Trumbull School future debated at standing room only meeting Monday

Rob Remer poses a question during the Trumbull community meeting.

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY PATRICK BUTLER

Andersonville residents will have their say about whether they'd like to see the now-shuttered Trumbull School converted into a rock-climbing gym, combination theater and condo building, private school, or market rate apartments with the old auditorium available for community events.

But there's at least one more hurdle waiting, Ald. Patrick O'Connor (40th) told a meeting Monday at the century-old school located at Foster and Ashland.

The white hot Andersonville real estate market is one of the reasons why the schools future use has garnered a lot of attention from potential buyers and developers. Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the Chicago Public Schools closed it last year, along with 49 other city schools that officials deemed underutilized. Many nearby neighbors feel this school may have been closed more because of it's underlying real estate values than the city's perceived lack of a real need.

The survey the 200-or-so neighbors who attended the meeting were invited to fill out is only the beginning, said

Ald. O'Connor, adding "there are 52,000 people who live in this ward. So we will continue talking to people in neighborhood groups, folks in the chambers of commerce, and the historical society to make sure everyone is part of the discussion."

Then it will be time to talk to the Board of Education where you can't recommend specific individuals or organizations, but only how people would like to see the building used, Ald. O'Connor said.

Then the CPS gets to pick from the top two bidders, "probably by late December, early January, but just what that turnaround time is, I don't know," O'Connor said.

Among the contenders making their pitches at the nearly standing-room-only meeting were Howard Weiner's Chicago Development Partners, who wants to lease 33% of the building to the Timeline Theater Company, with residential units — including some luxury apartments with private gardens on the first floor — taking the rest of the space. Weiner estimates the taxes collected on the renovated building should net the city between $100,000 to $200,000 in annual property taxes.

Then there's the Brooklyn Boulders Climbing Co., whose

Northwestern greased wheels to set killer free promising cash and notoriety for retractions; victims recant after getting nothing

BY MARK SCHIPPER
Part Four of Four

The most incomprehensible aspect of the Anthony Porter double-murder exoneration that this newspaper has been reporting on for four weeks remains the State's Attorney's Office's decision to allow Alstory Simon's false, coerced confession to the killings stand up in criminal court.

The most tragic outcome of that decision came Oct. 30—14-years after the confession was made—when current Cook County State's Attorney Anita Alvarez released Simon from his wrongful incarceration, leaving no one in jail to pay for the 1982 shooting murders of Jerry Hillard and Marilyn Green in Washington Park.

The brutal irony for family and friends of the murdered, and for the citizens of Chicago, is that it continues to appear manifest that the City had locked up the right man for the murders—Porter—on its first try.

Porter had been less than 50 hours from execution when Simon's video-taped confession hit the media and touched-off a social and political firestorm.

[The precise nature and circumstances of the media's strident, one-sided and accusatory treatment of Alstory Simon's confession, and the political reaction to it, is covered in Part 3 of this series. All four parts can be read on our Facebook page.]

Thomas Epach—who rose to chief of the Cook County criminal division before his retirement—had convened the 1999 grand jury hearings that re-investigated the state's original case against Porter in light of Simon's sensational confession.

Those grand jury hearings had re-established Porter's guilt so completely, and discredited Northwestern University's investigation so thoroughly, that Epach had been bewildered when then-State's Attorney Dick Devine allowed Simon's bogus confession to stand up in criminal court.

Epach had recommended a more thorough investigation into the circumstances surrounding Simon's confession before allowing it stand, but was overruled, he stated in a sworn affidavit written the autumn of 2013.

"In my years of experience as a prosecutor," wrote Epach, "it is my opinion that it was highly unusual, if not unprecedented, to make a decision to release an individual convicted of murder based upon the broadcast of a video, the reliability and authenticity of which had not been thoroughly investigated and established."

"I was also aware that there was substantial credible evidence to support the conviction of Anthony Porter and that no physical evidence existed which tied Simon to those murders."

The political situation stirred up by the media feeding frenzy, instigated both by Northwestern journalism professor David Protess, and a Chicago Tribune series on corruption in the offices of public prosecutors—had attacked not merely Cook County prosecutors, but then-Mayor Richard Daley himself.

The intensity of those conditions had compelled Devine to act against the overwhelming evidence in the case and imprison a man who made a false confession under extreme duress, according to records and a coterie of experts interviewed for this series.

Pot shop security law would benefit clout-heavy security firms Ald. Burke vows to push for measure despite legal concerns

BY BOB ZULEY

The Chicago City Council last week shelved, perhaps permanently, a proposal that would have imposed more strict security measures on medical cannabis dispensaries beyond what the state already required in the enabling legislation. The measure stands to greatly benefit licensed security firms in particular those with well-established ties to City Hall.

Ald. Scott Waguespack (32nd) and Ald. Bob Fioretti (2nd), both members of the Council's Progressive Caucus, used a parliamentary procedure to delay consideration of an enhanced security ordinance sponsored by Ald. Ed Burke (14th) and Ald. Danny Solis (25th).

The proposal called for the presence of a security officer 24-hours a day, every day of the year, in addition to other measures on top of the provisions already called for by state legislation and established by dispensary operators such as state-of-the-art alarm systems and surveillance cameras.

According to the Chicago Sun-Times, Ald. Fioretti possesses an opinion from the city's Law Dept. that says the ordinance sponsored by Ald. Burke and Ald. Solis oversteps the city's home-rule authority.

A legal opinion prepared by the Mayor's Office of Intergovernmental Affairs makes clear that the proposal exceeds the city's authority concluding that the state law already outlines security and transportation measures that medical marijuana dispensaries must follow and that "no local municipality shall impose" restrictions beyond those terms.

Last Friday at a Zoning Board of Appeals meeting, Ald. Burke vowed to go ahead with his ordinance at the next council meeting regardless of the Law Department's opinion on the legality of his measure.

The proposed ordinance, sidelined for now, stands to benefit operators of security firms in the city - especially firms that have established ties to city officials and have already received lucrative city contracts.

To date, there have been no guidelines or enhanced standards announced for firms that might seek to protect medical cannabis dispensaries. It is not immediately clear if every licensed security firm would be eligible to seek a security contract with an individual dispensary, or if city oversight and participation in the process would be required.

One security firm that stands to potentially benefit from the proposed enhanced security ordinance is Monterrey Security Consultants, Inc. of 2232 S. Blue Island Ave. The Pilsen-based firm was founded by Chicago firefighter Santiago Solis, brother of Ald. Danny Solis.

Santiago Solis co-founded the firm in 1999 with Juan Gaytan, a one-time Chicago police officer with a history so troubling that then-Police Supt. Terry Hilliard recommended that Gaytan be fired after allegedly threatening to shoot a South Side man.

From an initial investment of $1,000, Monterrey Security raked in more than $3 million in contract just three years later.

CTA cracks door open on restoring Lincoln Ave. bus service

BY BOB ZULEY

Opening the door to an extremely rare admission of a failure in transit policy, CTA Board vice chairperson Jackie Grimshaw said at last Thursday’s CTA budget hearing that restoration of the No. 11 Lincoln Ave. bus service was not yet off the table and she is asking staff about the discontinued route.

Grimshaw’s statement of interest in the route contradicts CTA Board president Forrest Claypool’s earlier statements that the No. 11 Lincoln Ave. bus would not be restored thereby disregarding the wishes of North Side area residents and businesses.

“We have no plans to bring the service back. We believe we have a robust amount of service in one of the most transit-rich areas of the city,” CTA spokesperson Tammy Chase has previously said.

The No. 11 Lincoln Ave. bus service, one of the longest routes on the North Side, was dramatically cut between the Fullerton Ave. and Western Ave. stations in a 2012 budget cutting move calling it a decrowding initiative and offering comparable transit alternatives on the CTA’s crowded Brown Line train route.

The service elimination saved the CTA $1.4 million annually but saw route ridership decline from 5,489 on a typical weekday before the service cut to 3,152 weekday riders after the cut on the No. 11. The discontinued portion of the route extended 3.5 miles and served some 52 bus stops.

Adversely affected by the service elimination were many seniors, retirees, students, disabled, the mobility-impaired and those who shopped and worked in businesses along Lincoln Ave. and the adjacent areas. Access to places of worship, food pantries, libraries and other destinations became more complicated.

co-founder, Lance Pinn, wants to turn at least part of the old Trumbull building into an indoor rock climbing space, with much of the remaining building used for “collaborative” workspaces, “much like a classroom,” where entrepreneurs can work at their startup businesses.

Martin Jablonski of Trumbull Court Partners wants to convert the former school into an “multigenerational center” with day-care facilities for about 40 children and 42 apartments for senior citizens.

Developer Paul Svigos envisions putting 48 luxury apartments in the former school building, but doesn’t plan on making any major changes in the 1911 building’s structure. For one thing, Svigos executives said, “we don’t have the budget for that.”

But the biggest buzz was when Chicago Waldorf School administrative director Leukos Goodwin, along with a cheering section of at least 50 parents, teachers and pupils descended on the meeting, also promising not to “materially change” the building, while enriching the surrounding community.

The 40-year-old Walforf School and Andersonville are “a perfect

The No. 11 Lincoln Ave. bus service, one of the longest routes on the North Side, was eliminated between Fullerton and Western avenues in a 2012.

Reversing the CTA’s decision and restoring the No. 11 Lincoln Ave. bus service has been a major interest of Ald. Ameya Pawar (47th) whose efforts have been indefatigable. He has tied his possible future support of the proposed Ashland Ave. Bus Rapid Transit [BRT] to the restoration of the Lincoln Ave. route that once served a major arterial street that dissects his and three other wards.

