Riverfront City maintenance facility on North Side for sale

The site the city is putting up for sale is located within the North Branch Industrial Corridor, which requires public review of any future uses.

“Generational” development opportunity for 18-acre site

BY PETER VON BUOL

Eighteen acres of prime riverfront real estate owned by the city of Chicago are being offered for sale as “a generational opportunity” as the city seeks to relocate its maintenance facilities to a city-owned property in Englewood.

The property, located at 1685 N. Throop, is located just north of the parking lot of The Home Depot store at 1232 W. North Ave. Currently, the site also includes an existing 410,000 square foot industrial facility directly along the North Branch of the Chicago River.

The site is located within the North Branch Industrial Corridor, which requires public review of future uses and the site itself is currently zoned as a Planned Manufacturing-District 2 (Elston). The city has for years used it as a heavy equipment storage and maintenance facility, a fuel depot, and recycling center among other uses.

According to information posted by Cushman and Wakefield, the commercial real estate brokerage company hired by the city to sell the property, a potential purchaser will have the potential to capitalize on a rapidly changing real-estate market. Numerous real estate insiders have told this newspaper the “generational opportunity”

City will explore ideas to extend Riverwalk

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

Imagine taking the Chicago Riverwalk from Lake St. to Chinatown. Mayor Rahm Emanuel can, and says architectural firms will soon be asked to submit proposals.

Speaking March 13 at Gleacher Center in Streeterville, Emanuel said the firms will compete to re-imagine the Riverwalk, extending it into neighborhoods along the south branch of the river.

“The goal at the end of the day is to create a public space in the truest sense of ‘public,’ where people of different walks of life, different backgrounds, different ethnicities, different income levels, all have a shared experience,” said Emanuel. “That is how you bring a city together.”

Chicago Urban River Edges Idea Lab, funded with $110,000 from Richard H. Driehaus Foundation and Comcast, will work with the architects to develop designs for an extended Riverwalk and other ideas along the Chicago River.

Participating will be Chicago-based companies Perkins + Will, Ross Barney Architects, Site Design Group Ltd., Skidmore Owings & Merrill LLP, and Studio Gang, along with New York firms James Corner Field Operations and SWA, Boston-based Sasaki, and David Adjaye Associates, Mayor Emanuel found time March 13 to participate in a panel discussion at 1871 about the tech industry. The discussion, focused on immigration challenges facing the tech industry, was moderated by 1871 CEO Howard Tullman (standing at right).

based in London.

“Chicago’s rivers are an amazing landscape and waterscape that can connect our neighborhoods, enliven our civic life, and provide solace, all at the same time,” said Carol Ross Barney, whose firm, Ross Barney Architects, was the lead design architect of the Chicago Riverwalk.

Ideas from the architectural firms are due in June. They will be displayed at public locations for review and comment.

Emanuel made his remarks at a panel discussion hosted by Chicago Council on Global Affairs.

Mayors discuss how to protect and profit from their waterways

At least 18 mayors from around the world, including Emanuel, participated in Monday’s all-day forum – intended, says the mayor’s office, to “foster an international conversation about the future of urban waterways,” whether they are rivers, lakes, seas, or oceans.

The forum was co-hosted by Emanuel and Anne Hidalgo, the mayor of Paris. It was held mainly at River Point, the new 52-story office building north of Lake Street.

Discussions included environmental protection of waterways, with input from Chicago architect Jeanne Gang, and leveraging waterways for economic opportunity. Chicago Council on Global Affairs will summarize the discussions and their findings in a report that will be made public this spring.

Riverfront art project will light up Merchandise Mart

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

At least part of an elaborate nighttime riverfront lighting project announced more than two years ago will debut next year, according to Mayor Rahm Emanuel.

The New York architectural firm that designed new interiors at Merchandise Mart is currently studying how to project art onto the south side of the River North landmark.

It would be a canvas nearly three acres in size.

A+I Architects is working with San Francisco-based Obscura Digital, which has done this at Sydney Opera House, St. Peter’s Basilica, and Empire State Building.

The owner of Merchandise Mart, Vornado Realty Trust, says this would be the first time that art has been projected at this scale in Chicago.

Mayor Emanuel says the privately-funded project “will bring new energy to the Chicago River while strengthening our city’s reputation for iconic public art.”

In 2014, the city requested proposals for a “city-wide lighting framework” similar to this project. 16 proposals were received and narrowed down to four finalists but no final decision was ever announced.

Prime riverfront property near Lathrop now slated for homes

American Linen Supply Co. site has won city approval to allow for the construction of 18 single-family homes.

BY PETER VON BUOL

A 1.9 acre site alongside the North Branch of the Chicago River at 2221 W. Oakdale Ave. at Diversey, has been listed for sale at $5.2 million. Until recently, the site had been a commercial laundry operation and its current owner, the Salt Lake City-based ALSCO (formerly known as the American Linen Supply Co.) had won city approval to allow for the construction of 18 single-family homes.

While the site’s current owner has won approval from the city’s Dept. of Planning and Development to allow for the construction of 18 single-family homes, ALS-CO is not planning to redevelop the site.

What is clear is that former industrial property located along the river on the North Side will be disappearing very quickly now that the city has changed course on using zoning to reserve the river for industrial uses.

“They are selling the site, which has riverfront footage, as a single piece. It is not their intent to sell the 18 homes. This parcel could even be sold to a single buyer who

The president of the United States must have some brains

By Thomas J. O’Gorman

How smart are you? Do you speak another language? Can you write a poem? Paint a landscape? Can you cook escargot? Can you bake a souffle? Can you distinguish between Burgundy and Chianti? Can you read ancient Greek? Can you thread a needle?

We all know that John Fitzgerald Kennedy beat Richard Milhouse Nixon for the presidency in 1960, thanks to some political muscle here in Chicago. But could Kennedy best Nixon in a poker game on his own?

Could Benjamin Harrison sing better than George Herbert Walker Bush?

Could Abe Lincoln read a map?

Could Harry S. Truman beat William Jefferson Clinton in a game of Trivial Pursuit?

Thomas Jefferson

Why did British Prime Minister Winston Churchill find Franklin Delano Roosevelt so fascinating?

Why was Franklin Delano Roosevelt able to successfully defeat German Dictator Adolph Hitler?

Why did Theodore Roosevelt have such a strange sounding vocabulary when he spoke?

Why did so many American presidents have so many extramarital affairs?

From where did most United States presidents come to the presidency? Politics? Business? Academe?

Of all the American presidents, which one would you most like to sit next to at dinner?

Is there really one president who is the most intelligent of all?

If recent American presidential history is anything to go by, it seems that the American people may disagree about many aspects of the presidency. But one thing we can all agree on is that it is critical that the president of the United States should have some brains.

While it doesn’t necessarily guarantee success having some intelligence is a vital part of the president’s job description. We all know that IQs are not the whole story. But some brains assist in the intelligence department and are most critical for the chief executive. Have our most effective presidents been our most intelligent?

Recently I read some things on the subject and find them worth sharing. “Inside Government,” a political website, decided to rank and investigate the top 27 presidents (not Obama) and rank them according to their IQ. They used data collected at the University of California Davis by Professor Dean Simonton. Back in 2006 Simonton used data put together using an estimation of the intelligence of U.S. Presidents. He used what he referred to as “historiometric” methods to compute a uniformity of intelligence of our presidents.

Information from presidential writings and biographies was analyzed from events, actions and narratives that would indicate higher intelligence. Of the 27 presidents under consideration 8 never attended university or left their studies unfinished.

U.S. Presidents display their intelligence, or lack thereof, on a regular basis. It seems to me that they are highly intelligent not because of what schools they attended or high grades they received. Or who mentored them along the way. They came already gifted, open to what school and mentors could do in them.

Largely they were people of their times. Men capable of engaging the crisis or national calamity in front of them. They stood at the ready armed with intelligence and an openness to a rational solution, whether that meant standing up to King George III, Adolph Hitler or the Russians.

Some issues came looking for them, larger than life, complicated and controversial. With circumstances calling forth great reason and thoughtful analysis. Civil War, Manifest Destiny, global alliances, racial equality in America, climbing out of the economic Depression of the 1930s, defense of the nation and nuclear proliferation are just some of the issues that needed fresh approaches in the presidency.

Life and experience; politics and diplomacy; values, ethics, moral absolutes and patriotism are just some of the elements that polish the situation. But only the individual can bring the formula for reasoned accord and the intelligent application of wisdom or the frightening roll of the dice. Even a casual glance at the actions of U.S. presidents provides us with the details that demonstrate wide wisdom at work or at least narrow common sense.

