Howard Brown's $5M Rogers Park Clinic expansion

Howard Brown Health plans to renovate and expand its Rogers Park clinic at 6500 N. Clark St. by adding exam rooms, dedicated behavioral health space and an expanded laboratory hoping to increase its capacity to serve more patients.

The plan for expansion will convert 10,500 square feet of existing office and storage space into clinical and patient care areas. Howard Brown plans to add five more primary care exam rooms and four behavioral health consultation rooms. In addition they will relocate and expand their on-site laboratory, add two care coordination and case management offices and improve the reception, registration, waiting, restroom and circulation areas. The fixes also include HVAC, tuckpointing and roof repairs.

The total buildout is expected to cost $5 million, with $3 million being funded by Illinois taxpayers through a state grant. Through this expansion Howard Brown hopes to serve over 10,000 patients annually (an increase of 2,400) with 28,000 to 32,000 yearly encounters.

The need in the surrounding community is well documented with Rogers Park federally designated as both a Medically Underserved Area and a Low-Income Primary Care Health Professional Shortage Area.

"This is a vote of confidence in the work our teams do every day to provide high-quality, integrated, patient-centered care to all who need it," said Dr. Travis Gayles, President and CEO of Howard Brown Health. "This expansion comes at an important time. This funding will help us strengthen our ability to expand access and continue delivering high-quality care."

Referendum on mental health services passes with 85% of vote

A referendum question on the ballot in the last election to establish the Mid-Northside Expanded Mental Health Services Program [EMHSP] was approved with over 85% of the vote.

The "yes" vote supported establishing a program to provide residents with free mental health services funded by an increase not to exceed 0.025% of the assessed value of all property in the Edgewater, Lincoln Square, and Uptown areas.

For taxpayers, the bottom line will be a $4 increase for every $1000 you currently pay in property taxes.

The location of a future mental health facility will be decided by a governing commission created with the passage of the referendum question. Commissioners will be community members nominated by local nonprofits and approved by the governor and the mayor.

The center will most likely be central to the three communities and close to public transportation.

The tax funds collected will provide direct mental health services for any resident in the area

Chicago Avenue Bridge reopening delayed 'till Spring, distrust of CDOT grows

Doubts over, and distrust of the Chicago Dept. of Transportation [CDOT] are growing after they spent the last few years removing commercial parking, constricted roadways with concrete barriers and obstacles, while also shutting down multiple bridges over the Chicago River for repairs - including the Chicago, State, Lake, and Cortland bridges.

And now they want you to kick granny out of your car in the middle of the roadway, rather than at the curbside, when dropping her off on a street with a privileged bike path.

Almost every North Side alderman whose ward touches the Chicago River today is complaining about the harm CDOT is doing in limiting transportation over the river.

Medical practitioners are told, "First do no harm." The sentiment originates from the ancient Greek physician Hippocrates who said a physician must have two special objects in view with regard to disease: "to do good or to do no harm."

It's a maxim that CDOT might consider taking up too, as recent projects of CDOT seem to have only suffocated their patient, doing much harm.

Last week this newspaper published a story on the city expanding its network of spy camera ticketing that - in part - noted drivers could still pull to the curb for less than a minute to pick up or drop off passengers on streets that had privileged bike paths running adjacent to the curb. Well this newspaper heard from John Greenfield, the city's top spokesman for privileged bikers, who noted that was incorrect… he says that CDOT insists that your poor old granny is going to have to be set loose in the middle of the roadway, not curbside, when you drop her off at the doctor's office or her favorite store.

Keeping busways and bikeways free of obstructions obviously makes life easier and more pleasant for privileged bike and scooter users. Cars and trucks pulling to the curb would force bikers to detour a few feet, so the city's new rule is no pulling to the curb, even for a few seconds. That is now a ticking offense.

"There is no grace period for stopping, standing or parking in

The final sack

The slider has left the building

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY JOHN HOLDEN

The White Castle restaurant, located at 5940 N. Ridge Ave., abruptly closed its doors for business in early-to-mid-October. What exactly led to the closure remains unclear. Some neighbors reported that daytime business in recent years seemed slow. But then again, the 24-hour-a-day chain is perhaps best known as the destination for late-night, post-bar crowds. And one could often see long lines of cars waiting for drive-through service in the wee hours of the night.

Employees of the Edgewater store told customers in the waning days that the property has been sold for redevelopment. It is not clear from government records who currently owns the site.

FINAL see p. 16

Artist rendering of proposed development at 6124 N. Sheridan Rd.

Plans revealed for former Kindred site

Edgewater neighbors are getting a look at the new five-story building that will replace the now demolished former home of Kindred Hospital, 6124 N. Sheridan Rd.

The hospital ceased all medical services in April of 2025, blaming low occupancy rates (hovering around 36%) and an excess of long-term acute care beds in the local area.

Sitting just south of Granville Ave., the project is a rarity in that it will include off-street parking for all 59 units. The rear entrance off the alley will hold a 59-vehicle parking garage.

The developer plans to follow the zoning established under the Lakefront Protection Ordinance, unlike the Fern Hill development just south of this site at Emanuel Congregation, 5959 N. Sheridan Rd., which is seeking a special privileged zoning exemption to build a high-rise beyond the allowable zoning.

All units will contain a private balcony and residents will also have access to a rooftop deck. The project is now seeking Plan Commission approval later this month, with the site already being zoned for over 80 units. Presently no construction timeline has been announced.

We need a fresh Popeye, not fresh tattoos on Veterans Day

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Have you ever gotten a tattoo?

Many G.I.s picked up colorful body illustrations from military service, often editorializing on the geography of World War II, or wars in Korea, Vietnam or Iraq. Many U.S. Sailors have simple anchors adorning forearms, shoulders and chests.

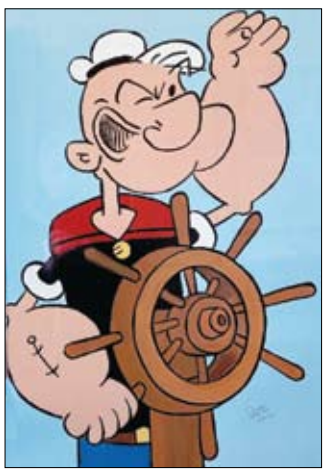

This newspaper comes out on Nov. 11, Veterans Day. So it's a good time to think about our troops.

The connection to various generations of tattoos is often a source of cultural bonding. "Down with Hitler," was one thing in the 1940s. "Harvard Forever," is quite another.

Tattoos can have an impact during elections. Opinions may change, but tattoos never do. Candidates may come to regret some tats later in life, whether they're a long-serving American politico or maybe someone just starting out in politics, like Graham Platner, the former Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate in Maine with the Nazi Totenkopf tattoo on his chest.

Tattoos can be a cogent form of personal illustration, powerful "tags" to keep track of beloved ideals, beloved people, brutal disfiguring, painful events or gang affiliations and bad decisions.

If you can withstand the pain of this art's application, then there are few limits to this artistry. It's yours for the duration of your living.

Elzie Crisler Segar's Popeye.

No wonder its been the favorite art of pirates, sailors, cops, the incarcerated, surfers, rock stars and people searching for permanence.

Perhaps no tattoo has ever been as famous as Popeye the Sailor man's ship anchors, created by American cartoonist Elzie Crisler [E.C.] Segar.

Popeye first appeared in cartoon form in 1929, during the Depression era, that financially tragic period of American life. Popeye gave hope and a patriotic direction to his cartoon watchers. Standing up for critical American values, reaching out with lots of patriotic advice. Assisting in the shaping of stability in the era in which both Hitler and Mussolini came to dictatorial power in their nations.

Popeye's popularity never waned. He gathered strong-willed followers as the world was plunged into darkness and warfare. But Popeye never gave up hope. The American people didn't give up hope either. A nation forged out of the experiences of new Americans fleeing the hardship and cruelty of the approaching war in which tattoos took on deadly new meaning.

It reminds me of our current world predicament. From missiles flying over Russia and Ukraine to troops engaged in Iran. Will there be any tattooing over these wars? The frightening reality of warfare is that it can be lightning quick. It should not to be taken lightly.

We need a fresh Popeye, not fresh tattoos. We need some larger than life Americans to restore our hope, our economy, and our trust in leadership. We have enough deranged, mercurial leadership filled with avarice and insider stock tips. We have enough self-serving leaders whose disconnect from Chicago, Cook County, Springfield and America, sadly continuing to plunge us off the abyss.

Popeye the Sailor man still generates hope among our nation. Amid all the disharmony hope still rises. The ability of Americans to vote in the last Midterm was provided to us by our troops.

We remember the symbol of Popeye this Veterans Day, and all veterans. Peace through strength. Walk softly and carry a big can of spinach for Popeye.

Smart Streets ticket enforcement expanding to street sweeping

North Side residents may want to play closer attention to street cleaning dates and hours now that the Dept. of Finance is implementing Smart Street Enforcement for Street Cleaning tickets.

The Smart Streets program uses automated camera enforcement for bus lanes, bike lanes, bus stops, commercial zones, and parking meters. Now the automated AI-empowered ticket writing scheme is expanding into ticket generations tied to standard street cleaning enforcement.

The program received City Council approval for a phased, citywide rollout extending through 2027 and 2028.

A standard Chicago street cleaning parking violation carries a $60 initial fine, and the Dept. of Streets and Sanitation has expanded the schedule for street sweeping to Thanksgiving.

Street sweeping citations are issued based on posted neighborhood sweep schedules. While members of the Dept. of Finance will continue to enforce parking restrictions for street sweeping, tickets may now be sent via mail rather than paper being placed on the vehicle itself.

Commercial Loading Zone fees to triple

Outside the Central Business District on the North Side, the annual fee for a Commercial Loading Zone [CLZ] of up to 20 feet is proposed to rise from $110 to $350—more than tripling.

A standard Chicago street cleaning parking violation carries a $60 initial fine, and the Dept. of Streets and Sanitation has expanded the schedule for street sweeping to Thanksgiving.

CLZs are short-term curbside spaces designated to help small businesses with deliveries and reduce double parking.

The substantial fee increases for neighborhood businesses everywhere, will hit commercial corridors hard. These are the areas where small businesses anchor communities and act as critical economic engines.

The zones are for commercially licensed vehicles, visibly branded business vehicles, or passenger vehicles that hold a valid Non-CLZ Permit. Regular passenger vehicles without a permit face citations for parking in loading zones.

Inside the Central Business District, CLZs are being installed. These new user-paid CLZs function much like the City's metered parking system but are specifically designed for the loading and unloading of commercial vehicles. They are intended to provide access for commercial deliveries, reduce double parking, improve traffic flow, and promote turnover in designated loading zones.

Users may purchase 15-minute increments of time at a rate of $3.50 per 15 minutes. The purchased time covers parking in any user-paid CLZ.

The fine for an unpaid/expired commercial vehicle meter is $140. The fine for a passenger vehicle parked, stopped, or standing in the CLZ is also $140.

Additionally, fines for double

Chicago festival grounds proposal raises questions over benefits

BY SEAN REED
The Center Square

On Nov. 3, Chicago voters overwhelmingly voted in support of a permanent festival grounds for the city in a non-binding ballot question. While there was support, the question may have left some with more questions about the proposal.

The question, which asked if the city should have its own festival grounds on publicly owned land, didn't advise voters of a location, costs to the city's taxpayers or when planning would begin.

