Is bankruptcy an option for CPS?

A blue ribbon panel including former CPS CEO Paul Vallas, Chicago Board of Education VP Jesse Ruiz, corporate restructuring lawyer George Panagakis, Blaine School Principal Troy LaRaviere, and Chicago Teachers Pension Fund executive director Chuck Burbridge hash out the financial future of the public schools during an Aug. 25 luncheon at the City Club under the watchful eye of moderator Paul Green (at right).

A maverick North Side principal blasted both Springfield and City Hall for misappropriating pension funds, then trying to convince everyone that the pensions themselves are the problem.

"That's like a thief stealing your rent money, then attempting to convince you the landlord was the problem," Blaine School principal Troy LaRaviere told an overflow crowd at Aug. 25 luncheon at the City Club.

"The source of our problem is city and school officials who spend and borrow money in a manner that is reckless and corrupt, the parasitic private sector banks and investors who are always looking for creative ways to rip off taxpayers, and the state legislators who enabled this irresponsible fiscal behavior in the first place," he said. LaRaviere was one of five panelists including Chicago Board of Education Vice President Jesse Ruiz, CPS teachers pension fund VP Chuck Burbridge, former CPS CEO Paul Vallas, and bond lawyer George Panagakis.

"Bankruptcy would put the school system in a 'financial death spiral. It would literally be the kiss of death" by driving more students out of the system, which gets its state funding based on enrollment figures," said Paul Vallas.

According to a CPS-commissioned analysis by Ernst

Blaine elementary school principal Troy LaRaviere minces no words as he accuses the Emanuel Administration of paying off financial institutions - which he said happen to be among the mayor's campaign contributors - while ignoring "the only group of people who actually worked for what the CPS owes them - the teachers." The firebrand school administrator has since been warned to tone it down or look for another job.

and Young accountants, CPS pension costs are expected to rise only 32% over the next seven years, while debt service is projected to increase 350%, from $119 million to $421 million, LaRaviere said.

Chicago residents can expect the pension crisis to get worse. Retirees now outnumber active workers. That means more people are drawing from the pension fund than putting money into it. As of 2014 there were 1.06 retirees for every one working union member and the average annual pension for a career worker in CPS who retired in 2014 totals more than $68,000.

But this is not the debt that's driving up costs, Laraviere says, noting that debt service is not owed to teachers but financial institutions like the Pritzker Group, Goldman Sachs and Northern Trust - "all Rahm Emanuel contributors and his administration wants to ensure they get paid what they're owed."

The debt is also owed to banks and investors who virtually

Trumbull School to become theater, condos

It's official. In its next life, the 106-year-old Trumbull Elementary School, 5200 N. Ashland, will become home to the TimeLine Theatre and 48 "condominium quality" one- and two-bedroom residential units, according to Ald. Patrick O'Connor [40th].

The Board of Education awarded the contract for "repurposing" the Dwight Perkins-designed school to Svigos Development, which just completed redevelopment of the 1890 Mulligan School, 1855 N. Sheffield. [The Mulligan project in West Lincoln Park was plagued by vandals who broke every new window in the building shortly after they were installed, then by a massive Nov. 2104 fire.]

According to Svigos' Nick Vittore, Chicago Public School buildings from the late 19th century lend themselves to conversion to residential housing with their large rooms and corridors and extensive woodwork. Its location in the white-hot Andersonville neighborhood adds to the appeal of undertaking the project.

The auditorium, he added, not only lends itself to theatrical productions but community meetings. The area above the auditorium will be converted into an atrium style sundeck.

"Depending on final layouts, we also hope to provide an on site gym for residents," Vittore said in a letter to Ald. O'Connor.

Quigley says he's leaning toward support of Iran deal

All politics is local as far as U.S. Rep Mike Quigley (5th) is concerned, even when he's wrestling with federal trade and international defense policies.

Speaking before an Aug. 31, City Club of Chicago luncheon at Maggiano's Restaurant, 111 W. Grand Ave., the onetime aide to former 44th Ward Ald. Bernie Hansen and current member of the U.S. House Transportation Subcommittee and the only Illinois member of the key Appropriations Committee said he tries to remain as "Chicago-centric" as possible.

Even when the self-described "Free Trade Democrat" is hashing out export policies.

Forty percent of all Illinois crops are exported. Local exporters include Eli's Cheesecake and the 5th District's exports alone support more than 100,000 American jobs, said Quigley.

And relatively few of those exporters are big companies like Boeing. In fact, 90% of Chicago exporters are small and mid-size business people like Mary Howe, Quigley said.

"She's not here with us today, but the ice making machines she exports from her factory on Elston Ave. face 35 to 70% tariffs," he pointed out.

Of course, none of this works well without a smoothly-run transportation system - which Quigley said is nothing to brag about at the moment.

"During the past 50 years, investment in infrastructure (like roads and tracks) has shrunk by half. Europe spends twice as much as we do. China spends four times as much. In Chicago, 1,000 miles of road need reconstruction. And 675 bridges in Cook County are structurally deficient. Illinois roads ranked tied for last in the nation in terms of their quality.

The need is especially acute in a mass transit system that's more in demand than ever at a time when fewer people under 30 bother to drive, preferring instead to commute by bike, train or bus, Quigley said.

"Amtrak has 30 million riders a year, Metra gets 84 million. More people ride the CTA in a month than swindled CPS out of $100 million, said LaRaviere, adding there is “documented evidence these banks knew the auction rate securities market was about to collapse while they were preparing to underwrite a massive auction rate bond issue for CPS.

“That’s illegal. You can sue them and get those millions back. But the Emanuel administration refuses. They want them (the banks) to get what’s owed to them even though they got it through corrupt and deceptive practices,” said LaRaviere, who two years ago became the first CPS principal to openly criticize Emanuel’s handling of Chicago’s deteriorating school situation. the only one to voice serious concerns about CPS’ financial future, although none of the other panelists thought bankruptcy a serious option.

Burbridge called it “reprehensible the state would even consider bankruptcy.”

[Giving municipalities and school systems the right to file for federal bankruptcy protection is one of Gov. Rauner’s reform agenda items.]

“The state made this game. They control everything. The state can’t solve this by kicking the can down the road. All the parties are to blame for this and need to be involved in the solution.”

“Pension plans can survive a lot of things, but what they can’t survive is optional quarterly contributions,” Burbridge said.

Chicago Board of Education Vice President Jesse Ruiz noted CPS has lost $500 million in funds because of declining state support for education.

It is part of the reason he just put forward a new school budget with a $500-million state bailout penciled in.

Chicago, he added, is the only school district in Illinois that doesn’t have its’ pensions paid by the state. “Every Illinois public school student outside Chicago will get $2,256 for his or her education, while Chicago students will get only $31. That’s how much we’re getting shortchanged.”

Nevertheless, Ruiz said CPS will never file for bankruptcy as long as he’s on the school board and called any discussion of the subject “informative but not practical. The law allowing it doesn’t even exist here in Illinois.”

Vallas, who ran CPS from 1995 to 2001, said bankruptcy would put the school system in a “financial death spiral. It would literally be the kiss of death” by driving more students out of the system, which gets its state funding based on enrollment figures.

A packed room sits grimly as a panel of experts discusses the future of public education in Chicago. Most were not happy with what they’re hearing.

“Who wants to send their kids to a bankrupt school district,” Vallas asked.

But there is a way out by “separating the budget issue from the pension issue” and “instituting some fundamental protections so this doesn’t happen again,” he said.

Three years ago the Chicago Teachers Union [CTU] went on strike for week and left the relationship between the Mayor and the union damaged.

This year the CTU contract is coming up for renewal, and it should be no surprise that the next standoff will again be about money.

