

43rd Ward candidates runoff forum highlights money and corruption

The people will vote on April 2

BY JIM VAIL

The battle between two well-financed candidates in a wealthy part of town was hard hitting.

Ald. Michele Smith (43rd) is in a runoff with challenger Derek Lindblom.

Both Smith and Lindblom have raised about $350,000.

Lindblom tried to label Ald. Smith at a candidates forum March 20 at DePaul Univ. with getting $300,000 in donations from a foundation that does not operate in the ward. She also was paid $72,000 for a side job in addition to being the alderman after she was first elected. Ald. Smith returned the money and now says she is against aldermen having side jobs.

Ald. Smith in turn hit back at Lindblom who tells people he has taken no money from Sterling Bay developers, but he took $10,000 from the developer's attorney.

Ald. Smith has been a vocal critic of Sterling Bay's divide and conquer tactics and the overall density of their Lincoln Yards development.

The alderman also tells people how she took on the mayor and was an independent voice on the City Council, while one local radio station claimed she was a close ally of the mayor.

The jabs and punches going back and forth between the candidates in this high-stakes battle made it seem the two are radically different. But the more they spoke, or made accusations against each other, the more you had to stop and think about it.

Ald. Smith said Lindblom has been silent on Lincoln Yards, insinuating that he supports the controversial billion-dollar tax giveaway to the developer Sterling Bay to develop a massive residential and retail complex that has the folks in Lincoln Park and Bucktown very nervous about the traffic nightmare that will result.

The jabs and punches going back and forth between the candidates in this high-stakes battle made it seem the two are radically different. But the more they spoke, or made accusations against each other, the more you had to stop and think about it.

Ald. Smith reminded the audience that she has fought tooth and nail to ensure the development gets a park and to slow down the process since there are still many questions.

"This is a huge risk to our property tax dollars," she said.

But even though the alderman voted against the development, she is not opposed to it once she is satisfied that the community's concerns are answered.

The big one is traffic, and Lindblom said that his main concerns with the project are transportation and infrastructure.

"We are going to be sandwiched in and stuck in traffic," he said at the forum.

He said the TIF still passed, so the alderman "failed."

Like the mayoral candidates, both candidates believe the project should be put on hold. Ald.

Smith and Lindblom want to see changes, but not to pull the plug on the massive tax giveaway that experts believe will ultimately force the city to raise taxes because the property taxes in Lincoln Yards will be frozen for 23 years, going to Sterling Bay and not go to the various taxing bodies. Those losses will have to be made up by taxes collected in other areas not located in the new TIF.

"We need to fix our way to get to the highway," Lindblom said.

"I think we're being ransomed," Ald. Smith said.

The alderman said she takes a pragmatic approach "to preserve our beautiful old buildings," while Lindblom said the city commission on historical landmarks should have "actual architects" making decisions.

Both candidates receive plenty of cash from developers.

Which led to a question about traffic problems.

"I keep hearing from people they're stuck in traffic," Lindblom said. "People are worried about developments coming in."

Ald. Smith said they need to find new uses for old streets.

"We look for ways to make it better," she said. "We created new parking. An old community like ours needs to be real smart."

The moderator noted that Chicago was rated the third worst city in the nation for traffic congestion.

Ald. Smith said they should discourage new residents from having cars and use public transportation.

Lindblom said they need to spread out density, and then claimed that there are far more

Judge dismisses lawsuit of former Spire developer against Irish banking agency

Model of what the Chicago Spire was to become.

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

The road to redemption for the developer of the failed Chicago Spire will not go through Chicago.

A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit filed by Garrett Kelleher and his company, Shelbourne North Water Street Corp., against National Asset Management Agency [NAMA], an Irish banking agency he says derailed the project.

U.S. District Judge Andrea Wood says the case lacks subject matter jurisdiction, so the court lacks the authority to hear the case against the Irish institution.

Attorneys for Kelleher had argued the agency waived immunity from the court because its foreign assets, per Irish law, are governed by foreign law, but Wood rejected the argument, saying "there is simply no basis for the court to find that defendants waived sovereign immunity by contract."

When the Chicago Spire project started in July 2006, it was hoped the 2,000'-tall tower, designed by architect Santiago Calatrava, would be the tallest residential building in the world. By early 2008, the project had a design, foundation, and substructure at a cost of $300 million.

Financing included a $90 million loan from Anglo Irish Bank Corp. that Kelleher had personally guaranteed. But with the worldwide financial crisis of 2008, Anglo was unable to continue funding the project, Shelbourne was unable to find alternate funding, and development of the Chicago Spire stalled, then died.

Agency formed to handle Irish investments after worldwide collapse

In late 2009, the government of Ireland created NAMA to acquire property development loans from Irish banks, such as Anglo, in return for government-backed debt bonds.

Shelbourne started working with NAMA to figure out a way to resume development of the Spire but the agency, says Shelbourne, rejected numerous proposals.

Finally, in Sept. 2011, Shelbourne thought it had a deal with NAMA to release Kelleher from all personal guarantees and allow Shelbourne to purchase the Spire site for less than the full amount due on the loans.

Shelbourne even found an investor to advance about $92 million to redeem the loans and allow Shelbourne to finish construction. But in July 2013, NAMA sold the Spire loans, with Kelleher's personal guarantees attached, to RMW Acquisition Co., which does business as The Related Companies, for about $35 mil-

Community meeting on two proposed Gold Coast projects

A community meeting will be held 6 p.m. Wednesday, April 10, at the Viceroy Hotel - Studio West Room, 1118 N. State St., to discuss two proposed developments, located at 1120-30 N. State St., and 1200-06 N. State St. Both proposals are being developed by Newcastle Ltd.

The first proposed development is a 368-unit, 39-story tower Planned Development at 1120-30 N. State St. The site will feature 158 parking spaces above a first-floor retail space. The developer is seeking a zoning map amendment to take the site to establish a Planned Development. The underlying zoning will remain DX-7. This location is home to Barnes & Noble and Lou Malnati's and has indicated that Lou's would remain open during construction.

The second proposed development for a 102-unit, 11-story building, 122' in height (including the outdoor amenity roof) planned development at 1200-06 N. State St. The site will feature 31 parking spaces accessible from State St., located above a first-floor retail space that is envisioned to be a higher-end restaurant. The developer is seeking a zoning map amendment to B3-5 to qualify for Transit Oriented Development reductions.

Meeting tonight on Grand Ave. bridge construction

The Chicago Dept. of Transportation will be hosting a public meeting tonight 5:30 to 7 p.m., to provide design and logistical details about the construction schedule for the Grand Ave. bridge construction project.

The meeting will be held at the Holiday Inn Chicago - Mart Plaza River North, 350 W. Mart Center Dr., LaSalle Room. Exhibits associated with the project will be on display and personnel working on the project will be in attendance to answer questions.

The Ten Commandments for being a real Chicagoan

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Here are some essentials every real Chicagoan knows help you to navigate the metropolis like a native. With them you are Tarzan swinging through the trees confident that you know and understand our city.

It's as easy as licking a Rainbow Cone, or munching on a Fanny May.

1. You can spot a real Chicagoan right away, in your heart and in your ear. The way we speak makes a big difference. We might have our own lingo in our own part of town, but there are some things we all say as one. The first is our city's name: Sha-KAW-go. That's it. Nothing else. Anything else is the dialect of the suburbs, other states, nations and galaxies. But not for real natives. You hear and recognize it the minute someone opens their pie hole. When I had interns in my City Hall office, they had to practice and learn sha-KAW-go. Zero tolerance. You should too.

2. All working compasses turn you to true North. In Chicago, we have true East. No matter what neighborhood we're in, we know which way is East. Our never faltering compass is Lake Michigan. It's big and always dead East. Easy to spot, easy to find. A never changing certainty. Like a rigged election or an alderman taking a bribe. If you know the address of your location, you can find due East. Just turn and face towards the lake.

3. Real Chicagoans know that all the boulevards in town are connected. They were Frederick Law Olmsted's version of an expressway. Yes. Most are on the South Side. But, imagine, you can take Garfield Blvd., East in Hyde Park, also known as 55th Street, to Western Blvd., follow it where it turns, it will lead you to Douglas Blvd., then to Independence Blvd., then to Hamlin Blvd. (going North), connecting with both Jackson Blvd. (going East) and Washington Blvd (going West). This takes you West to Oak Park without ever leaving the boulevard system. Univ. of Chicago to Oak Park all on the boulevard grid. Chicago's real underbelly.

4. The intersection of State and Madison streets is ground zero for measuring out the city's geography. South Side, North Side, East Side and West Side. From that celebrated spot all Chicago takes its bearings. It's how we calculate the meaning of our addresses. That measurement marks how far we are from ground zero. It's a combination of latitude, longitude and attitude. But real Chicagoans have always been at home with the numbering system established back in 1909 that places our living on an easy to understand perpendicular urban grid. So it's like reading a recipe to find your way home.

5. The Red, Green, Blue, Orange, Pink and Yellow lines. Chicagoans have a technicolored relationship with our metropolitan rail transit system. Back in the late 19th century the "EL," as Chicagoans call it, was the making of us. Most importantly, our public transit meant that you didn't have to live where you worked. Important if you worked in the Stockyards or a steel mill. For 5¢ you could live in another part of town away from your factory. Our earliest rail system encircled the downtown business district. The "Loop" was a circular nickname that was apt. It stuck. Rails still encircle downtown. Samuel Insull, the rail tycoon who developed it, left Chicago and went to London where he helped to establish "the Tube."

6. Chicago's unwritten common laws. One of the most important tom band represents the south branch of the Chicago River and the Chicago Sanitary and Ship Canal (which connects the river to a tributary of the Mississippi River system).

is "the parking space in a snow storm law," aka "dibs." If you dig out the parking space in front of your house after a winter storm, you get to call "dibs." The space is yours. You don't have to share. It is permissible to block the space with furniture. Buckets. Or chairs, kitchen or folding, in the empty space when you use your auto. You have the right to that "snow-free" space. Constitutionally. Chicago-style. Only a jerk would take your space. Last week the city cleared the streets of the left over objects of "dibbing."

