Chicago will highlight the Chicago Riverwalk's free summer programming during a public celebration running Monday, May 13, through Sunday, May 19.

Chicago Riverwalk week May 13 - 19

Experience Chicago's second waterfront during a preview of summer programming including Art on theMART, new works of public art, fireworks, tours, kayaking, Fishing at the Jetty, great food, live music, and Year of Chicago Theatre programs.

The City of Chicago will highlight the Chicago Riverwalk's free summer programming during a public celebration running Monday, May 13, through Sunday, May 19. Activities include Year of Chicago Theatre themed programs, Art on theMART, walking tours led by the Chicago Architecture Center, Fishing at the Jetty led by the Chicago Park District and a pyrotechnic display off of the south drive of the Merchandise Mart on Monday, May 13.

The Riverwalk has transformed Chicago's downtown waterfront into an active, pedestrian friendly environment and a cultural destination for both residents and tourists alike. It has emerged as a must-visit destination offering dramatic views of the "River Canyon" of iconic architecture and beautiful bridges with bustling bars and restaurants, cultural events and public art nearby. The city is wrapping up a $12 million improvement project on the east end of the Chicago Riverwalk, including a new path, landscaping, updated lighting and seating to enjoy the view of the Chicago River.

New to the Chicago Riverwalk this year is the Community Marketplace. 2FM conducted a public solicitation encouraging minority and women-owned vendors to operate concessions on the Chicago Riverwalk. There is a pool of 23 qualified vendors who will be eligible to operate on the Chicago Riverwalk for the next three years.

Public Art will enliven the Chicago Riverwalk with a new commissioned work by Ebony G. Patterson. Known for her drawings, tapestries, videos, sculptures and installations that involve surfaces layered with flowers, glitter, lace and beads, the Kingston-born multimedia artist is creating a series of five intricate and colorful banners titled... between the below... The banners will adorn the Chicago Riverwalk on Wacker

Drug rehab, behavioral healthcare center causing problems in River North

A number of residents on the Near North Side and River North have contacted the city, local police and aldermen Walter Burnett [27th] and Brendan Reilly's [42nd] offices to report aggressive panhandling, drug transactions, used hypodermic needles, and verbal harassment near the intersection of Chicago Ave. and Franklin St., by patients of Family Guidance Centers, Inc. [FGC], 310 W. Chicago Ave.

(FGC is a not-for-profit behavioral healthcare organization which treats and prevents substance abuse disorder as well as an array of other related problems.)

Based on these concerns, the city and Ald. Reilly's office submitted a formal request asking the Dept. of Business Affairs and Consumer Protection [DBACP] to initiate the Community Meeting process for FGC.

DBACP held three meetings to discuss the deleterious impact that FGC had on the River North neighborhood. The licensee was asked to complete a number of "Reasonable Steps" to address the concerns raised, specifically regarding security, loading activity, and capacity of patients. Significantly, by July 1, FGC has agreed to reduce its patient load to 700 or fewer clients.

The city has announced that the Largest rooftop deck coming to Navy Pier

Boasting over 36,000 square feet of indoor and outdoor space, a new year-round rooftop destination may elevate skyline and lake-shore gazing to another level.

The official opening of Offshore, the nation's largest rooftop patio built atop Navy Pier, will be late this month. Offshore will offer Chicagoans and tourists a full-service luminous bar, world-class kitchen, terraces, seven cozy fire pits, an entertainment and gaming area, and multiple large social gathering spaces.

Navy Pier is already one of Illinois' top tourist attractions and this is sure to become one of the city's hottest destinations.

The kitchen at Offshore will focus on seasonal, modern American cuisine with global influences served as small, shareable plates. Special on-site catering menus will also be available.

Guests entering Offshore will be greeted with a wall of cascading, colorful propellers that are flanked by two slate metal vintage series pool tables on either side. The indoor area features custom brass whistle-shaped light fixtures, captain chairs, and oversized "playpens" made of a mashup of geometric cushions specifically designed for socializing. Architectural parasols run the length of the 20,000 square foot Terrace, along with communal tables lined with clusters of globe lighting positioned in netting floating overhead. A highlight of the deck is a 450 square-foot planter with lush greenery shaped like Chicago's "Y" symbol, a nod to the Chicago river. On the Southeast end of the terrace, a stage for live entertainment overlooks the city's skyline. Two private lawns with sail shade canopies will act as a destination for group gaming, social gatherings, bridal parties, weddings, and much more.