At issue in the 2012 negotiations were district demands for greater teacher accountability and longer school days. CTU wanted more money. In the end, the union won higher wages and watered down accountability measures.

This time, the fight will revolve around pensions and the city’s ability to make its legally required, $634 million contribution to the pension fund.

But both CTU officials and the district know there’s not enough money to pay both the pension contribution and make payroll. Something has to give and it most likely will not be $500 million in new money coming from Springfield.

After years of pension holidays, generous pension benefits, a lack of transparency and rampant cronyism, the reality is both the CPS the teacher’s pension fund are now broke.

Metro High School was one class act

Heart of the ‘Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Last Saturday, I attended an impromptu luncheon with about 60 or 70 former students of the Chicago Public High School for Metropolitan Studies, aka Metro, which when I attended was located at 223 N. Michigan Ave. We came from all over the city and met for lunch at Manny’s, on Roosevelt Rd. and Jefferson St.

I’m a graduate of Metro and proud of it, and the get-together reminded me of that once again.

Metro was an experimental, four-year public high school that was mostly located downtown and was open from 1971 to 2003. It drew students from all walks of life and from all over Chicago and we were able to attend ancillary classes held at famed institutions such as Second City and the Art Institute. What I learned at Metro was more than any book could have ever taught me and the lessons learned are ones I’ve carried with me my entire life.

Metro reiterated to me what my mother had already taught me, to be good to all people, no matter what their race, sexual preferences, economic status, popularity level, etc. It let me know that it was OK to not be able to sit still at a desk in a classroom for 40 minutes because I couldn’t sit and not daydream for that long.

Metro also taught me that I was right to be frustrated when I tried to beg my way out of classes at Lake View High School that I didn’t belong in, like Telescopic Algebra when I was a freshman, which entailed learning calculus and trigonometry. At Lake View they also kept sticking me in honors and 100s (above honors) classes, and try as I would to get out of them, my counselors wouldn’t let me.

At Metro, I made my own schedule and chose my own classes. I picked the teachers that interested me and classes that challenged me.

School starts next week, and I truly wish there was a place like Metro for our city’s high school kids. I also wish that every school in this city had someone like Nate Blackman running it.

Blackman, now in his 80s, founded and operated Metro. He had to have had the patience of a saint to deal with all of us. When I spoke to him at Manny’s and I was searching for the perfect word to describe the Metro experience, Nate chimed in “Beautiful.” He hit the nail on the head.

People showed up to the luncheon from the first class in 1971 (I met Bob Rudner, Green Party committeeman in the 49th Ward) to the last class in 2003 and everything in between. We all told our stories of coming to Metro. Teachers Blythe Olshan-Findley (luncheon organizer), Paula Baron, Mike Liberles, Steve Everett and Rich Barone came but missing were two of my all time favorite teachers, Susan Stone and Shelby Taylor.

And although it was great to see everyone, the main person I really wanted to see was Nate. He’s getting up there in age, and I wanted to personally thank him for starting the school that not only saved my high school years but also saved my life.

So here’s to Metro and its founder, Nate Blackman, a longtime, well-respected Chicago educator who changed the lives of so many kids who just needed a different way of learning. Thanks Nate, for everything.

I wish that every teacher, parent, and student in this city could have known what Metro was all about. I’m so glad that I did.

I truly wish there was a place like Metro for our city’s high school kids.

One holy sale... Mark your calendars now for the always awesome annual Shop the Steeple Rummage Sale, Sept. 12 at St. Pauls United Church of Christ, 2335 N. Orchard St. in Lincoln Park.

The church is filled with rooms full of treasures, such as old silver serving pieces, candelabras, antiques, china, glassware. There’s baby stuff, framed art, electronics, pet items, books, CDs and DVDs, housewares, rugs, great shoes, purses, coats, clothing for men, and women (collected by Nina Hefferon, who used to own a shop on Halsted St.). And for anyone thinking of tying the knot, there are six “magnificent” bridal gowns, according to event co-chair Bev Petrunich.

And that’s just the tip of the iceberg.

These folks know how to put on one godly church sale. The vast majority of items are less than $10, and Petrunich tells me that most furniture is less than $50 even though it’s in excellent condition. Funds raised go to the church’s general operating budget and help increase its financial benevolence to charities in need.

What’s cool about this sale besides that it has something for everyone is that at 2 p.m., the church closes its doors and a half-hour later it re-opens to clients from approximately 30 different charities, who are given a large “drag bag” that they can fill with anything they need/want during an hour’s worth of shopping. Later, event co-chair Jan Bail and parishioner Dan Vaughn work with the agencies to come back to pick up items that they can use. By early Tuesday,

Higher 2015 real estate tax assessments mean hefty rent hikes

BY DON DeBAT

Chicago apartment renters could be hit with the biggest rent increases in years next spring because of property tax increases expected by landlords in 2016.

Tens of thousands of shocked Chicago home and apartment owners are reeling from sharply higher 2015 property-tax assessments they’ve received in recent weeks from the Cook County Assessor’s office.

Experts say the assessment increases likely will mean hefty real estate tax hikes next year, and landlords will be forced to raise rents to cover the expense.

In 2015, the entire City of Chicago was reassessed. For many of the properties the assessments have large increases ranging from 30% to 55%, according to a spot survey by The Home Front column.

“If the 33% assessment increase we received translates into a 33-percent tax hike, we will need to bump our rents more than $2,000 a year,” said the owner of a Logan Square 4-flat. “That means a $75-a-month increase on a typical 3-bedroom apartment.”

Mayor Rahm Emanuel says the city needs to raise hundreds of millions in new revenue to pay for pensions of teachers, police and firefighters. However, while there is no doubt that the City’s finances are in dismal shape, crystal-ball gazing into the outlook for the expected property tax hike forecast for 2016 is cloudy, experts say.

“The property tax bill is determined by four factors: the assessment, the equalization factor, or ‘multiplier,’ the tax rate and the exemptions,” said Michael Griffin, a Chicago real estate tax appeal attorney. “In a triennial tax-assessment year, homeowners should appeal their assessment because they are likely to see a new higher assessment.”

Homeowners also should review their exemptions because they can reduce their tax bill if they have the proper exemptions, Griffin noted.

Real estate taxes are expected to rise when paid in 2016. However predicting a hefty property tax increase next year really centers on the wild cards—the tax rate and the state equalization factor. Taxpayers can’t challenge the multiplier or the tax rate.

The equalization factor, or “multiplier,” is established each year for Cook County to bring property tax assessments in line with other parts of Illinois. The value is determined by the Illinois

Dept. of Revenue. The multiplier was pegged at 2.7253 in 2014, up from 2.6621 in 2013.

When real estate values sank in 2008 during the Great Recession, the multiplier skyrocketed to 2.9786, and then peaked at 3.3701 in 2009. It hovered at a lofty 3.3 in 2010 before slipping to 2.8056 in 2012 as the real estate market started to recover.

The Home Front

The main engine that drives up property tax bills is the amount of money spent by local government. For example, homeowners who read their 2014 tax bills will see sharply increased spending for schools and community colleges.

Chicago’s 2014 tax rate declined slightly to $6.808 per $100 of assessed valuation down from $6.832 per $100 of assessed valuation in 2013... but sadly Illinois trailed only New Jersey by a slight margin in offering it’s residents the second highest property taxes nation-wide.

“While the 2014 tax rate in Chicago was lower, the increase in the state equalization factor offset the tax-rate decrease for Chicago taxpayers,” noted Griffin. “If assessments, the multiplier and the tax rate rise in 2015, Chicago property tax bills in 2016 will be sharply higher.”

[Maybe we’ll surpass the Garden State and be #1 in the next year or two?]

The 2015 property tax bills in Chicago will come due in August of 2016, when the second installment of the 2015 tax bill arrives.