The list, of course, is not definitive, but it does provide a critical view as to which presidents were gifted intellectually. Here they are:

27. George Herbert Walker Bush, 41st president, IQ 130.1. A member of the Republican Party and a graduate of Yale. A successful business man, congressman, Director of the Central Intelligence Agency and World War II air hero.

26. William McKinley, 25th president, IQ 130.2. Assassinated 6 months into his second term, was a member of the Republican Party.

25. James Knox Polk, 11th president, IQ 130.2. Served one term. He was a member of the Republican Party and he enlarged the size of the nation.

24. Grover Cleveland, 22nd president, IQ 130.9. Served one term and belonged to the Democratic Party. While he did not go to college, he did attend law school.

23. Richard Milhouse Nixon, 37th president, IQ 131.0. Ultimately forced to resign from office, but had some remarkable successful foreign policy initiatives, especially with China. Two-time Vice President. Pardoned by President Ford.

22. Dwight David Eisenhower, 34th president, IQ 131.9. Supreme Allied Commander in World War II, also served as President of Columbia University before his presidency in 1952.

21. Benjamin Harrison, 23rd president, IQ 132.2. A successful attorney before the White House.

20. George Washington, 1st president, IQ 132.5. No college degree. Successful military commander and political mind.

19. Martin Van Buren, 8th president. IQ 133.4. A Democrat. Began reading law at 14 and admitted to the bar at 21. A measured political mind.

18. Rutherford B. Hayes, 19th president. IQ 133.9. A Republican who attempted with difficulty to unify the nation following the Civil War and the presidency of Ulysses S. Grant.

John F. Kennedy

17. William Henry Harrison, 9th president. IQ 133.9. Member of the Whig Party. IQ 133.9. In office 39 days, dying of pneumonia. In his earlier life he was a fabled military commander.

16. Franklin Pierce, 14th president. IQ 134.8. A graduate of Bowdoin College. A Democrat. His failure to address the issue of slavery led the way to Civil War.

15. Miller Fillmore, 15th president. IQ 136.0. Graduate of Buffalo College. Failed in addressing the critical importance of the slavery issue.

14. John Tyler, 10th president. IQ 136.2. Member of the Whig Party. Career includes the office of Governor, U.S. Representative and U.S. Senate.

13. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, 32nd president. IQ 139.6. A Democrat. Expansive influence on the

'Twas the luck of the Irish

Northside couple wins Irish wedding contest

When Megan White first met Sean O'Hehir in elementary school at St. Robert Bellarmine at Lawrence and Austin, little did she know that he one day would become her husband.

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

"Our families knew each other, I was in his brother's grade," recalled White, 32, a pre-school and kindergarten teacher at Brickton, a Montessori school on the Northwest side. "Ten years ago, our groups of friends intertwined, and we became friends."

Friendship blossomed into love, and for the last seven years, White and her boyfriend Sean—who works at Driesilker, an HVAC motor company in the West Loop—had been dating. That is, until White's sister entered them into a free Irish wedding contest sponsored by Chief O'Neill's Pub, 3471 N. Elston Ave.

In celebration of St. Paddy's Day, the pub ran a contest titled, "Who wants to win an Irish wedding?" In 500 words or less, those entering had to describe why an Irish wedding would be a dream come true.

The winning entry was written by Katlin White, the sister of the bride.

"My sister is five years older than me and has been planning her wedding since I can remember, and growing up with grandparents born in Ireland, an Irish wedding is exactly what she planned," wrote Katlin White.

"When Megan met Sean she thought that wedding was in her immediate future. Sean getting called for the Chicago Fire Department was a dream come true," she continued in her letter. "My sister, a preschool teacher, could finally relax a little and stop working her summers to make ends meet. But four days into the academy, Sean suffered an injury, causing him to not be able to continue."

"This changed everything," White said in her entry. "Their picture perfect life they had planned was now no longer within reach. Left with medical bills and trying to get back to work, an engagement was put on the back burner."

"I know they would never ask for help, but I also know that they want to be married and start a family. My sister wants a big Irish family more than anything. And having their wedding at Chief O'Neill's would be a dream come true for my Grandma and the rest of our family."

Megan White had no clue that her sister had entered the contest until less than a week before they received the Tuesday phone call that the following Tuesday, March 7, would be their wedding day. As the luck of the Irish would have it, White had that Friday off, and she went dress shopping. The first one she tried on at Macy's is the one she was married in.

Megan White and Sean O'Hehir recently became Mr. and Mrs. thanks to Chief O'Neill's Pub.

"They rush altered it and I picked it up Sunday," said White. "Everything just fell into place."

"It was literally like a dream come true," said White. "The fact that we pulled it together in a week...it was a whirlwind. Friends and family came in a few days notice. It was amazing."

"We got to have a wedding that we would never do ourselves."

Between the now newly married couple, there are four grandparents born and raised in Ireland, "so it's really kind of a cool way for them to enjoy the wedding," said White.

Chief O'Neill's owners Siobhan and Brendan McKinney furnished the venue, judge, photographer, music, flowers, and a sit down wedding dinner for 10 of the bride and groom's family and closest friends, who danced the night away to the My Irish Wedding Music Band.

Siobhan McKinney said she and her husband saw the chance to "help a couple make their dreams come true."

"This couple had endured some difficult times early in their relationship, resulting in them having to postpone their wedding indefinitely," she said. "So the opportunity for us to impact their life in such a positive way was so rewarding."

"It was a wonderful opportunity for us to help this beautiful couple living in our community realize their dream," said McKinney.

Everything that was supplied was "beautiful," said White.

"It was way more than we thought it was going to be," she said. "The room was perfect, the flowers...it was a dream wedding."

Are condo and HOA bank deposits fully insured by Uncle Sam?

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

Condominiums and homeowners associations (HOAs) currently have an estimated $50 billion on deposit nationwide in banks to stash operating account and reserve funds, experts say.

Is it possible that hundreds of millions of dollars on deposit by the estimated 50,000 condo associations and HOAs in Illinois could be at risk if these accounts are not protected by Uncle Sam—the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC)?

“My homeowners association bank accounts are titled in the name of the management company and my HOA,” noted John Sellers, a banker, consumer advocate and HOA resident. “I can’t figure out if the management company is commingling the money with other accounts. If my HOA board of directors are not signers on the bank account, is the money really ours?”

A concerned homeowner recently wrote to the FDIC and asked for clarification: “Management companies hold huge assets from many, many HOAs with some accounts exceeding $1 million. If something happened to the management company that caused my HOA to lose our financial assets would FDIC insurance step in and reimburse the HOA up to the limit of $250,000? Or would the FDIC reimburse the management company?”

In reply, was the following FDIC memorandum: “The FDIC only protects depositors of insured banks located in the U.S. against loss of their deposits if an FDIC-insured depository institution

“The FDIC would not be involved in the event something happened to the management company for your HOA that caused your HOA to lose its financial assets. The FDIC insures deposits owned by a homeowners’ association at one insured bank up to $250,000 in total, not $250,000 for each member of the association.”

The FDIC told the homeowner that it is possible his management company may be acting as an agent for multiple HOAs, with the funds of the HOAs commingled in one account at a bank. The management company would be holding the funds in a fiduciary capacity for the HOAs at the bank.

Some 49.9% of respondents reported that they were “very dissatisfied” with HOA and condo living, and 21% said they are “somewhat dissatisfied.” Fully 65.7% are “very dissatisfied” and 15% are “dissatisfied” because of transparency and communication issues.

“If the management company is complying with the FDIC’s rules for pass-through deposit insurance coverage, then each HOA the company is holding funds for in the commingled account would have up to $250,000 of deposit insurance coverage at that bank,” explained the FDIC memorandum.

A management company holding funds as an agent on behalf of multiple HOAs would be another example of a fiduciary relationship, the FDIC said. And, the fiduciary nature of the account must be disclosed in the bank’s deposit account records.” For example, listing “Jane Doe as Custodian for Susie Doe,” or “First Real Estate Title Company, Client Escrow Account.”

“The name and ownership interest of each homeowner must be ascertainable from the deposit account records of the insured bank or from records maintained by the agent (or by some person or entity that has agreed to maintain records for the agent),” the FDIC memorandum said. Visit: <http://www.fdic.gov/deposit/deposits>.

Armed with a clear FDIC directive, Sellers noted that banks holding HOA deposits must be clearly identified in the documentation.

