400 Theater set to re-open in Rogers Park

BY JOHN HOLDEN

Chicago's oldest movie theater is about to get yet another extension on life as it is poised to be acquired by the owner-operator of another more-than-century-old theater.

The New 400 Theater, 6746 N. Sheridan Road, had been in continuous operation for 111 years before it shut its doors in 2023 in response to the movie attendance slump brought on by the COVID-19 epidemic.

The theater actually has experienced two pandemics, including the Spanish Flu pandemic that arrived in Chicago in Sept. 1918 and continued into 1919, ultimately killing at least 8,500 Chicagoans. The theater has been a major cultural force in the community, seeing its neighbors born, grow up, grow old and die around it.

It will reopen in 2026 under plans by its new owner, Jordan Stancil, whose family already operates one of the oldest movie theaters in Michigan, The Rialto. That theater in Graylin, about 50 miles east of Traverse City, opened in 1915 during the heyday of silent pictures.

Since the New 400 closed its doors, Chicago's Far North Lakefront has been without a single operating movie theater, and its reopening will fill a significant void. The closest movie theaters for Rogers Park and Edgewater residents are the Music Box in Lakeview, the Davis in Lincoln Square, and the AMC multiplex in downtown Evanston, each more than three miles away.

When it re-opens, the Rogers Park theater will revert to its previous and longest-running name The 400, dropping the "New"

Carjackers attack woman, drag her from vehicle in Edgewater

BY CWBCHICAGO

A 34-year-old woman was physically attacked and dragged from her car during a violent carjacking in Edgewater on Dec. 14.

A passing motorist called 911 after seeing a woman lying on the ground with a couple of males standing over her in the 1400 block of W. Rosemont Ave. around 2:35 a.m. The caller told dispatchers he stopped briefly to ask if she was okay, but drove away when one of the men reached toward his pocket as if he had a gun.

Responding officers learned that the woman had been robbed and carjacked. According to a CPD report, the hijackers arrived in a silver SUV and pulled alongside the victim's white Honda Civic. One of the men struck her and grabbed her by her hair, dragging her from the car before the men drove away with both her Civic and the silver sport utility vehicle.

Officers at the scene said one of the hijackers was a clean-shaven Black male wearing an orange cap or hoodie. A description of the accomplice was not available.

No arrests have been announced in the case.

TIF cash approved for West Ridge park improvements

A Chicago Park District projects in West Ridge will receive $2.75 million in Tax Increment Financing [TIF] assistance following approval Dec. 10 from City Council.

Mather Park, 5941 N. Richmond St., will receive the taxpayer money from the Lincoln Avenue TIF District to support improvements including new athletic field lighting, restored baseball fields, repaved pathways, new benches, reconstructed basketball and tennis courts and a redeveloped garden area.

Local taxpayers will pay for the entire project's construction costs through their TIF property tax payments.

Club soccer, beer sales coming to Jorndt Stadium in Winnemac Park

The City of Chicago and Chicago Public Schools has negotiated a deal with the Edgewater Castle Football Club to use Jorndt Field in Winnemac Stadium, 5105 N. Leavitt, to host 12-15 games on weekends between May and July of 2026.

That deal also includes proposed beer sales in a fenced-in area by the east bleacher stands area for all match dates.

Built in the 1930's, Jorndt Field is named after longtime Amundsen teacher and coach Louis C. Jorndt, since 2004.

Its location adjacent to both Amundsen High School and Chappell Elementary School would seemingly make beer sales problematic.

Edgewater Castle FC is a semi-professional soccer club which fields both men's and women's pre-professional soccer teams, and also provides free youth soccer programming as a partner of the Chicago Park District [CPD]. The soccer club recently announced they are joining the United Soccer League [USL] Two and the USL W League for the 2026 season. The clubs would like to make Jorndt Stadium the permanent home of its soccer teams.

The Winnemac Park Advisory Council will be surveying the nearby community over the proposal to host the 2026 season. For more information write to win-

Founded in 2017 by James Kitia and Andrew Swanson, Edgewater Castle was created as a grassroots youth-level soccer program. The club's mission is to provide accessible, high-quality soccer for low-income, immigrant, and refugee communities in the Ravenswood, Uptown, Edgewater, and Rogers Park neighborhoods.

Edgewater, Uptown Theater Row grows with Steep Theatre groundbreaking

The Edgewater community celebrated the groundbreaking of Steep Theatre's new space Dec. 11 at 1044 W. Berwyn Ave. The effort by Steep is one more step toward the blossoming theatre district that is growing up along Broadway.

Presently in the mixed bouquet of entertainment venues that Steep will join include known entities like the Riviera Theater and Aragon Ballroom at Lawrence and Broadway. Then there is TimeLine which is currently building a new $46 million theater at 5033-5035 N. Broadway, the Double Door music venue, 1050 W. Wilson Ave., The Edge Theater, 5451 N. Broadway, Rivendell, 5779 N. Ridge Ave., The New 400 Theater, 6746 N. Sheridan Rd., Redtwist, 1044 W. Bryn Mawr Ave., and further to the west, Bramble, 5545 N. Clark St., and The Raven, 6157 N. Clark St.

The only noted loss in the theater row effort is The Baton Show Lounge, 4713 N. Broadway, which was flooded out of its new venue last summer, and decided to give up their ball gowns, wigs and high heels. So far nobody has stepped forward to try and resurrect the world famous drag show venue.

Also AWOL in this mix are any plans to reawaken the true giant of them all ... the landmark Uptown Theater continues to be the 4,000-seat black hole in the creation of the entertainment district. The cost of that historic rehab effort now hovers around $200 million.

Thursday's ceremony kicked off the rehab effort to create Steep's new home, made possible by the gifts of Steep patrons, the Paul M. Angell Foundation, and the City of Chicago's taxpayers, which awarded Steep a grant of $3,868,535 for the project.

Founded in 2000, Steep formerly occupied a storefront theater, steps away from the Berwyn Red Line L station for 12 years before the building was sold for commercial development in 2020.

In 2022, the company bought the brick building at Berwyn and prioritized universal design and physical accessibility and has partnered with Civic Projects Architecture, who has been recognized for their experience with community-oriented space, to design the theater.

Over the past 25 years, Steep has distinguished itself as one of Chicago's iconic ensemble-based storefront theaters. They have produced over 80 plays with remarkable commercial success, earning 63 Jeff Award nominations and 12 Jeff Awards.