An informal survey by The Home Front column revealed the following tax bill increases for small, “Ma and Pa” apartment buildings on Chicago’s North and Northwest sides:

- Logan Square. The 2015 assessment on a vintage graystone 4-flat in the Logan Square neighborhood catapulted 33.7%

- to $47,953 from $35,871. The assessor said the market value of the building jumped to $479,530 from $358,710.
- The 2014 tax bill on the property was $6,178, down from $6,323 in 2013, because the owner filed a tax assessment appeal and won. Next year, it is likely that the tax bill will jump substantially, forcing the owner to raise rents to cover the increase.
- Lincoln Square. The 2015 assessment on a 1920s yellow brick 4-flat in the Arcadia Terrace section of the neighborhood increased 30.7% to $47,909 from $36,656. The assessor said the market value of the building jumped to $479,090 from $366,560. The 2014 tax bill on the 4-flat building rose to $6,324 from $6,188.
- Lake View. The 2015 assessment on a 1930s red brick 16-flat in the Roscoe Village section of the neighborhood rose 20.8% to $180,663 from $149,519. The 2014 tax bill on the 3-story corner building rose to $27,741 from $27,193 in 2013.
- Irving Park. The 2015 assessment on a red brick 6-flat in the Old Irving Park neighborhood rose 7.7% to $52,467 from $47,362. The assessor said the market value of the building jumped to $524,670 from $473,620.

The 2014 tax bill on the 6-flat rose to $8,826 from $8,651 in 2013. Also, the building no longer gets city garbage pickup. The owner now must pay $125 a month for private scavenger service.

Owners of single-family homes on the Northwest Side of Chicago also felt the sting of sharply higher property tax assessments. Here are two examples:

- The Villa. The 2015 assessment on a stucco home in the Villa Historic District near Addison St. and Pulaski Ave. shot up 33.9% to $41,413 from $30,935. The assessor said the market value of the home jumped to $414,130 from $309,350. The 2014 tax bill on the home rose to $5,764 from $5,650 in 2013.

- Norwood Park. The 2015 assessment on a large brick home in the Old Norwood Park enclave on the Far Northwest Side skyrocketed a whopping 55.8% to $82,166 from $52,734. A recent sale increased the market value to $821,660 from $527,340. The 2014 tax bill on the home was $9,784 up from $9,591 in 2013.

Experts say property owners who think they are over assessed should appeal now before they receive next year’s tax bill. If they wait until the tax bill arrives in 2016, they it will be too late to appeal.

Visit the assessor’s website: www.cookcountyassessor.com, or call 312-443-7550 to find comparable properties or start the appeal process.

If appealing at the assessor’s office does not lower the assessed value, there are two other appeal options: the Cook County Board of Review (312-603-5542) or www.cookcountyboardofreview.com, and the Property Tax Appeals Board (217-785-6076). Or, call a tax assessment lawyer, like Michael Griffin, at 312-943-1789.

Police warn of commercial burglaries in Rogers Park

Chicago Police are warning neighbors about commercial burglaries, two of which occurred in Rogers Park where unknown offender(s) have pried open the rear or side doors of businesses to gain entry.

The offenders(s) then pried open cash registers and removed cash. Incident times and locations include the 6200 block of N. Western Ave. Aug. 28-29, between the hours of 11 p.m. – 5:55 a.m., and the 2200 Block of W. Devon Ave. August 28-29, between the hours of 9:15 p.m. – 9:15 a.m.

In the incident on N. Western Ave., two unknown male white Hispanic offenders were seen. They were approximately 20 years old, one wearing a black hooded sweatshirt, green and white camouflage pants, and the other wearing a dark gray Chicago Bulls hooded sweatshirt.

There is no description of offenders from the Devon Ave. break in.

Police have warned local businesses to ensure that there is sufficient security lighting and cameras mounted at an elevated distance from the street level so as not to be tampered with.

They are asking for anyone with information on these crimes to contact the Bureau of Detectives – Area North at 312-744-8263 and refer to alert #P15-N-194BA.

The changing landscape of Chicago's public housing

CHA sitting on $500 million while building few new affordable units

STORY AND PHOTO
BY DANIEL BROWN
Medill News Service

On a recent summer morning, Theresa Cook, 51, sat down on the beige couch in her living room. Her two-year-old son sleeps beside her. Her nephew awakes from a mattress on the ground, tossing off an orange blanket.

Cook calls her sister into the room.

"Sharon...Come in here."

"What?" Sharon says from the bedroom.

"You know what," Cook replies.

Sharon Kransuch, 68, ambles into the living room and sits down on the couch. She has short gray hair, chopped bangs and distinct upside down smile lines.

"I'm using my bedroom as a closet," Cook says. "Me and the boy, we sleep right here," she points down at the couch on which she is sitting, her son still fast asleep. "Those are clothes," she says, pointing to the boxes next to the couch and along the wall, "and I still got more clothes in the back." On top of the boxes rests an alarm clock, lice shampoo and other household items.

Cook, her son and Kransuch have lived in this two-bedroom apartment for a few months. Cook's kidneys are failing, and she suffers from heart disease, which keeps her from working. She tries to sell cigarettes to make a few dollars here and there, but the only way the two sisters scrape by is with Kransuch's Social Security check.

"There's plenty of us out here who need help. We don't need the Targets and stuff like that," Cook says. "There's plenty of Targets and K-Marts and stuff around. But there are some of us out here who need help. We need affordable housing."

Buried in her statement lies a bundle of resentment felt by many Chicagoans, something at least partially responsible for the Chicago Housing Authority's (CHA) long waiting list: sections of public housing land have fallen into private hands particularly on the North Side.

And she knows that next up is the redevelopment of Lathrop Homes on the east banks of the Chicago River along Clybourn Ave.: a perfectly suitable affordable housing site that has been emptied out and soon to be turned into mostly market-rate housing.

Currently, there are approximately 100,000 Chicagoans on CHA's waiting list. The last time they opened the waiting list was in 2014. More than "200,000 people registered for the wait list, and those names were placed in a lottery," said Ketsia Colinet, CHA Director of Occupancy/Asset Management. "And via a random electronic process, names were selected and then placed on the wait list."

Consequently, thousands of people were

The former Ida B. Wells public housing land where Mariano's will soon open.

denied the right to even wait for public housing, although, according to Colinet, CHA "informed them of other opportunities they may [have wanted] to consider if they [were] still in need of housing."

Kransuch happened to be one of the lucky names drawn in the lottery. That was nearly two years ago. Still without public assistance, today the two sisters live down near 47th St.

From the Red Line, cross the bridge over the Dan Ryan Expressway, where the cars steadily flow, creating a loud humming noise, and pick up the CTA 47 bus heading into New City.

Ride past the industrial parks, the long grass growing in the empty plots of land, the run down and boarded-up residential homes, the occasional food joint or business – Big Ray's Grill, City Sports, M. Ojeda Tire Shop, etc. – and the vacant store fronts too.

Get off the bus at S. Racine Ave., and you will find Cook and Kransuch near 49th St. and S. Elizabeth Ave. Who knows where they would call home today if CHA had adopted a different course of action more than a decade ago?

In 2000, CHA implemented its "Plan for Transformation," an ambitious plan that sought to rebuild and renovate 25,000 public housing units and create mixed-income communities. And so during the last 15 years, public housing units have been demolished: Ida B. Wells, Robert Taylor, Cabrini Green, LeClaire Courts and more; but public housing does not always return. Sections of public housing land, in accordance with CHA's plan to create mixed-income communities, have been sold – some at discounted rates – to private buyers in retail, real estate and more.

"The landscape of public housing in Chicago has been completely transformed," said CHA spokesman Matt Aguilar. "Dilapidated high rises that once plagued our city have been replaced with mixed-income communities."

