Weiss Hospital failed to request state 'Safety Net' funds

This newspaper has learned from state online data that Resilience Healthcare, the entity that owns the shuttered Weiss Memorial Hospital in Uptown, failed to request safety net funding for the hospital from the Illinois Dept. of Public Health [IDPH] since the entity took over ownership and operations of Weiss and West Suburban Medical Center in Oak Park in 2022.

Such funding may have allowed for air conditioning maintenance and staved off the eventual closure.

Resilience West Suburban Medical Center meanwhile received over $12 million in total safety net funding for the three years they applied, 2022, 2023, and 2024.

The IDPH total spending for 60 safety net hospitals statewide for 2022-2025 was almost $140 million.

The IDPH safety net hospital funding stream, known as the Hospital Health Protection Grant Program, provides funding to named hospitals for support of the ordinary and contingent expenses of safety net hospitals to improve health equity, improve access to quality care, and reduce health disparities in underserved communities and that participate in the State's Medicaid managed care program.

The guidelines appear to prohibit commingling of state funding from one hospital to another by the owners. "The awarded entities are the beneficiaries of the funds," according to IDPH information.

In comparison, Thorek Memorial Hospital received two separate IDPH safety net funding streams totaling $5,750,000 over three years for its two hospitals [Thorek's main hospital and Thorek Hospital - Andersonville, the former Bethany Hospital on Paulina].

The apparent reason is that Resilience Healthcare's Weiss Memorial Hospital simply didn't apply for IDPH safety net funding. Another likelihood is that Weiss Hospital was not determined to be "qualified" by IDPH which requires possession of an active System for Award Management account; has an acceptable fiscal condition; is in good standing with the Illinois Secretary of State; is not on the Illinois Stop Payment List; is not on the Exclusion List; and is not on the Sanctioned Party List maintained by the Dept. of Healthcare and Family Services [HFS].

A third possibility is that the Resilience Healthcare owners planned all along for Weiss Hospital to fail, and then sell the property for its underlying real estate value, the intrinsic worth of a property itself, separate from the health care business.

The closure of Weiss strikes the Uptown and Edgewater communities particularly hard. Weiss was a primary destination for medical emergencies brought by

City faces new fiscal problem; unexpected money source

RPM TIF on pace to pay off $625 million in new tracks stations

BY BOB ZULEY

The City of Chicago is bankrupt in all but name. Underfunded public schools with cash wasted on mostly-empty West and South Side buildings, failing public transportation, unwieldy underfunded pension obligations, a dangerously underfunded low income housing trust fund, wasteful spending to build privileged bicycle lanes making moving elsewhere appear an appealing option.

Now City Hall faces a new problem - how to dispose of a huge, growing pot of taxpayer money collecting in a North Side special taxing district that has outperformed expectations.

This newspaper started reporting on how much extra cash the Red Purple Modernization [RPM] 'Super TIF' was going to take in years ago.

The "RPM Phase One" Tax Increment Financing [TIF] district was set up to exist for 35 years, and is on pace to pay off the $625 million earmarked for the first phase of replacement tracks and stations between Belmont and Bryn Mawr avenues by 2028 leaving 24 more years for its balance to balloon.

The RPM Super TIF is one-half mile wide and runs up the North Lakefront adjacent to the Red Line from North Ave. to Devon Ave. It's the biggest and wealthiest TIF district in the city. The

Site plan revealed for Foundry Park, no eastern extension of 606 Trail

TIF District staying in place

Details have emerged on what could soon come to the former Lincoln Yards site on the North Branch of the Chicago River. Initial site plans have been released showing a mixed-use development known as Foundry Park just north of North Ave. and west of Clybourn.

As shown, the new plan does not include extending the 606-trail east of Ashland Ave.

According to Ald. Scott Waguespack [32nd], the controversial $1.3 billion Tax Increment Financing District established for Lincoln Yards will stay in place.

The property was recently purchased by developer Jim Letchinger at JDL after it was taken away from Sterling Bay for non-payment of a bank loan.

Initial plans by Hartshorne Plunkard Architecture were recently released to the community.

JDL, in partnership with OZK and Kayne Andersen, plans to redevelop the area north of and west along Cortland Ave. The initial plans call for a residential and retail based development, with a focus on open green spaces, utilizing the river, and creating a pedestrian friendly plan.

"We also continue to work on the Bloomingdale Trail extension that requires much more engineering work to cross the UP Metra rail as well as Elston and the Chicago River," reports Ald. Waguespack. "[U.S. Rep. Mike Quigley] has been partnering with us on funding and planning issues for the Metra station (which will not be moved to a new location) and the trail extension."

"The new version of the development will require us to prepare and pass an amended planned development ordinance, but the TIF district will stay in place and help fund the public improvements needed in the area," he said in his last aldermanic newsletter.

After several months of plan-

Overall site plan of Foundry Park. Image courtesy Katie Bishop Properties

ning, two images of the potential site layout were distributed by Jameson Sotheby's and Katie Bishop Properties.

Those documents show that the project will center around an extension of Southport Ave., connecting Kingsbury St. to Cortland St. The street will be flanked by mixed-use mid-rises of around 20 stories, surrounded by over eight acres of parkland—including courtyards, playgrounds, and a riverwalk.

Presently the new plans do not show any eastern extension of the 606-trail or any new bridge being built through the site.

Reportedly, the tallest structure proposed for the south end of the site includes three towers that may reach 38-stories in height. Sterling Bay had imagined buildings as tall as 600-feet going up in their earlier plans.

The project is expected to cost over $1 billion, with Kayne Anderson Capital partnering with JDL to secure funding. The development may break ground quickly, and will include a hotel, retail space, boutique offices, a gym, medical facilities, ice skating rink, and as many as 3,000 new residential units, consisting of townhomes, condos, apartments, and even some single-family homes located on the site's northern end.

We need to commit ourselves to an era of success, urban renaissance

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Chicago's longest serving mayor, Richard M. Daley, said on many occasions, "I'm very proud to be mayor of our great city. It's a city with a heart and a soul. Chicago has a unique spirit. Our business community wants to give back." Daley's quote is riddled with clues about his personality, his politics, his everyday kind of life, and his sense of urban political direction.

Elected to six consecutive terms, 1989 to 2011, "Richie," even surpassed his father's historic long years of mayoral service from 1955 to 1976.

In America a six-term mayor is an endangered species, reflecting an almost unheard of career strength of a political personality. Most mayors run out of gas long before their freshness date expires. Modern urban political careers share a logical brevity. Today, such longevity can teach us a great deal, a dynamic political lesson, not only about the elected official, but also the voting public who choose who will serve, and for how long.

Chicago's political stamina is amazing. Running our fingers through these unique hairs of history reveals a singular American political consciousness. Chicago is a teaming municipality. It's no Mayberry.

Since the city's 1837 founding, it has been a story of significant urban transformation on the geography of the Prairie. Rising to become the capital of the American heartland along the lapping waters of Lake Michigan. It's the reservoir of Chicago history, economic success, bold American inventiveness and influential political power.

Just ask any president from Abe Lincoln to Donald Trump. And don't forget to ask Franklin Delano Roosevelt who boldly agreed to run for an unheard of third presidential term in 1941, after Chicago politicians pushed their support at the Democrats' Presidential convention in the Chicago Stadium.

That's the political context out of which Chicago's muscular politicians stood in support of both Richard M. Daley and his pop, Richard J. Daley.

But there's another powerful historical concept that must be examined. That's how Chicago's population doubled every 10 years from 1840 through 1910. Growing from 40,000 to 1,500,000 in just those 70 years. That's because Chicago was a fresh modern city that offered space, tolerance, jobs, invention and political freedom as a promise.

An enormous flood of immigrants became the making of Chicago, and no one fit in more with a passion for public service and political leadership like the Irish.

The Daleys, father and son, represent a stunning line of connectedness of Irish politicians who understood the rationale of helping others fit in. The Irish were good at it, prevented, as they were, for 800 years from being able to do it for themselves at home back in Ireland, thanks to the occupation by the British.

When young Richard M. Daley (b. 1942) won election in 1989 he had been "groomed," as it were, to a dynamic sense of personal service and political responsibility, not only by his remarkable father, but also by the culture of his family life and his Bridgeport neighborhood Catholic sense of human responsibility. His values and sense of personal efficiency were shaped by the quietude of commitment to service, a natural extension of every day neighborhood life. In a place where neighbors knew one another and were concerned for the well-being of others.

Young Daley's many years serving in the Illinois Senate provided him with a structure, after DePaul Law School, to channel his sense of public service.

So did his years as Cook County's State's Attorney, an office that allowed him a very positive structure for commitment to building up the protection of Chicago and its suburbs. He was involved deeply in the minutia of judicial investigations and courtroom dramas all bolstering the code of legal conflict and procedure. All so essential to leadership in an expansive population of some 4 million souls.

Understanding Daley's Chicago is as important as understanding the man himself. The long era from 1989 to 2011 marks a significant political evolution in America, and Chicago, that so powerfully mirrors the best and worst of American culture.

It was an era of urban growth and robust economic development. It's the Chicago that Daley was elected to organize and restore following a time of White flight to the suburbs. Daley had the wits and the reason to alter that outward flight.

Over time he, and his strong, bright leadership team stemmed that flow and built a fresh Chicago to be proud of. "I enjoy getting things done," Daley has said.

"My philosophy is the edge, the edge of something. There's where we have to go in local government, in not only the philosophy but the creativity in people around you. They have to go to the edge."

Beyond all the issues of government from racial unrest, to the quality of local public schools, the structures of the city's streets, alleyways and highways, and even the rebirth of the city's downtown, like the very rebirth of city neighborhoods, all had their creative second chances because of Daley.

Especially his personal regard for the city's population and his attentiveness and affection for the city's quality of life.