At last week’s CTA hearing, Ald. Pawar and State Rep. Greg Harris (13th) led about 100 bus supporters to the board hearing and delivered 2,500 petition signatures and letters from the Lakeview and Northcenter chambers of commerce demanding the route be restored.

Also last Thursday, Ald. Michele Smith (43rd) said she is urging CTA Board President Forrest Claypool to reinstate the Lincoln Ave. bus. “While the CTA previously stated that the Brown Line would provide an acceptable substitute, this decision has proven to have negative impacts on local businesses and on residents dependent upon public transit,” Ald. Smith wrote.

Lance Pinn (left) offered free passes to the Brooklyn Boulders Climbing gym he hopes to open in the former Trumbull School building. One thing the neighbors won’t need to worry about, he promised, is losing parking spaces to his customers. “Ninety percent of our customers don’t drive.”

match,” said Goodwin and president and board chairman Valerie Colis, noting the school would increase the tax base by creating more demand for the community’s amenities and housing.

Waldorf has 355 students from kindergarten through high school, they said. Although annual tuition runs from $12,000 to $19,000, 45% of the students are receiving some sort of financial aid.

Goodwin and Colis promised to create more green space around the building and restore the auditorium’s skylight.

But most important, Goodwin said. “we’ll keep the building in the use for which it was intended – as a school.”

In her letter, Ald. Smith said, “The significant number of college students, young urban professionals and senior citizens living in the 43rd Ward - in direct proximity to the former bus route - indicate a substantial customer base to provide the necessary revenue to reinstitute the bus route. These individuals provide the largest demographic of the most frequent users of public transportation, both locally and nationwide.”

In addition to Ald. Pawar and Ald. Michele Smith, and Rep. Harris, other elected officials who support the restoration of the Lincoln Ave. bus service include Ald. Scott Waguespack (32nd), State Rep. Ann Williams (11th), and Cook County Commissioner John Fritchey (12th).

There’s so much to be thankful for at Thanksgiving time

Heart of the ‘Hood

By Felicia Dechter

especially grateful ... a son for his loving mother, and a mother whose four-year-old daughter is now cancer free.

May they -- and all the rest of us -- have a happy, safe and peaceful Thanksgiving.

Paul Marinaro is thankful for his mom, Caroline Tortora Marinaro. So much so, in fact, that the smooth crooner has dedicated his newly-released single, “A Song For You,” to her.

“After spending the last year talking about my dad and ‘Without a Song,’ the album I recorded in tribute to him and his musical dreams, I wanted to offer something for the person in the shadows who has continually stood by and supported all of the dreamers in my family... the one with the unglamorous role of keeping it all together, the one holding the light so the rest of us could shine... the strongest link in our family, the backbone, superwoman... my mother,” said Marinaro, an Edgewater resident. “From her insistence that I take that first piano lesson and getting me to the second one and beyond, to her sitting through countless recitals, musicals, jam sessions and concerts -- both good and bad -- she’s been my biggest fan, my most ardent supporter, and the greatest mom.”

Marinaro realizes though, that as his career-boosting album honoring his father took off, very little was said or acknowledged about his mom.

“I knew that she understood what this story was all about and she was fine with it, but I wanted to find a way to shine the light on her for once,” said Marinaro. “She’s been the solid rock in our family, the one that has kept the rest of us dreamers from derailing. She’s this intelligent, still beautiful, mother of 10 that helped run my father’s office -- he had a small construction business -- and has continually been the perfect matriarch of our family.”

“My mother recently lost a sister and I watched her, as usual, trying to be the strong one,” said Marinaro. “She’s been a wife for 58 years and a mother for 57... without a day off, always putting others first. With as much deserved attention as my father’s story has received in the last year, it wasn’t mentioned what my mother’s dreams or sacrifices were.

“I knew that she liked a recording she had heard of Leon Russell’s ‘A Song for You’ and I thought it would be the perfect tribute to her, and a way that I could shine the light on her for a moment,” he said.

“A Song For You,” is currently only available as a digital download through CDBaby.com and iTunes. His album, “Without a Song” will be getting a deluxe reissue on vinyl very soon.

I’m personally so thankful for so many things this year. My family is healthy, I have a beautiful granddaughter and another one on the way, and, I can walk, which I could barely do at this time in 2013.

I know I’m not alone in my gratitude and thought I’d share the stories of a couple of others who are also Spreading Christmas cheer... through her artwork is four-year-old North Sider Ania (pronounced Onya) Moriarty, aka, the Dainty Warrior. You may remember that I wrote about Ania and her fight against retinoblastoma, a form of eye cancer, in June.

Ania, who lost her left eye, and her mom, Erica, have created a set of cheery, colorful holiday cards that can be purchased from Ania’s etsy site along with prints of all her artwork. Proceeds will continue to support Ania’s creative desire as well as allow the family to send care packages of art and butterfly wings to other childhood cancer warriors like her. (www.etsy.com/shop/daintywarrior).

There are three designs in the set. The cardinal, which is actually one of Ania’s first paintings she did earlier this year, was inspired by a cardinal she saw as the family was driving out of their alley. “It was the first time I recall her seeing something ‘alive’ and saying ‘I would like to paint that,’” said Erica, who has also started making needle-felted toys and ornaments that Ania often helps select colors for. “Like a real artist inspired by nature!”

My favorite, the snowman and little girl, is a self-portrait of Ania and a snowy friend. The Christmas tree epitomizes the magical times of Christmas to a child “so of course she asked to paint a tree,” said Erica.

Ania is in remission from cancer as of October and will now just have MRIs done every six months and retinal exams every three months until she is six-years-old.

“Ania is doing fantastic!” exclaimed Erica. “She is loving preschool, ballet class and still paints occasionally - although it’s a lot less time painting because she is busy being a healthy little girl!”

I asked Erica what the family will be looking forward to this cancer-free holiday season.

“We are looking forward to enjoying our time together, enjoying good health and a bright new year and beyond!” said Moriarty. “Ania’s great-grandmother, whom she adores, is moving back to Chicagoland after 30 years in South Carolina. We have also been given an incredible Christmas gift from the Move the World Campaign, a charity dance organization - we will be flying to New York so Ania can see ‘The Nutcracker’ put on by the American Ballet Theatre. She is very excited since someday she dreams of dancing on stage!”

Thanks... to people like Edgewater resident Andrew Call, who recently called his mother, Ibby Taylor Greer, to tell her this story: Apparently, Call saw a homeless, 40ish woman outside a restaurant in the cold the other night who asked him for some $. “He rarely has money on him -- new generation, debit card life -- but he took her inside and had her pick out a meal,” said Greer. “She gave him a hug. So proud of him.”

Also, thanks to Chicago Cabaret Professionals, whose Holiday Cabaret Merry Measures on Dec. 1 and 2 at Davenport’s, 1383 N. Milwaukee Ave., benefits Hands Together, Heart to Art, a camp for kids who’ve lost a parent. Reservations 773-278-1830 or www.davenportspianobar.com.

Was there price gouging at $833.33 per inch?

BY DON DeBAT

There may be a tale of both heavy lifting and mystery involved the recent move of the 762-ton Rees House from 2110 S. Prairie Ave. to a vacant lot at 2017 S. Prairie where it joined other historic 19th-century homes.

The relocation, approved by the City of Chicago Commission on Chicago Landmarks, is part of Mayor Rahm Emanuel's "Elevate Chicago" initiative. The Rees House site and surrounding land is targeted for development of the McCormick Place Entertainment District, which will include a 1,200-room hotel and a 10,000-seat event center to provide a home for the DePaul Univ. basketball team and other public events.

According to Bulley & Andrews, the contractor that coordinated the two-day move of the 95-foot-long, 75-foot-tall and 25-foot wide building, the landmark Rees House is in the top one percent of heaviest houses ever moved in the U.S. Earlier, the building's two-story coach house that weighs 187 tons also was cut from its foundation, lifted on jacks and moved to the new site by Wolf House and Building Movers.

Simply put, moving this three-story historic building weighing 1.5 million pounds about 600 feet cost about $10,000 for each foot it was moved on 32 massive automated dollies. That's $833.33 to move it one inch.

The Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority, the outfit that runs McCormick Place, is paying $6 million to have Rees House moved for the redevelopment north of McCormick Place.

In fact, that's just part of the cost of this project. The exposition authority paid $1.9 million to acquire the property for the redevelopment, and the former owners of Rees House received a bonus of $450,000 for selling it. So the total cost of acquisition and move is $8.35 million.

And you thought we were broke!?

The mystery may be how the cost of moving heavy brick buildings has skyrocketed over the past decade or two. Veteran rehabbers and engineers also are wondering if there is a bit of price gouging in the specialized, and likely politically connected, building-moving business.

"Someone pocketed a big profit on the move of Rees House," said Chicagoan Kelsey Lavicka, a licensed professional engineer now working in Phoenix, AZ. "It shouldn't have cost $6 million to move a building 600 feet. My Dad could have done this job for $2 million."

In 1996, Kelsey's Dad—preservationist and innovative renovator William L. Lavicka—tackled a similar project on the Near West Side. The late Lavicka, a licensed civil-structural engineer, saved and moved at least four buildings during a four-decade career after serving as a Seabee in the Vietnam War.

One of Lavicka's most notable building moves was Holabird Haus, a three-story historic landmark building from the 200 block of S. Ashland to a vacant lot at 1505 W. Adams, where he dug a foundation and re-sited it. The cost of moving the building was an affordable $100,000, noted Kelsey Lavicka.

Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, Holabrid Haus, was a landmark row home designed by architects Holabird and Root.

However, the 80-foot-long landmark was targeted for demolition to make way for new row homes being built on the northeast corner of Ashland Ave. and Jackson Blvd., a former gas station site.