Oh dear, bread and beer. If I were dead, I wouldn't be here.

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

It's the wee hours of the morning, 4 a.m., and I'm waiting for the snow to fall. Everyone is juiced up at the meteorological warnings for what seems a bazaar turn of events. Climatically. I have homemade chicken soup in the freezer, I am ready for anything.

My sister, Mary Regina and I, had most fortunate childhoods, growing up with our grandparents as essential people in our lives. Only now do I realize how that placed the experience of their cultivated lives as a measure of our own. What we aspired to. What we believed about life and responsibility.

Our maternal grandfather, Timothy O'Connor, was dead by the time we came along. But that still left us three grandparents to roam through our lives. We were grandparent-enriched. Our Grandmother Nora Ryan O'Connor lived with us. And just three houses away from ours, my O'Gorman grandparents held court. Pipe smoking there was, of course, essential. So was poetry and music, Arthur Godfrey, Carmel Quinn, Jack Eigen, the White Sox, homemade bread and apple tart. The kettle always on the boil. Conversation always in the air.

By today's standard our grandparents were mature, and all Irish through and through. Each one possessed of their own unique brogue. The lilt of language that made their every phrase a song. When it wasn't a prayer. It may have been the times, but we were very religious, like Buddhist monks atop a Tibetan peak. We always considered the religious practices of our beloved Dominican nuns to pale in comparison to our grandparents. They practiced their devotion to the Catholic faith with both familiarity and authority.

We were praying along with them as soon as we could talk. As tiny tots we knew our way around all the religious rituals that gave us certitude and comfort. We were on board with sacrifice, penance, sanctifying grace, fish on Fridays and the responsibility of walking to Church with any grandmother who needed a companion. We may have been children of the Cold War, but we were warmed by the love and devotion of larger-than-life grandmothers who always smelled talc-sweet. And a grandfather, like the fragrance of burning turf, who inspired adventurous loyalties to the cause of Irish freedom. Amid all the commotion and song of childhood, we inhaled some essential elements of being not only good Catholics, but first rate Americans. After all, we had a teenage uncle who died fighting the Nazis in the snows at Bastogne.

Being the grandchildren of immigrants placed a special responsibility on each of us to live patriotic lives. Shaped by the lessons of American independence, we had to be fair and truthful like George Washington. Honest and uncomplicated like Abe Lincoln. And no nonsense like Harry Truman. The stars and stripes our faithful banner. Our everyday pledge of loyalty to it a commitment of daily honor.

We learned from our grandpar-

ents' experiences of leaving their parents' homes as teens and sailing to America. Getting over their sadness by trading it for dreams of a new life in a special land.

Our Grandmother, Nora O'Connor, was a woman of thoughtful reflection. She lied about her age when catching the boat at 15. She lived in Chicago with family from her Irish village. And she was soon dusting the marble stairs and statues in the mansion of the Buckinghams who gave Chicago its emblematic fountain in Grant Park. And the gold statue of "Hamilton" in Lincoln Park. Her happy demeanor also led her to do nanny work for the young artist Norman Rockwell at his home in the Berkshires. Grandma Nora's long life of 97 years, five children, widowhood and the occasional Brandy Alexander, gave her a wide base for practical philosophy. My sister, her lady-in-waiting for many years, recalled recently for me some of her ripest wisdom. She would often quote these bon-mots in passing-on life's secrets, when she wasn't watching Fahey Flynn, TV newsman, or quoting columnist Dorsey Connors' latest do-it-yourself household hints.

Grandma Nora was a firm believer in the effect patience had on opportunity. She did not believe in instant gratification. She always took the slow wait, the calm road, in which ideas, like her bread dough, would ripen and rise. "Keep a thing. It's use will come," she was fond of saying. You may not have need of some thing today, but in time you will discover its essential use.

Grandma was a gentle persuader. She drew few lines in the sand.

You changed nothing by force, you had to show people the right way, the better way. Give people an example of how to live and you changed them forever. "A man convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still," she'd say. She loved to challenge any brutes around her with it. She knew that to change someone's way of thinking, you have to change their hearts. Then the brain will always follow.