His father's own ability to bring Chicago into rich modern times in the 1950s and 1960s, was a powerful incentive for altering the affects of age and commercial transition. Daley put his sense of success and political achievement this way, "The political system was changing rapidly in this country, and we better realize that. The elephants or donkeys are not what younger people look to. They look at individual candidates' philosophy, and I think it's a different time and a different generation."

Daley put his six terms of office in perspective this way: "You have to have passion. You have to have honesty in office. You have to love the people."

Those values blossomed into powerful strategies, I believe. I worked in City Hall for much of Mayor Richie Daley's time in office. I remember what a fresh, festive time it was for effective government. Warm relations with the City Council, (the legislative branch) and stunning years in building commercial and financial success for the city. But most of all, it was a time in which Chicago voters believed in the real heartfelt humanity of Richie Daley.

I write this brief analysis because of all the trauma and leadership disasters we are presently experiencing with Mayor Brandon "Small Payoff" Johnson. We need to commit ourselves to that era of success and urban renaissance under Chicago's longest serving elected leader.

People knew Daley was a friend, as certain as they once trusted meat on their table from the Union Stockyards.

Chicago businesses fall to 10-year low, Mag Mile down by half

BY PATRICK ANDRIESEN
Illinois Policy

Chicago had 44,840 licensed businesses operating in the city last year, fewer than any year in the past decade and 17% less than during 2015. The Magnificent Mile reported the largest drop, with active business licenses falling by over half.

Chicago had fewer licensed businesses operating in the city in 2024 than during any year in the past decade, thanks to 17% of its businesses disappearing since 2015.

Analysis of Chicago business license data shows the city was home to 54,135 businesses with an active license in 2015. A decade later, that number has dropped to 44,840.

Among Chicago's neighborhoods, the Magnificent Mile community on the Near North Side saw the largest percentage decline in active business licenses during the past decade, with the number falling from 1,600 to 784 last year – a 51% drop.

Other North Side Neighborhoods that have seen steep drops are West Ridge -41%, Sheffield / DePaul -40%, North Park -38%, Lincoln Park -35%, Lincoln Square -34%, and Streeterville -33%.

As the number of active businesses in Chicago declined, the number of license approvals fell from 104,720 in 2015 to 87,029 last year. The number of newly issued licenses declined by one-quarter during this time as renewals fell by about 15%.

The average Chicago business had 1.9 active licenses last year, essentially the same number as a decade ago. At the extreme end, Walgreens Co. required 389 licenses to keep operating last year, the most of any company citywide.

This decline continued into the first six months of 2025, with the city reporting 1,576 fewer active businesses between January and June than during the same period in 2024.

Only 28 of Chicago's 98 neighborhoods reported having more active business licenses in 2024 than they did one decade prior. New City on Chicago's Southwest Side reported the largest percentage increase in active business licenses since 2015, with the count of neighborhood business licenses climbing from 1,429 to 2,580.

Licenses to do business in the city of Chicago must typically be renewed every two years and may require on-site inspections, zoning reviews and even criminal background checks.

There were 60 different types of licenses issued last year. The most common was the limited business license, which is required for businesses including retail stores, office supply stores and brokers. Those account for nearly one-third of all licenses.

The next two most common were the licenses for retail food establishments, including restaurants, grocery stores and cafes, and the regulated business license for home occupation, home repair, hotels and long-term care.

The application fee for a limited business license was $250. But these costs can be as high as $6,600 for certain licenses, such as for a caterer from outside the city.

Businesses in Chicago already pay the third-highest state corporate income tax rates in the nation. They also pay the highest commercial property taxes in the U.S.

That's in addition to the seventh-highest combined state and local sales tax rate and one of the most punitive unemployment insurance tax structures in the nation – just because they operate in the city of Chicago.

Grand Jury indicts four for COVID-relief fraud

BY CWBCHICAGO

A federal grand jury in Chicago has indicted four individuals for allegedly fraudulently obtaining millions of dollars in small business loans under the Coronavirus Aid, Relief, and Economic Security [CARES] Act.

Dexter M. Crawford, Jr., 41, Timika Royston, 49, Orlando Patrick, 54, and Jermie Miller, 42, engaged in fraud related to the Paycheck Protection Program [PPP] and the Economic Injury Disaster Loan program [EIDL]—two sources of relief under the CARES Act, according to an indictment unsealed this week in the Northern District of Illinois. The indictment alleges that the defendants defrauded lenders and the U.S. Small Business Administration of millions of dollars in PPP loans and EIDL funds. From 2020 to 2022, the defendants submitted numerous fraudulent applications on behalf of themselves and business entities purportedly owned by some of the defendants, the indictment states. The applications contained materially false statements and misrepresentations about the defendants' companies, including the number of purported employees, payroll and revenue amounts, and other expenses, the indictment states.

The indictment charges Crawford with seven counts of wire fraud and three counts of money laundering; Royston with three counts of wire fraud; Patrick with two counts of wire fraud; and Miller with one count of wire

Don't pay for what you can get for free: How to claim your refunds

BY MARIA PAPPAS

Every year, many Cook County homeowners are bombarded with letters, emails and phone calls from vendors offering to help secure property tax refunds — for a fee. But here's the truth: You don't need to pay anyone to get money that's already yours.

My office has $122 million in potential refunds available from overpayments going back 20 years. In addition, more than $33 million in refunds may be available to homeowners who missed exemptions in the last four years.

Applying is simple, free and secure — and you keep every dollar of your refund, tax-free.

To get started, visit cookcountytreasurer.com. On the homepage, look for the purple box labeled Your Property Tax Overview and click on it. You'll be asked to enter your 14-digit Property Index Number (PIN). If you don't know your PIN, use your property address — just enter the house number, street name, city, and zip code.

A photo of your property will appear. Click the words View Your Property Tax Information to get details about your property and its tax history. Scroll down the page until you reach the section titled "Are There Any Overpayments on Your PIN?" If you're eligible for a refund, you'll see red text indicating the amount available and the year the overpayment occurred. It will say "Refund Available, Application Required, Apply Now." Click "Apply Now" and an application will open with several sections already filled in.

You'll be asked to confirm or provide a phone number and email address, and to certify that you're entitled to the refund. On the following screen, you'll have the option to upload any proof of payment you may have, especially helpful if the property changed hands. After submitting the application, your refund should arrive within six to eight weeks.

While checking for overpayments, you should also review whether you've missed any exemptions in recent years. Just below the overpayment section,

Are there any overpayments on your PIN?

Please be aware that if you did not own the property or make the payments at the time of the overpayment, you are not entitled to the refund.

That's all it takes. No lawyers, no middlemen, no fees. Just a few minutes online, and you could recover money that belongs to you.

It's your refund. Don't give a dime of it away. Take five minutes — and take back what's rightfully yours.

New technology fights rogue sidewalk riding by bikers, legislative effort to regulate now underway

Most every sane pedestrian or vehicle driver in Chicago these days knows that the most reckless drivers on the roadways are those on e-bikes and scooters. On a daily basis they're darting in and out of traffic, riding at high speed on sidewalks, not wearing protective gear or helmets, running red lights and stop signs, traveling counter to traffic on one-way streets and even operating their vehicles while high on dope and staring at smart phones.

And with no identifying license plates, stickers or even personal identification required to operate these vehicles, they're basically immune from traffic laws in a city that today is more focussed on protecting the lawless, rather than enforcing traffic laws.

But there may finally be one sign of progress in this maelstrom of chaotic, turbulent lawbreaking. Chicago's Lime is deploying sidewalk detection and an audible rider warning system they claim has the ability to be used by their clients by 2026.

The technology uses GPS technology to send clear audible warnings to riders that are operating illegally on sidewalks.

"After months of conversations and at my insistence, shared scooter operator Lime has informed my office that they are deploying sidewalk detection and audible rider warning capability to 100% of their fleet by 2026," reports Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd].

Lime's latest sidewalk detection system, called Lime Vision, employs AI-enabled image detection (potentially leveraging cameras, though the primary detection method for initial systems relied on scooter sensors and accelerometer data) to distinguish between sidewalks and roads. This technology can reportedly identify sidewalk riding in under a second.

Currently, 25% of the Lime fleet is equipped with new, accurate GPS technology that sends clear audible warnings to riders that are operating on sidewalks.

When sidewalk riding is detected, the scooter can make a sound to alert the rider to move off the sidewalk and slow down the scooter.

Next, perhaps the city or state of Illinois could make that the law for all bike, scooter and e-bike users.

Hopkins has offered draft legislation of Section 9-52-020 of the Municipal Code, a person 12 or more years of age may ride a bicycle upon any sidewalk along any roadway only if such sidewalk has been officially designated and marked as a bicycle route, or such sidewalk is used to enter the nearest roadway, intersection, or designated bicycle path, or to access a bicycle share station.

The law also prohibits bicycles from being operated on Lake Shore Dr. or on any public way where the operation of bicycles has been prohibited and signs have been erected indicating such prohibition.

"I welcome this upgrade and will monitor to ensure Lime and other operators are doing everything they can to ensure riders are not posing a risk to pedestrians, especially ones with mobility challenges," said Hopkins.

Earlier this month, Ald. Hopkins proposed legislation to prohibit negligent sidewalk riding, saying he was working on legislation that would require registration of Class 3 electric bikes (any bike that can reach speeds of approximately 28 mph) in the City of Chicago. "I look forward to working with my colleagues to preserve sidewalks for pedestrians, we have much more work to do to ensure our public ways are safe for all Chicagoans."

Chicago was built on a swamp, with our buildings being erected right on top of the water table, so flooding has been an inevitable, and annual part of Chicago's history ever since its founding. (Far right) 2017 photo of a flooded Chicago Riverwalk.

As floods rise, is Chicago the Windy City or Water City?

