City institutes fee caps on home-delivered restaurant-purchased meals

Just as we've all come to depend on home delivery of restaurant-purchased meals Chicago's City Council on Monday approved a 15% fee cap for what delivery companies like Uber Eats, Grubhub and DoorDash, can charge restaurants.

The City Council vote to adopt the fee limits was unanimous, and Ald. Scott Waguespack [32nd] was the chief sponsor of the ordinance. He said the measure was the result of several weeks of negotiations with Mayor Lori Lightfoot's office. Ald. Waguespack originally proposed a more stringent 5% cap on delivery service fees in April.

Chicago's new fee limit goes into effect immediately. Previously restaurants had to surrender a 30-40% fee off the retail price of their offerings. While the new fee limits are supposed to be temporary, some restaurant owners have told City Hall that they would like to see it become permanent.

Third parties who violate the ordinance by charging more than 15% could be fined between $1,000 to $3,000 daily. The move is seen as vital for restaurants struggling right now to stay in business, especially as winter inches closer and more Chicagoans order delivery.

In City Hall Monday, Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] accused some of the local third party delivery services of price gouging and said that the COVID-19 lockdown exposed their unethical

Developer files suit on movie chain for dropping out of Wrigleyville development

Lawyers for Bucksbaum Retail Properties are now going after Cinemex, the owner of a movie theater complex that in April stopped building out its 30,000 square foot facility on Addison St. across from Wrigley Field.

Due to the economic lockdown tied to the pandemic, the venture that controls the Cinemex chain - Grupo Cinemex [CMX] - filed for bankruptcy protection in April, allegedly ending their rent payments, and bringing to a stop the buildout at the new development at 1027 W. Addison St.

Bucksbaum filed suit claiming that CMX owes more than $18 million after allegedly breaching terms of its 10-year lease for a dine-in theater in the complex. The $140 million development also includes a Lucky Strike Social bowling alley, a Harley Davidson Store, Shake Shack, a rooftop pool and a health club, along with 148 rental units and

Loyola's Ramblers take time-out after personnel test positive

BY BOB KITSOS

Loyola Univ. Chicago's 2019-2020 basketball team finished with a 21-11 overall record, a 13-5 record and second-place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference last season. But this season is up in the air at this point.

The team has paused all team activities due to positive COVID-19 test results among the team's personnel, consisting of student-athletes, coaches, managers and staff.

"Since July, we have been mindful and diligent while testing for the past 16 weeks with no positives until this point," said Porter Moser, Loyola head coach since 2011. "But, as we have seen throughout the county, COVID-19 cases are on the rise, spiking everywhere and, unfortunately, it has reached our program.

"From the onset of returning, we have said that the health and safety of our student-athletes, coaches and staff come first. At this time, we will suspend all team activities and will follow all back-to-play guidelines given to us from our team doctors. We will get through this and will return to play when it's safe to be back."

Bill Behrns, assistant athletic director, said in a Nov. 16 press release, "The health and safety of the Loyola and Chicago community remains paramount and Loyola Athletics has been and continues to follow city, state and university regulations in response to these positive cases."

While the college basketball season is scheduled to begin this week, information about the Ramblers' schedule will be released as it becomes available.

Carjackings soar over 100% on North Side

At least five more attempts Sunday, one Monday

BY CWBCHICAGO

Carjackings are up by over 100% in Chicago this year compared to 2019. That statistic didn't get any prettier Nov. 22 when cops handled at least five vehicular hijackings on the North Side and downtown.

Between 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sunday, at least five drivers reported that carjackers tried to take their vehicles in River North, near Goose Island, West Town, Uptown, and Lincoln Square. The incidents came one day after police said a carjacking crew struck four times in about an hour Saturday around Wicker Park, Bucktown, and Avondale.

While at 5:14 p.m. Monday, five juveniles beat and threatened to shoot a driver during a carjacking attempt outside a Loop hotel. The victim, a 32-year-old visitor from Las Vegas, was attacked as he sat in his 2020 Dodge Challenger rental car with a passenger outside Hotel Allegro, 171 W. Randolph.

Four juvenile males and a juvenile female opened his front door and one of the offenders pointed a handgun at the driver's chest, police said. They then struck him in the head and chest while demanding his car.

But the victim fought back and refused to give up the vehicle. All five offenders then got into his car and began choking, hitting, and biting the driver, according to police.

When the man's passenger intervened, the group punched him in the face repeatedly. Passersby yelled for police and the offenders ran from the scene. Cops found the group on the 100 block of W. Lake and took them all into custody. Police said the gun appears to be a BB gun or replica firearm.

Sunday's hijackings began around 2 p.m. at the intersection of North and Ashland avenues. There, a woman told police that two masked men tried to force her from her car. But she sped away — and wound up crashing into a pole. The would-be carjackers ran to a vehicle that appeared to

Lincoln Park Zoo shutting down again after ZooLights

The Lincoln Park Zoo has announced they will shut down operations after this year's ZooLights festivities.

The Zoo will close to the public from Jan. 4 to March 4, 2021. It is the second time they've had to shut down due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the first was when the rest of the state was also shut down in March.

But it is indeed a rare event for the Lincoln Park Zoo as the only other shutdowns they've experienced prior to 2020 were for the funeral of President John Kennedy, the attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, and for the polar vortex of late January through early February 2019.

The Zoo plans to continue to do online programming across its social media channels, and host virtual events and educational programming.

Reimagine favorite feast

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Thanksgiving. It's the American Fairy tale. Not made up. Not untrue. Not an embellished fiction. But an experience whose images are so reshaped by the imagination of the heart they almost seem unreal. But on the shores of Cape Cod, proto-Americans demonstrated a great sense of human sacrifice and an unrelenting love. In that they reimagined life.