Lavicka not only coordinated the move of Holabird Haus, he saved it and lovingly restored it to its former Victorian splendor including the living and dining areas, a wet bar, four bedrooms, secondary baths and a third-floor deck.

And, he added several signature additions, including a curvilinear kitchen at the rear of the house and a conservatory off the living room.

The cost of moving heavy brick buildings was much more affordable back in the 1980s, according to Lionel Bottari, a veteran Chicago rehab specialist.

"In the 1980s, it cost a paltry $10,000 to move a three-flat from Greenview and Lemoyne to 1401 N. Bosworth in Wicker Park," recalled Bottari. Later, Bottari was hired to realign all the plumbing drains in the building because sagging floors were straightened when placed on a new foundation.

Today, building movers must be using dollies with wheels made of gold.

Parents protest testing overdose, lack of parental rights

Federal RTTT funds force CPS to switch out of ISAT and PSAW and into PARCC Test to bank DOE money

An increasingly irate group of Chicago area parents warned last week they won't let their kids "be used as guinea pigs in a science experiment that sets them up for failure," as North Center resident Lara Pruitt put it.

During a Nov. 21 news conference called by Raise Your Hand (RYH) at the State of Illinois Building where the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBOE) was meeting upstairs, about a dozen activists representing parents at Chicago and some suburban school districts want a hold put on the PARCC (Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers) test.

The controversial PARCC test is intended to replace the ISAT (Illinois Standard Achievement Test) and PSAE (Prairie State Achievement Examination) in CPS schools. Illinois was required to make the switch ASAP or be SOL after receiving $42 million in federal funds from the RTTT (Race to the Top) program.

While PARCC scores will not be used for admission to colleges or universities, taking the PARCC will be required for graduation by CPS and other Illinois public school systems.

"We're joined together asking for a delay in the implementation of the PARCC test. Parents are tired of the tyranny of over-testing. We are disgusted by high-stakes testing," Raise Your Hand board member Judy Biggs told a Nov. 21 news conference at the Thompson Center. Biggs said 3,788 signatures backing the school activists had been collected by the time the meeting began.

But as far as parents like Pruitt are concerned, the 10-hour crucible "isn't just another standardized test. It's far too long and far too complicated."

"PARCC will do more harm than good," warned the mother of two students at Lane Tech High School where she is an LSC (Local School Council) member.

"In order to make room for PARCC, ACTs (which are still being administered because they're necessary for college admission) will be given two months earlier, Pruitt noted.

CPS officials have said only the students themselves, not their parents, have the right to refuse to take the PARCC test. But activists from MTAS (More Than a Score) said the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in other cases that parents have a right to speak for their children in cases like this.

RYH executive director Wendy Katten agreed. "My 10-year-old (at Burley School) shouldn't have to refuse a test and be put in an awkward situation," said Katten.

Katten and other activists want to get the ISBOE to ask DOE (the U.S. Dept. of Education) to give Illinois a waiver at least until the problems with PARCC can be ironed out.

Cassie Creswell, a Logan Square resident and RYH board member, noted that several states have refused to give the tests until changes are made, despite DOE threats to withdraw federal funding.

The feds ultimately backed off, Creswell said.

So if Illinois also refused and the DOE made threats, a reporter asked, could the ISBE go to court arguing that Illinois public schools were being singled out?

"Works for me," Pruitt smiled.

Cubs annual tree lighting Dec. 4

The Chicago Cubs will once again host a holiday celebration and tree lighting ceremony Thursday, Dec. 4, at the corner of Clark and Addison streets.

This year, the tree donated by Christy Webber Landscapes will stand at the northwest corner of the intersection, across the street from Wrigley Field to avoid conflict with Wrigley Field construction.

Hall of Famer Fergie Jenkins will be joined by Cubs and neighborhood representatives for the 5:30 p.m. tree lighting. Neighbors are invited to attend the ceremony and join us in donating an unwrapped toy for Cubs Charities' holiday toy drive benefiting children at the Lawrence Hall Youth Services.

the case had concluded—written by four Chicago Assistant Corporation Counselors, explicitly spoke to the political nature of the decision made by the state’s attorney’s office regarding Simon’s confession. A copy of the memo was obtained by this newspaper.

“Armed with five witnesses and one [now] dead eyewitness who placed Porter at the scene, shooting the deadly fire, it seemed strange that the State’s Attorney’s Office did not re-prosecute this case,” the memo read.

“A political decision was made that this case should be put to rest because it caused too much publicity against the imposition of the Death Penalty, caused great doubt about the validity of the death penalty punishment for mentally challenged individuals and incited a significant amount of negative press concerning death row reversals.”

The memo concluded that the state’s attorney’s office became comfortable releasing Porter because—though he would not be put to death—he had served 15-years on death row for the double-murders.

“All the evidence lined up against Anthony Porter,” Kimberly E. Brown, one of the memo’s authors, told the Chicago Sun-Times in April 2014, six months before Simon’s release.

Brown, who co-wrote the internal review of the case, said that Porter’s release and Simon’s prosecution “seemed very, very fishy” at the time, according to the Sun-Times.

Jim Delorto—a retired federal agent who has worked to protect several counties from paying out millions in civil lawsuits against bogus wrongful conviction cases—agreed.

“The main goal started to get people off death row,” Delorto said in an interview with author Martin Preib, whose book “Crooked City” foreshadowed the entire course of events in this case.

“But it’s become a money machine—the real victims in all of this are the public, the taxpayers of Illinois, who are being duped by these attorneys and by the media into paying off these lawsuits on cases that were investigated and jury trials were conducted and these people were all found guilty.”

“This went on 10 years ago, and it’s going to continue to go on until someone puts the hammer down and investigates these cases. In all the cases we’ve went to trial on—and there have been 15 to 20 of them—we’ve won.”

Delorto expounded on the general methods used by wrongful conviction movements, stating that in his experience the routine never changes. It is like a technique used on a successful hunt that is repeated again and again with similar results.

‘What has crept into the mindset of the state’s attorney’s office is political correctness... the news media has sided against the police and with the people who actually committed these murders... it sells newspapers... it’s politically correct to get people off of death row.’

them,” said Delorto. “You find an old case, maybe a 20 year old case—a couple witnesses might have died in the time that elapsed—you might have only one really hard core witness out there. Because most of these cases involve a predominately black part of the population, usually these people are not very wealthy, some of them are street people, and there might be only one left.”

“It is not difficult to sit that person down and get them to sign an affidavit that said maybe I was wrong. And with that—just that—they can spring ‘em, and they’ll be out filing a lawsuit 30 days later.”

Northwestern’s Innocence Project under Protesch had greased those wheels itself by promising cash rewards in addition to personal notoriety, if not outright fame, for favorable statements or retractions, according to multiple victims of the project who have recanted after not receiving what they were promised.

“That’s a common thread through most of these cases,” said Delorto.

“The witnesses are promised monetary compensation to follow, in the form of—and it was a neat kind of idea—you tell ‘em if you do this you’re gonna be in a book and get this money; you’re gonna be in a movie and make money.

“It behooves them to say what they want them to say: that the police made me say what I said—I didn’t want to do it but the police kind of forced me to do it—even if it didn’t result in a beating. Now I’m recanting that, I don’t know who it was or what he looked like. I felt pressure to do this. It’s the same in every case.”

Delorto agreed with the corporation counsel memo that state’s attorney’s offices settle these cases because of political considerations, as opposed to the merits of credible evidence.

“What has crept into the mindset of the state’s attorney’s office over—some of these cases go back 20-years—is a political correctness, and the news media has sided against the police department and with the violators, the people who actually committed these murders. It’s good for them because it sells newspapers and because it’s politically correct to get people off of death row.”

The case against Porter was one of the rare instances when the state’s attorney’s office chose to take Porter’s civil lawsuit claiming malicious prosecution to trial. The City, which put its entire investigation into Porter on the line, won the suit outright after the attorney for the detectives retried the original case using the same witnesses and showed overwhelming evidence that Porter remained the killer.

Porter, who had tried for $24 million—eventually dropped down to $2 million as the civil trial progressed—was awarded nothing by the jury who heard the case.

The pattern described by Delorto as a general circumstance of wrongful conviction cases played out like a script in the Porter case.

The irony, revealed in the 1999 grand jury hearings that should have caused Simon’s confession to be thrown out of court, showed beyond a doubt that Northwestern employed the same unethical and illegal tactics it accused the Police Department of using to railroad criminal suspects like Porter.

Northwestern and Protesch had hounded and harassed William Taylor, an eye-witness who testified at Porter’s 1982 criminal trial, into signing an affidavit 17-years after the murders claiming he could not be certain it was Porter pulled the trigger.

On the witness stand under oath during the grand jury hearings, Northwestern student Thomas McCann had been questioned about his involvement with Protesch in getting Taylor to flip his statement.

Citing his own notes from a Nov. 14, 1998 phone call with Taylor, less than one month before Protesch’s full court press would finally break him, Taylor had told McCann, “There is no doubt in my mind that this man [Porter] is guilty. I will not be happy until he is finally executed.”

About three weeks later on Dec. 11, Protesch and Northwestern had harassed Taylor into signing a pre-written affidavit stating that police officers with flashlights had frightened him into implicating Porter in the crimes, and that he could not be certain it had been Porter murdering Hillard and Green.

Taylor’s testimony at the criminal trial had been that Porter ran past him so close after firing the shots that he had seen the revolver in his hand.

Taylor would explain at the 2005 civil trial that he had been badgered and coerced into signing Northwestern’s affidavit, and he had done it only to get Protesch, his private investigator Paul Ciolino and his students to leave him alone.

Taylor then reaffirmed his eye-witness account stating that Porter had been the killer. He has continued to do so to this day.