Could this be a “drift of hogs” or a “murder of crows”?

By Thomas J. O’Gorman

Have you ever cooked a “nye of pheasants?” Or a “run of poultry?” Perhaps a “tiding of magpies?”

It’s safe to say “no,” you haven’t. They’re not popular Chicago foods.

Besides, that would be a lot of livestock. Actually the equivalent of a “bevy of roebucks, a drove of cattle or a herd of horses.”

At least according to the Book of St. Albans, a 1486 manuscript that, among other things, quantified officially the measurement, or size, of groups of animal species. And while that might be helpful in the kitchen, it was even more important for scientific discourse. It gave people a convenient way to speak about things like a “pass of asses,” an “exaltation of larks,” or a “barrel of monkeys.”

That’s a lot of game.

This St. Albans’ jargon is a lot more complicated than a Bridgeport brogue.

I suspect it actually may have had a helpful part to play 600 years ago, as people were becoming more conscious of the proportions of the known world. Never mind that they thought it was flat for all sorts of religious reasons. On the horizontal planet earth, they helped us name a “herd” of elephants, a “cowardice” of curs, and a “school” of fish. Anything sound familiar?

We know just what to do with a “brood of hens,” as long as we have garlic, shallots and a bottle of white wine.

I am less sure of myself with a plague of locusts, a labor of moles, a battering of coughs, or a business of ferrets. None appear to come with enticing recipes.

I didn’t actually have pets growing up, so a kindle of kittens, a kennel of dogs and a nest of vipers are beyond my competence. Wouldn’t know what to do with them.

Getting to the heart of the matter, St. Alban, himself, is considered to be the first of all British Christian martyrs. The proto-martyr. Back in the third century, 1,200 years before the publication of this manuscript.

Alban arises in the historical days of Roman Britain. The origins of the document could come from one of the hundreds of scholarly or religious centers that bore his holy name. It adds veracity to the manuscript’s content. And needed academic reinforcement to its language.

In a unifying 15th century Britain, teaching people to have language that was exact and well-ordered was important. Getting peasants and nobles on the same side was critical.

Who knew when you’d see a leap of leopards, a cast of hawks, a shrewdness of apes or a charm of goldfinches?

They are superb descriptions. Shakespearean to say the least. Verbs become nouns. Adjectives stand as verbs. And the array of beasts and wildlife are described with poetic creativity and beauty.

All of this must have been quite taxing to the literary minds of the 15th century. But it is the English language at its finest elasticity and élan. The same lingo spoken here in Chicago.

The language of Chaucer has come a long way in 600 years. It rolls off the tongue with elegance and ease. Like ordering a pizza in Uptown. Apparently, the many tribes of warring Britons managed to create and cement a viable elocution that ties them all together, finding purpose in their wit and wisdom. Discovering a rhythm in its oration and speaking.

A murder of crows is a collective noun used to describe a group of crows. Typically, a murder can consist of around 15 to 1000 crows, depending on the season.

I am happy to have this manuscript’s data here in Chicago as urban troubles arrive on the scene. When teachers walk out of the classroom. And when loud-mouthed pay-rolled parents take to the microphones to flap their gums about urban education. Could this be a “drift of hogs” or a “murder of crows?” I can’t rightly tell.

They are aiming their anger at the next Mayor’s race, still a long way off. Voters avoided such elections with past mayors. The strange goings on and fusel. In their attachment to our current mayor, the teachers remind me of an army of caterpillars, or a litter of pups.

That’s also helpful when our elected officials are raided by the federal government and indicted with high crimes and selfish endeavors. They are certainly more plague of locusts, than pride of lions.

Their bundling away the cash of their constituents and political wheeler-dealers is as embarrassing as it is frightening. Maybe this is what a “business of ferrets” encompasses. Or what the “cowardice of curs” is all about.

The St. Albans manuscript is also helpful when faced with the commotion caused by the possibility of a third presidential impeachment. Each day the nation is forced to face the confusion of hearings instigated by angry Democrats and the face-offs of politicians who keep their wet finger in the air to feel the direction of the wind. They measure who will really fall if another impeachment has its way.

They fear the angry voter in some quarters. No one wants to make themselves a victim. Or find themselves expended and looking for a real job. Everyone wants to be back in Congress after the smoke clears. Could this be the dreaded “deceit of lapwings” or the “route of wolves”?

The fake news doesn’t seem to help, even across the pond. It’s like that silly English dance, the “Brexite.” All reports from Britain are that everyone is fed up with the resultant economics. Not just poor Meghan Markle. Well, I always believed that in the end they’d be better than the House of Windsor.

We need to be careful in our acceptance of what is news-worthy. We could be on the edge of a murmuration of starlings. I’m sure the Duchess of Sussex would agree. Apparently she and Prince Harry and the children had their Thanksgiving turkey in California with her adorable mother, Doria Ragland.

They are feasting in LA and avoiding the British press. If that isn’t clearly a pass of asses, I’d call it the labor of moles.

But rumors say that Harry is close to getting his security protection when he brings his family to Britain.

Perhaps that’s something we should all be thinking of as the holidays approach, and we have to break bread with our own menagerie of livestock relations around the table.

I love those who come to share my table. I can’t figure out if they are a chattering of stars, a tipping of vintages, or a hallucination of spicy wines.

BITE BACK: There is a new campaign underway to bring business to Chicago restaurants in neighborhoods impacted by ICE and Border Patrol arrests. Chicago Bites Back is a call for Chicagoans to step up and support the kitchens and staff that help fuel Chicago communities, workforce and economy.

Working with the Illinois Restaurant Assoc. [IRA] and Illinois Hispanic Chamber of Commerce [IHCC], Chicago Bites Back has published a restaurant guide to reference when deciding where to go out to eat or place a catering order. The goal of the campaign is to shift some spending towards establishments that have been hurt by ICE’s arrests.

“ICE’s tactics and presence in our communities has had a chilling effect on local businesses and small restaurants. When Chicagoans live in fear, business corridors are without foot traffic. Restaurants sit empty and our city’s economy suffers” said Jaime Di Paulo, CEO of the IHCC.

Sam Toia, of the IRA says “Our amazing local restaurants are essential ingredients for a strong Chicago. They don’t just feed us, they fuel our neighborhoods, our workforce and our economy. When restaurants struggle, the ripple reaches every sector of our city.”