After a brutal first settlement year of hunger, fear and death, a surprising harvest of wild proportions dropped abundance and plenty on the fanatical colonists. Just when things were at their worst, they stood at their best. So with unusual social ease, the Puritans in the big black hats made room at their table for neighbors far and wide. Feathers and all. Their dining table became an historic artifact of human note. Like Plymouth Rock, itself. Much like the proscenium stage which holds theatrics. Around the corners of these tables, exiled Bible thumpers demonstrated what is most tender, and deeply human about us. It would have been hard to do in the Stuart England of James I back then.

That first American autumn, the colonists were the residue. The survivors. Men lucky to be alive. Surviving rigors and infection by which many of their women perished. A successful harvest sparkled like a divine apparition. Shining the light of celebration on the Autumn of 1621. Adventurers. English protestant dissenters. A hard bunch of born-again fundamentalists. And strict observers who could suck the life out of any party. They never even celebrated Christmas. They were far from the humanist and artistic Baroque ideals of others. Roman Catholics and high German Protestants whose artistic achievement in Europe was helping to reinvent serious thought and produce the works of Bach, Handel, Telemann and Vivaldi. The 17th century human mind was challenged by new swashbuckling adventures of learning, political thought, fresh religious meaning and closer examination of human purpose. It widened the experience of the divine for many.

The great questions of life and faith sought to lift the veils of mystery on what it meant to be human. All the while expanding deeper explanations of human value and unlimited goals of human achievement. By the 17th century science and learning were helping humans to reach beyond the limits of the past. The puritans had little use for science or sophisticated learning. But their rejection of the spirit of their age shown was demonstrated in their flight. Their need to reject the confines of old Europe was just such an expression. Traveling across an ocean tested the abilities of people anxious for freedom and the ability to practice their faith in the undiscovered confines of a world never seen before. Hardship and privation nestled beside limitless opportunities to redefine meaning and purpose.

It was essential that the great enterprise of the settlement of the New World have its roots in the human experience of isolated rediscovery. It was geographical in the wilderness of the American continent. Layers of settlement. Layers of enterprise. The achievement of people of faith and hard work. And experience that also gave fertile soil to the later American dream of independent nationhood at the close of the 18th century.

But all this was in its infancy in that Autumn harvest of 1621 on Cape Cod. The Thanksgiving Feast identifies the disposition of the human soul before the might and love of God. An essential posture for men and women who are searchers. And make no mistake about it, this land was a searcher's land. It took long decades to sufficiently nourish the adventurers who settled the soil of the American wilderness. A process still underway. Even now, in the midst of pandemic. Separated from family and friends. Restricted in the motion and movement of ordinary life. Thanksgiving isn't just one dinner of familiar family favorites. With Grandma's stuffing. Or maybe a recipe carried from a home far away. Or a roasted bird of promise stuffed to its drumsticks with generations of family devotion. The wonder of the feast is that perhaps there's a pumpkin pie whose origins have their first taste in a long ago America in which young immigrants came to cherish the spicy sweetness of the big orange squash.

Put leftovers to good use by making a turkey tetrazzini, or make two and put one in the freezer.

2020 is an important year for Thanksgiving because millions of Americans will have to reimagine the nation's favorite feast. Next year might be the four hundredth anniversary of the great sharing meal. But on the 399th anniversary we are asked to reinvent the observance to protect the larger public and the members of our families with already compromised immune systems.

So this year I hope you will have the chance to be creative. In the kitchen and on your street.

If you usually are a guest, traveling to the home of a larger family celebration, I hope you have the wits to redesign a special meal for your smaller number of tablemates. Maybe you can cook up some favorite vittles. And have the chance to add something of your own to it. Fresh rosemary. Or thyme you grew yourself. Some hot spiced wine or a savory dish of vegetables encrusted in cheese. Do some reading, find a vintage recipe. Discover a treasured food. I'm sorting out a corn soufflé to enrich my wild turkey.

Maybe your numbers are drastically reduced. Fear not. A smallish turkey will do the trick. Maybe you don't need a massive array of food. Just stuffing, mashed potatoes, roasted sweet potatoes. Some creamed spinach with nutmeg. And homemade cranberries. Use some orange zest. And good robust port. And remember a toss of brandy or cognac into any recipe will make it sing.

Make sure you have a cocktail or two, yourself. And get a good bottle of wine. Make your table festive. Pandemic can't keep you from being extravagant in your table setting. Lots of botanicals is always the perfect addition.

Most importantly. Are there any folk on your block who are hunkered down at home? Alone? Maybe sending them a dinner from your table will make this their best Thanksgiving ever. You don't have to feed the world, just a neighbor. Or two. Don't forget to send dessert.

It doesn't take much to make people feel welcomed. Your hospitality is your greatest weapon during the pandemic. It can lift hearts and souls. Just like the embrace of friendship on that first Thanksgiving of 1621 along the shores of windswept Cape Cod.

NO MUSEUMS: Due to the order of Gov. Pritzker, all museums are now closed, including the Art Institute. What good is having money if you can't spend it on museum tickets?

Paul Hornung

NOTRE DAME OUR MOTHER: Generations of Packers (Green Bay) and Domers (Notre Dame) wept at the passing of the "Golden Boy," football hero Paul Hornung, at 84.

The gentleman superstar brought honor and thrills to the gridiron of both the Univ. of Notre Dame and the snowy seasons of Green Bay. His football evolved in an era of refined behavior and high sportsmanship. His 1956 Heisman Trophy confirmed his Renaissance capacity for gilded play. He sadly died at his home in Louisville, KY, after long years of distress and illness with dementia.

CLOSURE: Morton's Steakhouse, on State St., in Newberry Plaza, a Chicago staple 1978-2020, the original one, now permanently, pandemically closed. Sad.

