Bruce Jenner's | Fire at Old Town stable looks like arson Sex Change Teaches Us

AS IF HIS LIFE isn't complicated enough, a fatal car crash while he was allegedly smoking is being investigated. Bruce Jenner's reality show existence gets stranger and stranger.

ALL THE SPECULATION about the sex change from man-towoman that Olympic champ Jenner appears to embrace, teaches us about the plight of transgendered people trapped in bodies they hate. You take your sex for granted, a respected surgeon told us, but pity the men and women living in uncomfortable bodies that leave them frustrated and often suicidal. In other countries where there is little mental health support, the suicide rate for folks who suffer is high.

PLASTIC SURGERY is just one facet of change. Hormonal therapy, psychological support, wearing the clothes of another sex, discussing all the facets of a sex change, are part of the process. Everyone deserves a life in a body they can relate to in a positive way.

Chaz Bono, once Chastity Bono, taught us about determination and the pain of a physical transformation, both mental and physical. Mother Cher supported her child through his difficult years, and other parents learned from her love and guidance.

A SEX CHANGE for a male is not just a trip to a plastic surgeon for breast implants, slicing of a penis to create a fleshy vagina, shaving an Adam's apple, shaping a more feminine nose, and seeking other refinements that add to a new appearance. For a female sex change, removal of the breasts leaves scars that cannot be completely hidden and since every case is unique, each patient has a dream list of what Mother Nature should have created.

PLASTIC SURGEONS can do a fine job for men and women but beware the quacks. We know that unqualified "medics" often operate and butcher their victims, so eager to change their bodies they make unwise decisions. Sex change is not for the faint of heart. It is 1,000 shades of grey.

THE MAIN LESSON WE LEARN is that every human being deserves a life in a body they honor, and we must be supportive. Bruce Jenner is part of the publicity-

Animal right activists suspected after graffiti discovered

Chicago Fire and Police investigators now claim that a Feb. 6 fire at the Noble Horse Theater, 1410 N. Orleans, was likely a case of arson and that the fire may have been set by animal rights activ-

No horses were injured in a fire but more than a half dozen horse carriages valued between $7,000 and $15,0000 each were destroyed.

Chicago police and fire investigators have now turned the case over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation

Police and fire at the scene at first said the fire was not suspicious following an initial investigation on the morning of the fire, but a series of photos taken by DNAinfo Chicago showing graffiti discovered at the site prompted a further investigation.

The owners of a number of the carriages that leased space at the stable discovered bright green spray paint graffiti inside the stable that read "Freedom" on one wall and "Free Save the Horses" according to DNAinfo. Since then investigators have discovered similar graffiti on the roof of the building with a similar messages.

Following the blaze, Jim Rogers told DNAinfo that he believes the fire was a "deliberate act" by "radical animal rights activists," adding that the stable has received threats from animal rights groups over the years.

Rogers, who owns Great Lakes Horse and Carriage, said the horse carriage business is his and his wife's main source of income and that a friend is lending them two carriages while the fire is being sorted out. The couple kept both of their carriages at the stable... both were destroyed in the fire.

The Noble Horse Theatre is Chicago's last remaining in-city riding facility. The site was built in 1871 after the Great Chicago Fire and it stabled as many as 60 coach and riding horses as well as hansom cabs and carriages for local Chicagoans when horses were still a necessity for everyday life.

In 1922, major renovations took places transforming the facility into a riding academy. The facility operated as Lakeshore Stables through 1972 offering horse boarding, performances, and trail riding through Lincoln Park. Riders would ride into Lincoln Park via Schiller St. where trails would go as far north as Foster. From 1972 until the early 1980s, the site stood empty and the building began falling into disrepair.

During the 1980s and 1990s, the stables were used as a riding academy once again. By 1998, the already deteriorating facility was in dire need of repairs or otherwise the site needed to be demolished.

In 2000, with the help of Friends of the Stables, a grant from the City of Chicago, and an investment from Noble Horse, a massive renovation took place. The historic site was returned to its 1922 era riding and performance hall under the name Noble Horse Theatre. The barn now stables horses used for both the show and for Michigan Ave. carriage rides.

