measures rent and homeownership costs, increased showing that housing affordability continues to be an ongoing impediment for buyers.”

On June 13, the 15-year fixed-rate loan averaged 6.17%, down from 6.29% a week earlier. A year ago, the 15-year fixed mortgage averaged 6.10%.

The survey is focused on conventional, conforming, fully amortizing home purchase loans for borrowers who put a down payment of 20% and have excellent credit.

Baird & Warner's June monthly market analysis detailed the following real estate comparatives on the Near North Side, Lincoln Park, Lakeview and North Center.

- Home sales. While home

The number of homes that went under contract in May 2024 decreased 3.5%. Contracts on the Near North Side and in Lincoln Park increased, while they decreased in Lakeview and North Center.

sales volume dropped slightly in May, three of the four neighborhoods reported increases with only Lakeview dropping 13.9%. Sales also increased in homes priced over $1 million, while the number of homes priced under $1 million posted decreases in May.

The number of homes that went under contract in May 2024 decreased 3.5%. However, contracts on Near North and in Lincoln Park increased, while they decreased in Lakeview and North Center.

- Home prices. North Side median home prices rose by 5.1%, in May, with three of the four neighborhoods reporting increases from 11.2% for Near North to 8.1% for Lakeview. North Center was the only neighborhood to report a decrease in median home prices at 3.8%.

May home prices varied by price point and were the reverse of inventory results, Irwin noted. The number of homes priced from $500,000 to $2 million dropped to 22.9% from 30.1%. Homes priced under $500,000 rose 3.1% while homes priced over $2 million rose 5.3%.

“Traditionally, low inventory levels can significantly drive-up prices, but this has not been the case on Chicago's North Side,” Irwin noted. “While year-to-date prices have risen 8.3%, they are lower than the Chicago suburbs and many cities across the country.”

Despite low inventory levels, Irwin said “buyers are still very price conscious and would rather wait for new homes to come on the market than overpay. Pricing must reflect the true value of the home.”

- Listings. Falling Inventory levels seem to be the only consistent trend on the North Side, dropping an additional 14.2% in May in all four neighborhoods.

Homes priced between $500,000 and $2 million reported the largest drop in listings. The decrease in inventory levels in homes priced under $500,000 and over $2 million were minimal.

- Buyer demand. “Buyers are out there, although showings and open house attendance seem to have slowed in the past few weeks,” Irwin said. “Many buyers are looking for homes in ‘turnkey’ condition. Updated kitchens, bathrooms, flooring and paint colors are very important, as many buyers do not want to do the updates themselves. Sellers should consider completing renovation work before they list their homes.”

Gazing into Baird & Warner's crystal ball, Irwin said: “The market is improving but there are many twists and turns. Buyers and sellers should do their homework before moving forward.”

Greyhound to have new staging site as lease expires in October

BY JANE LAWICKI

The City of Chicago is exploring alternate sites for intercity pickup and drop off as the Greyhound Bus lease for the terminal at 630 W. Harrison St. expires in October. Twenty Lake Holdings, the property owner, expects to sell the land to a residential developer.

“We’re pleased the City has taken notice and is working on solutions,” said Joseph Schwieterman, director of DePaul University’s Chaddick Institute for Metropolitan Development. “The clock is ticking—and there’s still a big mountain to climb.”

Last year, news that the Greyhound terminal could be sold led to discussions among the City, Greyhound and other bus lines, and elected officials yielding little public action and no decisions made.

As the Chaddick Institute’s May 6 report raised alarms about the potential closure and deteriorating bus services across the State of Illinois, however, Greyhound’s parent company, Flix, confirmed the company recently met with City leaders.

“Though significant progress is still needed, we remain hopeful that we will be able to announce a resolution soon,” said Courtney Castaneda, Flix’s head of communications. “Our goal is to find the best possible solution for our passengers—a location that is safe, comfortable, accessible, and welcoming to Chicago residents and visitors alike.”

According to Schwieterman, sites under consideration include:

- Curb space on Jackson Blvd., next to Chicago’s Union Station at 225 Canal St.;
- The Chicago Transit Authority [CTA] bus station at Clinton St. and Jackson Blvd.;
- Curb space under or near the Jane Addams Parkway on S. Desplaines St., adjacent to the current station;
- Curb space on Canal Street, south of Jackson Blvd.; and
- A retrofitted parking garage near Union Station.

“A parking garage offers a large concrete space that can accommodate modern vehicles,” Schwieterman explained. “A protective cover is a major priority, for with only a curbside site, people can literally get stuck in the rain.”

“For many of these options, you’d have to rethink the bus flow,” he added. “The bus companies have said they can do that, they’re willing to adjust their schedules. You can do the [bus] cleaning and fueling elsewhere but still provide a service to folks who need long distance bus transportation.”

The current terminal, estimated at 88,000 square feet, hosts some 75 bus arrivals and departures daily, serving more than 500,000 passengers annually. Market assessments indicate the property has space for about 1,100 residential units on the site, with a land value of around $30 million.

While Greyhound is the largest tenant, FlixBus, Barons Bus, Burlington Trailways, and other lines also use the existing terminal. Route limitations would harm disadvantaged groups such as disabled residents, the unemployed and underemployed, and those without driver’s licenses. It also would reduce synergy with Chicago’s bus and rail systems.

“I understand the mayor’s team are looking into options,” said 25th Ward Alderman Byron Sigcho-Lopez, chair of the City Council’s Committee on Housing and Real Estate. “Any new location must take into consideration low-income riders and their needs for transportation. This cannot be an afterthought.”

The Chicago Dept. of Transportation [CDOT] fully acknowledges the critical role intercity bus service plays in providing affordable and accessible regional travel options, said Erica Schroeder, CDOT’s director of public information.

“The City is actively engaged in discussions with the bus companies and is currently assessing alternative staging sites to ensure uninterrupted service,” she confirmed.

Schwieterman added that Cook County or State of Illinois support to help the City offers the best hope for saving the terminal or finding a suitable alternative. The May report, titled "Intercity Bus Blues," notes other prominent Chicago-area transportation entities, including the CTA, Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning, Cook County Dept. of Transportation, and Regional Transit Authority [RTA] mostly have watched from a distance. "The City shouldn't have to fight this battle alone," Schweiterman added. "The lack of regional institutions' participation has been disappointing. Too many regional organizations—the county, RTA—have taken a blind eye to this."

According to the report, Illinois’s intercity bus system, shrinking since 2017, is deteriorating due to its low priority in State government. The bus program in Illinois falls behind those of all Midwestern states, and most states nationwide, due to poor planning and marketing for State-supported bus services.

According to the report, Illinois's intercity bus system, shrinking since 2017, is deteriorating due to its low priority in State government. The bus program in Illinois falls behind those of all Midwestern states, and most states nationwide, due to poor planning and marketing for State-supported bus services.