Ald. Nicole Lee [11th], the councilwoman behind the ballot question, said a festival site would help shift the delay and closure of public parks after events like Lollapalooza or Riot Fest.

After a particularly rainy Riot Fest concluded in Douglass Park, neighborhood residents complained the park's grass had been entirely killed and the park was mainly a field of mud.

Residents complain each year that the festival ruins the park, but Riot Fest's organizers say they bear the costs of restoring the park.

This year, restoration began two days after the festival concluded, and the festival's founder, "Riot" Mike Petryshyn said it cost them between $400,000 and $600,000.

"They're asking us to vote on a public land use for music festivals and concerts. Sounds cool? Maybe. Probably not. What happened the last time we had public land use for a concert is Northerly Island Huntington Bank Pavilion. 100% booked by Live Nation – no room for independents," Nick Heineman said.

One co-owner of the independently owned music venue Bookclub in the Lakeview neighborhood, Nick Heineman, raised questions in a video on the venue's social media about who would control and benefit from the proposal?

"They're asking us to vote on a public land use for music festivals and concerts. Sounds cool? Maybe. Probably not. What happened the last time we had public land use for a concert is Northerly Island Huntington Bank Pavilion. 100% booked by Live Nation – no room for independents," Heineman said.

A September study by the Vanderbilt Policy Accelerator found that the Huntington Bank Pavilion at Northerly Island has been rented to LiveNation through a lease agreement below market-rate, and the city has skipped out on the chance to renegotiate the terms of their agreement with the company to use the private land.

The city gets $350,000 per year for Live Nation to use the property, $1.25 per ticket and portions of

Wheelchair basketball in Edgewater

Youth and adult tournaments bring in the best ballers in Illinois to compete for championship

The Chicago Park District is hosting a wheelchair basketball tournaments this weekend. The 15th annual Basketball Bonanza, a youth tournament, will be held on Nov. 17, while the annual Second City for adult games will take place on Nov. 14 and 15.

Both competitions will be at Broadway Armory, 5917 N. Broadway, and competition will begin at 9 a.m.

The competition features over 100 athletes in wheelchairs participating in each tournament. The games on Saturday will be a round robin style competition to determine seeding for the bracket style Championship Tournament held on Sunday. The competitions are open to the public for free to view and cheer on the competitors.

"It is incredibly rewarding to witness athletes of all abilities compete at a high level, while fostering a tight knit community in their local park," said CPD CEO, Carlos Ramirez-Rosa.

Paralyzed veterans first played the sport in 1945 at the Corona Naval Station in California and Framingham, MA. Doctors used the game to help veterans regain strength, independence, and dignity, while rejecting pity.

Dr. Timothy Nugent was a key figure in adaptive sports. Nugent directed college programs for individuals with disabilities at the Univ. of Illinois. In 1949, Dr. Nugent helped establish the National Wheelchair Basketball Association and organized the first National Wheelchair Basketball Tournament with six teams. The game is now played in over 100 countries.

Illinois expands property tax breaks for veterans to include World War II vets

BY MARIA PAPPAS

Illinois lawmakers in recent years have enacted significant changes to property tax exemptions benefiting veterans, including a landmark provision for those who served during World War II. These changes underscore our commitment to support veterans in Cook County and beyond.

Maria Pappas

The Illinois Property Tax Code makes veterans who served during World War II exempt from paying property taxes on their primary residences, regardless of their disability status. Those benefits extend to unmarried, surviving spouses of World War II veterans due to service-connected death.

Veterans with service-connected disabilities also qualify based on the severity of their disability as certified by the U.S. Dept. of Veterans Affairs. It's important for property owners to know about the exemption. They include standard Homestead Exemption for Veterans with Disabilities. Those with a disability rating of 30% to 49% receive a $2,500 reduction in their home's equalized assessed valuation [EAV].

Veterans with disabilities rated 50% to 69% receive a $5,000 exemption; Those with disabilities rated 70% or more receive a 100% exemption from property taxes on up to $250,000 of EAV.

As for renewal and transferability, an automatic renewal of this exemption due to the COVID-19 pandemic has ended. Applicants must re-apply for the exemption annually. Surviving spouses can retain the exemption or transfer it to another primary residence after the veteran's passing.

Detailed eligibility criteria and application procedures are available on the Cook County Treasurer's website at cookcountytreasurer.com. Veterans and their families are encouraged to visit the website for step-by-step guidance through the application process.

This exemption is not just about financial relief; it's about our commitment to honor and recognize the service of veterans. By expanding access to property tax exemptions, we're saying thank you and hopefully providing some stability and financial security. These changes are meant to give veterans and their surviving spouses the benefits they deserve without having to frequently reapply.

As we recognize Veterans Day, I believe it's important to reaffirm our collective responsibility to support those who during this country's time of need answered the call to serve.

For information on property tax exemptions and to determine eligibility, visit my website at cookcountytreasurer.com. Together, let's do our duty to honor and support Cook County's veterans.

Haven on Lincoln now set to take in new residents

After almost three years of work, the Haven on Lincoln is ready to start accepting new tenants. The property will house troubled souls seeking help for substance abuse addictions and mental illness.

The Haven, 5230 N. Lincoln Ave., will offer stabilization housing, an idea that emerged first out of the COVID pandemic and government-imposed economic lockdown. That was when the city used federal funds to rent hotel rooms as non-congregate housing for the homeless during the pandemic.

The goal of the Haven project is to provide transitional housing and services to homeless people who are also living with untreated physical problems like drug and alcohol addictions, and behavioral mental health issues. Backers hope to improve the overall health and housing outcomes for incoming residents.

The facility is slated to begin taking in its initial residents this week following the final state and environmental clearances. The last step before the Haven can open officially is receiving a No Further Remediation letter from the Illinois EPA, which proves the site meets safety standards.

The city invested a total of $14 million (using federal COVID relief funds and $5.5 million from the Lincoln Ave. TIF district) to transform the former motel into a non-congregate homeless shelter, before gifting it to CCO.

As the property will offer bridge-housing along with medical/behavioral services, open leasing or direct public applications are not available. So those who wish to stay at the Haven will need to contact Cornerstone Community Outreach [CCO].

Chicago Dept. of Health, the Dept. of Housing [DOH], and CCO, partnered to turn the former Diplomat Motel site into housing. The site was purchased in 2020 for $2.9 million by the DOH and redeveloped by the City of Chicago, and then ownership was transferred to CCO to operate as a transitional housing facility.

By providing individual units, rather than shared sleeping spaces and bathrooms, alongside health and social services, CCO hopes to connect more people to housing, medical and behavioral health care, and better long-term health outcomes.

The city invested a total of $14 million (using federal COVID relief funds and $5.5 million from the Lincoln Ave. TIF district) to transform the former motel into a non-congregate homeless shelter, before gifting it to CCO.

CCO plans to work with various healthcare provider partners, housing agencies, and community organizations to connect incoming residents with care, benefits, and permanent housing.

other revenues. In exchange, the company gets exclusive use of the amphitheater that was built and expanded by the Chicago Park District using $4.7 million in taxpayer funds.

The near-decade-long agreement was made in 2013 and the city's share of revenue has not been adjusted for inflation after it was renewed annually beginning in 2022, despite concert ticket prices nearly doubling since Live Nation began operating the venue.

And Heineman isn't alone about the concern over what parties are in control of venues in the state.

"These anticompetitive business practices also stacked the deck against Illinoisans, who faced higher prices and fees," Illinois Attorney General Kwame Raoul said after the states won the suit at trial.

Illinois Attorney General Kwame Raoul was one of 33 state AGs to continue a joint multi-state and U.S. Dept. of Justice anti-trust lawsuit against Live Nation and Ticketmaster after the DOJ came to a settlement with the company early this year.

"These anticompetitive business practices also stacked the deck against Illinoisans, who faced higher prices and fees," Raoul said after the states won the suit at trial.

No language proposing a permanent festival grounds in the city has been released publicly, though many residents and some aldermen have pointed to Milwaukee's festival grounds, which hosts the music festival Summerfest annually, as a guide.

Henry Maier Festival Park, owned by the City of Milwaukee, is maintained and operated by a non-profit through a partnership.

Open house Nov. 14 on Chicago River Trail extension proposal

The Lakeview Roscoe Village Chamber of Commerce is hosting an open house meeting 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, to discuss a future river trail extension to fill the gap between Belmont and Diversey.

The meeting will be held at Rockwell on the River, 3057 N. Rockwell St.

Meeting Nov. 19 over new housing project at Clark / Wrightwood

There will be a community meeting 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, at the 43rd Ward office to discuss a proposed development at 2577 N. Clark St., which is the former site of Briney Swine.

The applicant is seeking a rezoning from B3-2 to B2-5 to allow for a seven-story mixed-use development with ground-floor commercial space and 47 residential units.

Correction; conversation with new NITA Board Chair Nov. 16

Last week this newspaper published a note about a public meeting to give people a chance to ask questions and learn more about the new Northern Illinois Transit Authority [NITA], hosted by State Sen. Sara Feigenholtz [6th].

In that story we published the wrong date for the meeting. The meeting is 6:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 16, for those who would like to join a conversation with NITA Board Chair Tom Kotarac.

The event will be held at Third Space Chicago, 716 W. Addison St. The event is free and open to the public, but space is limited and advanced registration is required. Visit https://docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAIpQLSdx0Va0IqfP7GPBxmgoXyFHzMxAVPi2HhBC8335AySHdgTX7A/viewform.

Community meeting Nov. 19 on Uptown housing project

There is a community meeting scheduled for 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19 to discuss plans by a developer who is seeking a zoning change to build a six-story, 95-unit mixed-use building at 4730-52 N. Clark St. with ground floor commercial space, but only 36 off-street parking spots.

Prior to the onslaught of Transit Oriented Developments, prior zoning for a project like this would have required at minimum 95 off-street parking spots for residents, not including commercial needs.

The site is particularly susceptible to parking problems due to Chase Park being located right next door, and ever since the city removed half the parking spots on Clark St. to install privileged bike lanes.

The site previously housed Chicago Community Collaborative / Collaborative for Community Wellness [C4] alongside a group of low-rise commercial structures and a small parking lot.

Police seek feedback on Flock cameras

The Chicago Police Dept. is conducting a review of their spy camera network use and is seeking public comment on the revised draft of the CPD's Special Order S03-20, "Automated License Plate Reader [ALPR] Systems." This draft will implement revisions to CPD's management, maintenance, use, and accountability for its authorized ALPR Systems.

There are an estimated 812 ALPRs within a 10-mile radius of downtown Chicago, of which 185 to 210+ are specifically identified as Flock Safety cameras (alongside devices from Motorola Solutions and Genetec).

Police say that ALPR Systems play a vital role in the investigation of violent crimes, shootings, and homicides. ALPR Systems also assist in high-risk missing persons investigations. Given the importance of this technology in the CPD's public safety efforts, they have continued to assess the use of these systems.

As part of their review of public safety technology, CPD has invited the community to review and provide feedback on the directive that includes additional guidelines regarding the use of external ALPR systems which CPD has access to.

CPD officers have accessed Flock's database through Memorandum of Understanding agreements and data sharing from private/external owners. Audit logs revealed CPD officers conducted over 23,000 searches using Flock's database in a three-month span from May through July 2026.

This draft policy is now open for public comment through Thursday, Nov. 12. To participate, visit www.chicagopolice.org/policy-review/cpd-automated-license-plate-reader-alpr-systems/.