HOT PANTS: Is former Chicago Police Supt. Eddie Johnson at it again? CPD were, allegedly, once again, called to his home in the wee hours where they discovered him in his bedroom burning his lady-friend's underwear on his bed. After extinguishing the flames, it was explained that this was a traditional way of demonstrating that a man was totally finished with the female in the relationship, as well as accusing the female of being untrustworthy in the relationship. Further details of the event are guarded by CPD top brass.

AVE ET VALDE: Richard Mesirov died last week at 83. A much beloved man of Chicago finance. At the family firm bearing their name, long an important part of Chicago commerce, the Northwestern alum enjoyed putting heart and human values to work in the cherished family business, and led it in the footsteps of his wise father. He incorporated reason and high intelligence in all he did, expecting his employees to do so too. He was devoted to his family and deeply trusted by his clients and employees. Rest in peace.

Joseph Krush and his teacher, Diana Chavira Nogle, pack up some of the donated items for distribution to the local homeless.

HS senior distributes warm blankets to homeless

by Felicia Dechter

Heart of the 'Hood

When Joseph Krush was looking for a service learning project in order to graduate from Pathways in Education, an alternative high school at 3100 W. Belmont Ave., he didn't need to look far. Near to there was a homeless encampment, and Krush decided his help was needed in his school's own back yard.

He came up with a great idea -- a blanket drive. It occurred to him one day while walking home from work. It was then that he spotted a young man handing out burgers and fries for a school assignment. But in order to get the food, the person had to take a picture with him.

"Before he approached me with that, I remember looking up what community service means -- engaging with your community and giving back," recalled Krush. "After I saw this guy, for some reason it just sparked me. If I give back to my community, I'm engaging with that."

Krush thought the other guy's idea was "wonderful." He quickly decided that for his graduation activity he distribute blankets, masks, water bottles, etc.

"This can be my project now that it's getting colder," he thought. "There's all these things that people need. It really would be nice to do."

So Krush started collecting blankets with the goal of filling up his car. He sought donations on social media. He received lots of assistance at his job at a fruit market. His teachers also brought in blankets and when he had about 80 or more, Krush decided to extend his giving. He added much-needed and valued supplies such as water, Powerade, nutrient bars and graham crackers to his list.

Last week, Krush went to the homeless tent city and like Santa, he dropped off his thoughtful gifts. (We know one person who will definitely be making the Nice List this year!)

"They said they really appreciate it and God bless me," Krush said of the distribution. "It went smooth and well."

The service learning project was Krush's final graduation requirement, said his teacher, Diana Chavira Nogle.

"While students are being asked to volunteer virtually due to the pandemic, Joseph decided that he wanted to help out the homeless encampment right by our school," said Chavira Nogle. "Students walk by these homeless individuals every day and they're absolutely wonderful people, they just need a little help."

"Joseph recognized that and reached out to me and asked if he could use social media to gather blankets from the community," added Chavira Nogle, who lives in Rogers Park. "I told him it was an excellent idea. His project is truly amazing. We couldn't be more proud of him. He is awesome."

But wait, this inspiring story doesn't end just yet. I'm going to back up a little, because there's more you should know about Joseph. He's graduating after facing some not-so-little challenges.

He will be 21-years-old on Dec. 18 and graduation is something he was not sure he'd experience. A few years ago, Krush was in his senior year when he dropped out of high school after facing some hardships. His grandma died, he had a falling out in a relationship, his car broke down, and, he lost his job. He also hadn't grown up in the best environment, having a mom with drug and alcohol issues.

"I remember thinking, 'What am I gonna do with my life?'" Krush recalled. "I had no future ahead of me, all my friends had graduated, and I had nothing to show for it."

So he moved to Baltimore and worked for a pest control company making good money. It was shortly thereafter that Krush decided to go back to school.

"I met people who finally accepted me for who I am," said Krush. "I'm gonna go back to school. I want something to show for myself."

"My parents had no expectations, I'm gonna do this for myself," he said. "I know I can make it happen. And that's what I did."

He came home and got into Pathways, which is an alternative school for students who work full time. While completing his senior year, Krush worked more than 40 hours per week. Yet in the midst of that, after about a year of experiencing some troubling physical symptoms -- including blood in his urine -- Krush was diagnosed with bladder cancer. In September, he had surgery at Swedish Covenant Hospital for a low grade, malignant tumor.

He said it "feels good," to be able to not only graduate, but to have a bright future for himself. (We have no doubt of that and wish him the best of luck!)

"I feel like I faced a lot of challenges needed to get through with the cancer, it made me rethink my life," said Krush. "It feels good knowing I'll be OK. It feels good knowing I'll have a future ahead of me."

"I really am lucky," he added. "I feel blessed and I have purpose in my life. I don't know what it is yet -- I'm trying to better myself and look forward to a brighter future."

ner of Greenleaf and Clark can't help but notice the colorful new mural painted on the Honeybear Café building at 7036 N. Clark St. Titled Color Through Chaos, it was created by Chicago artists CJ Williams and Kristianna Jacques.

The mural is part of the non-profit Rogers Park Business Alliance's (RPBA) Vision Clark Street Master Plan. It's a sign of the times, say its creators.

"The mural speaks to the current state we are living in, in regard to racial injustice and the world's uncertainty around COVID-19," said artists Williams and Jacques. "We wanted to do a piece that portrayed working together through this difficult time to create something beautiful and uplifting. We wanted to give the people of Rogers Park and Chicago something to gaze upon in hopes of bringing more peace, positivity and inspiration. Color Through Chaos serves as a reminder to not give up hope, and that there is an amazing amount of resiliency within community."

Armed robberies near Mag Mile tied to Lincoln Park hold-up

Three recent armed robberies near the Magnificent Mile and in Lincoln Park were probably committed by the same group of offenders, according to a Chicago police bulletin. Shots were fired during one of the robberies.

