Despite rampant carjackings, no youths had their cases transferred to adult court in 2018

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Despite a second consecutive year of rampant carjackings and nearly 600 homicides last year, the Cook County State's Attorney did not attempt to get any violent juvenile offenders tried in adult court during 2018, according to records secured by this reporter via a Freedom of Information Act request.

The city has been fighting widespread carjackings for more than two years, and Chicago police have identified unpunished juveniles who re-offend as being a driving force behind vehicular hijackings and street robberies.

Politicians and prosecutors are quick to point out that juveniles could be referred to adult courts for some violent felonies. But county records show that threat is rarely, if ever, realized.

The State's Attorney's records show that the office sought to move 15 juvenile cases to adult court in 2017. Only one case was approved. Prosecutors withdrew four of the requests, nine were denied, and one remains pending, according to the records.

In 2016, prosecutors tried to transfer eight juvenile cases to adult court. One was granted, two were denied, and five continue to be listed as "pending" in official records.

All three of then-State's Attorney Anita Alvarez's requests to transfer were denied in 2015. In 2014, two requests were made. One was turned down, the other was withdrawn by prosecutors.

One example of a rebounding juvenile: In June 2017, a 12-year-old and two 17-year-olds were charged with felony attempted first-degree murder, aggravated discharge of a firearm, aggravated possession of a stolen motor vehicle, and unlawful use of a weapon after they allegedly opened fire on Chicago police officers who were trying to pull them over because they were driving a car that had been taken in a carjacking.

Sounds serious, right? Hardly. The 12-year-old (who is now 14) and one of the 17-year-olds (who's now 19) were arrested on Jan. 17 after Chicago police saw them riding in a vehicle that had allegedly been taken in a carjacking. They both had guns, police said

The 19-year-old, Antjuan Davis, was allegedly driving the car when police curbed it last month in suburban Bellwood. He bailed out of the car, threw a gun under the vehicle, and ran, according to court records. Police caught him nearby. He is charged with felony receiving-possessing a stolen motor vehicle; felony fleeing police, felony aggravated unlawful use of a weapon by a person under age 21; and multiple traffic violations. Judge David Navarro ordered him held without bail.

The 14-year-old, who was responsible for firing the shots at police in the 2017 case, is now charged in juvenile court with criminal trespass to a vehicle, unlawful use of a weapon and possessing a firearm with a defaced serial number.

A third man who was in the back seat of the carjacked Buick. Jaquali Brown, 19, is charged with criminal trespass to a vehicle. Judge Navarro released him on a recognizance bond.

Despite being rejected, Spire Site proposal appearing before Chicago Plan Commission tomorrow

A proposed amendment submitted by the Dept. of Planning and Development for the 400 N. Lake Shore Dr. proposal, commonly known as the "Spire Site," will be considered by the Chicago Plan Commission at their meeting 10 a.m. Thursday in City Council Chambers, 121 N. LaSalle St., 2nd Floor.

The proposal will amend Planned Development No. 368, which governs the zoning of the site, to extend the expiration date to May 6, 2020. This amendment is being proposed in order to assure ample time for public and community input on any revised future plans for the site.

Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] rejected the initial proposal for this site on Oct. 22, 2018 due to concerns related to the proposed hotel use; the tall podium base of the buildings; traffic concerns for E. North Water St.; and security issues on the Riverwalk and at DuSable Park.

When the development team submits revised plans for the site to Ald. Reilly says he will hold another community meeting for public review.

The alderman claims this technical amendment to extend the expiration date does not affect the developers' requirement to obtain official City approvals from the Chicago Plan Commission, the Committee on Zoning, and the full City Council for future plans. All three will be required if the project should move forward after the community process.

Residents complain Postal service getting worse

Several neighborhoods on the North Side - and throughout Chicagoland - have ratcheted up complaints over the lack of regular mail service, and long lines at local Post Offices.

People were willing to give mail carriers a break during the recent Polar Vortex, but many residents have complained that the problems have been going on for over a year. Indeed some people in Rogers Park and Edgewater have said they only get regular mail deliveries two or three days of any given week. In one South Side community, residents now claim to get mail just one day a week.

"It is now my expectation that when I go into my local post office on Devon Ave. most any day of the week there is going to be only one clerk on duty and a line 10 or 20 people deep," said Carol Gagnon, a senior citizen who lives in Edgewater. "I feel sorry for those lone clerks, many times people are so frustrated that they take out their frustrations on the one person who is actually working very hard to keep up."

In Rogers Park, Ald. Joe Moore's [49th] office has been collecting and cataloging complains. "We asked last week about your postal delivery problems, and boy, did you answer! We got more than 300 responses to our survey, detailing your issues," said the alderman in an email to ward residents sent out Feb. 15. "Since then, [my staff] has been working closely with staffers from U.S. Rep. Jan Schakowsky's office to address these issues with postal managers."

The Post Office - critically understaffed for a while, claims that additional carriers have been transferred to the Rogers Park and Edgewater areas, and that new hires are being trained and assigned to routes currently without consistent carriers.

They also claim that their top managers will be overseeing the area to make sure these issues are resolved.

Still city officials are encouraging those experiencing problems to call Rep. Jan Schakowsky's office at 773-506-7100 or Rep. Mike Quigley's office at 773-

But complaints about bad Postal service are not new, this newspaper has been reporting on poor service for nearly 20 years in most every neighborhood. To be fair, delivery in urban communities can be more problematic as people move more frequently, don't always have their names listed on building mailboxes, don't speak English and don't clear sidewalks of snow. The USPS is also suffering from habitual deficits which means it's hard to add more staff. The USPS finished fiscal year 2018 nearly $4 billion in the red—a whopping 44% increase in losses from the previous year, despite the fact that the Post Office saw revenue increase by more than $1 billion at the same time.

What's really stunning is that the USPS managed to lose so much money in a year when income from shipping packages jumped by 10% and overall revenue increased by 1.5%. That wasn't enough to make up for an increase of $896 million in personnel costs.

Nourishing us with vittles, cozy company, kind words, honest costs

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Many of us are nostalgic for great Chicago restaurants that have gone away. Time can be a strange telescope through which to view them.

Have any of your favorites closed over the years? Is there an eatery you're missing?

If you're missing them, they must have been good. Food is a powerful trigger of memories, especially in Chicago where comforting restaurants are often the next best thing to home.

My memories of favorite places, now shuttered, live in layers of time. A convergence of places, foods and locations. Some just happy vagaries.

But then some others, trusted hangouts, remain more detailed and alive. Maybe it was their fried chicken, Chop Suey or strawberry shortcake that today gives them more life.

I grew up in a "go out for dinner family." Always hungry and always ready with a reservation. Standard Sunday operating procedure. Usually me, my mom and dad, my sister and one of the Irish grandmothers. (They loved their Brandy Alexanders).

On most school holidays, nothing was better than meeting up with my father for lunch. Nothing better, from 6th grade through high school, than talking things out with pop over a shrimp cocktail or corned beef on rye. He knew every joint of culinary value. Especially small neighborhood taverns with colorful owners. Gave me a chance to brush up on my barroom etiquette. Usually an infusion of cash at the table covered a post-lunch movie.

Remarkably some of our family's favorites spots are still in business. Like Jack Gibbon's for the world's best fried chicken and hash browns. Berghoff's for roast duck and lingonberry sauce or wiener schnitzel. But many, alas are shuttered, victims of the economy, changes in taste or urban transition. Here are 10 favorites I miss the most:

Binyon's: Plymouth Court near Jackson, had world class Turtle Soup. We always ordered a gallon for Christmas Eve breakfast after Midnight Mass. Hal Binyon was a gent and always made sure we had it. The restaurant was cozy, especially the second floor. You could lounge all day there over martinis and the world class liver, veal kidneys on toast or a steak sandwich.