Grandma never weighed more than 87 pounds. But she loved her homemade scones with lots of butter, and cherished crisp bacon. She was a wonderful cook of cozy vittles, lavishing salt from every shaker. But she had learned the essentials of a slim figure in her youth, like Rose Kennedy. She often would tell a chubbier grandchild, "Thoroughbreds never run into flesh." She knew a trim jib made every sailing easier. Hers was the common sense of the paddock and track holding the wisdom that light flesh gives added speed.

We could always count on Nora to share some essential of life, a tidbit learned as a girl in a foreign land and as a mom with a house full of kids and a husband who worked for the Burlington and Ohio Railroad in the Chicago of Mayor Big Bill Thompson. That was in the 1920s when the family bathtub was essential for use in a small bootlegging operation. I'm sure she lifted her chin with pride as they stirred their homemade gin, convinced of the goodness of their concoction. Delighted the Irish could be so enterprising. "If you sewed on a Sunday, you'd rip the stitches out with your nose in heaven on a Monday." She always took a forgiving and loving tack when faced with the necessities of everyday life. Slight disregards of the moral order carrying little penance for the Lord who strung the stars. Without the essentials to round us out, she knew we'd walk a futile path. Or as she might say, "Such is life without a wife, and a home without a baby."

CONDOLAZIONI: This column mourns the passing of the gentlemanly Dominic DiFrisco, Gold Coast resident, Astor St. neighbor and champion of Italian culture. His elegance and comfortable friendship was his Chicago hallmark. A man of easy renaissance custom, he lifted many with courtly courage and strength. He helped fashion Chicago as a world-class city. We send love to his beloved wife and family.

ARTS GIANT: The grand dame of socialites, Jayne Wrightsman, who married Standard Oil heir, Charles Bierer Wrightsman (1944-1986), and was a mentor to Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, has died at 99. She later sold her palatial Palm Beach home, 'Blythedune,' to Donald Trump. Wrightsman amassed an enormous collection of art: Vermeer, Monet, Renoir and Goya during her life, as well as the finest private collection in the US of the decorative arts of the Ancien Regime, ultimately donating many objects (comprising the Wrightsman Galleries) to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Her 'cultural friendship' with the first lady began while working on the White House restoration. An owner of one of the world's few Vermeer works, she would loan the paint-

One hundred-years-old and still going strong

Not every nonprofit organization can boast that it is turning 100, but the Anixter Center now can. And it's celebrating its big birthday on May 15 in a way that's sure to be a huge hit, with a fundraiser, A Century of Service, at the 1914 Club at Wrigley Field, 1060 W. Addison St.

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

The benefit will honor the Anixter family, whose vision and commitment to serving those with disabilities has impacted thousands of individuals, helping them grow and thrive within the community. It will be chaired by Dominick Mondì, CEO of Mesirow Financial.

"What a milestone for any agency!" exclaimed Anixter Center CEO Rebecca Clark. "We are incredibly excited to celebrate the 100th anniversary --representing all of the services Anixter has provided to the hundreds of thousands of people over time. We are humbled by all the work that has gotten us this far and energized to continue into the next century."

"Anixter's 100-year celebration at Wrigley is going to be an experience," added Clark. "There will be access to the brand new Catalina Club, the 1914 Club, and the stands behind home plate, as well as pictures with the World Series trophy."

Anixter, which has locations at 6610 N. Clark St. and 2032 N. Clybourn Ave.,

began as the Douglas Park Day and Night Nursery in 1919, serving children who had been orphaned due to the flu epidemic. In the 1950s when the need for orphanages declined, the agency looked to what the need in the community was, and services transitioned to supporting adults with disabilities. Since the '50s, Anixter has served people with a variety of needs through a multitude of programs in both day and residential programming.

Today, its services focus on three groups of people: people with disabilities, people with behavioral health needs and people who are deaf, blind, or hard of hearing. Anixter Center and its division - Chicago Hearing Society (CHS) - help nearly 8,000 children, teens and adults each year by providing a range of supports including employment assistance, residential opportunities, counseling and skill development, and other social services.

"Our clients are a diverse group of people who come to Anixter Center with a variety of needs," said Clark. "Most have at least one disability and many have more than one. While we serve people of all income levels, the vast majority of our clients have incomes significantly below the poverty level. We want to help as many people as we can, which is why our annual benefit is so important," added Clark.