7. Our International Airport that is O'Hare Field (ORD). Named for naval war hero Lt. Com. Edward O'Hare, Jr. President Roosevelt said he was the nation's bravest military hero. The airport commemorates his valor. His dad, Edward O'Hare, Sr., was an inside snitch in the Capone mob and helped to put 'Big Al' in prison. The O'Hare name rings loud. But Mayor Richard J. Daley was just Irish enough to frequently refer to the airport as "O'Hara" Field. Daley built the airport into "the world's busiest." So it's OK for real Chicagoans to say O'Hara once in a while. Junior O'Hare was lost at sea. Senior was bushwhacked when Big Al got out of prison.

8. Chicago's street grid runs north and south. And east and west. But back when the city was surrounded by farms, diagonal roads were used to move agriculture from outlying farms to city markets. Those roads are still around and still help to keep traffic moving. Milwaukee Ave. Archer Ave. Clybourn Ave. Lincoln Ave. Ogden Ave. All precursors of the expressway system. Real Chicagoans know a shortcut is a shortcut.

9. In 1893 Chicago was the fastest growing city on the planet earth. What made that statement so significant was that just 22 years earlier, three-fifths of the central city burnt to the ground in the flames of the Great Fire of 1871. By 1893 business had been so profitable that the city's commercial leadership and political barons worked hard to get the World's Fair interested in the miracle prairie survivor, Chicago. Twenty-seven million people came to visit Chicago during the Fair's six months. It was said that Americans met one another for the first time in Chicago then. They came from every part of the nation, but up until then, most Americans had no first-hand experience with other Americans. Chicago became their meeting ground. George Washington Gale Ferris, Jr., built his great revolving wheel. Buffalo Bill Cody brought his Wild West Show. And the mayor of Chicago, Carter Harrison, was assassinated the night before the World's Columbian Exhibition closed. The city hosted another World's Fair on the 100th anniversary of its founding. The 1933 Century of Progress measured how much modernity had come to Chicago. Hitler sent the Graf Zeppelin. Mussolini sent Commander Italo Balbo and the Italian Air Force. Chicagoans thumped their chests. Real Chicagoans know when it's time to boast. Those fairs are remembered with two of the stars on our city flag.

10. Chicago is a water town. The Chicago River and Lake Michigan deeply mark our character. Until Jan. 1, 1900, the waters of the river flowed into the lake. Often that urban sewage contaminated our water supply. So a great canal was dug with the capacity to shift the river's flow. On New Year's Day 1900, the canal flood gates opened and all that power flow was reversed. The water of the Chicago River flowed away from the lake and down south to our neighbors. It marked one of the greatest engineering feats of history. Real Chicagoans know it's safe to drink the water. Sweet as Garrett's CarmelCrisp popcorn.

History, commerce and science has helped to shape Chicago's character and urban identity. The deep change coming to the office of mayor in this week's election is just another chapter in that saga. The political flood gates are opening for reform. For reason. And for bold moves to change the present darkness of our times. We need Chicagoans to be real. Real like Chicago Cuts' Matt Moore,

Supporting those in need

It's 5:45 on a Tuesday evening, and several dozen guests are heading into the soup kitchen at Congregation K.I.N.S., 2800 W. North Shore Ave. in West Rogers Park.

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

There, the 10 or so tables that are set up are covered in lovely tablecloths and each has a colorful vase of flowers set atop of it, "like a Bar Mitzvah," said one woman attending.

It's here at K.I.N.S. that the soup kitchen has been feeding somewhere between 60 and 70 folks each week since late last year, thanks to a suburban mom of three boys named Karen Nochimowski and her merry band of volunteers.

This wonderful happening became a concept while Nochimowski was already delivering food to West Rogers Parkers in need during the High Holidays through a charitable Jewish organization. Although she was doing that, "I felt something was missing so I opened the soup kitchen," she said.

Each Tuesday, Nochimowski now makes the fairly long trek from her home to K.I.N.S., which donates space in its basement to host the hot and delicious, five to six course, well-balanced, homemade, Kosher meal.

"I saw there was such a need," said Nochimowski, who initially held a fundraiser with friends and family to get the soup kitchen going, raising enough to provide funding through the first year. "I wanted to do something more philanthropic."

Young volunteers from the soup kitchen at K.I.N.S. help dish out some amazing Kosher food, among other duties.

Nochimowski is no stranger to food or cooking. She currently writes a successful cooking blog, mommachef.com, which offers recipes with six ingredients or less that can be prepared in six minutes. This gives people the confidence to learn how to cook, she said.

Last Tuesday, the scrumptious dinner menu consisted of Sloppy Joe's, brown rice, baked butternut squash, mixed green salad, and fruit salad with a coconut milk yogurt to pour over it. And, in celebration of the Jewish holiday Purim last week, dessert was hamantaschen, which are Purim pastries, and they were specially prepared by students at Ida Crown Jewish Academy.

"I change it up," Nochimowski said of her menus. "I try not to serve the same thing for two months."

You don't have to be Jewish to attend this mouth-watering delight of a meal. In fact, the dinner averages 60 to 70 guests each week and Nochimowski cooks for 100, so head on over!

"Everyone is welcome," said Nochimowski. "People come from all religious backgrounds, ethnicities. The majority are elders but we do have some young."

Doors open at 5:50 p.m. and close at 6:15 so being prompt is imperative as the evening ends at 7 p.m. Besides an amazing meal, guests also receive a bagged lunch for the next day, and they get to take home leftovers. Nothing goes to waste, as everything is recycled in one way or another. Food is donated from various grocery stores and bakeries, including Tel Aviv Bakery on Devon Ave. That night, in lieu of leftover food containers, each guest received a bag of fun Purim goodies, also provided by the students at Ida Crown.

It's a win-win for Nochimowski and attendees, who come from near, and a little far.

K.I.N.S. Rabbi Leonard Matanky says a few words to the soup kitchen crowd before dinner.

Bob R. has come from southwest Evanston "quite a bit," for dinner. "It's nice," Bob said. "It's a nice, social thing too. You're with people you know and are friendly with. They're really nice people there."

"I think the food is great," said Robert L., also from Evanston and on his sixth visit. "I come for the food and the camaraderie."

"I like it, how they are presenting is very good, and the variety is good," said Evelyn, who lives nearby.

Besides eating a wholesome hot meal, the social aspect of the evening also attracts locals. "It's a fun communal thing, there's a community and then there's these nice women," said Chia, a West Rogers Parker who was wearing a sweatshirt she had picked up from the coat pantry that Nochimowski set up this winter. "People are talking, socializing."

MEMORY CARE AND ASSISTED LIVING

Chicago-based Hanno Weber & Assoc. created the Court House concept several years ago for the City. Designed to be developed in groups of four units on two side-by-side 25-by-125-foot city lots, the Court Houses can be built today at a cost of about $200,000 each, not including the land, and could be marketed to home buyers for a retail price of $240,000 to $250,000.

Is less really more?

Many Chicago homebuyers passing on the McMansions

Stroll down any side street in the Lincoln Park and Lake View neighborhoods and you will see lots of “McMansions”—those gaudy multi-million-dollar homes that have taken over two or three 25-foot city lots.

The Home Front
By Don DeBat

They were built on tear-down sites that formerly were occupied by humble frame homes, 2-flats and 3-flats once owned by blue-collar families who were gentrified out of the neighborhood.

Read the real estate listing: “Retro-Victorian or modern architecture, 10’ tall ceilings, two or three fireplaces, butler’s pantry, wine cellar, giant “open-concept” granite and stainless-steel kitchen with adjoining family room. A big deck with bridge to a second garage deck for entertaining.”

But how much house do you really need? Chicago’s rising wealthy class want it all. They consider 5,000 square feet a small house. Why not 10,000 square feet if you can afford it?

This writer lives in a newer 4,000-square-foot home on the North Side, and over the past few years—after the kids moved out—it was apparent that there are rooms we rarely use. A fireplace we never light. A view we never enjoy.

Apparently, the McMansion-fad nationwide is starting to fade, especially among empty nesters. Profit-oriented new home-builders, who are always sniffing the winds of change, are targeting smaller, more affordable houses in 2019—the new normal on construction sites, predicted Lawrence Yun, chief economist for the National Assoc. of Realtors.

“As builders shift towards lower-priced homes—since labor, land and material costs are rising—they can easily find buyers,” Yun noted. “Building McMansions will be problematic in the future.”

One of the big complaints in Chicago is the shortage of affordable abodes. We are not talking about “Tiny Homes,” the trailer-like dwellings with less than 500 square feet of living area. What’s wrong with a 1,400-square-foot 3-bedroom single-family home or duplex with 2 baths?

With thousands of city-owned vacant lots sitting unused on the South Side and West Side, perhaps our next mayor should focus on incentives to lure builders and young first-time buyers to affordable smaller homes in these areas.

Affordable urban in-fill homes

The time has finally come to use some “good old-fashioned common sense” to design and build affordable, energy-efficient houses for urban in-fill lots, said urban architect Hanno Weber, co-designer of the “Court House,” an innovative design planned for the thousands of vacant in-fill lots that dot the city.

Weber, who was an adjunct professor at the School of Architecture and Urban Planning at the Univ. of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, and is a principal of the Chicago-based Hanno Weber & Assoc. Architecture/Urban Design, created the Court House several years ago for the city’s Dept. of Housing and Dept. of Environment. The plans likely are gathering dust in a closet at City Hall.

Ideally designed to be developed in groups of four units on Energy efficiency also is achieved through a heat pump system for heating and cooling the houses, with supplemental gas heating in winter. “In addition, solar panels on the south side of the steeply sloping roof, unshaded by adjacent houses, are capable of generating 6,000 Kilowatts per year,” said Hanno Weber.

two side-by-side 25-by-125-foot city lots, Weber said the Court Houses can be built today at a cost of about $200,000 each, not including the land, and could be marketed to home buyers for a retail price of $240,000 to $250,000.

