Police ticketing Uptown's homeless

Tent city removed from LSD viaducts for concert, but homeless have now returned

BY GRETCHEN STERBA
Columbia Chronical

Two Chicago police officers were filmed ticketing a group of homeless people in the Uptown neighborhood while patrolling on bicycles Sept. 14 in a video posted to YouTube.

The original video, which now has more than 2,000 views, shows two CPD officers ticketing a homeless man and asking him to disassemble his tent, which they said is against a city ordinance.

Homeless individuals in the video can be heard shouting at the officers, "Go harass our alderman—he throws our medical records in the garbage!" and "The shelters only keep you for four months, then they kick you out! The only thing we need is some compassion—that's what we need!"

The incident is one of many recent events involving Uptown's homeless community. In June, the city led efforts to remove the community of homeless people who has taken up residency underneath viaducts off of N. Lake Shore Dr. near Montrose Beach known as "Tent City." The viaducts were cleared in June to prepare for a Mumford

Howard Brown to open new clinic in Rogers Park

The Howard Brown Health Center (Howard Brown) announced plans to open a 15,000 square foot medical clinic on Clark St. in Rogers Park by the end of the year. The new facility will be co-located with Gerber/Hart Library and Archives at 6500 N. Clark St.

Starting in early 2016, Howard Brown's new location will offer primary medical care, behavioral health services, STI/HIV screening and treatment, and social services. The expansion north is the result of Howard Brown's recent designation as a Federally Qualified Health Center.

The new facility will open its doors and begin providing healthcare services by the year's end and will offer complete healthcare services by early 2016, featuring primary healthcare services including a sliding scale, behavioral health services, wrap around support services, educational opportunities, and a meeting/event space.

The facility will display Gerber/Hart's collection of LGBTQ artifacts and memorabilia from Chicago, giving a contextual experience to visitors and clients.

The city and CPS issued a bid solicitation in July for the now shuttered school site, located at 5200 N. Ashland Ave.

City, CPS approve sale of Trumbull School for $5.25M

Former School to be redeveloped into housing, theater

The Chicago Board of Education approved an agreement to sell the Trumbull Elementary School site to Svigos Asset Mgmt. for $5.25 million. The sale of Trumbull represents the highest dollar value CPS has received for a site involved in the 2013 School Actions and will require the property to be redeveloped to include residential housing and a community theater.

The sales price speaks to the white hot the real estate market the Andersonville community is in now and the density that will be allowed on the property.

"The sale of Trumbull is another positive step in our deliberate process to repurpose all of our unused properties and redirect their proceeds to the classroom," said Forrest Claypool, CPS CEO. "The sale shows that when communities rally around a vision and the private and public sector work together, we can repurpose facilities, revitalize neighborhoods and bring much-needed additional revenue to the District."

Of course the community first rallied around not closing the school at all and allowing it to remain in operation serving the local community.

Following a series of community meetings led by Ald. Patrick O'Connor's [40th] office to determine the preferred uses, the city and CPS issued a bid solicitation in July for the now shuttered school site, located at 5200 N. Ashland Ave. The bid submitted by Svigos exceeds the appraised value of $4.1-$4.7

'Design out crime'

Uptown's Sunnyside Mall project adds spark to Uptown

BY FRANK ENYART
Columbia Chronicle

Some longtime Uptown residents are working to bring unity and culture to one of Chicago's most diverse, and at times, dangerous neighborhoods. Starting with a "tactical urbanism" installation—the practice of making low-cost, temporary changes to an existing environment to improve a local neighborhood—titled "Pure Imagination," this Summer members of the Uptown communities began to envision what would become of Sunnyside Mall, a stretch of walkway from Malden to Magnolia avenues.

The Sunnyside Mall area was identified by Ald. James Cappleman (46th) in his 2013 "Master Plan" as an area of interest and possible improvement within the ward. Gang problems exist in the vicinity, many of which spill out onto the Mall.

Ald. Cappleman laid out plans to add plants and a watering system to the mall, use the area as a potential showcase for public art and set up block meetings to encourage volunteer funding and cooperation on the project. According to the report, there is currently a shortage of funds to accomplish their goals.

"[The community meeting] was meant to be a kickoff to a larger, grander vision for the mall space and what we could maybe do down the road more permanently," said Brett Weidl, founder of Uptown Chicago Moms and member of the Sunnyside Mall Committee.

Though the long-term vision for the area is unclear, Weidl and Julianne Scherer—founder of the SMC—hope the area will become a center for positive community activity and programming.

To ensure the area is supported by the entire neighborhood, residents of the area were invited to voice their opinions and visions for the space at a community meeting in late August. At that meeting Scherer said the committee garnered many ideas for the future of the Sunnyside Mall.

"The majority of things we received were related [to] a yearly event calendar, so there would be a constant use of the space ... ranging from seasonal events such as Halloween events ... [to] a farmer's market occasionally."

Scherer added that the committee hopes to expand on its successes, pointing out that approximately 60 people attended the movie night that took place earlier this summer. The mall has also played host to a successful arts festival for the last three years.

With ideas such as focused lighting or dog plots, Scherer hopes to "design out the crime" and replace it with positive use of the area, which has experienced an increase in violent crimes since last summer.

Joanne Gannett, a college professor, has lived in Uptown since the 1980s and said creating a family-centric and community-driven environment is another key to eliminating the neighborhoods violent reputation.

With Courtenay Language Arts Center nearby and the rich diversity of the area, Gannett said she believes activities like community gardens or block parties will allow interaction among different demographics and create a space that invites families to lay down roots and raise a family—like Gannett and her family did

"We moved here because we loved the diversity ... and we wanted to expose our kids to the fact that the world is made up of all sorts of people," Gannett said. "I think, in general, everyone who lives in Uptown has a lot of energy [because of the diversity]."

in 1987. "We moved here because we loved the diversity ... and we wanted to expose our kids to the fact that the world is made up of all sorts of people," Gannett said. "I think, in general, everyone who lives in Uptown has a lot of energy [because of the diversity]."

Gannett said the issue of violence in the area is complicated and nuanced, but she thinks it is important to allow children to find joy and community in the diversity of their Uptown neighbors, and embrace the culture and quirkiness this diversity embodies.

Also under consideration is specific areas for children to play, create memories, and connect with other community members.

"Kids love the space. That's the kind of thing we want to see more often and facilitate," Weidl said.

A direct course of action for making the area kid-friendly has not yet been decided, but there have been some suggested, such as painting designated areas for games such as four square, Scherer said.

An inspiration for all the plans is the legacy of Jane Addams's Hull House, formerly at 4520 N. Beacon Ave., which is now the site of a condominium. In the early 1900s, the Hull House provided social services for newly arrived European immigrants.

Addams's sense of mission is something the Sunnyside Mall Committee members said they are aiming for in their work as well.

"We would like to see how we could bring continuity to Uptown and the way this space connects to the larger area [such as Ravenswood or Lincoln Square]," Scherer said. "[We're asking ourselves], 'How do you make these interconnections or create bigger dialogues between some of these bigger spaces?'"