“Banks have confirmed that the FDIC also tracks deposits with tax identification numbers,” Sellers said. “In most cases, only the Tax ID of the management company shows on the homeowners association account, rarely the name of the HOA. If these records do not exist, a key FDIC requirement is not satisfied.”

A new national survey by the Coalition for Community Housing Policy in the Public Interest (CHPPI), has found that 60.9% of the more than 500 survey respondents urged that community associations should have more government oversight and regulation.

Some 49.9% of respondents reported that they were “very dissatisfied” with HOA and condo living, and 21% said they are “somewhat dissatisfied.” Fully 65.7% are “very dissatisfied” and 15% are “dissatisfied” because of transparency and communication issues.

The on-line, opt-in survey, which rates the level of concern on more than 50 commonly reported topics and issues, generated responses from condo and HOA owners across the nation, including Illinois, Florida, Texas, Arizona, California, Missouri and Kansas. Visit: <http://www.CHPPI.org>.

“Our 2017 CHPPI survey found that a broad spectrum—from financial transparency, voting and election procedures, to the power of the board to fine owners—were viewed as major problems by respondents,” said Sara E. Benson, a CHPPI advisory member and president of Association Evaluation.

According to the Community Associations Institute (CAI) there currently are more than 337,000 homeowners associations where more than 68 million people reside across the U.S. CAI is a trade association and special interest group that primarily represent attorneys and property management companies servicing homeowner associations.

The city of Chicago currently has about 12,235 condo and HOA’s containing approximately 305,000 residential units, according to a comprehensive directory—the “2016 Association Evaluation Report on Illinois Condominiums and HOA’s.” Association Evaluation, LLC, is a Chicago-based real estate technology firm that rates the livability and stability of condo and homeowner associations. Bigotry and segregation, which has a long and storied history in Chicago, was sent into hiding last week by dozens of Ravenswood residents attending a Peace and Unity rally at Lincoln Square’s Giddings Plaza.

The March 15 protest was organized by community leaders in the wake of a nationwide wave of threats against Jewish synagogues and community centers.

Earlier this month a former local journalist named Juan Thompson was arrested in relation to several threats of violence against Jewish community centers. According to investigators, part of the plot included launching a series of copycat bomb threats against Jewish organizations across the country. Thompson allegedly emailed the threats to Jewish community centers, schools, a museum and other organizations on eight days in January and February, either using his ex-girlfriend’s name or his own.

Also this month an unidentified man called the Chicago Jewish Day School, part of the Emanuel Congregation synagogue complex at 5959 N. Sheridan Rd., and said there was a bomb inside. School staff and the police were forced to evacuate the school and blocked all the streets surrounding the site.

Twice last week - on Tuesday and again on Saturday - anti-Semitic fliers were posted on the campus of Univ. of Illinois Chicago. The fliers stated “Ending white privilege starts with ending Jewish privilege.” The figures used to show the Jewish population had the Star of David on their bodies. Those fliers posted on Saturday include “#BlackLivesMatter,” “#WeAreAllMuslim” and “#StandWithPalestine.”

“When our neighbors are threatened and their holy places desecrated, we can’t turn a blind eye. We have to stand with them. When they are stigmatized, categorized and labeled, we can’t stand by silently,” said Rev. Jason Coulter, pastor of Ravenswood United Church of Christ.

“That’s what it means to be a good neighbor. Let’s make a solemn vow not to walk by when injustice is done. Let’s be good neighbors,” Coulter said.

But Chicago has not always been that good of a neighbor, and for a long time has been characterized as one of America’s most segregated cities, according to the Voorhees Center for Neighborhood and Community Improvement at the Univ. of Illinois at Chicago.

In Chicago, blacks and whites live clustered in separate parts of the city. In fact, some 72% of black or white residents would have to move to a different census tract to even out the numbers, according to a commonly used segregation measure called the index of dissimilarity. In New York, the figure is 65% and in Philadelphia, it’s 63%.

“Even in a country marked by high levels of segregation, Chicago stands out,” said Richard Reeves, a senior fellow at Brookings who recently co-authored a blog post on inequality in Chicago.

For both Committeeman Paul Rosenfeld [47th] and County Commissioner John Fritchey, bigotry and segregation are a very personal issue.

“I’m standing here today because my refugee grandparents decided to give up everything they had to get on a boat and face an uncertain future with nothing but the shirts on their backs,” said Rosenfeld. “Could you imagine how they would have felt if they got sent back to Germany and almost certain death?”

“My grandparents were probably the most patriotic people in the world. They only had one thing on their wall. A picture of an American flag. They made this country a better place just like millions of other refugees who came here and made this country a better place,” Rosenfeld said. “I’m glad my grandparents are not here to see the hatred being uplifted by the rhetoric of our government’s leaders.

Yet persecution of Jewish refugees is not just a recent phenomenon. In the late 1930s the State Dept. and President Franklin Roosevelt claimed that Jewish immigrants could be Nazi spies and threaten national security. Even with millions of European Jews displaced from their homes, the U.S. had a poor track record offering asylum. Most notoriously, in June 1939, the German ocean liner St. Louis and its 937 passengers, almost all Jewish, were turned away from the port of Miami, forcing the ship to return to Europe; more than a quarter of whom then died in the Holocaust.

“But there is something we can do about it in 2018. We still have elections in this country,” Rosenfeld pointed out.

“Our president said he didn’t want to be responsible for other people’s babies. Well, I’m one of Twenty-seven U.S. presidents whose IQs rank them between 131.1 and 168.8. George Herbert Walker Bush to John Quincy Adams. That's a bright and exciting sense of measurement. It speaks of capable capacity as an essential component to governance. We do not await the untried abilities of a hereditary monarch to rule with wisdom. We wait and watch, hungry for the bright thinking and refined intelligence that allows our America to be governed by the smartest person around.

Shortly after is inauguration, John F. Kennedy had a stunning dinner for intellectuals and brilliant minds at the White House. He told them it was the greatest gathering of bright minds since Thomas Jefferson dined alone in the White House.

MANGE! MANGE! TUTTIA TAVOLA: I attended a small but refined Italian wine tasting dinner at Via Carducci 1928 W. Division Street. Wines were from the Veneto, exclusively. That's the far north of Italy that includes Milan and Verona and Venice. There was just 15 people at the table. Tom Hyland, who has written exclusively about wines of the Veneto region, was on hand to give us the pedigree. Five courses were served. And the wines matched the grandeur of the food.

Sparkling Valdo Prosecco started us off. Then a Valdo Prosecco "Catizze" was served with the Ra-dicchio and Grana e Noci. A dish of mussels served the Venetian way, light garlic bread crumbs. Polenta with porcini mushrooms was served with a 2012 Pieropan Soave La Rocca, a highlight of the evening. The main course was Filetto al Vino Rosso served with a dramatic 2008 Domini Veneti Amarone. Panna Cotta for dessert was heavenly, served with a 2011 Domini Veneti Recioto della Valpolicella (very much like classic porto).

Giovanni, our host, provided us the very finest Italian cuisine and kept our Italian conversation moving.

A GLIMPSE OF THE PAST: My sister, Mary Regina, and me in the midst of a childhood summer. I still feel the soothing warmth of those perfect days filled with tomatoes and strawberries that are today unequalled. I remember ice cold, tall glasses of tea and club sandwiches. We liked it when our mother cut the sandwiches in fourths from corner to corner. We loved to eat outside on the porch or in the yard. Our other favorite lunch was chop suey from the local Chinese takeaway. We always pretended that we lived in China. We relished the exotic that our mother always seemed to sprinkle into the ordinary of everyday life. She loved to surprise us with pies as well, blueberry was my favorite. Little did she think we would still be talking about them decades later. I look back on those days and see them in black and white, like the snaps, but then something comes along and spices up the world like a Sub Gum Chow Main with crunchy noodles. Our grandmother always insisted we put mint leaves in our tea. We were lucky that it grew wild in our garden and it was close at hand to cut. Our neighbor's Mulberry tree canopied our entire back yard and everything was good until the berries began to fall and then we were like Italian wine stompers. We had a giant carpet of berries under our feet, staining the soles of our sandals and making quite a mess. I still recognize the fragrance of mulberries wafting in the air. It is an instant trigger for childhood memory. It was a contented world.

CONCERN FAMINE RELIEF: Congratulations to Dolores Connolly and her army of volunteers who had a spectacular Concern Luncheon at the Standard Club with a record-breaking crowd. Featured speaker was former Irish President Mary Robinson who also served as United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights.