The Sirloin Room was located along side the International Amphitheater at Halsted and 42nd Sts., adjacent to the gates of the Chicago Stockyards. Your dinner could be found in pens not far away.

Old world urban elegance made it everyone's quiet favorite.

The Sirloin Room, Stockyard Inn: The ultimate Chicago steakhouse in the age before Gibson's. Along side the International Amphitheater at Halsted and 42nd Sts. The very gates of the Stockyards. Cattle were in pens not far away. Very manly. Beefy steaks ruled the roost. So too the unmistakable aroma in the air.

Jacques: 900 N. Michigan Ave. The ultimate luncheon venue for elegant, hungry Boul Mich folk. We loved going there, especially in high school. "I'll have an Old Fashioned, please." You could get a cocktail, no questions asked. Large retractable roof in the middle let in the sun. The dining room was a lush garden. Delicious food in the French style. We always had a Christmas week lunch there. Located in an artsy low-rise brick building before the avenue was ransacked by real-tors.

Schwaben Stube: Part of the long line of authentic German restaurants along N. Lincoln Ave. with plenty of flaky schnitzel and big steins of beer. As kids we were always looking for Nazis.

McGowan's: 87th and Ashland. A semi-fancy neighborhood eatery good for prime rib, steaks, fried chicken. Irish food, you might say. Well appointed. Friendly. As kids we loved it. Gobbled their salads and desserts. Hot fudge sundae.

Club Corsica: A true "mob joint," at least if you listened to my mother. She had a formula about how many Cadillacs and Lincolns constituted a mob joint. High-end, no nonsense Italian food. Mom said if they served a bad meal people could be killed. You had to be buzzed in at the front door. Always crowded. On South Western Ave. near 85th Street.

Hoffman's: A glorified tavern at 56th and Halsted. We often walked there on Friday nights (meatless for Catholics) as they had scrumptious halibut, fried shrimp and good salads. Jolly and delish. Relish tray too.

Myron & Phil's: Brisket and latkes like no other. The chopped liver was so good we always asked for seconds. When Phil was still alive he would come over and sit and schmooze at our table. That was real Chicago.

The Golden Ox: German food high-end. Veal chops and kidneys were the best. Clybourn near North Ave. Usually before the symphony. Where we'd snore.

Gordon's: Began the rise of great food and urban restaurant pioneering in Chicago. Innovative food in a rough part of town then (Grand and Clark). Magic formula. Gordon Sinclair changed everything. He remains true culinary history.

I want to quickly add five more, favorites, and identify their perfect signature dish.

Como Inn: Chicken Tetrazzi-

Cape Cod Room: Oysters and Bookbinder Soup.

Toffinetti's: Giant baked potato and trimmings.

Neilson's: Elegant Smorgas-

The Bakery: Chef Louis Szathmary, himself, his memorable Beef Wellington and policy of BYOB. Revolutionary. Fun fact: Chef Louis once wrote a weekly column for this newspaper.

What was their secret? Most importantly, a "hands on" restauranteur. Nothing can beat that. Plus that one perfect dish. The reputation builder. The main attraction. And a cast of regulars. In other words - the grace of expansive hospitality, of welcoming folk and treating them well. We need more of this.

Maybe there is a lesson to be learned here for our upcoming Mayoral election. Maybe looking at reliant decency as a virtue can enhance our public perception of service and honesty while longing for historic restaurants of the past. Many of these transformed our lives. Nourishing us by their vittles and cozy company. Kind words. Friendly demeanor. Hon-

From the streets of Chicago to reality TV and beyond

"Well the South Side of Chicago, is the baddest part of town." - Jim Croce

Growing up on the city's South Side, depending on where you live, can be a difficult task, as Retired Gunnery Sgt. Tee Marie Hanible found out the hard way. Sgt.

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

t the hard way. Sgt. Hanible attended the school of hard knocks while living in the South Shore area, but thankfully, she came out of some bad experiences a strong, warrior of a woman.

She is now telling her story in her compelling first book, "The Warrior Code: 11 Principles to Unleash the Badass Inside of You," (with Denene Millner). Released earlier this month, the "Warrior Code," draws on Sgt. Hanible's experience as an entrepreneur, philanthropist, reality TV star and Marine Corps Gunnery Sergeant to serve up 11 principles to awaken your inner badass and thrive in the face of adversity.

The sergeant's story is one of overcoming more challenges than many people will ever face. After surviving the death of her father, enduring foster care and being expelled from school, she joined military reform school, where she began uncovering her "inner warrior."

She was a member of the first class of females permitted to take the Marine combat-training course; she became a Marine Gunnery Sergeant, deployed to Iraq for the initial invasion in 2003. She was the only female to go out with her unit. After two decades of service in the Marine Corps, Sgt. Hanible was cast as the first female military expert on the Fox TV show "American Grit."

I really enjoyed reading about Sgt. Hanible's journey. One reason was that she grew up in my old 'hood on the South Side, less than a mile away from where I lived. Her recollection of "The 9," which was 79th Street, was so different from mine, and learning about how the area had changed within a few decades was disheartening yet informative.

With insightful honesty and wisdom set against the backdrop of Sgt. Hanible's life, "The Warrior Code," helps prove the old saying, that it's not how many times you fall, but how many times you get up. And that's exactly what she did many a time, she got up, dusted herself off, shook herself off, and went on with her life. And eventually, it was a successful existence.

We could all learn a little from Sgt. Hanible's strength, determination, and her grit.

Sgt. Hanible also founded Operation Heroes Connect, an organization that partners service members and veterans as mentors for at-risk youth. In 2012, she was featured in Newsweek magazine's "Heroes Edition." She was the National Veteran's chair for the Women's March and an executive board member of the Women's March D.C. chapter. She also currently serves on the board of the women-led organization March On.

I take my hat off to this South Side sister of mine for telling her story, complete and with details not everyone might share about their life. We congratulate her and thank her for taking the time to chat.

Q: What made you decide to write this book?

A: I almost didn't... Nerves originally made me turn down the opportunity to put my story out there, to get naked in front of strangers (so to speak). However, the more I spoke out about things from my past, the more I realized that people needed to hear my story, people needed to know that they aren't the only ones still trying to heal from the emotional scars of their past.

Q: Where on 79th Street is the area you call The 9?

A: I grew up right on the corner of 81st Place across from Horace Mann Elementary School, so The 9 as I know it, will always be 79th and Jeffrey area, where cigarettes were sold as squares and can be bought for a quarter and White Castle was just a hop, skip and a jump away.

Q: You went from bad to badass. Can anybody do that?

A: I believe that anyone at any point in life can. It's just a matter of getting out of your own way; ignoring the distractions that often detour us and finding that motivation. Whatever ignites your fire, keep it lit! Whatever seeds your focus, water it and make sure to continue to help it grow.

Q: What advice would you offer to someone who is living life problematically, as you once did?

A: For those who are wanting to change, I would say this: First you have to realize that there is a problem. For many, realizing that there is even a problem can be difficult. But in order to start the journey we must own it.

Life problems (our problems) often have a way of stopping us before we even get started.

Look at these problems that you're facing as just temporary obstacles; and although it may seem like one problem just leads to another and then another, they are still all just obstacles. Step back and see how you can overcome those obstacles. While the solution may not be easy, I promise you, it's damn sure worth it.

Q: How difficult is it to break the cycle of self-destruction?

A: It's very difficult, especially for those who may have grown up not only seeing these self-destructive behaviors but especially to those who have seen those behaviors manifested in those closest to them. However, just because there may be a level of difficulty there, it doesn't mean that it can't be done.

Q: You transformed your life. How does that feel?