Rebecca Clark, president/CEO of Anixter Center, which is celebrating its 100th birthday on May 15 with a fundraiser at Wrigley Field.

All money raised goes directly to support the programs and services offered at Anixter Center, especially Anixter's Disability Services line of work, said Clark.

"It is important for people to know that Illinois ranks 44th in the nation for supporting adults with disabilities," she said. "These funds will help us support more people to be in the community, help us improve our residential homes that people live in, and help us provide best in class care to those who rely on us at a time when state funding doesn't come close to covering the cost."

If you can't make it to the Wrigley bash yet would love to help this amazing organization, Anixter Center is searching for volunteers for its Jack Ehrlich Literacy Program, where there's a long list of people waiting to be matched with a tutor, Clark said.

The program provides adult learners with free, one-to-one tutoring based on individualized goals. Tutoring can be held on site in Lincoln Park at 2032 N. Clybourn Ave. or at a location best suited for the adult learner and tutor, such as a neighborhood library. From learning the alphabet and phonics to increasing reading levels, creative writing, and computer literacy, the adult literacy program supports adult learners of all abilities. Small group instruction for computer literacy and creative writing is also available. (Interested? Contact the Anixter Center Literacy Coordinator at literacy@anixter.org.)

Clark said she's "very excited" to see where the next 100 years takes Anixter, as it continues its mission to enrich people's lives.

"Our commitment is to help people be as independent in their community as possible," she said.

Luxury home bargain hunters should have many choices

With luxury-home sales softening in early 2019 due to economic factors, wealthy home buyers in Chicago should have many choices this spring, experts say.

Only 380 properties sold for $1 million or more in the first quarter of 2019, according to the quarterly RE/MAX Premier Luxury Housing Report from RE/MAX Premier of Chicago.

That's a hefty decline of 22.3% in total luxury units compared with the first quarter of 2018. Luxury-home sales slumped 10.2% in the last quarter of 2018. However, luxury-home sales registered a gain of 1.4% for all of 2018.

Despite slower first-quarter sales, the median sales price gained 1.1%, rising to $1.365 million and the time needed for one of those homes to sell slipped to an average of 190 days from 209 days one year earlier.

Despite those relatively weak numbers, there are some amazing new luxury properties on the market.

Take the 8,800-square-foot penthouse at 840 N. Lake Shore Dr. that recently hit the market at a listing price of $13.5 million.

This pad, with an unobstructed view of Lake Michigan, pretty much has everything. Six bedrooms, eight baths, several living and dining spaces, 1,135 square feet of terrace space, a wine cellar, game and media rooms, and an office, noted listing agent Tim Salm of Jameson Sotheby's International Realty.

"This condo is in an elite class, a custom build-out with the highest-end finishes," said Salm. "It is a private full-floor unit with more square feet of living area than most of the largest single-family homes in the Gold Coast or Lincoln Park."

Historically, fewer than 10 condos in the Windy City have sold for more than $12 million.

The inventory of properties for sale at $1 million or more in the Chicago area ended the quarter at 2,710 units, only 1.2% less than at the same time last year. All of the decrease occurred in the suburbs, where the inventory fell 2.5%, while the city's luxury inventory expanded by 1.1%.

In Chicago, first-quarter luxury sales were down a whopping 25% to 195 units, the lowest total for that quarter since 2016. However, the median sales price for city luxury homes climbed 7.8% to $1.485 million, the highest quarterly median price since 2010.

Experts say the first-quarter median price declines likely were caused by the Polar Vortex in Chicago, a volatile stock market and the sharp rise in mortgage rates at the end of 2018.

"The luxury market activity has been slightly sluggish over the last six months, but a real test will be in the current quarter when sales usually accelerate," said Janice Corley, broker/owner of RE/MAX Premier.

"Typically, we see an uptick in both inventory and buyer activity after the deadline passes for filing income taxes," Corley noted. "I'm encouraged by what we're seeing so far, but we'll have to see if that translates into stronger sales."

Corley noted that the positive news in the first-quarter results is that median prices were generally steady or up and the inventory of detached luxury homes continues to decline although it is still uncomfortably high in the suburbs.

"But in the city, we have just an 11-month supply of detached homes even when you measure it against the first-quarter sales pace," she said.