GIMME AN A: What co-ed Catholic prep school is beginning to worry as stories circulate about a mom and a dad (not married to each other) who have become very special friends? And students themselves are beginning to add two plus two and getting four. Both are lawyers and should know how slippery the slopes are. Spouses are most likely clueless. It's not like they are following their partners around to cheer-leading practices and LaCrosse games. But teens have a nose for scandal and they add up what others forget.

DO I SMELL SMOKE? Did a certain Gold Coast aging debutant recently catch her husband with his fingers in the cookie jar of young staffers at the Museum of Contemporary Art? She had one reaction and only one. She is supposed to have told him that if it is true, she will set the bed on fire when he is drunk. And since he is a well-known boozier and smoker, she knows it will all just seem to be an accident ... a tragic accident. He knows she means business.

REACH FOR THE SKY: Word is another savvy socialite has purchased a gun and is learning how to use it. Seems she is not taking the spike in urban crime well and has decided to do something about it. Word is that she is a crack shot and should be able to handle herself well. Her East Lake Shore Drive neighbors are said to be well behind her in seizing control of the situation.

O CANADA, YEAH! Congratulations to former Sun-Times publisher, John Cruickshank, now Consul General of Canada. He has always had a soft spot for Chicago. And with a new grandchild living here as well, he is delighted to be back.

O'BRIEN'S OF OLD TOWN: Looks like the demolition permit has been issued to raise O'Brien's Restaurant at 1528 N. Wells in the heart of Old Town. Once that is completed, the new 13-story hotel and restaurant will begin construction. If everything stays on schedule look for them to open in 2018.

WHO'S WHERE? Michael Kerrigan has been in Palm Beach organizing a very successful series of events for the Irish Georgian Society and his return is bringing him through Charlotte, NC... Kipper Lance has also been in Palm Beach for quite a while and her Chicago fans miss her. Christie's Steven Zick visiting Milwaukee and the renovated and expanded galleries of the Milwaukee Museum of Art ... Jonathan Wells with pal, Gail Freeman, doing his birthday up right in Marrakesh, Morocco ... Tim Foufas and Kelley Decker discovering the high cuisine of Cincinnati. Still getting rave reviews from her Skokie Theater performance, Denise Tomasello is taking an extra bow... Michael O'Connell once of the inside network of the Mercantile Exchange on the mend following heart surgery. Yikes, word is that three dinner guests at the Irish Fellowship St. Patrick's Dinner had to be rushed to the hospital following some unconnected health crisis at the Hilton Hotel, Father Bill Corcoran was astonished when his friend, 90-year-old Sister Regine, RSM, collapsed, passing out. His paramedic bro-in-law rescued little Sister Regine and cleared her air passages. She has returned and is in the pink. Congrats to Judge Marina Ammendola who was recently sworn into the Circuit Court by Judge Tim Evans. Searching for the sun, Madeleine Donovan has headed down to Huatulco, Mexico.

To announce that there must be no criticism of the president... is morally treasonable to the American public.

Cubs fans: It's OK to talk about 1945 World Series choke, we're free of all curses

BY PATRICK BUTLER

We've all heard stories of how professional baseball players were grossly underpaid until fairly recently.

Not true, said freelance sportswriter Charles Billington, discussing his book on "Wrigley Field's Last World Series: The Wartime Chicago Cubs and the Pennant of 1945" at a March 16 talk at the Sulzer Library, 4455 N. Lincoln Ave.

With the pressure now off after the Cubs World Series win last year, it is perhaps a good time to examine their last appearance in the World Series free of the fear of tempting fate to strike the Cubs again.

It was an entirely different economy then, Billington reminded the Ravenswood/Lake View Historical Assoc. "It's utter nonsense that players practically worked for free, or just for the love of the game.

"In fact, they made huge money for that time. In those days, the average salary in professional baseball was $5,000 for roughly six months' work when the average income for a family of four was about $1,500," he said.

The Cubs could field nine players just from the $45,000 Philip Wrigley was charging for radio broadcasting rights, Billington said. "According to the American Medical Assoc., the average doctor made $2,200 in 1945."

Because of wartime price controls, he added, just about everything cost less, Billington continued, pointing to a picture in his book showing a Cubs outfielder standing next to his new car, a $1,700 Lincoln Zephyr.

"And ballplayers' careers were probably longer than today because teams didn't invest so heavily in minor league players" – and because so many potential rookies were away fighting the war."

On the other hand, the military draft wasn't as all-encompassing as one might think today, he added, noting "you were exempt if you had high blood pressure or flat feet, yet that didn't prevent guys with those conditions" from having successful professional baseball careers.

"And if you were more than 6'-4" tall you were also exempt," Billington said, noting that military uniforms weren't made in those larger sizes.

Of course, he added, standards changed as more and more men flunked the physical toward the end of the war when an estimated 700,000 troops were expected to be needed for a planned invasion of Japan.

Not only were physical standards relaxed, but the draft age was lowered from 21 to 18 in anticipation of 700,000 men expected to be needed for that final push on Japan, he said.

Billington, who said he's also interested in World War II as well as baseball, said the mass conscription turned out to be unnecessary after two atomic bombs brought a swift surrender by the Japanese.

Baseball at all levels was also affected by wartime travel restrictions and an absence of night games because of blackouts along the entire American coastline, he said.

Even baseball equipment was impacted by the war, Billington said, noting how the usual Belgian horsehide used to make baseballs had to be replaced after the Germans invaded the Low Countries and a hardened resin substituted for cork after the Japanese grabbed Indonesia.

It proved more than just an inconvenience, Billington said, pointing out there were 70 fewer home runs a week in the major leagues after the start of the 1943 season.

Billington also shot holes in Cubs baseball lore over the famous, but he says untrue, Billy Goat Curse that fans still talk about today. "It was fake, there was no curse offered by the goat's owner William Sianis. It was made up by East Coast sportswriters."

Billington says that Sianis did indeed bring his goat to the World Series game, and was refused entry, but he threatened to file suit against the team; but offered no curse. "He was goaded by the media into saying he did [put a curse on the team] later in the 1950s, but at the time, eye-witnesses of the incident deny that any curse on the team was ever made."

Part of his presentation was done while giving backstory on the games as a newsreel played for his guests. In his closing comments, before coverage of game seven of that World Series started on the newsreel, Billington turned the sound off and turned his back to the screen saying, "I've watched this hundreds of times and it always ends badly."

Nobody will be saying or doing that 70-plus years from now about the 2017 Cubs.

Judge denies injunction, says Airbnb ordinance doesn't impinge homeowner rights

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

Saying she doesn't believe the rules impinge the constitutional rights of homeowners and others wishing to share their homes with guests through Airbnb and similar websites, a federal judge has refused to bar the door to a new Chicago ordinance regulating so-called home-sharing arrangements in the city.

On March 13, U.S. District Judge Sara Ellis sided against a group of homeowners and others who had either listed property through Airbnb, VRBO or other home-sharing sites, or stayed as home-sharing guests through the popular sites, denying their request for an injunction blocking the city's regulatory ordinance from taking effect.

Home-sharing has become quite a cottage industry -- and in some areas a community issue -- throughout popular neighborhoods on the North Side such as the Gold Coast, Lincoln Park and Wrigleville.

Judge Ellis had doubts concerning the ability of the plaintiffs in the case to either demonstrate how the ordinance trespasses on their constitutional rights, or how they would suffer irreparable harm, should the city's rules be allowed to take effect.

And, the judge said, she believed the "balance of harms" leans in favor of the city, which, she said, had a legitimate interest in "putting into place a more orderly system for the home sharing industry."

"Like with peddlers who hawk their goods but are lawfully subject to a regulation as to where they sell those goods, the City may lawfully subject home sharing to regulation without implicating the First Amendment because the (ordinance) regulates conduct - the temporary rental of property in exchange for money - instead of speech," Ellis wrote.

Litigation over the ordinance had landed in federal court in late 2016, when the group known as Keep Chicago Livable and plaintiff Benjamin Wolf stepped forward as the first to challenge the ordinance. Other plaintiffs, including owners of single family homes and condominiums and apartment tenants, joined their names to the legal action. Other named plaintiffs include Susan Maller, Danielle McCarron, Antoinette Wonsley, Monica Wolf and one other man, identified only as John Doe.

The challenges asserted the city's rules violated the constitutional rights of those seeking to rent homes, condos, apartments or rooms through the home-sharing sites.