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

Is Chicago the “Windy City” or the “Water City”? That’s the question homeowners are asking as they complain about their basement flooding after recent monsoon weather events.

Chicago was built on a swamp, with our buildings right at the waterline, so flooding is inevitable.

We created Chicago’s Deep Tunnel project - The Tunnel and Reservoir Plan [TARP] - to help mitigate the flooding. It has seen a significant investment of around $3.8 billion to $4 billion by 2023, though the final completion date is set for 2029. One wonders, is it helping?

With climate change came record summer rains of up to seven-inches in Chicago and suburbs, and flooded basements becoming the norm in many neighborhoods. There’s water, water everywhere, and the City of Chicago has left homeowners bailing their boats.

“We don’t control the rain,” said Mayor Brandon Johnson. “The infrastructure in our city has been in need of repair for a very long time. We are committed to that repair. However, we are living in a time in which people want me to cut the budget.”

Chicago’s Dept. of Water Management Cmsr. Randy Conner called the recent deluge—nearly six inches in under two hours—a “100-year downpour.”

Connor said the emergency management office is asking residents impacted by the storms to fill out a floor-damage assessment survey, which he says will help homeowners pursue options for additional resources.

City officials floated quicker solutions—adding sensors in drains, planting thousands of trees, and more aggressively clearing street sewer pipes.

Ald. Raymond Lopez [15th] criticized the mayor for pushing for more city revenue to solve the flooding problems, and blamed the city’s 100-year-old sewer lines.

Lopez and five other South and Southwest side Aldermen sent Mayor Johnson a letter last week asking him to establish a rebate for homeowners who install flood-preventing backflow valves, which could cost as much as $50 million citywide.

Lopez wants the mayor to spend city money now to help residents clean up their rain-soaked basements, in anticipation of federal disaster funds that could take years to arrive from Washington D.C.

In 2011, Mayor Rahm Emanuel convinced the City Council to raise water and sewer rates by $120 a year for the average homeowner by doubling those rates over four years and locking in annual cost-of-living increases after that.

His plan was to replace all 900 miles of the city’s century-old water pipes and reline or replace 750 miles of 100-year-old sewer lines. Unfortunately, that never happened.

“I didn’t just raise the rates. I’m rebuilding the system,” Emanuel said then. “We will not have the city we want if we don’t keep the resources we have and invest in it.”

“It’s something that should be looked at and possibly mimicked if it leads to solving the problem,” said Rich Guidice, who ran the Office of Emergency Management and Communications under Emanuel. Later Guidice became Johnson’s first chief of staff.

“Of course, you’d have to re-establish a relationship with the federal government to help you out with that,” Guidice said. “The city obviously doesn’t have any money at the moment.”

The Albany Park neighborhood had chronic flooding problems until a $70 million underground pipeline was built. The one-mile tunnel is located 150-feet below Foster Ave. and runs east from Eugene Field Park to the North Shore Channel.

During heavy rains, the Albany Park pipeline moves excess water from the north branch of the Chicago River into the North Shore Channel, a drainage canal that runs from the Chicago River north to Wilmette in Lake Michigan. Since that was done, Albany Park has not had a flooding problem.

So, decades later, and after dozens of basement floods, what is a homeowner to do? The Home Front column has assembled the following flood-survival kit to help homeowners overcome the water in their basements:

- Before the flood hits, hire a professional home inspector to tour the interior of your basement. Ask the inspector to write a report on suggestions for water penetration prevention.

- Review your home’s gutter and downspout direction. Make sure your downspouts empty far away from your home. Do not let downspouts empty into your catch basin, which usually is near the house. This is especially true if your home was built after 1960.

Downspouts should be extended at least 10 feet away from your foundation and empty on a section of your lawn. Also check your neighbor’s downspouts to make sure they are not emptying close to your foundation.

- Owners of older homes often have stand pipes installed in original basement floor drains. Stand pipes usually are about four-foot tall, and pretty ugly, but they may

THE HISTORY OF THE LABOR MOVEMENT IN AMERICA THROUGH SONGS WITH CHRIS WALZ

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 24 AT 6:30 PM

Chris Walz

The labor movement has always produced great songs. Songs to motivate and inspire, as well as songs to commemorate and remember the past. Chris Walz, an educator at the Old Town School of Folk Music, will take us through a history of labor in America through the songs and the people who wrote and sang them. There will be familiar songs and some old songs that will be new to you.

HISTORY OF LAND SURVEYING & MAP MAKING IN CHICAGO

WITH DONALD AND TANYA SMITH

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 8 AT 6:30 PM

Donald and Tanya Smith, owners of the land surveying and map making company Greeley-Howard-Norlin & Smith, own, preserve, protect and maintain a large collection of historical documents dating back to the early 1800s.

Included in their collection are drawings and documents related to the legal career of President Abraham Lincoln, which are potentially the only remaining assemblage of these documents due to what was lost in the Great Chicago Fire in 1871.

Learn a brief history of how and why the land in the U.S. was originally divided and sold, the need to raise money after the Revolutionary War and Thomas Jefferson's idea to divide the land into squares.

Hear about the re-building of Chicago after the Great Chicago Fire, and Mr. Samuel S. Greeley, the founder of the Smith's family business.

Condo boards, management are fiduciaries, they should not act in own interest

Last month Adriana Foustanou published a nice article, "Budget fraud and reserve risk in Illinois HOAs; A crisis of transparency," which I enjoyed reading. I also enjoyed reading the response in the subsequent edition.

As Harris Meyer pointed out, not all condominium fiduciaries such as boards and management companies are doing a poor job. However, what your article pointed out is the potential for abuse that needs to be legislatively addressed.

Condominium board and management companies are fiduciaries. They should not be taking decisions based on their best interest, but that of the entire condominium associations and the owners. I suspect that many condominium board members realize this. Where things go wrong is when the fiduciaries use their power to pursue their own interests. The checks and balances that you find in the corporate world to protect against this are lacking in the condominium world. And this is where the legislature and courts need to step in.

There is a symbiotic relationship between the board and the external managers and advisors. The management company and the external advisors are hired by the board, and in many cases the president. In order to keep the source of revenue, they need to keep the president and the board happy. This creates a Madigan-style dynamic and potential for abuse.

At the same time, there is an abhorrent asymmetry in the rights of the unit owners. If a unit owner finds a violation of the Condominium Act or a fiduciary duty, that owner is probably not going to spend time and money asserting her rights against the board or the president who are defending themselves with the owner's money. Moreover, Cook County trial courts don't want to deal with these cases, so they regularly dismiss them.

As condo lawyers in Illinois know, a plaintiff does not receive careful consideration of her complaint unless she is willing to take it to the appellate level. There is a whole industry of advisors and contractors who realize this dynamic and are cashing in on it. I agree with Meyer that not all condominiums are managed poorly, but they are all vulnerable to this problem.

It's time for some legislative changes:

- All of the records of an association should be available to all unit owners except for records containing confidential or

Profit over patient welfare

Bob Zuley's coverage regarding the closure of Weiss Memorial Hospital was superb. It explained in detail how mismanagement and putting profit over patient welfare is eroding the healthcare system, not just in Chicago, but nationwide as venture capitalists merge clinics and hospitals and undermine the structure of medical facilities and the doctor-patient relationship. Capitalism should get nowhere near healthcare!

Jeremy McGuire

personal information. The people refusing access are fiduciaries of the people requesting access. They should not be hiding anything. The boards should also not be able to charge dissuasive fees for access to the records. All of the records should be saved digitally, so that there are no copying costs. The ability to charge fees is currently being abused by boards and their lawyers to dissuade the owners gaining access to the records.

- Boards should be required to engage law firms separate from the law firm that represents the association. If you have lived in a condo association for a while, you will know that the lawyers tend to represent the interests of the board and the president. Finding a law firm in Illinois that represents unit owners is difficult. That is because the condo lawyers in Illinois know that the money is in representing the board and the president. The board and president are paying the legal fees with the money of the owners.

- There needs to be greater turnover in the officers and directors of an association. As any Chicagoan will tell you, the longer a person is in power, the greater the likelihood of malfeasance. Five years is long enough. Then the person should be required to sit out for five years before serving again.

Once again, I express my appreciation to Ms. Foustanou for putting this issue out there and for Mr. Meyer for opining on it.

Lincoln Park's homeless ready for housing, not shelters

As the National Guard helps local police to clear out the tent cities in Washington, DC., Lincoln Park's homeless expressed little anxiety about it happening here.

"I'm not concerned about the federal government," said Frederick Calvin, 56, who has been living in a tent since April. Receiving bug spray from a Night Ministry van, he added, "I would not be shocked, nonplussed. It's the system that makes these camps."

The handsome African American who recently lost his tent when a quarreling neighbor set it on fire, believes shelters are not doing their job. "You should attempt to clear the camps. But, you need formidable housing, not [shelters.]"

Having struggled with addiction, incarceration, recovery, and sporadic homelessness, Calvin said overnight shelters have too many criteria and insufficient space. He continued, noting that staff often take advantage of their visitors, pilfering personal items or the best donations, leaving the dredges. For many, living independently out in the elements outranks dealing with shelter bureaucracy.

Calvin has a point. Enabling privacy, security, and varying levels of independence has been shown to help the homeless. A City study of 259 older homeless individuals found those who were provided rooms, food, and support services from April to September 2020 at Hotel 166, 166 E. Superior St., were 2.5 times less likely to contract COVID than those in traditional shelters.

Furthermore, unexpectedly, the Hotel 166 Study showed significant improvements in hypertension and glycemic control, and 51% of those temporarily housed successfully transitioned to longer-term housing.

The findings have influenced the City toward "non-congregant" – dorm-like – shelters that offer "wrap around" health and social services on-site.