There's something strange in the neighborhood

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

"I grew up in a haunted house in the North Center neighborhood," explained Ursula Bielski, founder of the NearNorthSide-based Chicago Hauntings. "I suppose that living in the middle of these phenomena, I naturally was curious about the causes and conditions of how they work, and about other people's experiences with the paranormal. I heard a lot of stories about Chicago's ghosts growing up because my parents were older and had a lot of relatives who talked about old stories and folklore."

"My dad was a police officer and used to tell stories of things he and his colleagues would encounter on the job that they couldn't explain," said Bielski. "And my mom as a public school teacher had many friends of different ethnic backgrounds who often shared their cultural tales of the unknown."

Want to hear some of Bielski's dad's spooky stories, of ghostly encounters at places like the Montrose Point or the old police station lockup? I'm sure she tells them and others in Chicago Hauntings' many paranormal tours (which also include a Devil in the White City excursion). A practice paranormal investigator, Bielski has more than 20 years experience leading local ghost tours.

"In college, as a history major, I was fortunate to befriend a young man who was studying parapsychology, and he allowed me to work with him on his field work--basically investigating reports of ghosts and hauntings and setting up experiments," she said. "When we graduated, I continued on my own and eventually wrote my first book, 'Chicago Haunts,' the first-ever book of Chicago's true ghost stories or paranormal history. That was a long time ago now (1996) and today there are dozens of books on Chicago's ghosts."

Bielski has been featured on numerous TV documentaries and shows, and has been involved in countless paranormal investigations of notorious locations such as Wrigley Field, the Eastland disaster site, the Congress Hotel, the Red Lion Pub, Hull House and the St. Valentine's Day Massacre site, which occurred on Clark St. south of Webster in Lincoln Park.

And speaking of Lincoln Park, Bielski's haunted tour of the neighborhood is a two-mile walk through the old City Cemetery grounds, the Zoo area, and the community itself. "Some sites are famous, but of course there are some surprises," said Bielski, who pretty much has a tour every night in October and also lectures at libraries all over Cook County.

Last weekend, Bielski held the 8th annual Chicago Ghost Con, a huge convention of people who love the paranormal which this year featured actress and native Chicagoan Virginia Madsen, also a lover of the paranormal. Madsen signed autographs and talked about filming "Candyman" -- a beloved horror film -- at Cabrini Green.

Chicago, Bielski said, is "truly known as one of the most haunted cities in the world."

"I think a lot of it comes from the fact that we have so much water in the area -- which many investigators believe acts as a conduit for paranormal activity," she says. "A lot of people point to all of the tragedy in our history to explain the prevalence of hauntings here, but I think it may be the other way around -- I believe there is some sort of naturally negative energy here that has helped to influence much of our history."

I asked Bielski also if she'd ever seen a ghost.

"I am not sure!" she exclaimed. "I had a very harrowing experience about a dozen years ago in which I woke to find a man standing on my chest as I lay in bed. Though this experience lasted almost 15 minutes -- definitely NOT sleep paralysis -- the "man" seemed to be more of an image than an entity, almost like a hologram.

"Certainly this may have been some residue of the past, and this is actually what we call a true haunting: residual energy, not intelligent entities," said Bielski. "I know it was a real experience, but I don't know if it was a 'ghost' -- an intelligent entity -- or not. I slept on the couch for four days though!"

Hot, hot, hot... was singer Marc Anthony at his recent concert here. And I am so jealous because meeting the star were Ukrainian Village resident Ellyn Harris, director of the U.S. Central Region for Smile Train, (which provides free cleft and palate surgeries to 130,000 poor children in 90 developing countries annually), and her BFF Julie Chavez, president for community engagement for Bank of America!

"The show was phenomenal," said Harris. "He puts so much into his performance. And he was extremely kind and unpretentious."

He's a hit!... Cubs manager Joe Maddon often walks through Mariano Park after Cubs games and recently, Maddon was walking through with his family when a handful of the regulars stood up and belted out, "Take Me Out to the Ball Game!"

"He had a smile from ear-to-ear and then the applause..." reported one amused park-goer.

Park yourself here... The Washington Square Park Advisory Council (WSPAC) is kicking off a community-engagement driven planning process and you can find out about it at 6 p.m., Oct. 14, at the Newberry Library, 60 W. Walton St. The night will be an informational overview of a planning project for the park that will take place over the next several months and there will be many opportunities for people to get involved, said communications chair Amy Lardner.

She said the Council has begun to develop fundraising activities to support enhancing the park's landscaping and programming, as well as to fund the strategic planning project. Last week, about 25 people attended a small fundraiser at St. John Boutique to raise funds for the council, which, among other things, sponsored a Sing-and-Play-Along in June with over 200 people participating. The piano was left in the park until September, free for all to play, and to everyone's surprise, the piano created new friendships and community as it transformed the park by inviting communication and shared enjoyment, Lardner said.

Marathon runners, they need us - we need them

The internationally renowned Chicago Marathon, one of the world's premier running races, takes place Sunday. Its 45,000 entrants, from more than 110 countries, deserve all the support that we can give them.

This is possibly the only international sporting event in which ardent, inexperienced athletes can participate, and compete, in the same setting as do the world-famous elite racers. This enormous, diverse group is an athletic form of democracy at work. Each individual runs his or special day is for our city in many ways: financial, spiritual, and communal. Their understanding and forbearance is beneficial and deeply appreciated.

As a seasoned veteran of 60 marathons (including many Chicago marathons and 10 Boston marathons), and a psychologist for more than four decades specializing in group dynamics, I can attest to this spectacular event's contribution to the well-being and vitality of everyone who gets sincerely connected and involved with it.

I am honored and fortunate that all of my marathons were completed after open-heart surgery when I was 38 years old and without any medication ever being needed. I am here to express my humble gratitude for my astounding good fortune. Without my long-distance running decades, one can imagine a very different life scenario.

As these heroic runners wind their way through the many diverse neighborhoods of our city, experiencing the joys and agonies of their bodies' exertions, let us applaud them selflessly and without reserve. They need us, and we them. This is everyone's chance to honor and dignify the human spirit at its best.

Let us wish the runners a cool, dry, wind-free day, one they will celebrate and treasure forever.

Are high tax assessments pushing seniors, fixed income folks out of homes on North Side?

Ald. Smith: 'The 'paper value' of a home does not correlate to an ability to pay taxes'

BY DON DeBAT

Long-time senior citizen homeowners and folks on fixed incomes in the Old Town and Lincoln Park neighborhoods may be forced out of these swank enclaves by record high real estate tax increases planned by Mayor Rahm Emanuel, who is seeking to raise $543 million in new tax revenue.

One long-time resident, a 71-year-old owner of a brick three-flat, was shocked last week when he received a 40% assessment increase from Cook County Assessor Joseph Berrios.

Indeed many of these people are now paying more in property taxes annually than they ever paid for their mortgages.

"Your home's market value increased to $1,356,050 from $968,260 in 2015," the triennial reassessment notice coldly stated.