The spaces are only about ten feet deep, which would make a restaurant business challenging. Other issues, noted by people who took the tour, include diesel fumes from boats docked too close and restrooms that are too far away.

Feeling our Oates at City Winery

Ald. Smith defends her record in 43rd

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame musician John Oates was sitting in a New York City restaurant one night, when a devastatingly beautiful woman walked in and sat right across from him. "But when she opened her mouth, it was filthy," recalled Oates, laughing. His next thought? "She will chew you up."

"Immediately my songwriting antennae went like this (up)," said the Grammy-winning Oates. Shortly thereafter, the smash hit Hall & Oates song, 'Maneater," was born.

That was just one of the many stories behind the songs that Oates, who was sans Darryl Hall, told last week at City Winery, 1200 W. Randolph St. I've wanted to go to the winery for the longest time, and when my daughter, Andie, told me on a Monday that by that Sunday she had to see a concert and write a paper about it for a music class she's taking, I figured it was the perfect opportunity to not only check out the place but also see what I knew would be an excellent Oates -- whose wife grew up in Kankakee -- is promoting his new DVD, "Another Good Road." He also has a DVD due out March 31 featuring a Hall & Oates concert recorded in Dublin last summer.

City Winery, has transformed a former refrigerated food distribution warehouse built in the early 20th century, into a 300seat, acoustically-superior, intimate vibe venue, where you can eat and drink during the show, a concept I love. The reclaimed wood furniture and fixtures, along with the exposed stainless steel fermenting tanks and French oak barrels, make for a trendy and hip spot. [BTW, rock Hall of Famer Leon Russell, who is phenomenal live, will be there Feb. 24 and 25.]

My daughter and I each had a glass of our favorite wine, Moscato, and, as their plates are meant for sharing, we split a heavenly order of Crispy Risotto Balls ($12) with roasted butternut squash, sage and ricotta, and a maple dipping sauce. Delish also was the grilled skirt steak with grilled shishito peppers, wilted kale, roasted red pepper, and fried chick peas ($22). The Whiskey Banana Bread Pudding ($10) melted in our mouths with its whiskey, caramel sauce, vanilla gelato, and caramelized banana.

Before going to the concert, my daughter was only familiar with a few Oates' songs. But now, she's a fan.

"Beside the times I was eating the delicious food, I was completely engaged," said Andie. "I definitely recommend everyone to go see John Oates, and to go see a show at The City Winery. It's a fun, hip place."

If my 25-year-old daughter and I can both enjoy it, you know they've done something right. Kudos to City Winery founder Michael Dorf for creating a cool and inviting place where young and old alike can both have an excellent adventure.

Heat wave... Ald. Michele Smith [43rd] has taken a lot of heat lately due to the $72K a year side job she has with the Meier Charitable Foundation for the Arts.

"I'm not really sure why people have a problem with the arts," she said. "I work more than a fulltime job as alderman."

Ald. Smith helped set up the foundation in 2008, before she became alderman. She is currently a consultant and board member and said she has disclosed the position every year on the financial disclosure statement she files with the city. She also has the job listed on her campaign Web site.

"I've been completely transparent about this," said Ald. Smith, a staunch governmental transparency advocate. "I've done everything I'm supposed to do to let people know." I asked her if she would give up the job if reelected on Feb. 24. "Of course not," she said. "Work for the arts is a great

Plus it must be hard to live in tony Lincoln Park on an alderman's salary... it is truly one of the most expensive neighborhoods in the city.

Ald. Smith and I discussed some of her proudest accomplishments, which include implementing an eight-point plan to reduce crime; saving the magnet program at La-Salle Language Academy; expanding Lincoln Elementary; IB programming for Lincoln Park High School; partnering with the mayor to attack financial problems and the pension reform issue; organizing lakefront alderman to defeat the threatened sprinkler mandate; and co-authoring the ordinance to create a City Council Office of Financial Analysis.

