Orchestrated by promoter David Floodstrand and pianist Danny Long, the unique Rush Street Reunion covers fifty years from the early days of Rush Street -- in the wild and wooly (or polyester clad) characters in the 1950s, through the 1960s, 1970s, 80s, 90s. AUTHOR FLOODSTRAND, who has seen it all, has penned a book, "Rush Street, Chicago's Street of Dreams," that chronicles the rich and diverse history

Historic Davis Theater to be renovated

PHOTOS AND STORY
BY PAT BUTLER

The 97-year-old Davis Theater at 4614 N. Lincoln Ave., is about to get its first major facelift in decades -- probably starting with the washrooms if owner Tom Fencel has his way. "I know from standing at bus stops that a lot of people don't come here because of the bathrooms," Fencel told DNAinfo reporter Patty Wetli recently. Part of Fencel's $4 million redo includes new ADA accessible privies, complete with baby changing stations and more than one hand dryer. Fencel also plans to install an up-to-date sound system and stadium seating in two of the Davis' four theaters. This involves raising the seats in the back of the theater so each row of seats is higher than the row in front of it. That not only minimizes blocked views but often provides more leg room, he explained. The two rear theaters will become a single auditorium with an oversized screen -- just as things were back when the theater was a combination vaudeville house with a single screen, almost 100 years ago. Although the keyboard on the mighty Wurlitzer organ has long since disappeared, the full set of pipes was found unscathed and will become integrated into the theater's early 20th century décor. Those pipes and the iconic "Da-

Also in the works is a restaurant/bar to be created by taking over the next door storefronts formerly occupied by a used bookstore and an Italian restaurant, which are all part of the same building as the Davis Theater. I told the man who killed my son I forgive him --Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis, at Siskel film premiere

Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis, an unarmed black teenager killed in Jacksonville, Florida in 2012 by a white man claiming self-defense spoke to a sellout crowd Sunday at the Chicago premiere of "3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets," at the Gene Siskel Film Center, 164 N State Street. The Sundance documentary from Participant Media and written and directed by Marc Silver, kicked off the film center's 21st Annual Black Harvest Film Festival. The film will be shown on HBO this fall. The shooting of 17-year-old Jordan Davis came nine months after the shooting of Trayvon Martin in Sanford, Florida and both focused attention on what many believed are extreme Florida self-defense laws and an extreme gun culture. George Zimmerman, who shot Trayvon Martin, did not invoke Florida's Stand Your Ground law but George Dunn, a 47-year-old software developer charged with murdering Jordan Davis did.

Lucia McBath spoke to a sold-out audience at the Gene Siskel Film Center about her son Jordan, memorialized in the film "3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets." Photo by Participant Media Much of the movie's tension centers on trial proceedings to determine if Dunn was really threatened or felt threatened before he shot 10 bullets into a car occupied by Davis and three of his friends. Dunn had asked the youths to turn down their rap loud music which escalated into violence. Dunn's lawyer, Cory Strolla, valiantly tries to prove in the film that Dunn felt threatened before

"We all know Lakeview is a thriving neighborhood, but we also know there are many here who need our help," Ald. James Cappleman (46th) said, adding that "11,000 Lakeview residents have incomes that fall below the federal poverty guidelines." Photo by Patrick Butler

"I get to see the best in human nature every day," said Lakeview Pantry director Gary Garland, recalling how there were only half a dozen volunteers when he started 28 years ago. Today, he noted, there are 950 volunteers giving 31,000 service hours a year. Photo by Patrick Butler

After 3-year fundraising campaign, Lakeview Pantry gets permanent home

PHOTOS AND STORY
BY PATRICK BUTLER

After 45 years, the Lakeview Pantry, one of Chicago's largest and longest-operating food pantries, finally has its own home. On Aug. 6, pantry director Gary Garland, board president Dan Laytin and their staff and volunteers were joined in a symbolic groundbreaking outside 3945 N. Sheridan Road by several dozen of their best friends. Among them were Ald. James Cappleman (46th), Cong. Mike Quigley (D-5th), and U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL). Thanks to what Laytin described as a "very aggressive" three-year fundraising campaign, "we're going to open next spring debt free."

You gotta go to 'We Gotta Bingo'

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

with over-the-top, wacky fun. You gotta go see it.

What I will tell you too is that you enter into a German beer hall known as “Der Brew-Ha-Ha,” where you are greeted by a lively polka band and a very colorful cast of characters from two local parishes, one Italian, one Irish, who are set to merge with one another against their wishes. They hold a madcap fundraiser, complete with bingo, an Italian dinner, drinks, dancing, music, mayhem and more.

“We Gotta Bingo,” is a night of raucous, interactive, theatrical entertainment. The entire cast does a phenomenal job of keeping the show flowing. That’s all I’m going to tell. Sorry.