A: There are times when I get emotional recounting my past. But overall there is a level of happiness not necessarily for the transition but for the fact that I overcame my struggles, I didn't let them consume me; instead I dug deep and pushed through... yeah I did that!

Q: What are you up to now?

A: I am currently a part of the board of directors for March On and am continuing to grow and run my own nonprofit, Operation Heroes Connect. My own activism work and getting more involved in politics keeps me busy. However I would say wearing the mommy hat is what keeps me the busiest.

Q: Tell me a bit about Operation Heroes Connect?

A: Operation Heroes Connect is an organization I started in 2011 a few months

Housing organizations OK to sue Cook Assessor over ex-assessor's 'discriminatory' practices

BY JONATHAN BILYK Cook County Record

Housing assistance organizations have won the right to continue, for now, with a lawsuit against the Cook County Assessor's office for past property tax assessment practices they claim discriminated against black and Hispanic homeowners in Chi-

On Feb. 7, Cook County Circuit Judge Celia Gamrath rejected the county's attempt to pull the plug on the legal action brought by the Brighton Park Neighborhood Council, Logan Square Neighborhood Assoc. and South Suburban Housing Center.

The assessor's office, formerly under Assessor Joseph Berrios, had attempted to argue the organizations should not be allowed to sue because the organizations themselves were not directly harmed by any assessment practices.

The assessor's office also had asserted the lawsuit was "essentially a tax objection device," and so should be tried under the Illinois Property Tax Code.

Judge Gamrath, however, mostly sided with the neighborhood organizations on the question of whether the legal action should

The assessor's office also had asserted the lawsuit was "essentially a tax objection device," and so should be tried under the Illinois Property Tax Code. The judge mostly sided with the neighborhood organizations on the question of whether the legal action should end now.

She dismissed the organizations' attempts to sue using constitutional claims brought under the so-called uniformity clause or the equal protect clause.

However, she said there are no such barriers at this point to allowing the organizations to sue under the Illinois Civil Rights Act and the Fair Housing Act, because they all "claim direct injury from Assessor Berrios' discriminatory practices," which caused them to "investigate such practices and divert valuable resources of time and money away from their advocacy and counseling services."

The lawsuit came on the heels of a series of articles published by the Chicago Tribune and Pro-Publica, which revealed a purported pattern of over-assessing property in poorer neighborhoods and communities, while underassessing homes and commercial properties in wealthier areas.

That series also noted Berrios' system has served to enrich politically connected lawyers specializing in property tax assessment appeals, including firms headed by Illinois House Speaker Michael Madigan and Chicago Alderman Ed Burke. Illinois Gov. JB Pritzker was also accused during last year's gubernatorial campaign of using that system to reduce the property taxes on a home he owns in Chicago.

The accusations against Berrios contributed to a lopsided defeat nearly a year ago in the Democratic Primary election to Fritz Kaegi, who now serves as Cook County Assessor.

In reaction to the ruling, a spokesperson for the Assessor's office said "While this case is ongoing, in allowing two of the claims to proceed the judge believes the allegations are such that plaintiffs should have their day in court. No facts in this case have yet been proven. Significantly, the court acknowledged that with Assessor Kaegi's election, the changes his administration has promised on ethics, transparency and fairness - particularly as it relates to new models that will fairly assess homes in all neighborhoods - may mean that these issues will cease to exist and render the case moot. This is our hope and intention as well."

by the organizations in 2017, the alleged pattern of unequal assessments has meant poorer households - and particularly those in neighborhoods with a predominantly black and Hispanic population – have paid relatively more than they should for their property taxes than property owners in majority white communities. In those communities, the lawsuit asserted, wealthier homeowners can afford to pay lawyers to appeal and reduce their assessments and their tax bills.

The lawsuit pointed to data they said showed Chicago neighborhoods with a white population of 30% or less were over-assessed by nearly 10%, while properties in neighborhoods with a white population of 70% or more were routinely under-assessed, by as much as five percent, on average.

The lawsuit asserted this can mean tax bills for relatively poorer neighborhoods can be hundreds or even thousands of dollars more each year than they should be.

The organizations said the practices caused them to spend money and time on dealing with requests for assistance from economically disadvantaged homeowners and renters, whose housing opportunities were diminished by the higher property tax burdens allegedly caused by the alleged discriminatory practices.

Judge Gamrath said this gave the organizations standing to sue under the ICRA and FHA, which she said are legal "anomalies" which grant far broader abilities to sue to third parties than are otherwise afforded under the U.S. and Illinois constitutions.

She also rejected the assessor's prior argument the legal action should be considered a property tax dispute, noting the organizations have not requested any tax refunds or reductions for any property owners, but merely for reforms and limits imposed on the assessment practices.

"... The Property Tax Code does not appear to provide Plaintiffs with a remedy, let alone an exclusive remedy, that requires dismissal of the Complaint," Gamrath wrote. "... Were this court to hold an equitable action could not be maintained to challenge a tax assessment method solely because the (Property Tax) Code exists, the Assessor could engage in discriminatory tax assessments with impunity."

While allowing the lawsuit to move forward, the judge cautioned difficulties still may lie ahead.

She noted Kaegi has pledged to transform the way the assessor's office operates, which could moot

The judge also said the plaintiff organizations could struggle to "prove the over-assessment of properties in predominantly minority communities has, in fact, caused the unavailability of housing, denial of housing, foreclosure, eviction, or unaffordable tax arrearages, putting housing peril for racial minorities based on race, not on mere economic status."

"Nonetheless, Plaintiffs are entitled to the chance to prove it" under the law, she said.

Q: What was it like to be on the TV reality show "American Grit"?

A: Quite cool for a girl from the South Side! It was definitely a different experience for me, mind you I was going from two decades of being in the military to being on set filming and costarring on a national television show. For me it was surreal, what many don't know is that I was actually still active duty during filming so I definitely felt a little out of my element. However, everyone was awesome... once we got into the routine of things it felt like being around family.

Q: How old are you? Your life's journey is quite a story. If you could sum it up, how would you describe your impressive transformation?

A: I'm a fresh 40 who has taken the bricks thrown at me and somehow managed to build my own badass legacy.

Al Rompza (far right) with the Rompza family.

Saloon keeper Al Rompza is a muscular, athletic guy, the type of man who could hit a black rubber handball so hard it chipped plaster off the front wall of the court at the Irving Park YMCA.

The first time this writer played handball with Al back in 1979, he pounded the ball so severely it exploded into two black rubber half-moons. The remains of his powerful back-wall "kill shot" just laid there on the wooden court floor.

Later, in the locker room, I told Al I managed a softball team named "Solidarity." Rompza, a colorful guy who sports a shaved head, a gold earring, a mustache and goatee, asked why I chose that name.

The answer was that the roster was filled with great Polish-American or Ukrainian-American players with names like Placek, Skowronski, Sortal, Wysocki, Dudek, Oleksy and Gorzynski.

When I told Rompza I was part Bohemian-American, he smiled and immediately offered to sponsor the Solidarity team at Trebes Park out of his family saloon—the Burwood Tap, at Burling and Wrightwood in Lincoln Park.

Later, in the early-1980s, Rompza and partner Jerry Ranalli opened the Ultimate Sports Bar, a saloon on Armitage and Sedgwick in Old Town. That bar sported a real boxing ring as a focal point. They also offered to sponsor Solidarity.

Al's other partner, Jimmy Rittenberg, owned Juke Box Saturday Night on the Lincoln Ave. saloon strip. With Solidarity playing at Oz Park, it made sense to hold the post-game festivities at Juke Box Saturday Night, just around the corner from Oz Park.