"Our shelter is always full," said Peter Marchese, board president of North Side Housing and Supportive Services [NSHSS] and the leader of the City's first non-congregant, trauma-informed emergency shelter at 7464 N. Clark St.

City-funded, the City decides who is assigned to it. "The City is bringing in men directly off the streets – from the parks and inviting them from the encampments. Because they're coming from living outside, they're very grateful that they're living in the City's nicest shelter for men," Marchese said.

The shelter, a calm space with walls painted in muted green and blue, rounded edges, a common area with a television and wall fireplace, and no more than two to a bedroom, allows 70 men to rest from the constant guardedness required for outdoor living. Donations such as bedding from IKEA, bathroom fixtures from Kohler, and mattresses secured at a reduced price from Steinhafels help make the shelter special.

"It's easier to work with them, to get them started on a program with what they need," Marchese said. "They're dealing with economic hardship, mental and physical issues. There's a combination of services that we can provide to help [them] transition. It's exceeded our expectations for having guys from the encampments become comfortable with our space."

One such resident is Martin Bendick, 38, an old soul who is also a Philadelphia Eagles fan. A man who has seen it all, from prison to multiple shelters, he has found the time and space he needed since arriving last December. He understands the non-congregant shelter was built for this purpose, and it has helped prepare him to soon join family in Madison, WI.

Martin Bendick, 38, said the North Side Housing and Support Services shelter has provided the rest and support he needed to prepare for his next steps.

"People may perceive things one way, but you want people to sit down and see things more positive than negative, more pro than con," Bendick said as he warmly exchanged stories about his favorite sports legends.

In July, Mayor Brandon Johnson and the Dept. of Family and Support Services [DFSS] announced $40 million in capital improvement funding to modernize homeless shelter facilities throughout Chicago. It builds on a complementary $30 million in related investments by the Dept. of Housing. Cornerstone Community Outreach's [CCO] family shelter, the Sylvia Center, 4615 N. Clifton Ave., is one of seven shelters selected for upgrades and the only DFSS grant recipient on Chicago's North Side.

In January, as part of Chicago's One System Initiative, the City moved to a unified shelter access system, merging previously separate systems for new arrivals or existing residents. City- and State-funded shelters are open to anyone regardless of immigration status or length of time in Chicago. However, even as the influx of migrants has waned, shelter space – whether traditional or non-congregant – remains insufficient for those needing shelter.

Frederick Calvin lost his tent when a quarreling neighbor set it on fire.

In the City's annual Point-in-Time study, 7,452 people were identified as homeless the night of Jan. 23. Of these, 6,136 were sheltered with 1,316 residing in unsheltered locations. While the City is racing to improve the situation, it means many remain unhoused, sometimes by choice, living in tents or under viaducts in inclement weather.

The homeless use propane or other substances to cook food and keep warm. Fires have become a problem, particularly near or under the Wilson and Lawrence viaducts of Lake Shore Dr. Multiple events in the past few years are beginning to raise alarm.

"Throughout my service, I observed that residents' concerns about homeless encampments centered largely around safety—especially due to fires caused by exploding propane tanks," wrote former Ald. James Cappleman [46th] who served from 2011-2023. "These incidents often occurred when tents caught fire, posing serious risks. [Chicago Dept. of Transportation] assessed the two viaducts under Wilson and Lawrence and warned city officials via e-mail that continued fires could eventually require full reconstruction of both overpasses” due to weakening the structure through spalling (where chunks of concrete break off), cracking (due to thermal expansion), and color changes from extreme heat.

Cappleman added that the Chicago Fire Dept. noted that propane, being heavier than air, does not disperse and tends to sink into lower areas such as viaducts—making the use of propane tanks in these spaces particularly hazardous. One lit cigarette can trigger a big explosion.

The Chicago Police Dept., however, cannot search tents for propane tanks without a warrant, making it difficult to proactively prevent danger.

After a heavy August rain flooded her tent, a fresh-faced, blonde, blue-eyed young woman sat on the ground eating a sandwich. She shared her frustration - that the wind lifted her tent’s tarp in the middle of the night - and all the clean laundry she had just done got wet.

Having grown up on Chicago’s North Side, Rebecca (not her real name) had to flee quickly from an abusive relationship and has been living outdoors for more than a year.

She tried a few shelters but because of illness and a back injury, she said she found the shelters abusive and was kicked out of one after she was hospitalized.

Having called shelters daily, she repeatedly heard that no beds were available. Advised to try the suburbs, rural locations in Illinois, or out of state, she gave up trying as she had no transportation.

“They could get me there but could not [guarantee] transportation back,” said Rebecca. “One of the biggest obstacles is the City’s failure to provide transportation, and the communication is terrible,” she said. Rebecca is not ready to try again.

Stating that she does not use drugs, Rebecca shared that, “A lot of us are not contributors [to the problem.] We’re out here doing better [than the social workers] – where to eat, what kind of solutions might help – than what is being offered.”

Helping the homeless costs money, lots of it

Volunteers of America drops The Haven; Cornerstone taking over at Diplomat Hotel shelter

BY JANE LAWICKI

Chicago's Dept. of Housing [DOH] will have spent $14 million by early 2026 to purchase and renovate the former Diplomat Hotel, 5230 N. Lincoln, into The Haven, a 37-unit stabilization housing project.

Following the success of the City's COVID-era study showing significant outcomes for the unhoused when provided with greater privacy along with on-site medical and social services, DOH is leveraging the City's Shelter Acquisition Rehabilitation Program with support from Dept. of Family and Support Services [DFSS], $5 million in TIF money, and Chicago Recovery Plan bonds for The Haven.

These funds do not include the annual costs for running the shelter as the City faces a $1.1 billion shortfall in its 2026 budget - not including the CTA and Chicago Public Schools budget shortfalls.

"Do you want to solve homelessness or just not see it," asked Ald. Andre Vasquez [40th] as he opened a community meeting on Aug.19 at Swedish Covenant Hospital. With fewer than 50 people in attendance, some area residents complained the update event was not sufficiently promoted.

The 60-minute meeting included presentations from DOH, DFSS, Cornerstone Community Outreach [CCO], Gensler design, and Executive Construction. Speakers explained the project's delay was caused by the building's structural challenges and fiscal constraints.

"Funding for operations were deleted from the budget," Vasquez said, explaining that the designated shelter operator, Volunteers of America [VOA], no longer had the money. The initial vision for a behavioral health pilot was revised to focus on increasing the City's non-congregant, or dorm-like, shelter space.

The Haven will house up to 50 adult men in 37 rooms with private baths, including one-third that could be double occupancy. It will offer case and property management on-site, referrals to other clinical and recovery services, and 24/7 security.

CCO's Executive Director Andrew Winter expressed excitement that with 35 years of experience, CCO has been named The Haven's new operator.

According to nonprofit evaluator Charity Navigator, CCO holds its highest "four-star" ranking. With a budget ranging from $4 to $5 million annually for operating four distinct shelter programs in Uptown, CCO reported in 2022 a surplus of $536,331 and in 2023 a shortfall of $780,481. In 2025, of the 318 men, families, and children CCO supports, 30% have successfully moved from shelters to housing.

"Cornerstone has stepped in to run the project, and I think that this is a good thing," said Sofia Zneimer, a lawyer who lives in the 40th Ward. "Cornerstone has been around in Chicago for years and already runs shelters for families and men with support from the DFSS. They do care, and don't have the controversy like one of the VOA-affiliated organizations."

Through a pending arrangement, the City also intends to sell the building, purchased for $2.9 million in 2024, to CCO for $1 subject to a regulatory agreement governing property use, a mortgage to secure CCO's performance, and repayment of City funds under a failure to perform. CCO plans to move operations to The Haven from its existing Epworth Shelter, 5253 N. Kenmore Ave., which houses 65 single men nightly.

ing and operate the building as non-congregate shelter, transitional housing, permanent supportive housing, or affordable housing in alignment with DOH's mission and vision.

"The North Side shelters - we're looking at affordability everywhere in the city," explained Cmsr. Lissette Castañeda. "We're working with DFSS to ensure

Through a pending arrangement, the City also intends to sell the building, purchased for $2.9 million in 2024, to CCO for $1 subject to a regulatory agreement governing property use, a mortgage to secure CCO's performance, and repayment of City funds under a failure to perform.

A DFSS-delegated agency since 1989, CCO must also apply for a special use permit for on-site services at The Haven.

According to the DOH, as with similar agreements for North Side Housing and Supportive Services, the City's first non-congregant shelter at 7464 N. Clark St. and with similar future locations, DOH agreements require a grantee to operate the related building as non-congregate shelter for the 15 years following construction completion.

The regulatory agreement sets a period of an additional 30 years following the grant agreement term for a total of 45 years. During the regulatory agreement term, the grantee is required to maintain ownership of the build-that. We're the first funders that allow our [shelter] operators to partner with and find support in other places. We're in there with you... Go forth and try to leverage other [financial] sources," she said.

Dan Sheehan and other neighbors of The Haven insist they want to help the homeless, but many expressed concerns at The Haven's high cost and anxiety about how it might change the neighborhood. They are also frustrated that the initial project was simply announced with little or no constituent input.

"The last few years people who lived paycheck to paycheck - taxicab drivers, etc. used to live at the Diplomat Hotel. They kicked out these folks so that the homeless could live there?" asked Sheehan.

As a retired city worker and long-term Arcadia Terrace resident, Sheehan said he may have to move because his taxes have gone up so much.

"We're not only paying to build it, we're paying Cornerstone - through our taxes - to fund the service... With the City's $1.2 billion shortfall in 2026 and $500 million and pension sweetener for police and fire down the road, the regressive socialists could care less if they bankrupt the city," Sheehan said.

"To anyone who asks why are our costs so high? What are we paying for? We are paying for 30 years of affordability, paying for a tracking system, management, utilities assigned," said Cmsr. Castañeda. "We're focused on ensuring affordability for families for years to come. We're talking about long-term sustainability and affordability - affordable housing for long run. At the end, it's an investment."