OK, I’ll also tell you that the show’s creator, Bill Collins, was born and raised in the Oak/Elmwood Park area, and his characters were created from his own experiences growing up and attending a Catholic School ---St. Vincent Ferrer---with a mix of Irish and Italian families. It was a longtime dream of Collins’ to bring the hilarious play to Chicago.

He was involved in the interactive, “Tony ‘n’ Tina’s Wedding” for “a long time,” he said, and he’d run into people who’d tell him how much they liked “Tony ‘n’ Tina” and how they wished there were others like it.

“I started thinking of other shows,” said Collins, who lives in Minneapolis and also Lakeview, where he will stay for the duration of the open-ended show, which he hopes will enjoy a “nice, long, sit-down,” run. “I thought of the parish I grew up in and went from there.

“Chicago is proud of its ethnicities and neighborhoods, and it plays on that,” said Collins. “It’s a great Chicago experience. And you certainly don’t have to be Catholic to have fun.” (This Jew will vouch for that).

Kudos to the entire ensemble, which includes, among others, Lincoln Parker Mollie Rehner, Jessica Lauren Scott from Lakeview and Ty Rood and Tamara White of Edgewater. (And a special shout out to Mitch Conti, an awesome dancer who took me out for a spin on the dance floor).

White, who does temp work by day and the show by night, told me: “It’s not like anything else happening in Chicago right now.”

“If you come in with an attitude of fun, it’s always going to be fun,” said White. “I love how into it the audience gets. And when people play along, it makes it a great experience for everyone.”

If you’re willing to be silly and go along with bad puns, you’ll really enjoy the evening, said White. And that’s exactly what Collins is hoping for.

“I want to provide Chicagoans and tourists with a fun night out,” said Collins. “In tough times, everybody is always looking for a way to cut loose a little.”

Mr. Collins, I’d say you succeeded. “We Gotta Bingo” is a great way to do just that.

The city’s Commission on Chicago Landmarks last week approved preliminary landmark status for Burton Place between Wells and LaSalle but it is too late to save the circa-1891 property at 159 W. Burton Place, left. Residents of the block are fearful that neighboring properties will also be affected during demolition.

tive on the history of the Jewish community in Rogers Park will be provided by Richard Reeder, who grew up in the ‘hood and is now events coordinator at Max and Benny’s restaurant.

Donations needed!...help the Rogers Park Chamber of Commerce fill 100 backpacks with school supplies by Aug. 21 for students at Gale Elementary School, 1631 W. Jonquil Terrace. Drop off donations at the chamber, 7231 N. Sheridan Road.

Demolition derby by Castlerock ...demolition could be looming very soon for the circa-1891, old Victorian at 159 W. Burton Place, whose owner, Castlerock Properties, is also razing a historically-significant, orange-rated building at 2221 N. Fremont in Lincoln Park. Demolishing the 159 W. Burton property will destroy not only the historic character of the block, but could also cause irreparable damage to neighboring Edgar Miller and Andrew Rebori-attributed buildings, neighbors say. What’s with this young whippersnapper developer Sebastian Barsh that he has to go tearing down our beautiful and historical properties?

Good thing the Commission on Chicago Landmarks last week unanimously voted for preliminary landmark status for the West Burton Place Historic District, which is comprised of 13 buildings between Wells and LaSalle streets. But wait a minute... the designation really is too late to save the 159 property because a demo permit was already issued two weeks ago. (Seems like Barsh giddy-upped to get himself a permit, fully aware of the fact that neighbors were protesting).

However, according to Zac Bleicher, director of the Edgar Miller Legacy, the preliminary landmarking means there will be a 9 to 12 month review process involving more study, education and discussion with the affected property owners, and public hearings. The landmarking still needs to be approved but Bleicher said it’s uncommon for a district or building to be submitted for landmark status by the Commission and then be rejected by the City Council.

The preliminary landmarking does not revoke Barsh’s demo permit. What it may do is tie up his building permits and demand a revision of his plans according to recommendations from the Landmarks Commission for maintaining the aesthetic integrity of the streetscape, Bleicher said. And going forward, Barsh’s every move will be heavily scrutinized.

“We have heard that he is entertaining serious buyout offers, and as of this date, no demolition has begun,” said Bleicher. “He could also choose to do a tasteful rehab of the interior, save the facades of the building, and still walk away with a profit and his reputation untarnished.”

While this fight is not yet over, Edgar Miller Legacy is thrilled that Burton Place and the Carl Street Studios will most certainly be protected in the near future by landmark status, said Bleicher. “We do hope that now the developer takes this matter more seriously and reconsiders the demolition of 159 West Burton Place,” said Bleicher. “It is not too late to do the right thing for the neighborhood.”