GOOD DIRT: Chicago developer John Novak struck a deal to buy the troubled southern portion of Lincoln Yards from JP Morgan Asset Management and Sterling Bay, following Sterling Bay’s failure to bring a massive commercial real estate plan to fruition. Novak Construction is moving forward with the acquisition of 18.4 acres of vacant riverfront property.

Stranded and abandoned in the snow

Electric scooters litter now a year-round occurrence

After Chicago experienced heavy snowfall in late November and early December, many local residents have been surprised to see neighborhoods continue to be littered with electric scooters abandoned on sidewalks, alleys and other public places, since the last snowfall.

Throughout Chicago's two-year electric scooter pilot period in 2019 and 2020, one of the biggest complaints about electric scooters had been the lack of accountability for riders who - besides driving lawlessly and recklessly on area sidewalks and roadways - simply left them on the sidewalk or in front of businesses or homes.

In Oct. 2021, the Chicago City Council approved electric scooters to operate year round for a two year renewable period. Prior to the city council's approval, members of the general public and city council had raised the issue of the lack of accountability during the pilot program. In response, representatives from the electric scooter companies assured council members they would hold their riders accountable and would pick up scooters that had been stranded.

Four years later, nothing seems to have changed. Vigilance, diligence and follow-through has now become a major weakness in the city that once was known as "The City That Works."

Chicago was once known for its effective systems. Now, during the cold months, there seems to be zero incentive for the electric scooter operators to pick up their scooters not in use. Similarly, there seems to be no incentive to hold the electric scooter companies, or their customers, accountable for scooters that have not been locked to a city-owned street post, sign post or parking meter. Few riders do so, and scooters that litter streets and sidewalks are a leading indicator of Chicago's lack of enforcement in the program.

Financial planning tool offers free online help to budget late tax payments

BY MARIA PAPPAS

Property owners who were unable to pay their tax bills in full by the Dec. 15 deadline should look at the free online financial planning tool that helps taxpayers make smaller, more manageable payments over time.

The Payment Plan Calculator was made available Dec. 16, one day after the due date, at cookcountytreasurer.com. The calculator lets you set up a schedule to pay off a tax bill in smaller increments instead of all at once; Choose between making payments once or twice a month, and create a personalized plan for catching up on delinquent taxes if you owe more than $100. You can register now at cookcountytreasurer.com.

Just click on the purple box. Enter your PIN or your property address and hit "continue." Then scroll down until you see the Payment Plan Calculator next to the Pay Now button. Click it and a page will appear asking you to type your name and email.

After you enter your information, you'll receive an emailed reminder from the Cook County Treasurer's Office to set up your payment plan after the due date has passed.

With the Payment Plan Calculator now live, just follow the steps below:

- Go to cookcountytreasurer.com and click on the purple box.
- Enter the 14-digit Property Index Number (PIN) or the property address to get your tax information.
- Scroll down until you see your bills, then click the red 'Payment Plan Calculator' button which appears if a bill is delinquent.

Maria Pappas

Review the disclaimer and click "continue." Then choose how often you want to make payments - monthly or twice monthly. The calculator will automatically show a recommended payment schedule to help you pay off your balance before the next Annual Tax Sale.

Next, select Summary View to quickly compare dates, amounts and your remaining balance, or switch to Detailed View for a full breakdown of every payment.

When you find a plan that fits your budget, download or print your personalized schedule to track your payments. You can also sign up for free email or text alerts, so you never miss a payment reminder.

You can also pay right away by clicking "Pay Now."

The calculator gives taxpayers as many as 13 additional months to pay off a bill before the unpaid tax debt is auctioned off at the legally required Annual Tax Sale.

During that time, interest will be charged at a rate of 9% a year, or 0.75% a month. The annual interest rate was 18% but we pushed for and won legislative reforms in Springfield that cut the rate in half.

Though the state-mandated interest rate charges can't be avoided, the Payment Plan Calculator is designed help you avoid borrowing from a credit card company or having to pay back or 'redeem' your taxes after they're sold to a tax buyer. The calculator is a tool that should help more Cook County residents pay off their back taxes and remain in their largest investment, home sweet home.

Cloudy weather ahead for home buyers seeking affordability

by Don DeBat

If you are a prospective home buyer or a homeowner seeking to refinance in 2026, chances are it will be a long, cold winter—or maybe two winters—before mortgage rates decline into an affordable 5% range.

On Dec. 11 the Federal Reserve Board [Fed] lowered its benchmark lending rate a quarter of 1 percentage point to a range of 3.5% to 3.75%—the lowest rate in nearly three years. However, other gloomy political forces are working against bigger near-term interest-rate declines.

The Federal Open Market Committee waded through flack-filled economic outlooks clouded by the following bad-weather political storms:

- Inflation: Accurate economic data evaporated during the record 43-day federal government shutdown in October and November which pitted angry sullen Democrats against Republicans. With key federal workers out to lunch in Washington, D.C., the Fed's most accurate inflation data was pegged at 2.8% and covered the month of September. This week, analysts said October's inflation data likely was higher.

- Tariffs: President Donald Trump's monumental $159 billion in international tariffs on imports to the U.S. have cost the average American household nearly $1,200 in 2025. Tariffs—the highest since 1935—rose a whopping 16.8% from 2.4% last year.

Fed Chairman Jerome Powell said: "If you get away from tariffs, inflation is in the low-2% bracket. It's really tariffs that are causing most of the inflation overshoot."

- Job-formation slowdown: The Bureau of Labor Statistics didn't release an official jobs report for October because of the shutdown. Private sector employment was up 42,000 jobs in October, but 32,000 jobs were shed in November, according to other sources.

The Fed is tracking the slowdown in the labor market. However, Powell noted that President Trump's immigration policy had an impact on turning the labor supply negative.

Maybe that is why hundreds of Chicagoans were having trouble hiring landscapers for cleanup of autumn leaves, and snow removal teams for the 17 inches of early November snow.

Over time, lower interest rates set by the Fed can bring down borrowing costs for home mortgages, auto loans, and credit cards, though market forces can also affect those rates.

With all this economic gloom in the air, it is no wonder that the Fed's rate-setting committee signaled that it may keep its rate unchanged in the coming months. And, in a set of quarterly economic projections, Fed officials said they expect to lower rates just once next year.