The hold-ups all took place on busy streets during afternoon hours. Police said the offenders used a silver Ford Explorer to get away after two of the crimes.

On Nov. 9, a 29-year-old man was walking in the 700 block of N. Rush when someone tried to take his shopping bag around 2:15 p.m., police said. The offender displayed a handgun and then fired three shots toward the victim, who fell to the ground. He was not seriously injured. Police said the victim declined medical attention.

The robber fled from the scene eastbound in a silver Ford Explorer with the man's property. Police believe the Explorer had been recently stolen from a car dealership.

Then on Nov. 12, a 31-year-old man was walking just east of Chicago and State streets when a small gray or silver SUV stopped in front of him around 12:20 p.m., said CPD spokesperson Kellie Bartoli. Two of the vehicle's occupants got out, displayed a gun, and took the man's valuables, Bartoli said. They then got back into the SUV and fled westbound on Chicago Ave. The victim was not injured.

The next day, a group of three people was robbed at gunpoint by three offenders in Lincoln Park, police said. The victims — a pair of 22-year-old men and a 23-year-old woman — were on a sidewalk in the 2200 block of N. Halsted when the robbers walked up and displayed a handgun around 10:39 p.m., according to CPD spokesperson Officer Michael Carroll.

The suspects are two to three Black males who stand 5'-8" to 6' tall, weigh 160 to 200 lbs, and are between 25- and 40-years-old, police said in a community alert.

Anyone with information about the crimes can contact Area Three detectives at 312-744-8263 regarding case P20-3-209.

Another man charged with recent robberies in Lakeview, North Center

A Chicago man was charged Nov. 19 with committing two robberies on the North Side in October — one in Lakeview and the other in North Center.

Prosecutors said Denard Ross, 20, robbed a woman by himself on Oct. 13 and was one of three men who tried to rob a Wrigleyville resident six days later.

In the first case, a 26-year-old woman told police she slowed down to let a man pass her as she walked in the 1900 block of W. Patterson around 1 p.m. After the man passed, he turned around, removed his COVID mask, and told her it was a robbery and not to scream or he'd shoot her, according to prosecutors.

When he held his hand in his pocket and told her to hand over her bag, the woman told the man that it only contained $75. But the robber, identified by prosecutors as Ross, told her that someone would shoot him if he came back from the robbery empty-handed.

The woman handed over her cash, and Ross fled, prosecutors said.

Six days later, Ross was one of three men who got out of a car and pushed a 40-year-old man to the ground on the 1100 block of W. Grace, according to the allegations. Ross tried to take the man's earbuds and attempted to remove things from the victim's pockets, but the victim fought back and all three men returned to the car without any proceeds, prosecutors said.

The second robbery was recorded by a CPD surveillance camera.

Earlier this month prosecutors charged 20-year-old Davon McCoy with taking part in the Wrigleyville robbery with Ross. Investigators began looking at Ross as a suspect because he happened to be riding in McCoy's car when cops arrested McCoy for the robbery case, prosecutors said. Both victims allegedly identified Ross in photo line-ups.

Ross is charged with felony counts of robbery and attempted robbery. Judge Arthur Willis ordered him held in lieu of $100,000 bail and said Ross must go on electronic monitoring if he can post a 10% deposit bond.

Convicted carjacker, on parole for gun crime, busted with another gun in Uptown

Back in 2005, Joseph Whitsett received a 25-year sentence for carjacking. Still, he managed to be out of prison by 2018 when he was convicted of illegal gun possession. He got six years for that. Yet, he was out of prison again this week when cops say they saw him ditch a loaded and defaced handgun in Uptown. He's in jail again. At least for a little while.

Joseph Whitsett

Police were on patrol Nov. 17 when they saw Whitsett drinking from a cup on the 4900 block of W. Kenmore, prosecutors said. When they asked him what was in the cup, Whitsett allegedly took off running while holding his waistband.

As officers chased the 37-year-old, they allegedly saw him pull an object from his waistband and toss it on the ground. After cops caught up with him, they retraced their steps and found a loaded handgun with a defaced serial number where Whitsett dropped the object, prosecutors said.

He's now charged with armed habitual criminal and two counts of unlawful use of a weapon by a felon. Judge Arthur Willis set bail at $100,000 and ordered him to go onto electronic monitoring if he can post a $10,000 deposit bond.

Ironically, Whitsett was charged with armed habitual criminal in the 2018 gun case, but prosecutors agreed to drop that more serious count in a plea deal, according to court records. He was released early from prison on July 13.

In addition to that case and his 25-year sentence for carjacking 15 years ago, Whitsett also went to prison for narcotics in 2003 and 1999. In 2001, he went to prison for aggravated battery.

Whitsett seemed unconcerned when Judge Willis told him the Illinois Dept. of Corrections asked to have him held without bail while they consider revoking his parole. "Alright," Whitsett said. "I got two more months left dealing with IDOC and that's over."

"Good luck," Willis replied.

Sexual assault allegations end with probation

A man who was accused of sexual assault attacks has reached a plea deal with prosecutors, according to court records.

The man was accused of robbing and trying to sexually assault a woman aboard the CTA Red Line in Rogers Park. His sentences? Probation.

Chicago police in January released CTA surveillance images of a man who allegedly beat a 24-year-old woman and then tried to force her to perform a sex act as they rode the Red Line train near Morse early this year.

Three weeks later, prosecutors charged Antoine Jackson with felony counts of robbery, attempted criminal sexual assault, criminal sexual abuse, and aggravated battery.

Prosecutors said in January that the victim moved to a different train car when Jackson exposed himself to her, but he followed the woman, struck her several times, touched her inappropriately, and then tried to force her to perform a sex act.