I was also told by Preservation Chicago executive director Ward Miller that the Landmarks staff is reaching out to Barsh to encourage a re-use of the facades, in lieu of a complete demolition of the building.

Landmarks also has purview of any new proposed construction within the preliminary landmark district, which may help to retain such features as height, volume, front-yard setbacks and other visual features of any new proposed development, Miller said.

“We are hopeful that the owner will be able to work within the historic facades, versus demolition of the entire building,” said Miller. “If the developer proceeds with a full demolition of the structure, they would be destroying a landmark building and possibly undermining other nearby fragile structures and features in a Chicago Landmark District. Many of us would hope the developer would work to save and embrace our cultural treasures of the City of Chicago, which are our landmark buildings.”

Existing home sales nationwide rebound to highest level since 2007

BY DON DeBAT

Has America finally put the Great Recession in its collective rear-view mirror? Nationwide, the 2015 spring home-buying season posted the best results in eight years since the beginning of the Great Recession in 2007, analysts report.

“Buyers have come back in force, leading to the strongest two months in sales since early 2007,” noted Lawrence Yun, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors (NAR).

Yun attributed the brisk sales to strong job growth, improved household finances and a rise in mortgage rates that are pushing Americans to buy now before rates climb higher.

After floating above 4 percent most of the spring and early summer, mortgage rates recently have eased. On August 6th, Freddie Mac reported that benchmark 30-year fixed home loans averaged 3.91 percent, down from 3.98 percent. A year ago at this time, the 30-year fixed loans averaged 4.14 percent.

Apparently lower rates are here in the nick of time. In the second quarter of 2015, the nation’s homeownership rate plummeted to 63.4 percent—the lowest level in 48 years, the Census Bureau reported. The last time homeownership was so low was in the first quarter of 1967 when the rate was 63.3 percent.

Chicago posted sales of 3,110 existing single-family homes and condominiums in June, up 9.3 percent from June a year ago when 2,846 homes were sold, reported the Illinois Association of Realtors (IAR).

The median price of a home in Chicago was $290,000, up 5.5 percent over June of 2014 when the median price was $275,000.

“Median prices in Chicago have increased steadily since October of 2012, providing a remarkable comeback story for the city’s real estate market,” noted Hugh Rider, president of the Chicago Association of Realtors (CAR) and co-president of Realty & Mortgage Co. in Chicago.

“Consumer interest remains keen, as shown by the month-over-month increases in sales recorded since February and the relatively short time it is taking to sell a home,” Rider said.

In the nine-county Chicago area, existing single-family home and condo sales in June totaled 13,100 units, an increase of 14.2 percent from the 11,470 units sold in June of 2014, the IAR reported. The median price in June in the Chicago area was $232,500, up 5.7 percent from $220,000 in June of 2014.

“Sellers keep reaping the rewards of a market that has continued to see median prices edge higher every month this year,” said Jim Kinney, president of the IAR and vice president for luxury sales at Baird & Warner in Chicago.

“The burst in June sales growth was unexpected,” said economist Geoffrey J.D. Hewings, of the University of Illinois. “Prices, however, are growing more modestly yet strongly.”

Hewings said the foreclosure inventory seems to be playing a diminishing role in terms of both sales and prices with “significant declines” in foreclosed properties in recent months.

Statewide, existing single-family home and condo sales in June totaled 17,972 units, up 12.5 percent from June of 2014 when 15,982 homes sold.

The statewide median existing home price in June 2015 rose to $194,243, an 8.5 percent gain over June 2014’s statewide median price of $179,000. The median is a typical market price where half the homes sold for more and half sold for less.

“A decrease in the number of days it takes on average to sell a home in Illinois shows that buyers are undeterred by the steady upward tick in prices,” Kinney said.

The time it took to sell a home in June averaged 63 days statewide, down from 68 days a year ago and faster than 72 days last month. Available housing inventory remained tight with 70,999 homes for sale, a 6.9 percent decline from June of 2014 when there were 76,287 homes.

Enjoy your news but please watch your grammar

I enjoy reading the neighborhood news in your Rogers Park et al edition [the News-Star] and am grateful for your paper.

You'll earn more respect from your readers if you are more careful with your language and grammar. I am reading the current issue [July 29] and there are 2, yes two, incorrect uses of the verb "impute" on the front page alone: in paragraph 4 of the article about the Pride Parade, and in paragraph 5 of the article about the new mid-rise development.

In both cases, you mean to use the noun "input." Impute is a verb, not a noun, and doesn't even come close to meaning what you intend. From "dictionary.com", impute means "to attribute or ascribe," among others.

period, McBath said the movie "is our legacy to Jordan—to stem the violence and save more sons" and that "we felt it was important to travel with the film." Of the racial fears that fanned Jordan's shooting, McBath said we are not living in a "post racial society" and there is much work to do. Asked how parents can teach their children, especially their sons, to avoid the violence that seems to be everywhere, McBath said parents should teach their children "their history," emphasize "education and learning," and instill pride in "who God has ordained them to be."