That means it is likely that home buyers and homeowners seeking to refinance with a 30-year mortgage at under 6% may have to wait until 2027.

On the other hand, Powell's term as Fed chairman ends in May 2026, and President Trump, who has been a harsh Fed critic, likely will appoint a new chairman who favors lower interest rates.

Mortgage rates inch lower

On Dec. 11, Freddie Mac's nationwide Primary Mortgage Market Survey reported that benchmark 30-year fixed-rate loans eased slightly to an average of 6.22% from 6.19% a week earlier. A year ago, the rate was 6.62%.

"The average 30-year fixed-rate mortgage is well below the year-to-date average of 6.62%, providing some sense of balance to the housing market," said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's chief economist.

However, 15-year fixed mortgages averaged 5.54% on Dec. 11, up from 5.44% a week earlier. A year ago, the 15-year fixed loans averaged 5.84%.

The Freddie Mac survey is focused on conventional, conforming, fully amortizing home purchase loans for borrowers who place 20% down and have excellent credit.

With all this economic gloom in the air, it is no wonder that the Fed's rate-setting committee signaled that it may keep its rate unchanged in the coming months. And, in a set of quarterly economic projections, Fed officials said they expect to lower rates just once next year.

Homeowners who currently have a low 3% to 4% mortgage interest rate and want to stay in their existing dwellings may affordably tap their home equity to expand their living space, renovate a kitchen or add an updated bath.

On Nov. 12, home-equity loan interest rates nationwide slipped to an average of 7.99% from well above 8%. Compare that rate with 19.99% to 30% credit-card interest, which hasn't budged much despite the Fed's rate-lowering efforts.

Principal ousted at Inter-American Magnet School

The principal of Chicago's Inter-American Magnet School [IAMS], Juan Carlos Zayas, recently left his position according to a Dec. 6 announcement after a months-long fight with the school community who demand his removal.

Juan Carlos Zayas

On Oct. 23, the Investigative Unit of the Chicago Public Schools [CPS] Law Department undertook an investigation of the situation after two formal requests by the Local School Council [LSC] to have Zayas removed. "Despite initial steps by CPS following our vote of no confidence on Aug. 8, including increased network presence, the principal's behavior has continued to negatively impact our students, teachers, and staff," said the LSC in a released statement. "We continue to advocate for the removal of the principal during the investigation to ensure the safety and well-being of our school community."

Those requests were fulfilled last week, and Gladys Rivera has stepped in as administrator-in-charge while CPS finds a new principal for the public K-8 dual-language school in Lakeview at 851 W. Waveland Ave.

Zayas's departure comes after two votes of no confidence by the LSC. A LSC can vote out a principal after their contract ends.

Zayas left after school parents complained that he was vindictive, and refused to address concerns about safety, school management and lack of communication.

Oddly Zayas was not fired from the CPS system, but merely accepted another district-level job. CPS provided no details about the transition, including what the new role involves.

The LSC had been complaining about Zayas at almost every Chicago Board of Education meeting for a year. CPS eventually opened an investigation, the results of which have never been made public. CPS did confirm that their investigation had been completed and a disciplinary review was pending. The district has not made those findings public.

Oddly Zayas was not fired from the CPS system, but merely accepted another district-level job. CPS provided no details about the transition, including what the new role involves.

Zayas' resignation creates a chance for new leadership at the Lakeview magnet school, where parents and local school council members had spent more than a year trying to get him removed.

Last year, the LSC announced a vote of no confidence after disputes with Zayas over school management, budgeting, and staff assignments. Parents also testified at Board of Education meetings urging CPS to intervene, and several families submitted formal complaints.

Man raped woman after pushing her from wheelchair at Red Line station, his 4th arrest in 2 months

A 23-year-old Calumet City resident who has been arrested six times in Chicago this year, including multiple times on the CTA, is accused of sexually assaulting a disabled woman after pushing her out of her wheelchair at a downtown Red Line station.

During a detention hearing on Saturday, prosecutors said the 33-year-old woman was riding an inbound Red Line train when Rasheed Griffin boarded her car near Belmont around 2:45 a.m. Dec. 11. As the train continued toward downtown, Griffin allegedly wrapped his legs around her wheelchair and began kissing and groping her while saying he wanted to perform sexual acts.

CTA surveillance video showed Griffin wheeling the victim off the train at Jackson and pushing her onto an elevator, prosecutors said. The woman later told officers she could feel Griffin pleasuring himself behind her inside the elevator.

Video allegedly showed Griffin wheeling her off the elevator and knocking the wheelchair over, sending the woman to the ground. She landed on her stomach and struggled to breathe from the impact before Griffin climbed on top of her, pulled down her pants, and sexually assaulted her, according to prosecutors.

The victim screamed that she was being raped, drawing the attention of a CTA customer service agent who summoned a security guard. The guard took a picture of Griffin as he fled and sent the image to other security officers and CPD. Officers arrested Griffin a short time later at the State and Lake Red Line station.

Judge James Costello ordered Griffin detained on charges of aggravated criminal sexual assault of a handicapped person, aggravated battery in a public place, and aggravated battery of a handicapped person.

The arrest is Griffin's sixth in Chicago during 2025 and his third arrest in six weeks, according to police records.

On Oct. 16, cops arrested him near Lake St. and Wabash Ave. on charges of possessing a controlled substance and resisting. Prosecutors dropped that case on Nov. 5, his first court date.

Less than five hours after the dismissal, Griffin was arrested again for misdemeanor battery at the Midway Airport Orange Line station, records show. Judge Rivanda Doss Beal placed him on the chief judge's electronic monitoring program to await trial. He nevertheless failed to appear in court on December 2, prompting a judge to issue an arrest warrant. Officers took him into custody again on December 5 at the Cermak-Chinatown Red Line station.

Griffin pleaded guilty to the battery charge on Monday, Dec. 8, and received a 35-day sentence from Judge Donald Panarese Jr., but he was released immediately because he accumulated day-for-day credit while on electronic monitoring.

Three days after he walked out of the courtroom, he allegedly sexually assaulted a disabled woman on the CTA.

Woman shoots man in the face during argument at Rogers Park bar

A 48-year-old man was shot during an argument in Rogers Park Dec. 13, according to Chicago police.

Officers responded to calls of a person shot in the 1900 block of W. Howard St. around 11:25 p.m. The victim and the shooter were already gone when they arrived, but they found a shell casing inside a nearby tavern.