Ald. Michele Smith (43rd).

"I am very proud of the work I have done over the last four years," said Ald. Smith. "I have worked hard and aggressively on behalf of the ward, particularly in public safety, education and protecting our ward's taxpayers."

Her next goals are to get the city's finances in line to avoid a "catastrophic" property tax increase, improve Lincoln Park High School, and bring more attention to the 43rd Ward's arts, culture, and culinary scene.

"I look forward to having the opportunity to continue to serve," she said.

Ald. Smith faces three other contenders. I've spoken to Jerry Quandt once and met Jen Kramer once (but received a press release relaying some really weird tweets of hers). I also worked once with Caroline Vickrey, who I found to be totally on the

But so is Ald. Smith. In the four years I've worked with her, I only have one gripe, and that is more about my journalistic competitiveness. In March 2013, she promised me regarding Lincoln Elementary middle school expansion news: "When and if the time comes, I'll call you first." At that time I wrote that if she didn't, I'd let you

Spring CPD program registration to begin Feb. 24

The Chicago Park District [CPD] announced that online registration for spring programming for North Side residents will begin 9 a.m. Tuesday, Feb. 24 with in-person registration to begin on Saturday, February 28.

Ballet, yoga, softball, boxing, ice skating, boot camp and soccer are among many of the offerings soon to be available for the upcoming season.

Programs can now be viewed online. Registration kicks off at www. chicagoparkdistrict.com.

In-person registration begins at local parks Saturday, Feb. 28 or Monday, March 2 depending upon the park location. The CPD says that financial assistance is available for those families that qualify.

In 2014, there were 330,638 enrollments in CPD programming. This winter, registrations for programming grew by 14% to over 75,000 residents. Instructional programming offered by the Park District also increased, growing nine percent this year to over 5,100 opportunities, up from 4,965 opportunities available in

In preparing for registration day the CPD recommends that residents check your account login and password before registration begins; add all persons who you plan to register for on your account; create a wish list with the programs that you plan to register, and view the registration process page for additional information. For more information call 312-742-7429.

Most downtown Chicago condo developers have forgotten first-timers for affordable units targeted to first-time buyers.

BY DON DeBAT sion of the "Downtown Chicago Benchmark Report," Appraisal Research Counselors' latest analysis of new-construction condo development for the fourth quarter of 2014. "Six of the seven new downtown condo projects started marketing programs during 2014 are targeting the affluent, upscale buyer," noted Gail Lissner, vice president of Appraisal Research.

Five of the seven projects are priced from $600 to $1,100 per square foot, and unit sizes average more than 2,000 square feet, which means prices typically range from $1.2 million to $2.2 million.

"Only one South Loop project is oriented towards the first-time buyer," Lissner noted. The affordable project, developed by CMK Development, is 1345 S. Wabash which offers 144 units in a 15-story high-rise. The average price for an 891-square-foot unit is $289,575, or $325 per square foot. Fifty sales have been reported.

This building, which is currently under construction, targets price-conscious buyers who desire attractive, contemporary finishes and are not focused on building amenities, Lissner said.

"In an effort to keep monthly condo maintenance fees and development costs as low as possible, CMK does not provide any common-area amenities such as fitness rooms, sun decks and business centers," she said.

Another affordable condo opportunity downtown is The Guild, a 176-unit highrise at 1555 S. Wabash in the South Loop, Lissner said. Built in 2009, the 14-story high-rise was caught in the Great Recession and only 35 buyers closed on their pre-sale units. Formerly rented, the remaining units are now being offered for sale at prices averaging $346 per square foot.

The Home Front

"Although only five years old, The Guild's condos are being extensively renovated to make them comparable to 2015 construction, with new finishes including new hardwood floors, cabinets, appliances and quartz countertops," Lissner said. The building's common areas also are being up-

At the end of the fourth quarter of 2014, new-construction condominium developer inventory rose to 643 units downtown, up from 467 units at the end of the third quarter, Appraisal Research reported.