Perhaps recalling how families of nine church worshippers killed in Charleston, S.C. in June, allegedly by a white supremacist, McBath was asked if she or others had addressed Michael Dunn. "We gave victim impact statements in court," said McBath and I "told Michael Dunn I forgive him." The reason she summons forgiveness in her soul, said Jordan's mother was forgiveness was "what I was teaching my child" and if she allowed "pain, anger and angst" to remain with her, "I could not do this work I was ordained to do."

A free press should not bow to political correctness

A letter in the July 29 Inside Publications newspapers from Rebecca Ray suggests that it is taboo for newspapers to report the race of suspected criminals in our neighborhoods and comes perilously close to calling me an outright "racist" for suggesting that newspapers should report facts to their readers.

I was editor-in-chief of a university newspaper, whose circulation exceeded that of most local newspapers in the USA. I was a community reporter for the Lerner neighborhood newspapers, which preceded the Inside Booster. I worked as a reporter out of the Washington, DC bureau of one of the largest circulation dailies in the world. I think that I can fairly suggest that I have newspaper ink in my bloodstream.

Because I have a firm, personal commitment to the preservation of a free press, I was appalled to read Ray's suggestion that the free press ought be censored for the purposes of left-wing political correctness. She wrote: "for one to take a newspaper to task for not including (racial descriptions) of suspects is galling." No. What is galling is for a person like this Rebecca Ray, to use the forum of a free press to argue that there should be no free press.

Police Beat

Man arrested in burglary spree

Following a recent stretch of burglaries on Morse Ave in Rogers Park, police on July 27 arrested a 27-year-old man and held him responsible for the spree.

Officers assigned to a burglary surveillance mission spotted the suspected burglar around 1:55 a.m. near a garage in the 1800 block of Morse Ave, according to police. The man, who police said was dressed head to toe in black, crawled underneath a back and then front porch while inspecting ground-level windows with a flashlight.

He then walked to Ravenswood Ave and headed south before entering a garage, police said. Officers watched his flashlight beam sweeping the garage for several minutes before he emerged to head back north on Ravenswood, where he was arrested and charged with unlawful entry and burglary, according to the report.

Officers recovered multiple credit cards, social security cards, jewelry and burglary tools from the man's backpack, according to the report. In addition, they found several sets of house and vehicle keys belonging to victims of earlier burglaries who had reported the losses to the police department.

The burglar was bleeding from a cut to a finger when police arrested him, which he said was caused by broken glass, according to the report. Officers were able to find a broken window at one of the houses he'd attempted to enter and evidence technicians took blood samples and prints from the scene, police said.

Four men popped for gambling on the street

Four men were arrested July 25 near the intersections of Howard St and N. Ridge Blvd in Rogers Park and charged with gambling on a public way. The suspected gamblers, 22, 23, 33, and 36-years-old, were caught rolling dice about 8 p.m. in an alley near the 7500 block of N. Ridge, police said. Officers found them after following up on a phone call reporting the men for loitering and making excessive noise, police said.

When officers arrived the men had approximately $8 stacked in a pot while a thrower was tossing dice down the alleyway and up against the wall of a building, police said.

Teen had narcotics for his birthday party; police spoiled his plans

A Rogers Park teen stopped July 25 was charged with narcotics possession after he handed over a bag of the prescription barbiturate Xanax. The 17-year-old was stopped around 3 p.m. in the 2300 block of W. Devon Ave after officers found him bicycling on the sidewalk, police said. One of the officers asked what the teen, who wore a black hooded sweatshirt with the hood clinched on an 85 degree day, was holding in his right hand. He replied, "Xanax, for my birthday," and held out the bag, according to the report.

Officers counted out 10 bars of Xanax in a clear plastic bag, according to the report. He could not provide police a prescription for the medication and was taken into custody.

Employees stop robbery at Walgreen's

The manager at an Edgewater Walgreen's was knocked down and an employee nearly had his arm bitten July 26 while helping thwart a robbery at the pharmacy. Officers responding to a 2 p.m. robbery in progress call arrested two people, a New York man and a Chicago woman, and charged them for the crime, police said. The woman, 33, was stopped driving a vehicle matching the description from the robbery near N. Sheridan Rd and Hollywood Ave, according to police. The man, 35, was arrested on foot in an alley near 1000 W. Granville Ave carrying a duffle bag with goods taken during the robbery, police said.