These external ALPR systems, including Flock, are systems in which CPD's access is limited to search queries. CPD and the City of Chicago do not own or operate the external ALPR systems and do share any data through Flock. But Flock itself is sharing captured information with the federal government using the same equipment.

This updated draft policy includes some guardrails hoping to ensure the appropriate and effective use of ALPR systems in Chicago-based investigations.

Nova Music Festival hostage survivors on stage at History Museum

Brothers Guy and Gal Gilboa-Dalal are in Chicago to share their story through the songs that helped connect them during their separation during The Music of Captivity and Release: An Evening with Guy and Gal Gilboa-Dalal, 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 11, at the Chicago History Museum, 1601 N. Clark St.

Both brothers were at the Nova Music Festival in Israel on Oct. 7, 2023, when it was attacked by Hamas and the al-Qassam Brigades, along with Palestinian civilian mobs.

Guy was taken hostage to Gaza, while Gal survived and fought for his brother's freedom. Now reunited, they will share their experiences in an intimate evening of music, personal storytelling, and conversation with the audience.

Inspired by MTV Unplugged, The Music of Captivity and Release features live musicians performing songs meaningful to the brothers, woven together with their memories of family, survival, and the journey toward healing.

This event is being hosted in collaboration with Consulate General of Israel to the Midwest and Art Over Hate Collective, an organization that uses art to support individuals and communities affected by violence and trauma. Tickets start at $36, visit https://secure.artoverhatecollective.org/nx/portal/neonevents/events?path=%2Fportal%2Fevents%2F61280

As rising prices hit North Side, debt crisis spurs free online legal resource

BY JUDITH RUIZ-BRANCH

As rising costs add strain to North Side household budgets, polling data show nearly one-third of Americans worry daily about their debt load. In Illinois, nearly one in five residents with credit card debt has balances in collections, according to Illinois Legal Aid Online [ILAO].

Local taxes and insurance are out control, driving up rents; while utility and energy bills and the taxes added to them continue to rise driven by high inflation - which has become the new normal - just as the Federal Government devalues U.S. Currency to deal with their own high debt load.

Housing is the largest single expense for most North Side households. Strong demand combined with limited new construction have pushed median rents and home prices significantly higher. According to recent data from Extra Space Storage, median rent has climbed roughly 46% over a five-year stretch.

Chicagoans also face heavy tax pressures, including high property, income and sales taxes that roll over into rental rates, steep state and local gas/consumer taxes, and targeted municipal fees like the 9% "Cloud Tax" on digital streaming and subscriptions.

While daily expenses like groceries and transit are closer to national averages than in coastal metro areas, premium cost increases are heavily concentrated in popular North Side and West Loop neighborhoods.

To help people navigate potential alternatives, ILAO has developed a self-help online resource, called Debt Help Illinois. The chat-based website asks users questions, then provides tailored guidance.

Steve Uhrich, ILAO consumer debt solutions product manager, said many people do nothing about debt because they can't afford to pay the balance and believe there are no other options.

"They owe a few thousand dollars on a credit card or medical debt, and they don't have a few thousand dollars in the bank," Uhrich explained. "The thing is, they do have more options available to them, and they can often negotiate a discounted settlement."

As legal needs often outpace available resources, Uhrich said the website is designed to help fill what he called "the justice gap" for residents, to help determine whether they need to consult a consumer attorney.

America should honor, and never forget WWII heroes

The Home Front
by Don DeBat

Herbert Lankford Benson, Jr.

As more than eight decades have passed since the end of World War II, on Veterans Day every American should look back in time and honor those who served in our armed forces during the last "good" war.

Between Dec. 7, 1941 and Sept. 1945, more than 16 million Americans served in World War II. This writer, who is a "World War II baby" born in 1944, is proud of family members, friends, and those vets I worked with and greatly respected. Those veterans served in the biggest and greatest war planet earth has experienced.

Hollywood stars such as John Wayne, Humphrey Bogart, Ronald Reagan, William Holden and other famed actors did their part for the war effort in dozens of World War II propaganda movies that are now being rerun endlessly during Veterans Day week.

However, real war is about endless battle stress and fatigue, missing loved ones, eating bad food, and being bitten by snakes, mosquitoes and contracting malaria, or dying in combat.

These World War II heroes primarily joined voluntarily or were drafted into the armed forces, left their families at home, and put their lives on the line for up to five or more years.

"A man who serves his country gives more than his time," noted Rob Souvigny, grandson of Howard Busk, a U.S. Marine who served on Iwo Jima and other campaigns in the South Pacific. "A soldier gives his courage, his commitment, and years of his life to protect the freedom of his children, family and future generations he will never meet."

Many tens of thousands of American veterans died or were seriously wounded doing that deadly work, at a salary of $2 or $3 a day. Overseas, a buck-Private's net annual pay was $45 a month, or $540 a year. A Sargent pocketed $78.78 a month, or $943 annually. A higher-ranked Staff Sergeant earned $110.16 a month, or $1,202 a year overseas.

In World War II, U.S. combat deaths totaled 407,316 in Europe and the Pacific, and another 671,278 casualties were listed as wounded in action. Survivors earned a Purple Heart. Most also earned service medals, such as occupation, campaign and victory citations.

Now, on Veteran Day in 2026—some 85 years after the start of World War II—it is time for readers of this newspaper to take time to review a few of the sad, heartrending, and heroic stories of Chicago military veterans. They were loved as family members, friends and co-workers in the newspaper business this writer knew over decades.

Chicago Daily News warriors

In 1968, this writer first met several World War II old-timers as a reporter on the staff of the Chicago Daily News. They were hard-drinking, cigarette-smoking combat veterans who typed news stories with two fingers. They rarely said a word about their war experiences.

• Robert (Bob) Schultz, always cool under deadline pressure, was a bomber pilot on a B-25, the twin-engine bomber featured in the 1942 raid on Japan by Gen. Jimmy Dolittle in the movie: "Twenty Seconds Over Tokyo."

Schultz flew an amazing 32 successful combat-bombing missions over Germany and Europe. He survived, was decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Air Medal with three clusters. However, he said few words to staffers about his experiences.

Schultz worked for the Daily News for 27 years as a reporter, chief political correspondent and finally as City Editor. He passed away at age 66 in 1989. He had three daughters. One of them, Susy Joan Schultz, proudly followed her father into the newspaper business as a Chicago Sun-Times reporter.

• William (Bill) F. Mooney was the "Old-School" man of the rewrite desk. Mooney kept a bottle of Jack Daniels whiskey in his drawer for a post-deadline snort in his coffee. He smoked constantly, and spit into newsroom spittoons. A white-haired, blue-eyed veteran of war and newspapers, Mooney was respected as the fastest rewrite man of his time. Mooney talked as fast as he typed, but said little about the war. He passed away from emphysema and a bad heart in 1985 at age 66.

A former police reporter, Mooney's speech was peppered with cop lingo, such as "they sneezed the gaffer, but the quail lammed out." (Translation: Suspect was arrested. His wife eluded authorities.)

In 1940, a year before Pearl Harbor, Mooney enlisted in the Canadian Army Infantry and was sent overseas, where he met his future wife, Margaret, a nurse in the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corp.

After the U.S. entered the war, he transferred to the U.S. Army Air Corp. He served in World War II for 54 months as a tail gunner on a U.S. B-17 bomber.

In 1943, Mooney's flak-raked bomber was shot down in flames over Germany. He bailed out, parachuted to the ground, was captured and imprisoned for 22 months in Stalag 17, the infamous German prison camp featured in the 1953 Hollywood movie, "Stalag 17." William Holden

Police Beat...

Burglar caught after 14 cars are broken into on a single Irving Park block

A man was taken into custody Sunday after breaking into at least 14 cars on a single Irving Park block, according to preliminary CPD reports. Police also recovered a stolen car that they believe he drove to the area.

Officers responded to the 4000 block of N. Richmond just after 3 a.m. after a 911 caller reported seeing a masked man breaking into parked cars. The burglar was still hard at work when the cops arrived, but he ran into an alley after spotting the police, officers said. They found the man in an alley behind the 4000 block of N. Francisco, sporting cuts on his hands.

Back on Richmond, police found an abandoned red Honda that had been reported stolen from the West Side along with a toolkit that appeared to be burglary equipment. Police also found property taken from several of the vehicles. They were attempting to identify and contact the owners of the recovered items.

A preliminary count found that 14 vehicles had been burglarized on the block, according to the report. The suspect was taken to a hospital for treatment of his hand injuries before being transported to a police station for processing.

Two women robbed at gunpoint by masked men in River North

Two women were robbed at gunpoint Nov. 7 in River North after a pair of masked men jumped from a car and confronted them on the street, according to Chicago police.

The women, both 40, were walking in the 800 block of N. Clark St. around 11:30 a.m. when a white vehicle pulled alongside them. Two men got out, pulled handguns, and demanded their property, according to CPD.

The victims handed over their belongings, and the robbers fled south on Clark St. with their handbags. Neither woman was injured. Several witnesses immediately called 911 to report the robbery, describing the suspects as two Black men wearing masks and dark clothing.

Officers reviewing surveillance footage determined that the getaway vehicle was a white Honda Accord with temporary license tags. The car was last seen heading toward the Ontario St. feeder ramp after the robbery, police said.

No arrests had been announced, and police did not release additional descriptions of the suspects.

Burglaries spree, criminal damage strains North Side

Chicago police are warning North Side business of a recent string of burglaries and criminal damage to properties throughout the city. Because the list of crimes is so long, we will only note those crimes that occurred on the North Side.

The offenders arrive in stolen vehicles, then exit and then use sledgehammers and rocks to shatter storefront windows. The offenders then entered the business, removed the cash registers, and flee in the stolen vehicles.

On the North Side, incidents include: 1600 block of W. Montrose Ave. on Oct. 27, at 3 a.m.; 2100 block of W. Belmont Ave. on Oct. 27, at 3:35 a.m.; 2400 block of N. Clark St. on Oct. 27, at 3:57 a.m.; 2500 block of N. Clark St. on Oct. 27, at 3:57 a.m.; 2500 block of N. Clark St. on Oct. 27, at 3:57 a.m.; 2500 block of N. Ashland St. on Oct. 27, at 4:30 a.m.; 3400 block of N. Clark St. on Oct. 27, at 4:35 a.m., and on the 3200 block of N. Broadway St. on Oct. 27, at 5:17 a.m.

The offenders are described as four African American males, from 5'-5" to 6'-6" tall, dressed in all black clothing.

Those who have any information on these crimes can contact Area One Detectives at 312-747-8384 or Area Two Detectives at 312-747-8273 or Area 3 Detectives at 312-744-8263, or submit an anonymous tip at CPD-TIP.com and use reference #26-CWP-030.

Man charged with burglarizing 17 businesses stretching from North to South Side

A man already charged in connection with eight business burglaries across Chicago is facing additional charges after detectives linked him to nine more break-ins, including eight businesses burglarized during a one-hour spree on Oct. 15, according to Chicago police.

Charles Kelley

Charles Kelley, 19, remains the only person arrested in connection with a burglary crew that police believe is responsible for 30 or more business break-ins across the city over the past six weeks.

In a statement Saturday, CPD said detectives identified Kelley as one of the burglars who targeted eight businesses between roughly 3 a.m. and 4 a.m. on Oct. 15. He is expected to face charges Sunday involving burglaries at businesses in the 4600 block of S. Bishop St., the 4300, 6900, 8600, and 9100 blocks of S. Ashland Ave., the 2200 block of W. 95th St., and two businesses in the 2100 block of W. 95th St. Kelley was previously charged with additional burglaries on Oct. 15 in the 2100 block of W. 95th St. and another in the 100 block of W. 95th St., all within less than 30 minutes.