After a few beers were guzzled at the Ultimate Sports Bar, Solidarity's players headed to Juke Box Saturday Night, where jitter bug and twist contests were held, and platters were spun by a disc-jockey who sat within the interior of a 1957 Chevy convertible. The players wore tailored silver and navy-blue championship jackets and looked like rock stars.

In 1988, Rompza purchased the old Grover's Oyster Bar on Irving Park Rd., just east of Western Ave. It was renamed Chicago Joe's, the now famous restaurant/saloon and sports bar at 2250 W. Irving Park Rd. in North Center.

Earlier in the 1980s, Solidarity had won a championship in the tough Kosciuszko Park league. In 1985, the team was reunited under the name "Risk" in honor of my oldest son's graffiti tag. Artist Erik DeBat also was a fine softball player, and the fastest runner on the team.

My friendship with Al Rompza proves a relationship with a good softball sponsor can last longer than a good marriage.

In the 1990s, Chicago Joe's was such a softball mecca it once sponsored teams virtually every week night. One of its female bartenders played 16" softball on five teams.

Saloonkeeper Al always will be a roué—a man with a great laugh and a twinkle in his eye. He always bought a round of drinks for steady customers and the softball teams he sponsored.

That's the way it was for 28 years for Risk, my 16" slow pitch softball team that later was renamed "Vintage Risk" because many of the finest players were getting older.

In the 1990s, Chicago Joe's was such a softball mecca it once sponsored teams virtually every week night. One of its female bartenders played 16" softball on five teams.

Chicago Joe's not only sponsored my team, it also changed my life. One evening in the spring of 1992, I met my future wife at the saloon. In 1994, Al Rompza threw an impromptu, but memorable, bachelor party for me that ended with our skinny dipping at 3 a.m. in the swimming pool at his Old Irving Park home.

From 1988 through 2016, the sports-bar restaurant sponsored the Vintage Risk team loaded with a roster of Chicago 16-Inch Hall-of-Fame softball players. In 2009, 2010, 2014, 2015 and 2016, Vintage Risk won championships at Horner Park.

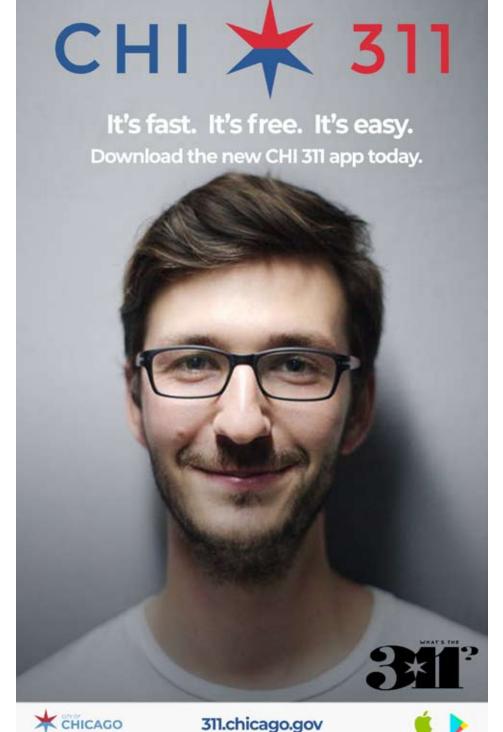

Vintage Risk teammates partied hard, hung signed championship game balls from the ceiling of Chicago Joe's, and held their victory party washing down buckets of hot chicken wings with pitchers of beer in the restaurant's outdoor garden.

"Together we shared great times and a lot of fun memories at Chicago Joe's," recalled Dave Ganir, who along with his late father, Hall-of-Famer Sal Ganir, starred

No endorsement in 48th Ward race

In the Feb. 6 edition of the News-Star newspaper we ran a story on the 48th Ward aldermanic race stating that Ald. Scott Waguespack [32nd] was endorsing a candidate for alderman in that race: David Earl Williams III.

We got that wrong. Ald. Waguespack tells us he has not given any endorsements out in that race and in fact that he "doesn't even know who this guy is."

Inside Publications apologizes for getting this wrong.

It's a Police and Fire Dept. academy

Months ago, I was in a hearing at City Hall listening to some heated discussion about the proposed police and fire training facility. I thought the idea made sense, and didn't have any reason to dislike the proposed location.

Recently I was at a local aldermanic forum. One candidate railed repeatedly and with great passion against a "police academy," using the same argument reported in the penultimate paragraph of your [Feb. 6 & 13] article. I was sure he was talking about the same facility that I'd learned more about in that hearing room, and wondered why he didn't include the Fire Dept. in his vehement speech against this combined-department facility. Did he know the Fire Dept. was included? Or was he misrepresenting its nature in order to rail against the police?

This facility/academy is called a "police academy" in five places including the headline. Only in the final paragraph is it correctly called a "police and fire academy."

I think it was not good writing to omit the fire-training inclusion at this proposed facility/academy.

Somehow, the complete characterization could have been fitted into all the mentions in the body of the story. The first mention would have been "police and fire academy."

I don't know where this candidate got his information about the nature of this academy. I think news stories about it should be careful to call it using its complete characterization, and not just a "police academy." It can be misleading for people who, unlike me, didn't learn a lot about it in that hearing room, and may not read a story about it thoroughly, and might be anti-police already.

Please make sure any future stories about this academy mention in all references that it is proposed to be a police and fire academy.

Webster St. Bridge fix first, Cortland second

Work could take 9-12 months

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Two of the city's oldest bridges

- the ones at Webster and Cortland

- will undergo renovation starting this Spring, after getting a green light from the Army Corps of Engineers and the Coast Guard.

According to Mike Claffey, public affairs director for the Chicago Dept. of Dept. of Transportation, preliminary engineering and design work – followed by actual construction – will start in 2021, with the construction period expected to run nine to 12 months.

Claffey said auto traffic will be rerouted and work on the two bridges will be scheduled to ensure that no two bridges are closed off at the same time. But getting east and west over the river will remain difficult.

He noted that while the Cortland bridge will be closed to auto traffic during construction, but cyclists and pedestrians will still be able to use the bridge except for short periods when it will be necessary to open the bridge.

in continuous service 115 years, despite several major renovations in the late 1940s/50s, mid-1960s, 1995, and again two years ago, Claffey said.

The $15 million job will be funded with both federal, state and city money.

The Cortland Street bridge – which is on the Chicago Landmarks list - is considered historically important because it's one of the earliest "Chicago Style" "swing" bridges allowing for more easily operated unimpeded passage, Claffey said.

He added that the project is expected to provide an estimated 40 years of "service life" for both bridges, and the project will not change the appearance of the bridges.

Asked why the project is being renovated when extensive work was done on the site back in 2015, Claffey said that job was mostly "maintenance" to keep the bridge operating until a wider and "more robust" program would be done.

The cost of that interim job was $1.7 million, he noted.

According to CDOT records, there have been five bridges at the Cortland St. location, starting sometime before 1849. The current Webster Ave. bridge dates

Should Chicago aldermen have side jobs?

BY JIM VAIL

At a recent 43rd Ward forum, one of Ald. Michele Smith's opponents brought up an issue that rankled the veteran lawmaker – having a side job with her biggest campaign donor.

The two-term Lincoln Park alderman had a $72,000 side job, in addition to being an alderman earning $108,000, to help a charitable foundation that bankrolled her campaign.

Lincoln Park is a very expensive neighborhood, and realistically-speaking it is difficult to live in this ward on an alderman's salary. This newspaper itself was founded in Lincoln Park, and yet had to move out - in part - as the cost of 'housing it' in that community was so high.

"I don't have that job anymore and I've given back every penny," Ald. Smith said at last month's forum held at DePaul Univ.

Ald. Smith, like most North Side aldermen this newspaper spoke with, is against aldermen holding side jobs.