Each 3-bedroom, 2½-bath Court House has 1,400 square feet of living area configured two rooms deep on three levels.

Designed as slab-on-grade construction, the garden level of the home features a foyer with closet, kitchen, dining room, powder room, laundry and mechanical room. French doors open from the dining room to a spacious and private terrace walled with recycled brick.

A central stairway leads to the second level of the home which has the living room, the master bedroom, a linen closet and 2 full baths, which are built in a separate module “back-to-back” with the baths of the house on the rear of the lot. Two additional bedrooms are in the attic, or loft level of the home.

View a site plan for a cluster of Court Houses, and you’ll see four attached single-family homes with steeply pitched roofs each built on an outside corner of the two lots, like Medieval carriage houses grouped around a protected 30’-by-30’ courtyard.

“The central courtyard is key to the design of the Court Houses,”

Riverfront scrap iron company gets OK to move

The final step to complete the move of General Iron out of Lincoln Park in 2020 was cleared by the City's Zoning Board of Appeals last week, allowing the scrap iron recycling firm to move its operations to a new location at 11600 S. Burley Ave.

Located in the city for more than 110 years, General Iron is merging its operations with Reserve Management Group (RMG), a diversified provider of electronics refurbishment and recycling, scrap metal processing and brokerage services. The alliance resulted in transitioning General Iron's operations to RMG's current location on the southeast side of Chicago.

The partnership will make a substantial investment in building a new, state-of-the-art facility, which covers more than 175 acres along the east side of the Calumet River, at S. Burley Ave.

and 116th Street. The transition, including construction of an enclosed, high-tech metal shredder, is expected to be completed in 2020.

During the transition, operations and management will continue at General Iron's current location on the North Branch of the Chicago River.

Marilyn Labkon, President of General Iron said, "General Iron looks forward to a new state-of-the-art facility in a new location." The company says that upon relocating, General Iron will terminate operations at its current location, which comprises approximately 21.5 acres of some of the hottest prime real estate in Chicago today.

"The departure of General Iron creates the opportunity to create sorely needed public open space as well as a natural buffer between our community and the towering Lincoln Yards development," said Ald. Michele Smith [43rd].

We urge "Mayor Emanuel to add the North Branch Park and Preserve to his legacy by taking steps to protect our area from additional massive development at the General Iron site. The General Iron site is almost half of the size of the Lincoln Yards development," said Smith.

While the city has yet to include a solid commitment to create a park as part of the $1.3 Billion publicly-funded TIF at this location, "there is plenty of time for this to happen before a scheduled vote in April," said Smith. "I believe, as do several Aldermen and both Mayoral candidates, that it would be even wiser to delay any action on the largest TIF in Chicago history until the new City Council, and new Mayor, can thoughtfully review the issue."

Four North Side Schools part of CPS expansion

Hawthorne Elementary School, 3319 N. Clifton, Salazar Elementary School, 160 W. Wendell St., McPherson Elementary School, 4728 N. Wolcott Ave., and Senn High School, 5900 N. Glenwood are all part of programmatic expansion that Chicago Public Schools has focused mostly on the South and West Sides.

Nearly 17,000 students in 32 schools across the city will receive parts of a $32 million investment to expand programs such as IB, STEM and Dual Language.

Hawthorne will receive funding for Personalized Learning programs, Salazar will receive funding for Dual Language programs, and McPherson and Senn will receive funding for International Baccalaureate (IB) programs. McPherson is also receiving a Gifted program that will support 30 kindergarten students next school year and add one grade level each year until the program spans from K-8.

In a March 19 announcement, Mayor Rahm Emanuel and CPS CEO Dr. Janice K. Jackson said that nearly 17,000 CPS students at 32 schools across the city will gain access to high-quality programming next school year as part of a $32 million program expansion.

Other North Side schools who may have applied but were rejected were supposedly given objective rationale by CPS pointing out areas of improvement needed to ensure successful program implementation in the future. CPS claims they are committed to working with any school interested in re-applying for programs during the next application cycle, which will begin later this year.

The CPS said that 80% of the program resources were reserved for low income communities. Schools were reportedly selected based on an evaluation process that included community and parent engagement, a needs assessment, interviews with school staff, letters of support from their community, and approval by each school's Local School Council.

Old Town School's Lincoln Park building taken off the blocks

The Board of Directors and officers of the Old Town School of Folk Music have decided against selling its landmark 15,000 square foot building at 909 W. Armitage Ave.

In Oct. of 2018, the music schools leadership surprised school staffers and students with the news of the proposed sale of the historic old Aldine Hall, which has been used by the school for over 50 years.

While the school's flagship facility is now located in Lincoln Square, it was the Lincoln Park building - and the events and activities that took place inside of it - that helped to create the school's reputation and mold the facility into a beloved North Side institution.

When then-executive director Bau Graves made the announcement he said the sale would help create an endowment fund that would "secure the future of the school in perpetuity." He also cited high overhead and dwindling enrollment for the decision.

Graves has since taken a leave of absence from the Old Town School for health reasons. In February the school announced that it had appointed Chicago business executive Jim Newcomb as its Chief Executive Officer. Newcomb said he will serve as CEO through June 30, 2020.

Expected or not, the backlash was swift and sudden by users, supporters and friends of the school whose emails, letters, petitions and rallies demanded that the Board postpone the sale.

Annually Old Town School of Folk Music serves more than 13,000 students, sees 38,000 enrollments and welcomes in over 189,000 attendees to its classes, lessons, camps, school partnerships, concerts, festivals, workshops and events.

Lincoln Park Zoo expecting new rare black rhino in May

You think your baby is cute? There is something cute and big coming out to the Lincoln Park Zoo this May. Their 13-year-old female eastern black rhinoceros name Kapuki is pregnant.

The zoo confirmed the pregnancy March 21 using fecal samples collected by animal care staff and then processed and analyzed by scientists at the Davee Center for Epidemiology and Endocrinology [DCEE] at the zoo.

The pregnancy is a result of a breeding recommendation from the Eastern Black Rhinoceros Species Survival Plan [SSP] that cooperatively manages the Association of Zoos and Aquariums [AZA] population. SSP Breeding and Transfer Plans are informed by genetic analyses conducted by the AZA Population Management Center and its adjunct scientists. Using these data, the zoo's female rhino, Kapuki, was recommended to breed with 33-year-old male rhino, Maku. The calf is expected to arrive in May at Regenstein African Journey.

"Measuring hormones from fecal samples we were not only able to confirm pregnancy, but first, were able to understand when Kapuki was ovulating and inform animal care decisions and timelines for introducing Kapuki to the male rhino, Maku," says DCEE's Rachel Santymire.

The potential of a successful calf means much more than a cute face at the zoo. "A birth represents preservation of a critically endangered species that faces a lot of challenges," says Curator of Mammals Mike Murray. "We remain cautiously optimistic that Eastern black rhinos are a critically endangered species due to poaching for their horns.

Kapuki, as an experienced dam, will know just what to do."

Kapuki and Maku had previously been successful in producing offspring as with the case of the birth of King in 2013. As part of an SSP recommendation, King was transferred to Chicago Zoological Society/Brookfield Zoo in Nov. 2016.

In preparation for this arrival, the zoo has included some of expectant mother Kapuki's favorite things on its wish list such as apples and hay as her diet increases throughout pregnancy and nursing. Supporters can assist the zoo in purchasing a rhino-sized scale in order to weigh the calf as it grows.

Gestation for black rhinos is about 15-16 months with offspring weighing around 85 lbs. Typically, black rhinos are a solitary species that only come together to breed. When full grown, eastern black rhinos can stand up to 12' long and 5' tall at the shoulder, and can weigh up to 3,000 lbs. Eastern black rhinos are a critically endangered species due to poaching for their horns which are believed to have medicinal benefits despite being made of keratin – the same material that makes up human hair and nails.

SUPPORTING from p. 3

Payton likes the salad cucumbers, while Lorraine, her son Daniel, and her fiancé Jay called it "positive and encouraging and different from most soup kitchens."

"I thought the food was awesome," said Jay.

One guest, Elizabeth said she hopes they continue throughout the Summer, while another attendee, Aaron, liked the good food and nice people.

There may already be plenty of nice people there working, but they can always use more. Anyone looking for a volunteer opportunity? If you're age eight and up, they'll put you to work! (If you'd like more info, email soup-kitchen@congkins.org)

Seven adults and six kids or more are put to work each week. The adults help in the kitchen as everything is cooked the day of. The kids serve food, make lunches, set tables, fill water pitchers and also perform other tasks, said volunteer coordinator Karen Ecanow.

"It's always nice to be able to give back," said Ecanow, who also drives in from the 'burbs. "I think we have a consistent group, we get to know them and I feel satisfied filling a need."

West Rogers Parkers Shira, 14, and her sister, Shana, 11, were volunteering after being brought in by their bubbe, Miriam.

"It's nice," said Shira. "It's a nice kindness for everyone." Shana thought it was "really fun."

Nochimowski's son, Tal, 10, was there for his fifth time volunteering. He's really proud of what his mom is doing.

"It feels really amazing that she did something really nice and is helping the poor and giving food to people who need food," said Tal.

The soup kitchen was "a project that we jumped at," said K.I.N.S. Rabbi Leonard Matanky. It's one of only three Kosher programs such as this, with the others being at The Ark and the Jewish Federation, the rabbi said.

"It's so very important to be able to provide core Jewish values," said Rabbi Matanky. "To see the volunteers and people, it's heartwarming, powerful and a true expression of the Jewish community."

"The Orthodox and K.I.N.S. has always been open to everyone," said Rabbi Matanky. "It's very important to us that people feel welcome and at home. This fills our lives with the opportunity and joy of mitzvah."

Gimme shelter... The same evening of my Tuesday at the soup kitchen, a small community meeting was taking place regarding a women's addiction recovery home, St. Anne's, 1715 W. Chase Ave.

St. Anne's is a long term recovery home where women struggling with addiction can stay and work on their recovery from six months up to one year. The non-profit is seeking to expand from eight beds to 15 with a plan that would not include construction but would require a zoning change -- a Special Use Permit actually -- for the bed increase.