Consequently, Chicago has lost

Chicago has lost direct links to locations such as Bloomington-Normal, Decatur, East St. Louis, Freeport, Galena, Kankakee, and Peoria as well as Dubuque, IA. No intercity bus or rail service is available to many of these areas, and in the last year, Chicago's south suburbs also lost their bus service.

direct links to locations such as Bloomington-Normal, Decatur, East St. Louis, Freeport, Galena, Kankakee, and Peoria as well as Dubuque, IA. No intercity bus or rail service is available to many of these areas, and in the last year, Chicago's south suburbs also lost their bus service.

While Illinois's State-supported Amtrak system partially fills the void, officials often fail to recognize the advantages of bus service. For example, buses often stop at more convenient locations for travelers, including college campuses; bus transport costs less and is more familiar for many disadvantaged groups; and bus travelers can buy tickets to thousands of locations across the United States, often transferring bus routes in Chicago. Failing to support intercity bus transport threatens Chicago's role as the country's preeminent long distance ground transportation hub.

"Any new [bus] location must take into consideration low-income riders and their needs for transportation," Sigcho-Lopez said. "Public transportation by train and bus should be considered and collaborated on, particularly as we're looking at the future and fossil fuels, etc., and especially when it comes to low-income riders. We're hoping cooperation with the City, Amtrak, and Union Station will be part of the solution."

Columbia College faces decline in enrollment amid financial crisis

BY ADDISON ANNIE
The Columbia Chronicle

As expected, Columbia College is on track to have fewer students in Fall 2024, although it's still unclear just how much enrollment will drop.

At the end of May, Columbia College laid off 70 staffers and faculty members and cut 32 vacant positions, amid financial troubles and sluggish enrollment. Those layoffs came months after Columbia College president and chief executive officer Kwang-Wu Kim announced plans to depart on July 1. The school is facing a $38 million deficit, and its credit rating was cut to nearly junk status because its high operating costs are expected to persist.

Deposits from first-year and transfer students increased just slightly in May from the previous month, although first-year deposits are still down 46% compared to this time last year. Transfer students' deposits are down 36%, the college reported in a May 29 email from Derek Brinkley, assistant vice president in undergraduate admissions.

When comparing the student deposit number difference from the 2023 school year, the college has seen 771 less deposits from first-year students in fall of 2024. Tuition and fees are also going up for the 2024-2025 school year. Full-time tuition for undergrads will jump by $1,538 to $32,272, which is a 5% increase before financial aid.

"The biggest issue is, how am I going to pay for this upcoming semester? It's stressful," Sean Tumbokon-Flowers said.

Delays in federal financial aid are partly to blame for the loss of students. Other factors include the college dealing with fallout from the part-time faculty strike that occurred last fall when more than 600 part-time adjunct professors went on strike, accusing the school of not providing a quality education.

A nationwide decline in the number of students going to college has also affected the 134-year-old South Loop college.

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid [FAFSA] delays meant Columbia was late in sending out financial aid award letters to students.

Brinkley said in the email that Admissions is now focused on providing resources to help families read their award letters and understand their options to cover the full cost of attending Columbia. Additionally, they are encouraging students to complete their FAFSA for this upcoming year.

As the application deadline approaches, the college's ability to attract and secure students will rely on overcoming these challenges, and making sure that students feel informed and supported in their financial planning, he said.

Columbia College's spring enrollment was reported at 5,757 students, which is a 12% decrease from Fall 2023 enrollment of 6,529.

Admissions have seen a drop of 924 first-year applicants compared to this time last year. The college has also seen a drop of 257 transfer student applicants.

According to the 2024 Admissions Report, in 2023 there were 9,208 applicants and of them 1,704 made deposits. This year, Columbia received 8,284 applicants but has only received 912 deposits. The college saw a 20% decrease in applicants in the Chicago area, something that could be attributed to the media coverage of the seven-week long part-time faculty strike. The number of applicants from year-to-year dropped from 2,419 to 1,917. The number of deposits is even lower.

Although applicants outside of Illinois also saw a decrease of 8%, both the college and data suggested that media coverage had little effect.

The report suggests it is unlikely that student recruitment or retention will improve in the fall of 2024, and may get worse. The annual operating deficit for the current fiscal year – projected in Sept. 2023 to decline slightly to $19 million, is now expected to soar to $38 million.

What students are saying

Rising sophomore and graphic design major Dean Garcia expressed worry about the situation. "The FAFSA was really delayed, everyone was kind of screwed up because of that," Garcia said "When class registration happened it was really overwhelming for a lot of people."

The delays in financial aid are especially pressing for students who are enrolled in a summer course at the college, such as Sean Tumbokon-Flowers, a junior radio major.

"The biggest issue is, how am I going to pay for this upcoming semester? It's stressful," Tumbokon-Flowers said.

Students who haven't received financial data and documents are unsure whether they can afford Columbia, since little information is available.

"I really need to have that money now, if I don't this whole semester could be disastrous for me," Flowers said. "I just hope everything is going to work out."

You may be owed a refund for overpaying property taxes during past 20 years

BY MARIA PAPPAS

My office is sitting on about $93 million in potential refunds for property tax overpayments going back 20 years.

Most overpayments occurred because more than one person paid the same tax bill twice. Reasons why duplicate payments occurred include:

- Both the property owner and the property owner's mortgage company paid the property tax bill;
- Both spouses paid the property tax bill without telling the other; and
- Two or more mortgage companies, banks or title companies paid the same taxes during a property purchase or refinancing.

You may be entitled to a refund even if you bought your property long ago. The law allows refunds for duplicate payments made up to 20 years ago.

Thomas Chapman recently received a refund for a duplicate overpayment that was made in 2021. Chapman cared for his mother, who owned a home in the South Side's Wrightwood neighborhood near Dan Ryan Woods Forest Preserve.

Chapman discovered he was owed a refund when he took possession of the property after she died. Her mortgage company paid the taxes, and she paid her tax bill in cash. When a homeowner dies, an heir who inherits the estate can file a claim if the homeowner was owed a refund.

Chapman received a $1,216 refund for the 2021 double payment. He recently appeared as a guest on my "Black Houses Matter" radio show that airs at 11:30 a.m. every Monday on WVON-AM 1690.

"It was ironic because when I was called to talk about being on the radio show I was just coming from the bank after I made the deposit," Chapman said. "It was a smooth process getting the refund."

Employees in my office helped Chapman file the paperwork he needed to apply for his refund. He filled out a form labeled, "Refund Application: Duplicate & Overpayment." The form can be filed electronically and is available online at cookcountytreasurer.com.

After providing contact information, you must submit proof of payment. We require documentation to ensure that refunds are issued to only to those who made the overpayment. This helps prevent people attempting to file fraudulent claims from obtaining refunds.

The documents must show that you paid the taxes for the tax year and installment when the overpayment occurred. The type of documentation depends on how payment was made. If you paid by cash, a copy of your teller receipt serves as proof of payment.

If you paid by personal check or a business check, a copy of the front of the canceled check used to pay the taxes is needed or a copy of the monthly bank statement showing the corresponding check number and amount of payment.

If you paid online at cookcountytreasurer.com, you'll need a copy of your bank statement showing the transfer of funds to the Treasurer's Office or a copy of your credit card statement showing payment.