The ethics behind side jobs was raised in light of Ald. Ed Burke's recent indictment for shaking down a Burger King operator to drum up business for his law practice on the side. The FBI listened to secret recordings of Burke and House Speaker Mike Madigan, who also has a law practice in addition to being a representative, speaking to potential clients who have property tax issues.

"This is a full-time job, when would he have time to do anything else," a spokesperson for Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] told our newspaper.

Ald. Harry Osterman [48th] said this is his only job and he loves it. Ald. James Cappleman [46th] is also a full-time alderman who works nights and most weekends.

A spokesperson for Ald. Joe Moore [49th] said the Rogers Park legislator does not have a side job, adding that "this is more than a full-time job." Moore has proposed legislation to ban outside employment while serving as a councilman.

Ald. Ameya Pawar [47th] on the other hand has always looked at the alderman's position as a part-time job and has held a fulltime job at Northwestern Univ. in Evanston his entire two terms.

Another North Side alderman who has a side job and therefore may not support any proposed legislation to limit this practice is Ald. Tom Tunney [44th].

Tunney owns the Ann Sather restaurant chain, the main one being east of the Belmont Red Line in Lakeview which he represents. He owned them before he became an alderman. In order to avoid a conflict of interest, he agreed to give up his restaurant's liquor license when he was first named alderman by former Mayor Richard M. Daley. Ann Sather only serves breakfast and lunch.

"Tom is a full-time alderman and gave up the day-to-day operations," Tunney's campaign manager Teresa Tolliver told this newspaper. "Ann Sather is like a family [member] and he's on call."

Many who regularly dine at the famous eatery have seen Tunney slip off his suit jacket and don an apron to bus tables, serve meals or help out in the kitchen. This is no desk job, restaurant work is hard physical labor, the kind of work that builds muscles and reduces body fat. And when a restaurant is busy, it's all hands on deck.

Tolliver said that the alderman believes there should be more accountability and transparency with outside jobs; aldermen who have a conflict of interest in City Hall business should recuse themselves from start to finish.

Critics have stated that it is highly problematic that Ald. Ed Burke [14th] would be in floor debates involving a client he does business with on the side in his ward and then only recuse himself at the last minute when it is time to vote.

Former Ald. Dick Simpson told this newspaper in an interview that conflicts with side jobs have always been an issue in City Hall. He said he had a side job teaching classes while he was serving as alderman from 1971 – 1979.

"The conflict of interest has usually involved land deals," he said. "You need strict laws on this."

Simpson, who now teaches at

UIC, said there should be public financing of elections and an "absolute ban" on companies doing business with the city donating to people who will vote on matters that affect them in City Hall.

Another ethically-challenging way our government works is the revolving door between business and government. Many public officials will leave public positions and shortly thereafter work in the private sector as a lobbyist and use their government experience to help private interests in the offices they once held.

Simpson wrote a book published in 2015 titled "Corrupt Illinois." He said Chicago is still the most corrupt city in the nation, based on federal government reports, a statement few in this town Living out the virtues, he nourished his life for commerce, art, music, literature and high citizenship here on earth.

Generous and forthright; poetic and intelligent; peace loving and wise, Carroll reached deep to make the lives of others more civil, just and dignified. He lived a princely life, always aware of the obligation of nobility. Proud of his Irish roots, he embraced their luck and grace. Aware always of the responsibility such ancient Celtic roots bestowed. His shadow will always loom large on the horizon, like a sail in full wind. John Stephan dedicated his life to helping troubled youths

BY CHARLES MCAVOY

John Stephan, the longtime director of the Logan Square Boys & Girls Club, 3228 W. Palmer St., who dedicated his life to helping troubled teens, died last week after a short battle with pancreatic and esophageal cancer. He was 69. He had just announced his retirement in Dec. 2018 and was diagnosed with cancer over the holidays.

Prior to running the Logan Square Club, he was director of the Kiwanis Boys and Girls Club on Diversey Pkwy. in Lincoln Park.

One of his major accomplishments in Logan Square was negotiating safe passageways between area schools and the clubhouse with local John Stephan gang leaders. The United Peace Coalition Zone was his initiative in which he worked with local anti-violence organizations to broker peace deals with warring gangs in the area surrounding the Club. He helped bring peace to the area between Armitage and Fullerton avenues to the north and west to Sacramento and Kimball avenues to the east and west. Those safe passage ways and routes are still observed and respected today, with area youths coming and going in relative safety.

Stephan worked closely with area businesses, churches and social service agencies to help kids struggling with poverty or those considered at-risk for gun and gang violence. He had put in his retirement notice shortly after hearing that the Boys and Girls Clubs were preparing to sell the Logan Square facility and open a new one in Humboldt Park.

Stephan was raised by his mother, and grew up in the Boys & Girls Club. He loved to be active in all the youth events that he could. Stephan started working for the Boys & Girls Club organization in 1966 in membership registration and then youth outreach.

"He gave his life to troubled youth. I don't really know people like that anymore — people that don't care about their personal finances, their career as much as they do about trying to make a dent in this issue we have with violence and teens," former alderman Rey Colon [35th] told Block Club Chicago.

Colon was a teenager when he met Stephan. The former alderman joined the Logan Square Boys & Girls Club after his brother was shot and killed. At the time, Stephan was the head of the Kiwanis Club in Lincoln Park, which was under the Boys & Girls Club umbrella. Colon said he got to know Stephan through broader leadership training programs they were both involved in. Colon eventually became director of the Stephan was also active in local policing and court advocacy. He worked for the Peer Review Jury of the Chicago Police Dept. and chaired the senior advisory council for the Shakespeare Police District, hosting bingo nights and field trips for hit Tuesday as break-in spree coasts along

Since mid-January, a small group of high-end bicycle retailers from Lincoln Park to Lakeview to Lincoln Square has been repeatedly targeted by burglars who strike between 3 a.m. and 6 a.m. And it seems that nobody can stop them.

Around 4:20 a.m. Tuesday, Cycle Smithy, 2468-1/2 N. Clark St., was burglarized for the second time in

A taxi driver told police that he saw four black males in their 20's wearing dark hoodies emerge from the store with about five bicycles that they then hauled away using two cars: a Chevy Impala and a gray Nissan Sentra. The witness reported that he followed the two vehicles as they turned east on Fullerton, then south on Lake Shore Dr.

Tuesday's break-in comes after three burglars made off with four high-end bikes from Johnny Sprockets, 3140 N. Broadway, at 5:30 a.m. on Feb. 17.

And last Tuesday, the Turin bike shop at 4710 N. Damen was burglarized for the third time since Jan. 12.

On Jan. 28, police issued a community alert warning bike retailers of the emerging pattern after Turin and Cycle Smithy were burglarized within days of each other.

The thieves have been entering stores by breaking through front door glass and even compromising the new metal gates that Turin installed after their second break-in last month.

Burglar took everything except cash from bank near United Center

A man who has made a career out of burglaries and armed robberies is back in jail, accused of breaking into a bank near the United Center to steal virtually everything except cash.

Andrew Lamont Clark, 52, was arrested at 2 a.m. Feb. 10 outside of Wintrust Bank, 2 N. Western Ave.

Police said they responded to an alarm at the bank and found Clark in a nearby alley as he stood next to a shopping cart, blender, helium captured images of Clark entering and leaving the bank twice through its rear door, which had not been properly locked.

Prosecutors charged Clark with one felony count of burglary. Judge Michael Clancy ordered him held in lieu of $3,000 bail, meaning that Clark can go free to await trial by posting a $300 deposit.

State records show that Clark is currently on parole after serving three years of two concurrent 7-year terms for burglaries in 2015. Court records show that Clark was supposed to serve a minimum of 85% of the 7-year sentence—about six years—but he somehow managed to get out after serving only three years.