"Clearly, there has been a recovery in the condo market downtown," Lissner said. "However, with the limited development activity occurring, new development sales volume was extremely modest during 2014—totaling fewer than 400 units."

Back during the condo construction boom, between 1998 and 2007, annual sales contracts ranged from 3,000 to 8,000 units, although some of these deals did not close after 2008 because of the real estate crash, Appraisal Research reported.

Other affordable opportunities can be found in the downtown condo resale market, where prices currently average $399 per square foot in 65 buildings surveyed by Appraisal Research. In 2014, closed resale condo prices were four percent below 2008's peak price levels.

If you have tons of cash and are shopping for a new luxury condo unit north of the Chicago River in such neighborhoods as River North, Streeterville or the Gold Coast, expect to pay more than $650 per square foot for a residence with more than 2,100 square feet.

Mid-priced new choices include 100 West Huron and 400 West Huron, boutique condo buildings that started marketing in October of 2014. Both boutique buildings offer 26 to 28 larger sized units with average prices of about $650 to $685 per square foot.

The new construction ultra-luxury condo market also is reviving in the Gold Coast, where sales and construction are underway at 4 East Elm, Appraisal Research reported. Units ranging in size from 3,100 square feet are selling for an average of $950 per square foot. About 60% of the 35 units are sold.

At the top of the market is 9 West Walton, where 70 ultra-luxury, new units now are being marketed at prices averaging more than $1,100 per square foot, Lissner said. The condos will feature an average 4,000 square feet of living area.

[and that] Mayor Emanuel gives extraordinary access to the people who bankroll his large campaign fund. That he is not a mayor for all Chicago." But they still think that he "offers the broadest vision for the social and economic future of the city."

The Sun-Times believes "he must govern more with the carrot than the stick... [and] follow through more on what he starts." But they maintain that he "is the right mayor for Chicago in difficult times.'

This mayoral election is centered on schools (including his closing of 50 of them), crime (the shocking number of shootings and murders, and the cooked crime statistics), the mayor's arrogance (the people be damned, it's my way or the highway), and local issues of development like the Children's hospital site and Wrigley

There are two other issues to be considered: 1) a "rubber stamp" city council that can't provide a check and balance to the mayor and, 2) being the most corrupt city in the country.

Mayor Emanuel is using his PAC to try and unseat any alderman who dares to vote less than 100% of the time with him. This despite the fact that he has had only 67 divided roll votes out of 6,000 or more votes in the last four years, lost no votes, and not had to use his veto. He has a more rubber stamp council than either Richard J. Daley or Richard M. Daley. If he is elected without a runoff and if the candidates running for aldermen who would stand up to him are defeated, he will become King Rahm.

Our new book, Corrupt Illinois (published by Univ. of Illinois Press) recounts the sordid tale of corruption in this city over the last 180 years. It began with the crooked elections which founded the city.

Commentary

Today, we are the most corrupt city in the U.S. as shown by federal corruption convictions. Some 33 of our aldermen and former aldermen have gone to jail from 1976-2012 and another three would have if they hadn't died before they could be prosecuted.

As we write in our book, "The first stolen elections were in 1833, when the town of Chicago was incorporated. The settlers voted to elect five trustees when they met at a hotel tavern. At the first town meeting, they decided by a vote of 12-1 to incorporate... [but] two of the voters didn't meet the residency requirement. Later in 1833, they voted 28-1 to elect a slate of trustees. But there were fewer than 29 citizens living in Chicago at the time. The ballot box was stuffed when the city was born."

Today, we are the most corrupt city in the U.S. as shown by federal corruption convictions. Some 33 of our aldermen and former aldermen have gone to jail from 1976-2012 and another three would have if they hadn't died before they could be prosecuted. The Sorich and Sanchez trials proved that there were still patronage jobs being given out during the Richard M. Daley administration. Our estimate is that taxpayers in Illinois pay more than $500 million a year in a "corruption tax" mostly for crooked contracts "with thievery written between the lines."