If a mortgage company paid the taxes, you can provide a copy of the IRS Form 1098 indicating taxes paid for the year in question.

In Chapman's case, he had to provide proof that he was the legal heir to his late mother's estate. It took a while to get the necessary paperwork, but "I finally got the letters of administration," he said.

The History of the Edgewater Golf Club and Warren Park in West Ridge

BY SERHII CHRUCKY AND NEIL GALE, PH.D.

Born out of an elitist North Shore sensibility, the tumultuous transformation of the Edgewater Golf Club into the democratic Warren Park reveals much about the complicated process of real estate development in Chicago.

Once the site of society dinners, debutante balls, and gentlemanly privilege, Edgewater Golf Club became a hotly contested space where a game of “political football” involving various levels of city and state government, community organizations, and private developers was played out.

When the smoke cleared, a case of bribery cost an alderman his job, but North Side residents won 90-acres of hard-fought parkland.

One of the earliest golf courses within city limits, Edgewater Golf Club, was established in 1896 and sited on a strip of land west of Broadway between Foster and Balmoral.

This first course consisted of a mere five holes, and when additional land could not be acquired for expansion, the club moved north a year later to a swath of land bounded by Sheridan, Loyola, Albion, and Lake-wood.

Although the club was only located in Edgewater for its first year, the name was retained until its dissolution in 1968.

The second course was nine holes in length, and expansion was again the issue in 1910 when the club acquired 88-acres farther west at Ridge and Pratt. This tract was purchased from 16 different owners for a total of $125,500, and the old property was sold to a developer five days later for $50,000.

The new course at Ridge and Pratt, designed by prolific landscape architect Thomas Bendelow, opened in June 1911. It was a straightforward, economical design with no doglegs, ponds, or other funny stuff, squeezing 18 holes into the given acreage.

Holabird & Roche submitted plans for a palatial Italian Renaissance revival-style clubhouse, but those plans were not carried out. The firm of Hill & Woltersdorf was employed instead, perhaps to avoid a conflict of interest as Holabird was a club member, but more likely because Hill & Woltersdorf charged less.

The clubhouse that was built was smaller in scale and laid out in an I-formation consisting of two two-story rectangular segments on each end. Although chintzy in contrast to the Holabird design, the Tudor Revival style employed better reflected the conservative Anglo-American background of much of the club’s membership.

As soon as it opened, Edgewater Golf Club was a magnet for real estate development in the West Ridge community. In 1910, urban-form residential development ceased at Ridge Rd., immediately beyond which were primarily greenhouses. The earliest development influenced by the golf course was five houses immediately north of the clubhouse on Pratt Ave., built between 1912 and 1914 by club members, including then-president William J. MacDonald. This section of Pratt, located between Seeley and Oakley, developed slowly compared to the surrounding area. Of the 19 houses eventually constructed along this stretch, 10 dates to the 1910s, and the remaining nine were built between 1920-49. Until this section of Pratt was widened during the construction of Warren Park in the late 1970s, it was a narrow, private thoroughfare serving this relatively exclusive development. Laurence Warren described it as “only a half street.”

The golf course’s presence impacted residential development on the North Side beyond a few country club estates. The year the club purchased the new land, McGuire & Orr subdivided the area northwest of the club, perhaps anticipating demand.

This subdivision, the Ridge Blvd. addition, led to the construction of the first sewer built west of Ridge Road to drain into the North Shore Channel. In 1912, builders Cochran & McGluer were advertising an apartment building located at Broadway and Kenmore as being “15 minutes from Edgewater Golf Club.”

The developer responsible for Edgewater Golf Club itself, William Ludwig Wallen, was active in areas both east and west of the Club, most notably the area around Clark and the street bearing his name. Henry Schoolcraft’s 1922 Arthur Avenue Addition, located directly south of the Club bounded by Western, Devon, and Damen, prominently touted close proximity to the club in advertisements.

The practice of listing Edgewater Golf Club as an amenity persisted in marketing surrounding residential developments into the mid-1960s.

Edgewater Golf Club had an early history of transience, which almost continued into the 1920s. In 1923, the club purchased a 175-acre tract of land in Glenview for around $160,000. Adjusting for inflation, this amounted to around $90,000 in 1910,

New food hall coming to Broadway in Uptown, $2M in city funding approved

A new food hall has been proposed for the east side of Broadway in Uptown. First reported in the community news blog Uptown Update, initial funding has reportedly been announced for a new pan-Asian food hall at 4833 N. Broadway currently named the "Uptown Food Exchange."

Located just north of Lawrence Ave., the project will redevelop an existing structure on the southern end of the large shopping plaza across the street from the Uptown Theater. The approved funding comes in $1.98 million from the city's new Housing and Economic Development bond granted by the city last week.

The city is borrowing $1.25 billion over the next five years through a bond issuance, the proceeds of which will be used toward housing, business expansion, innovation, job growth and cultural and community assets.

The bonds will be funded through the issuance of General Obligation and Sales Tax Securitization Corporation bonds. Their proceeds will be primarily tax-exempt, but as much as 35% of the issuance

The approved funding comes in $1.98 million from the city's new Housing and Economic Development bond granted by the city last week.

Architectural renderings for the new building show a two-story building of approximately 8,680 square-feet in size. The site is presently vacant, and the last commercial tenant was a nail supply store. Once completed it will hold multiple food stalls for local restaurants, multiple seating areas, and small shops.

Early reports are that up to three Thai restaurants are leading the efforts according to Uptown Update. The building's unique design is being worked on by local architects Future Firm. No timeline for construction has yet been announced.

Police Beat...

Two men robbed, one pistol-whipped while walking in Lincoln Park

Two men were robbed at gunpoint in Lincoln Park overnight, according to Chicago police. The robbers struck one of the victims in the face with a firearm, but no other injuries were reported.

According to a Chicago police spokesperson, the men, ages 21 and 23, were walking in the 2100 block of N. Sheffield when the two robbers approached them around 3:05 a.m. One of the robbers pistol-whipped the older man before demanding property from the men, police said.

The robbers fled north on Sheffield after the robbery. Officers who spoke with the victims described the suspects as two young Black males, both wearing masks and armed with pistols. One of the robbers wore a white hoodie with blue jeans.

The injured victim declined medical attention, police said.

CPD took 48 robbery reports in Lincoln Park during the first five months of this year, up slightly from 45 last year.

Man charged with having a gun in an Uber — while on an ankle monitor for carjacking and gun possession

Late last year, we reported on Cedric Johnson, a man accused of carjacking and gun possession, after Judge William Fahy rejected the state's detention request and sent him home on electronic monitoring.

Last week, Johnson once again appeared before Fahy. Prosecutors said, still on electronic monitoring, he got caught with a gun while riding in an Uber. That still wasn't enough to convince Fahy to keep him in jail on the new allegations. Although the judge did agree to detain Johnson until the judge handling the carjacking case had a chance to review the matter.

Back on Dec. 23, 2023, a 55-year-old woman was outside her car in the first block of W. Hubbard when a man jumped behind the wheel and drove away, knocking her to the ground and causing a head injury, according to a Chicago police report.