Indeed, the public housing landscape, as Aguilar said, looks very different now.

Previously filled with only housing for low-income Chicagoans, public housing land now also contains private condominiums and businesses.

"Excuse me, do you live around here?" I ask the man donning a blue button-up shirt, jeans and black glasses as he waits for the bus on E. Pershing Rd. and S. Martin Luther King Dr.

"Yeah," he says curiously, as if wondering what I am doing and why I am there.

"Is this field where Ida B. Wells used to be?" I ask, gesturing towards the enormous stretch of grass expanding approximately six square blocks.

"Yeah."

"How far did it go back?"

"It extended all the way to the lake."

"So what are those buildings over there?"

I prod, pointing to the apartments beyond the field and close to the lake.

Those are private homes, he says.

From afar, the picture is clean: just green grass, blue-sky and tall white buildings to the north. Up close, the grass is shaggy; empty chip bags, wadded sandwich wraps and other garbage together with the daisies and long, matted-down blades scream of wasteland and the passage of time.

The sign in the field is huge. It's white and olive green. It reads: "coming soon!" "MARIANO'S", with the trademark green leaf over the 'N'. Underneath the Mariano's name is the CHA logo, City of Chicago seal, and more text reading: "With support and assistance from: Mayor Rahm Emanuel, 4th Ward Ald. William Burns, 3rd Ward Ald. Pat Dowell, Michael Merchant CEO of Chicago Housing Authority, Commissioner Andrew Mooney, Chicago Dept. of Planning and Development."

This is the changing landscape of public housing. A Target popped up on former Cabrini Green land along Clybourn. A running track rolled out where the Harold Ickes Homes once stood. The Robert Taylor Homes went down, and a fitness center came up. And at the Ida B. Wells, a Mariano's will soon appear.

The square block of open field north of the soon-to-be Mariano's is, however, a mystery. Still inspecting the sign, I notice construction crews digging up there in the field. I mosey on over.

It's loud. Some sort of heavy machinery is dredging a large hole. Construction workers surround the pit, wearing hard hats and the typical thin coat of dirt on their jeans and boots.

"Excuse me, are there going to be more businesses located here?" I ask a guy on the sideline, assuming he was some sort of foreman since he was cleaner than the workers.

No idea, he says over all the noise. They are only installing sewer pipes. Aguilar said he did not know either. Perhaps that part of CHA land is still for sale.

"I think [CHA] wanted to tear down the buildings, scatter the people out, and then take as long as they possibly can so they can't find the people to bring back," Rod Wilson, Executive Director of the Lugenia Burns Hope Center. "[The city of Chicago] lost 200,000 black folks from 2000 to 2010," he added.

Whether or not CHA and the city intended to move people out of Chicago, it has happened. CHA promised public housing residents the "right to return" after buildings were demolished, but housing has been slowly rebuilt. "[The Plan for Transformation] was supposed to run from 2000 to 2010... and so we're in the 15th year of the program," said Wilson.

Because public housing residents usually have few, if any, economic options, they oftentimes move to public housing in the suburbs or surrounding states out of necessity while waiting for the rebuilding.

In many ways, the sluggish rebuilding is about funding.

"We haven't had the federal funding or the ability to build the necessary housing," said Political Science professor Dick Simpson. The private businesses obtaining portions of public land are affecting the long waiting list, "but not as much as the problem of [having] no money to build the housing."

This lack of funding is a federal, city and private sector problem, according to Simpson. "It's not as profitable to build the mixed income housing, unless there is a large federal subsidy, as it is to build condominiums or apartments in the loop."

Art pays homage, raises awareness

Labor Day performance honorsthose who've died in childbirth

Michelle Hartney

BY LOUISE MCLOUGHLIN

MOTHER'S RIGHT, a conceptual installation and performance piece by Chicago-based artist Michelle Hartney, will take place from 12-2 p.m. Monday at the Richard J. Daley Center, 50 W. Washington St. The piece seeks to address the high rates of maternal mortality in the U.S., postpartum PTSD, and abuse by obstetric staff. It is held in conjunction with Improving Birth's Labor Day Rally.

For the performance, several pairs of women will stand facing one other, folding handmade hospital gowns into triangles – similar to the way the American flag is folded at the funeral of a soldier. The traditional flag-folding ceremony includes 12 symbolic folds, with the ninth fold symbolizing womanhood.

In order to emphasize that symbol, the gowns have been cut to a length where the fabric stops on the ninth fold.

Hartney says that in preparation for the performance 1,200 hospital gowns will be sewn – each one representing a mother who died in childbirth in the U.S. in 2013. The gowns also symbolize the women who have suffered abuse at the hands of obstetricians and nurses, and the increasing number of women who are being diagnosed with postpartum PTSD. "It is estimated that one in three women suffers from some elements of PTSD after giving birth, and PTSD is diagnosed in 3-7% of laboring women," said Hartney. "It is my mission to change that, and to bring awareness to this issue."

Each gown visually resembles hospital gown fabric, and is composed of tiny drawings of the plant derivatives for the drugs that have been used on laboring women for the past 150 years. On the project's Kickstarter page Hartney thanks friends, midwives and

The Great Catholic Mass Sept. 27 at Saint Luke's

Saint Luke Church, 1500 W. Belmont, is holding a free performance of J. S. Bach's Mass in B Minor - The Great Catholic Mass - 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 27.

Mark P. Bangert will direct the orchestra, soloists and 32-voice choir in the performance. Wine and a light supper will be served during the intermission. Tickets are free, but required. Guests can make reservations online at www.stlukechicago.org or by calling 773-472-3383.

This performance is the culmination of a month of lectures, discussions, presentations and events exploring the Mass and its place in Lutheran and Roman Catholic traditions as they mark the 50th anniversary of the Lutheran-Roman Catholic Dialogues and approach the 500th anniversary of the Lutheran reformation.

Two ecumenical immersion seminars on Saturdays, September 12 and 19, 8:30 a.m.–12 noon, followed by lunch, will offer presentations and discussions on the role of the mass in Lutheran, Protestant and Roman Catholic traditions.

interns from the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and DePaul Univ. for their help with sewing the gowns for the performance. As of last Wednesday, 1,050 gowns had been sewn, only 150 away from her target. The Kickstarter campaign ran for the month of May, and exceeded its goal of $5,000 with 51 backers, who collectively pledged $5,146.

In 2013 the U.S. was one of eight countries to report an increase in maternal mortality rates, making it the only developed country to do so.

Hartney cites figures from the World Health Organization, stating that the U.S.'s maternal mortality rate ranks at the top of developed countries. She says that since 1995 the maternal mortality rate has increased 250%, with African American women four times more likely to die in childbirth than Caucasian women. In 2013 the U.S. was one of eight countries to report an increase in maternal mortality rates, making it the only developed country to do so.

Hartney says the piece was about "paying homage to those who have sacrificed their lives – specifically American women." She says of her decision to mirror the American military flag folding ceremony, "I am using the flag folding ceremony as a model of respect and grief. Women are coming out of childbirth with the same psychological symptoms as soldiers who are fighting wars. PTSD is a serious issue, and a very personal issue for me."

Circus in the Parks returns for shows through October

The annual Midnight Circus in the Parks citywide tour began this week and will continue for eight consecutive weekends.

The show is back home in Chicago with a new lineup and new award-winning artists as well as returning favorites.

The troupe features acrobats, aerialists, eccentrics, one rescued dog and even a few kids who don't have to run away to join the circus – because their parents own it.

"We're staying true to our mission of creating community and rebuilding parks...one circus at a time," Midnight Circus creator and ring-leader Jeff Jenkins said. "We have built fantastic relationships through our tireless community outreach and have already sold over 1,000 tickets that are being distributed to families in need in communities

She also acknowledged that mirroring the flag folding ceremony could cause the piece to be viewed as provocative. "While planning this project I knew that some people in the military might find it offensive because the flag folding ceremony is bathed in emotion, tied to the loss of loved ones, and there is no getting around high emotions when using this ritual."