Astonishingly, Northwestern had omitted a critical fact from the Taylor affidavit that was brought to light during the grand jury hearings. Taylor had refused, under any circumstances, to say he had not seen Porter in Washington Park the night of the murders.

It was a critical point because Porter’s only alibi—which was destroyed at his criminal trial—had been that he had not been in the park at all that night.

Assistant State’s Attorney Thomas Gainer had asked McCann to confirm this at the grand jury hearings.

“That [fact] was not included on the affidavit, that he [Taylor] saw Anthony Porter in the park that night, right?” said Gainer.

But that was just the beginning.

Protesch and his students acknowledged they had not even bothered to interview an entire set of four witnesses who had not testified at trial, but who had made the State’s case against Porter nearly iron-clad.

William Crawford, who won a Pulitzer Prize for investigative reporting during his time at the Chicago Tribune, quoted the grand jury hearings at length in his self-published piece “Chimera.”

Gainer had asked Protesch why Northwestern did not interview the four additional witnesses who had fingered Porter as the killer, wrote Crawford. Protesch had answered that only two witnesses had testified at trial.

That was true, but it revealed the appallingly superficial nature of Northwestern’s investigation. Those other four witnesses had independently corroborated the trial witnesses—they had not been called because the case against Porter had been overwhelming with their testimony simply part of the background evidentiary record.

In other words, had something happened to the two witnesses Northwestern did interview, the State had four more who had independently told investigators Porter had been the killer. They would have provided overwhelming evidence to Protesch and his students that Porter had pulled the trigger that night, which would have made the case they got up against Simon untenable.

“Your students didn’t investigate those four men, did they,” Gainer asked at the grand jury hearings.

“No,” Protesch replied.

“You didn’t ask Paul Ciolino to find those four men?” asked Gainer.

“No,” said Protesch.

“None of your group ever conducted any interview of those four men?” Gainer asked.

“That’s correct,” said Protesch.

While they succeeded in getting the one witness—Taylor—to flip, Protesch had not been able to get the second trial witness Kenneth Edwards to change his statement, Crawford wrote of Edward’s time on the witness stand during the grand jury hearings.

“As you sit here today, can you tell the grand jury who it was that fired those shots?” asked Gainer.

“I sure can,” replied Edwards, 17-years after first testifying at the criminal trial.

“Who was it?” asked Gainer.

“It was Tony Porter,” said Edwards.

Student investigator McCann had been asked the same set of questions about his understanding of why Protesch had not wanted to interview the four critical witnesses from the investigation.

“This was a class and, you know, we didn’t have much time,” McCann told the grand jury. “We decided not to waste time because, you know, we had three other classes to go to.”

“He doesn’t have time!” Crawford editorialized in “Chimera” regarding McCann’s testimony.

“And he’s going to send a man down to Danville [prison] for 37-years! What kind of non-sense is that? It’s criminal.”

McCann would admit later in the hearings that despite multiple visits to Porter on death row, not

PETS HELP THE ELDERLY LIVE LONGER, HEALTHIER AND HAPPIER LIVES

There's no disputing animals have always had a positive impact on their owners' lives.

Now, evidence suggests four-legged friends are a real health benefit for elderly people, helping them live longer, healthier and happier lives.

Pets Encourage Seniors to Stay Active

The general care associated with a pet can help seniors live more energetic lives. As any pet owner knows, animals need attention and keep us active — whether we want to be or not. Pets help seniors establish routines and get them to do things they might not normally do, such as getting outside and walking their dog or changing their cat's litter box, feeding, grooming or playing with their pet.

Helen Kapral, a retired school teacher in Corona Del Mar, Calif., says her dog, Muffin, enjoys being outside, which helps her get out. "I take Muffin for walks around the neighborhood all the time," she says. "She joins me on my daily walks to Starbucks, walks with me down to the beach and has even helped me meet new people."

Pets Make Great Companions for Seniors

Pets can give an elderly person a great sense of self and help increase self-esteem since pets need and rely on their owners for virtually every aspect of their caretaking. Seniors also benefit from the unconditional love and affection their pets give them.

Just the very presence of a pet provides camaraderie to seniors, helping them realize they are not alone. Additionally, having a pet — especially a dog — can give seniors a great sense of safety just by the barking which can keep unwanted visitors away.

Pets Help Our Hearts

Studies show that older pet-owning citizens have lower blood pressure and cholesterol levels than non-owners, helping to reduce their risk for heart disease and decrease their number of visits to the doctor. Additionally, a number of other studies suggest that pet owners have a better chance for long-term survival after surviving a coronary event than non-pet owners.

Studies show that older pet-owning citizens have lower blood pressure and cholesterol levels than non-owners, helping to reduce their risk for heart disease.

Pets Help the Elderly Overcome Depression and Loneliness

According to a study in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, caring for a cat or dog helps elderly people overcome depression or loneliness. Whether that be from the loss of a loved one, not having family or friends nearby to interact with, or not being able to get out much, having a fluffy friend gives older citizens a sense of purpose since they have to take care of their pet and think about things other than their own problems.

Even for elderly patients in nursing homes, animal-assisted therapy has shown to help patients decrease their anxiety levels and give them something to look forward to.

Christina Miller, a former convalescent home activities director in Southport, N.C., says she witnessed the positive impact animals had on elderly patients when a local animal shelter made weekly visits to her facility. "Residents who normally weren't active were suddenly getting up, petting and talking to the cats and dogs, smiling and interacting," she says. "Patients would ask me, 'Are the dogs here? Did they come yet?' Half the patients had better reactions to the dogs and cats than they did to people."

The positive impact animals have on people—especially the elderly—is tremendous. So much so that there are organizations such as the Pets for the Elderly Foundation, a non-profit organization, that specifically places dogs and cats into the homes of senior citizens, helping them overcome loneliness.

Overall, pets have a positive effect on their senior companions, and benefit health-wise from their very presence.

Senior LIVING

CHOOSING A RETIREMENT COMMUNITY AND CHOOSING NOT TO RETIRE

While The Clare fits securely in the category of luxury retirement community, the designation ‘retirement’ is a bit of a misnomer for some.

Dr. Steve Andres, veterinarian

Case in point is Dr. Steven Andres, who has lived at The Clare for the past two and a half years and might be years away from ‘retirement.’

“While many of the residents at The Clare are certainly retired, others remain very engaged in the careers that they love, as well as in volunteer work, and many activities throughout the community. We prefer to refer to The Clare as luxury senior living,” said Kyle Exline, executive director of The Clare.

Dr. Andres pursued his dream career of being a veterinarian late in life but is finding it was worth the wait. Now, this resident of The Clare owns and operates a total of four veterinary clinics in the downtown area.

Andres loves the coincidence of living at The Clare and also being a native of Clare, Illinois, a small rural town west of Sycamore, Illinois. He attended Illinois State University where he earned his BS in Animal Science, working towards a Master’s degree at Texas A&M in Animal Nutrition. Andres’ family bought a ranch in Ten Sleep, Wyoming, which he ran for eight years. First National Bank of Chicago then recruited him, and he had a successful banking career.

When he started noticing the banking world changing with major work force reductions, he said, “I saw the writing on the wall” and decided to pursue his lifelong goal of becoming a veterinarian. He attended Ross School of Veterinary medicine in St. Kitts for two years, transferring to University of Missouri where he completed his clinical year.

In 2000, Andres became a veterinarian, which he said “was a dream come true.” He moved to Chicago where he worked for several veterinary clinics. In 2007, Andres launched Clark N Oak Animal Health Center. Since opening, his patients number over 12,000 from more than 8,000 clients. “My business really took off,” he said. Andres subsequently opened South State N 16th Animal Wellness Center, and will soon open Clark N Delaware Cat Clinic and North N Hudson Animal Wellness Center.

Moving to The Clare while he’s still working full-time suits Andres well. “I work a lot. Six or seven days a week,” he said. “At The Clare, they cook fabulous meals, clean my apartment, and provide first-rate entertainment. This fits perfectly for me.”

Andres first learned about The Clare several years ago, moving to the community in 2012. “At first I was looking at the future, thinking that when I retired I’d move there. Then I started thinking about it as a possibility a lot sooner. I’m not married and I don’t have children. This seemed like a great option,” he said. The fact that he has juvenile onset diabetes was a motivating factor. “Prior to this, I was eating out a lot.

I win!

Living here gives me a lot more control over my diet.”

Andres said that he’s made great friends at The Clare. “The people here are all so interesting. They all have stories. I’m learning so much from the people here,” he said. “I enjoy all of the amenities and people, and the location doesn’t get any better. I participate in social events and outings. I get involved with things that I wouldn’t otherwise get involved with. I wouldn’t have gone to the opera before, but I do that here. The Clare has become my concierge.”

The Healing Power of Animals

As any pet-lover will tell you, it’s true that dogs—and cats— are man’s best friend. The healing power of animals is well recognized not only by animal lovers, but also by medical professionals. The smiles are proof enough, as pet therapists and their dogs, visit the residents of The Terraces at The Clare, three or four times monthly.

The Clare Lounge at The Artisan Market

The Clare was honored to sponsor the rest and relaxation space at SOAR’s Artisan Market on November 1 and 2, held at Northwestern’s Lurie Center Atrium.

More than 50 artisans and specialty food vendors offered a range of merchandise, from stunning jewelry and home décor items, to delectables such as licorice caramels brandied figs.

The Streeterville Organization of Active Residents (SOAR) works on behalf of Streeterville residents by preserving, promoting, and enhancing the quality of life and community in the neighborhood.

The Clare is proud to be an active member of SOAR and contribute to the organization’s mission.

Holiday Sing-Along with Friends at Loyola

On Saturday, November 22, in conjunction with The Magnificent Mile’s Lights Festival, Clare residents and members of Loyola University’s renowned singing groups “Counterpoint” and “Loyolacappella” led a group sing-along of holiday music.