According to the manager the man began stuffing products into the duffle bag as the two strolled through the store's aisles. The woman did several things to distract employees, including throwing a coughing fit to alert the man when an employee was approaching, and asking pharmacy techs to step out from behind the counter and answer questions she would repeat several times, the manager told police.

As the pair attempted to leave, the manager asked them to come back and return what was in the bag, police said. The man turned back and shoved the manager, knocking him down and back into the entrance doors. A female employee jumped into the fray and tried to knock away the duffle bag, but the man grabbed her arm and attempted to bite her, police said.

The pair eventually broke free from the Walgreen's employees and fled, the woman in the vehicle and the man on foot, according to police.

After being read his Miranda rights, the man commented on the attempted chomp to the arresting officers. "I was just fighting to get out of there," he said, according to police. "I only told the lady I was going to bite her. I know I was wrong."

Bullet found near alleged incident

Officers found a live 9mm bullet near the spot a teenage girl from Rogers Park said she was threatened July 26 by three gang members with a handgun. After responding to a 7:40 p.m. call of a person with a handgun in the 7100 block of N. Clark St, officers found the 16-year-old victim hiding inside a grocery store, police said. She told the officers that four men in their middle 20s had approached her and one of them had a handgun and pointed it at her, according to her statement to police. The gunman said "GDK, King Love," the victim reported. GDK is a common acronym for "Gangster Disciple Killer," while King Love refers to membership in the Latin Kings, police said.

The men boarded a black four-door Chevrolet Tahoe and fled the area shortly after the victim ran into the store to hide, police said. No one was injured and no arrests were made.

Two men arrested after robbery with realistic fake handgun

A teenager from Chicago and an older Wisconsin man both were arrested August 4 in Rogers Park after allegedly robbing a woman at gunpoint. The 15-year-old was turned over to youth authorities while the 22-year-old was booked at the 24th District with an additional charge of carrying false identification and vehicle registrations, police said. Officers found the weapon allegedly used during the robbery to be a realistic airgun and not a real handgun, police said.

Officers responded about 11:50 p.m. to an armed robbery in the 1500 block of W. Albion Ave and found the 21-year-old victim on the street. While walking by a vehicle with several men and women in front of it, the teenager had stepped out and put the handgun against her head, according to police. The gunman took her purse and ran back to a minivan, which fled the area, police said.

The van was stopped a short time later driving eastbound on Sheridan Rd near Kenmore Ave on the campus of Loyola University, police said. The gun was found inside the vehicle and both men were identified by the victim, according to police.

Is Bankruptcy inevitable for Chicago Public Schools? City Club of Chicago unites experts

Everyone knows that the Chicago Public School (CPS) system is in deep financial trouble but is bankruptcy inevitable? The CPS' current financial straits have pit administrators against principals, lawmakers against public education officials, schools against schools and parents against the "powers that be."

On Tuesday, August 25 the City Club of Chicago will host a lunch and reception at Maggiano's Banquets, 111 W. Grand Avenue, to address the CPS's situation, future and financial options. Speakers will include experts on public education, bankruptcy and restructuring and the overall financial challenges that face huge city school systems like Chicago's.

Among the speakers will be Chuck Burbridge who joined the Chicago Teachers' Pension Fund (CTPF) as executive director in March after serving as chief financial officer of the Atlanta Public Schools (APS) and before that served as deputy chief financial officer, chief financial officer and interim chief information officer with the Los Angeles Unified School District.

Mr. Burbridge has held several positions in Illinois, including director, state and local government management assurance services at KPMG, deputy chief financial officer at Chicago Public Schools, deputy chief financial officer for Cook County, and as an economist at the Illinois Economic and Fiscal Commission.

Also speaking will be Troy Anthony LaRaviere, currently the principal of Blaine Elementary School, one of the highest performing neighborhood schools in Chicago, and a relentless defender of public education. In a speech at City Hall two years ago, LaRaviere became the first Chicago principal to criticize Mayor Rahm Emanuel's school policies following up with an Op-Ed in the Chicago Sun-Times, republished in the Washington Post that accused City Hall of silencing principals with a heavy-handed approach.

Last summer LaRaviere and other principals founded the Administrator's Alliance for Proven Policy and Legislation in Education (AAPPLE), which subsequently exposed unclean conditions in Chicago Public Schools that it charged resulted from the city funneling $340 million in taxpayer dollars to two private for-profit custodial management companies. AAPPLE also charges that CPS Office of Accountability officials altered charter school test score data.

Vallas is a strong believer in data driven instructional management systems to give teachers the tools to effectively develop lesson plans.