However, "Having spoken with military personnel (who have led the intimate and moving flag-folding ceremony) and their family members about my performance, they felt that not only am I not disrespecting veterans, military service personnel, or their families, but I am honoring them—by mirroring the incredible ritual in which the American military pays tribute to the men and women in this country."

Hartney's previous works have also addressed women's health issues, as well as the concept of heroes, love, and the cosmos. MOTHER'S RIGHT is part of Hartney's ongoing 'Obstetrics in America' series, including 'Our Past' and 'Birth Words.' Both pieces also address the U.S.' high rates of maternal mortality, postpartum PTSD, and obstetric abuse. The Labor Day performance is the first in a series of performances which will continue into next year. Locations will be mainly community venues for 2015, with a shift to art and culture locations in 2016.

Hartney is looking for 35 women to take part in the gown folding. To sign up as a performer email info@michellehartney.com

Angels with Tails running with the pack in Roscoe Village

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY JAMES MATUSIK

It was the quiet end of a Roscoe Village Sunday morning when the first vans pulled up noisy with anticipation. Local residents did not anticipate the excitement that over 100 animated animals and scores of pet hunting people would create on this sleepy street on August 23.

PAWS, the city’s largest no kill humane organization brought a massive collection of Chicago’s homeless dogs, cats, kittens, & puppies to 35 Roscoe St. businesses in a whirlwind four-hour adoption event.

The event, called Angels with Tails, gave sidewalk strollers a chance to get up close and personal with a bevy of needy animals looking for a lifetime friend and a new place to call home. “This is a great neighborhood,” says PAWS founder Paula Fasseas, “there are wonderful families and merchants who are more than willing to help out.”

It was an enormous effort involving several PAWS transport vans, and dozens of cars filled with foster families who were bringing their Fosters directly to Roscoe Village. Add to this over 100 PAWS support volunteers and 20 full time staff to facilitate the adoption process and you can imagine the pawsabilities.

Traditional animal shelters, first founded in the late 1800’s, were the governments response to controlling the country’s ever increasing number of dogs and cats, and the animal welfare system that it created followed a cage and kill model, meaning that they took in all animals and killed the surplus.

Surprisingly, it wasn’t until the early 1990’s that the first No-Kill Model was created by the executive director of the San Francisco SPCA, Richard Avanzino.

Laurie Gentile Angels With Tails co-chair, Sarah McDonald,PAWS Communications Manager and Founder Paula Fasseas.

This innovative program featured proactive adoptions and focused, targeted, spay/neuter availability. “The general public just didn’t know about this,” said Fasseas. “It was always kept quiet and when people aren’t aware of something, they can’t solve the problem.”

PAWS brought this progressive no kill strategy to Chicago with its Angel with Tails project in 1998. Today the killing has been reduced by an amazing 75%, and more progress on this “kill continuum” is being made every year.

The key is preventing unwanted pets from being born and one of PAWS most interesting strategies is the Gusmobile. It is a stand alone, self-contained, state of the arts mobile surgical unit that provides free spay/neuter to under resourced neighborhoods. It is equipped with three surgical tables and can accommodate an incredible 50 surgeries a day.

It was donated by the Beck family and named after their dog Gus who was adopted from PAWS after being rescued from The Iowa Floods of 2008.

The spay/neuter procedure, besides preventing unwanted births, also curtails a number of medical problems common to dogs and cats. Some require expensive operations that many owners would not be able to afford.

By noon there were throngs of people purveying pet possibilities on Roscoe St.

Starly, a cute and courteous canine was attracting a lot of attention. A Blue Tick coon hound and Blue Heeler mix, she was a recent rescue from the Gulf Coast and brought to Chicago by an organization called The Animal Rescue Front or ARF. This organization was founded in September of 2005 immediately following Hurricane Katrina and has never given up on the homeless animals of the Gulf Coast. Many of the stray cats and dogs that it has rescued survived one of the worst natural disaster in U.S. History and one that is now marking its 10th anniversary.

“First responders flocked to the Gulf Coast after Katrina,” said Chris McLaughlin, Director of ARF, “but there was no precedent for what we witnessed. There was no guidebook to tell us how to get the animals to safety. But with determination, will, passion, and credit cards, we started taking them to wherever people and families awaited them with open arms.”

Chris reached out to PAWS founder Paula Fasseas last year, and a partnership was born. Now volunteers drive rescues up to Chicago twice a month and on Sunday there were about eight Mississippi born animals in attendance and anticipating a brand new home. Starly, with good looks and a positive attitude found one that day.

PAWS largest transfer partner, or supplier, is Chicago Animal Care & Control, the city pound. And PAWS has a bi-lingual full time employee behind the desk each day to meet with people that feel they can no longer take care of their pet. PAWS offers counseling and free or low cost medical support to allow owners to keep their pet at home where they belong.

“When we first started our rescue mission we had no permanent location,” said Fasseas. “We were picking up animals from the pound each day and having to bring them back at night if they weren’t

ICA celebrates 10th season

International Chamber Artists violinist Ellen McSweeney

The International Chamber Artists 10th anniversary season-opening concert will be held at 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 13, at St. Gregory the Great Church, 5535 N. Paulina St.

Attendees are invited to celebrate a decade of ICA by listening to a landmark work written in the last decade of Piotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky’s life: “Trio in A Minor, Op. 50.”

The dramatic weight of Tchaikovsky will be paired with Franz Joseph Haydn’s light-hearted chamber “Quintet for Two Horns, Violin, Cello and Piano, HOB XIV:1.”

News bites ... The second annual Rogers Pork was held last weekend, and while roaming around the small but fun fest I discovered fellow Rogers Parker Patricia Vasquez selling my kind of oil paintings, bright, pretty and fairly-priced. Although my house is already jam-packed, I picked myself up a small floral painting that I fell in love with. Vasquez is an art student learning to paint under artist Gyan Samara, who obviously is one very excellent teacher.

Soon you can satisfy your sweet tooth ... quite deliciously in Lakeview because next week, Sophie Evanoff will open her third, new location of the popular Vanille Patisserie at 3243 N. Broadway. Check out the black and white vintage photos that will line the walls of the bakery, whose treats I can’t wait to try. Congrats to Sophie!

In 2000, CHA implemented its “Plan for Transformation,” an ambitious plan that sought to rebuild and renovate 25,000 public housing units and create mixed-income communities. And so during the last 15 years, public housing units have been demolished, but public housing does not always return. Sections of public housing land, in accordance with CHA’s plan to create mixed-income communities, have been sold – some at discounted rates – to private buyers in retail, real estate and more.

just sitting on it?” I asked.

“Definitely.”

Simpson agreed with Wilson over the annual Section 8 voucher distribution. “A number of people have gotten housing vouchers – the so-called Section 8 program – but...there is neither enough of the actual apartments or the Section 8 vouchers to cover everybody that needs the housing,” he said.

Whatever CHA’s actual goal was with their “Plan for Transformation,” it is nonetheless a microcosm of public housing on the national level.

National policy, according to Professor Janet Smith, Co-Director of the Nathalie P. Voorhees Center for Neighborhood and Community Improvement, supports mixed-income communities, arguing that it will drive the economic and social interaction between low-income residents and the rest of the community, and further promote the upward mobility of public housing residents.

Wilson disagrees with city and national policy. “I do understand what [CHA is] attempting to do,” he said, “but the land is designated for public housing use. There are other economic development tools you can use or other land they can use for Mariano’s.”