Based on the 10% level of assessment, the Cook County Assessor office estimated the market value of the vintage 127-year-old three-flat at $109,442, and added $26,163 for land value for a total assessed value of $135,605.

Assessor Berrios' staff computed the assessment increase based on a sampling of recent sales of a half dozen similar vintage Old Town properties, real estate experts said. Recent home resale prices in the neighborhood ranged from $211 to $226 per square foot.

However, one real estate expert wondered if the sales of these "comparable renovated and highly upgraded properties" really matched up with properties owned by long-term residents, many who purchased modest worker's cottages in the area in the 1970s when it was a blue-collar neighborhood.

The three-flat owner already has paid real estate tax bills totaling $53,815 for the past three years. If the 40% assessment hike translates into a 40% tax hike the owner will pay a whopping $23,983 real estate tax bill in 2016.

And this is before the mayor's proposed new property tax increases go into affect.

Skyrocketing assessments in Old Town, Lincoln Park and other wealth North Side neighborhoods sparked a barrage of phone calls and email complaints to 43rd Ward Ald. Michele Smith's office asking for relief.

Homeowners are being forced

out by "crushing taxes due to spikes in the 'paper value' of their property that is exceeding 70% in some cases, and looming tax increases," Ald. Smith said. "As we all know, the 'paper value' of a home does not correlate to an ability to pay taxes, especially in the 43rd Ward."

"If we are going to consider exemptions for some Chicago homeowners, then we have to make it fair and include our vulnerable populations everywhere in the city, especially the urban pioneers who have made our communities what they are today," Ald. Smith said.

Ald. Smith has reason to worry. She barely won her last election and voting in favor of the Mayor's budget proposal, and the accompanying tax increases, may be enough of a hazard to cost her her job in the next election.

One 43rd Ward homeowner, who has lived in the same house for 45 years and currently receives the Senior Citizen Exemption, said: "This only amounts to a couple hundred dollars [in savings]. My taxes are huge while my income is fixed. I am caught between not qualifying for a freeze and really hurting with an increase." (To qualify for the assessor's Senior Citizen Assessment Freeze Exemption a homeowner must have a household income of $55,000 or less.)

The outcry prompted Ald. Smith to advocate the following property-tax rebate for long-term homeowners which would be offered if the new assessed value is more than 30% greater than the previous year's assessment:

- Homeowners over age 60 who have lived in their home for more than 18 years would receive a tax rebate.

- Homeowners who earn less than $100,000 in annual income would receive a tax rebate.

"This rebate plan will have the impact of phasing in the reassessed values that signal a jump in property taxes, even without the Mayor's proposed increased," Ald. Smith said.

Earlier, Mayor Emanuel proposed a freeze in taxes for "bungalow-belt" homeowners with properties valued at under $250,000. He openly states that he want to target the new property tax increases at those he feels are most able to pay them.

The $250,000 threshold means that over half of the properties inside the city limits will see no property tax increase. Some see this as a cynical political play to buy the 26 City Council votes he'll need to pass his massive tax increases, counting on aldermen on the West and South Sides to back the budget as their constituents will feel little pain from it.

"If we are going to consider exemptions for some Chicago homeowners, then we have to make it fair and include our vulnerable populations everywhere in the city, especially the urban pioneers who have made our communities what they are today," Smith said.

"These people are close to, or already retired, and living on fixed incomes. They have shouldered their civic responsibility for decades and they want to stay in their homes," Ald. Smith said.

Ald. Smith's rebate plan expands a proposal by 1st Ward Ald. Proco Joe Moreno, who is seeking rebates for property owners who earn less than $100,000 per year.

"We need to find a way to keep our thriving communities stable," said Ald. Smith. "It makes no sense to drive taxpayers out of the city when we are looking for new sources of revenue at this critical time."

Letter to the Editor

CPS funding and Special Education cuts

Dear Mr. Claypool:

I am writing to express my continuing concern regarding the situation at Chicago Public Schools [CPS] and to share feedback from my community. Specifically, I am addressing the elimination of numerous special education positions.

The Friday afternoon announcement caught many of my local administrators, parents and teachers by surprise, forcing them to scramble to figure out the impacts on their students, teachers and staff with little information. No one knows a school and its students as well as the principal, teachers and staff, and making staffing decisions based on a mathematical formula without taking into account individual student needs doesn't make sense.

In the wake of the announcement, my office spoke with several administrators and parents about the repercussions of the proposed cuts for the children attending our area neighborhood schools.

[Last week] The Chicago Sun-Times published a story on enrollment data and resulting cuts to over 240 schools; subsequent reports have indicated cuts of $12 million in special education spending.

Based on what I have heard from numerous school administrators, these cuts to special education are unsustainable and leave our principals with a grim choice - either fail to meet the minutes required for our special education students, or meet the minutes by segregating these children in a way that is wholly inappropriate at best and illegal at worst.

As a community, we must prioritize and fully support our special needs children. The law requires that children receive the necessary minutes to meet their individual education plans in settings that allow diverse learners to receive sufficient instruction. Shifting resources and staff away from these students will make this difficult if not impossible for schools to accomplish.

No principal or teacher should have to choose between meeting a student's individual needs, or providing them the opportunity to learn in an inclusive environment along with their peers.

For many special education students, success and growth are a direct result of the supports, efforts and programming provided them on a consistent and daily basis. Removing these supports or clustering them in settings with a broad range of ages and curriculum will likely create a wider achievement gap and negatively impact the long-term success of these students.

There is a great deal of confusion as to what formula CPS used to determine the reduction in special education staff positions. Claypool and the CPS needs to explain the exact formula used to determine the ratio of staff to diverse learner. It does not appear that the number of positions is proportionate to the number of students or the number of minutes those students require to receive instruction in inclusive settings.

These cuts to special education are unsustainable and leave our principals with a grim choice - either fail to meet the minutes required for our special education students, or meet the minutes by segregating these children in a way that is wholly inappropriate at best and illegal at worst.

For example, in one of my schools, there was a total enrollment loss of five special education students and a corresponding loss of four special education positions.

In order to meet student minutes in light of the extreme reductions in staff, as I understand it, the CPS is recommending lumping special education students up to four grades apart in one classroom, citing ISBE guidelines. It seems that the specific guidelines at issue are not designed to be a recommended approach, but more of an outside limit as to what is permissible without breaking with law.

I would guess this policy was designed to accommodate smaller districts with extremely small staffs and student populations. But it certainly does not seem appropriate for a district like CPS.

Our goal should be to provide the optimal situation for our children, and not look for ways to just meet the minimum standards. I join my constituents in being extremely concerned that we are shooting to meet only the minimums. Claypool and the CPS needs to explain the rationale for this approach.

I urge the Board of Education to solicit input from the principals and administrators before springing such drastic cuts upon them with minimal notice, little time to process and a timeline for decision-making that was virtually impossible to meet.

We are today operating in continual crisis mode. This latest crisis is yet another example. How long will the parents, administrators and most importantly, the students, be able to continue down this road? Our communities deserve better.