As officers investigated, the victim, a 48-year-old man, walked into St. Francis Hospital in Evanston with a gunshot wound to his face, according to CPD. He told police he had been involved in a verbal altercation with an unknown woman that turned physical. During the struggle, the woman pulled out a gun and fired at least one shot, striking him in the left side of his face, police said.

The shooter was described as a Black female standing about 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighing about 200 lbs. She was wearing all black clothing and a blonde wig that she may have removed and carried in her hand as she walked east toward Clark St. after the shooting.

The man is the 19th person shot in Rogers Park this year. That is down from 32 shooting victims at this point in both 2024 and 2023. As of this date in 2022, the neighborhood had logged 31 shooting victims.

Electronic monitoring escapee sexually molested 11-year-old girl

A Chicago man who escaped electronic monitoring while awaiting trial for a series of violent North Side CTA robberies is back in custody. Unfortunately, according to prosecutors, he sexually assaulted a child while he was on the run.

Last year, prosecutors asked Judge David Kelly to keep 21-year-old Davaughn Credit in jail pending trial on allegations he participated in a violent cross-town robbery spree in Chicago. But Kelly, who earned a statistically-proven reputation as the most defendant-friendly judge in the Cook County court's pretrial division, sent Credit home on an ankle monitor.

Credit allegedly escaped from electronic monitoring last month, but he resurfaced this week in Jasper County, IN, where officials say he molested a young girl he met online.

According to court reporting by Region News Source, the sexual assault case began less than three weeks after Credit went AWOL when a woman reported her 11-year-old daughter missing from Chicago. The mother told police the girl left home without permission and that Life360 tracking data placed the child's phone in Rensselaer, Indiana, the news outlet reported. Family members allegedly told police they suspected the girl was with Credit.

The girl's adult sibling found her in Rensselaer on the evening of Nov. 22. The affidavit says the child appeared "either high or intoxicated," and she was taken to Comer Children's Hospital for medical evaluation, Region News Source reported.

During a forensic interview, the girl told investigators that Credit assaulted her in the bedroom of a home in the 400 block of N. McKinley Ave. in Rensselaer, according to the report. She also said she primarily communicated with Credit on Snapchat and that his name appeared on an associated account.

Investigators eventually identified the McKinley Ave. residence and learned that Credit had been staying there for several weeks, Region News Source reported. Law enforcement executed a search warrant at the home on Friday, Dec. 5, and took Credit into custody.

Indiana prosecutors charged Credit on Dec. 9 with child molestation, possession of cocaine, and possession of marijuana.

Prosecutors said Bryant Robinson, Credit, and at least two others allegedly began their two-hour spree around 10 p.m. on Nov. 1, 2024, at the 79th Street Red Line station, where they took a victim's Beats headphones.

After riding the Red Line north, the group mugged a 57-year-old Uptown man in the 4200 block of N. Clarendon, according to prosecutors. The victim told police that four men surrounded him as he walked, and Robinson rifled through his pockets for valuables. Robinson took the man's cash, tossed the billfold to the ground, and fled, a Chicago police report said.

The group also robbed a 26-year-old woman in the 3200 block of N. Pine Grove. When her boyfriend tried to intervene, Robinson raised his shirt to display what appeared to be a firearm in his waistband, according to the report.

In the 600 block of W. Waveland, the crew grabbed a man by the throat, dragged him between planters and parked cars, and forced him to his knees as they robbed him, officials said.

A Chicago police surveillance camera operator spotted four people who matched the suspects' descriptions entering the Addison Red Line CTA station a short time later. Officers moved in and arrested them. A pistol-shaped Taser was allegedly recovered from the crew.

Coincidentally, Robinson was on electronic monitoring for an assault and obstruction case at the time of the robberies. He must serve half of his sentence, giving him a projected release date of April 30, 2027.

'Loop Puncher' charged with attacking fourth woman this year as allegations mount

A man already accused of being part of the wave of unconnected "Loop Puncher" assailants is now charged with attacking yet another woman, marking the fourth woman Chicago police say he targeted this year.

Prosecutors have now charged William Livingston, 36, with aggravated battery in a public place for a late-night assault near Wicker Park over the summer. Livingston remains detained on earlier charges tied to a series of random, violent attacks on women across the city.

Later on July 15, a 37-year-old woman reported that she was walking in the 1500 block of W. Division St. when she stepped aside to let a man pass.

She told officers he asked, "Do you need some help?" then punched her in the face with a closed fist while recording with his phone in his other hand. She fell to the ground, suffering visible facial injuries and abrasions to her hands, according to the allegations. Livingston walked away and was only recently identified as the attacker.

William Livingston

fall. But Livingston's history of similar crimes stretches back years.

On August 19, Kathleen Miles of Lake Villa and a friend were walking in the 200 block of W. Washington St. when Livingston allegedly forced his way between them and punched Miles in the face, knocking her unconscious, according to a Chicago police report. Miles suffered serious facial fractures and a severe concussion, her daughter, Dionna Wolf, said.

CWBChicago obtained video of that attack through a public records request. City officials initially refused to release the footage, but reversed course under pressure from the Illinois Attorney General's Office. The video shows Livingston trailing the two women before suddenly striking Miles and sending her collapsing to the pavement as witnesses rush to help. The fire department arrived more than five minutes later. Police followed and took Livingston into custody.

Scrutiny intensified last month as prosecutors charged Livingston with two more attacks in Lincoln Park. Investigators linked him to two June 12 assaults in the 2700 block of N. Clark St., where a 40-year-old woman and a 29-year-old woman were both targeted. Prosecutors filed two counts of aggravated battery in a public place in those cases.

Livingston has been accused of similar unprovoked attacks for years. In Aug. 2023, he was arrested for elbowing a 27-year-old woman along the Magnificent Mile. Prosecutors released him, and state prison officials did not immediately revoke his parole. He was returned to prison 10 days later but released in January 2024.

Police said he resumed attacking women months later. On Aug. 14, 2024, officers saw him punch a woman near Chicago Avenue and Wells Street after a bystander flagged him down. Prosecutors charged him only with misdemeanor reckless conduct, and he was released the next day. Less than two weeks later, he struck a 15-year-old girl on N. Michigan Ave. He pleaded guilty to two misdemeanors and received a 100-day sentence from Judge Donald Panarese Jr.