Police also identified him as a suspect in another South Side business burglary at 4:01 a.m. the following morning, Oct. 16. Records show Kelley was arrested later that day and charged with misdemeanor criminal trespass to a vehicle and disorderly conduct.

He was still on pretrial release in that case when he allegedly joined at least two other men in another series of business burglaries on Oct. 27. That morning, Kelley allegedly attempted to burglarize a business in the 3400 block of N. Clark St. in Wrigleyville, according to police. We previously reported that a burglary crew targeted Al's Italian Beef, 3420 N. Clark St., around 4:25 a.m. The burglars damaged the restaurant's storefront but apparently failed to get inside. Other attempted burglaries were reported nearby, including at a frozen yogurt shop in the 3500 block of N. Halsted St. and a dry cleaner in the 3200 block of N. Broadway.

The crew also struck businesses particularly hard along the 2400 and 2500 blocks of N. Clark St. in Lincoln Park that morning. Burglars smashed their way into more than a dozen storefronts, most of them restaurants, and primarily targeted cash registers. Kelley has not been charged in connection with those break-ins, which occurred minutes before the attempted burglary in Wrigleyville.

He was also accused of participating in three business burglaries within just over an hour during the early morning of Sept. 30. Those break-ins were reported in the 2900 block of N. Clark St., the 2700 block of N. Ashland Ave., and the 2300 block of W. Chicago Ave.

Despite Kelley's arrest, overnight burglary crews continue to target local businesses. On Nov. 5, a crew broke into more than 10 businesses along two blocks of N. Wells St. in Old Town.

At least three men exited a white Honda Passport shortly before 4 a.m. and smashed windows and doors along the 1400 and 1500 blocks of N. Wells St. Hopkins said officers initially pursued the burglars but were ordered to end the chase on Lake Shore Dr. under CPD's no-pursuit policy. He renewed his push for tools such as drones and StarChase, a GPS tagging system that can track suspect vehicles without requiring officers to maintain close pursuit. Hopkins also said he would work with CPD and the Cook County Sheriff's Office to secure additional resources for the corridor.

Nov. 5's break-ins came just nine days after a crew targeted dozens of North Side businesses during the Oct. 27 spree. Police believe that crew is responsible for at least 30 business burglaries across Chicago during October, though Kelley has been charged in connection with only one of those incidents.

Teen charged in 18 business burglaries dating back to May

A 17-year-old boy is now accused of being part of a prolific burglary crew that has been breaking into businesses across Chicago for months. CPD announced the development overnight, saying the teenager is part of the same group of thieves and vandals as Charles Kelley, the 19-year-old who has been charged in 17 burglaries.

While Kelley's charges cover only burglaries dating back to Sept. 30, police say the 17-year-old's crimes began May 7. The revelation suggests the crew has been operating far longer than previously understood and that the damage and theft losses inflicted by this small group of criminals could be substantially greater than initially believed.

CPD has not identified the teenager because his case is being handled in juvenile court, where records are shielded from public view by law. Police said he was arrested Saturday to face 17 counts of burglary, one count of attempted burglary, and a misdemeanor charge of criminal damage to property.

The first burglary he is accused of committing occurred at a business in the 2400 block of N. Clark St. around 3:30 a.m. May 7. That location is notable not only because the crime dates back six months, offering a glimpse of how long the crew may have been operating, but also because the same block of Clark St. was ravaged by a burglary crew that smashed its way into more than a dozen storefronts just a couple of weeks ago. The teenager is not charged in connection with those recent break-ins, but he is accused of another burglary on the same block early on Sept. 30.

During the overnight hours of Sept. 30, the teenager also allegedly burglarized businesses in the 2900 block of N. Clark St., the 2700 block of N. Ashland Ave., the 2300 block of W. Chicago Ave., and the 800 block of N. Western Ave. Kelley is also charged in the first three of those cases.

The teenager is accused of targeting 12 businesses early on Oct. 15. The locations included businesses in the 4600 block of S. Bishop St.; the 4300, 6900, and 8600 blocks of S. Ashland Ave.; the 9100 block of S. Ashland Ave.; the 100 block of W. 95th St.; and seven businesses in the 2100 block of W. 95th St. Kelley is also charged in several of those burglaries.

As recently as Nov. 5, a burglary crew broke into more than 10 businesses along two blocks of N. Wells St. in Old Town, prompting Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] to renew calls for police to adopt technology that could help track fleeing suspects without resorting to dangerous vehicle pursuits.

Thieves stealing locked, parked cars in Lakeview, Uptown, Police aren't saying how Chicago police are warning North Siders of recent motor vehicle thefts in the Uptown, Lakeview, Lakeview East and Buena Park neighborhoods.

Chicago police say a surge in auto thefts involving locked, parked vehicles, as a series of thefts on the North Side began almost exactly when a similar pattern in Fulton Market and West Town ended.

In a community alert issued Nov. 3, police said thieves had "entered" the vehicles before stealing them but did not explain how they gained access or started the cars. The wording suggests the vehicles were driven away rather than towed, although CPD has not confirmed how the thefts were carried out.

The alert echoes one issued for Fulton Market and West Town two weeks ago. That warning identified a series of thefts between Oct. 1 and Oct.13. The new alert says the North Side thefts began Oct. 12 and continued through this week. The two patterns, then, overlap by just one day. CPD has not said whether the same people are responsible for both series or whether the apparent shift in locations is coincidental.

One possibility is the use of electronic key-programming devices, which police believe are contributing to a renewed rise in auto thefts across Chicago. However, CPD has not said whether such equipment was used in any of the 19 thefts identified in the two alerts.

The devices are legitimate tools used by locksmiths and automotive professionals. But their ability to create or program vehicle keys has also made them attractive to car thieves. Online listings for similar equipment advertise features such as frequency detection, "smart key creation" in as little as 60 seconds, and key programming for more than 700 vehicle models, including those made by Honda, Toyota, BMW, Volkswagen, and General Motors.

The technology represents a significant shift from the techniques associated with Chicago's "Kia Boys" era, when thieves exploited a security vulnerability that allowed certain vehicles to be started with little more than a USB cable. Auto theft reports reached record levels in 2023 and 2024 amid that wave of thefts. Those thefts began declining in 2025, but auto thefts are rising again, up 5% citywide this year. Police are increasingly encountering thieves who can use electronic equipment to target a broader range of vehicles.

Still, key-programming devices do not necessarily allow thieves to steal any vehicle. Their effectiveness can depend on the vehicle's security system, the availability of compatible equipment, and the operator's skill. Autel, a manufacturer of automotive diagnostic and key-programming equipment, announced this year that it is adding security-validation protocols to some of its key and immobilizer products.

In each of these incidents, an unknown offender(s) entered into an unoccupied, locked motor vehicle parked on the public way and took possession of the vehicles.

Incidents include one on the 3500 Block of N. Fremont 3 a.m. Nov. 1; the 3800 Block of N. Pine Grove 11:50 p.m. Oct. 30; the 800 Block of W. Buckingham 11:54 a.m. Oct. 26; 800 Block of W Newport 10 p.m. Oct. 26; the 4200 Block of N. Hazel 2:15 p.m. Oct. 21; the 700 Block of W. Sheridan 4 p.m. Oct. 21; 600 Block of W. Lawrence 3:30 p.m. Oct. 16; the 600 Block of W. Roscoe St. 4 p.m. Oct. 14, and on the 800 Block of W. Agatite on Oct. 12, at 5:50 a.m.

There is no known description at this time of the offender(s).

Man who mugged woman near the Mag Mile while on ankle monitor for CTA robbery gets 14-years

A man accused of robbing a woman near the Magnificent Mile just four days after a judge released him on electronic monitoring has pleaded guilty to that crime and an earlier CTA robbery, court records show. Emile Hobson, 34, received consecutive sentences totaling 14 years from Judge Tyria Walton. However, with each sentence reduced by half under Illinois sentencing rules, Hobson is expected to serve just seven years.

Emile Hobson

Walton is the same judge who released Hobson on electronic monitoring twice while his CTA robbery case was pending. Her second release came despite records showing that he had violated monitoring conditions within a day of leaving the Cook County Jail and gone missing from supervision.

Chicago police initially arrested Hobson for an early morning robbery on Nov. 1, 2025, at the Roosevelt CTA station. An 18-year-old woman was transferring trains around 12:42 a.m. when Hobson approached her and threatened to hurt her unless she handed over her purse, prosecutors said. He walked away with the bag, but CTA employees called 911, and officers detained him nearby and recovered the woman's purse.

Later that day, a judge ordered Hobson detained, citing the random nature of the attack, Hobson's previous robbery conviction, and his "willingness to prey on vulnerable people in public." Judge John Hock called Hobson "a clear threat to any person he might hSt. an opportunity to rob."

Six weeks later, on Dec. 15, Walton disagreed with Hock's assessment and released Hobson on an ankle monitor. Court records show that the electronic monitoring office detected a "major violation" the next day: Hobson had been ordered to remain at home around the clock, but records indicate he did not return until Dec. 19, four days after his release. He also failed to keep the monitoring device charged. It entered "sleep mode" on Dec. 22, preventing officials from locating him. Walton signed a warrant the next day.

Hobson appeared before Walton again on Jan. 27, records show. Despite the earlier violations, she released him on electronic monitoring a second time. Just four days later, he robbed another woman

Gunshot detection wins overwhelming support in Chicago as Cook County judges keep their seats

BY CWBCHICAGO

Chicago voters delivered a strong message in favor of gunshot-detection technology last week, with roughly 447,000 casting ballots to support its reinstatement. That's about 128,000 more votes than Mayor Brandon Johnson received when he was elected in April 2023.

But Cook County voters appeared ready to retain every judge on the ballot — including those linked to controversial rulings in high-profile criminal cases.

A little more than 72% of Chicago voters supported a non-binding referendum calling for the reinstatement of gunshot-detection technology such as ShotSpotter. The result closely tracked public-opinion polling, which found roughly 70% of residents wanted Mayor Johnson to keep the system before he shut it down in Sept. 2024.

The referendum does not require Johnson's administration to restore ShotSpotter or sign a contract with another provider. But its wide margin gives aldermen and community advocates more leverage as they try to convince the mayor's office to reverse course.

Meanwhile, despite recurring public anger over judges releasing repeat offenders or handing down unpopular rulings in violent crime cases, every Cook County Circuit Court Judge seeking retention appeared likely to secure at least 60% of the vote to earn another six-year term.

Among judges who handle criminal cases in Chicago, Ursula Walowski came closest to falling short. She had received just over 62% support, with 98% of precincts reporting. Walowski attracted attention during the campaign after Injustice Watch reported that higher courts had overturned her decisions 25 times during her first six years on the bench — "substantially more" than the totals for the other five criminal court judges seeking retention this year, the outlet reported.

Other judges connected to heavily criticized cases won by much more comfortable margins. Teresa Molina-Gonzalez, the judge who put Blue Line fire attacker Lawrence Reed on the street, received support from more than 70% of Cook County voters. In August 2025, Molina-Gonzalez put Reed on an ankle monitor after he knocked out a psych ward social worker, saying, "I can't keep everybody in jail because the State's Attorney wants me to."

Three months later, Reed was accused of setting a woman on fire aboard a CTA Blue Line train in the Loop.