Luxury Detached Sales

First-quarter sales of luxury single-family homes in Chicago slumped by 11.7% to 106 units. However, the median sales price climbed a robust 9% to $1,523,288. Average market time dipped to 188 days—17 days less than for the same period last year.

Three Chicago neighborhoods with the most luxury-detached home sales continued to be Lake View, Lincoln Park and North Center, which taken together accounted for 64.1% of first-quarter luxury-detached transactions. Sales climbed in Lake View, up 11.1% to 20 units, and in Lincoln Park, up 16% to 29 units, while sales in North Center fell by 32.1% to 19 units.

"Those results helped boost the median sales price," Corley explained, "because the luxury prices in Lake View and Lincoln Park typically are higher than in North Center," Corley said. The first-quarter median in Lake View was $1,764,500, and in Lincoln Park it was $1,621,500.

Elsewhere in the city, luxury detached sales were little changed compared to last year's results. Sales fell by five units in Logan Square, two units in Lincoln Square, one unit in the Near North Side and in West Town, were unchanged in Uptown and rose by two units in Edgewater.

"Even though fewer units are selling, the Near North market seems fairly healthy," noted Janice Corley, broker/owner of RE/MAX Premier.

Luxury Attached Sales

Sales of luxury attached homes in Chicago were especially sluggish during the first quarter, with 89 units changing hands, 36.4% less than in the same quarter last year.

The median sales price gained 4.7% to $1.4 million, and average market time rose to 169 days from 132 days a year ago. The inventory of luxury units on the market at the end of March was 635 units, an increase of 6.9%.

Each of the six city communities that lead the attached luxury market registered a sales decline in the first quarter compared to the same period last year, including the Near North Side, which traditionally dominates the attached luxury market and accounted for 49 sales, representing 55% of all city luxury attached sales during the first quarter.

"Even though fewer units are selling, the Near North market seems fairly healthy," noted Corley.

"What we're seeing are fewer sales of what might be called entry-level luxury properties, and more sales at the high-end, which explains why the median sales price there gained 18.6% for the quarter to $1.845 million."

Elsewhere, attached luxury sales fell 42.1% in Lincoln Park to 11 units, a whopping decline of 68% in the Near West Side to 8 units, a drop of 36.4% in the Loop to 7 units, hefty slippage of 60% in the Near South Side to 6 units and a drop of 37.5% in Lake View to 5 units.

Two-flats going, going... gone?

The fate of this greystone two-flat at 1436 W. Berwyn become a symbol of the fight to try and protect two-flats on the North Side.

Unique Chicago using stock being targeted by moneied-set for extinction

BY PATRICK BUTLER

According to more than one local real estate expert, the once omnipresent two-flat apartment building could be on the way out.

"In many Chicago neighborhoods with strong real estate markets, we've seen a growing demand for single-family homes" which are in short supply in many "hot" neighborhoods, according to Geoff Smith of DePaul University's Institute of Housing Studies [IHS].

In fact, DePaul's IHS, WBEZ radio, and Chicago Magazine have all done recent reports on how the disappearance of two-flats in many formerly working-class neighborhoods is part of what has been killing the supply of affordable housing on the North Side.

Like the bungalow, the once-ubiquitous two-flat had long been "Chicago's answer to the Brooklyn Brownstone and the Georgetown Row House," states Chicago Magazine. Since the early 20th century it has been "performing the duty to which it was first called – that is serving as both shelter and source of rental income for striving families."

But according to IHS' Smith, that future could be in question, at least in some "hot" North Side neighborhoods with a big demand for single-family housing and precious little vacant land.

compared to $860 and up, urban planner Michael Babcock, who has been tracking housing trends since 2015, told the Curbed Chicago. That's meant a loss of at least 5,600 units, especially in neighborhoods like Lincoln Park, Lakeview, Lincoln Square and North Center where the impact has been "astronomical."

But at least some Edgewater residents aren't ready to lose their two-flats lying down, said Dan Luna, chief of staff at the 48th Ward aldermanic office.

"We recently more-or-less downzoned a community bounded by Foster, Glenwood, Bryn Mawr and Clark street from RT-4 to RS-3" to make it impossible to build much larger buildings, Luna explained.