Perhaps Smith summed up the debate best over whether to have mixed-income communities or just invest in existing communities in her book, “Where are Poor People to Live? Transforming Public Housing.” She wrote that transforming public housing land into mixed-income communities could work, but is controversial.

“On one hand, it provides the opportunity and the resources to improve the terrible, often uninhabitable living conditions of many public housing residents,” said Smith. “On the other, these efforts stand to significantly reduce the number of permanent public housing units, disrupt the lives of residents at many sites, and cost millions of tax dollars with little guarantee or evidence that the outcome will fully meet the social goals of the program.”

The latter is most salient, she posited: evidence does not exist that these desired effects would materialize.

As Cook goes into greater detail about her kidney and heart disease, her two-year-old son awakes on the couch. He raises his head up and sees me. His eyes widen, and mouth opens in a frightened manner, as if he wanted to scream but nothing came out.

Embarrassingly, my mind sidetracks from Cook’s poor physical health to the fact that her child appeared terrified by the sight of a stranger in the house.

“You gotta go pee-pee?” Cook asks her son. She takes his hand “Come on... come on,” and they walk in to the bathroom together, her slippers dragging along the floor like sandpaper on wood.

They return shortly. Cook’s son hops back onto the couch. Scooby-Doo comes on the television and a bottle quickly goes into his mouth.

Cook turns back to the topic of public housing.

“There ain’t nothing really to be done about it, you know... this is Chicago, you know. That’s all I can say about it,” Cook says. “It seems they’d be about helping their own people, but they’re not. They’re only about building up and making money for themselves.”

I ask what she thinks will happen, if she thinks she will get public housing.

“I hope,” Cook said. “All you can do is hope.”

School of Comics is an artist’s dream

Old and new school taught together

BY JOHN PORUBSKY

As Wizard World Comic Con Chicago closes for 2015, a lot of emphasis is shifted on Cosplay, short for “Costume Play,” and other current pop culture trends including celebrity autographs and collectibles.

The beginnings of comic book conventions in Chicago in the early 70’s was first and foremost about comics and the art of sequential storytelling. Fortunately there is still strong interest and passion in creating comics. Just ask the artists and writers at the show which ranges from well established professionals to those jockeying for position to enter the business.

If you enter Wizard World and thinking about getting into comics, The International School of Comics with a location now in Chicago at 1651 W. Hubbard St., represents an alternative method of schooling for talented individuals who want to pursue a career in visual storytelling.

Similar to that of the school which originated in Italy, established in 1979, instruction is divided into various areas that allow students to choose in conformity with their skills and passions.

One of the teachers and a veteran illustrator is Doug Klauba who reflects on his career and time there as an instructor. “It’s a school I would have loved to have attended when I was looking at art schools... focusing on and specializing in creating comic art by working professionals (and a multi-awarded Eisner winner, Jill Thompson),” he said. “I’ve been working in comics for roughly 10 years, beginning at local publisher, Moonstone Books, where I became their signature cover artist and helped them establish an overall creative continuity.”

“I did a couple of sequential stories for them as well as with Dynamite where I worked with Alex Ross on Project Superpowers,” said Klauba. Ross

The International School of Comics with a location now in Chicago at 1651 W. Hubbard St.

“personally chose me to work with him on the first #0 issue and then later on with painting Origin back up features. I’ve also had the opportunity of working with DC/ Upperdeck, Zenescope, Olympian, and Image - where I created a variant cover for C.O.W.L. I’m still working on my own original graphic novel in my spare time, which isn’t much between teaching, other assignments and family life,” he said.

The school offers workshops which includes Illustration (traditional and digital), Comics (sequential narrative) and Writing. There are also workshops for kids and teens to flex their creative muscles to help tell a story that’s been wanting to be told visually. The affordable and unique three-year mission of the school is achieved through continuously updated curriculums, incorporating the latest news and technology for each specific area of study taught by instructors whom are highly acclaimed in their fields.

Every program utilizes both audiovisual materials and direct communication with instructors who come from different publishing backgrounds and nationalities. Instruction is organized into theoretical and practical lessons, combined in assignments, which allow students the opportunity to apply techniques learned in the classroom setting. adopted. It was horrible to spend a day with the animals and never know if you would see them again.”

Today things are looking a lot brighter for those homeless animals. PAWS has two large adoption sites in the city, one which is on the North Side at Clybourn and Racine.

The Roscoe Village event resulted in 74 adoptions, a new high number for this particular annual event. Since its inception, PAWS has adopted out an enormous 40,343 dogs, cats, puppies, and kittens according to Sarah McDonald, PAWS Communication Manager.

“There’s a world of work involved in each animal, says Fasseas, but its work that has really been worth it.”

Famed Lincoln Square Lanes, Matty K, destroyed by fire

Lincoln Square Lanes, 4974 N. Lincoln Ave., a family-owned bowling alley nearly 100-years-old, was destroyed by an extra-alarm fire early Monday.

Chicago firefighters responding to the blaze shortly before 1 a.m. saw the heavy fire coming through the roof and immediately elevated the alarm. Several streets, including Lincoln Ave., were quickly closed to traffic.

No one was injured in the blaze, which was extinguished by 4 a.m. CPD officials speculated that the fire may have originated in the grill, but investigators had not yet entered the building. Officials said the cause remained under investigation.

Co-owner Richard Drehobl, who didn’t know how the blaze started, said he woke up to a phone call from Chicago Police saying that the bowling alley was on fire. One of his three sons, another co-owner, got pulled over while racing to the scene.

Lincoln Square Lanes opened in 1918 and was marketed as “the oldest operating bowling alley in Chicago.” It had been extensively rehabbed into more of a sports bar theme in 2012. The first floor housed Matty K’s Hardware Store which also was badly damaged. It’s believed that the building will now have to be demolished.

“All the work we did—that’s my son’s baby. We put about a million bucks into it,” he told The Chicago Sun Times. “Now I don’t know what we’re going to do. We put all these antiques in there and made it real nice.”

The bowling alley, much like the community, has changed dramatically in the last decade. The 2012 addition of pool tables, a bar with a solid beer selection, better food, a slew of big-screen TVs and a larger stage for live music made the bowling alley more popular than it had been in a decade.

Later on Monday the Drehobl’s posted a message on their Instagram site saying, “It is with heavy hearts that we bid our customers a saddened farewell. We will cherish the memories you have left us with. It is our hope that this historic alley will remain in your thoughts. The LSL family would like to thank you for your continued love and support as we look forward to the future.”

TimeLine Theatre focuses on stories inspired by history that connect with today’s social and political issues, according to their website. This season’s productions at 615 W. Wellington, include Arthur Miller’s The Price, currently running through Nov. 22; the Chicago premiere of Leigh Fondakowski’s “Spill,” based on an April 20, 2010, British Petroleum oil rig in the Gulf of Mexico, running Oct. 20 through Dec. 19; and Chimerica, the story of a photographer’s search for the mysterious man who stood in front of a Chinese army tank during a pro-democracy rally in Beijing’s Tiananmen Square 20 years after that dramatic event.

While broadly successful at their Wellington and Broadway location, they had no parking to offer theater goers and two years ago found a troublesome youth health and homeless center had opened in their same building.

At meetings last year, neighbors made it clear they didn’t want any new development which would involve razing the Perkins building. Prairie School architect Dwight Perkins, once chief architect for the Chicago public school system, designed a number of school buildings in the early 1900s including several North Side schools - Hayt, Stewart, Cleveland and Schurz. He was one of the first school architects to put washrooms on every floor instead of having students walk down to the basement and widened corridors and staircases to minimize crowding.

The Waldorf School was the second highest bidder for the job, Ald. O’Connor noted, adding that “should Svigos fall by the wayside for any reason, Waldorf will be considered if they are still interested in the project.”