Still, as with any investment, the funders now seek positive returns. Time will tell if this was money well spent.

This work was made possible in part by funding from the Alliance Matters campaign, an initiative of Chicago Independent Media Alliance (CIMA) and the Field Foundation.

Police foundation highlights officer's courage in Logan Square tragedy, persistence in Rogers Park serial rapist case

BY CWBCHICAGO

The Chicago Police Memorial Foundation is recognizing several officers for their bravery and determination in two recent high-profile cases, underscoring both the life-or-death emergencies and the painstaking investigations that define police work.

Among the honorees is Field Training Officer Larry Branch Jr., who confronted a nightmarish scene in Local Square July 4. Dispatched to handle a "person with a knife" call, Branch and fellow officers arrived in the 3600 block of W. Palmer St. to see flames ripping through a home while a child screamed for help from a basement window. Nearby, 46-year-old Wendy Tolbert allegedly walked outside with a bloodied knife in her hand.

The officers forced their way inside the burning house, where they found two children suffering from stab wounds. Branch began speaking with one of the children and learned that a 4-year-old was still trapped inside.

"Branch started talking to one of these children and learned that there was [a] 4-year-old child still inside the residence," the memorial foundation said. "Without regard for his own safety, Officer Branch smashed out a basement window and entered the inferno. He located the child and removed him from the building."

Branch performed CPR on 4-year-old Jordan Walker until paramedics arrived. Despite his efforts, Jordan later died from multiple stab wounds. Prosecutors allege Tolbert attacked her children after claiming they were possessed. She is charged with murder, arson, and other felonies.

North Side serial assault case

The foundation also honored a team of officers in the Rogers Park District who identified, tracked and arrested 19-year-old Tymarion Averhart, accused of sexually assaulting two women and committing residential burglaries in a string of crimes that started late last year.

According to the memorial foundation, the team spent weeks "conducting surveillance, pro-

CFO sentenced to federal prison for embezzling $510,000

The former Chief Financial Officer of a staffing firm has been sentenced to more than two years in federal prison for embezzling more than $510,000 from the firm.

Charles Nelson misappropriated the money in 2018 and 2019 while working in the firm's Chicago office. Nelson made a series of unauthorized credit card purchases for his personal benefit, initially on meals and travel and later on jewelry, gold, and renovations of his personal residence.

Nelson used the fraud proceeds to purchase many extravagant items, including Cartier and Rolex watches, a gold and diamond bracelet, and high-end appliances for his home. Nelson executed the fraud scheme by circumventing multiple corporate controls over expenditures.

Nelson, 67, pleaded guilty last year to a federal wire fraud charge.

Man charged with DUI Reckless Homicide of his passenger

Jon Walker, 40, of the 7600 block of S. Calumet Ave., was charged with one felony count – Aggravated DUI/Accident/Death

And one felony count – Reckless Homicide on Aug. 22.

Chicago police and the U.S. Marshals Great Lakes Regional Fugitive Task Force arrested Walker Aug. 19, in the 700 block of E. 111th St. He was identified as the offender who, on April 19, was driving while intoxicated in the 100 block of E. Superior St., when he crashed into a building. A 40-year-old male passenger in the offender's vehicle was killed.

The offender was placed into custody and charged accordingly.

Killer gets 25 years for gunning down 9-year-old while trying to kill someone else

A man who prosecutors said "went hunting" for a victim before gunning down a 9-year-old boy on the Near North Side five years ago has been sentenced to 25 years in prison.

Darrell Johnson, 44, pleaded guilty Aug. 21 to one count of murder in exchange for the sentence from Judge Peggy Chiampias. By law, Johnson must serve the entire sentence, though the five years he has already spent in custody will be credited.

At about 6:30 p.m. July 31, 2020, 9-year-old Janari Ricks was in the 500 block of W. Locust St., shaking hands with a neighbor believed to be Johnson's intended target, when Johnson began shooting, prosecutors said. Surveillance video allegedly showed Johnson walking down an alley, peering through a fence, and then firing six shots.

Other cameras recorded Janari running before collapsing from his injuries. He died shortly afterward.

During a press conference after the killing, Ald. Walter Burnett Jr. [27th] said the families involved had "known each other for over 50 years."

Many witnesses identified Johnson, including some who noticed the gunman limping away from the scene. Prosecutors said Johnson walks with a limp due to a gunshot wound that he received years ago. Prosecutors said he fled in his girlfriend's Nissan Altima. Police arrested him as he stepped into the same car on the South Side two days after the murder.

Court records show Johnson had a history of violent crime. He was convicted of aggravated battery causing great bodily harm in 2002 and of vehicular hijacking and a gun offense in 2005.

Talk of gang affiliation preceded shooting in Rogers Park

A 19-year-old man was wounded in a possibly gang-related shooting in Rogers Park Aug. 22.

Chicago police said the victim was outside in the 6500 block of N. Ashland Ave. when a white car pulled up around 2:45 a.m. Witnesses reported hearing talk about gang affiliation moments before someone fired shots from the vehicle. The car reportedly sped north on Ashland after the shooting.

The victim, shot in both thighs, was transported to St. Francis Hospital in Evanston, where he was listed in fair condition.

Saturday's victim is the 15th person shot in the neighborhood this year, exactly matching 2024's year-to-date total. But the figure remains well below 2023, when 28 people had been shot by late August. This year is also trending better than 2022 and 2021, which saw 19 and 17 victims, respectively.

Man sentenced to 16 years for dealing over a dozen firearms

A Chicago man has been sentenced to more than 16 years in federal prison for unlawfully dealing more than a dozen firearms.

In 2020 and 2021, Johnathan Burgos, 33, illegally sold 14 firearms and multiple large-capacity magazines to an individual who was surreptitiously working on behalf of the FBI.

The sales involved several stolen handguns, a gun with an obliterated serial number, and a rifle. During most of the transactions, Burgos was on either parole or bond with electronic monitoring from the Illinois Dept. of Corrections for firearm cases in state court.

Burgos pleaded guilty earlier this year to federal firearm charges. On Aug. 15, U.S. District Judge Steven C. Seeger sentenced Burgos to 16 years and eight months in federal prison.

Judge gives 12 years to man linked by DNA to Lakeview carjacking

A man who carjacked a woman in Lakeview while on parole for seven armed robberies has been handed a 12-year prison sentence.

Marqese Lance

Around 5:20 p.m. on February 9, 2021, a 31-year-old woman was waiting for a parking spot to open in a residential driveway in the 600 block of W. Irving Park Rd. when Marqese Lance allegedly ordered her out of her black Mercedes.

Prosecutors said Lance, 29, approached the woman's passenger window, pressed a handgun against the glass, and motioned for her to get out. The woman complied, and Lance sped away, crashing into a fence on Frontier Ave. before heading toward Lake Shore Dr.

Police recovered the stolen Mercedes a few days later. Inside, investigators found items that did not belong to the victim, including a gaiter-style face mask. DNA tests linked the mask to Lance, who was charged after the lab results came back a year after the carjacking.

Court records show that Lance was already a convicted armed robber at the time. In 2013, he received seven concurrent 13½-year prison terms for armed robberies. He was out on parole for those crimes when the Lakeview carjacking happened.

Now, Lance has pleaded guilty to aggravated vehicular hijacking with a weapon. Judge Steven Watkins sentenced him to 12 years, but the term will be reduced to six years for good behavior. Lance also received 1,230 days of credit for time spent in Cook County Jail. His current parole date is Feb. 28, 2028.

Man accused of groping women at North Side park is released to await trial

Two weeks after officials issued a warning about a man following and inappropriately touching women at a North Side park, prosecutors have filed charges in the case. But, because he is not charged with a detainable offense, prosecutors did not ask a judge to keep him in custody.

Noaman Patel

Noaman Patel, 22, of the 6300 block of N. Artesian, is charged with three counts of aggravated battery in a public place, allegations stemming from three separate incidents this month, including two at the West Ridge Nature Preserve.

Aggravated battery in a public place is not a detainable charge under the cashless bail provisions of Illinois' SAFE-T Act, according to materials published by the 17th Judicial Circuit Court and a DuPage County judge.

According to police and court filings, the first assault occurred at the nature preserve, 5801 N. Western Ave., around 10:15 a.m. Aug. 4. A 53-year-old woman was walking in the park when a man came up from behind, grabbed her buttocks, and then fled on foot.

Two days later, on the morning of Aug. 6, a 33-year-old woman reported being struck on the buttocks while walking in the preserve. She ran away, yelling for help as the man briefly followed her before breaking off and leaving the park, according to an initial police report.

The third incident came on Aug. 14, when a 29-year-old woman reported that a man grabbed her buttocks in the 6100 block of N. Maplewood Ave.

Chicago cops arrested Patel this week, and he appeared before Judge James Murphy III on Thursday. Murphy released him with orders to stay away from the victims.

Woman gets 7 years for citywide stabbing spree

A Chicago woman who slashed and stabbed strangers in a string of random attacks across the city will serve a seven-year sentence after pleading guilty to multiple felony charges.

Court records show Shaynella Williams, 35, pleaded guilty to five counts of aggravated battery stemming from a series of unprovoked stabbings in 2022 and 2023. The cases were handled by three different judges, resulting in an effective sentence of five years in prison plus a consecutive two-year term.

The first attack linked to Williams happened on June 18, 2022, when a woman walking home from the beach was suddenly slashed on her arm in the 1700 block of W. North Ave.

Prosecutors said Williams parked her red Kia across the street, crossed over, and made a swiping motion at the unsuspecting victim. The woman required 13 stitches to close the wound. Police tracked Williams down through the Kia's license plate, but she was released pretrial after paying a $2,000 bail deposit.