Before his burglary sentence, Clark was ordered to serve 20 years for armed robbery in 2002, five years for theft from a person in 1999 and seven years for armed robbery in 1996. He was released early and violated his parole with a new felony each time, records show.

Victim beaten by six men in Near North

A 26-year-old man was beaten and stomped on by a group of six men who followed him from a Near North bar following an altercation Feb. 17, police said.

Around 4:40 a.m., the victim and a witness left a bar near the intersection of Dearborn and Elm streets after having a verbal dispute with a group of people, police said. The group followed the pair and began punching and kicking the victim on the street. Multiple 911 callers reported that six men were "stomping" and "kicking" the man who was on the ground.

Police said the victim suffered a possible fracture of his left eye socket in the beating. He was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital where his condition was stabilized, according to a police spokesperson.

Two men who were stopped by police about a block from the incident scene were positively identified by witnesses as being involved in the attack. The men were taken into custody and were being questioned by Area Central detectives today, the spokesperson said.

Rogers Park woman struck by car, vehicle sought

Chicago cops are hoping the public will be able to help them track down a driver who struck and seriously injured a woman in Rogers Park on Thursday.

Images released Saturday evening show a red or maroon 2013-2017 Nissan Altima that struck the 59-year-old woman as she crossed the 2200 block of W. Devon Ave. around 5:30 p.m., according to police. The vehicle, which has a Lyft light on its dashboard and a decal or sticker on the rear passenger's side window, was last seen heading east on Devon. Police expect the vehicle to have damage on the passenger's side mirror.

With hundreds of DUI arrests under his belt, cop retires from Town Hall District

Chicago Police Dept.

It was quite a career for a Chicago cop. Thirty-two years on the job, culminating as the DUI enforcement specialist in the 19th (Town Hall) Police District where he personally took hundreds of drunk drivers off the roads in Lakeview and surrounding areas.

Officer Timothy Walter hit the road in his SUV for one last tour on Feb. 13.

His specialty as a DUI enforcement officer Officer Timothy Walter meant that Walter's personal observations were critical to prosecuting the hundreds (some say thousands) of drunk drivers that he pulled from the roads. As a result, Walter spent more time in court testifying about his personal observations than most cops

Suspect sought in Addison Red Line attack on pregnant woman

WANTED

Surveillance images of a man wanted for attacking a pregnant woman onboard a CTA Red Line train near the Addison station this week were released by Chicago cops Feb. 15.

Police said the 25-year-old victim was sitting on a northbound train at 11:06 p.m. Feb. 13 when a man approached her and started swearing at her. He then walked up to the woman and struck her repeatedly in the head

The man exited the train at Addison. then stepped back on and continued the assault before he again exited and fled the station, police said.

Investigators described the man as being 30-40 years old, black, 5'-9" to 5'-10" tall, and 150-180 lbs. He was wearing a gray wool hat with a brown winter coat, and he carried a green

Don't leave your keys in your car!

It sounds like common sense, but apparently, it's not.

Chicago police just issued a comunity alert that warns drivers not to leave their cars running with the keys in the ignition when the vehicle is unattended.

According to the alert, one thief has stolen three idling cars in Streeterville and River North since Jan. 30.

Each time, the stolen car had been left running and unoccupied during evening hours when the thief emerged from a dark-colored Lexus or SUV and drove away with the idling

In 2016, Walter received more overtime pay than any other city employee: Nearly $148,000.

But that's a very fair value for the man who pulled more drunks off of Western Ave. (one of his favorite haunts) and Irving Park Rd. (another favorite) each week than most cops will see in a career.

Woman mugged in Boystown

A woman was pushed to the ground and robbed as she headed home from work in the Boystown neighborhood the morning of Feb. 17, according to police.

The victim was walking in the 800 block of W. Cornelia around 2:20 a.m. when two men pushed her down and stole a maroon backpack sling bag containing knives that she uses for as a chef. Both offenders then fled northbound on Reta Ave.

The woman remembered that the men were black and wore ski masks with hoodies.

"Flyer boy" charged with stealing phones from River North restaurant customers

A five-time convicted felon who's on parole for burglary has been charged with stealing cell phones from River North restaurant customers while posing as a charitable "flyer boy." Larry Hudson, 24, immediately pleaded guilty to one count of theft of lost or mislaid property and was sentenced to two days time served by Judge Donald Panarese Jr.

On Feb. 16, police were called to a restaurant in the 800 block of N. Wells by a witness who reported that the man who recently stole a phone from a customer in the eatery had returned. The man was gone by the time police arrived, but officers soon found a white Toyota nearby that had recently been used in a series of phone thefts from downtown restau-

While police watched the vehicle, Hudson emerged from another restaurant and officers conducted a street stop.

According to a police report, cops found a bag containing six cellphones in the Toyota near where Hudson was sitting. He was taken into custody and charged.

Police confiscated a stack of charitable solicitation hand-outs for "Chicago Bucket Boys" from Hudson. Similar flyers had been used to distract restaurant patrons by phone thieves in the area, according to a community alert that was issued one day before Hudson's arrest.

In the alert, police said a man had been entering restaurants to solicit diners with charitable flyers. The paperwork would then be used as a distraction while the offender stole the victim's phone from their tabletop, according to police.

Nine cases reported since Jan. 21 were listed in the alert with most incidents being reported in River

State records show that Hudson was paroled in Dec. 2018 after serving about half of a four-year sentence for burglary. He was previously sent to prison for two years in 2014 for a pair of theft convictions and 3-1/2 years for two robberies in 2012.

Downtown bank robber may have struck for third time

WANTED

The man who robbed a Loop bank this week may be responsible for two other bank hold-ups since mid-January.

At 12:48 p.m. Feb 11, a man walked into TCF Bank at 29 E. Madison and announced a robbery at a teller window. After collecting cash, the man fled north to Washington St. and then turned eastbound, according to witnesses.

Police said the robber is male, black, in his 50's, 5'-8" tall, 200 lbs, and is missing a front tooth.

The robber seen in surveillance images taken during Monday's heist closely resembles the man who is being sought for robbing the Chase Bank at 10 S. Dearborn at 1:09 p.m. on Jan. 16 and the Lakeside Bank at 1350 S. Michigan at 3:47 p.m. on Jan.

The FBI has listed the two men separately on its bank robber tracking site.

A reward of up to $1,000 is being offered for information that leads directly to the arrest of the suspect or suspects. The FBI's Chicago Field Office may be contacted at 312-421-

State may soon let you grow pot at home

Tobacco bad; pot good -Chicago could have 'marijuana cafes' for pot, not tobacco

BY REBECCA ANZEL AND PETER HANCOCK Capitol News Illinois

Attention at the Statehouse is expected to begin focusing on one of Gov. J.B. Pritzker's top priorities — legalizing recreational marijuana.

Two key North Side Democratic law-makers, Sen. Heather Steans and Rep. Kelly Cassidy, have met with interested groups around Illinois and are expected to introduce legislation soon.

Meanwhile, though, Rep. Carol Ammons, a Democrat from Urbana, has already introduced a bill that is drawing attention. It would open the door to a much more expansive legal pot industry than most others have envisioned.

Ammons' bill, the "Cannabis Legalization Equity Act," would allow anyone 21 or older with valid identification to purchase or sell marijuana. Driving under the influence of the drug would still be illegal, and the legislation makes specific mention that only "legitimate, taxpaying business people" would be permitted to sell cannabis.

Illinoisans, under the measure, could possess as many as 224 grams, or roughly half a pound, of marijuana at a time. It would also allow individuals to grow as many as 24 plants in their own homes for personal consumption, and it would provide for the licensing of cultivation facilities and retail dispensaries, and would allow for the creation of on-site consumption areas for customers to smoke or swallow the drug, like the marijuana cafes in Amsterdam.