Now, Jackson has struck a generous deal with those same prosecutors. Under the agreement, Jackson, 27, pleaded guilty to one count of robbery in exchange for a sentence of 24 months of mental health probation. Prosecutors dropped 18 other felony charges in the deal. Judge Neera Walsh oversaw the case.

By comparison, in 2016, Jackson received a three-year prison sentence for pointing a fake handgun at a man's head on the Red Line near Addison.

Uptown man charged with looting, burglary

Kameron Moore, 19, of the 4800 Block of N. Kenmore, was charged on Nov. 20 with four felony counts of burglary and looting by an individual.

Kameron Moore

Moore was arrested 10:40 a.m. Nov. 19 in the 2400 Block of W. Belmont when he was identified as an individual who burglarized and looted businesses on Aug. 10, in the 100 block of N. State St., the 100 block of N. Wells and 200 block of E. Ohio. He was taken into custody without incident and charged accordingly. No further information is available at this time.

Roommates robbed while trying to sell sizzling hot gaming system

Two men who tried to sell a PlayStation 5 via social media ended up being robbed of the red hot new gaming device instead, according to a Chicago police report.

Stores can't keep the latest model in stock and online demand is causing websites to crash.

So, the robbery victims, roommates who are 22- and 23-years-old, had no trouble finding an interested party when they advertised a PS5 online over the weekend. They agreed to meet with two prospective buyers shortly before 8 p.m. Nov. 14 on the 4100 block of N. Damen in North Center.

During some last-minute in-person negotiation, one of the buyers grabbed the victims' new PS5 and ran away southbound, according to CPD spokesperson Kellie Bartoli and a police report. The co-offender then threatened the victims with a boxcutter and fled, Bartoli said.

Neither roommate was injured. Police did not release descriptions of the robbers.

Cops frequently handle rip-offs and robberies of people who advertise valuable items for sale online, and cases seem to surge whenever a hot new product goes on the market. Sellers are at risk of losing valuable merchandise. And buyers have been robbed of cash that they carried to make purchases.

In 2017 Town Hall Police District allowed people to conduct online transactions in the station's lobby at 850 W. Addison after a series of robberies involving Craigslist and social media listings. Although the program prohibited the sale of "firearms, illegal, or unwieldy items" such as "sofas and pianos" inside the station.

CPD has consistently advised parties who meet in-person to conduct online sales to use busy public spaces like stores, libraries, and other high-traffic areas.

Two more armed robberies as hold-ups surge in Lakeview

Police are investigating an armed robbery and an attempted armed robbery that occurred just a few minutes apart in Lincoln Park and nearby Lakeview on Nov. 19. No arrests have been made.

First, a 33-year-old man told police that he was approached by two men who displayed a handgun as he walked in the 1000 block of W. Altgeld around 9:12 p.m., said CPD spokesperson Kellie Bartoli. The offenders tried to grab the man when he began running away, Bartoli said. But, the victim managed to escape, and the offenders fled the scene.

Private surveillance video showed the men get out of a black four-door SUV before the hold-up. The gunman was a younger Black male who wore a black hoodie.

According to preliminary information, less than ten minutes later, two men robbed a victim at gunpoint near Sheffield and Wellington in Lakeview. Bartoli said the police report for the incident was not yet complete.

However, officers at the scene said two men fled westbound on Wellington after robbing the victim around 9:20 p.m.

Both incidents took place in the Town Hall Police District, which has experienced a sharp rise in robberies since early October.

Over the four-week period ending Nov. 15, robberies were up 147% year-over-year in the Town Hall 19th Police District, with 37 cases reported compared to 15 during the same time last year. So far in 2020, robberies are up 17% in the district. Nonetheless, full-year robbery cases are off sharply from record-high levels seen in 2012 and 2013.

Covert cops snare Old Town's one-teen crime wave following citizen tip

They got him.

Five days into his one-man crime wave, the robbery and suspected burglary offender who's been raising havoc in Old Town met his match. And, it turns out, he's a juvenile.

Undercover cops arrested the teen around 5 p.m. Nov. 21 near Willow and Orchard streets — the same intersection where he's been causing problems all week. Prosecutors have charged the juvenile with two felony counts of robbery, said Chicago police.

Officers responded to the area around 3 p.m. Saturday after someone reported that the wanted offender was standing outside Newberry Math and Science Academy. An 18th District police tactical unit staked out the area and subsequently arrested the teen.

Investigators suspect he is responsible for stealing money from Willow Cleaners, 703 W. Willow, on Monday; Robbing the same business at knife-point Tuesday afternoon; burglarizing a woman's home in the 800 block of W. Armitage; robbing a woman at knife-point near Willow and Orchard on Thursday evening, and trying to rob a woman at Willow and Orchard on Friday afternoon.

Witnesses called police before the Thursday and Friday incidents after seeing the offender in the area, but he committed crimes and fled before police arrived both times.

No one was injured during the incidents, although the robber did push a 77-year-old dry cleaner employee during Tuesday's hold-up.

Man found fatally stabbed in Loop hotel

Detectives are conducting a death investigation after a man was found fatally stabbed in a Loop hotel's office area Nov. 21, police said. The man's wounds may have been self-inflicted, according to preliminary information from CPD.

The Cook County medical examiner's office identified the man as Samuel Ketchum, 37. A ruling on the cause and manner of death is pending.

Police and fire personnel responded to the Virgin Hotel, 203 N. Wabash, around 2:23 a.m. after someone discovered the man's body in a lower level office area. Cops found the man with stab wounds to his chest, according to CPD. He was pronounced dead at the scene.

Investigators have not yet determined the man's name or age. They found his possessions and possible narcotics in a lower level stairwell.

Robberies on Near North Side

Police are warning residents of the Near North Side about a series of reported armed robberies. In each incident, the offenders approached the victim(s), displayed a handgun and demanded their property.