Old Town burglary spree has alderman demanding CPD develop alternatives to its 'no-pursuit' policy

BY CWBCHICAGO

A burglary crew smashed its way into more than 10 businesses along two blocks of the Wells St. business corridor in Old Town Nov. 5, leaving broken storefronts and frustrated business owners in its wake. The latest overnight spree has Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] once again calling on Chicago police to adopt technology that could help officers track fleeing suspects without engaging in dangerous vehicle pursuits.

Just before 4 a.m., at least three men exited a white Honda Passport and broke windows and glass doors of businesses along the 1400 and 1500 blocks of N. Wells St. The affected businesses appeared to have little in common. A salon, an ice cream shop, a bar, a tobacco shop, a Mexican restaurant, and numerous other storefronts were hit. Hopkins said more than 10 businesses were hit.

"These crimes violate the security of our neighborhood and leave local businesses to absorb the costs of stolen property, damaged storefronts, and interrupted operations," Hopkins said. "Business owners should not have to begin their day sweeping up broken glass, and our community should not be expected to accept these incidents as routine."

Hopkins said he was told that officers initially pursued the burglars but were ordered to end the chase on Lake Shore Dr. under CPD's no-pursuit policy.

"It is deeply frustrating that officers responded and attempted to apprehend those responsible, only to be directed to discontinue the chase," Hopkins said in an email to constituents Thursday afternoon. "Vehicle pursuits can be dangerous, and protecting the public must remain paramount, but placing restrictions on vehicle pursuits without providing effective alternatives is a policy failure I have repeatedly criticized over the past two administrations."

Hopkins, who chairs the City Council's Committee on Public Safety, said Chicago needs to acquire technology that allows officers to track fleeing suspects while reducing the danger to pedestrians, motorists, and police.

"That is why I have advocated for technologies such as drones and StarChase, a GPS tagging system designed to help police track a suspect vehicle without maintaining a close pursuit," he said. "I have even held hearings with experts on these technologies in the Committee on Public Safety. These tools offer alternatives to dangerous chases and support safer apprehensions."

Hopkins acknowledged that aldermen do not have the authority to direct police staffing, strategy, or tactics. But he said he would work with CPD and the Cook County Sheriff's Office to secure additional resources for the Wells St. corridor.

"Our businesses are essential to Old Town's character and vitality. They deserve a sustained, effective response that addresses this repeated criminal activity and holds those responsible accountable," he said.

Hopkins also called on Mayor Brandon Johnson to reconsider policies affecting neighborhood safety and work with the City Council to adopt modern public safety technology.

Last Thursday's break-ins came just nine days after dozens of

Feds demand revisions on student mental health screenings without parental consent

Under current state and district rules, Chicago Public Schools [CPS] follows Illinois guidelines that allow annual mental health screenings for students in grades 3 through 12 using an opt-out process rather than requiring mandatory written parental consent. These local rules policies now face active federal challenges.

On Oct. 30, the U.S. Dept. of Education's Student Privacy Policy Office [SPPO] demanded revisions to the Illinois State Board of Education's [ISBE] guidance on administering mental health screenings without parental consent and separating the files from students' education records.

Under Illinois Public Act 104-0032, public schools are scheduled to offer universal, annual mental health screenings starting in the 2027–2028 school year. As written, these practices could violate the Protection of Pupil Rights Amendment [PPRA] and the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act [FERPA].

FERPA and PPRA are federal privacy laws that requires schools to provide notification and attain written parental consent when conducting surveys, analyses, or evaluations asking students for certain sensitive and private information such as sex behaviors and attitudes, religious beliefs, mental and psychological problems.

Starting next year, CPS students as young as third graders will be participating in mental health screenings. These screenings will probe intimate personal information about a student's emotional well-being, depression, anxiety, trauma, suicidal thoughts, or other psychological concerns.

CPS policy and Illinois law strictly mandate that employees and healthcare providers report any suspected child abuse, neglect, or grooming to the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services. Under Illinois law, minors aged 12 and older can consent independently to specific mental health or medical care. However, if a student discloses active self-harm, severe danger, or abuse, mandated reporters are legally required to notify parents/guardians and/or appropriate authorities.

ISBE's guidance provides for an opt-out clause but does not require parents to provide written consent—which is insufficient for required evaluations under PPRA.

CPS also strictly prohibits its staff from asking about, or recording, a student's immigration status. Because CPS does not collect or track documentation status, it has no policies that single out, restrict, or mandate mental health screenings specifically for undocumented students.

The guidance also makes including evaluation results in a student's "official" record optional, opening the possibility that some schools may hide results from parents by creating unofficial student records they refuse to divulge. Schools or districts that separate mental health screening records to circumvent parents' right to inspect and challenge the content of the records may violate FERPA.

"The ISBE's recent guidance for mental health screenings and recordkeeping—under the auspices of state law—raise concerns that school districts may violate federal parental rights' laws," said Director of the Student Privacy Policy Office Frank Miller. "Students should not be pressured into disclosing intimate information, including mental health, about themselves without their parents knowing and consenting."

Millar also said that parents should be able to access critical information about their child's wellbeing without schools hiding or separating such information. "Illinois school districts must follow federal law, and we expect ISBE will revise its guidance as expeditiously as possible to ensure schools comply with their obligations under FERPA and PPRA," he said.

SPPO is demanding ISBE revise their policies to be compliant immediately to avoid the need for enforcement actions. ISBE has until Nov. 13, to produce revisions to its guidance. ISBE's response will guide the Department's next steps, if needed, to ensure compliance with federal law.

The federal law gives parents the right to access their children's education records, the right to request record corrections or amendments, and the right to control the disclosure of personally identifiable information in education records. Treating screening results or other related documentation as "temporary records," maintaining such records in separate repositories, or withholding information from parents all infringe on parents' rights under FERPA.

On Oct. 5, 2026, the U.S. Dept. of Justice issued letters to all state Attorneys General expressing concerns about their school districts' lack of compliance with these federal laws regarding mental health screenings conducted in schools. They noted that violations of the law can lead to enforcement actions and potential loss of federal funding.

a bike or bus lane," Sean Wiedel, CDOT Deputy Commissioner for the Division of Citywide Services, told Greenfield. So biking privilege trumps all other forms of transportation in Chicago, no matter what reason drivers may have for pulling to the curb on a commercial roadway that has privileged bike and bus lanes.

For the vast majority of commuters, CDOT has limited the ability of citizens to move freely throughout the city, making transportation between communities much more difficult. Official regional and census estimates place the bike-to-work share in Chicago at around 1.3% to 1.8% of all commuters (with some local estimates or specific neighborhood studies citing roughly 1.5%).

Roughly 28.2% of all commuters primarily rely on public transportation overall (which includes the CTA 'L' train, Metra commuter rail, and buses). Approximately 58.25% of commuters in the city of Chicago travel to work by private vehicle.

On Oct. 29, CDOT admitted that construction on the closed Chicago Avenue Bridge will now run through spring 2027, after first promising that they would have it completed by the end of this year. The bridge was closed to traffic in Sept. 2025.

But harms being done are so much more than just with the bridges. Anyone who has watched CTA and school buses, fire trucks and semi-trailers struggle to turn corners at intersections penned in by curb bump outs, privileged bike paths and road-blocking bollards has witnessed first hand CDOT's ham-fisted harm.

On Oct. 29, Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] lambasted CDOT during a budget hearing for the cash-rich department. In total, the city's network of concrete roadway barriers, and bridge-related issues have contributed to systemic logistical failures, all funded by taxpayer money. Ald Reilly called it a "massive bureaucratic failure."

Maneuvering large vehicles around CDOT's man-made roadway barriers is exceptionally difficult due to a combination of inflexible truck geometry, dense surrounding traffic, and intentional restrictive infrastructure like walled-off concrete privileged bike lanes.

Chicago used to be good at transportation, but now even simple geometry is being ignored.

Navigating tight turning radii around man-made roadway barriers is one of the most significant operational challenges for drivers in urban environments. Unlike highways, which are designed for high-capacity freight, urban centers feature deliberate engineering choices that drastically limit a truck's spatial margins.

As Chicago implements its Complete Streets initiatives—which add concrete medians, bollards, pedestrian islands, and privileged bike lanes—the physical space available for large vehicles has shrunk. Because trucks do not pivot like passenger cars, these fixed barriers create harm through severe geometric conflicts that are now occurring city-wide.

On Oct. 29, Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] lambasted CDOT during a budget hearing for the cash-rich department. In total, the city's network of concrete roadway barriers, and bridge-related issues have contributed to systemic logistical failures, all funded by taxpayer money. Ald Reilly called it a "massive bureaucratic failure."

Indeed, for a good part of this year, most North Side Alders whose wards abut the river have been complaining about CDOT's management of bridge repairs. "Completely and totally irresponsible and a massive bureaucratic failure are the words I would use to describe your department's mishandling of the bridge repair project and staging," said Reilly.

But as CDOT's funding is only lightly dependent on City Council, Alders know they have little leverage available to them.

CDOT's proposed total 2026 budget is $1.836 billion, and they are heavily dependent on grants. Federal grants make up 56.6% of CDOT's budget. State grants make up roughly 21.8% of their budget, while vehicle and fuel taxes add in 10.3%. So there is very little City Hall funding that can be threatened by Alders.

Now, work will last until "spring 2027," CDOT leaders say.

Frustrations over the bridge closures triggered North Side residents when four bridges over the Chicago River (Chicago Avenue and Lake, State and Cortland streets) were shut down to car traffic while CDOT completed what it said were vital repairs on each. Now, work on Chicago Ave. will last until "spring 2027," CDOT leaders say. The State Street Bridge has since reopened, but the three others remain closed.

Landmarks Commission approves designating John Vinci home

Creation of the Eddy-Cornelia-Newport Chicago Landmark District

BY PETER VON BUOL

The Commission on Chicago Landmarks on Nov. 5 approved designating the home and work studio of Chicago architect John Vinci, a pioneer in the preservation of Chicago's architecture and also the creation of the Eddy-Cornelia-Newport Landmark District.

In most cases, the Chicago City Council approves the commission's recommendation for permanent landmark status. The commission is part of the city's Dept. of Planning and Development.

Vinci's home and studio, located at 3152 N. Cambridge Ave., has long served as a meeting place for those interested in preserving the city's architectural heritage.

According to Ward Miller, executive director of Preservation Chicago [PC], designating Vinci's Lake View home as a city landmark was appropriate for an individual who dedicated his life to the preservation of Chicago's architectural heritage.

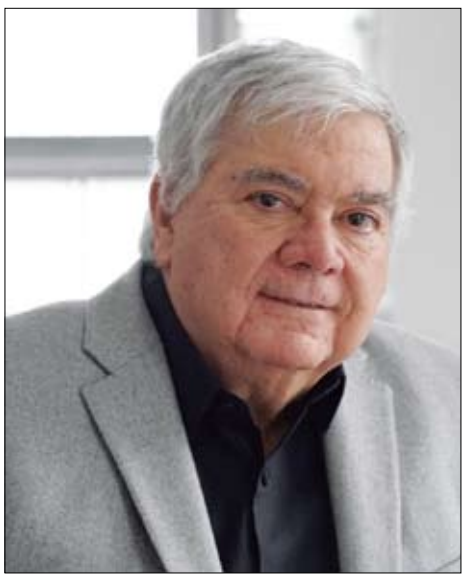

"After almost 30 years working together and knowing the history of [his] residence and studio, I approached [Vinci] about the idea of a Chicago Landmark Designation of his residence. The designation captures the origins and history of John's office, his architectural career, his work and advocacy in historic preservation," beginning with the Schiller/Garrick Theater Building and the long awaited book "The Complete Architecture of Adler & Sullivan," said Miller.