"And we weren't the first," he said, noting that part of the adjoining 40th Ward did something similar about 10 years ago," adding that some of that area's residents came to several 48th Ward community meetings to show how it could be done.

Downzoning gave the community control over future development in the area and helped to prevent the future demolition of two-flats.

Indeed for many in Edgewater, a fight over a handsome and historic greystone two-flat at 1436 W. Berwyn become a symbol of East Andersonville's fight to control future developments in the area and draw a line of defense in the sand. Ald. Harry Osterman was swayed to downzone the area based on the neighbors strong concerns. The downzoning change went into affect Sept. 20, 2018. "I agree with those in support of this rezoning and believe it is in the best interest of the community," Osterman said at the time.

DePaul's IHS, WBEZ radio, and Chicago Magazine have all done recent reports on how the disappearance of two-flats in many formerly working-class neighborhoods is part of what has been killing the supply of affordable housing on the North Side.

"We did it last year, but the process started about two years before. There was a lot of hard work and due diligence going on," Luna said, adding that while there was some resistance, there was a petition signed by 400 residents supporting the concept.

"And I'm hearing others are interested in looking into this, trying to get all the facts," then make a decision, he added.

Best of Lincoln Park Awards will be June 20

North side residents can soon nominate their neighborhood favorites for this year's Best of Lincoln Park Awards, given by the Lincoln Park Chamber of Commerce. Nominations can be submitted beginning Wednesday, May 15 and winners will be announced during an awards ceremony on Thursday, June 20. For more information call 773-880-5200.

You are here because of your mother

Mother's Day gives everyone a chance to embrace and celebrate it, whether you are a mother or not is irrelevant. The fact that you exist made someone a mother.

Regardless if you know your mother and enjoyed her, or not, whatever your relationship may have been with her is insignificant. You are here. Enjoy and make the most of the life she has given you.

It's not their fault, humans made pigeons this way

A history of how pigeons took over Chicago and what organizations are doing about it

Think twice before releasing doves
at your wedding

BY STEPHANIE FOX
Medill News Service

After spending the day with family celebrating her husband's birthday, Chava Sonnier received a call that made her heart skip a beat.

"I don't think he's going to make it," her friend said on the other line.

Despite the call coming in at around 10:30 at night, Sonnier hopped in her car with the hope of saving a life.

When she encountered the wounded, he was paralyzed, crippled with his legs bowing out at right angles. Blood oozed from his chest and face. His eyes barely opened.

Despite Sonnier being a certified nurse, her patient that night wasn't human. He was a pigeon.

Sonnier spent two years as a volunteer for the Chicago Bird Collision Monitors [CBCM], an organization of over 200 volunteers working to protect, rescue and rehabilitate injured city birds.

On the night Sonnier saved

Before pigeons transformed into the city-savvy birds, they were called rock doves, a wild species native to Europe, Northern Africa and India.

the pigeon, who would later be named Jonah, a Chicago police officer had been on patrol when he noticed a small object moving slowly along an alleyway. Closer inspection revealed it to be Jonah. Paralysis left the bird no choice but to peck the ground and drag his body by the neck, lacerating his chest and stomach.

"[The officer] was compassionate enough to google 'bird rescue,' and call the hotline," said Sonnier. The CBCM have a 24/7 hotline dedicated to responding quickly when a bird is in danger.

Even with Sonnier's medical experience, she wasn't sure there was anything she could do to help the bird survive.

"When I picked him up my heart just broke for him. He was just a shell. I could feel every bone. He was just so skinny, and so weak, and so frail," Sonnier said. "At that point I was not sure if he would make it through the night. He was in such a debilitated state."

But he did survive, and his paralysis gradually subsided over the next few weeks. Even with his impressive recovery, Sonnier knew Jonah could never return to city-life, so she adopted a pigeon.

That may be counter-intuitive to most, but historically pigeons are a human-dependent species, and they've been that way since people decided to capture and breed them thousands of years ago.

Before pigeons transformed into the city-savvy birds, they were called rock doves, a wild species native to Europe, Northern Africa and India. For generations European civilizations captured and selectively bred the doves, eventually producing the larger, human-dependent rock pigeon. The now domesticated bird proved desirable, first for their meat, then for their compass-like ability to always find their way home.