The offenders then took the victim's property before fleeing on foot. During two reported incidents, the offenders fled the scene in a silver Ford Explorer SUV. Incidents include one on the 700 block of N. Rush St., Monday, Nov. 9, in the afternoon, another on the 0-100 block of E. Chicago Ave., Thursday, Nov. 12, in the afternoon, and a third on the 2200 block of N. Halsted St., Saturday, Nov. 14, in the evening.

Lakeview Township property tax appeals now underway

The Cook County Board of Review is open for property valuation appeals for Lakeview Township (bounded by Fullerton north to to Devon Ave. and from the lakefront to the Chicago River and/or Western Ave.) through Dec. 15.

When the Cook County Assessor's Office reassesses a property (typically once every three years), its duty is to produce a Fair Market Value -- what the property could fairly sell for, between a willing buyer and a willing seller. Appeals are a process by which a property owner can contest their property valuation.

For a copy of the Lakeview Township assessment list that was released last week, contact this newspaper at 773-465-9700 or by writing to insidepublicationschicago@gmail.com.

Most commonly, property owners challenge the accuracy of the fair market valuation the office assigned their property due to uniformity or overvaluation. Property owners can also file an appeal based on incorrect information about your property.

Appeals may only be filed during certain periods. Appeals can be filed online or at the Assessor's Office in the Cook County Building offices. You do not need to hire an attorney to file an appeal and filing is free. If your appeal is filed by an authorized representative, an Attorney/Representative Authorization Form must be completed and filed along with the appeal. Note that your appeal must be filed within your township deadline. For more information call the Assessor's Office at 312-443-7550.

Despite the Covid pandemic, riots and looting, Chicago's rebounding downtown and North Side residential market mirrors the nation, reports broker-analyst John Irwin of Baird & Warner.

Holiday's real cheer: Mortgage rates fall to new low

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

Pandemic-weary Americans are huddling around hearth and home for the holidays, trying desperately to muster some Christmas cheer.

Although traditional large Thanksgiving gatherings likely will be greatly diminished, America refuses to be Scrooged.

Residential holiday décor sales are up 15% to 20%, compared to last year. And, hundreds of thousands of people are listening to Christmas music in late November.

While COVID-19 virus cases and deaths are soaring to new heights, benchmark home-loan interest rates ironically have plummeted to 2.72%, the lowest level since 1971 and the 13th new record-low posted in 2020.

Meanwhile, sales of existing homes nationwide rose for the fifth month in a row in October, reaching a level not seen for 14 years. The annualized rate of home sales has reached 6.85 million units, up 26.6% from a year ago, and the median price rose 15.5% to $313,000.

"Weaker consumer-spending data, which accounts for the majority of economic growth, drove mortgage rates to a new record low," said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's Chief Economist. "While economic growth remains unstable, strong housing demand continues to have a domino effect on many other segments of the economy."

On Nov. 19, lenders nationwide were charging an average of 2.72% on benchmark 30-year fixed rate mortgages, down from 2.84% a week earlier, reported the Freddie Mac Primary Mortgage Market Survey. A year ago, the 30-year fixed-loan average was 3.66%.

In Chicago, Gateway Capital Mortgage was quoting 2.756% on a 30-year fixed loan, while Mutual of Omaha Mortgage was asking 2.923%, according to RateSeeker.com.

Fifteen-year fixed-rate mortgages averaged 2.28%, down from 2.34% a week earlier. A year ago, 15-year loans averaged 3.15%. The survey is focused on conventional, conforming, fully-amortizing home purchase loans for borrowers who put 20% down and have excellent credit.

Chicago's rebounding downtown and North Side residential market mirrors the nation, reports broker-analyst John Irwin of Baird & Warner.

Chicago's rebounding downtown and North Side residential market mirrors the nation, reports John Irwin.

"After the COVID-19 shutdown in March and April of 2020, we saw the rebound take off again in May and has continued through the summer and into the fall," Irwin noted. "Oct. 2020 residential sales and homes going under contract continued to dramatically increase. In October, these increases exceeded the rise in inventory levels that we have been closely monitoring."

Even the Near North Side which continues to suffer the most from social unrest and COVID-19 posted a 7.8% increase in homes that went under contract in October, Irwin noted.

In-person trials, court proceedings shut down in Chicago

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

Citing the "public health emergency" caused by the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, the chief judge of the federal courts in Chicago has shut down all in-person court proceedings in those courthouses.

According to an order issued Nov. 13, all federal criminal and civil jury trials have been indefinitely suspended.

Further, Northern District of Illinois Chief Judge Rebecca

Pallmeyer ordered that all hearings and bench trials for civil cases must be conducted via remote live streaming or by telephone conference, unless in-person hearings are required by law.

Pallmeyer also suspended court rulings requiring attorneys and litigants to deliver paper copies of filings to judges, and which would require motions to include notices that the motions would be presented in person in court. Under the new rules, judges would "notify parties of the need, if any, for a hearing by electronic means or in-court proceeding."

Pallmeyer further required all filings to be made electronically or at designated drop boxes at the district court clerk's office.

The judge further banned all public gatherings at the district's courthouses, unless they have been "specifically authorized by the Chief Judge."

Pallmeyer said the new restrictions would remain in effect at the Northern District's courthouses until Jan. 25, 2021.

DoorDash gives out $500K in winterization grants

DoorDash, the restaurant meal delivery service, unveiled their list of 100 Chicago restaurants that will each receive a $5,000 Winterization grant to offset costs of operating during the winter. Many are located on Chicago's North Side.

These are designed to make outdoor dining feasible in our notorious winter weather. Grants can be used toward outdoor heating equipment, additional safety materials to improve outdoor dining, bulk orders of blankets for patrons, and more.