Ald. Joe Moore [49th] has yet to make a decision whether or not he will support the expansion when it goes before the city's Zoning Board of Appeals. But as there have been no problems with St. Anne since it opened in 2017, I suspect he will give his support.

There were a few minor, non-contentious questions at the meeting, but most people supported the expansion. Ald. Moore said he would consider all comments and make a forthcoming decision. He also offered to let alderman-elect Maria Hadden speak, as she had also attended the meeting. She declined to speak, but did voice her support.

"After researching the history, speaking with neighbors and hearing the concerns met last night, yes, I am," Hadden said.

It's getting hot in here... things are heating up and getting a little testy in the 43rd Ward, where incumbent Michele Smith is in a runoff with challenger Derek Lindblom. Oh the snarky emails going back and forth between neighbors after one long-time community leader sent out an email supporting Ald. Smith and did not make it clear he was speaking on behalf of himself rather than his group! But as one person said, anyone who knows this leader and what he has done for the neighborhood, "Knows that he sent the message with the best of intentions."

Calm down folks! It will soon be over. Taking a shot at this person - who epitomizes the mantra of leading by example, "is like taking a shot at the Dali Lama or Gandhi," said one neighbor.

Standardized student test continues under new name

BY JIM VAIL

The new Illinois state standardized test for 3rd – 8th graders is officially named Illinois Assessment of Readiness (IAR). The test was adopted March 11 in the Chicago Public Schools and the rest of the state.

But one education watchdog group is calling this test ZombiePARCC, because the Illinois State Board of Education (ISBE) has adopted the controversial Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers test [PARCC] for one more year under a new name.

The PARCC test resulted in angst and pushback when they were launched in 2015. An opt-out movement last year resulted in a bill passed in the state house to give students and parents the right to opt out of a test many considered unfair and not productive.

School officials criticized the long hours of PARCC testing, and complaints from parents mushroomed into the opt-out movement.

According to the education advocacy group Raise Your Hand [RYH], the original four-year contract Illinois had with the global education company Pearson for PARCC tests ended last year. In January, ISBE approved a one-year contract with Pearson to administer what is essentially the PARCC (the format is the same). ISBE tried to hire another testing vendor, DRC, to produce a multi-year hybrid assessment of new content and PARCC content, but Pearson successfully protested the way ISBE calculated its pricing versus DRC's.

CPS uses its own NWEA assessment each spring to determine student and teacher evaluations. This test comes in addition to many other tests that prompted the Chicago Teachers Union [CTU] and other education advocacy groups to fight back against the overwhelming use of standardized tests. Indeed, RYH, the CTU and other advocacy groups are again now suggesting a boycott of the testing.

According to the ISBE PowerPoint presentation on this new test, "ISBE will continue to use 100% PARCC content and forms built to the standard of the PARCC assessments for the next two years."

"No matter what the vendor or the name of the test, in a state that is $7 billion below funding all schools adequately, every penny spent on experimental, expensive testing, potentially used for high-stakes decisions is a penny that's not going to actual high-quality education," RYH stated in a press release. "We encourage parents to have their child refuse state testing."

However, the stakes are high against those who refuse to take the test. CPS said schools will suffer consequences such as a drop in ratings and federal funding could be cut off.

The new IAR test is mandated by the federal government.

The contract for PARCC was for four years starting in 2015, but every state dropped the test.

According to RYH, some states use some PARCC questions on their test. Illinois is using PARCC questions from one vendor, New Meridian, and has a separate contract to administer and score the test.

The IAR is slightly shorter than last year's PARCC, but it will be the same format. The state plans to compare PARCC and IAR scores, and by 2021 IAR will have results returned in days or weeks instead of in months (NWEA results are immediate).

Illinois also requires schools to administer the SAT test to all 11th graders to comply with federal mandates for annual high school testing. Illinois is also requiring districts to administer the PSAT in 9th and 10th grade to use for state school accountability ratings.

Even though their scores won't count for school ratings, students new to the US will also be required to test no matter their English fluency.

Schools that do not have at least 95% participation rate will not be able to receive the top rating from the state, while students who opted out are counted as not having met expectations. School ratings are only tied to additional funding. RYH stated that the federal government still never penalized any state or district for low participation rates. However, teachers who organized boycotts were targeted and some fired.

IAR tests will be scored by computers, including essays and extended responses. RYH stated that computers rely on superficial features and statistical patterns to score answers and cannot meaningfully evaluate a child's performance level.

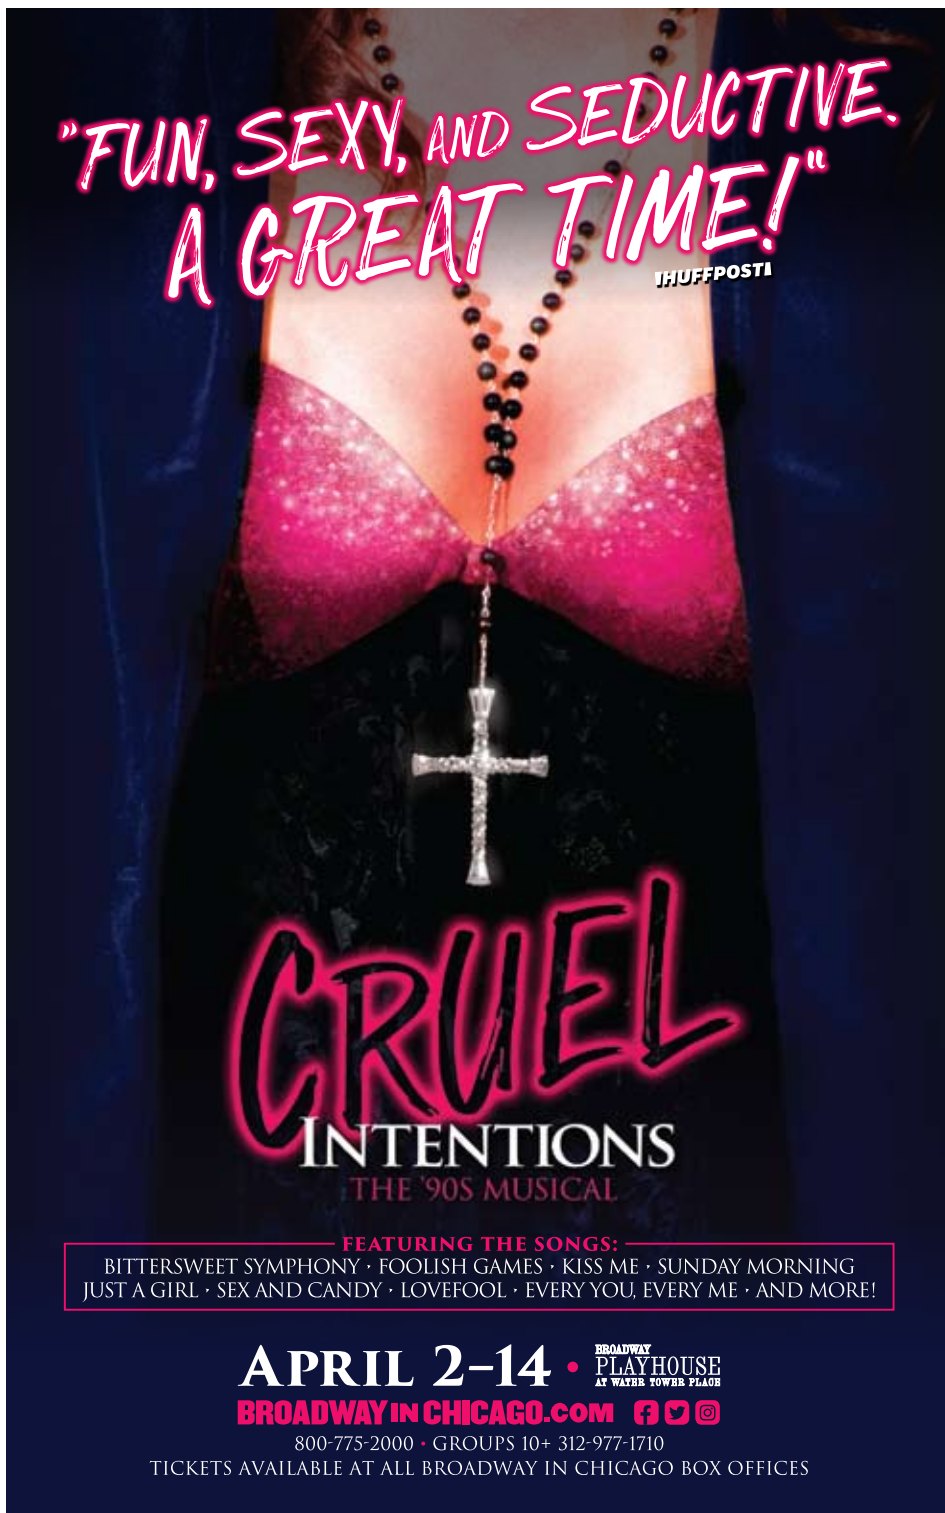

"Standardized tests are primarily a measure of the wealth of the population a school community draws from," RYH stated. "If high-stakes decisions like school closings, teacher ratings and student promotion were to be based on IAR, these policies would become even more damaging to the students being served at the most under-resourced schools."

But in an open 2018 letter to school superintendents, the Illinois Superintendent of Education Tony Smith defended the PARCC, saying "Illinois will continue to use and build on the core features of PARCC that make it the highest quality accountability assessment available in the U.S. The days when rote memorization and recall could prepare students for college and career are long gone. PARCC is presently the only large-scale assessment to "fully meet" all federal accountability requirements, setting the standard for item quality, removal of bias in testing, and meeting universal design. This initial work will serve as our foundation for continuous improvement."

This spring's version of the test, which is tied to Common Core standards, will be about two-thirds as long, and most students will take an online test.