Livingston's record stretches back to at least 2017, when police say he assaulted multiple women and two police officers in separate incidents. He pleaded guilty to burglary and aggravated battery of a peace officer and received probation. In 2022, he was accused of punching at least four women within minutes in the South Loop, including a DePaul Univ. student.

Teen charged with armed carjacking of couple near Boystown

Prosecutors have charged a 16-year-old boy with eight felony counts in connection with an armed robbery and carjacking that left a young couple staring down the barrel of a gun during a summertime robbery in Lakeview.

The charges stem from an incident in the 700 block of W. Barry St. around 3:25 a.m. June 24, when a 23-year-old woman and a 25-year-old man were confronted by four men, CPD said.

One of the men pulled out a gun and demanded their belongings and the keys to their black Mercedes-Benz sedan, according to police. The victims complied.

Officers found the stolen Mercedes about an hour later in an alley behind the 4300 block of W. Jackson Blvd. No injuries were reported.

Members of the Citywide Robbery Task Force arrested the teen on Dec. 8 in the 1100 block of S. Hamilton Ave., which is the same block as the Cook County Juvenile Temporary Detention Center. That suggests he has other pending matters, though state law shields juvenile records from public disclosure.

Prosecutors approved two counts of aggravated vehicular hijacking with a firearm, two counts of vehicular hijacking, two counts of armed robbery with a firearm, and two counts of aggravated robbery.

Police have not announced additional arrests in the case.

Police fatally shoot driver who dragged cop with stolen vehicle in Arcadia Terrace

Chicago police fatally shot a man in Arcadia Terrace Dec. 9 after he dragged an officer while trying to flee in a stolen vehicle that investigators had been watching, according to CPD. The department said the officer who was dragged suffered minor injuries.

A tactical team from the Lincoln (20th) District was watching a stolen BMW in the 5700 block of N. Washtenaw Ave. when a second car pulled alongside the stolen vehicle around 10:25 p.m., according to a preliminary statement from CPD.

According to CPD, two men got out of the arriving sedan and moved toward the stolen BMW. Tactical officers moved in to investigate. One of the men returned to the driver's seat of the sedan, and officers ordered him to get out, but he refused and struggled with them, CPD said.

During the struggle, the man allegedly accelerated the car with an officer still partly inside. Police said the officer fired a single shot, striking the driver, and the vehicle then collided with an unoccupied parked car. The officers pulled the man from the seat and began medical treatment until Chicago Fire Dept. crews arrived, CPD said. He was taken to Illinois Masonic Hospital and pronounced dead. His identity has not been released.

The second man who exited the car ran from the scene, heading north on Washtenaw, according to a witness. He was described as a Hispanic man about 5'-10" tall, wearing black clothing. A woman who arrived with the two men was taken in for questioning.

Officers at the scene said they recovered two firearms, including one equipped with an automatic fire switch, as well as a car key programming device that car thieves use to clone vehicle fobs.

CPD said the Investigative Response Team is handling the department's internal investigation while the Civilian Office of Police Accountability has opened an independent review. The officer or officers who fired shots will be placed on administrative duties for at least 30 days, per standard protocol.

Man wearing ankle monitor attacked three women days after judge refused to detain him

BY CWBCHICAGO

Marlon Miller returned to a Cook County courtroom Dec. 12, accused of randomly attacking three women in the Loop last week at a time he was supposed to be confined to his home on electronic monitoring for randomly attacking four other women in the Loop.

The alleged attacks occurred just days after a judge refused to keep him in jail despite another judge's warning that the 40-year-old had a "very violent history," a prosecutorial request to keep Miller in jail, and intense public scrutiny of the county's electronic monitoring failures following the CTA train fire attack that left a woman gravely injured.

Miller first appeared in this newspaper's crime blotter in 2018, when he broke a man's jaw in two places during a random, unprovoked attack outside Block 37 in the Loop. He ultimately received mental health probation and a 180-day jail term for that case.

This year, the pattern accelerated. On March 8, Miller received a 3-day sentence for misdemeanor battery after hitting a woman in the face in the 7000 block of W. Cermak Rd. On May 20, he received a 10-day sentence for misdemeanor battery after punching a woman in the head in Evanston. Also in May, he received a 75-day sentence for punching a woman multiple times in the 300 block of N. Michigan Ave.

By fall, Miller began accumulating new pending cases while under the chief judge's electronic monitoring program. On Oct. 10, Chicago police arrested him in the 100 block of E. Lake St. on misdemeanor reckless conduct charges. A witness told officers he personally saw Miller punch two women in their faces at the corner of Dearborn St. and Randolph Street, then run away and push another woman to the ground. The witness followed Miller until officers arrived. Judge Luciano Panici, Jr. released him the next day.

Judge Peter Gonzalez

Then, around noon on Nov. 15, Miller was arrested inside a Dunkin' in the 7500 block of N. Paulina St. after a 22-year-old woman said he slapped her across the face. Prosecutors charged him with misdemeanor battery. Since the offense was not detainable, Judge Susana Ortiz, noting Miller's three recent battery convictions, ordered him onto electronic monitoring administered by the chief judge's office. Court records show Miller failed to appear in court five days later, but the victim also missed the hearing, and prosecutors dropped the case.

Five days after that, on Nov. 25, a 30-year-old woman told police that Miller struck her in the face with a Potbelly cup filled with a milkshake near 175 N. State St. Officers who interviewed the woman noted she could not fully open her right eye afterward.

Their report notes Miller was wearing an electronic monitor on his left ankle at the time. Again, the charge was misdemeanor battery. Judge Panici ordered him to continue on electronic monitoring and wrote that Miller has a "very violent history" and a "random, violent new charge." Panici also ordered him detained for violating pretrial release terms in the October reckless conduct case.

Prosecutors attempted to resolve the situation on Dec. 1 by asking Judge Peter Gonzalez to detain Miller in custody due to the escalating number of random attacks and his repeated violations of electronic monitoring. Their request came during heightened public attention on the county's monitoring program following reporting on the Lawrence Reed CTA fire attack case.

Despite Miller's history, the state's pleadings, and screaming news headlines about failures of the chief judge's electronic monitoring program, Gonzalez refused to detain Miller and sent him home again on an ankle monitor.