Less than an hour later, cops found the woman's BMW X1 crashed near the 6300 block of S. Normal.

Two witnesses told cops they saw a man run from the BMW's driver's seat holding a firearm. Officers followed the driver's route and arrested Johnson on the rear porch of a boarded-up, abandoned home. The cops also found a loaded handgun with an extended ammunition magazine under the porch steps, prosecutors said.

What's more, CPD found a video showing Johnson standing across the street from the carjacking scene about two minutes before the BMW was taken, officials said.

Citing the violent nature of the carjacking, the allegations that police found a gun near Johnson, and the fact that Johnson was adjudicated delinquent for robbery as a juvenile, prosecutors asked Fahy to keep Johnson in custody during a detention hearing on Christmas Day. Fahy spiked that idea and sent Johnson home on an ankle monitor.

On June 6, Chicago police officers saw a car with no front plate in traffic. They made a U-turn, realized the car also had a non-functioning brake light, and pulled it over, according to a CPD report.

According to the report, the driver was working for Uber, and his backseat passenger was Cedric Johnson.

Detecting the smell of burning pot and eyeing an aerosol product marketed to conceal the smell of burnt pot inside the car, the officers asked the driver and Johnson to step out, the report said.

Police said they found a loaded handgun with an extended magazine under the rear of the driver's seat, close to where Johnson's feet had been. The seat design made it impossible for the gun to slide from the front of the seat to the back, leading the cops to conclude that Johnson had possession of the weapon, according to the report.

Both men denied possessing the gun, and the Uber driver said there should not be any weapons in the vehicle.

In court the next day, prosecutors charged Johnson with aggravated unlawful use of a weapon, and they once again asked Fahy to detain him on the gun charge. And, once again, Fahy said no. Instead, Fahy ordered Johnson to go on electronic monitoring in the new case.

However, the judge did detain Johnson for three days for violating pretrial release in the carjacking case. During a second detention hearing on June 10, Judge Alfredo Maldonado agreed to keep Johnson in custody.

Man shot during struggle with armed robber on Far North Side

A man was shot June 13 when he tried to grab an armed robber's firearm on the Far North Side, police said.

The 24-year-old and his 28-year-old girlfriend were walking in the 7200 block of N. Ridge when the robber confronted them around 9:04 p.m. Chicago police said the male victim tried to get ahold of the offender's firearm, but it discharged, striking him in the hand. After getting wallets from the two victims, the robber fled.

A short time later, the injured man walked into Swedish Hospital for treatment. Police said he was in fair condition.

Officers who spoke with the victims described the gunman as a heavy-set Hispanic man who stands about 5'8" tall. He wore a face mask and may have a tattoo of a lion or tiger on his left forearm.

Man stabbed after exiting store in the Loop

Police are looking for the assailant who attacked a man with a knife in the Loop on June 11. It happened around 8:40 p.m. in the first block of W. Van Buren, just outside the CTA's State-Van Buren El station.

A 33-year-old man had just left a 7-Eleven when he passed a crowd of people, and a member of the group attacked him from behind, officials said. He suffered a large cut to his left forearm and ran from the scene, according to CPD.

Officers found the victim nearby and helped slow his blood loss. His condition was stabilized at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

The attacker fled the scene, too. Officers at the scene described him as a Hispanic man wearing a green top, black jogging pants, and white shoes.

Uptown man committed six burglaries at apartment buildings and businesses last month

An Uptown man faces charges for allegedly breaking into six apartments, apartment buildings, and businesses on the North Side last month.

Prosecutors said Josue Vasquez, 25, came face-to-face with one of his victims as he burglarized their apartment in the 4100 block of N. Sheridan around 4 a.m. May 18. He ran out after the confrontation.

He is also accused of committing two burglaries in the same building in the 1300 block of W. Wilson around 6:45 a.m. May 11. Prosecutors said he used a screwdriver to pry open the back door of an apartment complex. He then forced his way into the mailroom and a bike storage room to steal packages and an electric scooter, according to court filings.

Vasquez allegedly burglarized a coffee shop in the same building that morning, too.

Prosecutors said he burglarized a building in the 600 block of W. Patterson around 11:20 p.m. May 23. Two days later, he stole packages from a building in the 500 block of W. Aldine, taking them to a stairwell where he "opened them one by one," according to a complaint.

The next afternoon, Vasquez allegedly slipped through a window to burglarize an apartment in the 1000 block of W. Dakin.

Police used surveillance video to identify Vasquez and link him to the crimes, according to court filings.

He is charged with burglary, two counts of residential burglary, and three counts of burglary without causing damage. Judge Shauna Boliker detained Vasquez, noting that he was already on probation for a gun conviction.

Teen carjacked off-duty cop in River North

A 15-year-old boy has been charged with carjacking an off-duty police officer in River North earlier this year. The boy was arrested Saturday in the 6400 block of S. Dr. Martin Luther King Dr., according to a Chicago police media statement.

An off-duty Chicago cop was in the 500 block of W. Grand when two carjackers armed with pistols took his red Volkswagen Jetta late on March 26. He was not injured during the hijacking.

Police said the boy is charged with one count of aggravated vehicular hijacking with a firearm, but no other information is available about him because charges are filed in juvenile court.

As of last June 17, CPD had recorded 422 carjackings so far this year, down from 502 during the same period last year and well below the 702 cases seen during that time in 2022. However, the number of cases is still about double that seen in comparable periods during 2019 and 2020.

Five robbery victims shot last week

For the fifth time since June 13, police report that a man was shot during an armed robbery. In recent days, robbery victims have been shot in Rogers Park, Logan Square, Austin, Washington Park, and North Lawndale.

The latest shooting occurred in the 5900 block of S. Michigan around 12:30 a.m. June 18, according to Chicago police. CPD said a 35-year-old man was outside when another man tried to rob him on the street. The robber fired a shot during the holdup attempt, striking the victim in the chest.

EMS took the victim to the University of Chicago Medical Center in critical condition.

Witnesses said the robber left the area on foot. They described him as a Black male wearing a black hoodie and a black ski mask.

On June 16, a 19-year-old woman was shot when three men tried to rob her in the 3900 block of W. 21st Street. She was outside when the group confronted her and demanded her property around 1:10 p.m., police said. One of the robbers fired shots, striking the woman in the torso. She was taken to Mt. Sinai Hospital in critical condition.

Newfound 'friends' rob man at knifepoint in Wrigleyville

A group of strangers who quickly befriended a man in Wrigleyville ended up robbing him June 9.

The victim stepped out of his Uber on Clark St., just south of Wrigley Field, when a group of two men and two women started chatting him up around 1:30 a.m., according to initial information. As the man walked home, his new friends tagged along, seeming quite friendly at first.

But, as they made their way down the 1100 block of W. Eddy, the vibe changed. The men pulled out a knife and robbed him, according to the victim. Then, the foursome walked away,

All three robbers ran west after getting the woman's valuables, police said. An officer who reviewed surveillance footage said they were three Black males, one wearing all-black clothing with black shoes, another wearing all-black clothing with white shoes, and the third wearing a black top with red pants.