While on bail, prosecutors said, Williams struck again. On the afternoon of Jan. 8, 2023, she allegedly carried out a spree of random stabbings

Judge detains 5 charged with having guns during River North traffic stop; another judge lets them free

A routine traffic stop by Cook County Sheriff's Police officers recently resulted in the arrests of five men for illegally possessing firearms, the agency said Aug. 19. But, while a judge ordered all five men detained on the felony charges, court records show a different judge released all of them less than a week later.

It all started when sheriff's police officers tried to pull over a red Chevy Impala for having illegally tinted windows as it traveled through River North around 5:16 p.m. Aug. 9, according to a sheriff's office spokesperson. They said the car sped away and evaded officers before it eventually stopped in an alley in the 500 block of N. La Salle Dr.

Officers ordered the occupants out, searched them, and searched the vehicle.

Four of the men were armed with loaded 9mm handguns, two of which had extended magazines, the sheriff's office said. A fifth firearm, a .40-caliber pistol with an extended magazine holding 21 rounds, was allegedly found under the front passenger seat. In total, officers recovered five guns, 87 rounds of ammunition, and 24 grams of cannabis, according to the sheriff's office.

The agency identified the men as 19-year-old Zion Bellamy, Zavion Bellamy, 20, Trajhan Young, 22, Adayveon Young, 18, and Jermel Rogers, 18. None of them has a license to own or carry firearms in Illinois, according to the allegations.

Sheriff's officials said Zavion Bellamy and Adayveon Young were each armed with loaded 9mm handguns equipped with extended magazines, and Zion Bellamy and Jermel Rogers were armed with loaded 9mm firearms with standard magazines. Trajhan Young allegedly claimed ownership of the handgun found under the seat.

Prosecutors charged each man with unlawful possession of a weapon in a vehicle. Zion Bellamy was also charged with fleeing and eluding, unlawful possession of cannabis by a driver, and cited for the tinted windows. Rogers faces an additional charge of illegal cannabis possession by a passenger.

On Aug. 10, prosecutors asked Judge Antara Rivera to detail all five men and she agreed they should be held pending trial, according to court records. However, Judge Robert Kuzas released all five men from custody five days later.

The agency charged with overseeing policing in Chicago, the Community Commission for Public Safety and Accountability [CCPSA], is preparing to place limitations on the kinds of traffic stops CPD officers are allowed to perform. The panel has already said that a majority of its members are prepared to order the city's police force to stop performing traffic stops for illegal window tints.

The CCPSA has no authority over any agency other than CPD, including the sheriff's police.

Gunshot victim flees to CTA platform in Rogers Park

A 32-year-old man fled onto the Howard CTA platform after being shot nearby on Aug. 24, witnesses said.

Officers responded around 10:23 p.m. to a call of a person shot in the 7500 block of N. Ashland Ave. They found the man on the platform with a gunshot wound to his mouth. A blood trail stretched from the street into the train station, where he was found.

Chicago Fire Dept. paramedics treated him at the scene before taking him to St. Francis Hospital, where he was listed in fair condition. The victim was unable to provide officers with further details, according to CPD.

Officers were told to be on the lookout for a group of four people who left the area, all Black males between 17 and 20 years old, 5 feet 7 inches to 6 feet tall. A witness reported that one was wearing a red mask, another a black shirt, and another a white shirt.

Sunday's attack pushed Rogers Park's shooting total for 2025 to 16 victims. That is one more than the year-to-date count in 2024. But this year's total remains well below 2023, when 28 people were shot through late August. The neighborhood also saw higher tallies in 2022 and 2021, with 19 and 17 victims by this time

In Illinois, e-bikes 'more equal' than mopeds

E-bikes now legally the same as Schwinn pedal bicycle

BY PETER VON BUOL

Electronic motorized bikes [e-bikes] and scooters have become the menace of Chicago's sidewalks, crosswalks and vehicle lanes, darting in and out of traffic and ignoring traffic laws in challenging pedestrians, drivers and the disabled to games of chicken.

But now they've gotten the state-sanctioned privilege to be even more reckless, aggressive and dangerous. They are now more equal than even their sister-vehicles, mopeds.

The modern concept of special privileges for some classes of people arose from George Orwell's seminal book Animal Farm (1945) where the world first heard that, "All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others."

The term "Four legs good, two legs better!" is a modified propaganda slogan used by the ruling pigs in Animal Farm to signify their complete betrayal of their core principles. Initially, the slogan was "Four legs good, two legs bad" to rally animals against humans, but the pigs, who eventually walk on two legs, change it to "Four legs good, two legs better!" to justify their own superiority and control.

For Chicago's radical biking activists, it's "Four wheels good, two wheels better."

Gov. J.B. Pritzker on Aug. 1 signed SB2285 which expanded the legal definition of bicycles to include motorized e-bikes, despite these motorized vehicles having the ability to travel at speeds up to and over 30 mph.

Introduced by State Sen. Mike Simmons [7th] earlier this year, SB2285 had been supported by the state's powerful bicycle special interest groups. The legislation ensures the riders of these motorized e-bikes will continue to be treated the same under the law as those who ride bicycles powered by humans and foot pedals.

The new state statute exempts e-bike riders from having a valid driver's license,

If you're looking for signs of privilege, these two recently installed sign on Granville (6200 north) are it. This sign allows bikers and e-bikers to use public roadways that are now denied to other vehicles.

The new state statute exempts e-bike riders from having a valid driver's license, vehicle insurance, a license plate or a city sticker. These riders also have the privilege of riding in the city of Chicago's bike lanes at two to three times the speed as manually powered bikers.

vehicle insurance, a license plate or a city sticker. These riders also have the privilege of riding in the city of Chicago's bike lanes at two to three times the speed as manually powered bikers.

Similar vehicles known as mopeds, which are also two- or three-wheeled vehicles with pedals but with an internal combustion engine, are legally considered to be motorcycles. These bikes have a mandated top speed of 30 mph.

Because they are considered to be motorcycles, moped riders are therefore required to travel in traffic lanes with cars, buses and trucks, and they must follow the same rules of the road as those who drive a vehicle. Moped riders must have a valid driver's license, vehicle insurance, a license plate and a city sticker (where required).

But SB2285 is not the only recent bike-themed piece of legislation introduced by Simmons.

In Feb. 2025, Simmons introduced SB2111, a bill which would grant those riding what the state of Illinois considers to be a "bicycle" the privilege to not have to stop at a stop sign or stop light. Popularly known as the "Idaho Stop" after the state which first legalized the practice, if the legislation passes, bicyclists would be granted the special privilege of riding through intersections, even though there is a stop sign or light, or yield sign. Bikes and e-bikes also have the privilege of illegally riding against the flow of traffic on one way streets.

In June, that bill was referred to the House rules committee. While vocal supporters claim the adoption of an "Idaho Stop" has contributed to a safer riding environment because bike riders can maintain their momentum, very few traffic studies of the matter have been conducted. Most data was collected in less densely-populated areas. Bike lobbyists throughout the country cite the same handful of questionable studies.

If passed and signed into law, SB2111 would create a privileged category for cyclists and e-bikers who don't have to obey Illinois' established traffic laws.

Unlike pedestrians and vehicles powered by internal-combustion engines who must stop at stop signs or lights, those riding bicycles and e-bikes would have the legal privilege to run red lights and stop signs at intersections, and drive counter to traffic on one-way streets.

Show us the money

On Aug. 31, the Active Transportation Alliance [ATA] will hold its annual Bike the Drive event. Since 2002, the city of Chicago has given the politically-powerful and well-connected ATA the exclusive privileged use of all eight lanes of Lake Shore Dr. to fundraise for the organization.

For nearly five hours, the organization is given exclusive control of the eight-lane highway as an opportunity to collect revenue from those who want to experience the novelty of riding a bicycle on the city highway. Adult non-ATA members will be charged $78. Adult ATA members are charged $68. Children are charged $18.

The organization also provides a special Ultimate Bike the Drive Package. Non-members are charged $104 and ATA members are charged $94. The money generated from the annual event supports the organization's year-round lobbying efforts.

Feds create new section to prosecute criminal healthcare fraud

BY CWBCHICAGO

On Aug. 22, Andrew S. Boutros, U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Illinois, announced the creation of a new section within the Office's Criminal Division dedicated to the prosecution of healthcare fraud, which is among the Department of Justice's [DOJ] top fraud enforcement priorities and the first time the Office has created such a section.

The new Healthcare Fraud Section [HFS] will consist of six federal prosecutors and will be led by Heidi Manschreck, who will serve as the inaugural Section Chief, and Prashant Kolluri, as the Section's inaugural Deputy Chief. Both prosecutors have dozens of years of experience investigating and prosecuting healthcare fraud cases.

Assistant U.S. Attorneys Erin Kelly, Kate McClelland, Alejandro G. Ortega, and Kristin Pinkston have also been assigned to the Section full time.

The work of this new section will be in addition to the healthcare fraud-related matters in this district that are being handled by the HFS Strike Force, which is part of the Fraud Section of the DOJ's Criminal Division. The Strike Force, which is housed in the Chicago U.S. Attorney's Office, is led locally by Assistant Chief Patrick M. Mott.

The new HFS will be tasked with prosecuting defendants in all types of healthcare fraud, such as false and fraudulent claims submitted by transnational criminal organizations to America's health insurance programs; upcoding and unbundling schemes; scams by providers and individuals against Medicare and Medicaid; fraudulent billing; and illegal kickbacks, among many other healthcare-related frauds and schemes.

"Every year, healthcare fraud causes billions of dollars in losses to the federal government and private insurers and siphons off hard-earned tax dollars meant to provide care for people in need," said Boutros. "My Office has charged nearly $2 billion in healthcare fraud schemes involving alleged criminal conduct that has stretched across the country, and even transnationally."