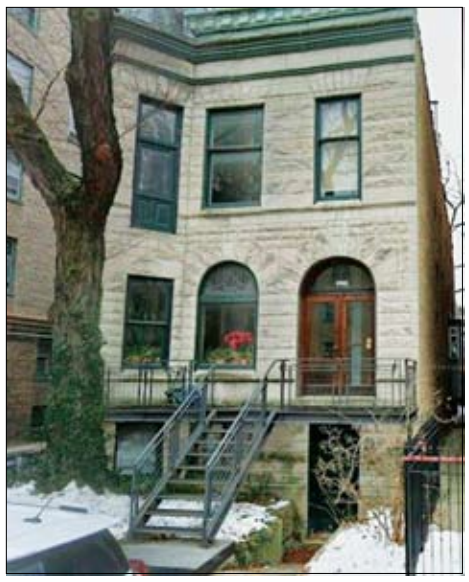

In the 1960s, during a period in which many historic Chicago buildings were being torn down under the banner of urban renewal, Vinci began collaborating with Richard Nickel, the pioneering architectural preservationist. Since Nickel's accidental death in 1972 (during the demolition of Dankmar Adler's and Louis Sullivan's Chicago Stock Exchange), Vinci has remained active in the pursuit of preserving Chicago's architectural heritage.

The designation also honors Vinci's long career as a highly-regarded Chicago architect and as an architectural preservationist. Ironically, the designation comes at a time one of his first major successes in architectural restoration… the relocation of the Chicago Stock Exchange Trading Room to The Art Institute of Chicago [AIC] is being threatened for the second time.

The designation also honors Vinci's long career as a highly-regarded Chicago architect and as an architectural preservationist. Ironically, the designation comes at a time one of his first major successes in architectural restoration… the relocation of the Chicago Stock Exchange Trading Room to The Art Institute of Chicago [AIC] is being threatened for the second time.

"This was also the opportunity to acknowledge his long career, his work in disassembling the Chicago Stock Exchange Trading Room and its relocation to The AIC," said Miller. The room was recognized for its design, engineering, function and beauty immediately after its construction in 1894, "and [unfortunately] now it faces an uncertain future and possible demolition for a second time, almost 50 years after its reinstallation at The AIC," said Miller.

Architect John Vinci and his home and studio, located at 3152 N. Cambridge Ave.

While Vinci's home is being designated a landmark due to the historical events that occurred in his home on Cambridge Ave., it is also a remarkable example of Chicago architecture.

"The John Vinci Residence and Studio also captures a history of the Lake View Community in its earliest days, including Erwin and Herbert Dettmer's family of craftsmen that built it and the growth of a suburban community that had been absorbed into the City of Chicago in 1889," said Miller.

"We are honored to support and bring this story and landmark to its proper recognition, to which many of our city's preservation advocacy organizations were fostered from," he added.

Miler added PC has worked with Ald. Bennett Lawson [44th] and others to help create the proposed Eddy-Cornelia-Newport Chicago Landmark District. In recent years, many of the historic homes within the district have been demolished at an alarming rate.

"We are also proud to work with the residents, alderman and stakeholders of the proposed Landmark District. The finely crafted buildings of this district display the wonderful elements of Chicago's vernacular multi-unit structures, fronted with limestone and brick.

"The demolition of 1300 W. Newport Ave., along with similar ones on nearby streets, did prompt the discussion of a proposed Landmark District Designation, but residents have been concerned with other demolitions nearby for some time. That is why PC supports the Eddy-Cornelia-Newport District as a Chicago Landmark," said Miller.

Applications now open for Night Out In The Park 2027

Local artists, performers encouraged to apply

The Chicago Park District [CPD] is seeking local artists to partner with who would like to showcase their skills next year. They want performers, collectives, filmmakers, and organizations to participate in the 15th edition of the Night Out in the Parks cultural event series and the 14th annual Chicago Onscreen Local Film Showcase.

The deadline is Dec. 8, for both organizations and individual artists interested in applying. The application can be accessed at www.nightoutintheparks.com. The 2027 Night Out in the Parks season will begin in June, 2027, while Chicago Onscreen will be hosted in parks at the end of the summer season in late September.

New this year are virtual in-person info sessions designed to help applicants understand what the CPD seeks in proposals. These sessions offer guidance and a chance to ask questions. The in-person session schedules are:

- Nov. 16, 6 pm - 8 p.m.; Warren Park, 6601 N. Western Ave.
- Nov. 17, 5:30 p.m. - 7:30 p.m.; Garfield Park, 100 N. Central Park Ave.
- Nov. 18, 5 p.m. - 7 p.m.; Hamilton Park, 513 W. 72nd St.

Night Out in the Parks features local artists and filmmakers. These offerings throughout the summer season span a wide range of genres. An overarching goal of the cultural initiative is to provide unique cultural offerings for every neighborhood in the city.

The CPD's Night Out in the Parks partnership offers support in four ways, including grant awards, a platform to perform in Chicago's parks, broad promotion of the performances, and production assistance.

In its 15th season, the CPD continues to spotlight Chicago's multi-disciplinary performances and cultural events, that highlight Chicago's cultural landscape, celebrate local artists in their neighborhood parks, and support Chicago-based artists.

"Night Out in the Parks and Chicago Onscreen connects communities with culture, entertainment, and educational opportunities like no other local program," said CPD CEO, Carlos Ramirez-Rosa.

To be eligible to participate in the free, city-wide event series, applicants must be a Chicago-based organization or artist (residency within the city of Chicago). The event must be offered to the community for free and be accessible and inclusive.

Organizations must have $1 million general liability insurance naming the Chicago Park District an additional insured for all events, and have the ability to travel to and from a scheduled park with all equipment, performers and staff.

Applicants are encouraged to submit projects with an accessibility plan. This plan should encompass mobile access, bilingual narratives, ASL interpretation, and audio description.

The primary applicant must be at least 21 years of age, and must be flexible in scheduling.

Non-profit status is not a requirement for interested participants, and all proposals are due by 11:59 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 8.

North Side businesses were targeted in an overnight burglary spree on Oct. 27. More than a dozen storefronts along Clark St. north of Fullerton Ave. were among those hit. One man has been charged in connection with a single burglary from that night in Wrigleyville. But CPD believes the crew involved is responsible for at least 30 break-ins across Chicago during October alone, with incidents stretching from the South Side to the North Side.

won an Academy Award for Best Actor in that historic movie.

After surviving the war, in the 1950s, Mooney went undercover for a month to live on "Skid Row," a flop-house neighborhood on W. Madison St., and wrote about the hard-scrabble bum-and-wino lifestyle.

In 1957, both Mooney and Schultz and a team of Daily News reporters won a Pulitzer Prize for "determined and courageous investigative reporting," for a series of articles on Chicago and Illinois political corruption. The series focused on Illinois State Auditor Orville Hodge and his cronies, who were convicted and imprisoned for a $6.15-million fraud scheme.

• John Justin Smith, a Bronze-Star winner and Purple-Heart recipient, who worked as the Chicago Daily News as Assistant Sports Editor and Travel Editor, was another of the true World War II heroes on the star-studded newspaper staff. His nickname was "JJ."

Smith, a quiet, slim, articulate Southwest Side neighborhood family man, served in the South Pacific with the 41st U.S. Army Infantry. In World War II, he and his band of brothers—a "fearless, volunteer platoon of misfits"—crept quietly behind Japanese lines in New Guinea to chart enemy troop movements as "Jungle Scouts." Smith's mates were assisted by a native Papuan Infantry Battalion in Salamaua, on the north coast of New Guinea, a large Pacific Island near the Coral Sea, a historic ocean battleground, just north of Australia.

In May of 1944, Smith was seriously wounded by mortar shrapnel in his right leg, and was partly paralyzed. Although Smith was offered promotions for his combat service, he reportedly turned them down because he believed in fair play: "It wouldn't have been fair to [be promoted ahead of] other men who had been waiting longer than I," he wrote. Smith earned a private first-class's pay of $49.75 a month, or $597 a year for four years service.

His son, Tony Smith, recently published a book titled "Jungle Scouts" describing his father's war-time exploits. The chilling and insightful 165-page book was authored by John Justin Smith in 1980, but never published until now. JJ passed away at age 70 in 1989.

Printer's ink runs deeply in the blood of the Smith family. His uncle was author Henry Justin Smith, the famed Managing Editor of the Daily News in the 1920s, during the "Front Page" days of Ben Hecht and Carl Sandburg.

• Quiet, steely-eyed Herbert Lankford Benson, Jr. was ranked No. 1 on the Dean's academic list in Oct. 1944 at the Univ. of South Carolina. He was graduated at age 18 with a Bachelor of Business Administration degree.

Immediately following graduation, Benson, a gifted photographer, enlisted in the military and proudly served in the 43rd Division, 1st Calvary Division in the U.S. Army from Dec. 6, 1944 to Nov. 25, 1946.

Ordered to the Pacific Theater of combat in 1945, he rose quickly through the ranks because of his extreme intelligence. Benson served under Gen. Douglas MacArthur while stationed at field headquarters in Cabanatuan, Philippines.

He was promoted to the job of combat photographer and flew behind enemy lines to do reconnaissance work photographing Japanese troop movements. Benson built a photographic dark room at Cabanatuan headquarters, developed black and white Tri-X film sent to him by his father, and personally made print enlargements for Gen. MacArthur. Although he witnessed war atrocities, later he refused to discuss them. Benson rose to the rank of Public Information Officer and earned $64 a month, or $770 a year as a Corporal T-5 (Tech 5).

On Sept. 2, 1945, only three weeks after atomic and hydrogen bombs were dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Benson was on the deck of the USS Missouri in Tokyo Bay where he witnessed the signing of surrender documents by Japanese Emperor Hirohito.

His historic photographs of the surrendering Japanese Emperor Hirohito's Imperial white stallion—a symbolically saddled, but riderless horse—were published in Time/Life magazine.

After the war, Mr. Benson was stationed in Tokyo, Japan, where he quickly learned to speak Japanese, learned to ski and developed a great love of Oriental art and fine China.

After rearing a family of four daughters and a son in Columbia, SC, oil business man Benson passed away at age 88 in 2014.

• Howard M. Busk, began his military career in 1935 at age 18 when he joined the U.S. Marines and served four years of active duty, including a tour in China. He was stationed at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii on the USS New Orleans. He was involved in pre-war Pacific patrols, tactical maneuvers, and intense training.

Chicagoan Busk, a Logan Square neighborhood resident, served in the U.S. Marine Corp. Reserve in 1940, and was employed as a clerk at the Union Stock Yards for the Armour meat-packing operation.

After the outbreak of World War II, he re-enlisted in the 5th U.S. Marine Division and rose to the rank of Staff Sergeant, earning $100.16 a month, or $1,202 per year overseas.

Busk was lucky in war. Because of his prior service, and business and logistics experience, he was assigned as an aid to Line Officers. He did not hit the beaches in deadly amphibious landings, but handled administrative duties to support troops on Pacific Islands the U.S. Marines invaded.

Although he served in several historic Pacific-war battle campaigns—including the bloody invasion of Iwo Jima and Tinian islands, his job was to hold the beach, and direct manpower and heavy equipment movement.