Singers met in front of the Loyola University Museum of Art (LUMA), across from the historic Water Tower, and sang with gusto and spirit to welcome in the season. Afterwards, everyone enjoyed LU-

MA’s global crèche exhibit, “Art and Faith of the Crèche: The Collection of James and Emilia Govan.”

Clare Residents Enjoy a Cornucopia of Activities

Residents of The Clare enjoy a full calendar of life-enriching programs and events every month. November was no exception.

Through The Clare’s Athletic Club, residents enjoyed group exercise classes such as BeMoved, Cardio Strength Fusion, Balance & Posture, and Gentle Yoga, as well as activities such as Men’s Aqua Volley and the “Pacemakers” Walking Club.

There were book club meetings, cooking demonstrations and tastings, current event discussions, writing classes, support groups, screenings of feature films and documentaries, and bridge, Scrabble, and mahjong games—plus musical performances featuring cabaret, contemporary, standards, operetta, and chamber artists.

Also in November, outings and lectures included a trip to the Ukrainian Village Winter Market; a docent-led tour of the Smart Museum’s exhibit, “Carved, Cast, Crumpled: Sculpture All Ways”; a lecture with David Blecher on the Lyric’s production of Porgy and Bess; a talk by ESPN legal analyst and writer Lester Munson on investigating the sports industry; and a session by DePaul University clinical psychologist Bruce Czuchna on the principles of “conscious change”; and a visit to The Cliff Dwellers Club to enjoy a staged reading of the original musical The White City.

Clare residents agree: “One of the best things about living at The Clare is the fun we have!”

The Value of Treasures

A special treat in November for Clare residents was an appraisal event created by Susanin’s Auctioneers & Appraisers.

Clare residents enjoyed meeting with the appraisers and getting feedback on an array of items, from artwork to vintage couture.

After 10 years in the Merchandise Mart, Susanin’s relocated to a 40,000 sf building in the South Loop. The firm is internationally recognized by wealth managers, art consultants, dealers, and collectors as an auction market leader in Chicago & around the world.

In the heart of the Gold Coast neighborhood, The Clare is a LifeCare retirement community that offers an incomparable lifestyle, an unbeatable location, and 1-, 2-, and 3-bedroom independent living residences with exceptional options and floor plans. The Clare also offers The Terraces at The Clare, which partners with Northwestern Hospital, to provide assisted living, memory support, rehabilitation, and skilled nursing. The Terraces has earned the 5-star quality rating by the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services. The Clare is owned by Chicago Senior Care and managed by Life Care Services. HOW CHICAGOLAND SENIORS CAN AVOID SCAMS

Bill Lowe, Chicagoland Methodist Senior Services

With more than 280,000 adults over the age of 65 living in the Chicagoland area, and this population set to nearly double by 2050, it's no surprise that the number of Chicago-area seniors who have fallen victim to consumer fraud scams is on the rise. Over the years, our team at Chicagoland Methodist Senior Services has seen con artists use a multitude of deceitful methods to gain the trust of older Chicagoans in order to get access to their money. From impersonating the target's grandchildren on the phone to selling fake prescription medications, aging adults present a perfect opportunity for preying criminals to profit from unknowing victims. Although not every scam artist can be caught, knowing how to protect yourself and loved ones from this kind of crime can keep savings safe.

Usually presumed to be of a more naive and vulnerable disposition by criminals, older adults are at greater risk of becoming targets for consumer fraud than younger generations. Cognitive impairments from conditions like dementia and Alzheimer's Disease can also affect the normally sound judgement of aging adults, making them more likely to engage with suspicious characters who contact them on the phone or even in person. This, coupled with easy access to pensions and retirement funds, gives scammers plenty of motivation to go after senior citizens.

Seniors are being targeted in nearly every area of Chicagoland, from the city to the suburbs. Take, for example, Albany Park, a neighborhood near CMSS' facilities. The Albany Park Police have seen a major increase in scams targeting seniors recently. They called our organization's attention to one especially deplorable scheme to swindle older adults out of money that is called the 'Obituary Scam.'

Con artists use the obituary section of the local paper to pinpoint recent widows as targets. After identifying their next victim, a messenger arrives at the home of the recent widow with a Cash On Delivery package (usually a small box containing old magazines) claiming the recently deceased spouse ordered something and then demands immediate payment. After taking the money, the messengers are long gone by the time the victims realize the box doesn't contain anything.

Another local scam involves calling older adults to inform them a warrant for their arrest has been issued due to ignoring a summons for jury duty. When victims claim they never received the summons, the caller asks for their Social Security number and date of birth to verify the information and cancel the warrant. Once this information has been received, the victim's identity has been compromised.

So how do you go about protecting yourself and your loved ones? The first step begins with knowledge. If you become aware of a new or prevalent scam in your area, make sure you alert all of your friends and family, especially those in the targeted age group, which is those 65 and older. Many scams prey on emotions, making victims feel intense pressure to immediately send money. Before withdrawing or sending any large sums of cash that seems out of the ordinary, be sure to discuss the extenuating circumstances with a close and trustworthy relative, and ask your loved ones do the same. You can also report all suspicious activity to your local CAPS Office by getting in touch with the Senior Liaison Officer at your local police station. By looking out for the older adults in our lives, we can help them avoid scams that can ravage both their emotions and their bank accounts.

MY GIRLFRIEND TURNED 65 THIS YEAR

I don't know what's more surprising:

- 1) I have a 65-year-old girlfriend
- 2) I'm hanging out with the 60 and over crowd

When my friend announced her upcoming birthday, she made it a point to let me know she was going to become medicare eligible. She wore it as a badge of honor. And why shouldn't she? She has lived long enough to earn her medicare stripes. She paid for years as a hard-working employee and now it's time to collect what is rightfully hers.

But the cool thing is she doesn't look a day over 50 and, despite being diabetic, she takes good care of herself by getting plenty of exercise and eating right. Yes, she is among the first wave of baby boomers who turned 65 in 2013. She's gone from "Say it loud, I'm black and I'm proud" to "Say it louder, I'm 65 and I'm prouder!"

It's funny how times change.....

Ten years ago, I would not have been in the company of anyone in their 60's unless we were together at church, but it seems as though the older I get, the older my girlfriends have gotten as well.

In my 40's I always felt like the woman who had as much in common with the 30-somethings as I did with my own peer group. Now that I'm on the other side of 55, I don't find the conversations with 30-year-olds to be as stimulating or even worthy of a "girlfriend moment." Now don't get me wrong, there is much to learn from young people when it comes to understanding the new ways of doing business but when it comes to talking about hot flashes, grandchildren, husbands and the good old days, they don't share my journey. They don't KNOW my journey because they haven't arrived there yet.

Of course, there is so much they can learn from me and my older girlfriends but I suspect that they're not really interested in talking about personal summers and their idea of the good old days probably only dates back to the 1980s. But that's okay because the one thing we have gained is plenty of wisdom and experience. That's something that only comes with AGING.

Happy Birthday Paulette!

So how many friends do YOU have over the age of 60?

The Fall 2014 issue of the Chicago Department of Family and Support Service's Senior Life Enrichment Guide is now available! Inside the guide, seniors will find information about health and wellness, educational, recreational and many other types of events, trips, classes and lectures, along with schedules and registration details. Most of these are free or at a nominal cost.

New for this fall are citywide presentations on "Starting the Conversation." Less than 25% of Americans have completed advanced directives. These presentations are designed to help seniors discuss their end of life care preferences with their families, loved ones, caregivers and health professionals with confidence and dignity.

The contents of the guide are also posted online at www.cityofchicago.org/fss. Further information about DFSS services and programs is available by calling the Aging and Disability Resource Network (ADRN) at (312) 744-4016.

Grateful living, or living in touch with the great fullness of life, has the ability to significantly and positively alter our lives and the larger world in which we live.

Grateful living asks us to purposefully direct our awareness to notice all that is already fully present and abundant in our lives - from the tiniest things of beauty to the grandest of our blessings - and in so doing, to take nothing for granted. Grateful living as a practice powerfully affirms that we can be in charge of our attention, and can point it towards that which serves the fullness of our learning, our lives, our relationships, and the world. And, amazingly, every single moment can offer us this opportunity...not a single moment need escape our gratefulness...even if it is simply to learn from that which is most difficult. We have the choice to be in touch with the "fullness" of everything.

In infinite ways, grateful living offers an unparalleled pathway to the experience of "enough," and even more than enough, in our lives. Suddenly, the barren corners of our homes are rich with things for which to be thankful. What seemed lacking in our relationship now feels full to overflowing. Our bodies are miraculous. Electricity itself blows our minds. Our days can be one discovery after another of blessing and opportunity. And the earth can seem an endless symphony of beauty.

When we are in touch with enoughness, when we feel like we are and have enough, we become less susceptible to cultural norms of complaint, envy, scarcity, comparison, and insatiability; all sources of suffering, and separation from ourselves, each other and the planet, and also the ways that we get caught in the "more is better" mentality. When we are so busy unconsciously rushing towards more, as Soul of Money author Lynne Twist says, we rush right over/past "enough" and do not even notice it...like an inconvenient speed-bump.

In this way, grateful living is an antidote to scarcity and insatiability. And it is radical because it establishes the only real, lasting conditions for generosity, kindness, compassion and the impulse to serve. When we are awake to all that is enough in our lives, we can turn our attention beyond ourselves. We need to feel our fullness in order to have anything truly meaningful to offer the world.

And since scarcity and insatiability are the drivers for so much that is unsustainable and unjust in our world right now, grateful living can be seen as not merely a salve of complacency and self-satisfaction, but as a protective impulse that wakes us up to act on behalf of the things for which we feel grateful. In this, gratefulness has the power to awaken us to greater purpose to preserve and tend the things we notice are worth cherishing — all the fragile blessing that surrounds us and is charged to our care.