BEST CITIES IN 2019: A superb feature in "Time Out Chicago" has writer Morgan Olson ranking cities around the world in "48 Best Cities in the World to Visit in 2019." All based on their appeal for food, drink, sites and sounds. Comfort for the traveler is critical, but so is ease of getting around, finding really stunning eats and rubbing elbows with friendly locals. These kinds of features are always flawed, but they demonstrate what people are looking for. And they show how much people like what they've found. New York City was travelers' number one destination in the world. But Melbourne, Australia was strong at number two and it's not the country's largest city. Chicago, not surprisingly, was number three, of anywhere in the world. Apparently we are known for our fabulous array of food and restaurants, ethnic cuisines, top notch breweries and very friendly natives. We are more than deep dish pizza and Italian beefs. Where else made the list? Well, London is four, Paris is nine and Lisbon 19. Dublin is 25, Miami is 27, Porto is 28 and Vienna is 34. This is all good, but not surprising, news for old Chitown. Three is very good.

SAVED FOR NOW: Chicago fire-era mansions in River North saved again from demolition — for now. Preservationists hope to include the buildings in a proposed Near North Side historic district. These buildings at 42 E. Superior, 44-46 E. Superior, are part of an important preservation battle. But is the FBI asking what happened to the $49 million in Chinese money that was invested to build a high-rise at the location?

NO ONE BETTER: Bill Gainer, a wise and erudite of Chicago, died last week. My friend for 42 years. Humane politics in his blood and a houseful of children spilling all over his home. Dolinsky's pizza marathon credited with finding best pies in Chicago

The 2019 Streeterville Organization of Active Residents [SOAR] speakers series kicked off last week focusing on local culinary and media experts telling their tales, starting with Steve Dolinsky, the "Hungry Hound" at ABC-7 News.

Dolinsky, back before SOAR by popular demand, spoke for 45 minutes on his new book, "Pizza City, USA: 101 Reasons Why Chicago Is America's Greatest Pizza Town."

The event was held March 20 at Labriola Chicago, 535 N. Michigan Ave., where Dolinsky proclaims their deep dish "one of the best in Chicago." He went on to explain how Chicago has 10 unique styles of pizza, twice as many as New York City.

Dolinsky discussed his adventures in Chicago pizza as he did research for his new book. Over a three month period Dolinsky says he dined at 185 Chicago pizza restaurants to come up with his list of the 101 best ones, "sometimes dining at 3 places a day." He said his children mostly benefited from his research leftovers and credited his local yoga studio for helping him to get through his personal marathon of pizza eating.

SOAR, Dolinsky and his wife Amy Dordek Dolinsky will be hosting a pizza bus tour 6 to 9 p.m. Wednesday, April 3 that includes stops for pizza at three locations, tickets are $90, seats are limited. For more information call 312-280-2596.

Fashion coming to History Museum lywood, Silver Screen to Mainstream will feature clothes on display from major designers like Chanel, Valentina, Howard Greer, Adrian, Paul du Pont, Schiaparelli and Alix (later known as Madame Grès). Spanning 2,100 square feet, the exhibit will feature 30 ensembles from the museum's permanent collection. Most of the garments are by American designers, including Chicago designers Paul Dupont, who dressed Ruth Page, Blum's Vogue and Martha Weathered.

The exhibit will look at how Hollywood fashions from those decades influenced everyday Americans who were coping with massive changes during the Great Depression and World War II.

Some of the outfits were worn by Chicago women. They, like other Americans, were able to experiment with fashion more easily and cheaply during the '30s and '40s due to the emergence of the zipper and manmade textiles, according to the museum.

The exhibit runs through Jan. 20, 2020, at 1601 N. Clark St. The exhibit is included with regular museum admission, which is $19.

Foundation signs Loop lease for youth services

Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the Dept. of Fleet and Facility Management introduced an ordinance in City Hall March 13 authorizing the execution of a 10-year lease agreement for the downtown After School Matters [ASM] location.

The lease at 66 E. Randolph St. will support office and programming space for young people from around Chicago.

Besides this Loop location, ASM has two other neighborhood-based locations supporting a partnership to provide mentoring and out-of-school time opportunities to young people from neighboring communities and throughout the city. ASM currently delivers more than 1,400 after-school and summer programs that serve more than 18,000 teens each year in schools, parks, libraries and community organizations across the city.

Police Beat....

Two carjackings reported in Lincoln Park

Police are investigating two carjackings reported just blocks away in the Lincoln Park neighborhood Sunday and Monday. No one is in custody.

Most recently, a man told police that four black male teenagers forced him to open his vehicle's door and get out of his car in the 2300 block of N. Cleveland around 1 a.m. March 25.

One of the teens took the man's gray Subaru Impreza with a license plate that begins with V930. The victim said thousands of dollars worth of surgical equipment was in the stolen car's trunk. The other three offenders fled the area in a dark colored SUV.

The two stolen cars were last seen heading east on Belden and then north on Lincoln Park West.

Earlier, a 48-year-old man was punched in the face and carjacked as he stood outside his vehicle Sunday in Lincoln Park, police said.

The victim was standing near the rear of his vehicle in the 2100 block of N. Lincoln Park West around 9:45 p.m. when three offenders pulled up in a stolen gray Dodge Journey bearing a license plate that begins with BB97, according to officers on the scene.

Two men exited the Dodge Journey and repeatedly punched the victim in the face before they took the keys to his 2015 Jeep Cherokee and drove away with it. The stolen car, which bears a license plate number beginning with Z252 and has Uber stickers in the windows, was last seen heading south on Lincoln Park West.

The offenders who got out of the car to confront the victim were both black males—one wearing a red hoodie and the other wearing a gray hoodie, the victim reported. A third man drove the stolen Dodge Journey.

Police said the victim was not seriously injured, and he declined ambulance services.

Lakeview man hospitalized - beaten and robbed by five offenders on Red Line

A 42-year-old man is listed in fair condition after being beaten and robbed at knifepoint by five offenders on a CTA train at the Belmont Red Line station Monday, police said. No one is in custody.

Police said the victim and his attackers were on a northbound train around 2:30 a.m. when the group physically attacked the man and took his phone, money and leather jacket. The victim got off the train at the Belmont station where police and an ambulance were called to assist.

The suspects are five black men between 18- and 25-years-old. One of the men wore a puffy black jacket, and another wore a red hoodie, the victim said.

A police spokesman this morning said the victim is hospitalized at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center.

Another Lakeview robbery

Police are investigating an afternoon robbery March 24 in the Lakeview neighborhood. A woman told police that she was robbed in the 800 block of W. Diversey around 3:30 p.m. by a group of people who were armed with a handgun.

Man gets four-year prison sentence for carjacking Tribune reporter on 18th birthday

A man who "celebrated" his 18th birthday by carjacking the Chicago Tribune's overnight crime reporter has been sentenced to four years in prison.

Noriyhea Evans

Noriyhea Evans and another man were celebrating Evans' legal adulthood early on Dec. 4, 2017, when they approached a car in the parking lot of a Bridgeport Dunkin' Donuts. The paper's 29-year-old crime reporter was sitting in the car, waiting for a story to break.

Police said Evans knocked on the car's window and ordered the woman out of the car. Evans and another man then climbed into the Tribune-owned Chevy Malibu and sped away.

Two days later, police spotted Evans driving the stolen car the wrong way in the 4600 block of N. Ravenswood. Evans and two juveniles were taken into custody after a short pursuit.

Last Thursday, Evans pleaded guilty to vehicular hijacking and received a four-year sentence from Judge James Obbish. Evans was also ordered to serve a concurrent four-year term for possessing a stolen motor vehicle and a concurrent two-year sentence for escaping from electronic monitoring. Evans received 478 days credit for time served. The plea deal also called for prosecutors to drop a felony unlawful restraint charge and for Evans to pay a fine of $807. He is expected to be paroled on Oct. 16, 2020.

After the robbery, the three got into a light blue four-door vehicle that fled northbound on Mildred Ave. with a fourth person.

The victim said the robbers were two black females and a black male.

Awaiting trial for robbing grocery store, woman robs another grocery store

A Chicago woman who's accused of robbing a Lakeview grocery store last week was free on bond at the time—awaiting trial for a similar robbery attempt of a grocery store in Bucktown, according to court records.

Jewel-Osco employees told police that Amarilys Del Rio, 33, of the Austin neighborhood entered their store at 3400 N. Western around 2 a.m. March 15 and began stealing merchandise. When the workers confronted Del Rio at the store's exit, a struggle broke out, and Del Rio said, "I'm going to stab you with my knife," while displaying what may have been a nail file, police said. Del Rio spat in the face of a 59-year-old Jewel worker and headed toward the doors saying, "I am going to get my gun and pop the f*ck out of this place," the employees reported.

Police caught Del Rio nearby in possession of a laser pointer, batteries, and a probiotic supplement, according to court records.

Prosecutors charged her with felony robbery, felony aggravated battery of a merchant, felony retail theft with a prior conviction, and misdemeanor possession of drug paraphernalia. Judge Mary Marubio ordered Del Rio held without bail.

Court records show that Del Rio was ordered held without bail last autumn after she was charged with two felony counts of aggravated robbery for allegedly threatening to stab employees who tried to stop her from stealing $1,247 worth of merchandise from Mariano's, 2112 N. Ashland.

Judge Travis Richardson later reduced Del Rio's bail to $10,000, which allowed her to go free by posting a bond of $1,000. Bail in the November case was revoked by Marubio in light of the latest allegations against Del Rio.

"Flyer boy" phone thieves are hitting downtown diners hard

Chicago police are once again warning people about "flyer boys" who steal phones from unsuspecting victims in restaurants and other locations downtown while posing as charity fundraisers.

The thief has hit at least seven times since March 11, according to an alert from Area Central investigators. His technique is simple: He approaches victims as they sit in restaurants or in a library with their phone on the table during afternoon hours. Opening the conversation with a request for a charitable donation, the man then places flyers or a newspaper on top of the victim's phone while going through his charity pitch. When he's done, he lifts up the victim's phone along with the papers and leaves the building.