Participants at the City Club of Chicago luncheon will also hear George Panagakis, a deputy practice leader at Skadden's Corporate Restructuring Group, experienced in representing clients in complex business reorganizations, debt restructurings and insolvency matters. Mr. Panagakis has served as lead counsel in numerous Chapter 11 cases such as those of Enesco International, Ingersoll International and Shorebank and led successful out-of-court restructurings of top national and international manufacturers, satellite telecommunications and technology firms. Panagakis is a frequent speaker on restructuring topics and has served as a contributing author to Norton's Annual Survey of Bankruptcy Law and the Illinois Institute for Continuing Education.

Also addressing CPS's financial options will be Jesse H. Ruiz, a corporate and securities partner at the law firm of Drinker Biddle & Reath, who specializes in complex business transactions such as equity and debt offerings, financings and the purchase and sale of assets from bankruptcy estates. A long-time public education advocate, Ruiz has served since 2011 as vice president of the Chicago Board of Education and previously as chairman of the Illinois State Board of Education.

The best known of the luncheon speakers will be Paul Vallas who served as CEO of the Chicago Public Schools from 1995 to 2001, eliminating a $1.25 billion, 5-year projected budget gap and structurally balanced six $4 billion budgets. During the 2002 gubernatorial primary, the Chicago Tribune wrote that Vallas "airlifted CPS out of its ocean of red ink without asking for any special bailout from the legislature or the city." More recently Crain's called Vallas "arguably to the most effective schools superintendent in recent decades." In 2007, Louisiana recruited Vallas to lead the post-Hurricane Katrina Recovery School District, where he implemented the nation's first 100-percent school-choice district and managed the U.S.' largest school rebuilding initiative. Vallas also advised Haiti and Chile's Ministries of Education in the wake of their respective earthquakes.

Vallas is a strong believer in data driven instructional management systems to give teachers the tools to effectively develop lesson plans. In Chicago, he created the nations' first "cradle to the classroom" program.

While the City Club of Chicago event is sold out, a waiting list can be found at <https://www.cityclub-chicago.org>. Many will be eager to hear the opinions of the five experts who hopefully can save the CPS from bankruptcy.

 nection” between the gun group and the American Legislative Exchange Council(ALEC), an organization of conservative state legislators and private sector representatives that drafts and shares state-level legislation reducing corporate regulation, weakening the power of labor unions, loosening environmental regulations and expanding and promoting gun rights. McBath urged the audience to visit <http://everytown.org> where they can quickly find their own legislators, pre-written tweets and posts and everything they need to become active against gun violence. It is especially important to vet your state legislators before voting for them, said McBath, because many are serving the NRA.

There are some moments of laughter in the “3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets” like when Jordan’s friends say he dressed sharp but was miserable at basketball and when they are asked on the witness stand why they bought gum at the gas station where the shooting occurred. (They wanted to meet girls and make sure their breath wasn’t bad, the say.)But the many lives broken by the shooting are hard to ignore--from friends and family of Jordan to those close to Michael Dunn. Upon sentencing Dunn to life in prison (after a second trial which found him guilty of murder) Circuit Court Judge Russell Healey admonishes Dunn that there would have been “nothing wrong” with retreating from the scene instead of shooting. There is nothing worse for a parent than losing a child the judge tells Dunn.

The audience at the screening of “3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets,” some of whom discussed the deaths of their own teenagers, embraced the film and McBath’s message. “You are my role model,” one mother told McBath--“you have never waived in your faith.”

construction work will begin next month and be completed in April.

Lakeview Pantry’s mission is to eliminate hunger and poverty in the community and raise awareness, help clients achieve independence and serve as model of compassion and as a stable presence of service delivery. Opened in 1970, the pantry originated from the efforts of a few neighbors who wanted to help people in their own community who were struggling to secure the food they needed. Today Lakeview Pantry serves nearly 1 in 9 individuals in

The Lakeview Pantry will also become a place where pantry clients can learn to cook, write their resumes and look for work.

Lakeview who are struggling with poverty and food insecurity and even provides home delivery services for elderly, disabled and home-bound clients. The pantry also provides clothing, personal hygiene products and holiday toys to its clients and social services like case management, referrals and assistance in aid applications.

The new facility will be 7,500 square feet compared to the 4,100 square foot space the pantry previously rented at 3831 N. Broadway, according to a fact sheet distributed by the pantry. And when finished, “it will look nicer than a New York deli and you’ll get treated better,” added Laytin.

The Lakeview Pantry will also become a place where pantry clients can learn to cook, write their resumes and look for work, said Ald. Cappelman. Pantry director Gary Garland said the alderman always “had our back, not for political gain, but because he had the heart of a social worker,” when some residents opposed moving the pantry to Sheridan Road.

Last year, Garland noted, the pantry helped 4,400 households and 9,000 individuals. “Today we’re celebrating a dream people will not have to go without food.”

“What’s being built here today is more than a building. You have built hope where there was no hope,” Garland told the pantry’s supporters.