Cook County accepts partial Property Tax payments on website

Partial payments on unpaid property taxes can ease the financial strain of paying late.

"The easiest way to pay is online," said Maria Pappas, Cook County Treasurer. "It's surgical."

After visiting the Treasurer's website at cookcountytreasurer.com, the only thing a taxpayer needs is the Property Index Number (PIN) of the house or other property being billed, the checking or savings account numbers and the bank routing numbers, all of which are found on checks, Pappas said.

The taxpayer can make full and partial payments any time until the bill is fully paid, up to when unpaid bills must be auctioned at the next year's Annual Tax Sale.

About 264,000 property owners owe on bills for tax year 2014, mailed and payable this year, and may not know that they can make partial payments. With local property taxes increasing dramatically on Chicago's

North Side, partial payments might work well for those with low or fixed incomes.

"While making a whole payment is preferable, it is not always possible," Pappas said. "When it's not possible to pay in full, making partial payments can help ease the strain for owners of homes, businesses and land who owe property taxes."

Interest is based on the total tax due. Unpaid tax balances accrue statutory interest at the rate of 1.5% per month. Thus, less tax due means less interest due until the taxpayer can pay the balance.

"If you owe taxes, you don't need to wait to pay in full," Pappas said. "Pay what you can now and ease your way to final payment. But finish paying before your unpaid bill has to be sent to possible auction at the Tax Sale."

Cubs win rooftop dispute

Judge dismisses lawsuit over video boards, Ricketts alleged defamation of rooftop club owners

BY JONATHAN BILYK
The Cook County Record

The Chicago Cubs may not have unfurled the 'W' flag in federal court Friday, but a federal judge handed Chicago's National League Ballclub a big win in their long running legal dispute with the owners of rooftops clubs overlooking Wrigley Field.

A federal judge on Sept. 30 dismissed an attempt by the rooftop owners to persuade the court to declare the Chicago Cubs had violated the team's agreement with the rooftop owners when the franchise erected its new video boards in the Wrigley Field bleachers, obstructing the view of the ballpark from the rooftops and making the rooftops much less economically viable places at which to offer the chance to watch a Cubs game.

The judge also dismissed a defamation claim the rooftop owners had brought against Cubs owner Tom Ricketts, who they said had essentially compared them to criminal peeping toms.

Named plaintiffs in the case included Right Field Rooftops LLC, Skybox on Sheffield, Right Field Properties LLC, Lakeview Baseball Club and Rooftop Acquisition LLC.

In her opinion, U.S. District Judge Virginia Kendall said the rooftop owners had failed to demonstrate they had any legal right to either view Cubs games from the tops of their buildings or offer others the chance to pay them to watch the game.

The Cubs have a right to restrict who views their product, the judge said.

"The Rooftop [owners] argue that two possible relevant markets exist: a 'Live Cubs Game Product' market and a 'Live Rooftop Games Product' market," the judge wrote. "Neither is a plausible relevant market however because each depends upon the Cubs' presentation of live professional baseball, and a single brand product like producing live-action Cubs games cannot be a relevant market ...

"The product at issue is the Cubs presentation of live baseball games, which is the product of the Cubs alone that thus cannot be monopolized by the Cubs."

The judge also said she believed the Cubs agreement with the rooftop owners gave the team the legal right to erect the gain new scoreboards in left and right fields.

The Cubs and rooftop owners had differed on how to interpret language within the agreement which exempts "any expansion of Wrigley Field approved by million. The bid approved met the community's usage preference by requiring the property to be redeveloped to include a maximum of 49 residential units and a Chicago-based theater -- Timeline Theater Co. -- that would provide performances and educational programs. The agreement also requires the purchaser to seek landmark designation from the City's Commission on Chicago Landmarks.

"We are happy that we can bring a popular theater group and quality new housing to the neighborhood with the proposed governmental authorities" from being considered a violation of the agreement.

Kendall sided with the Cubs, who had argued the construction of the video boards in above bleachers, which was specifically approved by the city of Chicago, qualified as an "expansion" of the ballpark. Rooftop owners had argued the language applied only to the addition of seating.

And the judge tossed aside the rooftop owners' assertions Ricketts had defamed them when he purportedly compared the rooftop owners to neighbors peering through a window to watch a television program for which their neighbors paid.

The rooftop club owners had argued this statement compared them to criminals. Kendall, however, said the statement was not nearly so nefarious.

"The story can only be interpreted as expressing Ricketts's own personal frustration at the situation," she said. "Comparing the Rooftops to nosey neighbors viewing his television program is hardly an accusation of criminality. Instead, it is a personal description to personalize how he feels about the Rooftops viewing the Cubs baseball games."

Kendall dismissed the rooftop owners' entire lawsuit with prejudice.

sale of Trumbull," said Ald O'Connor. "We look forward to a finalized deal between Svigos and Timeline and subsequently to having additional live theater options in the neighborhood."

CPS is engaged in a strategy outlined by the Mayoral Advisory Committee for School Repurposing and Community Development to repurpose former school sites in ways that will meet the needs of each surrounding community and enrich neighborhoods for years to come. Since the beginning of the process, CPS has repurposed or sold 10 former school sites. Four former school sites were immediately repurposed to meet the programmatic needs of the city and CPS has reached agreements to sell six other former school sites, including the Trumbull sale.

"One component of the repurposing process is community engagement and input," said Claypool. "The District continues to work with aldermen throughout the city as part of this process, and community meetings were held yesterday regarding the potential repurposing of the former Earle, Buckingham and Burnham school sites. The District is committed to repurposing all of its unused properties, and once preferred uses are determined by the community, the District will bring bid solicitations to the market."

City completes renovation of Clark/Division CTA Red Line Station

First renovation of a Red Line Station since 1943

The City and Chicago Transit Authority (CTA) announced the completion of a major renovation project to the Clark/Division Red Line CTA station. The project added a new entrance, and fully renovated and modernized the station.

The Clark/Division station was the 16th-busiest CTA rail station last year, with more than 2.5 million station entries.

The project was completed in two stages. In the first phase, The Chicago Dept. of Transportation [CDOT] built an entirely new mezzanine and entrance at LaSalle and Division streets. The new 8,800-square-foot mezzanine at LaSalle St., which opened last summer, increased the entering/exiting capacity of the station by adding stairs, fare turnstiles, elevators and escalators. The station previously had no elevators.

The second stage of the project, which is now complete, involved modernizing the entrances and the mezzanine at Clark St. With the opening of the entrances at Clark

St., customers can now enter or exit the station at LaSalle St. or Clark St. aiding users, particularly at high traffic times of day.

"This will make life easier for the thousands of Chicagoans who get on or off the Red Line and Clark and Division," said Mayor Rahm Emanuel who was there for the ribbon cutting. "Investments like this allow our economy to grow, our neighborhoods to thrive, and our city to flourish."

The project was aided through the help of a $41 million federal tax funds. All totaled it was a $50 million construction project.