Recipients include Brindille in River North, Goddess and the Baker in River North and The Gold Coast; Hai Yen and Immm Rice and Beyond in Uptown; The Common Cup and Badou Senegalese Cuisine in Rogers Park; Dak, Helix Cafe and Alexander's restaurant in Edgewater; Fiya and Lost Larson in Andersonville; Artango Bar & Steakhouse in Lincoln Square and The Globe Pub in North Center; Saigon Sisters, Pinched on the River and Vermilion restaurants in Streeterville; Declan's Irish Pub in Old Town, and El Jardin, Southport Grocery & Cafe, Uncommon Ground and Drew's on Halsted in Lakeview.

These grants are a part of Door-

Dash's $500,000 Winterization promotion, which was announced last month as part of DoorDash's $2 million nationwide grant program to help local restaurants prepare for and operate throughout the winter.

Happy Thanksgiving Day

While our world is experiencing an historic threat to its well-being due to the pandemic, it nevertheless offers countless reasons for which we can all be thankful.

Of course there are personal losses everywhere, more often than we would like. Still we have so much for which to be thankful. We should ask ourselves what we should be thankful for. If necessary consult with others about their circumstances and what they may offer you.

So let our losses be few and short lived. Those who seek it out are likely to see numerous things for which we can be grateful.

Let us look wherever we can - to health, family and friends, work, environment and weather for example, to let us celebrate a happy Thanksgiving.

Leon Hoffman, Lakeview East

Downtown shuttered storefronts story

I cannot look at even one plywood-covered storefront without wondering in disbelief.

These people tore your City apart, and threaten to do the same again... and you voted for them?

The election was a "perfect storm" ... three types of voters aligned: Sheep, Haters, Parasites.

Each has their own payoff, each has their own motivation.

Their numbers combined are staggering.

Out with the old pigeon rookery too

Will the new Metra bridges have screens which will prevent pigeons from roosting and nesting by and under them?

I wish Metra would rebuild the bridge over Granville at Ridge/Ravenswood. Years ago Metra put screening under the bridge, but hasn't maintained it, so the place became a pigeon rookery, with disgusting deposits of guano and

The plywood-covered storefronts don't really bother any of the three groups.

We will survive this/them, Chicago is greater than even their numbers.

The article on the storefronts is probably the only news story that actually portrays the truth, and what is actually happening.

Thanks, Skyline, hang in there.

John Loftus

other bird waste on the sidewalks below it. Many misguided bird-lovers continue to drop food on the sidewalks for the birds, even though it's posted illegal. Much of this edible litter isn't even appealing to rats. Appeals to Metra to eliminate the pigeon nuisance have not been successful.

struggling? The answer to both questions is yes," Irwin said. "However, the numbers show that demand for homes on both the buy and sell side on Chicago's North Side are very strong and that the market in general is quite healthy."

Irwin said the big question remains: Where is the market going? The answer is analysts don't really know. "While the market is currently healthy, it is going to be subject to changes by month and even by week," Irwin said.

"We are currently experiencing another dramatic rise in COVID-19 which is resulting in increased restrictions and financial problems. While social protests have remained peaceful, another major incident of violence and looting would have grave consequences," he said.

Gazing to the future, Irwin predicted that state and local financial problems remain "the elephant in the room" and could be negatively affecting real estate for some time to come.

Judge gives green light to go after City Hall over city's car impoundment policies

BY SCOTT HOLLAND
Cook County Record

It's not just Lincoln Towing that finds itself in legal troubles these days over their towing policies.

A federal judge has rejected the City of Chicago's attempts to put the brakes on a class action challenging Chicago's vehicle impoundment program, under which plaintiffs said their vehicles had been "effectively stolen" by the city.

In June 2019, attorney's with the firm of Myron M. Cherry & Assoc. filed suit on behalf of Andrea Santiago.

Santiago wants the city to pay up to two classes of perhaps tens of thousands of other car owners whose vehicles were either towed by the city after being declared abandoned, or were later "disposed of by the City" - a phrase that often meant the cars were sold to tow companies, which later resold the vehicles for scrap and parts.

The lawsuit asserted the city did not abide by policies requiring notices to be sent to vehicle owners, leaving some vehicle owners unaware their cars had been towed, and others unaware their vehicles had been scrapped.

Santiago's complaint is distinct from an April 2019 action filed by attorneys with the Washington D.C. based civil rights organization Institute for Justice and attorney Robert Pavlich of Chicago. That action, which accused the city of operating an "unconstitutional racket," remains pending.

In a Nov. 15 opinion, U.S. District Judge Mathew Kennelly said Santiago's complaint met thresholds needed to certify it to proceed as a class action.

Santiago's case is based, in part, on information contained in a WBEZ report, which found that 32,155 of 93,857 cars the city towed in 2017 were unclaimed. The city further sold almost 24,000 of those for scrap.

Santiago's complaint accused the city of standardized alleged misconduct, including failing to mail notice to car owners before towing, then failing to also notify owners before disposing of an unclaimed vehicle.

In March, Kennelly rejected the city's motion to dismiss all of Santiago's complaint, saying she adequately alleged the city had deprived her of due process rights under an official government policy, and adequately alleged the city had violated Fifth Amendment protections against government seizure of private property without just compensation.

The judge did agree to dismiss her claims alleging violation of Fourth Amendment illegal seizure protections as relates to vehicle disposition, because "the Fourth Amendment does not govern the retention or disposal of property that has already been seized."

In response, the city challenged the size and scope of the potential classes of additional plaintiffs.

In amended filings, Santiago's lawyers conceded the class who could sue under improper towing could only include those whose tow was attributed to a specific municipal code section and limited to a two-year period starting June 11, 2017. The plaintiffs also proposed a five-year limitation for the proposed class of people challenging the manner in which their vehicle was disposed.