With 29 years under his belt, Garland said he never expected to stay on that long at the pantry. “I didn’t really know what a pantry was when I started here. I didn’t have any vision. But it seemed like a worthwhile job.”

Garland said he’s seen the roster of volunteers grow from six to 950, donating a total of 31,000 service hours a year. In 2014, the pantry distributed 1.6 million pounds of food during more than 29,000 client visits. Over the years, Garland has also seen the pantry add a West Lake View branch on Oakdale Avenue.

“But you can see what kept me here. I get to see every day people who care about their neighbors,” said Garland, adding that things didn’t always look so hopeful back in the early 1990s “when we were struggling as an organization just to meet budget.”

But somehow help always came when it was least expected, Garland said. “I remember Christmas Eve, 1989, when a truck pulled up full of food. We didn’t order it. It had been sent by someone who had been helped by the pantry, plopped down $500 because he wanted to give back.”

“Whenever we fill a bag with groceries, we never know where that’s going to lead,” Garland said. To donate, volunteer or learn more about the Lakeview Pantry visit <http://www.lakeviewpantry.org>

Cosplay Day of “costume play” to be held at Da Sorce August 16

BY JOHN PORUBSKY

Sure it’s August and we’re on the cusp of Wizard World Comic Con Chicago which will attract hundreds of Cosplayers but if you Cosplay and really want to get warmed up then don’t miss the Cosplay Day event at Northcenter’s Da Sorce comic shop, 4353 N. Lincoln on Sunday, August 16th starting at noon.

ing and city permits are obtained, work could begin this fall and take about six months to complete, according to Fencel’s timetable.

Fencel told Wetli he went after landmark status and ended up qualifying for a 20 percent tax credit the National Park Service said he had coming.

The main requirement, he added, was that the organ pipes be on display.

Originally named the Pershing after the general who led the American Expeditionary Forces in France during World War I, the Davis is the last of five theaters built in the Lincoln Square area during the dawn of the movie industry.

And it too almost disappeared in the late 1990s when a band of outraged neighbors led by activist Mary Edsey packed the Sulzer Library after a story in Inside noted the Davis was for sale and then owner Edward Vanek had already shown the theater to eight different developers. One wanted to make it a mall.

Edsey contacted then 47th Ward Ald. Eugene Schulter, who made it very clear at the time to the Reader’s Ben Joravsky that he wanted to see Lincoln Avenue remain a “mix of theater and gallery spaces and restaurants and shops.”

Schulter mused that the Davis “makes a really nice mix, particularly with the Old Town School (nearby). On a more personal level, I have to say I love the Davis. I go there myself. My kids go there. All the neighborhood kids go there.. It’s a neighborhood institution.”

Schulter liked it so much, in fact, he refused to rezone the property to allow a shopping center on the site.

The theater was taken over in 1999 by the Davis Theater Preservation Corporation, headed by Edsey. Fencel said he bought the Davis (and the rest of the building) about three years later and resumed showing first-run films.

Fencel’s plans to change the format from mainstream movies to “alternative” fare ranging from silent films to opera to “football” (soccer) are nothing new. Back in the early 1950s the Davis showed both German and American films and for a time was an exclusively German cinema. The theater then turned to a variety of offerings including puppet shows and classic film revivals.

Fencel began introducing special events like last September’s appearance by “Scream Queen” Linnea Quigley, who signed autographs, met with fans, and reflected on her 20-year career followed by a screening of her horror movie “Return of the Living Dead.”

At this point, Fencel’s Davis Theater is one of a handful of theaters like the Logan and the Music Box thinking out of the box. Fencel, a CPA and self-described real estate preservationist, admits he’s the most surprised of all by the turns his career has taken over the 30 years he’s lived in Lincoln Square.

But Fencel admits he’s still got a few odd things left in his “bucket list” – such as finding out who the Davis Theater was named for and locating even one photo of the theater’s interior taken back in the days when the Davis ran silent films and hosted vaudeville.

“If anyone’s got such a picture, please let me know,” he implored.

Japanese diplomat Chiune Sugihara who saved Jewish lives during the Holocaust

BY MIRA TEMKIN

In Israel, there is a special honor reserved for those who went above and beyond to save Jewish lives during the Holocaust. Among this group is Chiune Sugihara, a Japanese diplomat who served as Vice-Consul for Japan in Kovno, Lithuania. Defying orders from Tokyo, he issued more than 6,000 transit visas so that refugees could travel to Japan, risking his career and his family's lives. Most of the Jews who escaped were from German-occupied Poland or residents of Lithuania. In 1985, Israel named him to the “Righteous among the Nations” for his actions, the only Japanese national to be so honored.

A dramatic reading of the play, “Chiune Sugihara: Unsung Hero of The Holocaust,” written by Canadian playwright Philip Pinkus will take place on Thursday, August 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the Japanese American Service Committee, 4427 N. Clark in Chicago. The show features Dwight Sora as Chiune Sugihara and the reading is free.