Ammons did not respond to requests for comment. Her measure includes language, though, indicating its purpose would be to allow "law enforcement to focus on violent and property crimes, generating revenue for education and other public purposes, and individual freedom."

"We like it. We think that that's more in line with how we treat alcohol," said Dan Linn, who lobbies for the Illinois chapter of NORML – the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws. "We also think it would be good for consumers to be able to cultivate their own cannabis, as well as to have a cap on the licensing fees for the new businesses that would be created by that legislation."

The standard practice for lawmakers is to work out details behind closed doors with lobbyists and administration officials before putting a proposal into bill form or holding public hearings.

Ammons' proposal, which has not yet been assigned to a committee, includes a civil penalty, not a criminal one, of $200 to $400 for minors who attempt to buy marijuana illegally. Steans and Cassidy are still negotiating with interested parties, the governor's office and law enforcement, and reportedly plan to introduce a bill by April. But first Steans and Cassidy say they plan to hold town hall meetings on the issue before trying to move the bill.

The major difference between the two bills is that Steans and Cassidy's proposal would limit residents to five home-grown plants, rather than 24, and does not allow for marijuana to be consumed in retail locations.

Meanwhile, legalization also means that many local employers will need to re-examine their drug-testing policies to determine what obligations they have to make accommodations for legal marijuana use? There is also the question of what legal issues could arise by asking employees if they're using marijuana, or how the use of legal marijuana impact an employee's rights under the Americans with Disabilities Act?

Rep. Carol Ammons' bill, the "Cannabis Legalization Equity Act," would allow anyone 21 or older with valid identification to purchase or sell marijuana. Driving under the influence of the drug would still be illegal, and the legislation makes specific mention that only "legitimate, taxpaying business people" would be permitted to sell cannabis.

Also in the bill is a requirement that at least 51% of the licenses for cultivating facilities and retail cannabis stores be issued, "in communities disproportionately harmed by the war on drugs," which the bill defines as census tracts in which more than half the population is African-American, Native American, Hispanic or Latino.

The bill also would authorize medical researchers to use cannabis in studies, as long as the participants are at least 21 years old

Revenue for the state would be generated by a 10% excise tax on the sale or transfer of marijuana from a cultivating facility to a retail store, but there would be no taxes on home-grown pot. Half of that tax money would be paid into the state's main checking account, while 30% would go to the Common School Fund.

Smaller percentages of the revenue would be distributed to various state retirement systems; the Dept. of Human Services to fund treatment programs for tobacco, alcohol and cannabis abuse; and to the Dept. of State police for hiring and training drug recognition efforts.

There is no official estimate of how much revenue the bill would generate.

Linn said NORML will have a lobbying day at the Statehouse on Feb. 20, the same day Pritzker is scheduled to give his budget address to the Legislature. And with Pritzker's backing of legalization, Linn said he thinks there is a good chance something will pass this year.

"I think there's a strong push to make it happen as quickly as possible so that we can create these jobs and bring in this needed revenue," he said.

Still, any effort toward legalization is certain to meet resistance. The Illinois Catholic Conference recently announced its opposition to legalization. Law enforcement groups including the Chicago Crime Commission and the Illinois Assoc. of Chiefs of Police have also said they will oppose such a measure, as has the Drug Free America Foundation.

Police union to seek special prosecutor when county won't prosecute anti-cop crimes

The labor union that represents Chicago's beat cops is striking back at what it believes is a failure of Cook County State's Attorney Kim Foxx to prosecute crimes committed against officers in

Leaders of FOP Lodge #7 told Foxx in a letter this week that the union will file a motion for a special prosecutor "in each and every case where you refuse, drop, or diminish charges when our members are the victims."

Among the State's Attorney's decisions that the union said demonstrate "a disregard for the safety of police officers or an apparent hostility toward them" was a dismissal of charges against an HIV-positive individual who bit a cop at a demonstration; a reduction in charges from felony to misdemeanor for a driver who "recklessly crossed multiple lanes of traffic" to strike and kill an off-duty officer; and a failure to approve felony charges against a man who allegedly issued death threats against police officers, police families, and public officials during the trial of Jason Van Dyke, the former Chicago cop who was convicted of murdering Laguan McDonald.

"The failure to prosecute these cases places our members in greater danger because it sends a message to the community that you can resist arrest and fight with police officers," union leaders Kevin Graham, Pat Murray, Martin Preib, and Bob Bartlett said in the letter.

The union cites a state law that allows judges the court find that the State's Attorney "is sick, absent, or unable to fulfill his or her duties."

Federal authorities will be asked to intervene where the union believes Foxx has failed to prosecute persons accused of attacking or threatening police officers, the letter said.

The letter also served as a Freedom of Information Act request for "the names of all Chicago Police officers who have been identified as victims of a crime and have had their case presented to your felony review unit" so the union "can give the reviewing court an understanding of the breadth of this problem."

In addition to accusing Foxx of failing to prosecute crimes against cops, the union also argued that Foxx "has failed time and time again to resist the claims of the wrongful conviction attorney's bar." Foxx's top aide "almost enjoyed dismissing all charges against Gabriel Solache and Arturo Reyes... for the 1998 stabbing death of a young couple and then kidnapping their children."

The Sun-Times reported that First Assistant State's Attorney Eric Sussman said, "there is no doubt in my mind, or the mind of anyone who has worked on this case, that Mr. Solache and Mr. Reyes are guilty of these crimes." Nonetheless, Foxx's office dropped the charges in the "gruesome double-murder" because it believed the original prosecution was based on a false confes-

On parol for shooting man, felon drops gun while fleeing traffic stop

A man who was recently paroled after serving 12 years in prison for shooting someone is back in jail, accused of dropping a handgun during a traffic stop in Old Town on Sunday evening.

An officer who was working alone pulled Gaston Tucker, 32, over in the 1300 block of N. Sedgwick at Evergreen around 7 p.m. for a traffic infraction, according to police and dispatch records. During the stop, Tucker emerged from the car, dropped a loaded handgun, and then ran from the scene.

About four hours later, Tucker was arrested more than five miles away in the 2000 block of N. Kostner "after being identified as the offender that fled" from the stop, according to a CPD statement. Police did not say how they found him.

Tucker was paroled on Dec. 10 after serving nearly 12 years of a 13-year prison sentence for shooting a man in 2007.

Prosecutors charged him with one felony count of unlawful use of a weapon by a felon.

Prior to his latest prison sentence, Tucker was sent to prison for one year in 2004 for narcotics

Catalytic converter thieves slip away from cops

A crew of bold daytime catalytic converter thieves slipped away from cops on the North Side this weekend after witnesses reported seeing the criminals sawing off car parts in Uptown and Lakeview.

Thieves love stealing catalytic converters from the underbelly of cars because the parts contain expensive metals including platinum and palladium that can demand payments of $100 to $200 at scrap yards.

The theft crews usually work in the dead of night, but not this time.

At 9:45 a.m. Feb. 17, several witnesses called 911 to report seeing two men sawing catalytic converters off of two SUVs in a parking lot on the 4100 block of N. Clarendon.

The witnesses said the men were wearing ski masks and went from one car to the other, sawing off pieces and throwing them into the back

Police said the thieves were gone before officers arrived. But just 20 minutes later, more 911 calls came in. This time, witnesses reported two men sawing off catalytic converters from cars near the intersection of Grace and Fremont streets in Lakeview.