Police have identified seven recent cases linked to the suspect: on March 11 in the 100 block of S. Wabash, the 300 block of S. Wabash, and the 100 block of S. Michigan; March 13 in the 100 block of S. Michigan; March 21 in the 100 block of W. Lake; and March 22 in the 100 block of N. Wabash and the 100 block of N. State.

The suspect is described by police as a black male with a dark complexion who stands 5'-10" to 6' tall.

New details emerge in Sound-Bar shooting

New details of the Sound-Bar nightclub shooting emerged during a bond hearing Friday for the man who prosecutors say killed the club's doorman and injured the bar's co-owner during a shooting earlier this month.

In the moments before Armond Williams, 37, of Villa Park was charged with murder and attempted murder, an assistant state's attorney laid out the state's version of what happened outside the long-running River North club shortly after midnight on March 8.

Prosecutor James Murphy told the court that trouble began on Feb. 28 when a man arriving at Sound-Bar took exception with the way he was patted-down by security at the club's entrance. That man and Williams went back to Sound-Bar on March 8 and got into an argument with doorman Thurmond Bailey, 28, and other members of the bar's staff, Murphy said.

The prosecutor said the fight escalated, Williams punched Thurmond, and Thurmond then pulled out a gun. That prompted Williams to pull out his own gun and fire four rounds, before he handed the gun to another member of his group. That man fired nine more rounds, striking Bailey again and injuring club owner Mark Jurczyk, according to the state.

Police have identified the second shooter, but he has not been arrested or charged.

Bailey was able to return fire, but no one was injured by his shots, Murphy said.

Williams' attorney said he has a concealed carry license and the club's employees did not wear clothing that identified them as security personnel.

Judge Michael Clancy ordered Williams held without bail.

Chicago Police Supt. Eddie Johnson issued a summary closure order of Sound-Bar on March 12. Since then, club owners have been working with city officials to develop a "Nuisance Abatement Plan" that would allow them to re-open the bar.

An initial hearing on the closure was held March 20th. A staff member for local Ald. Brendan O'Reilly [42nd] said in an email to constituents this week that negotiations were underway to create an operating plan and avoid a "contested hearing."

Home invaders batter Boystown man; Cops eye possible pattern

At least three residents of the Wrigleyville and Boystown neighborhoods have come face-to-face with intruders during early morning hours since March 20, according to police. One of the burglars claimed to have a gun. And another incident just two blocks away on Saturday morning turned into a home invasion as two intruders attacked the victim in his own home. Here is what we have learned:

A Boystown resident called police around 12:15 a.m. on Saturday morning after two men broke into his home and attacked him in the 700 block of W. Cornelia.

The victim, 27, said he was in his home when he heard loud banging noises at his front door. That's when he realized that two unknown men were inside his home and a fight broke out, according to police. The victim suffered a cut to his forehead but declined medical attention.

Police said the offenders escaped with an iPhone after attempting to get some computer equipment. The victim described the intruders as two black men in their 20's who wore surgical masks. One is about 6' tall, 160 lbs., and wore a green winter jacket. The other is also about 6' tall, and he wore a dark winter coat with fur around the hood or collar.

The case has been classified as a home invasion. In earlier cases:

- Around 5:30 a.m. March 20, a Wrigleyville man reported that a burglar entered his home and claimed to have a gun in the 900 block of W. Cornelia. The victim told a local neighborhood watch group that he heard footsteps outside his bedroom around 4 a.m. and he yelled, "who is there?"

The burglar replied "John from the third floor," which the victim knew was incorrect information. The victim slammed his bedroom door shut, and the offender hit the door with his hands, saying that he had a gun, according to the neighborhood watch post.

"An 8-year-old 22-inch TV" was taken, the man said.

Police classified the incident as a non-forcible burglary, which indicates that no doors or windows were broken to enter the home.

- At 4 a.m. on Friday, a Wrigleyville woman who lives in the 3800 block of N. Clark St. was awakened by two men who entered her home through a first-floor window. No one was injured, and no property was taken.

Streeterville robbery spree grows as tourist is held-up at gunpoint

A visitor from Venezuela was robbed at gunpoint as she sat in her car in the Streeterville neighborhood early on March 23, according to police reports.

Two men approached the 24-year-old woman in the 900 block of N. Dewitt and opened her car doors around 12:55 a.m. One of the men then pulled out a handgun and took the woman's cash, phone, and credit cards before speeding off in a black SUV.

The woman told police the robbers were two black men between 20- and 25-years-old who wore dark clothing.

Investigators believe the robbery may be related to a series of three hold-ups that were reported in Streeterville and the Loop on Thursday evening.

In those cases, one to three men approached victims on foot and took valuables by force before fleeing in a black Ford SUV bearing a license plate that begins with BB71.

Thursday's robberies were reported in the first block of N. State; the 200 block of E. Superior; and the 200 block of E. Grand, according to a community alert that was issued Saturday morning by Area Central detectives.

The three offenders are black males between 18- and 25-years-old, according to the alert.

Anyone with information about the hold-ups may contact Area Central investigators at 312-747-8380 about pattern #P19-1-080.

Gunday Funday: A look at how the courts have handled some recent gun cases in Chicago

How seriously do Cook County judges take firearms offenses in Chicago? Here is a look at some recent arrests and a few recent court resolutions:

- Employees at Big Wig Taco, 770 N. LaSalle, called the police to report that a man had climbed onto one of their tables and pulled out a handgun at 4:30 a.m. on Feb. 25. The workers alleged that Spencer Slawinski then told one of them to hide the gun for him, but an employee said, "I want nothing to do with it, and you need to go," police said in a report.

Instead, Slawinski allegedly ran into the kitchen and hid the firearm under a bag of onions. An employee escorted an arriving police officer into the kitchen to retrieve the gun while other officers questioned Slawinski and placed him in custody, police said.

Slawinski was charged with felony unlawful use of a handgun; misdemeanor possession of a firearm without a Firearm Owner's ID card, and two misdemeanor counts of resisting arrest. Judge John Lyke released him on a recognizance bond.

- Police were called to the Radisson Blu Aqua Hotel March 23 after a housekeeper reported finding a handgun on a guest room nightstand. Officers were taken to the room to observe the gun and then hotel staff put the cops in touch with the man who rented the room, Darius Denning, 30, of Indianapolis, according to court records.

Officers said they met with Denning outside the hotel where he told them that he knew housekeeping was in his room and had found a gun. Denning reportedly told officers that he is a convicted felon (although not a "violent" one) and he brought the gun from Indianapolis where it was given to him as a gift by his ex-girlfriend after they broke up.

Prosecutors charged Denning with being a felon in possession of a weapon. Judge Stephanie Miller set bail at $20,000. He can go free by posting a 10% deposit bond.

- Joshua Gills, 20, was sentenced to two years of "first offense gun probation" and 50 hours of community service by Judge Timothy Chambers in exchange for pleading guilty to one count of aggravated unlawful use of a weapon.

Police said they found Gills with a handgun in his jacket near the scene of a "shots fired" call last June in the

On March 15 this fish sculpture was taken off its mountings and hauled away, and now there is a $50 reward for its return.

Fishnapping in Rogers Park

Sculpture swiped in broad daylight

A sculpture of a fish that was put on display in Rogers Park in 2011 has gone missing, and a witness says he saw two men unbolting it from its mount in broad daylight.

For eight years passers-by of the Rogers Park Art Gallery, 6902 N. Glenwood, paused for reflection before a beloved little sculpture garden on the block. One of the sculptures was part of an ornate display mounted on a large flower box on the sidewalk. On March 15 that sculpture was taken off its mountings and hauled away, and now there is a $50 reward for its return.

The sculpture garden, and missing fish, are all the works of artist Andy DeLarosa, who died in Oct. 2016. At 2 p.m. on March 15 a four-foot fish sculpture was stolen from amongst all the sculptures at the gallery. A wanted sign now hangs where the fish once hung.

The theft was reported to the police, but as the piece is made out of wood, suggestions by some neighborhood sleuths that a metal scrapper might have taken it for recycling seems unlikely. It is covered in copper-colored scales.

A passing witness reported to the gallery seeing two Mexican or Latino-looking men unbolting it from its base on the day of its theft.

"The fish had just been re-habbed a year ago and was in pretty good shape," says gallery owner Eileen Burns. "I was so hurt by the theft, because since Andy's death I take care of all his sculptures." While she doesn't own the pieces, Burns is in charge of the maintenance and upkeep of DeLarosa's sculpture garden, and said that a few attempts have been made to take bits and pieces off of some of the works, and that other people have come by and left art inside the garden too. The sculpture garden is composed of sculptures made with found objects.

While being interviewed, Burns asked a person walking by if he had "seen her fish, someone took it?" Thanks to social media, news of the fish caper is spreading throughout the community. So if it is in another person's hands, and they put it on display, fans of the artists and garden are hoping someone will report back on its whereabouts.

Guaranteed Rate HQ under scrutiny for urging positive employer reviews

BY ROXANE ASSAF-LYNN

By the looks of it, Guaranteed Rate is a dream job. Their Glassdoor page header is a video showing an exposed-brick open layout with rows of computer screens and 20-somethings interacting collegially. A snappy soundtrack escorts you to a gourmet chef, bartender, acupuncturist, yogi, and masseuse. The work day ends on the roof with cushy patio seating, cocktails, laughter, and the Metra train sailing by on the Ravenswood track.

It's no wonder Chicago Inno gave it the "Coolest Company" award in 2015. The year before that, and for the fourth time in five years, Guaranteed Rate was recognized by the Chicago Tribune as one of "Chicago's Top Workplaces."

But in a deeply researched Wall Street Journal (WSJ) study on companies soliciting five-star reviews from their employees, the North Center-based Guaranteed Rate mortgage lender showed a sudden spike to the positive – following a rash of damning commentary.