Grateful living invites a radical experience of sufficiency, and sufficiency invites us toward using our lives and resources in more radically generous, open-hearted, and conscientious ways. This truth offers me hope — for our lives, each other and the world. And hope is a longing and blessing for which we can all be deeply grateful...

"People are like stained-glass windows. They sparkle and shine when the sun is out, but when the darkness sets in, their true beauty is revealed only if there is a light from within."
— Elisabeth Kübler-Ross

7 STEPS TO HEALTHY AGING, HAPPY AGING

By Diana Rodriguez

Getting older doesn't necessarily mean you'll have a slew of medical conditions or poor quality of life.

Getting older involves change, both negative and positive, but you can enjoy aging if you understand what's going on with your body and take steps to maintain your health.

Many different things happen to your body as you age. Your skin, bones, and even brain may start to behave differently. Don't let the changes that come with old age catch you by surprise.

Here are some of the common ones:

Your bones. Bones can become thinner and more brittle in old age, especially in women, sometimes resulting in the fragile bone condition called osteoporosis. Thinning bones and decreasing bone mass can put you at risk for falls that can easily result in broken bones. Be sure to talk with your physician about what you can do to prevent osteoporosis and falls.

Your heart. While a healthy diet and regular exercise can keep your heart healthy, it may become slightly enlarged, your heart rate may lower, and the walls of the heart may thicken.

Your brain and nervous system. Getting older can cause changes in your reflexes and even your senses. While dementia is not a normal consequence of old age, it is common for people to experience some slight forgetfulness as they get older. Cells in the brain and nerves can be damaged by the formation of plaques and tangles, abnormalities that could eventually lead to dementia.

Your digestive system. As you age, your digestive tract becomes more firm and rigid, and doesn't contract as often. This change can lead to problems such as constipation, stomach pain, and feelings of nausea; a better diet can help.

Your senses. You may notice that your vision and hearing aren't quite as sharp as they once were. You may start to lose your sense of taste — flavors may not seem as distinct to you. Your senses of smell and touch may also weaken. Your body is taking longer to react and needs more to stimulate it.

Your teeth. The tough enamel that protects your teeth from decay can start to wear away over the years, leaving you susceptible to cavities. Gum disease is also a concern for older adults. Good dental hygiene can protect your teeth and gums. Dry mouth, which is a common side effect of many medications that seniors take, may also be a problem.

Your skin. With old age, your skin loses its elasticity and may start to sag and wrinkle. However, the more you protected your skin from sun damage and smoking when you were younger, the better your skin will look as you get older. Start protecting your skin now to prevent further damage, as well as skin cancer.

Your sex life. After menopause, when menstruation stops, many women experience physical changes like a loss of vaginal lubrication. Men may experience erectile dysfunction. Fortunately, both problems can be easily treated.

Many bodily changes are a natural part of aging, but they don't have to slow you down. What's more, there's a lot you can do to protect your body and keep it as healthy as possible.

Keys to Aging Well

While maintaining your physical health is important to healthy aging, it's also key to value the experience and maturity you gain with advancing years. Practicing healthy habits throughout your life is ideal, but it's never too late reap the benefits of taking good care of yourself, even as you get older.

Here are some healthy aging tips that are good advice at any stage of life:

- Stay physically active with regular exercise.
- Stay socially active with friends and family and within your community.
- Eat a healthy, well-balanced diet — dump the junk food in favor of fiber-rich, low-fat, and low-cholesterol eating.
- Don't neglect yourself: Regular check-ups with your doctor, dentist, and optometrist are even more important now.
- Take all medications as directed by your doctor.
- Limit alcohol consumption and cut out smoking.
- Get the sleep that your body needs.
- Finally, taking care of your physical self is vital, but it's important that you tend to your emotional health as well. Reap the rewards of your long life, and enjoy each and every day. Now is the time to savor good health and happiness.

Kennedy Forum event looks at lack of community mental health care

BY MARTHA ROSENBERG

To many, it is an unseen problem. People denied mental health services who end up homeless or incarcerated as criminals. This week at Chicago's Palmer House Hilton, the Kennedy Forum addressed this and other aspects of the lack of a functional community mental health system in the U.S.

The Kennedy Forum was founded to enlist business leaders and government agencies in fully implementing the Mental Health Parity and Addiction Equity Act of 2008, which has been amended by the Affordable Care Act, to guarantee equal access to medical care and help patients understand their rights.

To Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart, former U.S. Rep. Patrick Kennedy and others who spoke at the event, called "The Cost of Doing Nothing," untreated people with mental illness may be the most salient public health problem there is.

Since the 1960s, the number of beds in Illinois' state-run psychiatric hospitals has decreased to fewer than 1,500 from 35,000, according to the National Alliance on Mental Illness. Since April 2012, Chicago alone closed half of its 12 mental health clinics.

A perfect storm of cuts to community mental health services, affordable housing projects, and state psychiatric institutions has ensured that the nation's prisons serve as America's largest mental health care provider.

"I have been out to Cook County Jail myself," said Rep. Kennedy in a one-on-one interview. "It is the largest mental health facility in the nation." Chicago's 10,000-person jail may be the largest in the nation, but "every jail in America" is a de facto mental health facility because community mental health support in the U.S., outlined 50 years ago with President Kennedy's Community Mental Health Act of 1963, "never got implemented."

Dart estimates that one-third of those 10,000 inmates in custody today suffer from serious mental illnesses.

We have "underfunded and eliminated" community mental health services and people with mental illness are, not surprisingly, ending up in jail and prison said Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart, who participated on a panel called Models for Change: Addressing Mental Illness and Addiction in the Justice System.

The number of women with mental health issues is "exploding" in the judicial system said Sheriff Dart with as many as "18 out of 20 women [who are arrested] acutely psychotic." Mentally ill people, like the growing wave of disturbed women, have usually been arrested for "misdemeanor 4s," said Dart, which means they are not dangerous criminals and probably require mental health services which are currently absent.

Lack of community mental health services, housing and jobs almost ensure that people with mental illness who have incarcerated will return again and again through a "spinning door" as they get embedded in the system, said panelists who included Paula Wolff, Director, Illinois Justice Project, Justice Kathryn Zenoff, Appellate Judge, Second District, State of Illinois, Fred Osher, Director of Health Services and Systems Policy, Council of State Governments Justice Center and Pamela Rodriguez, Executive Director, Treatment Alternatives for Safe Communities.

A chilling case in point were newly released people who simply milled around the entrance to Cook County Jail at 26th and California in Chicago because they had nowhere to go, observed Sheriff Dart; it was the operative "discharge plan" until follow-up services became available.

A perfect storm of cuts to community mental health services, affordable housing projects, and state psychiatric institutions has ensured that the nation's prisons serve as America's largest mental health care provider.

Another indictment of the underfunded system are patients who tell him they don't want to leave jail because it is the "best treatment they have ever had," said Dart. "People who are in jail and do not have mental illness usually want to talk about their case and the fact that they are innocent," he said. "People who have mental illness often readily agree to a crime and beg for help when they are released such as in housing, they are literally "craving a place to live."

There is overwhelming evidence that mental health affects overall health, says Rep. Kennedy and U.S. medicine needs to start doing a "check up from the neck up." Currently, we have a two-tier system—one for health care and one for mental health care, which is "poorly reimbursed and poorly respected within the medical community." The "house of medicine looks down" on practitioners who go into mental health because it is not a "prized area."

In criminal justice and community mental health in general, early intervention is huge, said participant at the Kennedy Forum event. Early screening programs like Mental Health First Aid amount to a kind of "CPR for the brain" said Osher, "in which teachers and non-medical professionals can identify people who might need help."

"Insurance companies have regularly and routinely denied benefits for people with mental illness" whether severe disorders or people who have alcoholism, addictions, eating disorders, panic attacks and more Rep. Kennedy said. "Addiction diseases may be diseases of denial in which a person will try everything before they seek help, but acquainting them with resources, like anonymous, twelve-step programs increases their chance of getting better and is a strong example of early intervention," he said.

one of the students had so much as asked what Porter’s alibi was for the night of the murders.

The group from Northwestern had decided with such certainty that Porter was innocent that they did not even deign to ask the man on death row what he said he was doing the night of the murders a lawful jury had convicted him of committing

Crawford, in a video-taped interview with Preib, described the moment when, in his opinion, the grand jury hearings wandered over into the surreal.

“Worse than that is Shawn Armbrust—now the executive director at the Mid-Atlantic Innocence Project in D.C.—now an adjunct law professor at Georgetown.

‘Did you know of these six?’

‘Yes.’ ‘Did you locate them?’ ‘No.’ And then Gainer says: ‘The reason you didn’t talk to them is because you knew they were going to give you answers that didn’t fit with your theory that Simon pulled the trigger.’ And she says, ‘Yes.’”

Another student, then-22-year-old Syandene Rhodes-Pitts, a senior, had confirmed during the grand jury hearings that the class had resolved on doing anything it could to get Porter off of death row and out of prison, as opposed to investigating the double-murder case on its merits.

The idea that Porter could have been guilty had been eliminated entirely from what Northwestern claimed was a fair investigation into the homicides, according to Rhodes-Pitts.

Crawford quoted another under oath exchange between Rhodes-Pitts and an anonymous grand juror.

“I know what I’ve been doing for the past month, and that has been investigating Anthony Porter’s innocence,” said Rhodes-Pitts.

“Or guilt,” replied the grand juror. “He might be guilty?”

“The class I am taking is investigative journalism, and we were given the case because there was no evidence linking him to the crime,” replied Rhodes-Pitts.