Major highlights of the renovation project include two new elevators and three new escalators; new granite floors and stairs; new decorative wall and ceiling tiles; brighter and more energy-efficient lighting; new security equipment and customer-assistance kiosks; improved communication and speaker systems; a new cast iron street-level entrances and protective canopies, and bike ramps and racks.

New classroom offers solid living skills foundation at Sullivan H.S.

Rogers Park Builders Group, donors give back to community

STORY AND PHOTOS BY BOB KITSOS

Tucked away in a quiet Rogers Park neighborhood just north of Devon Ave., Sullivan High School at 6631 N. Bosworth held a ribbon-cutting celebration on Sept. 29 to showcase the conversion of a classroom from an ordinary room into a living skills room.

The Rogers Park Builders Group (RPBG) raised over $30,000 to convert a classroom for its "low incidence" program, which mainly serves students with autism or Down syndrome. Fifty-two students are currently enrolled in the program.

"Low incidence" refers to disabilities that are relatively uncommon in the general population; deafness, blindness and autism are all considered low-incidence disabilities. Since these disabilities are fairly uncommon, not every school in the CPS system offers this type of program.

Mike Glasser, president of Magellen Properties and past president of the Rogers Park Builders Group, said, "The classroom conversion is from an ordinary room into a living skills room — equipped with washer/dryer, a complete kitchen and Glasser said with this program, real estate investors, landlords and other real estate professionals are giving back in a significant way.

More than 75 building industry and school officials attended the unveiling that kicked off in the school's Community Room, then moved to the Low Incidence Room and concluded in and Roll Band, The Hectics. Public officials Cook County Commissioner Larry Suffredin and Ald. Joe Moore [49th] also attended the event.

Following a buffet dinner, RPBG President Allen Smith welcomed the assembled crowd and thanked them for their efforts in raising the $30,000 for the project. "People went beyond the call of duty for this project. There were so many donors that did so much," said Smith.

Third-year Principal Chad Adams then presented an overview of the project and praised the movers, shakers and volunteers behind it. "We need to get on the same playing field as charter schools," he said.

The Rogers Park Builders Group was founded in 1993 by real estate professionals, independent property owners and financial institutions to help the community realize its potential. The Group's mission is to encourage and support responsible residential and commercial property investment, development and ownership in the Rogers Park Community. Some RPBG members are Sullivan alumni.

"The new site, located in an emerging hub for LGBTQ culture in Chicago, furthers Howard Brown's mission to eliminate the disparities in healthcare experienced by lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer/questioning people. Sharing a space with Gerber/Hart also gives us an exciting opportunity to provide a robust wellness experience that impacts [our clients]."

Founded in 1981, Gerber/Hart Library and Archives is the Midwest's largest LGBTQ circulating library with over 14,000 volumes, 800 periodical titles, and 100 archival collections.

"This partnership is another great milestone for the city," said Carrie Barnett, Board President of Gerber/Hart Library and Archives. "For decades, [we've] been an important repository that documents Chicago's rich LGBTQ history. Sharing a space with Howard Brown will provide new opportunities for the community to learn about and connect with our movement's beginnings, local leaders, art and contributions."

The new Rogers Park clinic will become Howard Brown's fifth service location. Howard Brown operates its main clinic at Sheridan and Irving Park, a satellite clinic on Halsted and Melrose, the Broadway Youth Center at Broadway and Wellington, and a research and administrative office at Broadway and Sheridan.

In the Spring of 2009 the news broke in the Windy City Times that the center was being investigated by the National Institute of Health for misusing money meant to finance the Multicenter AIDS Cohort Study, charges that stunned the clinic's supporters.

Although an internal investigation found that there was no intentional wrongdoing or misappropriation for personal gain, the matter was referred to investigators in the Dept. of Health and Human Services. Eventually Executive Director Michael Cook would resign and CFO Mark Joslyn would be let go over the alleged financial mismanagement.

In the end, the mis-allocated funds were reimbursed and much of Howard Brown's research was turned over to Children's Memorial Hospital and Northwestern Univ. Hospital.

Exhibit at Nature Museum highlights Chicago's ubiquitous urban wildlife

"Wildlife is all around us. You just have to know where to look," says Gavin Van Horn, director of Cultures and Conservation at the Center for Humans and Nature.

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY PETER VON BUOL

Despite being located on Lake Michigan, one of the world's largest freshwater lakes, to many of Chicago's nearly three million residents, urban wildlife is a contradiction. Last week a new art exhibit opened at the Peggy Notebaert Nature Museum City Creatures: Animal Encounters in Chicago's Urban Wilderness opened to help define some of those contradictions.

According to its organizers, the purpose of the exhibit is to help change the common misconception that Chicago is devoid of wildlife, which is ironic because the city's motto is Urbs in Horto, which in Latin translates as city in a garden.

"Wildlife is all around us. You just have to know where to look," says Gavin Van Horn, director of Cultures and Conservation at the Center for Humans and Nature, a Chicago-based non-profit conservation organization that helped create the exhibit.

Van Horn is co-editor of the soon-to-be released book City Creatures: Animal Encounters in the Chicago Wilderness, University of Chicago Press. The richly-illustrated book, a companion to the exhibit, includes many of the photographs used in the exhibit and also written essays about human-wildlife encounters in Chicago from artists' perspectives.

Among the exhibit's contributors is Keara McGraw, a Chicago-based artist who is a senior at Columbia College Chicago. McGraw illustrated two large maps of Chicago that are seen at the front of the exhibit. To her, they illustrate an epiphany she had while going to school in an urban environment.

"I grew up in the south suburbs, surrounded by nature. When I first went to school in downtown Chicago, I thought there wasn't any nature and the first map shows how I perceived Chicago. The second map shows how my perspective has changed. Nature can be found in many places," says McGraw.

One of the most-provocative pieces on display is a mounted display of dead fish created by Chicago-based photographer/artist Colleen Plumb.

The dead in Plumb's piece are alewives, a species of river herring that had invaded Lake Michigan after the construction of Canada's Welland Canal in the 1930s. While the canal made it easier for ocean-going ships to travel from Lake Ontario to Lake Erie, it caused alewives to appear in Lake Michigan. Within a relatively short time-period, their population exploded. By 1967, millions died at once and their remains littered Chicago's beaches but plenty more remained. To control them, Great Lakes wildlife authorities introduced salmon to keep their population in check and for a while, a sort of balance existed in Lake Michigan.

According to Plumb, the story of the alewives remains complex because a fish that was once considered only as a negative had itself become an important part of the equation. The fish once known only for their rank smell on sandy beaches had become an important source of food for salmon, a fish highly-prized today by sport-fishermen. About 20 years ago, two non-native species of freshwater mussels (zebra and quagga) were also accidentally introduced into the Great Lakes and out-competed the alewives for the same nutrients. As a result, with fewer alewives, there have been fewer salmon.

Plumb adds that when she first began collecting dead alewives on the beach, she did not have a specific piece of art mind. To her, they simply seemed to be an interesting subject to photograph.