On June 15, a 49-year-old Uber driver was shot when an armed carjacker slid into his back seat in the 200 block of N. Latrobe, police said. The victim had stopped to pick up a passenger when the hijacker entered the Toyota Camry and ordered him out of the vehicle around 9:01 p.m.

The carjacker shot the rideshare driver in the knee even though the victim was complying with his commands, police said.

A 40-year-old man was shot during a robbery in Logan Square around 3:43 a.m. June 15. Police said a group of robbers shot the man as they robbed him and a 51-year-old woman in the 3600 block of W. Cortland. After taking the woman's valuables, one of the robbers fired a shot, striking the male victim in the knee. He was taken to Stroger Hospital and is in good condition.

Still another robbery victim was shot June 13 on the Far North Side. A 24-year-old man and his 28-year-old girlfriend were walking in the 7200 block of N. Ridge when the robber confronted them around 9:04 p.m. Chicago police said the male victim tried to get ahold of the offender's firearm, but it discharged, striking him in the hand. After getting wallets from the two victims, the robber fled.

Officers who spoke with the victims on June 13 described the gunman as a heavy-set Hispanic man who stood about 5'8" tall. He wore a face mask and may have a tattoo of a lion or tiger on his left forearm.

Woman, 50, shot near Pottawattomie Park

A 50-year-old woman was shot when someone opened fire from a car outside Pottawattomie Park on the Far North Side June 12, police said.

Chicago police said a gunman opened fire from a black sedan around 8:13 p.m., and one of the bullets struck the woman in her lower left leg as she stood outside the park in the 7300 block of N. Rogers. She was taken to St. Francis Hospital in good condition.

Investigators found six shell casings at the scene and discovered bullet holes in at least one car. CPD did not release a description of the suspect.

In February, a gunman shot four people inside Pottawattomie Park, leaving one of the victims dead. Darnell Harrison, a 16-year-old Senn High School student, has been charged in connection with that case.

Prosecutors said Harrison and a friend entered the park and walked toward the victims, some of whom asked Harrison and his friend why they were there and who they were. Harrison and his friend kept walking without answering, and the victims' group walked in a different direction.

Moments later, Harrison pulled a firearm from his hoodie, turned, and began shooting at the unarmed group, officials said. Police found 11 last seen heading south on Seminary Ave.

Nearly two hours after the robbery, the victim received a message from the men asking for his phone password. Experienced robbers typically secure this information immediately upon receiving devices from their victims.

The victim described the men as Black, with one being bald and about 6'-4" tall. The other is about 6 feet tall. He had dreads and facial hair. He told police one of the women wore a peach-colored shirt.

Keyonce Gladney, 19, died. Court records also identify her as Keyonce Gaine. Another 19-year-old woman and men ages 22 and 20 were shot but survived, according to a Chicago police media statement.

Man shot, critically injured near governor's Gold Coast mansion

A man was shot and critically injured overnight as he walked in the Gold Coast, about a block from Gov. JB Pritzker's home, police say.

The victim, who police said was in his 20s, was at Astor and North Blvd. when someone fired shots in the area around 12:53 a.m. He suffered gunshot wounds to his left thigh and buttocks.

Police found shell casings in a grassy area and more shell casings next to a Divvy bike rack at North Blvd. and Lake Shore Dr. Witnesses reported seeing a man run from the scene and jump into a black Chrysler 300 on Inner Lake Shore Dr. Police determined that the car had been reported stolen.

According to an officer who reviewed surveillance video, the suspect was a Black male wearing a blue hoodie, light-colored jeans, and black shoes.

Chicago police officers stopped a car in the area immediately after the shooting and recovered a firearm from the vehicle. Witnesses told police that none of the car's occupants looked like the shooter.

Some witnesses believed a robbery was occurring in the area because they heard someone demand another person's keys as the shots rang out. The police have not confirmed those suspicions.

The governor lives in the 1400 block of N. Astor, just south of the shooting scene.

So far this year, 11 people have been shot on the Near North Side, which includes the Gold Coast neighborhood.

Man shot near Streeterville Whole Foods

Police were on the hunt for a gunman after a 50-year-old man was shot near the Whole Foods in Streeterville June 14.

Police responded to the corner of Grand and Columbus around 8:36 a.m. after a 911 caller reported that someone had fired a shot during an argument on the street.

The victim was conscious, standing, and talking easily with first responders, according to the video provided to this reporter. A single gunshot wound was visible on his left shoulder. He has been taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for treatment.

On Grand Ave., a single shell casing was visible under a parked car.

Witnesses told police that the gunman ran into the Whole Foods parking garage after the shooting. The officers sealed off the garage and called in canine units to help with the search. They also located a firearm on the garage ramp.

The suspect was described as a

Cops warn of armed group robbing and carjacking victims across Chicago

BY CWB CHICAGO

A group of armed men is responsible for committing at least seven robberies and carjackings across the city since Memorial Day, according to Chicago police. Victims are being targeted as they exit their vehicles during late night and overnight hours, according to a CPD community alert.

Police said cars were taken from two victims, and the men “forcibly accompanied” one victim into the victim’s home. They took property from the residence.

The most recent crimes occurred in Uptown early on June 4:

- Three armed men confronted a 62-year-old in the 900 block of W. Sunnyside at 2:08 a.m., according to police.

The crew displayed guns and demanded his property. After he complied, they pushed him to the ground and ran east on Sunnyside, according to the police spokesperson.

- A few minutes later, a 41-year-old man was robbed in the 1300 block of W. Winona. He told police he was walking when three men walked up, and two displayed guns, a CPD spokesperson said. The unarmed robber took the victim’s property, and the crew fled in a white SUV.

Two more robberies were reported within minutes of each other in the 1700 block of W. Nelson on May 31. First, two men robbed a male victim, taking his keys and other property at gunpoint around 11:31 p.m. That victim saw the robbers mug a woman moments later on the same block.

CPD also linked a car theft to the group. The alert said the vehicle was taken from the 1400 block of West Irving Park Road on May 28 or 29.

The crew is responsible for three more armed robberies, too, police said, including one in the 1600 block of N. Cicero at 11:46 p.m. May 28; in the 3100 block of S. Giles at 1:21 a.m. June 1, and in the 5000 block of W. Harrison at 1 a.m. June 2

Police said the robberies have been committed by up to four Black men wearing dark clothing and ski masks.

Tips can be shared with CPD’s robbery task force at 312-742-0231. The crime pattern is 24-CWP-030.

Man fatally shot outside Howard CTA station

BY CWB CHICAGO

A man was shot and killed outside the Howard CTA station in Rogers Park June 17. This marks the third shooting incident in the neighborhood since June 12.

Chicago police offered few details about the shooting, saying only that a 45-year-old man was standing in the 7600 block of N. Paulina when he suffered multiple gunshot wounds around 12:08 a.m. He was pronounced dead less than an hour later at St. Francis Hospital.