That statement alone is smoking-gun evidence that the investigation into Porter and the Hillard-Green murders had been wildly negligent, at best.

The amount of evidence used at the criminal trial—including six eye-witnesses and police officers who had frisked Porter in the park during the aftermath—was enormous, said former prosecutors, detectives and policemen who were spoken to for this series.

“What would you say is your objective of the assignment you were given?” the grand juror then asked.

“I believe the objective would be to find any evidence, interview anyone you could, that would lead you to freeing this man,” Rhodes-Pitts replied.

The group from Northwestern had decided with such certainty that Porter was innocent that they did not even deign to ask the man on death row what he said he was doing the night of the murders a lawful jury had convicted him of committing.

“Your objective is freeing him, not just investigating all of the facts?” asked the grand juror.

“Right, investigating the facts, and as the facts—as we had read the facts, there was no physical crime—physical evidence linking him to the crime—therefore, we proceeded with innocence,” said Rhodes-Pitts, who for a second time under oath had revealed a total ignorance of the facts of the original case.

“I could see from the very get go, and this is all based on sworn public documents, that their investigation was silly. It was incomplete, it was juvenile, I don’t know what else to tell you. Unprofessional,” said Crawford.

On Sept. 7, 1999—about seven months after the grand jury hearings—Simon went before Judge Thomas R. Fitzgerald to be sentenced for his confession to the Washington Park double-murders.

This sequence—which current State’s Attorney Alvarez did not address while setting Simon free—remains the single most inexplicable and inscrutable element of the entire Porter/Simon saga.

Despite the findings of the grand jury hearings, the Cook County state’s attorney’s office presented exactly none of the overwhelming exculpatory evidence in Simon’s favor at sentencing.

Equally unbelievable, Simon’s own defense counsel Jack Rimland did not either. Rimland had in fact been brought in by Northwestern professor Protes and Ciolino to represent Simon—the very man they had coerced into confessing to the murders.

It was a criminal conflict of interest that went untouched at the time and continues to be glossed over today, according to the group of current and retired professionals cited throughout this series.

Crawford wrote at length about the utter strangeness of the sentencing hearing. He noted that Gainer, who had conducted the grand jury interrogations, should have begun belting out the litany of aberrations, errors in the record and the malfeasance uncovered during the grand jury hearings.

But he did not.

Crawford wrote that knowing what the state’s attorney’s office knew about Ciolino barging into Simon’s Milwaukee apartment impersonating a police officer, playing a video of an actor pretending to have witnessed Simon shooting Hillard and Green—of lying to Simon about being investigated for a murder in Milwaukee—of refusing to leave until he confessed—with only his partner there to menace Simon and no Protes or Northwestern students anywhere—everything would make its way into open court.

But it was not presented. Nothing was put before sentencing judge Fitzgerald.

Certainly, Crawford wrote, Gainer would demonstrate that it had been a coerced confession and that Northwestern and Ciolino had been on the wrong side of the law. Ciolino himself had given published interviews bragging he had “bull rushed” Simon into a state of such psychological distress that “mentally he could not recover.” In doing so he had admitted to coercing the confession out of Simon.

There was even a chance of criminal charges being hung on Northwestern and Ciolino for unlawfully depriving a citizen of his constitutional rights, according to former prosecutors interviewed for this series.

But Gainer did not present any of this evidence.

Rimland—counselor to the accused—offered none of the exculpatory evidence to Judge Fitzgerald, either. He demonstrated nothing of the tactics used by Northwestern to get their affidavits signed, or the use of an armed private investigator working outside the presence of the professor and his students to obtain a false confession.

He did not notify the judge that the witness Taylor said he had been badgered into signing an affidavit changing his sworn testimony. He presented no evidence from the grand jury showing that all the witnesses were still fingering Porter and that the facts of Simon’s confession made it impossible to mesh with the sworn testimony of six eye-witnesses.

Instead, Simon received no assistance from either side at his sentencing, and was allowed to apologize to the families of the people the evidence proved he could not have murdered, before being sent to prison.

“Alstory Simon is a total mutt in this case and he gets to go to serve 37-years in Danville,” said Delorto.

At the sentencing hearing Judge Fitzgerald spoke of a pre-arranged agreement between the state’s attorney’s office and Rimland to recommend a sentence, which was 37-years for both murders. Simon would serve 15 before Alvarez threw out the conviction entirely and allowed Simon to walk out.

“Despite Fitzgerald’s assurances, the facts underlying the case were never brought to Fitzgerald’s attention,” wrote Crawford “Either by Gainer or Rimland. The astonishing, wholesale dereliction never has been explained.”

In a press conference announcing Simon’s release from prison, Alvarez stated explicitly that Simon had been victimized by Northwestern professor Protes and the private investigator Ciolino.

“The investigation by David Protes and his team involved a series of alarming tactics that were not only coercive and absolutely unacceptable by law enforcement standards, they were potentially in violation of Mr. Simon’s constitutionally protected rights,” said Alvarez.

“Based on the totality of the circumstances and the way I think Simon was coerced, in the interest of justice, this is the right thing to do,” said Alvarez

But the current state’s attorney did not touch the subject of her predecessors in the state’s attorney’s office and their roles during the sentencing period of the Simon case.

Given what is now accepted as fact about Simon’s confession, as well as what is known about the private investigator Ciolino and the attorney Rimland, the conduct of the state’s attorney’s office must again come under scrutiny, but for vastly different reasons than the Tribune hammered at in its five-part series back in 1999.

Add to that what is on the sworn record from the 1999 grand jury hearings and the final question to answer in the Porter/Simon saga is how in the world the state’s attorney’s office struck a deal with defense counselor Rimland to accept the bogus confession of Simon and in so doing, set a killer free?

"Dreadlock Rapist" linked to 1981 Murder

Bond was denied today for a convicted serial rapist who has been charged with the brutal sexual assault and stabbing of a Edgewater woman in a cold case murder that occurred more than 30 years ago, the Cook County State's Attorney announced today.

Eugene Booker, 59, who came to be known as "the dreadlock rapist," when he was charged with multiple North Side sexual assaults in 1987, has now been charged with the first Degree Murder of Carol Novak, 35. Novak was stabbed multiple times and sexually assaulted in her Edgewater home in 1981. Booker has been in prison serving a combined 80-year sentence for the previous sexual assault convictions.

According to prosecutors, in the early morning hours of Oct. 2, 1981, Novak was found dead on the living room floor of her home in the 5800 block of N. Paulina St. She was partially undressed and had been stabbed more than 50 times in her back, right side, neck and right eye. The victim's dog was also stabbed in the head.

Responding detectives noticed a trail of blood coming from the victim's bedroom, and found evidence of sexual assault at the scene. Evidence technicians recovered DNA from Novak's body and belongings, and a post-mortem examination revealed the presence of male DNA on the victim. Detectives interviewed several witnesses and performed a lengthy investigation, but the case remained unsolved and eventually went cold.

In 2013, the Chicago Police Dept. reopened the case and sent the preserved Sexual Assault Evidence Recovery Kit for testing and analysis. Using DNA recovered at the scene as well as blood from the victim's jacket, a male profile was generated and entered into the CODIS system. The profile was positively matched to Eugene Booker, who was located in the Illinois Dept. of Corrections database.

Booker was known as "the dreadlock" rapist for the distinct way he wore his hair during a yearlong crime spree in which he sexually assaulted multiple women in various North Side apartment buildings. According to prosecutors, Booker selected several of his victims after seeing them on public transit. Booker then followed the victims to their apartment buildings and attacked them as they attempted to enter their residences.

On Jan. 8, 1987, a woman reported to police that a man fitting Booker's description had followed her to her apartment building in the 400 block of W. Fullerton Pkwy. Booker was arrested near the scene and subsequently identified by several of his victims. He was eventually convicted on six counts of Aggravated Criminal Sexual Assault and one count of Aggravated Battery. He has been serving his 80-year prison term in the Illinois Dept. of Corrections.

Police Beat

The locations of robberies reported since Saturday, Nov. 15. Red and black masks indicate robberies reported, while orange masks note robberies that have yet to be confirmed. Anyone with information about these 13 robberies is asked to contact Area North detectives at 312-744-8263.

North Side robberies on the rebound, CPD believe many are related to a single robbery crew

Area robberies soar back to record levels not seen since 2007

Chicago police issued an alert last week that warned of two recent Lakeview area robberies over the weekend, however the actual number of reported robberies is believed to number at least 13 for the week [see map above]. [The actual number is probably higher as similar crimes are sometimes not reported to authorities.]

Anyone with information about these or other area robberies is asked to contact Area North detectives at 312-744-8263.

At least four robberies are believed to have occurred on Sunday alone besting the four robberies recorded last weekend as detailed by Police reports.

The surge in reported robberies brings the area back to the record levels last attained in 2007. Every month this summer saw fewer reported robberies than the preceding month -- a distinction brought about in part through enhanced enforcement by police. This last weeks robbery rates launches the Lakeview area past the total for the entire month of November last year.

The 19th District police remain 25% critically understaffed and are able to only field one-person patrol cars meaning that two beat cars must now respond to most calls. On Saturday evening, only one beat car out of the 25 in the entire district was staffed with two officers - Beat 1913 in Uptown. So while trying to control the bar antics of Wrigleyville and the criminal predators preying upon Boystown visitors, police must also patrol Uptown, Ravenswood, the lakefront, and other neighborhoods.

Citywide, with one week to go, November has now surpassed last November 2013 making it the third straight month of increases.

Around 3 p.m. last Monday afternoon, a woman reported that a heavysset black female relieved her of her cell phone while on the CTA's Belmont L station.

Late Thursday afternoon, a man resisted two males armed with what may have been a replica firearm during a robbery attempt near the CTA's Montrose Brown Line Station.