"After collecting them on the beach, I just put them in my freezer. After a while, they simply became freeze-dried. They are an invasive species and I chose to use them in the exhibit as a way for us to think about invasive species," says Plumb, who is an adjunct professor at Columbia College Chicago.

North Park educator to be honored at gala

The Center for Scandinavian Studies at North Park Univ. in Chicago and its director, Charles Peterson, will be honored during Three Crowns Ball, the annual dinner-dance of the Swedish American Museum, 5211 N. Clark St.

The black-tie-optional event, which will celebrate the Museum's 39th year, will take place Saturday, Nov. 7, at the Crystal Ballroom in Evanston.

Peterson, dean of the university's College of Arts and Sciences, has directed the Center for Scandinavian Studies for 22 years and serves on a Board of Advisors that represents all five Scandinavian countries.

After five years as academic dean of an international media center in Norway, he returned in 1993 to North Park where he graduated in 1973 with a degree in music. He received his doctorate in radio-television-film from Northwestern Univ. in 1992, with a dissertation on The Political Economy of Television in Sweden.

Painting the City: Chicago's unbalanced treatment of illegal art

BY ELLEN KOBE
Medill News Service

Anyone who has lived in a relatively large city is familiar with graffiti — paint in public places. But what exactly is the difference between graffiti tagging — which is often cleaned up — versus street art — which is often encouraged by neighborhood organizations? Reporter Ellen Kobe asks anti-graffiti activists, a street artist and people in the Wicker Park and Bucktown neighborhoods about the issues that arise over these two forms of illegal artwork.

Steve Jensen revs up his black SUV on a spring Thursday afternoon. He's trolling the streets armed with his weapons: two cans of black spray paint.

He is on the lookout for graffiti tags — spray painted symbols on public property. Jensen, president of the Bucktown Community Organization and aldermanic aid in the 1st Ward, has lived in the area for 35 years and cares about the presentation of his neighborhood.

"It's a huge negative impact to the community," Jensen says. "It depresses property values. It kind of aids in crime."

Jensen drives on one of the most frequently-tagged streets — Milwaukee Ave.

"This is the area where it's problematic," he says. "All of Milwaukee going all the way out to pretty much Belmont is ground zero for all taggers."

But Jensen also points out several murals in the neighborhood, which he defines as street art. But what exactly is the difference between graffiti and street art? Technically, they're both forms of vandalism. But one certainly seems to be eradicated more than the other.

One local street artist, who calls himself Left Handed Wave, describes his purpose.

"I'm just looking for something in decay trying to bring a space back to life as opposed to like graffiti where you know, if I was catching tags or writing graffiti, then I'd be going to screw something up a little bit," Left Handed Wave said. "That's kind of the joy of graffiti."

Left Handed Wave primarily puts stickers and pastes large posters of his graphics on buildings around the city. He said he doesn't do much graffiti.

"I feel like that's a lot of younger kids, but they're basically creating a language that only another graffiti writer or someone, their homie, would understand," he said. "It's not for the greater community. It doesn't communicate to your neighborhood. Street art, posters, things with a more artistic nature, like imagery, rather than like text, language, communicates on a much higher level and it resonates, so that's why people are more prone to like street art than tags."

Back in the car, Jensen describes the average graffiti tagger.

"The typical tagger is either Hispanic or Caucasian male," Jensen said. "Fifteen to maybe mid-20s. They're usually on a bike. People that I've caught, the people that have been caught on camera, always have a backpack, always have a hoodie with the hood on. Key times for tagger are midnight to 5 a.m."

Street artist Left Handed Wave pasted this lion-like animal to a building on the east side of Damen Ave.

There's one signature tag that Jensen runs into multiple times on his drive around the neighborhood.

"This tag in front of you, Forgive Yourself, that's probably enemy No. 1 in the entire city of Chicago," Jensen said. "Sometimes he writes Forgive, sometimes he writes Forgive Yourself, and sometimes it's the number four and then give. He's kind of like Bigfoot in the forest. Some people have seen him, some people have described him — he's a white male with a ponytail, lives in Bucktown, but nobody's ever caught him."

Jensen has over 500 photos of Forgive's work all over the city. It's evidence that Jensen believes would give this man a felony and jail time if he were caught.

"So here's a Forgive Yourself on the black pole," Jensen says, getting ready to exit his car. "Since it's on a black pole and it's right there and it's highly visible, I'm just going to do a quick, put paint on it. So we'll get out, and we'll cover this one."

He leaves his keys in the ignition and slams the driver door. Jensen approaches the pole slowly, clutching the can of spray paint.

"So usually I would just drive right next to it, hop out, zip zip and back in the car, you know, just as quick as they tag it, I can cover it, right?" Jensen says.

He presses on the top of the can, and black paint blows in the air, eradicating the white "Forgive Yourself" mark.

"By coming through every couple days and covering up their stuff, it kind of takes [away] the impact, it takes the wind out of their sails," Jensen says. "Because their whole thing is they want their friends who ride by, either on the train or on bikes... When they see their tags are obliterated really quickly, that stops them from tagging."

But Jensen certainly isn't the only one cleaning up graffiti in Chicago. The city's Dept. of Streets and Sanitation budgeted $3.4 million for graffiti blasters in 2015. Plus, there are also other graffiti activists.

Adam Natenshon runs a company called Graffiti Action Hero, which gathers chambers of commerce, special service areas and community organizations for what are called Graffiti Action Days. These volunteer events invite residents to clean up their neighborhoods with graffiti products provided by his organization.

Natenshon points out a mailbox

"This tag in front of you, Forgive Yourself, that's probably enemy No. 1 in the entire city of Chicago," Jensen said. "Sometimes he writes Forgive, sometimes he writes Forgive Yourself, and sometimes it's the number four and then give. He's kind of like Bigfoot in the forest."

on the corner of Montrose and Wolcott avenues in Ravenswood. It has several graffiti tags, which he says would be easy to remove.

"It would just take a little bit of the right graffiti remover, a sponge and a little bit of training," Natenshon says. "It would not take much time at all to get it nice and clean."

Natenshon says that his graffiti action days can clean up graffiti for a fraction of the cost that the city spends each year. He thinks putting all this time and money into cleaning up graffiti is worth it.

"If you're the owner of a new business, and you go to different neighborhoods to explore different places to consider opening up your new coffee shop, and you walk down the street, what is your feeling? Does it feel safe? Does it feel inviting? Do you think patrons would want to come to your establishment in that neighborhood?" Natenshon says. "And if the answer is no, then there's a problem. And I think that again graffiti can send a negative message and one that may not necessarily be accurate to the community."

But Natenshon isn't trying to swipe every single drop of paint that he sees on public property. He believes there's a difference between a graffiti tag and street art, and he tries to educate others about this philosophy, too.

"Graffiti tagging is much more about me writing my name on the street," Natenshon says.

"It's 'Joe was here,' and it might mean something to the graffiti tagger, it might mean something to the graffiti tagger's friends. It doesn't mean anything to the rest of us. Street art is very different. It looks different, it feels different. The way it interacts with you, the third party observer, is different.