This breed of pigeon (which has a bizarre organ called a "crop" that allows both female and male birds to produce a milky substance to feed their young) contains a unique tiny magnetic organ found in their beak. It allows them to sense the Earth's magnetic pull and is responsible for half of their strange navigational superpower, according to Cordula Mora, the Center for Undergraduate Research and Scholarship director at Bowling Green State Univ. During Mora's research published in 2004, she studied pigeon's connection to the Earth's magnetic field by attaching a magnet to their beaks to determine if the addition would throw off their navigational abilities during homing—and it did. There are a few theories about the other half of pigeon's directional capabilities, but the most common are that the birds can either see and remember locations well, have a heightened sense of smell, or both.

"In order to navigate you have to have a map and a compass because the map only gives you information about your current position and the compass can only give you direction," Mora said. In this case, the map information is the pigeon's magnetic sense and their sense of smell, and the compass is the pigeon's connection to the Earth's magnetic pull as well as their ability to derive direction from the position of the sun. "When they're put together it allows you to navigate."

Though the Europeans didn't understand how the birds were able to navigate, they did recognize that the domesticated rock pigeon could be used as a tool to transport messages. But few suspected when the species was introduced into the eastern United States in the 1600's, that the bird's abilities could come in handy during war time.

Thirty-two pigeons were presented with the Dickin Medal, a European award created to celbrate the work done by animals used in World War II. Though the birds weren't honored with this award until the second world war, rock pigeons were used in both World War I and World War II to transport important messages across enemy lines.

The U.S. "Signal Corps in the army actually recruited people based on whether or not they had raised pigeons in their civilian life," explained Elizabeth Dahl, the director of The American Pigeon Museum, Oklahoma. The selected soldiers were sent to special camps where they were taught the most effective ways to train pigeons to return to portable lofts, the shelters domesticated pigeons view as their home.

During World War I, the U.S. Army Signal Corps, whose mission is to manage all aspects of communications and information systems support, used 600 pigeons in France alone.

But by 1957, the army officially suspended the use of pigeons in the military.

Over time, the once beloved war heroes were cast out and forced to fend for themselves. Though it may seem to some as though these pigeons were simply returning to the cageless lives of their ancestors, the reality is that after thousands of years of breeding the birds had changed into a species just as reliant on humans as any common house pet. Because of this, the proper term for the birds roaming the city isn't "wild," but "feral."

The birds that survived being released were forced to adapt. They did this by seeking out those they were bred to rely on: humans. Because even though people were done with pigeons, pigeons were not done with people.

"You see [pigeons] out in urban areas and not in rural areas, because they are at heart and in reality, originally a domestic species. They're dependent upon humans. Whether it's picking up after whatever is left behind for them in the city, or whether it's living as someone's pet... You could catch a pigeon in the city tomorrow and bring it in your house and it would domesticate fairly quickly and probably consider itself the world's luckiest pigeon," said bird lover Sonnier. And she would know. Within six weeks of adopting Jonah, the pigeon had fully bonded with her.

Today feral pigeons born in the wild may have developed the instincts needed to protect themselves from predators and the windshields of double-decker tour buses, but birds currently born domestically don't stand a chance if they find themselves lost in the urban terrain.

That happens more than you'd think.

British fine art photographer captures wolf on LaSalle St.

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

If David Yarrow just wants to repopulate downtown Chicago with wild wolves, he is going about it in a slow and expensive way.

The fine art photographer from London, whose large prints of wildlife sell for tens of thousands of dollars, has created a second photograph featuring a wolf in downtown Chicago.

This time, the wolf is on LaSalle St. — not far from its first modeling assignment on the Chicago Riverwalk.

“I have always been drawn to Chicago,” said Yarrow recently. “It is urban beauty at its very best and offers visuals along the river and to the south of the river that Manhattan cannot match.”

After a few days of scouting locations, Yarrow picked LaSalle St., looking south from Washington St. The Chicago Board of Trade Building at the south end of LaSalle, he says, “offers opportunities that Manhattan simply does not give. The eye is grabbed and then led deep into the vortex of Gotham.”

A filming permit was issued for Yarrow by the Chicago Dept. of Transportation for the photo shoot on April 17 and 18. The selected image was captured at 1:30 and Yarrow says they finished at about 4 a.m. on April 18.

The Board of Trade Building did present a challenge. According to Yarrow, LaSalle could only be closed after midnight, but by that time flood lights on the building were switched off.