Plaintiffs alleged they had already been harassed by neighbors, police officers, city employees, condo associations and landlords, among others, and feared their plight would grow worse, should they be required under city rules to publicly identify themselves and register the properties.

In their complaint, Keep Chicago Livable and other plaintiffs specifically alleged the ordinance's requirements would trample hosts private property rights and freedoms of speech, association and due process.

"The Shared Housing Ordinance, which purports to attempt to regulate the phenomenon of home sharing on internet sites such as Airbnb, HomeAway, FlipKey and VRBO, in fact operates as a de facto and in some cases outright ban on the use of internet home sharing services, and violates the constitutional rights of Chicagoans to speak and communicate freely and anonymously on the internet, to use their own property, to have privacy, and to not be subject to arbitrary and discriminatory enforcement of the laws," the lawsuit alleged.

Supporters of the ordinance, which was approved last summer, said the rules were needed to strengthen the ability of the city to police short-term rentals of condos, apartments and homes in the city's neighborhoods and high rises. Supporters said the regulations arose in response to complaints from neighbors of the rented properties who said the short-term tenants disrupted their neighborhoods or their buildings, and threatened public safety.

The hotel and motel industry had also complained, saying the home-sharing platforms, like Airbnb, enabled building owners to essentially run small hotel operations using otherwise vacant homes and apartments, sidestepping city hotel regulations.

The ordinance had been scheduled to take effect in December, but the city postponed that date to give the court a chance to rule on the plaintiffs' injunction request.

In the meantime, the Chicago City Council amended the ordinance, to address some of the plaintiffs' complaints, including removing a provision which had claimed the power to force home-sharers to give city officials access to their records, including guests' personal information, without a warrant.

However, the plaintiffs continued their legal action, asking the judge to block the amended ordinance, as their attorneys asserted the remaining rules still violated home sharers' constitutional rights.

Judge Ellis, however, disagreed, indicating she believed the city would ultimately prevail on the key questions of whether the ordinance violated home sharers' free speech, association and due process rights.

Home sharers had argued the home sharing process was fundamentally different from hotels, or even apartments, as home sharers obtain a number of social and intangible benefits, going beyond mere profit, from the home sharing arrangement.

Ellis, however, sided with the city in declaring she believed the process of listing a property on Airbnb and similar sites was a commercial act, so listing a property on such platforms falls under the category of "commercial speech," which is more open to government regulation.

Ellis appeared to hint the property owners could find more success in their arguments against the "maximum caps" provision of the ordinance, which limits the number of properties in certain buildings that can be listed on home-sharing sites. But the judge said, to date, the home sharers had not presented any arguments to persuade her they would prevail on that point, either.

"[The] challenge fails because they have not provided the Court with an explanation for why the maximum caps provision is vague in all of its applications," Ellis said. "Instead, they themselves make only vague references to the simplicity of the argument and how it needs no further explanation. But such [an] explanation does not suffice to carry Plaintiffs' burden of demonstrating likelihood of success on [this] claim."

UNITY from p. 5

those babies. My mother came to this country in 1963 (from the Middle East). She was a single mother. Not an easy thing," Fritchey said.

"It's too bad we have to be out here tonight, but we are here. We're standing our ground. The fact that you're here means you get it," he added. "Please keep this up. This is not a week-long or summer-long fight, but if we keep on fighting, I have no doubt we'll win."

"But if one foolish act can do so much harm, you can only imagine how much good a single good act can do? What a ripple effect that can have on the world," said Rabbi Baruch Hertz of Congregation B'nai Reuben and director of the Lakeview area Chabad.

"If one foolish act can do so much harm, can you imagine what a single act of kindness can do? What a ripple effect that would have on the world if we just helped an elderly or disabled neighbor. Or maybe helped a neighbor who's struggling financially. What a difference a few dollars could make to that person," he said.

Like so many others in the crowd, Ald. Pawar said he also takes the growing wave of intolerance personally. "We can't ever let that become normalized," he said, taking Hertz' lead as he urged everyone in the crowd to "turn to the person next to you, maybe exchange your phone number or e-mail address, and meet for a cup of coffee."

Letters to the Editor

They’re parks, not land banks

Too often politicians and greedy narrow minded land developers forget that our dedicated public parks exist to serve an important and necessary human function in the daily tumult, noise and distractions of crowded city living. Our parks are not land bank piñatas just sitting there, “open, clear and free” as intended; they cannot be “stolen” for corrupt construction exploitation and blind-eyed Chicago Park District and city connivance. They are an essential protected means of temporary escape from all that kind of commercial activity.

In their new book, “The Distracted Mind: Ancient Brains in a High-Tech World,” Dr. Adam Gazzaley, a neuroscientist, and Dr. Larry Rosen, a psychologist, explain how some activities boost cognition and attention by stimulating the brain’s ability to strengthen and reorganize existing neural connections, a process called neuroplasticity; activities that boost cognition by meditation and spending time in nature.

Chicago is increasingly losing its way.

Never-ending struggle for equality

A major goal of the recent local women’s protest to take a day off work was to demonstrate, yet again, the importance, especially in the work world, of the need to consider men and women as equal.

This seemingly never-ending issue of women struggling to demonstrate their equality and value reminds me of a marvelous, perhaps even hotter, piece of history. It focuses on how women have fought for millennia to show their power, importance, and equality.

Lysistrata, the historic comedy by Aristophanes, was written almost 2500 years ago. It showed how one unique and determined woman, Lysistrata, persuaded Greek women to deny having any form of sex with their husbands or lovers in order to force those men to end the interminable Peloponnesian War and make peace. The society then, as now, was male dominated.

I am not recommending any specific action that women individually or in groups should take to fight for and establish their equality with men. However, I do wish to encourage all reasonable, civilized people to think and act sincerely, honorably, swiftly, and wisely in the crucial matter of recognizing the equality of men and women.

Incarceration of Japanese Americans during WWII part of two events

Examination of incarceration of Japanese American during World War II

Exactly 75 years ago, by Executive Order of President Franklin Roosevelt, the United States government rounded up more than 109,000 residents of Japanese ancestry and sent them to far-flung prisons for the duration of World War II in the name of security. Many were forced to abandon their land. Many gave up their personal property. Each lost a part of their lives.

The Japanese American Service Committee (JASC), 4427 N. Clark St., will be hosting a book talk on the subject 6:30 - 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 28. Richard Cahan, the author of “Un-American: The Incarceration of Japanese American During World War II,” will be the guest speaker.

Amazingly, the government hired a crew of photographers to document the entire process-from the final weeks of freedom to the desolate years in camps. Famed photographers Dorothea Lange, Ansel Adams, and others showed the human toll of the incarceration. Their photographs give an emotional, unflinching portrait of a nation concerned more about security than human rights.

Cahan and photo historian and co-author Michael Williams took a careful look at the archive of images as they put together a history of one of America’s defining moments. In their book, for the first time, many of the people photographed have been located and interviewed to create a visual history with explicit pictures and unexpected stories. It is a comprehensive look at the incarceration of Japanese Americans and important chapter in U.S. history told in pictures.

Then They Came for Me, the demise of civil liberties

Alphawood Gallery, 2401 N. Halsted St., will be mounting “Then They Came for Me: Incarceration of Japanese Americans during WWII and the Demise of Civil Liberties,” an original exhibition on display at the gallery through April 2. The exhibition will be free and open to the public.

The exhibit will examine the difficult and painful episode in the history of the U.S. when by the Executive Order of President Franklin Roosevelt the federal government forcibly removed and imprisoned thousands of American citizens without due process simply for being born Japanese American.

Through an exploration of art, artifacts and programming, Then They Came For Me will invite comparisons between this dark chapter in America’s past and current political events.

Then They Came for Me will be unveiled in multiple phases. It will open with a major installation of photographs by several noted American photographers, including Ansel Adams and Dorothea Lange, documenting the eviction of Japanese Americans and permanent Japanese residents from their homes and their subsequent lives in incarceration camps. Adams, Lange and others were hired by the U.S. Government’s War Relocation Authority to document the “evacuation” and “internment” of Japanese Americans along the West Coast.

Lange left the program after three months, and some of her photographs, which revealed her growing unease with the circumstances she encountered, were impounded by the military for the duration of the war.

This opening exhibition draws in large part on photographs included in the book Un-American: The Incarceration of Japanese Americans during World War II recently published by local authors and photo historians Richard Cahan and Michael Williams.