An officer at the scene said investigators found 14 shell casings in the area.

The man is the 12th person shot and the fourth killed in Rogers Park this year. That compares to 15 people shot at this point last year. There were 12 people shot as of this date in 2022 and 11 during the period in 2021.

ing the period in 2021.

On June 13, a 24-year-old man was shot as a group of offenders robbed him and his 28-year-old girlfriend in the 7200 block of N. Ridge. Chicago police said the man tried to get ahold of one of the robbers’ guns, but it discharged, striking him in the hand. After getting wallets from the two victims, the robber fled. The injured victim is recovering.

A 50-year-old woman was shot when someone opened fire from a car outside Pottawattomie Park on June 12. CPD said a gunman opened fire from a black sedan around 8:13 p.m., and one of the bullets struck the woman in her lower left leg.

No arrests have been announced in connection with any of the shootings.

Men get 10 years for ‘unmitigated crime spree’ across North Side that ended with fiery car crash

BY CWB CHICAGO

Two men have been handed 10-year prison sentences after pleading guilty to committing a string of robberies that ended with a fiery car crash on the North Side. Two other men continue to fight allegations that they were also part of the robbery team.

The judge who first heard about the allegations during a bond hearing characterized their work as “an unmitigated crime spree ... robbery after robbery after robbery after robbery.”

Prosecutors said the group consistently used the same tactic during the Dec. 11-12, 2022, spree: they boxed in someone who was sitting in a parked car, swarmed the victim with guns drawn, and took valuables. Three of the victims were warming up their cars as they prepared to go to work. Another had just parked when the crew spotted them.

Early on Dec. 12, the crew robbed a 42-year-old man who was in his car in the 4300 block of N. Leavitt. Four men pulled up in a silver sedan and robbed him of his phone and wallet at gunpoint.

Three men robbed a 20-year-old man at gunpoint in the 2400 block of W. Berwyn in Lincoln Square moments later. The offenders rifled through the man’s car and then escaped in a silver vehicle. That crime was caught on video. Watch:

Minutes later, three armed men robbed a man who was unloading his vehicle in the 3100 block of W. Leland. One of the robbers punched the victim in the face before the group fled in a silver sedan.

Four other robberies resulted in charges: two in quick succession in the 2100 block of N. Claremont, one in the 410 block of N. Wolcott, and another in the 1100 block of W. 31st Street.

Several similar holdups occurred while the spree unfolded, but none resulted in criminal charges. Dozens of similar robberies were reported in the days before the men were arrested, but those were never prosecuted, either.

Marquise Green, 22, pleaded guilty to all seven robberies and received ten years on each count, to be served concurrently, from Judge Tyria Walton. Marchello Hicks, 22, pleaded guilty to six robberies and received the same sentence from Walton. Hicks was never charged in the Leland case.

Both men will receive credit for time spent in jail and a 50% sentence reduction for good behavior.

The other two men accused of committing the robberies, Marcus Carter, 22, and Dashun McGraw, 20, are awaiting trial.

POLICE BEAT from p. 10

Black man, possibly in his 30s, bearded with long dreads. He was wearing a green shirt and orange pants, according to an initial description shared on the local police radio frequency.

Friday’s shooting is the third in less than a week for the Near North Side. On June 13, a man was shot near the corner of Astor and North Blvd. The local aldermen said that the incident appeared to be gang-related and involved people who knew each other.

On June 9, a man was shot while standing in the Portillo’s drive-thru at Clark and Ontario. At the time of the shooting, the restaurant remained closed, but nearby clubs were letting out for the night.

GOLF CLUB from p. 8

meaning that the club paid 40% less for twice as much land in Glenview.

This time, the club was not buying and selling at a loss. Much had changed in the real estate market over 13 years, and by 1923, the value of the Pratt and Ridge tract had escalated to nearly $615,000. While the club could have made a huge profit by moving to Glenview at that time, three months after it was purchased, that land was sold to the North Shore Country Club.

Although little interest apparently happened at Edgewater Golf Club between 1923 and 1953 other than the usual “society notes” and much ado about Chick Evans, the Glenview affair is a common issue with urban golf courses. By economic necessity, golf courses are built at the fringes of urban areas where land is cheap and plentiful. In turn, they incite residential demand, driving up property values. The invisible hand exerts pressure on the course owners until the price becomes too great to resist. Either the golf club dissolves and fades into memory, or it is rebuilt at the current urban fringe, where the process repeats itself.

In 1926, then-president Judge Dennis E. Sullivan told the Edgewater club members, “The club and its property will not be sold... real estate agents are hereby warned to keep off.” Ultimately, his advice was not heeded.

Edgewater Golf Club had long been sought after for development when an unnamed firm offered to purchase the land for $900,000 in 1953. The plan called for high-rise apartments on the site, but the membership rejected the sale. Another proposition was made in 1964 by the Sturm-Bickel Corporation, which would have involved exchanging the Tam O’Shanter Golf Course in Niles and $800,000 for Edgewater’s land, but this was also rejected.

The membership finally voted to sell the club to the Kenroy Realtors and developer Jupiter Corp. in 1965 for $7.6 million, giving the developers a Nov. 1, 1967 deadline to come up with the money.

There was an immediate backlash from community organizations, first the Northtown Civic Council and later the Allied Northside Community Organization led by Laurence Warren. Community concerns were primarily related to overcrowding and congestion. Ald. Jack Sperling [50th] quickly sided with community opposition, introducing a resolution calling for the city to purchase the land for use as a park.

The developers failed to deliver the purchase price when the deadline rolled around. Sperling and Ald. Paul Wigoda [49th] introduced a resolution that passed Nov. 1, 1967, downzoning the park from R4 to R2, effectively disrupting the developers’ plan to build high-rises and making the purchase price un-economical for single-family housing.

However, this action activated a condition in Kenroy’s contract with Edgewater Golf Club, giving them a year extension to come up with the money to purchase the property. As a result of the zoning change, Jupiter Corp. pulled out of the deal, leaving Kenroy as the primary buyer.

The sale was successfully completed a year later, in Nov. 1968. Solomon Cordwell Buenz was hired to design the development, producing something very similar to Sandburg Village.

By economic necessity, golf courses are built at the fringes of urban areas where land is cheap and plentiful. In turn, they incite residential demand, driving up property values. The invisible hand exerts pressure on the course owners until the price becomes too great to resist. Either the golf club dissolves and fades into memory, or it is rebuilt at the current urban fringe, where the process repeats itself.

Designed to house 8,900 people, the “Edgewater Village” plan called for 3870 units; 1408 rentals, 192 efficiencies, 528 two-bedrooms, 2328 condominiums, and 134 townhouses. These were to be clustered around “pedestrian precinct malls,” each containing 1000 apartments with underground parking, retail, play areas, and swimming pools. Each of the three malls would have one building of 20 stories and five of nine stories. Also included in the plans was a shopping area with parking, a public school, and restaurants.

The clubhouse would have been converted into a public restaurant and a private health club.

The Chicago Plan Commission and the Planning and Development Commission both approved the plan initially, and Sperling’s earlier resolution was repealed.