Once again, the men had sped off before cops arrived, but officers soon located the car as it entered Lake Shore Dr. at Belmont Ave. Officers trailed the car without activating their lights all the way to Michigan Ave. There, the suspects drove around the block and re-entered LSD northbound and exited at Fullerton Ave. Police lost track of the car as it fled west on Fullerton at a high rate of speed. Witnesses told officers that the car went north on Clark, east on Wrightwood, then back south on Lakeview Ave. before likely returning to the drive.

The vehicle is a gray Pontiac, possibly a Grand Prix, with tinted windows.

But those fond victory celebrations and bonded softball camaraderie are long gone. Rompza and his family have listed the property, which consists of the commercial spaces, six rental apartments and a parking lot spread over four city lots, for $2.4 million, according to Realtor Nicholas Jakubco of Jakubco Development, Inc.

The restaurant will continue to operate until the property sells, Jakubco said. The highest and best use for the site likely is for redevelopment as a mixed-use condominium or rental apartment project. "The sellers also would antiques and historic Chicago memorabilia."

During the baseball season, Chicago Joe's attracted a large clientele of Chicago Cubs' fans. Back in the day, such sports celebrities as the late former White Sox star Minnie Minoso and professional Cubs' cheerleader Ronnie (Woo-Woo) Wickers were regulars.

The walls and ceilings at Chicago Joe's are covered with signature baseball bats, batting helmets, vintage hockey sticks, old boxing gloves, signed championship softballs, historic sporting event tickets, and a collection of historic black-and-white photos of Windy City sports palaces—from Comiskey Park and Wrigley Field to the original Soldier Field.

There's also a collection of vintage Chicago politician and sports celebrity photos, including Mayor Richard J. Daley, and Chicago Bears Hall-of-Fame tight end Mike Ditka.

Let's hope some smart real estate investors keep this softball saloon and Chicago sports museum alive for a few more years. Do we really need more condos and apartments in the North Center neighborhood?

The Chicago presentation of Dimensions of Citizenship: Architecture and Belonging from the Body to the Cosmos – a reinstallation of the official U.S. Pavilion at the 16th International Architecture Exhibition of the Venice Biennale - will open Thursday, Dimensions of Citizenship will be on view for the first time in the United States at Wrightwood 659, a new art space located at 659 W. Wrightwood Ave.

Devoted to exploring the relationships between citizenship, architecture, and design, Dimensions of Citizenship presents seven immersive installations, each created by a transdisciplinary team of artists, architects, and designers, as well as suite of film and video works by an international group of filmmakers. Related programming will be an-

that most of them do put in more than 40 hours a week.

Ald. Pat O'Connor [40th] - who has no outside job - told Chicago Tonight that he does not support a ban on outside employment for aldermen. But others have questioned O'Connor because his wife is a real estate agent and represents clients in her husband's ward and has sold property after her husband authorized zoning changes. The use of a spouse to work as a liaison in the private sector is also a frequent practice at all levels of government from Washington D.C. on down.

The Democrat machine former Mayor Richard J. Daley helped build has been replaced by a global city machine, he said.

"I tried to pass all types of reform," said Simpson, noting one bill he proposed to reform how City Council does business was defeated 44-4.

Simpson has endorsed 43rd ward candidate Derek Lindblom who called out Ald. Smith and

Ald. Smith's side job with the Helen Coburn Meier & Tim

Meier Charitable Foundation for the Arts was an issue in the 2015 election. The Meiers - who donated $373,000 to Smith's fund over nine years - told the Tribune in 2015 that they don't do business with the city and Smith said the business relationship resulted from an established friendship.

Her challenger in 2015 claimed it showed Ald. Smith was not a "full-time alderman."

The alderman said she in fact did work 60 hours a week, and she was not a lobbyist.

North Side resident Ken Nordine, American voice-over, poet, recording artist dies at 98

You can try like a fool To be what you're not The island you get Is the island you got

Island

BY CHARLES MCAVOY

The great baritone voice has been silenced.

Ken Nordine died Saturday, Feb. 16.

Born April 13, 1920 to Theresia and Nore S. Nordine in Cherokee, Iowa, the family later moved to Chicago where Nor-dine attended Lane Tech High School and the Univ. of Chicago. Growing up he lived near Wrigley Field, and in 1954 he married his wife, Beryl Vaughan, and they raised three sons.

It was in the 1940s that Nordine started working in radio, doing commercial voice overs and movie trailers.

Nordine then started performing his spoken-word poetry in a nightclub on Wilson Ave. in 1956. He is one of the few who actually created the new genre, Word Jazz, and started recording albums with his Word Jazz in 1957 during the height of the Beat era. Nordine was also well known for his radio show "Word Jazz" on WBEZ, 91.5 FM.

In the mid-60s Nordine was asked to produce a series of radio spots for the Fuller Paint Co., he did 10 commercials, each playfully extolling one of the colors in the spectrum. "The Fuller Paint Company invites you to stare with your ears at yellow."

Much to everyone's surprise, people called in and asked to hear the commercials again, but they couldn't because they were commercials.

Fuller Paint won an International Broadcast Award for that campaign and Nordine was inspired to record the album "Colors."

In the 1970s Nordine was the voice of Levi's blue jeans, voice coach for Linda Blair in The Exorcist, the voice of Mr. God opposite Chicago native Laurie Anderson's Mrs. God. He called a barking dog a "dog poet" and was voice of the Chicago Blackhawks "Cold Steel on Ice" commercials.

His career included 15 albums, a DVD, multitudes of compilations, and guest appearances.

"The first time I saw Ken Nordine perform was March, 1993, during the second set of the Grateful Dead at Rosemont Horizon. The band was playing "Space" - a free form, jazzy, jammy musical interlude and a man walked on stage and started doing Word Jazz," said Uptown resident Sheila Swann, who later worked for him.

"He performed Flibberty Jib and Island. Between those two poems Nordine's deep, resonant, smooth voice asked, "How are things in your town?" The crowd just roared with delight," said Swann.

"It's great being here with you, Jerry [Garcia] and the greatest band in the entire universe," Nordine said.

Years later Nordine would become one of Swann's design clients. "I worked with him on "The Eye Is Never Filled" DVD cover and insert project," she said.

"The first time he called me, hearing that voice on the other end of the phone, I almost fell off of my chair. He was lovely, I was working with a national treasure. How could I have been so lucky as to work with him? He would call, and in his deep, soothing voice say "This is your wake up call.""

Nordine, an Edgewater resident since the 1950s, for a short while performed his word jazz at the Offbeat Room, 1037 W. Granville.

"Mother and Son," an exhibit by Nordine at the Swedish American Museum in 2007 featured sculptures by his mother along with his own book "Colors," which described in poem each color.

Nordine was honored by the Swedish American Museum at their annual gala in 2013.

The Grammy nominated artist also recorded over 40 short trailers for the Chicago International Film Festival.

Good News?

There may be some good news coming, at least for residents of the Near North Side, River North, the Mag Mile, and the southern end of Lincoln Park.

Ald. Michele Smith [43rd] recently ran into Cook County State's Attorney Kim Foxx at an event and the alderman took the opportunity to talk about repeat offenders, especially juveniles, according to a staff member in Smith's office.

The result of that conversation is "a breakthrough in our police district's relationship with the State's Attorney that should lower crime in our Ward," Ald. Smith told constituents in a recent email.

Under a new arrangement, the 18th District commander will have direct access to the first deputy state's attorney responsible for the downtown area, Smith's staffer said.

The commander will be able to discuss offender histories in greater detail, explain arrestees' history in the community and share information about previous offenses, according to Smith.

The commander-prosecutor arrangement is "common on the South and West Sides," Smith's staffer said. But the 18th District is the first North Side police district to roll out the arrangement, he said.

"Our issues with repeat offenders have stymied efforts to improve public safety," Ald. Smith said. "With a more responsive State's Attorney, we are hopeful progress will be made."