Jazz Passion starting five-stop world tour with performance at Saint Luke

The Jazz Passion will be performed in Chicago next month as part of a five-stop world tour.

The “Victorious, Eternal, Light, A Jazz Passion and Resurrection,” or Jazz Passion, is a one-hour work written for choir, vocal quartet, several soloists and a 12-piece jazz ensemble. It will be performed at 4 p.m. Sunday, April 2, at Saint Luke Lutheran Church, 1500 W. Belmont Ave.

The church contributed to the inspiration and impetus for the Jazz Passion, a production that combines jazz harmonies and rhythms with the gospel message of the last days of Christ’s ministry. The piece was originally conceived and created in 2010 at Saint Luke Lutheran through its Church Jazz Ministry Program, led by librettist and Saint Luke pastor David Abrahamson and Chicago jazz musicians and composers Andy Tecson, Bobby Schiff and Bobby Lewis.

Admission is free, and early arrival is suggested. Free parking is available in the church’s Melrose Street garage, and on the street. For more information call 773-472-3383.

Police Beat....

Man bites cop

A Logan Square man bit a 19th District officer's arm so hard, the officer suffered "deep round lacerations... bleeding and bruising" even though he was wearing a leather uniform jacket at the time, according to court records.

Timothy G. Florian

The incident happened at 3:30 p.m. on March 2 while the officer was conducting a routine premise check at the Merlo Library, 644 W. Belmont.

According to police, the officer tried to detain Timothy G. Florian, 35, after seeing him kick the side of the cop's squad car.

Florian resisted, and the officer tried using pepper spray, but that failed when Florian blocked the spray with his hand, police said.

Florian then bit the officer on the left bicep as the two struggled on the ground, according to a report that said Florian was eventually tamed after the injured cop "used stun blows to the head... to stop the assault."

The officer and Florian were treated at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center.

Florian, charged with aggravated battery of a police officer, is jailed in lieu of $50,000 bail.

Packs of robbers beating victims in Uptown, Lincoln Square and Loop

A string of violent robberies involving groups of attackers in Uptown and Lincoln Square is the topic of Area North detectives' latest community alert.

According to investigators, several offenders are beating people to the ground with kicks and punches.

Some of the robbers take the victims' valuables while others continue beating the victims while they are down, say police.

Two victims were attacked on March 7: one in the 2700 block of W. Lawrence at 1:10 a.m. and the other in the 4500 block of N. Magnolia at 8:30 p.m.

The third victim was jumped at 5:30 a.m. on March 11 in the 4500 block of N. Broadway.

Police said the offenders are black males between 15- and 25-years-old. They range from 5'-9" to 6' in height, and all have been wearing different colored hooded sweatshirts and blue jeans.

Anyone with information about the attacks is asked to call Area North detectives at 312-744-8263.

Meanwhile, another robbery crew is reportedly punching victims in the face during attacks around the Loop neighborhood.

Three to four young men approach victims on the sidewalk or on a CTA train and one of the men proceeds to asks the victim a distracting question, police said.

The man who asks the question then punches the victim in the face multiple times before the others go into the target's coat and pants pockets, removing cell phones and wallets.

Police said the attacks happened in the 100 block of S. State St. at 11:20 p.m. on March 15 and in the 100 block of W. Adams and the 100 block of W. Van Buren around 1:40 a.m. on March 17.

The offenders are described as three black men. One is 18- to 26-years old, 5'-9" to 6' tall, and about 185 lbs. He wore a black hooded sweatshirt. The second is in his mid-20's, about the same height as the first man, and he wore a black jacket. The third suspect is between 18- and 25-years old, 175 lbs., and he wore a white bomber jacket.

Drivers are making auto theft easy these days by leaving their keys in unattended cars, according to police on the North Side.

Since Feb. 5, nine cars have been stolen in the 3200 to 4200 blocks of W. Lawrence Ave., police said. Most of the thefts were committed during evening hours and involved cars that had been left running or had their keys left inside.

Another three cars were stolen during evening hours in a concentrated area of Lincoln Park between March 2 and March 9: two in the 2400 block of N. Lincoln and one in the 500 block of W. Deming. Again, all of the cars were either left unattended with the keys inside or were left running.

North Center bank robber sought

Police are looking for a woman who robbed a US Bank in the North Center neighborhood on St. Patrick's Day.

A woman walked up to a teller around 10:35 a.m., demanded money and fled with about $2,000 cash.

The woman is black and in her mid-30's, according to the FBI. They say she weighed about 145 lbs. and was wearing a black knit hat, black scarf, and a long sleeved red shirt.

A reward is being offered by the FBI, which may be reached at 312-421-6700.

South Side man charged with raping, robbing, kidnaping Wrigleyville woman

A South Side man is held without bail, charged with a string of felonies in connection with the March 9 rape, robbery, and abduction of a Wrigleyville woman, police said.

Fingerprints recovered from the victim's vehicle and surveillance images of the offender using the victim's ATM card led police to Jarqueese O'Brian Henigan, 31, according to Chicago police. He is charged with aggravated criminal sexual assault with a weapon; aggravated kidnaping-inflicting harm; armed robbery with a firearm; aggravated vehicular hijacking with a firearm; armed habitual criminal; possession of a controlled substance; and resisting police.

Police arrested Henigan on March 17 in the 10300 block of S. Halsted.

Investigators say Henigan confronted a 24-year-old woman as she walked out of her garage and toward her residence in the 3700 block of N. Fremont St. around 8:20 p.m. on March 9.

Henigan approached her from behind, forced the woman into the trunk of her car and raped her, police said.

With the victim locked in the trunk, he proceeded to drive to the Far South Side where he tried to withdraw money from her account at several ATMs.

Around 10 p.m, Henigan crashed the woman's car into a tree 11516 S. Throop and ran away, according to police.

In a community alert issued the next day, detectives said the case was "similar and may [involve] the same offender" as a Feb. 28 case in which a woman was raped at gunpoint in a car near Barry and Racine in Lakeview.

The Feb. 28 attacker is described as a black man between 25- and 30-years-old, 5'-9" tall, about 160 lbs., with short black hair, and a medium complexion. He had a short beard or scruff on his chin and a mole on his face. He was wearing a brown or green colored vest, a black button-downed shirt with white markings on the bottom and dark colored pants.

Henigan is currently only charged in the March 9 case.

Catch and release

This newspaper has learned that Henigan is a three-time convicted felon who has been released early from prison repeatedly, despite having a violent track record.

Most recently, Henigan was convicted of robbing a Game Stop in the Wisconsin border town of Antioch.

He was 25 when he and another man pulled out handguns and took the store's cash and video surveillance tape in Sept. 2011, according to Lake County records.

Henigan was unaware of a second surveillance camera that captured the crime, leading investigators to one of his co-conspirators.

Henigan and the other gunman were arrested soon after the third man was scooped up in a Lake County traffic stop three days later.

A judge sentenced Henigan to six years in prison, but Henigan was after serving just half of his sentence, according to court records.

Prior to that, Henigan was given a 50% discount off of a 10-year prison sentence that he earned in 2006 for attempted aggravated discharge of a firearm in Lake County.

And, before that, he was given another 50% discount off of a four-year sentence for burglary in Lake County.

After being paroled on the robbery case Henigan resumed his practice of having run-ins with police. Wilmette authorities charged him with excessive speeding, fleeing, and eluding police in Sept. 2015.

Then, he went missing until he was picked up in Tulsa, OK, last August on an Illinois prison fugitive warrant.

Details about what happened after that were not immediately available.

Illinois prison records indicate that Henigan may not be well-liked in some circles. He has at least four gunshot wound scars, including one on his head and two in his back.

Police say he has admitted to all aspects of the Wrigleyville crime except the sexual assault.

Man charged with robbery in 900 block of Belmont (again)

In June 2014, Roger Lakes and two other men beat and robbed a man in the 900 block of W. Belmont, prosecutors said.

He probably wouldn't have been caught if he hadn't returned to the scene of the crime two days later while observant police looked on.

Lakes was sentenced to five years in prison for the robbery and four years for severely battering his victim.

He released on parole last year and now he's been arrested again for robbing yet another victim in the 900 block of W. Belmont—this time outside of Ald. Tom Tunney's [44th] flagship Ann Sather Restaurant.

Early on June 17, 2014, a Chicago Police Dept. prisoner transport van declared an emergency outside of the Belmont CTA station.

The officers had just found a robbery victim down, bleeding from the head in the middle of Belmont under the L tracks. The 34-year-old man was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center with serious injuries.