However, Busk said he knew two of the men who raised the historic flag on the top of Mount Suribachi at Iwo Jima. All six Marines on the flag raising team died in combat. While not often involved in hand-to-hand combat with the Japanese, he did come home with horror stories, which he rarely shared.

On one sunbaked, mosquito-infested island, he and a buddy were pinned down by Japanese fire for more than 12 hours, in horrendous heat. During the night, Busk recalled that he heard a loud bang, and felt something warm and wet on the back of his head. His war-weary best friend, who was strung-out with battle fatigue, had committed suicide.

On Sept. 12, 1945, Busk participated in the initial landing and occupation of Japan at Sasebo in Kyushu. On Nov. 26, 1945, he was reassigned to the 2nd Marine Division in Nagasaki. Luckily, he did not suffer radiation poisoning from the recently dropped hydrogen bomb.

Later, he told his grandson: "I fought for this country so you would never have to. Come talk to me first, if you ever consider joining."

After the war, Busk, returned home to meet and greet baby Marian, the first of his four daughters, who already was two years old. Later, he and his wife had a son they named Howard.

In 1975, he was transferred to Armour-Dial Co., a Phoenix-based division, and was promoted to national production control manager. He retired in 1982 and passed way in 1991 at age 73.

Celeste Busk, one of Howard Busk's daughters, had a long, successful career as a features reporter for the Daily News and Chicago Sun-Times.

Howard Busk was a fine golfer, who referred to his clubs as "My sticks." In the early 1980s, this writer had the pleasure of shooting a round of retirement golf in Arizona with Busk, who carved up the course like a surgeon, scoring in the 80s. He coached me to "take an easy swing, and stay in control."

• Alfredo P. Acierto, a Filipino American, and a pineapple-plantation worker, was one of the 3,000 laborers who were transported yearly from the Philippines to Hawaii during the 1920s.

Two decades later, on Dec. 7, 1941, the Japanese sneak attack at on Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, claimed the lives of 2,403 U.S. Navy sailors, soldiers and civilians.

Born in Candon, Ilocos Sur in the Philippines in 1903, Alfredo Acierto, was the eldest of eight children. He immigrated to the U.S. in 1921, at age 18, and eventually came to Chicago to live near an uncle. In Chicago, he became a naturalized citizen and started working as a clerk with the U.S. Postal Service.

Always in love with the sea, as the son of a fisherman and trader, Acierto enlisted in the U.S. Navy when World War II broke out, and saw combat action in the Pacific. Acierto was assigned by the U.S. Navy Commander to Transport Squadron 17. He and other Filipinos fought in the Philippine Liberation action and other Pacific Campaign battles. Acierto rose in the ranks and was promoted to an important assignment, as the Navy Commander's personal aid.

Near the end of the war, after the Japanese were defeated and ousted from the Philippines, he was based in Manila, where he awaited his discharge and orders to return to the U.S.

On leave, Acierto traveled to his hometown of Candon to visit relatives, and met Maria Pacio Guillen, a beautiful 22-year-old, 6th grade school teacher. Highly educated, Maria learned to speak Japanese during the occupation and was ordered by the enemy to teach the language in local classes.

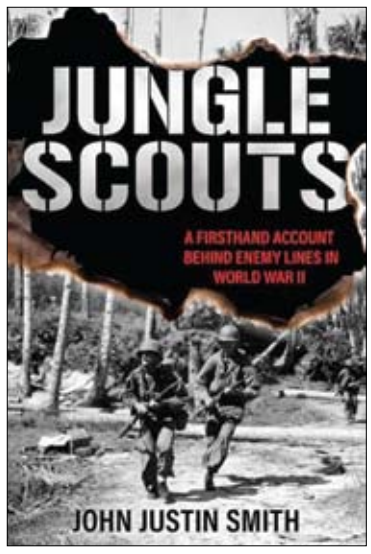

"This was important to a Filipino's survival during World War II," wrote Acierto's wife, Maria, years later when she authored an 88-page family history. "The Japanese demanded respect, and Filipinos were expected to act in accordance with the invader's standards."

While on leave in Candon,

"Jungle Scouts" - behind enemy lines in WWII

BY DON DEBAT

"Jungle Scouts" is a chilling and insightful book authored by Bronze-Star winner and Purple-Heart recipient John Justin Smith about his behind-the-lines World War II service tracking enemy troop movements in New Guinea.

In the late 1960s and 1970s, this writer worked with Smith when he was Assistant Sports Editor and Travel Editor at the Chicago Daily News and later at the Chicago Sun-Times.

He wrote the book on his war-time experiences in 1980. His son, Tony Smith, recently published the manuscript on his father's World War II exploits. JJ Smith passed away at age 70 in 1989.

In World War II, Smith and his band of brothers—a "fearless, volunteer platoon of misfits"—crept quietly behind Japanese lines in New Guinea as an intelligence and reconnaissance unit to map enemy troop movements as jungle scouts on the north coast of New Guinea, a large Pacific Island just north of Australia.

Over the course of more than 100 missions, they hacked through dense jungle, flanked enemy companies, and met tenacious Japanese warriors prepared to fight to the last man with snipers, ambushes, booby traps and suicidal "Banzai" tactics.

Smith, a Southwest Side Chicago family man, served in the South Pacific with the 41st U.S. Army Infantry. In May of 1944, Smith was seriously wounded by mortar shrapnel in his right leg, and was partly paralyzed.

THE KNIFE: Dr. Randal Haworth is one of Beverly Hills' leading plastic surgeons and an original surgeon on the reality series "The Swan." The series shaped public perceptions of plastic surgery, beauty standards, and reality television forever. He is now speaking out against Hulu's new documentary, "The Swan: Behind the Mirror." He claims the documentary selectively edited his comments and omitted important context, creating what he believes is a misleading narrative about his involvement in the original series.

From the extreme cosmetic transformations that made "The Swan" one of reality television's most controversial shows to the allegations raised in Hulu's documentary, Haworth knows what happened behind the scenes, what he believes the filmmakers got wrong, and why he would never participate in a show like "The Swan" again.

HONOR from p. 12

Alfredo courted Maria. Although Acierto was 41 years of age, it was love at first sight. They were married in Candon, a union that would last 63 years.

The Brides Act of 1945 made it possible for Maria to join Alfredo in the U.S. after he filed paperwork and was discharged. However, the paperwork was delayed and they traveled separately. Again, Alfredo Acerito's love of the sea intervened.

Pregnant with Mary, her first child, and traveling by U.S. Navy ship, the General G.M. Randall, Maria was the only female passenger on board for 22 days at sea, accompanied by 7,000 U.S. soldiers returning from war.

With three military doctors, a priest and three nurses in attendance, baby Mary Randall Perfection was born at sea. Her middle name, "Randall," honored the ship and crew. As a baby shower gift, the soldiers and crew passed the hat, and collected $896—a year's pay for U.S. seaman at that time.

After the war, Acierto returned to Chicago with his wife and resumed his work at the Post Office, and raised three children. Acierto also pursued his B.A. in Economics at Northwestern Univ. "Dad worked hard so that we could all go to college without taking out student loans," said daughter Mary A. Ridley. He supported my mom's university education for her B.A., Master's and Doctorate degrees." Acierto also helped establish the Rizal Center in Lakeview, a community center, and was active in many Filipino-American organizations.

Fun-loving Albert also knew how to party, recalled his son, Bob Acierto. "Big Al loved to dance the Twist like Chubby Checker. He had an infectious grin, and great motion and rhythm. Dad lived his life a lot like he danced—not really worrying about what others thought, but doing things that gave him pleasure—like smoking cigars and wearing his hat indoors."

Acierto retired from the Chicago Post Office in 1959, after more than 20 years of service. He later worked as a clerk at Chicago's Continental Bank. In 2008, Alfredo Pascua Acierto passed away at the age of 104. He was buried in Chicago with full military honors. At that time, he was believed to be the oldest Filipino-American in Chicago area.

Holiday programming at The Goodman includes Long Christmas Dinner Fest

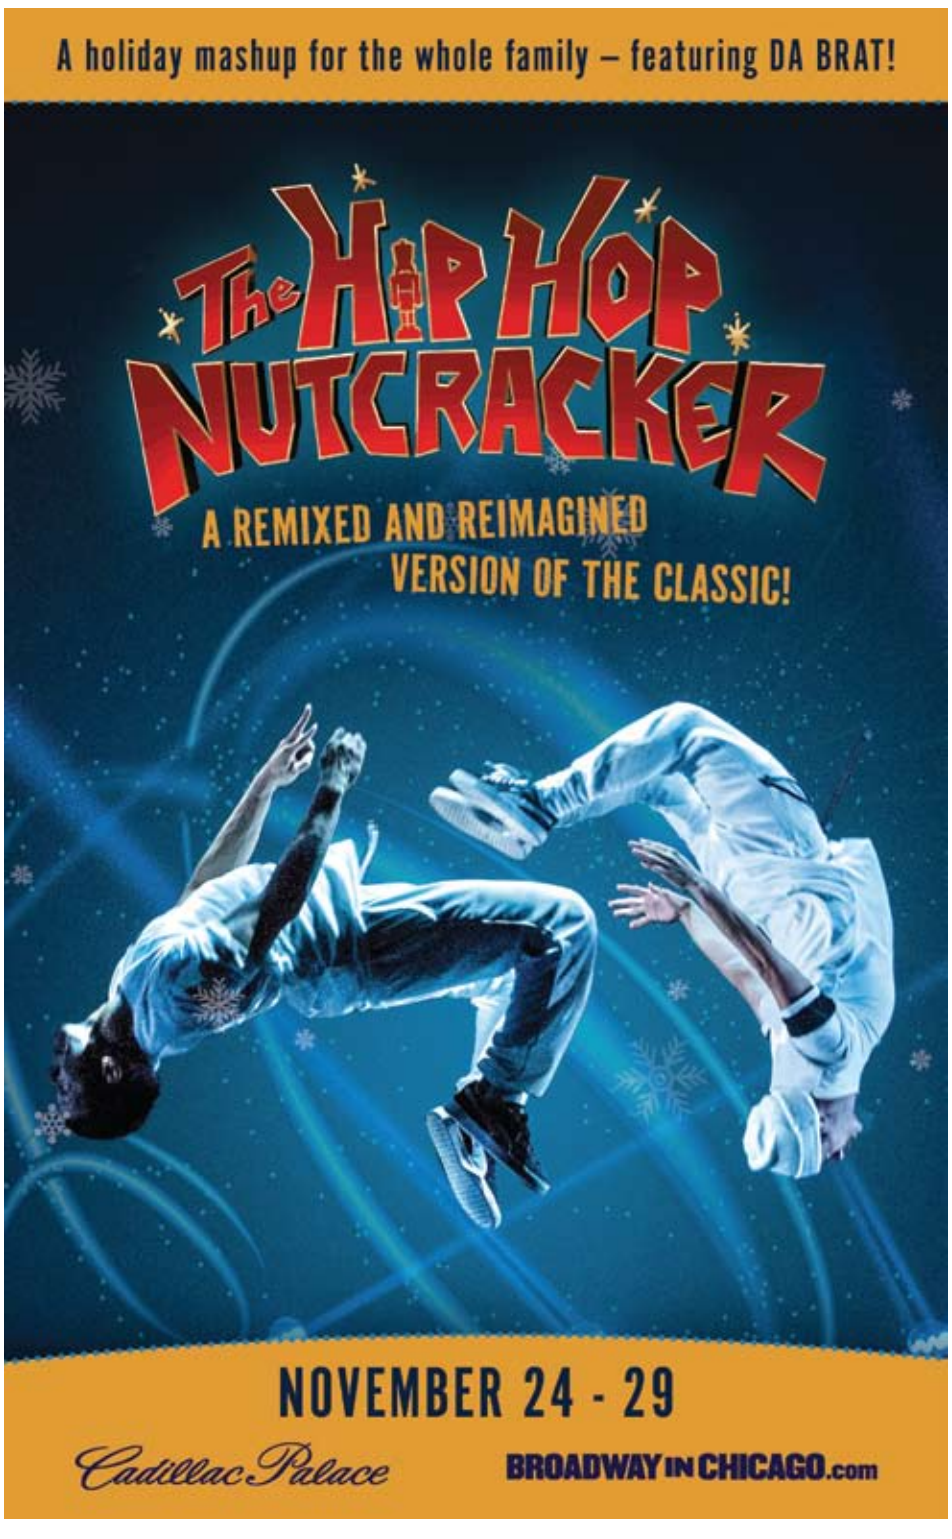

A one-night-only reading and discussion of Thornton Wilder's The Long Christmas Dinner will take place 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 15 at the Goodman Theater, 170 N. Dearborn St.