The golf course was then rezoned to a planned development site.

However, Mayor Richard J. Daley soon began urging the attorney general and Gov.

The bill, allocating $950,000 towards the purchase of the land, passed the House and Senate in June 1969, and Gov. Ogilvie signed off three months later.

The governor was criticized for the delay by Daley and Lieutenant Gov. Paul Simon. The governor, in turn, suggested that powerful Ald. Thomas Keane “had a piece in the action.” The State offered $8 million to Kenroy for the land, but the company raised the asking price to $35 million.

Negotiations between the state and Kenroy broke down, and the state filed a condemnation suit in Feb. 1970. However, a compromise was reached when it became clear the state would likely not be able to afford a price set by a jury. The western two-thirds of the property was then sold to the state for $8 million in the summer of 1970, financed through federal grants.

Kenroy retained 32-acres, ostensibly with the intention of constructing a high-rise complex. The Allied Northside Community Organization wanted the entire property as open space and continued to lobby the mayor and park district to purchase the remainder. In 1972, the park district offered $6 million, but Kenroy raised his asking price to $12 million just as he did with the state. After the state turned the park over to the park district, the Chicago Public Building Commission bought the remainder of the property through con-

Midwest Comfort” back in 1974, when his comforting voice cradled the airwaves and connected Chicagoans across neighborhoods and cultures. We join his family and friends in gratitude for such a wonderful life well-lived.

ART NEWS: Philadelphia Univ. of the Arts has closed its doors with very little notice. Some 600 hundred employees were let go with no advance warning. Students and faculty were only given one week notice. A thousand students’ academic careers up in the air. Pennsylvania’s politicians are enraged and calling for investigations. Lawsuits are being organized.

INLAND BEACH: Humboldt Park Beach will open this Summer after a four-year closure. The city’s only inland beach has been closed due to pandemic restrictions and lifeguard shortages. In hindsight we now know we all should have been hanging out at the beach during the pandemic getting sunshine. Science shows that shutting down our parks and beaches was the absolute wrong thing to do.

MARATHONS: Moll Law Group were proud to support founder Ken Moll’s son, Kenny Moll, in his second annual fundraiser “A Week for the World: 7 Marathons in 7 Days” in Central Park, NYC, to promote awareness of the climate change crisis.

MOTHER MARION: Chicagoan Marion Robinson, mother of Michelle Obama, who moved into the White House with the First Family when son-in-law Barack Obama was elected president, has died on May 31. She was 86. Mrs. Robinson’s death was announced by Michelle Obama and other family members in a statement that said “there was and will be only one Marian Robinson. In our sadness, we are lifted up by the extraordinary gift of her life.”

ON THE MEND: Heather Farley is at home healing following her partial knee replacement. She is hopeful that this procedure will help her. She’s grateful to family and friends for all the well wishes. She’s taking it day by day, as she begins physical therapy.

CHICAGO LIGHTHOUSE: Janet and Rodger Owens enjoyed a fabulous evening, “Seeing What’s Possible,” the Annual Gala at the Four Seasons. Everyone’s favorite, Shauna Montgomery, co- chaired an overflow crowd who generously gave a record amount to the amazing Chicago Lighthouse. Brava, Shauna and Terri.

KNOTS: When Sherry Lansing pulled the cord on the new Edgewater street sign last week it didn’t remove the sign cover the first try because the knot came out of the cord, and it just pulled out of the grommet. She joked to the assembled crowd that her husband William Friedkin - to whom the street was being dedicated to - must have been behind that. A major fail by the rigger. Must not have been a Scout and learned enough about knots. Not a sailor, either. Someone had to rush to get a ladder to get the cover off.

A culinary tour of Indian food in West Ridge, Rogers Park neighborhoods

Whether you are a long-time fan of Indian cuisine or a newcomer to the many regional dishes of the sub-continent, you can enjoy a series of delicious meals in the company of others who share your love of adventurous eating during a culinary tour of India co-sponsored by the Rogers Park/West Ridge Historical Society and the Culinary Historians of Chicago.

This series of dinners will feature the cuisines of different regions of India, including Hyderabad, Gujarat, Punjab, Kerala, and Maharashtra. The cost is $35 per person.

The tour starts at 6:30 p.m. Thursday, June 27 at the Hyderabad Kitchen, 6242 N. California Ave.

The restaurant location and menu for each meal will be selected by Colleen Taylor Sen, food historian, author, and member of both sponsoring organizations, to highlight the regional varieties of Indian food available locally in West Ridge and other Chicago neighborhoods. Taylor Sen, is the author of Curry: A Global History; Feasts and Fasts: A History of Food in India and many other books and articles on Indian cuisine.

In the city of Hyderabad, the food combines the grains and vegetables of the south with the rich meat-based dishes of the north. The capitol of the Indian state of Telangana is famous for its biryani and delicious desserts, but to taste them, you won’t have to travel to the southeastern coast of India.

You can experience it all by taking a short car ride up to West Ridge. For more information, or reservations, visit <https://rpwrhs.org/civicrm/event/info/?id=162&reset=1>.

Corrections on two stories

Several sharp-eyed readers let us know that we made an error in our June 12 Skyline Newspaper story on the Pritzker Military Museum moving to Kenosha. In that story we conflated two historical events in the intro to the story. Julius Caesar crossed the Rubicon (and is the source of that phrase). We claimed that Napoleon Bonaparte also crossed the Rubicon River, which is not correct. Napoleon figuratively “crossed his Rubicon” when he invaded Russia by crossing the Niemen River in 1812.

The second correction comes from a May 29 Inside-Booster story on Uplift High School. We got clarification on the school’s 2024 student population, which was not included in the story; we noted the 2021, 2022 and 2023 student populations. According to a Chicago Public School [CPS] spokesperson, Uplift currently has 174 students and the school is projected to grow to over 200 students in the fall, based on their incoming 9th grade class.

We also put the system-wide CPS total student population at 330,000. The actual student populations was around 323,000 in Sept. 2023. It has since climbed to more than 328,000 students.

CPS also took exception with an unattributed statement questioning financial management at Uplift. Our source was a former school staffer who implied mismanagement, but provided no evidence, so we accept the criticism as fair, and regret including that allegation in the story. The allegation deserved further evidence, and so in publishing this we may have cross our own Rubicon River.

GOLF CLUB from p. 12

demnation proceedings on behalf of the park district in 1974 for $10.3 million.

When Gov. Ogilvie accused Ald. Keane of having “a piece in the action,” he was almost correct. He just suspected the wrong alderman.

In April 1974, Ald. Paul Wigoda [49th] was indicted for accepting a $50,000 bribe from Kenroy for rezoning the Edgewater property from R4 to a planned development site. The rezoning was used at first to activate a clause in Kenroy’s contract with Edgewater Golf Club so that they would have additional time to come up with the total purchase price. Also, the rezoning sought by the developers increased the value of the land, allowing Kenroy to effectively defraud the state and the Public Building Commission.