Two days later, Lakes was arrested as he stood on the steps of the Belmont CTA station. Patrol officers who had seen CTA surveillance images of the attack recognized Lakes as being one of the robbery offenders.

One of Lakes' partners in the attack, Joshua Givens, was arrested the next night when he also returned to the Belmont CTA station and was recognized by police.

The third offender was never found.

Lakes and Givens both pleaded guilty to robbery and aggravated battery-causing great bodily harm. Lakes was sentenced to five years for the robbery and four years for the aggravated battery. Givens received 42 months for each charge.

Lakes, 24, was freed from prison in May of last year after serving less than half of the "five years plus four years" concurrent sentences.

Five months later, he was arrested for allegedly selling crack near Truman College.

Now, another robbery charge has been filed against him.

Prosecutors say he has been identified as the man who beat and robbed a victim in front of Ann Sather at 2:45 a.m. on Nov. 4. His bail is set at $100,000.

Police say he's a Gangster Disciples street gang member.

ATM skimmers found at 7-Eleven

Rogers Park police officers recovered both a card skimming device and a doctored keypad on March 5 from an Citibank ATM inside the 7-Eleven at 1404 W. Pratt Blvd.

Patrol officers who had gone inside the store about 4 p.m. to buy drinks were approached by a 34-year-old man who had discovered the swindle, according to Police. The man had handed officers an external scanner which he said he had removed from the machine's real card slot.

Later, after officers had delivered the scanner to the department's financial crimes division, they went back to the 7-Eleven to peel off a pad overlay that had been attached by an adhesive to the machine's keypad, which was being used to catalog the pin numbers of people who used the ATM, the report stated.

The device attached to the card insertion slot was being used to read and copy the data on the magnetic strip of each card that passed through so that a dummy ATM could be made using its identification codes. Combined with the data from the pad, the skimming scam allows its users to create exact copies of people's ATM cards while also being certain of their personal pin codes.

Detectives were investigating the scam but no arrests had been announced as of publication time.

Sex abuse charges at West Ridge senior home

Police were investigating an alleged criminal sexual abuse that happened at the Astoria Place Living and Rehab nursing home at 6300 N. California Ave. in West Ridge.

Officers were called about 4 a.m. on March 10 to check on a 79-year-old woman who said a male staff member had sexually assaulted her in her room, according to the department.

The woman told police that the man, who is 39-years-old, had entered her room and claimed that he needed to clean her up. She said she became uncomfortable after the man took off her adult diaper and began fondling her in a way that was not like being cleaned up, she told police.

The staff member was suspended immediately pending an investigation, according to officials at Astoria Place. The woman, who suffers from Alzheimers, major depression, insomnia, and spinal stenosis was taken to Swedish Covenant Hospital for a check up, police said.

Two teens arrested for theft

Two teenage high school students were arrested March 15 and charged with property theft after they were caught stealing delivery packages from a doorway in West Ridge.

Police officers were called about 4 p.m. by a man claiming he had watched the pair scoop up delivery boxes from the entryway to a residence in the 6000 block of N. Troy St. and walk away. The teens had gone north with the packages and turned into an alley near Hood St. where they ripped open the containers and removed two boxes of Nike shoes, according to the caller.

Officers spotted the teens, 16 and 17-years-old, carrying the Nike boxes and walking east on Granville Ave. near Mozart St. The original packaging showing an invoice for the shoes and their intended recipient were recovered in the alley near Hood, police said.

Back at the victim's house, the man confirmed that the delivery of two boxes of Nike shoes was expected that day. The witness identified the pair as the same boys he had seen take the package from the front stoop. The teens were taken to the 24th District station where their parents were called and informed of the charges against their children.

Young teen charged with dealing at Kilmer School

A 13-year-old was arrested March 15 inside Kilmer Elementary School for dealing marijuana after the principal's good nose for the skunky-smelling plant led her to a locker containing a substantial quantity of drugs.

The teen was arrested around 1:40 p.m. inside the school and charged with the manufacture and delivery of more than 10 grams of narcotics, police said.

School officials had opened and searched the locker before calling police, discovering a back pack full of drugs and paraphernalia. According to a police inventory report, three canisters with false bottoms were recovered, one of which opened into a scale, while the other two contained a total of 13 plastic bags of marijuana packaged for sale. A small flashlight also was found which unscrewed to reveal another two bags of marijuana. A grinder for the pot was in the bag as well, police said.

The teen was taken to the 24th District lock up where his mother was called in to meet with police. No further details were made available.

North Side again turns its focus to quality of life crimes

Police say it's getting better; neighbors say it isn't

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Crime in its myriad forms has been the focal point of business and community groups on the North Side these days and nationwide for over a year.

Almost daily during the 2016 presidential race Donald Trump brought up Chicago's violence throughout his run, tagging the city as a center of violence and shooting and secured by a neutered police force.

Last week Town Hall (19th) District Cmdr. Mark Buslik told a Wrightwood Neighbors Assoc. meeting at New Life Church, 1110 W. Lill Ave., that crime is actually "trending down" and "from my perspective, the data says we're doing good."

But that was apparently scant comfort to those residents who may have witnessed something closer to political spin by the commander coming on the heels of a rape on Orchard St.

Buslik said that the assault wasn't connected to a pair of recent rapes in Lakeview which we now know were both the work of one assailant [see police blotter].

Like a lot of his neighbors, Allan Mellis was unconvinced things are looking up. Noting that a DePaul Univ. student was recently robbed of his cellphone in broad daylight on Halsted St., Mellis said crime is what most of his neighbors are talking about these days.

One woman who said her husband had been victimized in an armed car hijacking last fall told Buslik at the Wrightwood Neighbors meeting "We're afraid to live here."

Despite all the bad examples, Buslik said crime in the 19th District has actually been dropping in the last few years. Statistics show that there have been 16 fewer violent crimes in the district this year so far than there were at this time last year... but then last year also saw a large spike in the number of violent crimes being committed in the area.

The fact that police staffing in the 19th Dist. is down by nearly 25% from when the district was merged with the 23rd District only adds to the local angst. Responding to whether there are enough police in his district, Buslik conceded the 227 officers in his consolidated district are far fewer than there were in the old Belmont and Town Hall districts before the merger (468).

"Am I content with staffing," Buslik asked rhetorically. He added while he wouldn't turn down more officers, he said there's been "no slowing down" of police activity.

The CPD staffing shortage has everything to do with the city's dire financial straights and has lead to situations where there are not enough police on duty at times to manage incoming 911 emergency calls. In fact under that situation - called "Radio assigned Patrol" - when there are no officers available to handle any incoming 911 calls, callers are actually put on a waiting list for when an officer does become available to follow up on a 911 call.

Plus, fewer police on the streets does lead to fewer crimes being reported. Indeed if somebody is mugged but no police show up and no official CPD crime report is filled out and filed, then according to CPD, statistically speaking, no crime has occurred.

At a similar meeting of the South Lakeview neighbors on March 14, Buslik said a comparison of last month's crime reports with the same months over the past four years, showed 19% fewer crimes. At the same time, a comparison with the same 28-day period last year showed 19th District officers made more traffic stops, issued more tickets, and stopped more "suspicious people" this year. Of course hidden in that statement is the fact that those traffic stops dropped dramatically in 2016.

In the adjoining Albany Park (17th) district, police have been issuing community alerts regarding a series of recent home burglaries, armed robberies and auto thefts over the past two months.

Meanwhile, 18th District Police Cmdr. Paul Bauer and staff from the Cook County State's Attorney's office, met with concerned citizens at a March 21 community meeting sponsored by Ald. Michele Smith (43rd).

The business community also got involved with a March 16 community safety forum at the Sulzer Library, 4455 N. Lincoln. Members of the Northcenter, Greater Ravenswood and Lincoln Square chambers of commerce were on hand as were representatives of the 40th and 47th Ward aldermanic offices, the local Chicago Alternative Policing Strategy offices.

The 19th District is also sponsoring an April 11 "Keeping It Real" burglary workshop run by a panel of ex-offenders who discussed how they burglarized homes and businesses, what they looked for during those break-ins, and how to avoid becoming future burglary victims.

Tips for business owners on how to avoid becoming crime victims will be offered at a series of business security seminars sponsored by the Lincoln Park Chamber of Commerce April 4 at the Gaslight Bar, 2450 N. Clark St. and Tobacco Road Taproom, 2249 N. Lincoln Ave.