Kennelly said the city also maintained its policy of sending identical impoundment notices on the same day satisfies its own ordinance — under which the city can't impound a vehicle for 18 days after giving notice, but must give an additional notice within that period — as well as constitutional obligations. Using that stance to deny class certification is insufficient, he wrote, "because it amounts to an argument that Santiago's claim will not succeed on the merits."

The city also made three challenges under the adequacy of representation standard. It said she had a unique defense from the rest of the tow class because her daughter saw and removed the city's sticker from Santiago's van, showing the city had provided notice of its intent to tow.

In court filings, Santiago's lawyers noted the city had still towed and impounded Santiago's vehicle, even after her daughter had moved the vehicle from where the city had initially found it on the street, and had placed a sign in the window, including contact information, telling the city the vehicle was legal and not abandoned.

Kennelly rejected the city's arguments concerning the sticker. He said "a plaintiff who has received actual notice may still challenge the procedural sufficiency of the notice."

He said the city's second challenge recycled the argument pertaining to the dual notices because her challenge to that practice is typical of the other class members. The third challenge concerned Santiago's standing because she can't press claims over a "threat of future injury." Kennelly said entitlement to relief shouldn't be conflated with suitability to be a class representative.

However, Kennelly agreed with the city's position on speculation, saying the portion of her suit based on a worry a new van could be towed is insufficient, as is the related proposition that, should it be towed, the city could then dispose of it improperly. As such, he said he would allow only a class action to proceed for those who had already had their cars improperly impounded, or disposed of, without proper notice. While some differences may exist among some class members, the judge said it wasn't enough to shut off the class action on their behalf.

He declined to discuss a blanket injunction barring the city from towing abandoned cars in the future under its abandoned car policy.

be waiting for them in a nearby alley.

Then, a 28-year-old man told police that he was pistol-whipped in the face during an apparent carjacking attempt in the parking garage of Whole Foods, 1550 N. Kingsbury. The man drove himself to Trinity Hospital for treatment. Two people who know the victim told this reporter that he works at the grocery store.

Chicago police recorded 1,142 carjackings in the city through Nov. 15 this year. That's up from 507 cases during the same period in 2019.

At almost the same time that the carjacking attempt took place, another man who works in the Whole Foods was shot in the leg while he took out some garbage. Police said the victim might have been shot by an errant bullet fired by an occupant of two vehicles that sped out of the grocery store's parking garage. Investigators were trying to determine if the shooting and the reported carjacking attempt are connected.

In River North, police met with a woman who said four men tried to take her car near the intersection of State and Grand around 6:20 p.m. That hijacking attempt also failed, and the offenders ran into a nearby parking garage.

An hour later, two men tried to carjack a woman as she prepared to park her car on Argyle near Broadway in Uptown. She said the men implied they had a gun as they demanded her keys around 7:15 p.m. But she took off running and left them empty-handed.

Then, at about 7:30 p.m., carjackers took a man's Ford Fusion, wallet, and phone in the 4500 block of N. Hamilton in Lincoln Square, according to a police report. The victim was not injured.

Chicago police recorded 1,142 carjackings in the city through Nov. 15 this year. That's up from 507 cases during the same period in 2019.

Incidents have been soaring on the North Side since early October, with the Town Hall 19th Police District being especially hard-hit.

behavior. "It's my hope this will provide much-needed relief for restaurants that in some ways have been taken advantage of."

Consumers have come to endorse the convenience of online ordering, while the local restaurant industry feels the current market conditions and the COVID-19 pandemic have forced them to use costly third party delivery systems.

While home-delivery will never replace those profits lost due to the economic lockdown and prohibition on dining inside a restaurant, with winter approaching, delivery may now be the primary source of income for the struggling local restaurant industry.

Sam Toia, the Illinois Restaurant Association president, applauded City Hall for backing the caps on delivery service fee, stressing how difficult it is for small businesses to make a profit off of orders through companies like Grubhub and Uber Eats.

According to Chicago Eater, restaurants' frustrations mounted Nov. 21 when DoorDash experienced global technical difficulties that cancelled orders without notifying restaurants. Parachute owner Beverly Kim wondered if the outage cost her hundreds of dollars on a busy weekend night. The outage also affected Tock, the Chicago-based company co-founded by the co-owner of Alinea that uses DoorDash integration for delivery. A DoorDash spokesperson apologized in a statement and offered refunds for customers.

as to when we can re-open our theaters and when our customers will feel safe and secure in returning to them given that there is presently no vaccine against the virus. We cannot forecast when — if ever — customer numbers will return to pre-crisis levels."

CMX is the eighth-largest cinema chain in North America.

Given the perilous state of the local economy and particularly the local entertainment sector, it should not come as a surprise that the movie chain stopped building out its space when the COVID-19 pandemic hit. The COVID-19 economic lockdown has been especially bad for entertainment businesses like movie and theaters, restaurants, nightclubs and bars that rely on gatherings of large crowds.

According to Crain's Chicago Business, work on the third-floor movie theater stopped shortly after the onset of the pandemic and triggered more than two dozen liens on the property from contractors and subcontractors—as well as three foreclosure suits from contractors—totaling more than $5 million in unpaid fees and other costs, Bucksbaum alleged in the complaint. The foreclosure complaints are pending in Cook County Circuit Court, according to the lawsuit, but the complaints have stalled due to the current moratorium on foreclosures.

The $18.2 million sought in the lawsuit includes missed rent payments and the value of future rent from the 10-year lease.

The lawsuit may be the clear sign of a series of pending failures for new developments, bars and restaurants in and around Wrigley Field after the economic lockdown meant that 40,000 people were not showing up in the area for baseball games. This dispute is surely one of many going on now between North Side landlords and their retail and commercial tenants who are struggling to survive the economic shutdown due to the COVID-19 crisis.