Mayor Emanuel responds that he should not be blamed for continuing Chicago corruption. That he has worked on transparency and made more city information available; that he has convinced the courts that the city doesn't require a Shakman court monitor any longer; and that he has passed ethics legislation recommended by his ethics reform task force.

In the end you, the voter, will decide this election. Do you think there is enough progress with schools, crime, a rubber stamp city council, and ending corruption? If not, I recommend that you vote for Garcia, Wilson or Fioretti. If you think the mayor has done enough, either voting for him or staying home will reelect him. Similar tests can be applied in the aldermanic elections. Have the incumbent aldermen done enough to represent their communities or have they been too much of a rubber stamp?

all know. Well, she didn't. I read about it elsewhere.

I asked her why the people of the 43rd Ward should give her their vote again.

"I've listened to the community about what we need—and been your voice in City Hall," said Ald. Smith. "I have delivered."

"We are facing an unprecedented pension and financial crisis," she said. "These challenges and opportunities require an alderman who has the record of delivering for her ward and her city. I'm proud of my record, and ask the voters of this ward to re-elect me so that I can continue to get results for this community."

May the best man -- or woman -- win... My aldermanic predictions are: There could be a runoff, but Ald. Smith will take the 43rd. Ald. Tom Tunney will landslide in the 44th as will Ald. O'Conner [40th] and Ald. Pawar [47th]; Ald. Joe Moore will take the 49th but an upset wouldn't surprise me; Ald. Cappleman has shocked many people with his war against the poor in his ward and may lose... but I predict it's a runoff in the 46th; Ald. Silverstein will take the 50th, where I've seen not one shred of revitalization evidence or that she has earned her pay. In the hot 2nd Ward race, I've heard good things about Bita Buenrostro, but the win will go to Brian Hopkins, who will make an outstanding alderman that I look forward to working with in the future, just as we have worked together in the past.

Complaints linger about Restaurant.com signing up participants against their will

'A very shady operation,' says Montana restaurateur

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN Loop North News

Imagine being the owner of a restaurant, perhaps operating on a thin profit margin, and customers start bringing in coupons you have never seen before, entitling them to discounts.

It is a frustration restaurateurs continue to face all because they got a call one day from Restaurant.com [RDC], a Chicago company that sells gift certificates for restaurants in cities throughout the U.S. On its website, a buyer can select from 18,000 restaurants, select the dollar amount of the gift certificate, pay for it, and print the certificate. The company then gets a cut from each certificate sold. As recently as 2008, RDC had annual revenues in the range of "several million dollars," according to a U.S. District Court document.

Owned by two River North residents, Kenneth Chessick and Ellen Chessick, Restaurant.com is into its fifth year of a class action lawsuit filed by two New Jersey residents who, while not losing any money, are holding the company to the letter of New Jersey law. The New Jersey Supreme Court has determined that gift certificates the residents purchased from RDC had expiration dates and a disclaimer in violation of state law. A federal appellate court is now deciding if RDC is subject to an estimated $1 million in pen-

Many of the consumer complaints against RDC, however, are not from people who bought their certificates but from restaurants signed up without their consent that feel obligated to give discounts to customers who bring in the coupons.

The latest are two restaurants in Great Falls, Montana. The owners of Dimitri's Restaurant and Prime Cut Restaurant say they were surprised when customers showed up with coupons from RDC, appear-chased this parcel in December, 2013, after it had been foreclosed upon by a bank. The city is now looking for responsible developers to develop the site but in the mean time it has been converted into community garden and turned over to the Peterson Garden Project to manage.

Last year dozens of experienced and novice gardeners tended to their garden plots and created an abundance of locally grown food. Returning gardeners have just registered for this coming year, but many garden plots are still available.

People interested in gardening there do not need any prior gardening experience. The mission of the project is to teach people how to grow their own food, so they are looking to recruit "grewbies"--their term for people new to the process. Membership in Peterson Garden Project is $75 and includes education, events, some supplies and a 4'x8' garden plot. Garden plots are assigned on a first-come, first-served basis so act now. ing to entitle them to sizable discounts, as much as 50% off. While they scrambled to contact RDC to get removed from the program, both restaurants decided to honor some of the certificates.