The new section hopes to bring greater focus, efficiency, and impact to efforts which often involves the exploitation of patients through unnecessary and/or unsafe medical tests and procedures.

Boutros acknowledged the cooperation of the HFS's investigative partners, including the FBI, DEA, U.S. Dept. of Health and Human Services Office of Inspector General, U.S. Dept. of Labor's Office of Inspector General, U.S. Food and Drug Admin., U.S. Postal Inspection Service, and other federal, state, and local agencies.

Since March 2007, this program, currently comprised of nine strike forces op-

Driehaus Museum Tiffany Lamp show opens Sept. 12

Tiffany-related workshops

The Driehaus Museum has announced their next show, Tiffany Lamps: Beyond the Shade, an exhibition illuminating the volume and breadth of Louis C. Tiffany's vast artistic production.

From the 1890s through the 1920s, Tiffany Studios created a captivating range of decorative lighting fixtures that embraced the technological shift from oil lamps to electricity and simultaneously met the styles and tastes of 19th and 20th century consumers.

Drawn from the expansive collections of the Museum and the private art collection of Richard H. Driehaus (now the Art Exhibition Lending Foundation), the exhibition explores how the artisans at Tiffany Studios used a range of materials — including bronze, enamel, ceramic, and glass—to bring Tiffany's innovative lighting designs to life.

Building on past exhibitions such as Eternal Light: The Sacred Stained-Glass Windows of Louis Comfort Tiffany (2019-2020) and Louis Comfort Tiffany: Treasures from the Driehaus Collection (2015), Tiffany: Beyond the Shade expands the narrative of Tiffany lamps beyond their iconic glass shades.

In addition to presenting a range of lamp types and designs, the exhibition will include a selection of decorative objects produced by Tiffany Studios, such as Favrile glass and ceramic vases, enamel and bronze boxes, and a leaded-glass fire screen.

The exhibition also includes noteworthy works never before exhibited at the Driehaus Museum, including a table lamp with an enameled base and a monumental bronze and Favrile glass chandelier.

Organized by guest curator Alexandra M. Ruggiero, Tiffany Lamps: Beyond the Shade will be on view at the Driehaus Museum, 50 E. Erie St. from Sept. 12, to March 15, 2026. The Museum encompasses two historic landmark buildings, the 1883 Nickerson Mansion and the 1926 Murphy Auditorium.

Uptown Theater 100th Anniversary portrait taken

On Saturday, Aug. 16, members of the Uptown community showed up for an Uptown Community Portrait in front of the Uptown Theater. Friends and neighbors gathered to capture a moment in history—standing shoulder to shoulder on Broadway. The portrait was done in honor of the theater’s 100th anniversary.

The effort was a call back to early community portrait photos that were taken over the years. The last one was taken in 2005.

The Uptown Theatre was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1986 and was designated a Chicago Landmark in 1991.

It seemed like a nice enough day for a boat trip along the Chicago River.

A bright pink, rented kayak in tow, local Cindy Juhasz took to the water with her husband and friend last year. It’s something they did often, but this time was different.

“We were on the river and we heard music, and we all got goosebumps and we’re like, ‘What is this?’” Juhasz says. “We literally followed the sound, and we couldn’t believe what we were seeing.”

In front of them was a large dolphin—a Floating dolphins, which in a maritime context, are man-made structures used to guide, berth, or moor ships, particularly where extending the shore is impractical.

On top of the dolphin: a full band.

“It’s about, I dunno, eight feet up? And then you get one guy in the boat, one guy on the ladder, one guy on top receiving, and then pass the gear up,” says dolphin-stage brainchild Ben Kinsinger.

‘Just a Random Bridge’

Kinsinger’s “sad cowboy song” group, Lawrence Tome, has been hosting what he calls “secret river shows” for several years, just west of Western Ave., below the Belmont Ave. Bridge over the river. Discoverable by latitude and longitude coordinates, the shows have grown from a few friend-fans to a venue of sorts where music acts across genres appear.

The secret is out, free river shows are being played on the Chicago River west of Western Ave., below the Belmont Ave. Bridge.

crowd of folks that are 20, 30 feet out in front of you and there’s a body of water in between. At one of these shows, there’s probably 30-plus kayaker/canoe people out on the water, and other bigger boats,” Kinsinger says. “And it’s surreal. It’s just a random bridge that nothing ever happens at, and suddenly it’s filled with hundreds of people.”

Kinsinger happened upon the river-crossing bridge and underpass maybe four years ago and, like a true artist, thought: Why not?

The shows are collecting community with every gig, Chicagoan Sata Geist says: All sorts of folks show up; an artist has painted a mural on the dolphin; even a barber makes the occasional appearance and offers haircuts (just don’t bob your head too much, OK?)

“I think of it as sort of an important third space. You can kind of always count on there being a secret river show over any weekend in the summer now. And if you go, there are going to be friends there and cool bands ... it just feels like this really special part of the community that you can rely on now,” says Geist.

Creative Care for a River

Over a century ago, Chicago used the river as a means of runoff. Around 1900, the river’s flow was reversed to mitigate environmental impacts and sewage backing up into homes, especially during periods of rain.

“In the city, it’s like, ‘Don’t get in the river. It’s gross.’ But it’s not,” Kinsinger says. “I love the river ... It still has that desire, I feel, to be just a natural river and it has the possibility of doing it, if we can get people organized around caring.”

Next up, Lawrence Tome will do that the way it knows best, but better: through a river band parade with a slew of performers,

German-American Fest returns to Lincoln Square for 103rd year

The United German American Societies of Greater Chicago, the parent organization for over 50 German American organizations in Chicago, will be hosting the 59th Von Steuben Parade 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6, on Lincoln Ave. from Irving Park Rd. to Sunnyside Ave.

The Von Steuben Parade is named after Friederich Wilhelm von Steuben, originally from Magdeburg, Prussia (now Germany), who was Inspector General under George Washington during the Revolutionary War.

In 1777, Von Steuben went to Paris to meet America’s Ambassador to France Benjamin Franklin to offer them his military services. The Continental Congress, much impressed by Von Steuben’s title and his refusal to accept any salary while in service, immediately sent him to George Washington at Valley Forge.

Von Steuben had an illustrious military career and with his expertise joined in the war efforts in the American colonies. He was one of Washington’s most trusted generals. A masterful military tactician, he trained countless American regiments — despite not speaking any English and having to rely on an interpreter.

The Von Steuben Parade showcases the many German cultural Clubs and Organizations in the greater Chicago area, including musicians, dancers and choral groups.

The parade will be part of the 103rd Anniversary of German American Fest, one of the oldest cultural festivals in Chicago.

The free festival takes place Friday, through Sunday, Sept. 5, 6 and 7, on Lincoln Ave., between Sunnyside and Wilson avenues, centered across from the Old Town School of Music.

The German Day Assoc. was founded in 1920 by dedicated Germans wishing to promote the usage and continuance of the German language, customs and songs in Chicago. At that time the Association became the umbrella organization for all of the German Organizations under the name of the United German American Societies of Greater Chicago.

The festival helps fund the continued education of youth and traditional culture. The location of the German-American Day celebration has changed several times over the years, from Riverview Park, Saint Paul Woods, Navy Pier, Schwaben Center, and Grant Park to Lincoln Square for the last 26 years.

Traditional local singing and dancing groups will perform on Saturday after the parade and on Sunday at 2 p.m. Groups will include the German American Children’s Chorus of Chicago, the Heimat und Trachten Verein Edelweiss, and the Rheinischer Karneval Verein Chicago -Fanfare.

 PUBLIC NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to a Judgment of Foreclosure and Sale entered in the above cause on July 14, 2025, an agent for The Judicial Sales Corporation, will at 10:30 AM on September 15, 2025, at The Judicial Sales Corporation, One South Wacker, 1st Floor Suite 35R, Chicago, IL, 60606, sell at public in-person sale to the highest bidder, as set forth below, the following described real estate:
 Commonly known as 1904 W BERWYN AVE, CHICAGO, IL 60640
 Property Index No. 14-07-216-021-0000
 The real estate is improved with a commercial property.
 Sale terms: 25% down of the highest bid by certified funds at the close of the sale payable to The Judicial Sales Corporation. No third party checks will be accepted. The balance, in certified funds or wire transfer, is due within twenty-four (24) hours. The subject property is subject to general real estate taxes, special assessments, or special taxes levied against said real estate and is offered for sale without any representation as to quality or quantity of title and without recourse to Plaintiff and in "AS IS" condition. The sale is further subject to confirmation by the court.
 Upon payment in full of the amount bid, the purchaser will receive a Certificate of Sale that will entitle the purchaser to a deed to the real estate after confirmation of the sale.
 The property will NOT be open for inspection and plaintiff makes no representation as to the condition of the property. Prospective bidders are admonished to check the court file to verify all information.
 If this property is a condominium unit, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale, other than a mortgagee, shall pay the assessments and the legal fees required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/9(g)(1) and (g)(4). If this property is a condominium unit which is part of a common interest community, the purchaser of the unit at the foreclosure sale other than a mortgagee shall pay the assessments required by The Condominium Property Act, 765 ILCS 605/18.5(g-1).
 IF YOU ARE THE MORTGAGOR (HOMEOWNER), YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO REMAIN IN POSSESSION FOR 30 DAYS AFTER ENTRY OF AN ORDER OF POSSESSION, IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 15-1701(C) OF THE ILLINOIS MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE LAW.
 You will need a photo identification issued by a government agency (driver's license, passport, etc.) in order to gain entry into our building and the foreclosure sale room in Cook County and the same identification for sales held at other county venues where The Judicial Sales Corporation conducts foreclosure sales.

WATER from p. 5

prevent floor-drain water from overflowing into the basement if the city sewer line is overwhelmed in a downpour.