The victim managed to pull-off one of the offender's ski masks before both fled empty handed. They are described as teen males wearing black clothing, one white and one Asian.

Police arrested two offenders around 3:45 a.m. Friday morning on the 700 block of Brompton Pl. after a man reported the two men robbed him at Halsted and Grace of his jacket, bag, and credit cards. The man followed the offenders while talking to police on his cell phone.

Around 2 a.m. on Friday morning, a man reported to police that he was robbed on his way home while cutting through an alley after departing the north exit of the CTA's Addison St. Red Line Station. A black male wearing a White Sox cap approached him, punched him in the face, and threatened to kill him if he did not surrender his valuables. The offender fled in a 4-door vehicle with the victim's North Face bag containing his iPhone and Macbook laptop.

A Wrigleyville man claimed to have been robbed at Clifton and Waveland around 12:30 a.m. on Saturday morning. A 19th district tactical unit stopped three suspects in the area shortly after but released them after the victim could make a positive identification. Police say that they believe that about a third of this month's robberies are the work of a single robbery crew.

Around 3:15 a.m. on Saturday morning, a man reported to police that his friend had been beaten and robbed at Belmont and Lakewood by four men who fled in a gray van.

An ambulance was required to assist a man who was approached and struck from behind with an unknown object at Southport and Waveland around 2:30 a.m. Saturday morning. Two black males were last seen running eastbound on Waveland with the victim's wallet and cell phone.

At 3:04 a.m. on Sunday, a man was strong-arm robbed of his cell phone on the 700 block of Briar by a black male wearing a black hoodie and black puffy coat.

At 3:47 a.m. on Sunday, a man is reported "very bloody" after being beaten and robbed at the notorious high-crime intersection of Belmont and Sheffield. The victim is transported by ambulance to Advocate Illinois Medical Center for trauma care.

Around 4 a.m. on Sunday, four black males with hoodies and claiming to possess a weapon surround a man at Clark and Newport taking his cell phone and wallet. The four then force the victim to surrender his PIN and make bank withdrawals at an as yet undisclosed location.

At 4:18 a.m. on Sunday, a Lincoln Square man is beaten by multiple black male assailants outside Big City Tap at the high-crime Belmont and Sheffield intersection, taking the victim's money and cell phone before fleeing southbound on Sheffield.

Emergency Room workers at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center summon police regarding an injured 20-year old male robbery victim Sunday morning. The victim declined to file a police report.

Police warn of Ravenswood burglaries

Chicago police issued a community alert about two apartment burglaries that occurred this month in the Ravenswood neighborhood. One occurred on the 4500 block of N. Claremont and the other occurred on the 4600 block of N. Lincoln. Entry to both residences was gained through an unlocked window or by pushing aside a window air conditioner.

Police warn of Albany Park attempted child abduction

Chicago police are seeking information after an attempted child abduction/child luring at Argyle and Kenneth in the Albany Park neighborhood at approximately 4 p.m. on Thursday, Nov. 20.

In the offense, a pasty-complected white male, approx. 65-70 years of age who spoke in broken English and wearing a black skull cap and brown jacket attempted to engage a 12-year old male in conversation and lure him to his vehicle with the offer of candy. The victim responded "no" and fled to safety.

Veracity of Diversey Pkwy. shooting called into question

A 22-year old man claimed to have been shot and wounded near Diversey and Sheridan around 2:15 a.m. Saturday morning may not have been entirely truthful in relating his account of the event.

While no shots were reported in the area of the alleged shooting, the man provided a false identity to hospital workers and departed the Presence Saints Mary & Elizabeth Medical Center before detectives arrived on scene even though the alleged shooting scene is across the street from St. Joseph Hospital.

Attempted sexual assault thwarted near Thorek Hospital

At approximately 4:30 p.m. on Friday, a woman tells police that as she was walking east from the CTA's Sheridan Rd. Red Line Station, a man approached her from behind in the vicinity of Irving Park Rd. and Broadway and tried to drag her into a gangway between two buildings in an apparent attempted sexual assault. A passing motorist observed the attack in progress and honks his car horn apparently scaring away the offender.

The attacker is described as a black male, approx. 30 years of age, 5'9" in height, 150 pounds, with facial stubble and a red or orange pick in his hair.

Wilmette man with many names arrested in Boystown prostitution offense

Manual Macon, 37, who either hails from suburban Wilmette or a South Side homeless shelter on Canal St. was arrested on the 800 block of Aldine late on Nov. 6 for soliciting a sex act. Macon previously served two days in Cook County Jail in April after allegedly offering oral sex to an undercover police officer on the 5000 block of Madison for $12.

NY State tourist robbed at gunpoint at Buckingham Fountain

A 36-year old man and avid photographer from Yorktown Heights, NY, who was taking in the sights of the city was robbed at gunpoint by three men around 8 p.m. Friday while taking photographs at Buckingham Fountain in Grant Park, a gun-free zone. The victim surrendered his $5,000 camera, iPhone and wallet. Police tried to track his phone but the robbers had already disabled the tracking app.

Stolen Fenger H.S. class ring owner identified

The owner of a stolen Class of '66 Fenger H.S. class ring that was recovered stepped forward and identified himself to police. The ring and a camera were allegedly taken by prolific burglar Duata Head from a residence on the 3400 block of N. Marshfield Ave. that began a one-hour police manhunt of the burglar on Halloween night. Police also learned that a stolen Macbook and a trove of jewelry were burgled from an apartment on the 3200 block of N. Clifton.

Two men badly beaten on Lincoln Ave.

At around 4:45 a.m. Sunday morning, two men were beaten behind a restaurant on the 3400 block of N. Lincoln Ave. by three or four male Asians who are last seen running southbound.

One of their victims was reported semi-conscious with cranial injuries sustained in the beating.

Divvy bicyclist critically injured after being run over twice on LSD

A 24-year old man riding a Divvy bicycle was critically injured on the 3100 block of N. Lake Shore Dr. south of the Belmont exit shortly before

3 a.m. Saturday morning. The man was struck by at least two vehicles while he was bicycling northbound and began weaving between lanes of traffic until he was struck.

The bicyclist was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center where he was last reported to be in "very critical" condition. Alcohol is believed to have been involved.

Gunman reported on southbound Red Line train

Police were flagged down by an eyewitness at the CTA's Belmont Red Line Station who reported that while on a southbound train, he had just observed a 240-pound white male reach down, reveal a semi-automatic handgun and 'jack' the slide to the rear presumably loading a round into the chamber.

Another pizza delivery robbed

Chicago police warned of robbery threats to pizza delivery drivers after another driver was robbed on the 2700 block of N. Richmond around 8 p.m. on Tuesday night. This robbery follows two similar robberies that occurred on the 1500 block of Byron and the 4400 block of Mozart. Typically, the robbery crew displays a handgun, forces the driver to the ground, and takes his valuables.

Cartel member sentencers to 22 years, plea agreement unsealed

A high-level member of the Sinaloa Cartel in Mexico was sentenced Monday to 22 years in federal prison and, separately, guilty pleas were unsealed in the same case for twin brothers who ran the cartel's Chicago distribution cell and supplied vast quantities of cocaine and heroin in cities across the U.S. and Canada.

At a sentencing hearing the government argued that Alfredo Vasquez Hernandez, 59, coordinated the use of airplanes, trains, and submarines for the Sinaloa Cartel to transport cocaine from Central and South America to Mexico, as well as from Mexico into and throughout the U.S. Vasquez Hernandez was placed on court supervision for five years after he is released from his 264-month sentence. He must serve at least 85% of his sentence and is subject to deportation following his release from custody.

Vasquez Hernandez, who was extradited from Mexico in 2012, pleaded guilty in April this year to participating in the Sinaloa Cartel drug distribution conspiracy between May 2005 and Dec. 2009.

In pleading guilty without a plea agreement, Vasquez Hernandez admitted that he was responsible for smuggling only 276 kilograms of cocaine to Chicago in Nov. 2008 for sale to twin brothers Pedro and Margarito Flores, who, unbeknownst to Vasquez Hernandez and co-conspirators, were cooperating with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Admin.

According to the Flores brothers, they and the Chicago distribution crew they controlled obtained and distributed from Chicago, Los Angeles, and elsewhere, on average, 1,500 to 2,000 kilograms of cocaine a month at certain times during the conspiracy and received some or all of that quantity from factions of the Sinaloa Cartel led by Joaquin Guzman Loera, also known as "Chapo," and Ismael Zambada Garcia, also known as "Mayo." Using several warehouse locations in the Chicago area to unload and store shipments of cocaine and heroin, the Flores brothers and their crew sold the narcotics to wholesale customers in the Chicago area, as well as to customers in Milwaukee, Detroit, Cincinnati, Columbus, Philadelphia, New York, Washington, D.C., as well as Vancouver, British Columbia.

During the course of their conspiracy, the brothers admitted that they and their crew were responsible for transporting $938,415,000 in narcotics proceeds, in the form of bulk U.S. currency, from the U.S. to Mexico.

The Flores brothers agreed to forfeit more than $3.6 million in cash that was seized from them, in addition to more than $400,000 worth of assorted jewelry, several luxury automobiles, smaller amounts of cash, and electronics equipment, all of which were seized and forfeited in an administrative process by the DEA.

The Flores brothers will likely earn prison terms ranging between 10 and 16 years.

At Vasquez Hernandez's sentencing the government argued that he worked directly with Chapo Guzman and the Flores brothers to smuggle cocaine from place to place using various modes of transportation, including, for example, large cargo planes to fly more than 20 tons of cocaine directly from Columbia to Mexico. Vasquez Hernandez specialized in using trains to smuggle drugs into the U.S. and transporting them to Chicago hidden in rail cars.