Jody Mintsiveris, co-owner of Dimitri's, told the Great Falls Tribune in January that when she started getting sales calls from RDC, the first sales representative was "misleading" and provided "incomplete" information and the rest "wouldn't take 'no' for an answer," arguing with them over the value of the marketing program.

Prime Cut owner John Altringer told the newspaper that RDC "didn't treat us fairly." He says RDC claims a night supervisor had approved the agreement but the supervisor denies that.

RDC disputes the claims, the company's director of marketing communications telling Great Falls Tribune that RDC did have agreements with both restaurants.

'We have over 18,000 restaurants around the country in our marketing program. [We] are not in the business of putting restaurants in the program that don't want to be there," said Tania German. "We deal with a lot of restaurants and everybody is not 100% happy. The restaurants are in the business of making money and sometimes they change their minds about participating.'

RDC nonetheless has removed the restaurants from the marketing program.

Reached on Monday, a co-owner of Prime Cut confirmed to that they have been taken off the RDC website. "We will be monitoring it to make sure we don't reappear," he said, calling RDC "a very shady operation.

The Better Business Bureau currently gives RDC a B+ rating but says they have "failed to resolve underlying cause(s) of a pattern of complaints."

Some 255 complaints have been filed with the BBB against RDC in the past three years. They include claims of RDC refusing to provide refunds for coupons not honored by a restaurant.

"Restaurant owners have also alleged that the company's sales staff has misrepresented the frequency of discounts offered and that the company has sold coupons for higher amounts than they had agreed upon with the company's sales staff," reads the review for RDC on the BBB website.

On May 19, 2014, Restaurant. com provided the BBB with a plan to deal with complaints. The plan included adding a link on its website to allow customers to exchange a coupon purchased for one restaurant with that of another restaurant.

To address complaints of misrepresentations to restaurant owners, RDC said it "has updated their participate."

But resolving complaints from restaurant owners who were signed up without their knowledge or consent has been more challenging. "To date, the BBB has received no plan of action detailing any progressive steps by the company to resolve the allegations."

Dr. Kenneth Chessick, a lawyer in Chicago, and his wife, Ellen Chessick, own RDC. On September 12, 2013, Ellen told this reporter that the number of complaints against her company is "a miniscule fraction" of the total transactions.

"No business wants an unhappy customer and RDC has a large award-winning customer service department that works hard to address customers' concerns," she said. "Anyone who owns a business knows that sometimes no matter what you do, you will not be able to make some people happy."

CTA plans to repair 20-year-old Brown Line rail cars

The CTA has announced that they will be refurbishing and overhauling their fleet of 20-year-old rail cars for the Brown and Orange lines starting in March at a cost of $166 million. The city says that they would like to try and squeeze six more years of service out the 257 cars.

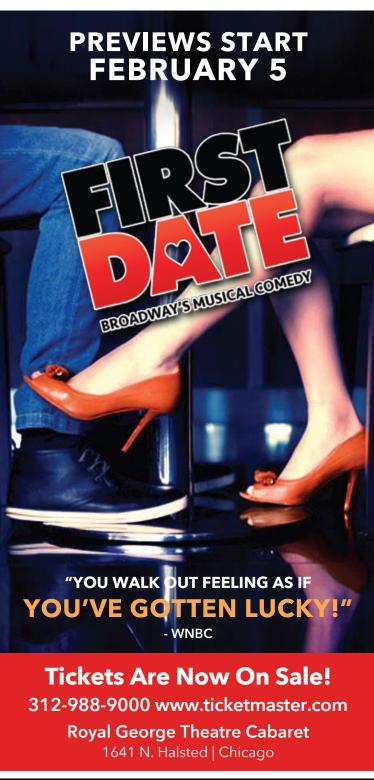

CTA work crews at the heavy maintenance facility in Skokie plan to add full-color LED destination signs to the old train cars while also replacing some of the major operating systems such as the air conditioning and heating systems, rebuilt the propulsion and power equipment, fix passenger doors and the wheel and axle

The work should not disrupt service on the North Side's Brown line as only 16 cars will be worked on at a time. The work is estimated to take about six weeks per car to complete. The CTA hopes that the cars would then remain in service until at least the early 2020s.