Street art is really focused on the observer, and Chicago has great street art. It can be very creative, it can be very artistic, and it's very much about getting somebody who's walking down the street to stop and say, 'Oh wow that's really interesting or different.'"

On a Thursday morning, Left Handed Wave checks up on one of his posters in Ukrainian Village. It's a creature's head with tusks. The lion-like animal covers the majority of a vacant building's brick wall with its multicolored mane. It's been there since this winter, and Left Handed Wave is surprised it hasn't been taken down or covered over yet.

"It's lasted a really long time," he says. "Someone should have gone over it already. But that's cool, that means that people like it and respect it, and that always makes me feel good."

Police warn about armed robberies in Lakeview

The Chicago police have issued an alert to North Siders of recent robberies that occurred Sept. 23 and 26. In these incidents, the offender approached the victim on the street or in the alley while displaying a handgun. Times and locations are listed below:

Incidents have occurred on the 1000 block of W. Newport at 5:20 a.m. Sept. 23, and again on the 2400 block of W. Berenice, 2:20 a.m. Sept. 26.

In the Newport incident, the offender was described as a male black, 22-27 years old, 5'-9" tall, 150 lbs, wearing a black hooded sweatshirt, black sweatpants, and gym shoes with black and blue trim.

In the Berenice incident, the offender was described as a male black, approximately 20 years old, 5'-11" tall, 170 lbs, wearing a red sweater, a skullcap, and jeans with stitched patterns on the back pockets.

Police are asking anyone with information on these crimes to contact the Bureau of Detectives – Area North 312-744-8263 and note Pattern P15-N-217CA.

Two robbed in East Lakeview

A Lakeview man reported being robbed at knifepoint near Belmont Ave. and Broadway around 2:30 Sunday morning. No suspects are in custody.

The victim told police that two men approached him, produced a knife, and took his ATM card. One offender was described as a heavy set male black. The other was a male black who wore a hat and had an average build.

Another victim told police that he was robbed around 2:20 a.m. on Saturday in the 1100 block of W. Addison St.

That victim told police that two male blacks physically assaulted him and took his iPhone, wallet, and debit card.

One of his attackers stood about 5'-6" tall and wore a red shirt with khaki shorts.

The other was about 5'-8" tall and he wore a black shirt with camouflage shorts or pants.

Robbery charge for alleged purse thief

A South Side man is charged with robbery after he allegedly stole a 58-year-old woman's purse in Lakeview. A private citizen captured the suspect and an off-duty officer helped detain the man before police arrived. He then took the woman's purse from a back porch and crashed into the victim as he tried to run out the rear gate.

Noel Valentine, 22, entered the victim's backyard in the 3400 block of N. Marshfield around 2:45 p.m. Sept. 18 and asked her for directions, prosecutors say.

The screaming victim ran after Valentine, who was promptly tackled by a 40-year-old man.

Police say they found Valentine in possession of the woman's purse.

He is additionally charged with theft of lost or mislaid property for allegedly being in possession of a state ID and MasterCard that had been issued to a Calumet Park woman.

The second woman was the victim of a strong arm robbery in the West Pullman neighborhood on Dec. 9, 2014, police say. She lost her purse, cell phone, and miscellaneous credit and debit cards in the attack.

Bail for Valentine is set at $80,000.

"Charity" fundraiser arrested

Prosecutors say three teens were raising money for a non-existent charity called "SOSAD" when one of them spit in the face of a Lincoln Park business woman who told them to leave her shop.

The three were arrested Sept. 17, within days of multiple businesses reporting that phones and other valuables had been stolen by young male and female blacks who entered their premises while pretending to be raising money for the charities.

Arrested along with two unidentified juveniles was Darion Dunbar, 18, of the East Side neighborhood. He's charged with trespassing and soliciting charitable donations without a permit.

Police say they saw Dunbar drop several "SOSAD" flyers during a short foot pursuit before his arrest.

"Please support the SOSAD Youth" the flyers read, "donate $5-$10-$15-$20 YMCA."

Investigators called a phone number on the flyer and spoke with the YMCA's executive director who told them that they "do not have anyone collecting donations door-to-door. This scam happens all the time."

The victim who was spat upon identified Dunbar as one of the offenders who refused to leave the salon and swore at her. He has not been charged with any of the reported thefts.

Man wanted for robbery in Albany Park

Police report that there have been three recent Strong Arm Robberies in Albany Park. In these cases, an unknown male offender approaches female victims and forcibly takes their property.

The first incident occurred 4:04 p.m. Sept. 28 on the 3400 block of W. Lawrence Ave. The second occurred on the 3600 block of W. Lawrence Ave. 2:30 p.m. Sept. 30. The final incident occurred 8:15 p.m. Sept. 30 on the 4400 block of N. Lawndale.

In two cases the offender is described as a male black, 40-45 years old, 5'-9 to 6'-02 tall, with short black hair with a birthmark or impairment on his face, wearing a black coat. In the other case, the offender is described as a male black, 22-23 years old, 5'-6 to 5'-7, with black hair, wearing a black coat.

Police are asking anyone with information on these crimes to contact the Bureau of Detectives – Area North at 312-744-8263 and refer to case #HY441855, HY444472, HY445202.

Uptown man arrested for selling cocaine near Swift School

Chicago Police say Julian Dior Wilkinson, 24, of the 4200 block of N. Marine Dr., has been charged with distributing cocaine near a school after making a drug deal with an undercover police officer in an Edgewater parking lot.

Wilkinson was arrested at 5:36 p.m.

Sept. 23 at 6009 N. Broadway adjacent to the Thorndale CTA Red Line station and within steps of the Swift Elementary School and Broadway Armory Park.

Lakeview woman wins tussle with parolee

A 29-year-old parolee is back in prison after being charged with burglary, battery, and resisting police in the 3700 block of N. Bosworth.

Police who responded to calls of a man pulling on door handles in the area around 11:30 a.m. Sept. 18 came across a 40-year-old woman wrestling with Scott M. Veith in an alley.

Scott M. Veith

"He was in my garage," the woman told officers as she tried to detain the man. Police were able to overpower Veith and take him into custody.

According to prosecutors, the woman was carrying groceries from her car to her house when Veith allegedly began taking items from her wallet, which was still inside her vehicle.

Police say Veith pushed the victim and struggled with her in an attempt to get away, causing injuries to her neck and back.

Veith managed to pocket $26.

His parole has been revoked and he now sits in the Stateville Correctional Center awaiting trial.

Mugger arrested after his get-away car drives away

A 23-year-old Humboldt Park man was arrested and charged with robbery after his accomplice got scared and drove off in their get-away car, leaving the man to fend for himself as witnesses got involved.

It all played out less than two blocks from Chicago Mayor Rahm Emanuel's Ravenswood home.

Police were called to the 1900 block of W. Cullom around 11:30 p.m. Sept. 27 after a resident heard a woman being mugged outside of his home.

Officers arrived within minutes and engaged a suspect in a brief foot pursuit through nearby alleys and yards before arresting him in the 4300 block of N. Wolcott.