The Public Building Commission purchased the land only two months before Wigoda’s indictment. The park district subsequently sued Kenroy for $15 million in damages, but the case dragged on until 1982, and it remains unclear whether or not any money was recovered.

In April 1974, Ald. Paul Wigoda [49th] was indicted for accepting a $50,000 bribe from Kenroy for rezoning the Edgewater property from R4 to a planned development site.

The years of litigation between the final sale of the property in 1968 and the first construction phase of Warren Park in 1977 saw the property slip into disrepair. The clubhouse remained shuttered and abandoned, dead trees were left untended, and trash and debris were strewn around. The state installed basic fixtures like picnic tables and barbeque stands, but the park was, for the most part, unstructured.

In spite of its condition, the park was well-used by area residents at the time the park district began construction. Numerous recreational facilities were installed, including a nine-hole golf course, skating rink, bicycle trail, tennis courts, baseball diamonds, and a toboggan hill.

In the novel “Crossing California,” Adam Langer describes the condition of the park in late 1979: “Once an exclusive country club, it was now a vast expanse of overgrown grass, of cracked tennis courts, muddy soccer fields, rusted charcoal grills, and one toboggan hill, a former garbage heap now known to the kids in the neighborhood as Mt. Warren.”

Warren Park has been greatly improved since that time. Although long in coming, Laurence Warren and the Allied Northside Community Organization showed great foresight in fighting to retain the golf club as an open space.

“The rich diversity of our city is something all residents have the right to enjoy, free from discrimination of all kinds,” said Betsy Shuman-Moore, an NCR attorney and Program Director. “It is important for people like our clients to stand up for their housing rights when they are violated.”

NCR is a Rogers Park-based not-for-profit that works to ensure that everyone has fair access to safe, comfortable, affordable, accessible homes in the Chicago area. Since its start in 2017, NCR’s Fair Housing Program has fought housing discrimination and resolved many civil rights complaints. It works to respond to and prevent housing discrimination because of race, national origin, disability, familial status, gender, religion, and source of income, by investigating allegations and assisting clients in filing and resolving complaints.

dry goods and perishables home on a bike, especially with small kids in tow.

Indeed there is an incredible paternalism that comes with the idea of the 15-minute city, and the blind faith that city planners, politicians and bureaucrats can organize people’s lives on such a minute level.

While grocery stores are relatively interchangeable, more specialized retail outlets and service providers that serve a smaller percentage of the population need a wider universe of customers to draw on to be profitable than those located within a 15-minute walk. Absent extreme levels of density, they’ll need customers coming from outside that 15-minute area to stay viable.

Many of the current zoning districts along Western are C2-2, Motor Vehicle-Related Commercial District, which are being changed to the B3-3 zoning district which may align future development potential of these properties with the city’s recommendations. This will affect future allowed uses and basic development regulations, such as height and building setbacks.

The City Hall upzoning is expected to drive a long-term future of high density development along Western Ave., including Western Ave. from Addison to Howard St. The plan was adopted by the Chicago Plan Commission in Nov. 2022 and is now used as the guiding document for planning decisions along the corridor.

U.S. were born overseas, highlighting the need for support targeted to immigrant communities. FGM/C is a problem on the North Side that needs to be addressed.

The study shows that 58% of those at risk of future FGM/C were born in the U.S., emphasizing the importance of awareness and prevention efforts within American communities. Some 94% of the at-risk population were girls of elementary school age or younger, emphasizing the need to raise awareness in the education system and to provide training for pediatric healthcare professionals.

To this end, the WE STOP FGM/C Chicago North Side program was created under a federal grant awarded to the AHA Foundation, a nonprofit organization founded by an FGM/C survivor that is working to end harmful practices, such as FGM/C, in the U.S.

Laws in the U.S. provide protection against FGM/C. Under federal law, FGM/C is illegal, with significant penalties for those who perform or facilitate the practice.

In Illinois, the Female Genital Mutilation Act criminalizes FGM/C and emphasizes the need for education and preventive measures to protect at-risk individuals.

Advocates addressing FGM/C say it requires a comprehensive approach, which is why we have partnered with Tapestry 360 Health and Forma on the North Side, a provider of mental health services.

The WE STOP FGM/C program they have undertaken has implemented a multi-disciplinary approach that includes the education of frontline professionals, community engagement, and survivor support. They also have created a steering group of experts (including mental health professionals, OBGYNs, social workers, and advocates) that meets once a month to discuss best practices and identify areas of collaboration.

Through our partnership, Tapestry 360 Health healthcare professionals have undergone specialized training to identify and assist survivors of FGM/C. Tapestry has 16 locations in Illinois and is the only such organization with a special focus on FGM/C in the area.

Supporters believe this reach will be transformative for women and girls in high-risk populations in Illinois. On the North Side, Tapestry 360 Health healthcare facilities are located at 2200 W. Touhy Ave., 1400 W. Greenleaf Ave., 1300 W. Devon Ave., 945 W. Wilson, 3436 W. Wilson, and 3154 N. Clark St. They are also providing health services in Nicolas Senn High School and Kilmer Elementary School.

The program has established a support group with Healthcare Alternative Systems that provides a safe and confidential space for survivors of FGM/C to share their experiences, receive emotional support, and access counseling services. These groups are facilitated by trained professionals who understand the cultural sensitivities and complexities surrounding FGM/C.

Who is Ayaan Hirsi Ali?

Ayaan Hirsi Ali’s journey began in Somalia where, as a young girl, she was subjected to female genital mutilation. From very early on, she questioned the subjugation of women she saw all around her. While listening to a sermon on the many ways women should be obedient to their husbands, she asked “Must our husbands obey us too?”

The watershed moment came for Hirsi Ali when she fled to the Netherlands and claimed asylum to escape a forced marriage set up by her father to a cousin. Once there, she worked her way up from being a janitor to earning a Master’s degree in Political Science from Leiden Univ. and serving as an elected member of the Dutch Parliament, where she campaigned to raise awareness of violence against women, including honor killings and FGM—practices that had followed Recognizing the critical role of law enforcement in addressing FGM/C, they are working closely with local police departments to train officers on how to respond to cases effectively. This training covers the legal aspects, cultural contexts, and appropriate response strategies to ensure that survivors receive the protection and justice they deserve.

FGM/C is a violation of human rights, and the it has no place in Western culture or in our North Side communities.

By working together, the fighting FGM/C her fellow immigrants to Holland.

She embraced Western freedoms and ideals of liberty for women and unfettered free speech.

In 2004, Ayaan gained international attention following the murder of Theo van Gogh. Van Gogh had directed a short film written by her, “Submission,” about the oppression of women under Islam. The assassin left a death threat for her attached to a knife stuck in Van Gogh’s chest. She has lived under threat from Islamists ever since.

Hirsi Ali has done more than just speak out. She has connected her life experiences and the attention she garnered to AHA Foundation, which she founded in 2007 to put her ideals into action. By creating AHA Foundation, she took action to preserve, protect, and promote Western values—this is the thread that has run through all her work since then.

think they can create a safe and supportive environment for all women and girls, free from the threat of FGM/C.