From pop-up shops to permanent storefronts, many online retailers now going offline

This red velvet brownie is a speciality of D-ology, a local gluten-free bakery that has participated in the Nosh pop-up for about a year.

BY MALLORY HUGHES Medill News Service

All of those empty storefronts that plague the city of Chicago will be no more. That's the goal at least, as pop-up shops spring up in neighborhood after neighborhood.

Storefront, a San Francisco-based company that launched in Chicago last July, specializes in helping retailers, designers and artists nail down short-term leases in prime shopping spots.

The business has been the gateway for about 100 pop-ups in the Chicago area and more than 1,000 in New York City, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

"Pop-ups are a way to test the market, different neighborhoods in a city, and a chance to get offline," said Bryan Steel, a member of the Storefront marketing team.

The Tie Bar, 918 W. Armitage Ave., a Lincoln Park-based retailer that specializes in men's neckwear, did just that. Established in 2004, the business was online-only for 10 years, allowing men across the country to order affordable, yet high quality neckwear right to their doorstep.

But in October, they opened their first pop-up shop. It was meant to be exclusively for the holiday season, but when the brickand-mortar store had unexpected success, they decided to keep it open a little longer. The store is now permanent.

"It took a lot of pressure off of me because I still have my job," said Devin Wordlaw, a Tie Bar employee who has been with the pop-up since it opened.

Nancy Gardner, the chair of the marketing and branding committee with the Chicago Art Girls, said their biggest hurdle was finding a large and affordable space for the collective with convenient parking but also near public transit.

Chicago Art Girls' 25 independent artists came together four years ago to host popup art galleries to promote and show their work. They host pop-ups twice a year at Bell Elementary School, 3730 N. Oakley Ave., in North Center.

"Because we are all independent artists and do shows all over the country," Gardner said, "it would not be possible to have a permanent store."

Pop-ups are fun, she said, because they allow the customers to get to know the artists and are part of a larger trend for locally

Alan Kanoff is the founder and "Chief Nosher" of The Nosh pop-up, a marketplace that hosts an ever-changing variety of food vendors ranging from vegan baked goods to Mexican cuisine. He launched The NOSH in 2013.

"I could use it as an opportunity to identify and find new or underexposed talent, in this case chefs, and give them a platform to showcase their creative works in the form of their food to new audiences," Kanoff said. "And ultimately help them expand

The NOSH is currently hosted at Block Thirty Seven, 108 N. State St., every Thursday and Friday from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. What started as a two-month holiday season endeavor has been extended to at least the end

"We've seen many short-term events focused on testing local demographics turn into more permanent situations," Steel at Storefront said.

In 2014, e-commerce accounted for only about six percent of total retail sales, according to the U.S. Dept. of Commerce.

"Businesses were almost craving a solution to diving into brick-and-mortar retail," Steel said.

Pop-up shops allow retailers to open storefronts without being tied down to a long-term, expensive or high-risk lease.

Still, there are hurdles to overcome.

"Early on, it was convincing vendors that we were going to be able to draw an audience of enough people to make it worth their while to come and sell," Kanoff said. "Then it was doing the right marketing to attract the audience.'

Knowing how to build visual displays, as well as how to present the products are some of the biggest challenges for retailers,

"Promotion can be difficult for people to get together sometimes," he said. "Consider how to best utilize the time [retailers] have in the space."

Some brands are pooling their funds, creating more opportunities to rent an even bigger or more prime location, Steel said. And some local space owners are closing up their normal operations to make their space available permanently for pop-up shops.

"We're not just building a future for retail, we're exposing the secret that brickand-mortar is the most effective way to reach a targeted audience and grow your business," he said.