Kameron D. Alston is now charged with robbery.

Witnesses reported that a Nissan Rogue had been waiting for Alston to finish the robbery, but the female driver sped off when she realized that the crime had been discovered, leaving Alston to go it alone.

Woman files suit over date rape case

A Chicago woman is suing over claims of violations of the Gender Violence Act against a fellow former classmate at North Park University.

Abigail Humber filed a lawsuit Aug. 14 in Cook County Circuit Court, Law Division against Waseem Sous, alleging that he raped her while the two individuals were attending the school as undergraduate students.

According to the suit, Humber was attending a party at the invitation of Sous with a friend of hers on the night of Feb. 10, 2010, when he drugged Humber with a date rape drug in her drink and proceeded to rape her as she fell unconscious from the drug in his apartment bedroom. The claim states she visited the campus health center to report the rape and for treatment and was taken to Swedish Covenant Hospital, where the incident was reported to the police.

Humber is seeking damages of more than $50,000 – plus the request of a jury – and such other relief as the court may deem just or equitable as a result of Sous' unlawful conduct toward her as she continues to suffer from damages of emotional distress, the claim states.

Men sentenced to prison for trafficking dozens of guns from Indiana on streets of Chicago

A Chicago man who helped purchase 43 firearms in Indiana and transport them to Illinois for sale on the streets of Chicago was sentenced Friday to 37 months in prison.

After purchasing the weapons at gun shows and from individual vendors in Crown Point and Indianapolis, Winston Geraldts helped bring the firearms into Illinois and sell them on the South Side.

Unbeknownst to Geraldts, the Chicago buyer was cooperating with law enforcement officers from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives.

Geraldts, 25, pleaded guilty in May to one count of illegally transporting firearms across state lines.

Geraldts used middlemen to facilitate selling the guns to the cooperating source. In four separate meetings on April 22, 2012, the middlemen sold 20 weapons to the cooperating source at locations in the Greater Grand Crossing and Chinatown neighborhoods. The following day, the middlemen sold 23 more guns to the cooperating source in a Chinatown parking lot.

Five other defendants, including one middleman, were charged in connection with this investigation:

Levaine Tanksley, of Chicago, served as a middleman in the transactions with the cooperating source. Tanksley pleaded guilty to unlawfully transporting a firearm and was sentenced to more than 11 years in prison.

Charles Lemle, of Chicago, acted as security for at least one of the firearm deals with the cooperating source. Lemle pleaded guilty to unlawfully transporting a firearm and was sentenced to 10 years in prison. Prior to the guilty plea, Lemle violated the terms of his pretrial release by possessing a gun on New Year's Eve 2013. An additional indictment was filed, and Lemle pleaded guilty to being a felon in possession of a firearm.

Michael Hall, of Chicago, acted as security for at least one of the firearm deals. Hall pleaded guilty to unlawfully transporting a firearm.

David Lewisbey, of South Holland, served as the leader of the Indiana-to-Illinois gun trafficking ring. He was convicted at trial of dealing and transporting firearms. Lewisbey was sentenced to more than 16 years in prison.

Maurice Strickland, of Chicago, lived in a residence in the Greater Grand Crossing neighborhood where the guns were sold to the cooperating source. He pleaded guilty to unlawfully transporting a firearm and was sentenced to 42 months in prison.

New baseball field available for high school athletes and residents

Chicago high school and youth baseball players looking to sharpen their five tools or become the next “Kid K” in the majors now have a new baseball field to hone their talents.

The new ballpark located near Lane Tech High School on Addison St., about a mile from Wrigley Field, is owned and operated by the Chicago Park District [CPD]. The field includes seating for 1,250 spectators and fans and will be used for Chicago Public High School League baseball games, as well as a potential host site for IHSA state baseball playoffs. The CPD also will make the field available for recreational leagues and use by the general public.

The Cubs, Cubs Charities, Wood Family Foundation, City of Chicago, State of Illinois, CPD, Chicago Public Schools, Turner Construction, Clayco and Weiss Architects all contributed to make the ballpark project possible.

“It’s exciting to see Kerry Wood Cubs Field open and ready for kids to start playing baseball,” said Kerry Wood. “I am humbled by the generosity of the Chicago Cubs, Cubs Charities, City of Chicago and CPD for making this dream a reality, not only for me and my family, but for all of the youth baseball players who will have the opportunity to play at the field.”

Beyond a field of dreams for young baseball players, Kerry Wood Cubs Field intends to be a community anchor to enhance the surrounding area, increase recreational activities and improve the quality of life for Chicago residents.

“Cubs Charities believes developing the next generation of all-stars starts with a strong foundation in health, fitness and education,” said Cubs Charities Board Chair Laura Ricketts. “Our support of Kerry Wood Cubs Field underscores our commitment to improving the quality of life in our great

The foundation works to improve the lives of children in and around Chicago by raising funds and awareness for its children’s programs and other children’s charities they support.

“I’m happy to see Kerry Wood Cubs Field open at Clark Park,” said Ald. Pawar. “I’m proud of the partnership - together we took this idea from a concept to reality.”

“It is fantastic that a ballpark of this magnitude will be available to high school students across the city who want to develop and showcase their talents,” said Earnest Radcliffe, head baseball coach, Morgan Park High School. “Playing at [this field] will give these student athletes a sense of pride, especially understanding this field was named after one of the best pitchers to ever play the game.”

Following the ribbon cutting, Kerry Wood threw a ceremonial first pitch and the field was immediately opened for community residents to enjoy. The first high school regular season game will be played in March of 2016.

& Sons concert, and the homeless have not been allowed back to the area since, according to officials.

Last weekend a drive by showed that there were indeed no tents set up under the viaducts but the homeless are back, sleeping on cardboard or in multiple layers of bedding.

Ryne Poelker, an Uptown resident who organized a rally in June to advocate for the neighborhood’s homeless community, said homelessness has been a major problem in Uptown since the 2011 appointment of Ald. James Cappleman (46th). Poelker said the alderman has aided in shutting down a number of shelters and single room occupancy hotels in the neighborhood and opposed affordable housing developments. “He’s pushing out homeless people.”

“I saw a lot of the homelessness in the park as a consequence to the things [the city] is doing to the [single room occupancy] housing,” Poelker said. “During his first term, he closed down two big buildings that had homeless or at risk people living there. He shut those down for the benefit of his developer and real estate friends so he [could] double the rent of those buildings in the neighborhood.”

According to 2011 data from The Chicago Coalition for the Homeless, 55% of agencies that provide aid in the form of homeless prevention grants ran out of money that year.

Ald. Cappleman declined to respond to those charges, but cited the 46th Ward Master Plan, the alderman’s 2013 plan to improve the 46th Ward community to explain his strategy for addressing homelessness in the area.

The plan cites the duplication of homeless outreach services in some areas of the neighborhood and a lack of any services at all in other areas as major causes for the prevalence of homelessness. To combat this, it proposed the creation of a single organization that would oversee the delivery of those services to the entire area.

“The long-range goal is to create a system where one case manager is assigned to a