On hand will be Chicago Police business liaison officers from the 18th and 19th districts; Anne Gruber of Ashland Lock and Security Solutions; Tom Stillwell, Urban Street Window Works, and Ald. Smith.

And on a slightly different note, criminal defense attorney Molly Armour will offer tips on "how not to get arrested and what to do if you do" at a noon Thursday luncheon sponsored by the Northcenter Chamber of Commerce at O'Donovan's, 2100 W. Irving Park Rd.

Major crimes up 37% since 2015, but local police commander says "Crime is trending down... we're doing good!"

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

New 19th District Police Commander Marc Buslik pulled out an old Chicago Police Dept. chestnut at a community meeting last week.

Commander Marc Buslik, Chicago Police Dept.

He reassured Lincoln Park residents that "crime is down" and even opted for the "politically correct" answer of saying that he's content with the district's staffing level, which is about 25% lighter than when Mayor Rahm Emanuel became Chicago's mayor.

"Crime is trending down," insisted Cmdr. Marc Buslik. "From my perspective, the data says we're doing good."

He granted, however, that the perception that crime was increasing was something the Police Dept. had to work on.

The Facts

Last week the 19th District Community Police office tweeted a copy of the latest 19th District crime statistics.

Buslik's district has seen exactly 16 fewer major crimes this year compared to the same time last year, the report says.

And major crimes were up by 37%—that's 124 more major crimes in 2016 than in 2015.

So, crime is "down" by 16 incidents so far this year after skyrocketing up by 124 in 2016.

Rogers Park woman victim of revenge porn

Police are investigating the claims of a 34-year-old Rogers Park woman who says she was made the victim of “revenge porn” when an ex-boyfriend allegedly uploaded a private sex tape featuring her to the popular XXX site Pornhub.com.

The woman filed a report March 14 at the 24th District station in Rogers Park and told officers that earlier that morning her former boyfriend had sent an email with an active link to the video of the two of them having sex.

The woman said her face and identifying features were clearly visible and that she had not given the man permission to make the video public. In addition, she told officers the man had threatened to post the video after she broke up with him approximately one month earlier.

Police were given the man’s name and contacting information and were investigating the claims, according to the report.

Boyfriend pawns off woman's laptop, again

A woman was trying with the help of police to recover her laptop computer, which her boyfriend had just pawned a second time for cash without her permission.

The 51-year-old West Ridge woman went to police March 14 to file a theft report. She claimed that earlier in March the boyfriend had pawned her laptop computer at Cash America Pawnshop and that she had bought it back for $90, according to her statement.

Two weeks later her computer went missing again and she suspected the same thing had occurred. According to her statement, when she had gone to her boyfriend’s apartment to learn the truth he had tossed another pawn receipt from Cash America out the window but refused to talk with her.

The woman went to the pawn shop and explained the situation, but the store’s agent told her she would have to file a police report and prove ownership of the computer before the machine would be released back to her.

Boyfriend sent to closet while gang member rapes his girlfriend

An 18-year-old Latin Queen told police that a Latin King gang member raped her after ordering her boyfriend to wait in the closet of an apartment on W. Pratt Blvd. near the City of Chicago’s border with Evanston.

Officers were called March 9 about 1 a.m. to North Shore Hospital in Evanston to investigate a criminal sexual assault, according to the Chicago Police report.

The woman, who lives in Rogers Park, told officers she had gone to the apartment to meet her boyfriend and a friend. They had smoked pot and hung out for several hours when the alleged rapist, 20, ordered the boyfriend into a closet while he took the girl to the bathroom. The woman said the alleged rapist often carries a gun, though he did not display it that night, which is why the boyfriend complied with the order to wait in the closet.

The woman said the second man took her to the bathroom where he had sex with her against her will without wearing a condom. Afterwards, she had told her boyfriend what happened but he allegedly did not believe her.

The woman went to the police and then the hospital to have a rape kit administered, according to police. The woman was described as being in “good” condition while detectives were waiting for an evidence technician to collect the rape kit. The alleged offender was not in custody that night, though the investigation continues.

Party bus shooting, murder on Broadway

A party bus full of people and a second group that emerged out of a single vehicle got into a gun fight the morning of March 12 near Loyola University’s Rogers Park campus, leaving a Chicago man dead and several others with serious gunshot injuries.

The deceased was identified by the Cook County Medical Examiner as Quentin Payton of the 1100 block of N. Keeler Ave. Payton suffered multiple gunshot wounds that entered beneath his right armpit and was pronounced dead at 1:33 a.m. at St. Francis Hospital in Evanston.

According to police, officers at the scene arrived to find Payton laying in a pool of blood on the street in the 6300 block of Broadway outside the Dunkin’ Donuts in Edgewater. He was put on board an ambulance while a large group of people shouted and yelled obscenities at officers, according to the report of the incident.

After several groups of “hostile witnesses” left the area when police began questioning them, officers were given an account of what had happened. According to witnesses, two groups, one of nearly 30 people in a party bus with Texas license plates, and a second group in a dark blue Mazda SUV, began arguing in the parking lot of the Dunkin’ Donuts.

At some point during the argument, members of both groups produced handguns and began firing at one another. In addition to Payton, the deceased, another 33-year-old man from the party bus was shot through the right calf muscle. Police found that victim hiding behind the donut shop and described him as “very uncooperative” in their report of the exchange.

One man who emerged from the SUV was shot in the stomach but survived the injury after being treated at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center in Lakeview, police said.

One vehicle that happened to be driving past the shooting headed north on Broadway had a back window blown out by a bullet, but the driver of the vehicle was not injured.

Officers were not able to determine who had done the shooting, or if those people were still on the scene, and no arrests were made. No weapons were recovered, either. The investigation continues.

Meeting Tuesday over proposed new River North hotel

Developers of a proposed new River North hotel are inviting neighbors to an informational presentation of their plans for 12-22 W. Erie St. 6 p.m. Tuesday, March 28, at the James Hotel, 55 E. Ontario St., in the Great Room.

Representatives of Neighborhood Development Corp. [NDC] will present their plans and answer any questions attendees may have about this proposal. NDC has submitted a proposal to construct a 15-story, 163-foot tall building containing approximately 3,000 SF of retail space on the ground floor for a proposed restaurant tenant, and a new hotel with 178 rooms.

The meeting is also co-sponsored by Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] and the River North Residents Assoc.

wants to build a luxury home,” said Mike Nardini, First Vice President at commercial broker CBRE.

The site has become prime real estate as it is adjacent to the unoccupied northern portion of the Chicago Housing Authority’s Julia C. Lathrop Homes whose buildings are slated to be restored by developer Related Midwest and then leased at market-rate rates. This is also a portion of the Lathrop Campus that features landscaping by the late Jens Jensen, the legendary Danish-born landscape architect.

According to Paul Sajovec, chief of staff to Ald. Scott Waguespack [32nd], a planned development approved in 2008 had been for 30 townhomes and three single-family homes. The change to 18 units is considered less intrusive than the previous proposal.

“The planned development had technically expired but as it was less dense, the zoning administration was going to be okay is not merely hype. The surrounding area has been transformed from a gritty industrial corridor to an area that now includes mixed-uses, including retail, commercial and residential.

“The site is a key connection point among Goose Island, [the] Clybourn Corridor [as well as] the Wicker Park and Bucktown neighborhoods. In addition, it is within walking distance to the Clybourn Metra stop,” according to a statement from Cushman and Wakefield.

In its sales-pitch, Cushman and Wakefield adds there has been a strong demand for riverfront development in the area. Purchasing the parcel, they add, will allow a developer to acquire a large “infill property” in an area already bustling and to build in proximity to the Clybourn Corridor, which includes one of the city’s busiest shopping districts. The site is also just east of the Kennedy Expressway.

with that,” said Sajovec.

on an ‘as-is’ basis. The prospective purchaser(s) will be selected by the city of Chicago, in consultation with Cushman & Wakefield. The decision to choose a buyer will be based on numerous criteria, including price, a developer’s track record and its financial strength. Other factors include the ability of a development company to invest funds and how much their plans align with the city’s plans for the site.

According to Cushman and Wakefield, the city reserves the right to accept an offer prior to this date or to remove the Property from the market at any time.

Among those perhaps most interested in acquiring the site will be Chicago-based developer Sterling Bay, which has been extremely active nearby. Recent multi-million dollar acquisitions by Sterling Bay include a 2.2-acre site at 1675 N. Magnolia St. and, across the river, the site of the A. Finkl and Sons steel-mill as well as other adjoining properties.