Glassdoor, one of the largest online job recruitment sites in the world, publishes anonymous reviews of 900,000 employers globally. Guaranteed Rate's employee satisfaction score on Glassdoor had plummeted to 2.6 out of 5 stars in the Summer of 2018 from 3.5 the year before. Last Summer's reviews complained of management "lying" about pay and benefits, long hours without proper overtime pay, and a company that is "disorganized" and "stressful." Titles read, "Worst professional experience of my life," "Stay away if you value your happiness," and "Terrible. Disregard the fake positive reviews!"

The WSJ report concluded that the 240 five-star reviews posted in September and October of 2018 were the result of a campaign by Guaranteed Rate CEO Victor Ciardelli enlisting employees to post top ratings on Glassdoor. His own approval rating had nosedived from 75% to 43%, then spiked to 83% in the Fall. Meanwhile, there had been only 20 five-star reviews for Guaranteed Rate in the entire eight months prior.

Internal company emails read aloud over the phone to the WSJ asserted a "collective responsibility to provide positive feedback," and implored, "Please complete a Glassdoor review with a strong five-star rating for us."

But are they fake simply because they were solicited by the boss?

A 2014 blog entry on Glassdoor for Employers entitled "Encouraging Employee Feedback Do's And Don'ts" suggests that a direct ask is all in a day's work. "Your HR department should be responsible for inviting the company as a whole to leave reviews on Glassdoor," it reads, also advising employers to target new hires and managers specifically in their solicitations. "We even include handy templates that can be copied and pasted into e-mails."

While this newspaper's calls were returned by the PR department at Guaranteed Rate, the spokesperson declined to comment.

POLICE BEAT from p. 10

800 block of N. Kingsbury.

• Jorge Romero, 27, was sentenced to two years probation and given credit for 172 days spent in jail after he pleaded guilty to one count of aggravated unlawful use of a weapon before Judge Neera Walsh.

Last August, Romero was hospitalized for six days after being shot in the stomach in the 5000 block of W. Addison. Upon being discharged by doctors, police arrested him, and prosecutors filed gun charges against him because he was still in possession of a handgun when police found him bleeding out on the street six days earlier.

• Ronnel Spencer was found not guilty on three felony firearms charges in a bench trial by Judge Lauren Edidin.

Spencer, 28, was accused of being armed with a handgun while trying to shoplift from an H&M store at 840 N. Michigan Ave. in Nov. 2017. Police reported that they were escorting Spencer to H&M's loss prevention office when he tossed a loaded .38 caliber handgun as they walked through the accessories department.

But after hearing the evidence, Edidin found entirely in Spencer's favor.

Weapons charges filed after gunfire erupts near another River North nightclub

Gunshots were fired near a River North nightclub March 17, just days after nearby Sound-Bar was shuttered by the city following a shooting that killed that bar's doorman and injured its owner on March 8.

Around 2:50 a.m., witnesses leaving a nearby nightclub reported hearing seven to 10 shots fired in the 400 block of N. Orleans, police said. Officers later found shell casings in the street on Orleans.

A police spokesperson said witnesses reported seeing Isaiah Ayala, 32, of Aurora and another person get into a black Nissan Rogue that sped from the area moments after the shooting. No one specifically said that they saw Ayala firing shots, however, police said.

Isaiah Ayala

Officers in the Loop located the Nissan Rogue about five minutes after the shooting in the 300 block of W. Randolph. Police searched the vehicle, recovered a handgun, and placed Ayala into custody, the spokesperson said.

Prosecutors charged Ayala with felony aggravated unlawful use of a weapon.

Sunday's gunfire was reported as River North Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] is renewing his calls for the Chicago Liquor Commission to wield a firmer hand with nightclubs and bars in the area.

Following the Sound-Bar shooting, Reilly said, "problem clubs, in aggregate, are degrading the quality of life in River North. Every weekend we witness criminal activity around these venues and most weekends fights are reported as well. Police resources are stretched thin at this time of night, with so many late hour venues. I'm incredibly frustrated that the city's 'due process' for problem liquor licenses protects club owners at the expense of neighbors."

Judge sets bail at $1,000 for man accused of seriously injuring Trump Hotel guard

A man who's accused of seriously injuring a Trump International Hotel & Tower security guard will be able to go free by posting a bail deposit of just $100 even though he was accused in Nov. 2018 of beating a woman with a metal baseball bat.

Craig Echols

Police said two hotel security guards—ages 61 and 26—intervened after Craig Echols, 23, began smoking in the lobby, damaging furniture, and drawing on a pillar with a permanent marker around 2:30 p.m. March 15. Echols then battered both guards, causing the older one to fall and suffer a broken finger, torn ligaments in his right knee, a fractured cheekbone, and facial trauma that required 17 stitches to close, according to court records.

Damage to the hotel lobby was estimated at $2,500.

Prosecutors charged Echols with two felony counts of aggravated battery of a peace officer, felony aggravated battery of a victim over age 60, and felony criminal damage to property. Judge Stephanie Miller set bail at $1,000 and ordered Echols to remain on electronic monitoring. He can go free by posting 10% of his bail amount.

Echols received the lenient bail terms despite skipping court dates after he was accused of beating a 39-year-old woman with a baseball bat last November, according to county records.

Police responded to Echols' apartment building on Nov. 26, 2018, to handle a "battery-in-progress" call. Cops approached the apartment where the incident was reportedly unfolding and announced their presence.

At that point, a woman emerged from the apartment carrying a bloody baseball bat. Her face and head were covered with blood, cuts, and contusions, police said. The woman reported that Echols had beaten her with the bat. Echols—whose hands were bloody, according to police—countered that the woman swung the bat at him, so he disarmed her and struck her with it in self-defense.

The woman also alleged that Echols choked her about a week before the alleged bat incident, causing pain in her neck.

Echols was arrested, but the woman did not cooperate with prosecutors in the preparation of felony charges, police said. As a result, the state only charged Echols with two counts of misdemeanor battery and misdemeanor theft.

The woman's lack of cooperation led the state to drop all charges against Echols on Jan. 17.

Double-shooting on Argyle leaves one man critical, second grazed

Two men were shot when a gunman opened fire outside of an Uptown restaurant on March 19. No one is in custody.

Witnesses said the two men were in a small group that was standing outside of Family House Restaurant, 1007 W. Argyle, around 8:15 p.m. A man in the group then pulled out a handgun and began shooting as the rest of the group ran from the scene. One victim was critically injured, the second was grazed, according to police and witnesses.

Police said a 27-year-old man was shot in the chest, groin, both legs, and right arm. A 23-year-old man was grazed on his jaw. Both victims were being treated at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center.

Witnesses reported hearing about six shots as the group broke up and its members ran from the area.

The critically-injured man was found outside an apartment building near Argyle and Sheridan. The other man was found a short distance away.

Officers who reviewed police surveillance camera footage said the gunman was a black man, possibly in his 20's, who wore black pants and a black hoodie with a logo on the front. He was last seen running west on Argyle.

Two men charged with murder of an off-duty officer in River North

Menelik Jackson, 24, of the 1900 Block of E. 170th Place., South Holland, and Jovan Battle, 32, of the 2100 block of S. Albany Ave., have been arrested in connection with Saturday morning's slaying of off-duty Officer John P. Rivera, 23, and the critical wounding of another 23-year-old man in River North. The two have been charged with one felony count of first degree murder, three felony counts of attempt - first degree murder, and resisting/obstructing/peace office.

Jackson and Battle were arrested for the March 23, shooting in the 700 block of N. Clark at approximately 3:25 a.m. The offenders were identified as the individuals that fired into a vehicle fatally striking an off-duty Chicago Police Officer and critically injuring a 23 year old male.

Jovan Battle

Rivera and a friend were shot as they sat in Rivera's car with a second off-duty CPD officer and a female friend after leaving Stout Barrel House, 632 N. Clark St., around 3:30 a.m. The entire incident was captured on at least one city POD camera. The offenders were reportedly directed to Rivera's car by a vagrant who was walking in the area.

About an hour before the shooting, police were called to a nearby McDonald's to handle a report of 10 Hispanic men on a party bus who were fighting with two black men.

CPD expresses no urgency after mob forces cop to release handcuffed suspect

A Chicago police officer was forced to release a handcuffed drug suspect on Sunday afternoon when a group of people surrounded the cop and implied that he would be shot if he did not let the man go.

But on March 19, the department was displaying no sense of urgency in addressing the issue or re-capturing the man who ran away with a pair of handcuffs still binding his wrists.

CPD's Office of News Affairs confirmed the specifics of the incident but declined to release the name of the suspect who escaped because he was not in custody, there was no warrant for the man's arrest, and no investigative alert had even been issued for the escapee.

This reporter subsequently learned the 31-year-old man's identity through a police source. The West Side resident has been to prison repeatedly for narcotics, most recently in 2010, according to state records. His identity was further confirmed via a police report that listed him as the "escaped arrestee."

Scanner audio captured an officer's account of what happened at the scene: "Ten people surrounded me, indicating that they had firearms. And one person pulled him away from me, holding his waist, indicating that he would use a firearm against me."

Officially, the police department on Tuesday would say only that police officers saw a driver commit a traffic violation in the Austin neighborhood shortly after 2 p.m. Sunday and they conducted a stop of the vehicle.

"After he was stopped, the driver exited the vehicle and began to discard bundles of suspected narcotics to the ground," the department said in a statement. "Officers were able to detain the subject, but after police began collecting the bundles of suspected narcotics, the offender began to struggle with [officers], thrashing his body around. Police attempted to subdue the offender, who began to kick and strike" the officers.

The department continued: "A crowd gathered around the police, some retrieving the discarded suspect narcotics, others approaching the officers, yelling at and threatening the police. Gunshots then were heard in close proximity to the incident, putting officers in further fear of their safety. The offender was able to make good his escape with the help of subjects from the crowd."

This newspaper contacted the police department's chief spokesperson to learn more about the department's efforts to capture the suspect and identify members of the group that allegedly threatened to kill the police officers. He did not respond to our email.

Lakeview robbers take man's phone, car

A man was jumped and robbed of his phone, computer, and car March 19 in the Lakeview neighborhood. Police are trying to determine if the incident is related to a similar robbery that was reported about an hour earlier in West Town.