Nine days later, on Dec. 10, Miller allegedly carried out three more unprovoked attacks in the Loop while he was supposed to be confined to his home. Prosecutors said the spree began just before 8:30 a.m. when a 50-year-old woman walked along the first block of E. Randolph St. Without warning, Miller allegedly punched her in the face, leaving

The alleged attacks occurred just days after a judge refused to keep him in jail despite another judge's warning that the 40-year-old had a "very violent history," a prosecutorial request to keep Miller in jail, and intense public scrutiny of the county's electronic monitoring failures following the CTA train fire attack that left a woman gravely injured.

At about the same time, a 49-year-old woman reported that Miller punched her in the face at nearly the same spot, causing bruising to her face and damage to her eyeglasses. And a 62-year-old woman reported that Miller struck her in the face, too, causing bruising to her nose and face. Cops arrested Miller nearby. Their report states that Miller was wearing an electronic monitor on his right ankle when they took him into custody.

Miller is now charged with three counts of aggravated battery in a public place. Judge John Hock ordered him detained on these latest charges.

This reporter's extensive research has found that the chief judge's office routinely allows people on electronic monitoring to accumulate extensive violations of their house arrest provisions without consequence. The

Immerse yourself in new diversion in 2026

The Old Town Art Center has new classes beginning on Tuesday, Jan. 6, 2026. Adult art classes offer a range for every interest/ability.

Whether you need a ruler to draw a stick-figure or have a full closet of art supplies, there is a class for you. Small class sizes ensure quality time with professional artists/instructors.

All classes focus on 2D presentations and are available weekdays, evenings, and weekends. Sessions range from 8-10 weeks depending on class and instructor.

The Old Town Art Center, 1763 N. North Park Ave., is located in a garage building at the corner of North Park and Menomonee. This newly remodeled space offers a comfortable space with great lighting and easy access.

Stop by and see why making art is both challenging and rewarding. To view the full schedule, visit Bit.ly/OTArtCenter or call 312-337-1938.

Classes this winter include Oil Painting for Beginners/Intermediates, and Fundamentals of Drawing & Painting. Classes for all experience levels are Oil/Acrylic Painting, Pastel Painting, Watercolor Painting, and Watercolor Painting (Portrait/Clothed Figure).

Andersonville's Lynn DiPietro tells us she was charged over $2000 for a four minute ambulance ride during which the crew did nothing. She walked into the ambulance and out of it unassisted. Chicago is now charging its residents double what California is. The assumption may be that the insurer will pick it up. But that many times doesn't happen.

CARAVAGGIO CHRISTMAS: In Sicily, in the town of Messina there is a great treasure, a painting of the Nativity by Caravaggio... the rough and tumble 16th century pirate-like master of great painting. His skill revealed a great painter of heart and emotion who freeze-framed the moment of the Incarnation as shepherds enter the mystery of redemption with rough-worn threadbare humility... four centuries does not dim the painter's palette or his great gift in the midst of personal torment to paint the God-man with skill and softened beauty. We can use his great canvas to open our hearts with humility and hope.

Music Box organist Dennis Scott, will lead holiday revelers in the singing of the Christmas carols.

Sing along with the movies at The Music Box Theatre

Something that will get you in the Christmas spirit is the Music Box Theatre, 3733 N. Southport, which plays a double feature of It's a Wonderful Life and White Christmas and has Santa come at intermission to sing carols.

Who could have predicted on that snowy Christmas Eve in 1983, when the operator of a vintage movie theater in Chicago decided to show two old holiday movies and sing a few Christmas carols during the intermission, that more than four decades later the Music Box Christmas Show would become a weeks-long extravaganza that grows more popular with each passing year? But it did.

Running Dec. 18 through Dec. 24, the theatre is gorgeous in its own right which makes this experience even more magical. The lyrics are projected onto the theater's screen so no one misses a chance to sing their hearts out. Then the audience sits back and enjoys a Christmas movie classic.

Tickets are $17 for the single feature and $25 for the double feature.

Writer's Museum opens new exhibit on writers, religion and culture

The American Writers Museum's [AWM] new special exhibit "American Prophets: Writers, Religion and Culture" is now open, running through next November. The exhibit takes visitors on a journey through spirituality and storytelling.

Featuring interactive displays incorporating more than 100 different creative works and writers spanning genres and mediums, the exhibit explores the stories, songs, and spirits that have shaped American culture, at the AWM, 180 N. Michigan Ave., 2nd floor. Tickets are $16 with discounts available for seniors, students and teachers.

Guests can discover faith-inspired songs including Chance the Rapper's "Blessings," Patti Smith's "Gloria" and Frank Waln's "7." They can compare the imagined worlds and faiths explored in Star Trek, Black Panther and Octavia Butler's "Parable of the Sower," and laugh through an exploration of holiness in humor with Taylor Tomlinson, Patton Oswalt, Hari Kondabolu and Joan Rivers.

American Prophets events with authors spanning genres will be presented at AWM through 2026. Check the events calendar at www.awmamericanprophets.org for updates on American Prophets programming.

Letters to the Editor

Do we need to become a city divided?

The Dec. 10-16, issue reports that the city is considering "a public enforcement pilot program for residents... to submit recorded evidence of parking offenses and violations," such as vehicles blocking crosswalks, bus and bike lanes. This idea harkens back to the Cultural Revolution in China when neighbors, family members, and friends were encouraged to, and did, report people who were not adhering to the Communist Party's policies.

If someone is blocking a crosswalk, bus or bike lane, and a neighbor wishes to report it, the solution is to call 911 or 311. But launching a pilot program that encourages neighbors to assume the role of "parking police" is a slippery slope. Today it is cars blocking bus lanes, tomorrow it is people jaywalking and littering.

We are already a country divided; do we need to become a city divided?

Carol McGuire, Old Town

Moved by reality

Thomas O'Gorman's [Dec. 10] column mentions that thanks to the city's mishandling of Chicago's 21-inch snowstorm in 1979 Jane Byrne won the mayor's race that year with 82.05% of the popular vote. Then in the very next paragraph he suggests he is "moved to hunt for larger things" that did not happen such as "one more inch of snow in that 1967 storm."

By contrast I am moved by reality. In the following mayoral election in 1983 candidate Harold Washington defeated Byrne. Her margin of the vote in the primary that year was a most dismal 33% of the vote, nearly a whopping 50% drop in the percentage she got in 1979.