City opens applications for ThinkChicago: Chicago Ideas Week

The city has announced ThinkChicago: Chicago Ideas Week is now accepting applications for participation in the fifth annual installment of the successful ThinkChicago: Chicago Ideas Week program.

The program will take place October 15-17, and serve 150 students, a number which has steadily increased since its launch in 2011, when 50 students from 13 Midwest universities participated.

The city, Chicago Ideas Week, World Business Chicago, Univ. of Illinois, and 1871 are once again teaming up to welcome elite engineering and computer science students from Midwestern universities to Chicago with the opportunity to learn about Chicago's fast-growing tech scene, meet Chicago innovators, technologists, and business leaders, and attend Chicago Ideas Week.

ThinkChicago is seeking students with an exceptional academic track record who have demonstrated a commitment to innovation and technology. It is preferred that applicants be a junior, senior, or graduate student at an academic institution in one of the following states: Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

Candidates should be interested in learning more about Chicago or considering Chicago for potential employment as part of a tech company or to start a new tech endeavor upon graduation. Candidates with work, internship, leadership, and entrepreneurial experience are especially encouraged to apply. Students can apply by visiting www.thinkchicago.net. Applications must be submitted online by 11:59 p.m. on Monday, September 7.

"ThinkChicago continues to be a draw for today's engineering and technology students that will become the business and technology leaders of tomorrow," said Mayor Rahm Emanuel. "As the program grows, we are able to showcase Chicago's thriving technology industry and attract the innovators and entrepreneurs that will grow our city's economy into the future."

This year's installment will bring the total number of students who have participated in the ThinkChicago: Chicago Ideas Week program to 600 over the last four years, and a total 725 students when combined with its sister program, ThinkChicago: Lollapalooza, which launched in 2013. While the Lollapalooza program focuses on attracting young talent nationwide, the Chicago Ideas Week program focuses on those close to home across the Midwest.

"ThinkChicago invites the Midwest's most talented students to see Chicago's commitment to technological and entrepreneurial innovation first-hand," said Brad Keywell, Chicago Ideas Week Founder and Co-Chairman. "Through our partnerships Chicago Ideas Week encourages college graduates to pursue careers in technology, entrepreneurship and more in Chicago."

"This is a great opportunity to bring together the region's top students and connect them with tech firms in Chicago looking for the next generation of engineers, designers, and entrepreneurs."

Past attendees of the Chicago Ideas Week and Lollapalooza programs have heard from leaders across the tech, business, and civic worlds – including Mayor Rahm Emanuel, Harper Reed (Obama for America 2012 CTO), Brian Fitzpatrick (Google Engineering Manager), Matt Maloney (GrubHub CEO), Zach Kaplan (Inventables.com CEO), Adrian Holovaty (Django Web Framework Creator), and have met with many of Chicago's leading tech companies, including Belly, Braintree, Brighttag, Built In Chicago, Catamaran, Centro, Civis Analytics, Cleversafe, Gogo, Google, Groupon, GrubHub, IBM, HireBrite, kCura, Morningstar, Microsoft, Motorola, Narrative Science, Nielsen, Orbitz, Power2Switch, Spot Hero, Sprout Social, Threadless, and Vibes.

"As the state's largest educator, the Univ. of Illinois shares the mission of keeping our students in Illinois after they graduate and harnessing their talent to foster progress and economic growth. Programs such as this are critical to retain top talent by exposing students to the technological and entrepreneurial opportunities available both in Chicago and across the state," said University of Illinois President Timothy Killeen. "These initiatives are crucial to attracting top talent to create and develop new businesses, and we look forward to continuing our support of the ThinkChicago programs."

This past August, the mayor held the third installment of the Lollapalooza edition of the program, which brought 125 students from across the country to Chicago for three days of ThinkChicago programming and the Lollapalooza music festival. The program hosted a Civic Tech Challenge, a pitch competition among ThinkChicago participants to propose ways in which the City of Chicago can use technology to encourage civic engagement among its constituents. Proposals addressed increasing volunteer involvement among residents, how to better connect community members with services, and how to catalyze the thousands of Lollapalooza attendees for social good. The winning proposal suggested tackling food deserts by offering food-subscription services through CPS schools. The winning team, consisting of students from Loyola, Northwestern, Case Western Reserve, Princeton, Univ. of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, and Univ. of Chicago, will receive VIP passes for Lollapalooza 2016 and automatic acceptance to ThinkChicago: Chicago Ideas Week 2015. For more information visit www.chicagoideas.com.

"During the past 50 years, investment in infrastructure (like roads and tracks) has shrunk by half. Europe spends twice as much as we do. China spends four times as much. In Chicago, 1,000 miles of road need reconstruction. And 675 bridges in Cook County are structurally deficient. Illinois roads ranked tied for last in the nation in terms of their quality."

Amtrak gets in a year," he added.

"And the switching at those stations downtown? State of the art – during the Hoover administration," Quigley noted.

Allocating federal funds for infrastructure improvement isn't just good for the transit systems themselves, but the economy in general, he said. "Every billion dollars spent on infrastructure creates 30,000 jobs."

Of course, he added, free trade depends on a stable world, which is why we need to pay closer attention to what's happening in Asia as well as the Middle East, which in recent years has gotten most of our attention.

Indeed many would say that if you wanted to know what our world would look like with no U.S. leadership then look around today. It's a mess.

Activities in the South China Sea as well as Korea pose real threats these days, Quigley said. We've almost forgotten about the troubles in the Ukraine.

North Korea has posed a real threat to its southern neighbor, where several hundred thousand Americans live, mostly in Seoul, 30 miles from the Demilitarized Zone – meaning "it's going to be very difficult getting them out if a shooting war starts."

Not far away, he noted, "the Chinese are trying to get the Okinawans to distance themselves from Tokyo. The Chinese are even building man-made islands in an effort the stake a claim to the shipping lanes in the South China Sea. The legal decisions that will have to be made could change maritime law."

Asked about how he'll vote on the controversial Iran nuclear deal, Quigley said he plans to take the full 60 days allotted to Congress before voting.

But he admitted that treaty is looking good to him.

Armed robberies on Near North Side

Asking for directions escalated to armed robbery early Tuesday morning on N. Wells St. near Walter Payton College Prep.

Just before 5 a.m., a man was robbed at gunpoint of his wallet and mobile phone by two men in a small, newer model hatchback car.

According to Chicago Police, the men pulled alongside the victim as he walked in the 1000 block of N. Wells St. They asked him for directions, then pointed a handgun at him and told him to drop his bag, jacket, wallet, and mobile phone on the ground and walk away.

The robbers are both described as male Black, 20 to 30 years old, with dark complexions. One weighs about 160 lbs., the other 190 to 245 lbs. The car they were driving was dark blue or black.

The same men are suspected in a robbery that happened less than an hour later in the 600 block of S. Wells S. In that incident, the robbers, in a car, followed their victim down an alley, pulled up and robbed him at gunpoint police said.

Senior citizen punched after stopping potential break -in

A senior citizen was sent to a hospital Aug. 26 to be treated for facial bruising and a possible head injury after interrupting a potential break-in in Rogers Park.

Officers investigating a battery call about 7:15 p.m. in the 6900 block of N. Ashland Ave. found the 76-year-old waiting at an apartment building, according to a Chicago Police report of the incident. The man, who was bruised and red in the face, said two men had punched him in the head after he confronted them attempting to scale a fence at the back of the structure.

Both men fled west on Lunt Ave. and escaped, according to the victim. Officers detained two men matching the victim’s description and brought them to St. Francis Hospital in Evanston, but the victim stated they were not the same men who’d attacked him, according to police. The man was in stable condition and expected to be released shortly.