After the war, when asked about his visa initiative, Sugihara simply said, “There is nothing wrong in saving many people's lives. The spirit of humanity, philanthropy, neighborly friendship. With this spirit, I ventured to do what I did.”

Playwright Philip Pinkus said, “In writing this play, I saw Chiune Sugihara as a contemporary of the war years, bearing witness to the horrors, becoming increasingly aware of them, shock after shock, at the very time he was writing those visas. The questions Sugihara asks in this play are questions that for many, have no answers. From time to time, we should think about them. That is why I wrote the play as I did.”

The play is directed by Elayne LeTraunik, Associate Artistic Director of Genesis Theatrical Productions, who commented, “I felt this play was important in bringing to the public a hero of the Holocaust who is largely unknown. Among the families he saved were the families of Sam Zell and Leo Melamed, two individuals who are leaders in Chicago business.”

Sam Zell is a top Chicago real estate figure who bought the Chicago Tribune in 2007 and served as CEO for a time. Leo Melamed is credited with developing Chicago's financial futures industry and establishing the world prominence of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

“People were desperate and his own government went against him, LeTraunik added. “As he was being recalled by Japan he was throwing visas off of the train.”

Chiune Sugihara is also memorialized at the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center in Skokie. “There were a number of individuals I would call ‘points of light’ in a sea of darkness during World War II,” said Rick Salomon whose father was also saved by Sugihara's visa initiative.

JPA steps up to the plate for child welfare

By Ann Gerber

THE JUVENILE PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION spring benefit, “Step Up to the Plate,” raised $497,470 in support of JPA’s critical treatment and counseling services for traumatized children and families in crisis in low-income Chicago communities. A baseball theme was chosen this year to memorialize Ernie Banks who died in 2015 after many years of volunteer service to JPA and attendance at JPA’s annual benefit event.

The “500 Home Run Club” baseball collection donated in memory of Ernie raised $21,000 in an auction drawing national attention and featured across Chicago media. In the long and storied history of Major League Baseball, only 26 players have attained the ultimate career achievement -- hitting 500 home runs. The rare collector’s set includes balls autographed by many Hall of Famers: Babe Ruth, Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, Hank Aaron, Mel Ott, Jimmie Foxx, and our beloved Ernie Banks.

Fox 32’s Good Day Chicago’s Corey McPherrin hosted and JPA board members Robin Segesta, Dr. Heather Pyle, and Jim Rose served as the co-chairs for this year’s event, held at the Four Seasons.

A rare “500 Club” baseball collection draws $21,000 for JPA. The donation, in honor of Ernie Banks, put a national media spotlight on the need for the trauma therapy that JPA provides Chicago’s most vulnerable children.

Jeweller Peter Marino, whose diamond earrings were a highlight of the JPA silent auction, with Mamie Walton, Robin Segesta, and Tom Segesta flanking the “500 Club” Baseball Collection, which sold for $21,000.

JPA welcomes Gary and Cheryl Rabine family with the 2015 Jane Addams Community Partner Award for their dedication to the community and for enriching the lives of adults and youth.

Dez Clark, former Chicago Bear, surprises guests at the “Step Up to the Plate” live auction mid-bid with a guest appearance and a hug for fan Shirley Marx. From left: Tony Giradano, Lezley Hodes, Dez Clark, Shirley Marx, Robin Segesta, Mila Samokhina, Tom Segesta, and Regina Rice phenomenon a significant aspect of popular culture in Japan, parts of Asia and in the Western world. Cosplay events are common features of fan conventions, as well as local and international competitions, social networks, websites and other forms of media centered on Cosplay activities.

Cosplay costumes vary greatly and can range from simple themed clothing to highly detailed costumes. Cosplay is generally considered different from Halloween and Mardi Gras costume wear, as the intention is to replicate a specific character, rather than to reflect the culture and symbolism of a holiday event. As such, when in costume, some Cosplayers often seek to adopt the affect, mannerisms, and body language of the characters they portray (with “out of character” breaks). The characters chosen to be Cosplayed may be sourced from any movie, TV series, book, comic book, video game, or music band anime and manga characters. Some Cosplayemphasizes the importance of the blue ribbon as the official symbol for prostate cancer awareness.

Prostate cancer claims the lives of approximately 30,000 men annually, and more than 220,000 men are diagnosed every year.

Event registration costs $45 for adults and $20 for kids ages 7 to 17. Registration is free to children 6 and under. Each registrant receives a shirt. To register or donate or for more information call 630-795-1002.

Cosplay literally means “Costume Play”—dressing up and pretending to be a fictional character (usually a sci-fi, comic book, or anime character).