She suffered such a humiliating loss of votes in her lopsided defeat that her later attempts at a comeback never materialized. By contrast Mayor Washington four years later was re-elected in the 1987 mayoral election and subsequently died in office at the height of his popularity.

ABANDONED from p. 3

electric scooters have become an important part of Chicago's transportation network. While operation had once ceased some-time in November, depending on weather conditions, the companies are now allowed to operate all year.

"The Chicago City Council made the scooter program permanent in 2022, changing the requirements for scooter companies, who are no longer required to remove their scooters during the winter, as Chicagoans have come to rely on scooters for year round transportation," said Bill Higgins, assistant commissioner for the Chicago Dept. of Transportation.

While three companies were granted licenses to operate in 2022, only two companies still operate. These companies are Divvy/Lyft Urban Solutions, which is based in Quebec, Canada and the San Francisco-based Lime, which is owned by Fosun International, a Chinese conglomerate. Each company pays $250,000 at the beginning of its two-year period. The city's commissioner of Business and Consumer Protection may renew a scooter sharing license if the applicant meets all of the requirements. Each company must pay a monthly service fee, calculated to be a rate of $16 per scooter for the average number of scooters that were deployed in a month plus 16¢ per scooter trip, based on the license month.

Licensees must pay the service fee before the end of the month of the calendar month as a continuing requirement for maintaining the license. There is no fee charged for leaving scooters littered about town.

office has no enforcement mechanism and merely keeps a list of violations that they pass along to the defendant's judge at a future court date.

That's because the county's electronic monitoring program, most of which came under the control of the chief judge's office earlier this year, is sagging under withering criticism after CWBChicago revealed that the man accused of setting a woman on fire aboard a CTA Blue Line train in the Loop last month was wearing an ankle monitor issued by Evans' office at the time of the horrific crime.

Further investigation revealed that the chief judge's staff was aware that the CTA fire attack suspect, Lawrence Reed, had repeatedly left home without permission, yet they took no action to bring him back.

recently charged with shooting another man on the Red Line was also on the chief judge's monitoring program.

On Dec. 1, the very day that Judge Peter Gonzalez refused to detain Miller, a new chief judge took office in Cook County. In his first public policy announcement the next day, Chief Judge Charles Beach II ordered the immediate, comprehensive review of the court's electronic monitoring system.

Truman College Men's Soccer Program, extend Region 4 dominance, earn top honors

Harry S Truman College in Uptown has completed another historic year for its Men's Soccer program, the Falcons, solidifying its position as one of the most successful community-college soccer teams in the nation. The Falcons have won the NJCAA Region 4 Championship for the third consecutive year—2023, 2024, and 2025—an achievement rarely matched in two-year collegiate athletics.

In addition to the team's championship three-peat, Truman College is celebrating a sweep of major individual honors within NJCAA Region 4, including the NJCAA Region 4 Division I Coach of the Year: Maciej Orłowski, awarded on Dec. 1. This marks Coach Orłowski's third consecutive Coach of the Year title. The NJCAA Region 4 Division I Player of the Year is Michael Makonese of the Falcons.

"What our Men's Soccer team has accomplished is nothing short of extraordinary," said President Shawn Jackson, Harry S Truman College. "To earn a Region 4 championship three years in a row places Truman College among the very best in the nation. But what makes this achievement truly special is the character of our students and their coach. They are remarkable people—resolute scholars, leaders on our campus, and outstanding athletes who represent the very best of what Truman stands for. We could not be prouder of their hard work, resilience, and commitment to excellence. Go Falcons!"

Other Falcons to be named All-Region Team Selections include Michael Makonese, Eduardo Ferragut, Nils Stodulka, and Oliver Bewell.

NJCAA Division I All-American Nominees are Michael Makonese, and Nils Stodulka.

This year's season began on Aug. 23, and concluded in the District Quarterfinals in Iowa Nov. 7, following an impressive run that once again places the Falcons among the nation's top competitors.

The Falcon's achievements stand out not only for their consistency but also for their rarity within the NJCAA. Sustained excellence in two-year college athletics is notoriously difficult. Despite challenges, Truman has built a model of stability, strategic recruiting, player development, and a high-performance culture.

"This year's group found success because they trusted each other, worked for each other, and showed up every day with the right attitude. We've built a culture that attracts good players. A strong mix of talent who value honesty, development, and real competition," said Coach Maciej Orłowski.

"Our athletes come in hungry; our players bring pride and identity, and they understand the responsibility of being true student-athletes. We are all focused on building a deeper, tougher squad with one clear mission: reaching the national tournament. As I always say to our young men, 'Talent sets the table, but hard work serves the meal!'"

A three-year streak places Truman in elite company, as very few community colleges nationwide maintain this level of dominance across multiple seasons. Coach Orłowski's three consecutive Coach of the Year awards are equally uncommon.

Individually, multiple All-Region selections and repeated All-American nominations signal that Truman is producing some of the best NJCAA Division I athletes in the country—talent levels more commonly associated with powerhouse programs in larger athletic departments.

Across NJCAA Region 4 and nationally, most community-college soccer programs experience cyclical success, but few sustain multi-year competitive dominance.

The club is supported by more than 50 owners, including former U.S. Men's National Team midfielder Kellyn Acosta.

In its first eight years, the club has provided free soccer experiences to over 3,000 youth through camps, clinics, and pick-up games, in partnership with the CPD. The club's Free-to-Play model ensures that no youth player will be required to pay to participate, regardless of financial background.

from its name which had been added in 2009 after it had operated for the prior two decades under the name the Village North Theater.

When the theater first opened it was called The Regal, but was rebranded The 400 in 1930 in a bid to attract the social register classes that populated the community at the time, according to the Rogers Park/West Ridge Historical Society.

As originally designed, the 400 Theater had a single screen and an auditorium that seated 725. When it was rebranded the Village North in the early 1990s, it was turned into a four-screen multi-plex with each theater having about 200 seats. Other historic neighborhood theaters in Chicago – including the Davis and the Logan in Logan Square – have also transitioned to multi-screen layouts.

It is not known what type of programming is planned for the 400, though Stancil is running first run films at his other theaters. Stancil, who also operates one other theater in Michigan and is about to re-open yet another theater there, did not get back to this publication by its deadline.

The movie theater business has faced formidable headwinds in the years since the COVID pandemic, followed by a societal move toward streaming, and annual box office revenues have dropped billions nationwide since then.