- Buy sewer back-up insurance, which adds about $200 a year to the standard home-insurance policy premium.
- Sump-pump inspection. Make sure your sump pump is working, or install a new one with a battery back-up for a cost of about $200.
- Foundation cracks. Search for any cracks in your foundation and hire a professional foundation-repair contractor to make hydro-cement repairs. Cost $750 to $1,500.
- Install a power check valve between the main city sanitary sewer pipe and your house. Estimated cost $6,000 to $16,000. A check valve prevents city sewer water from backing up through the city sewer line into the basement floor drains inside your house, but allows home sewer water drain out.
- Install interior drain tile around the perimeter of your basement walls. This is a costly project that can run $15,000 to $20,000 or more.

One Northwest Side homeowner who grew tired of a wet basement called a major waterproofing company for an inspection and analysis.

The company's Rolls-Royce package proposal called for a long list of improvements, including demolition of soggy drywall, and installation of costly drain tile.

The package also included a polyurethane concrete raising, demolition of a shower and shower base, wall bracing, a new battery-powered sump pump with discharge piping to the city sewer, and complete gutter and downspout replacement.

In 2024, the homeowner paid a whopping $23,029 for the complete waterproofing package, which is under warranty.

Ironically, her basement flooded again a couple of weeks ago causing an estimated $17,000 in damage. She filed an insurance claim because the home is protected by sewer back-up insurance.

The homeowner is waiting for a warranty response from the waterproofing company. A courtesy inspection is scheduled for next week.

$25K watch stolen in Facebook Marketplace robbery

BY CWBCHICAGO

It is one of the new digital ways to get yourself robbed these days, by putting something up for sale on Facebook Marketplace... A Facebook Marketplace meet-up in a luxury downtown condo lobby ended with a $25,000 watch and another item gone.

The story serves as another warning about the risks associated with online sales in Chicago.

Police said the victim, who was trying to sell the watch, arranged to meet two men in the lobby of his building in the 200 block of N. Harbor Dr. on July 27.

The men arrived and examined the watch and a second item for 15 to 20 minutes. Then, without warning, both bolted down the driveway and around the corner with the valuables, according to officials.

The victim gave chase, but one of the men allegedly implied he had a weapon, forcing him to back off.

Cook County Crime Stoppers is now offering a cash reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the indictment or arrest of the robbers.

Tipsters can remain anonymous while still being eligible for the reward by calling 800-535-7867 or writing TIPS@CookCountyCrimeStoppers.org. Refer to case #JJ-351155.

Robberies linked to online meet-ups are not unusual in Chicago. Police have reported hundreds of such cases in recent years, and CPD has released dozens of community alerts urging buyers and sellers to be cautious.

In some cases, victims have been robbed of the cash they brought to complete purchases. In others, like this downtown case, sellers have been robbed of the goods they were offering.

treasure pot comes thanks to the rapid rise of property values within its boundaries.

The billion dollar question today is whether the CTA will keep receiving these cash infusions from the Super TIF long after all the bills have been paid? And if that money will help pay for future North Side transportation projects once the first phase is paid off, or if the money will be swept out by Mayor Brandon Johnson, or some future mayor.

By law, TIF money must be spent in the district it is taken from. North Side property owners paying into the Red Line Super TIF should keep an eye on this cash cow, as it will soon be creating a massive amount of free cash flow. This Super TIF was established in 2016 and encompasses approximately 3,126 acres of land. It was designed to pay for the RPM rehabilitation project, and it is. The Super TIF district includes 16,704 parcels of land within RPM right-of-way.

The TIF district has already taken in just under $400 million since 2017. It is estimated to bring in just shy of $100 million annually by 2031.

If the TIF cash is swept out, the other various taxing bodies would get their legal share. It should be noted that the RPM Super TIF does not take funds from Chicago Public Schools, because by state statute, CPS receives its proportional share of revenues generated from the district. CPS has been collecting their cut of those TIF taxes all along, and will continue to until the TIF expires.

Earlier this year we asked the CTA if they were planning to sweep the excess RPM Super TIF money into their recently announced Red Line Extension, a $5.7 billion project to extend the Red Line 5.5 miles south from the 95th Street Terminal to 130th St. They said "no."

The extra cash could be used to build much needed off-street parking along the North Lakefront, but the city today is in the business of eliminating parking, so that's unlikely. But the funds themselves are restricted by law to the Transit Facility Improvement Area for specific transit projects.

If the city is willing to ignore the law, or can get Springfield to change the law, the monies could be swept away from the North Side and used in new Blue Line track maintenance near Oak Park on the West Side, the entirety of the Purple Line in Evanston, or subsidize the new Red Line Extension on the South Side.

Mayor Johnson has criticized TIF districts for locking away tax money that he thinks would be better used in other communities. His signature economic development bond is funded by allowing certain TIFs to expire in the coming years.

The fiscal prospects for both Chicago and the CTA are bleak. Such a large pot of money would be difficult for the city to cede, making it a natural revenue source for CTA's future Red Line plans.

Allowing the TIF to expire early would mean relinquishing any built-up funds, divvying up the balance to give back to other taxing districts while allowing them to access that bigger tax base.

Gaining increased CTA capacity appears a moot point at this time as the transit agency is facing a 40% reduction in service due to a lack of consumer demand, funding limitations and state inaction. And post-COVID, the public has spoken with their feet, largely choosing to avoid public transportation in favor of working from home and using their own private cars, or car-sharing services, scooters, bikes and e-bikes.

CFD ambulances and locals alike. Uptown and Edgewater have more than 113,000 residents – nearly 16,000 over age 65, according to a Chicago Health Magazine analysis of Chicago Metropolitan Agency for Planning Data.

The 64 medical residents in Weiss' residency program staffed the hospital's Jacob Arvey Clinic, which has accepted all patients, regardless of insurance, for more than 70 years. The Arvey Clinic has 2,200 patients on their roster. "With no residents, who's going to see 2,200 people," asks Dr. Murray Scheinman, MD, a 30-year Weiss physician. "Ask Prasad – no answer. No answer to anything."

The co-owners of Resilience Healthcare, Dr. Manoj Prasad, MD, and Mr. Reddy Rathnaker Patlola, are notoriously difficult to contact due in part to their inability to fund a public affairs/media office, according to Prasad.

This newspaper is awaiting replies from IDPH following several inquiries.

Weiss Hospital's safety net status was granted in 2023 as a result of advocacy efforts by state lawmakers, particularly State Rep. Hoan Huynh [13th], who recognized the hospital's role in serving a vulnerable population. It is Uptown's second safety net hospital, after Thorek Memorial Hospital located one mile away.

Huynh is one of two state elected officials covering the legislative districts that Weiss Hospital is located within. The other is State Sen. Mike Simmons [7th]. Huynh declared his candidacy to replace U.S. Rep. Jan Schakowsky on July 2, following her notice to retire from Congress. Simmons announced his candidacy to replace Schakowsky on July 8. They both seek the re-opening of Weiss despite the obvious deficiencies in management.

These dates are important as both candidates announced they are abandoning their respective seats to seek another position mere weeks after Weiss Hospital's air conditioning failed – an important incident which contributed to the hospital's closure on Aug. 8.

Huynh began his first term in the General Assembly in Jan. 2023, and serves on the Health Care Availability & Access committee, among others. Simmons was first appointed to his seat in 2021 before winning full terms in 2022 and 2024. Simmons told the Evanston Round Table, "I've got a track record in the Illinois Senate now."

"The A/C failed to go on, and this has been a problem for a number of years," Dr. Murray Scheinman says, alleging that Prasad knew of it when he purchased the hospital. "You deal with it before it becomes a disaster. This guy just hoped for the best, and when the best didn't happen, it started a cascade."

Huynh hasn't responded to questions from this newspaper. Inquiries to Simmons were answered by Andrew McPike, communications specialist to the Office of the Senate President, who said requests for comment would be better directed to IDPH and the HFS.

Nearby Thorek Memorial Hospital and Endeavor Swedish Hospital have already seen a 20% uptick in ER visits, Simmons and Huynh reported.

People who followed the Weiss Hospital saga may have seen signs of internal mismanagement even before state investigators found the hospital was operating a "makeshift emergency department," and had non-working air conditioning due to deferred maintenance.

Aside from the unchecked weeds growing on hospital grounds, a worker shared with Chicago Health magazine that hospital staff were "asked to bring in snowblowers," and later "to bring in our gardening gear and do weeding."

"The A/C failed to go on, and this has been a problem for a number of years," Dr. Scheinman says, alleging that Prasad knew of it when he purchased the hospital. "You deal with it before it becomes a disaster. This guy just hoped for the best, and when the best didn't happen, it started a cascade."

The outside neglect mirrors what employees say they witnessed over the past two years under Dr. Prasad. Staff cite cuts to everything from marketing and landscaping to media relations, the Edgewater community clinic and patient mailings. "You can't do anything without his permission, but he doesn't communicate to anyone. It has been cut, cut, cut. He cut so much that [we became] a shell of what we once were," said one director who requested anonymity.

Weiss received about 87% of its 2024 income from Medicare and Medicaid; in 2023, the combined inpatient and outpatient revenue was nearly $44 million from the two programs. After several inspections by state investigators, IDPH reported their findings to the federal Centers of Medicare and Medicaid Services which ended Medicare/Medicaid funding on Aug. 9. The hospital closed on Aug. 8.

Weiss Hospital opened in 1952 to care for Jewish and immigrant populations other Chicago hospitals at the time wouldn't serve, as well as to give physicians facing discrimination a place to practice.

"When the hospital was conceived in the late '40s, it was to fill a community need – to be a haven for doctors excluded elsewhere for religion and race," said Louis A. Weiss, Chicago Health Magazine publisher and grandson of the hospital's namesake.