The Lakeview victim was walking in the 2900 block of N. Greenview around 5:40 a.m. when two offenders emerged from a small vehicle, approached him with a handgun and announced a robbery. The man turned over his phone, wallet and car keys to the robbers who then used his keys to steal his red Buick Encore SUV and a laptop that was inside, police said.

Police said the vehicle, bearing a license plate that begins with AG69, was last known to be heading east on the Kennedy Expy. around 6 a.m.

According to the victim, the offenders were a Hispanic man and black man with dreadlocks.

A robbery with some similarities to the Lakeview incident was reported at 4:30 a.m. in the West Town neighborhood, according to Chicago police.

In that case, a 34-year-old man was walking in the 2200 block of W. Ohio when four or five Hispanic men approached him. One offender pulled out a handgun with an extended magazine and announced a robbery. The group took the victim's phone, wallet, and car keys and then used the keys to drive away with the man's silver 2014 Toyota Camry, police said.

No one was injured in either robbery, according to police

page, teachers weighed in on the problems with over-testing in the city.

“It is absurd,” one wrote. “Weeks are wasted on testing and then teachers are required to spend more weeks on analyzing the data from testing. It takes away weeks of valuable instruction time as well as planning time for teachers. It is so unfair and stressful for students and teachers.”

Another teacher said the testing was one reason she pulled her child from the public schools and put her into a Catholic school. Private schools do not have to administer the IAR test.

“I feel like I am always assessing and so do the kids,” wrote another teacher. “They even ask are you working with us today or

Weber said. “It’s all about control of your castle’s inner world, and the protected courtyard gives these homes daylight and security.”

Access to the traditional-styled stucco homes is through a 6’-wide gated court way that is shared by four homeowners. Parking for four cars is provided at the rear.

“The basic house is a compact, well insulated (R-21 walls and R-38 roofs) space that is configured to provide daylight to all spaces and natural ventilation and convection, supplemented by attic exhaust fans,” Weber said.

Each house benefits from the sharing of an existing urban infrastructure and utilities, concentrated plumbing services and the utilization of “energy-star rated” windows and doors, and appliances as well as non-toxic, recycled and ecologically sustainable building materials, Weber said.

Energy efficiency also is achieved through a heat pump system for heating and cooling the houses, with supplemental gas heating in winter. “In addition, solar panels on the south side of the steeply sloping roof, unshaded by adjacent houses, are capable of generating 6,000 Kilowatts per year,” he said.

“The basic house-print of two rooms on three levels separated by a straight-run stair, offers a dwelling envelope that can be rotated to face the sun,” Weber said.

“Rooms on the sides of the open stair well create a dwelling section that engenders convection

Perhaps the most important concept of urban in-fill housing is to utilize every inch of existing land and infrastructure. “We should not waste the essence of the city—vacant land, the streets, utilities and infrastructure that are already there,” Weber said.

Book talk April 13 on 1919 race riots

The Edgewater Historical Society will be hosting a book discussion on Chicago’s 1919 Race Riots 10 a.m. Saturday, April 13, at the Edgewater Branch of the Chicago Public Library, 6000 N. Broadway.

In July of 1919, Eugene Williams swam across an invisible line at one of Chicago’s white beaches, and was hit by a stone that killed him. When a white police officer refused to arrest the man who had thrown the stone, violence at the beach spread to the city and lasted a week, ending only when the Illinois National Guard was called out.

During the riot, 38 people died (23 black and 15 white) and over 500 were injured. It is considered the worst of the approximately 25 riots during the Red Summer, so named because of the violence and fatalities across the nation.

Up for discussion will be the books City of Scoundrels by Gary Krist; Red Summer, by Cameron McWhirter, and The Chicago Race Riots, by Carl Sandburg.

For more information call 312-742-1945.

That 1919 race riot was a major racial conflict of violence committed by ethnic white Americans against black Americans that began on July 27, 1919, and ended on Aug. 3. During the riot, 38 people died (23 black and 15 white) and over 500 were injured. It is considered the worst of the approximately 25 riots during the Red Summer, so named because of the violence and fatalities across the nation. The combination of prolonged arson, looting and murder made it the worst race riot in the history if Illinois.

The sociopolitical atmosphere of Chicago was one of ethnic tension caused by competition among many new groups of European immigrants and migrants coming north from the South and Appalachia. Thousands of blacks from the South had settled next to neighborhoods on Chicago’s South Side, near jobs in the stockyards and packing plants. The Irish community had been established first, and fiercely defended their territory and political power against all newcomers. Overcrowding and increased African American militancy by World War I veterans contributed to the visible racial frictions. Also, a combination of ethnic gangs and police neglect strained the racial relationships.

Chicago Mayor William Hale Thompson may have exacerbated the riot when he refused to ask Gov. Frank Lowden to send in the National Guard for four days, despite Lowden ensuring that the guardsmen were in Chicago and ready to intervene.

Although future mayor Richard J. Daley never officially acknowledged being part of the violence, at age 17 he was an active member of the Irish Hamburg Athletic Club, which a post-riot investigation named as instigators in attacks on black Americans.

Street, sidewalk closures for One Chicago Square

Residents, pedestrians and those who drive downtown should be advised that Power Construction will soon be closing all four sidewalks along Chicago, Wabash, Superior, and Dearborn.

Although fencing is already in place for the sidewalk closure, pedestrians still have access to the sidewalk, but should exercise caution when walking by the construction site. Once a protected pedestrian walkway, with an overhead canopy, has been established in the curb lanes, the sidewalks will be fully closed.

The Curb Lanes along Chicago, Wabash, Superior, and Dearborn will remain a No Parking/Tow Zone throughout the project, to allow for demolition, and then the protected pedestrian walkway.

Resident should not be alarmed by the presence of Chicago Fire Dept. [CFD] personnel, equipment, and trucks along Dearborn, between Superior and Chicago, over the next week. CFD will be commencing training exercises in the three abandoned buildings on the Dearborn frontage.

Free shredding, recycling in the Gold Coast

On April 6 a free 2nd Ward paper shredding and electronics recycling event will be held at 1254 N. State Pkwy.

In addition, the Cook County Sheriff's Dept. will be on-site to collect and properly dispose of expired and unwanted prescription drugs.

The event starts at 9 a.m. and ends at Noon. There is a limit of 3 boxes of paper shredding per household.

Walsh Park closing for construction

Walsh Park, 1722 N. Ashland Ave., will soon be closed. It serves as the eastern end of the 606 (Bloomingdale Trail). The south end of Walsh Park is scheduled to be closed April 1 and open again in October.

In 2014, The Chicago Park District received an open space and land acquisition grant from the Illinois Dept. of Natural Resources to support improvements that will provide a family friendly space that supports both the active recreation (athletic field, playground, etc.) and passive recreation (natural grass, trees, and community gardens) at this site.

The design for Walsh Park includes a playground with a spray feature, outdoor fitness equipment, a gathering space, pathway, landscaping, and lighting improvements.

The Dog Friendly Area will remain opened, as will access to the 606.

potholes in Lincoln Park than in the Gold Coast.

"If you're stuck in traffic, I ask for your vote," Lindblom said. "Our streets are in worse shape and our transit isn't getting better."

Both had little to say about the popular ride-sharing companies that have added considerable density to Chicago's traffic woes.

Crime in the 43rd ward? Again, a matter of perspective.

Lindblom said assaults in Lincoln Park have increased considerably, while the alderman countered that robberies were down. Both support building the new police and fire academy on the West Side. Both said they need more police (though they differed on the need to further train detectives).

Both support cutting city pensions, with the alderman saying she supports a state constitutional amendment to cut the cost of living increases for government retirees. Ald. Smith said the Illinois Constitution demands that the state must increase property taxes in order to properly fund government pensions.

"This is the biggest issue we face and it's pushing people out of our community," Lindblom said. "It's a hard issue and there's no easy answer."

Lindblom said he would tax aldermanic pension perks that double their pensions.

Ald. Smith said she endorsed mayoral candidate Lori Lightfoot, a fellow former prosecutor.

Lindblom asked why would Ald. Smith sit on a judicial panel that evaluates judges and then take contributions from those very judges. Smith countered that Lindblom supported a machine judge over a better-qualified judge.

So what about corruption?

lion. NAMA, on behalf of Irish taxpayers, is looking to Kelleher to make up the $54 million difference.

In addition to the $90 million, companies owned directly or indirectly by Kelleher owed about $510 million to Anglo and $600 million to other Irish banks.

Shelbourne said it was out $1.21 billion in damages. Its lawsuit claimed tortious interference with contract and accused NAMA of leaking confidential information and destroying written communication of former employees.

National Asset Loan Management, a private company based in Dublin, was a co-defendant in the lawsuit.

In her memorandum and opinion filed on March 14, Judge Wood argued that even if Shelbourne had been able to pay off its loans, there still was no guarantee that the Spire would be completed.

"Shelbourne still would have had to find the funds to actually complete construction of the Spire," wrote Wood.

Smith said she fought for oversight of City Hall committees, including taking the Workers Comp Committee away from indicted Ald. Ed Burke.

Lindblom then asked the alderman why she walked off the floor and did not vote for oversight of the City Council. He said she was afraid to upset Burke. Smith said she had to take a call, and she was embarrassed.

Term limits?

Ald. Smith said she is opposed because the lobbyists will have more power.

Among the back and forth volleys of accusations, twisting of the truth was confronted on both sides. Lindblom noted that his so-called connections to Mitt Romney's hedge fund would have placed him on Romney's lap since Lindblom was only three when he allegedly was working at the same fund as the former Republican president candidate.

"I think the problem is the old guard likes to attack people who come in and want change," Lindblom said.

But they also say the more things change, the more they stay the same.

The Chicago office of The Related Companies, Related Midwest, proposed building two slender towers on the site, a 1,100' tower containing 300 condominium units and a 175-room hotel, and an 850' tower with 550 rental units. The plan was rejected by Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] but on Feb. 21, the city's Plan Commission voted to extend the site's zoning rights for another year, giving Related Midwest more time to revise its plan.