The Long Christmas Dinner is a reading and discussion of Pulitzer Prize winner Thornton Wilder's classic one-act play, directed and hosted by Jeremy McCarter, Wilder's literary executor.

The star-studded cast includes Rick Bayless (chef, restaurateur, author), Lorena Diaz (Chicago Med), Ora Jones (The Nacirema Society), Rebecca Makkai (author of The Great Believers), Natalie Moore (journalist, playwright, author), Anthony Rapp (RENT original cast), Namir Smallwood (Primary Trust) and Jeff Tweedy (musician and author).

In the course of a single unbroken holiday meal, 90 years of a family's history fly by in this funny, sometimes sorrowful, theatrical 40-minute one-act play.

Immediately following the reading, the artists and audience engage in conversation about family, tradition and what brings people together during the holiday season. With this reading, The Goodman joins a nationwide event—The Thornton Wilder Estate's The Long Christmas Dinner Festival.

RESOURCE from p. 6

ILAO warns that ignoring debt can make matters worse, particularly when creditors file lawsuits. A study by The Pew Charitable Trusts found that more than 50% of Chicago debt collection cases end in default judgments, which can allow creditors to pursue wage garnishment or seize money from bank accounts.

ILAO's goal is to help people deal with debt early – before it turns into a lawsuit or judgment. "This site isn't just for people who have been sued. We also see it as a resource for folks who are just dealing with debt generally and don't know where to start," said Uhrich.

Uhrich advises people to be leery of debt settlement companies that ask for money up front or claim they can settle accounts for less than what is owed. He stressed that creditors are typically open to negotiating a deal directly after an account has become delinquent.

"If they can get someone just to talk to them, they're usually very willing to negotiate, and that's particularly true if it's a debt buyer," Uhrich noted. "And then, there are special rules that actually protect consumers from debt collectors and debt buyers.' He says his site tries to get into all of that.

Some North Side residents may be considered "collection-proof," meaning their income and assets are protected from collection for certain consumer debts under state and federal law. He also offered reassurance that generally people cannot be jailed solely for not paying a debt unless they fail to obey a court order.

DETECTION from p. 9

port from nearly 78% of voters. Walton most notably found a woman who ran over a Chicago police officer with his own squad car not guilty of attempted murder by reason of insanity.

With the November election over, Johnson will now have to decide how to handle the ShotSpotter issue as the city's mayoral election, slated for Feb. 23, 2027, heats up. He has repeatedly defended his decision to end Chicago's use of the gunshot detectors, arguing that the technology was ineffective, despite vocal support for the system from two-thirds of the city's aldermen and CPD's superintendent.

After disconnecting ShotSpotter, the city sought proposals from nine companies, including ShotSpotter's parent company, for a citywide replacement network. During budget hearings on Nov. 6, 2025, Office of Public Safety Administration Executive Director Era Patterson told aldermen that her office had reviewed the proposals and submitted a recommendation to the city's chief procurement officer.

Yet even after completing testing and identifying a preferred vendor, the Johnson administration has not executed a contract or publicly explained the delay. The stalemate prompted frustrated aldermen to prepare an ordinance that would force the administration to act. Last month, the city's chief procurement officer announced that a separate gunshot-detection pilot program would soon begin.

The purported pilot will cover six police districts, all of which previously had ShotSpotter service. But important details of the administration's plan remain unknown, including the identity of the technology provider and the date the program will start. Even Interim CPD Supt. Fred Waller acknowledged during a recent budget hearing that he had little information about what the administration was planning.

POLICE BEAT from p. 8

near the Magnificent Mile.

The 35-year-old Gold Coast resident was in a parking garage in the first block of E. Walton Street around 6:30 a.m. Jan. 31 when Hobson approached her and displayed what appeared to be the handle of a gun, according to prosecutors. He demanded the woman's gym bag and phone, forced her to provide the phone's passcode, and fled. Chicago police officers arrested Hobson within minutes and recovered the phone from his pocket, officials said.

Hobson has a prior robbery conviction in Cook County. That 2011 case resulted in a three-year prison sentence. He also faced a terrorism charge in Las Vegas in 2018 after authorities accused him of walking through a major shopping mall while wearing a mask and carrying a realistic-looking AK-47 replica. The outcome of that case was not immediately available.

Four members of Rogers Park family killed in apartment fire

Chicago firefighters and police at the scene of a fatal fire in the 7000 block of N. Paulina on Nov. 5. Courtesy Citizen App

BY CWBCHICAGO

Four members of a Rogers Park family, including a 13-year-old boy and his grandmother, were killed Nov. 5 when a fire swept through their apartment on the Far North Side, officials said.

Firefighters responded to the 7000 block of N. Paulina St. at approximately 4:14 a.m. and found the victims, who all lived together in the same apartment. The victims were named by the Cook County Medical Examiner's Office as Mariza Garcia Jimenez, 48, Francisco Rey Vallejo, 24, Valentino Jozeph Vallejo, 13, and 69-year-old Maria Piedad Jimenez de Garcia.. All four were taken to area hospitals, where they were pronounced dead. The family's dog also died in the fire.

The 48-year-old mother taught classes at the Catholic church and her two sons liked to game and go to the movies together. The youngest victim was an 8th grader at Kilmer Elementary.

Three residents of neighboring units were displaced. Fire crews are still investigating the cause. Relatives of the victims told ABC7 News that the home did have working smoke detectors and a fire extinguisher.

A neighbor told FOX 32 that the sound of breaking glass and people screaming for help woke them during the night.

"I woke up off my couch to people screaming for help," the neighbor said. "I heard 'ow' and 'help' and couldn't exactly determine what it was at first."

Ald. Maria Hadden, whose 49th Ward includes much of Rogers Park, called the fire an "unimaginable tragedy."

"Tragically, all four fire victims and their family dog died from the fire," Hadden wrote on Facebook. "This is an unimaginable tragedy with large impacts for the people of our community. My condolences go to the family and neighbors."

The cause of the fire remains under investigation.

Two men shot after gunman emerges from Rogers Park gangway

BY CWBCHICAGO

Two men were shot by a gunman who opened fire after emerging from a Rogers Park gangway Nov. 6, Chicago police said.

The victims were in the 1600 block of W. Juneway Terrace when the gunman began shooting around 8:40 p.m. Bullets struck an 18-year-old man in the shin and a 31-year-old man in the groin, according to CPD. Officers applied tourniquets to help slow the older victim's blood loss before paramedics arrived. Both men were taken to St. Francis Hospital in good condition, the department said.

Police recovered nine 9-millimeter shell casings at the scene. CPD has not released a description of the shooter.

So far this year, 10 people have been shot in Rogers Park, including one by someone acting in self-defense, according to city data. That's down from 17 at this point last year and 30 in 2024.

White Castle is a privately held company which has a reputation as a no-frills operation and a call to its corporate headquarters revealed that the company has no Public Relations Department.

The quirky Columbus, OH-based chain is actually the oldest fast food operation in America dating back to 1921. It is best known for its bite-sized, grilled square hamburgers, euphemistically dubbed "sliders" by fans for the way they go down–and sometimes come out. It was a widely-used term of jocular disparagement the company long tried to play down but has since enthusiastically embraced in recent decades.

Just when the gleaming white, faux castle first opened its Ridge Ave. outpost is clouded in the memories of local residents. For those who have moved to Edgewater in recent decades, the White Castle has always been there. But longer term residents remember well when the southwest corner of Ridge and Clark St. was a parking lot for the former restaurants located just west along Ridge – initially Town and Country and later Carson's Ribs.

The best guesses are that the Edgewater White Castle location opened in the late 1970s or early 1980s.

Local landlord and housing developer Mike Chioros, whose family owned the adjacent restaurant property, attempted to acquire the White Castle property around 2007 for a proposed residential development that would have spanned both parcels. That development plan was met with strong community opposition and White Castle obtained another long-term lease for the site around then, he said.

White Castle has roughly 350 stores throughout the Midwest and the New York City metro area. It also has selected outposts in certain western cities, including Phoenix and Las Vegas, Nev., where it has an especially brightly lit store on Fremont St., also known as Glitter Gulch.

Over the years, White Castle has achieved minor cult-like status among its fans. In 2014 TIME magazine named the White Castle slider "The Most Influential Burger of All Time." Its quirky gleaming white stores were first constructed of glazed white brick and patterned on the design of Chicago's Water Tower. The white décor was meant to suggest a sanitary environment. Over the years, the stores were later sheathed in modular white porcelain panels and crowned with their unmistakable turreted roof line.

A laudatory front-page profile of the company by the Wall Street Journal in the 1980s noted that the company was the only fast food restaurant chain that paid its employees better than the minimum wage. It's cool factor for younger patrons went up considerably with the release of the 2004 comedy cult film "Harold & Kumar Go To White Castle."

In the past decade, the Formica and stainless steel dining rooms became a popular dining destination for irony-prone hipster couples celebrating Valentine's Day.

According to one Edgewater resident who years ago worked backstage at the former New World Music Theater in Tinley Park, White Castle also played a key role in a notorious musical debacle at the venue in 2005. Several songs into his performance, superstar David Bowie apologized and said he wasn't feeling well and abruptly left the stage. Fans were flabbergasted. The backstage source reported that Bowie was in fact struck with intestinal distress after insisting his crew stop at a White Castle they passed on their way to the performance.

For diehard White Castle fans on the North Side, there are still options for a slider fix. The next closest restaurant is at the intersection of Addison St. and Kedzie Ave., a venue that has definitely been there for over a half century. Also, many grocery stores now carry slider packs in the frozen food section. The major advantage of eating sliders at home is that you are close to the bathroom.

who needs assistance in overcoming or coping with mental health or emotional disorders regardless of ability to pay.

It will establish a new community mental health center to restore mental health services such as outreach in schools, veteran services, preventative outreach, and family counseling.

Reportedly, the funds can only be spent on mental health services in those three communities for those in need. Under the administration of Mayor Brandon Johnson, Chicagoans have seen tax monies reallocated for other uses once it has been collected, most brazenly with Tax Increment Financing funds that were shifted out and used for the City's and Chicago Public School's operating expenses. These new tax funds will be overseen locally by a Governing Commission of residents living within the communities.