Woman reports phone scam to police

A 59-year-old woman went to the 24th District station in Rogers Park Aug. 26 and reported a phone sweepstakes scam that had cost her $200.

The woman made the report to a desk officer about 1 p.m., according to department records. She stated a male had called her home in the 1100 block of W. Lunt Ave. claiming she won a “Good Citizen Sweepstakes” and needed only to send $200 to a specific address in order to be sent her prize money, police said.

The woman sent money via Western Union but never received the prize money, according to the report. A short time later, the same man called back asking for another wire transfer, but when she refused to send it he threatened to “come meet her” in person before saying “F— you” and hanging up, say police. The woman provided officers with the phone number and address associated with the scam.

Woman knocked down and purse stolen in West Ridge

A 52-year-old woman was knocked down before a man ripped her purse from her hands Aug. 25 on W. Devon Ave. in West Ridge.

The thief immediately jumped into a beige sedan with a passenger and driver waiting in the 2900 block of Devon Ave. and fled, police said.

One witness told officers she saw a man wearing a black hooded sweatshirt get into the back seat of the vehicle, while a second witness said the sedan had pulled near the mouth of an alley moments before the man committed the robbery, according to police.

The second witness said a woman wearing a wig had been driving when the car pulled into the alley, but she had switched places with the man in the passenger seat before the vehicle fled, police said.

The victim was not hurt during the robbery and no arrests were made.

Man robbed in alley

An Evanston man told Chicago Police he was punched in the face about 11:45 p.m. Aug. 22 in East Rogers Park during a robbery in an alley.

Officers checking the well being of a potential victim found the man in the 1500 block of W. Fargo Ave., according to police. The 54-year-old said he was getting into his vehicle when a man swinging from behind struck the right side of his face with a punch and stunned him. The attacker removed a single $100 bill from his pocket and escaped on foot, police said.

Officers toured the area headed south on Ashland Ave., where the robber first ran, but did not make any arrests, according to police.

Man robbed for prescription medication

A 20-year-old allegedly was robbed at gunpoint for his prescription medication while riding in a vehicle on Devon Ave. in West Ridge.

The victim and a friend boarded a vehicle driven by a man the victim did not know about 8 p.m. on Aug. 17, according to a Chicago Police report of the incident. After several minutes, as they entered the 2700 block of W. Devon, the driver stopped the vehicle and pointed a nickel-colored handgun at the victim, saying, “Empty your pockets,” according to police.

The victim was not carrying money but did give the driver a bottle of prescription Xanax. After being robbed, the man jumped out of the car and ran home with the gunman following him in his vehicle. The gunman was run off by members of the victims family after they reached his house in the 6500 block of N. Mozart St., according to the victim. No arrests were made.

Police charge two gang members with weapons violations

Chicago Police charged two gang members Aug 21 with felonies after they were stopped in Edgewater with ammunition for a 9mm handgun in their vehicle. Lionel Uzohosaintvil, 19, and Juan Rivera, 32, both admitted members of the Latin Kings, were stopped about 3 a.m. in the 5500 block of N. Ashland Ave. after a shooting incident in the area, police said. The vehicle, driven by Uzohosaintvil, had ignored police sirens at the intersection of Peterson and Ridge avenues, continuing south-east on Ridge until turning south onto Ashland and pulling to the curb more than four blocks south of initial contact, police said.

Uzohosaintvil had been stopped earlier the same day near Peterson and Fairfield avenues and was questioned in a separate shooting, police said. Both his and Rivera’s driver’s licenses were suspended. Officers found nine rounds in back of the vehicle in addition to an open container of beer. Both men were charged with felony possession of ammunition without a FOID card, police said.

Police waiting to talk with boy who stole phone

Police are waiting to talk with a 10-year-old boy who stole a phone Aug. 20 in the 2100 block of W. Granville Ave in West Ridge.

A 36-year-old woman said two boys on bicycles rode past her on a bench about 3:45 p.m. before circling back around. On the second pass, the 10-year-old grabbed the phone from her hand and escaped on the bicycle headed west on Granville Ave., police said.

Another 10-year-old boy who witnessed the theft told police he knew the thief and would show them to his house if his mother said it was OK. Officers went with the witness to his home where his mother said the boy who stole the phone is a “problem child” giving his mother a lot of trouble. She approved of telling officers were he lived along with the name of his mother, police said.

The boy and his mother were not home when officers arrived at their apartment, but a sister gave them her mother’s phone number and officers called her. The mother said her son has been off his medication for several months and has gotten out of control. Officers told her to attempt to get the phone back form her son and contact them as soon as she knew where he was. No further information was available.

Threat made to burn down alderman’s office

A threat to burn down Ald. Debra Silverstein’s 50th Ward office was posted June 29 to the website CraigsList.

The alderman received word of the threat by a Google Alert sent directly to her email address, according to police.

The post stated, in part, that “Ald. Silverstein is a big problem in the community, nothing is going right and it’s not clear whether this biatch took bribes from terrorists to screw up someone’s life. Really her office should be burned down and she should be taught a lesson.”

Police were investigating the source of the post and had no further information.

Gang shooting Sunday at Leone Beach Park

A 19-year-old and a 21-year-old man were injured about 8 p.m. Sunday on the 1200 block of W. Touhy Ave. said Chicago Police. fife Veejay Zala, a Chicago police spokesman.

The younger man was shot in the right arm and abdomen and was taken to Presence St. Francis Hospital in Evanston.

The older man was shot in the right leg and taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Hospital for treatment. Their conditions were not known.

Police said the two men were gang members. The shooting happened at Leone Beach Park, 1222 W. Touhy.

Oak Bank robbed

Oak Bank, 1000 N. Rush St., on the Gold Coast was robbed 5:45 p.m. last Thursday said the FBI.

A man entered the bank location but the FBI says it is unclear if he announced a robbery or handed the teller a note. What is clear is that he left with an undisclosed amount of money.

No weapon was displayed, police said.

The suspect is described as a male Black, between 20 and 25. His head was covered with a winter hat, and he wore a hooded sweatshirt.

The FBI is asking anyone with information on this crime to call 312-421-6700.

5403 SOUTH DORCHESTER - $550,000

This classic Hyde Park 1880's grey-stone exudes vintage charm. The four bedroom home retains exquisite original stained glass windows, a beveled glass door, fireplaces, and a private backyard. The main level has a beautiful living room, a separate dining room and an open kitchen with a breakfast room. Perfectly located near schools, parks, shopping and the University of Chicago campus.

• OPEN SUNDAY 2 - 3:30 HISTORIC BRONZEVILLE HOUSE REDUCED TO $327,000 •

459 EAST OAKWOOD

Built during the Columbian Exposition, this interesting house retains its vintage character after having been beautifully updated for the 21st Century. There are five bedrooms, a living room with a fire place, two full baths and one powder room, a dining room and a family room or study. The large lower level has a third new, full bath as well as a wet bar with a sink and refrigerator, a laundry room and lots of space for extra living. There is a one car garage.

• FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT - A GLORIOUS FAMILY HOUSE •

5132 SOUTH WOODLAWN - $2,425,000

This early and amazingly beautiful Wright house - with its high ceilings and huge kitchen with four pantries - is strikingly different than later Wright houses. A National Landmark treasure, the house is perfect for family and entertaining: seven bedrooms, magnificent oak woodwork and floors, beautifully proportioned rooms, enormous closets, exquisite stained glass windows, four fireplaces, two-zoned heating and cooling and an elevator that services all floors. Five rooms on the third floor, with a kitchen and full bath, can function perfectly as a separate two bedroom apartment. On a 75x165 foot lot, the house has a two car garage. And Hyde Park, in 2015, has become an even more interesting and alive neighborhood. From the Heller house, it is only a short walk to an eclectic array of excellent new restaurants, interesting shops and a movie theatre.