“With some charm and a few dollars, the Board of Trade agreed to help us, and the lights went back on until 4 a.m.”

Yarrow says the budget for the photo shoot in the Loop was his biggest yet for a single location.

The image will be sold in sizes up to 90 inches wide at Hilton-Asmus Contemporary, an art gallery on N. Wells St.

Yarrow calls the image “a big photograph of a big street in a big city” and “an iconic American urban view.”

On Nov. 29, 2017, a stealthy late-night photo shoot on the Chicago Riverwalk featured a fashion model and a gray wolf from Montana. Titled It Is Just a Matter of Time, the image shows the wolf on the Riverwalk east of Wabash Avenue and across from Trump International Hotel & Tower.

Yarrow, age 53, was born in Scotland and currently lives in London. He is also a financier, having founded the London-based hedge fund Clareville Capital in 1995.

City says state wrongly intercepting millions in state grant dollars over pensions

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

The city of Chicago has filed suit against the Illinois state Comptroller's office and pension boards for its police officers and other city workers, accusing the pension funds and the comptroller of wrongly intercepting state grant funds otherwise owed to the city because the pension funds say the city has shorted its pension contributions.

On May 1, lawyers for City Hall filed a complaint in Cook County Circuit Court, asking a judge to slap an injunction on the comptroller's office and order the state release the money.

"... The Comptroller's continued interception of these grant funds creates a significant threat that certain unallocated City funds intended for future risks and unanticipated shortfalls will be depleted and unavailable when needed," the city asserted in its complaint. "This could lead to cuts in services and a reduction in personnel if there are not enough unallocated funds to respond to an emergency or other unexpected budget shortfall."

The complaint centers on decisions made by the Office of Comptroller Susana Mendoza to intercept and hold grant money the city said it is due to receive from various state agencies.

The complaint does not specify how much money the city believes the comptroller's office has intercepted to date.

According to the lawsuit, the comptroller's actions followed notices of "final determination" submitted in March and April by three pension funds which manage retirement funds for Chicago city workers, including police officers. According to the complaint, city believes the pension funds have told the comptroller City Hall has shorted its contributions to the three pension funds by a total of about $23.1 million, which could trigger an embargo on state funds to the city.

Under state law, the comptroller is required to intercept and hold any payments being made by the state to a municipality, if one of the municipality's pension funds reports the local government has failed to fund its pensions at the levels set by law.

Last year, the city of Harvey became the first Illinois municipal government to fall prey to the law, fighting in court for months over the comptroller's acquiescence to the request of a Harvey public worker pension fund to intercept the money. In that instance, the litigation surrounded Harvey's share of state sales tax money. That court fight eventually ended in a deal on how to divide the money.

In this instance, the city complaint said the "final determinations" by the pension funds are "false."

The city also asserts the comptroller has not given the city a hearing to dispute the pension funds' determinations, which the city said is contrary to the comptroller office's rules and regulations, and against state law.

"The Comptroller's interception of the grant funds without a final determination following a hearing before an impartial tribunal as to the City's obligation to pay the alleged debt is also a denial of due process," the city said.

A spokesman for the comptroller confirmed the comptroller's office had intercepted the funds at the request of the pension funds.

Spokesman Abdon Pallasch said the comptroller's office acted based on their understanding of the law. He noted the law had been written specifically to only allow the comptroller to intercept grant funds payable to the city, exempting the city of Chicago's share of state tax revenue.

Pallasch said the comptroller's office had been served the city's lawsuit and would respond in court.

He declined for now to estimate the value of the funds that had been intercepted, saying that was still being calculated.

Music back on at Symphony Hall

Lakeview resident Leon Hoffman visits with Itzhak Perlman and Evgeny Kissin after opening night of Symphony Hall May 1. The Hall had not celebrated music in seven weeks while the Chicago Symphony Orchestra was on strike. The CSO played their opening concert on the evening of May 2.

Known worldwide for his singular talent, as well as his charm and humanity, Perlman partnered with Kissin, on the piano, to reopen the storied Michigan Ave. music hall. The collaboration of the two provides perhaps the foremost interpretation of violin and piano repertoire. Hoffman had first played on stage with Perlman 50 years earlier.

Spring Cleaning

Now that the last of the snow has fallen in Chicagoland (we hope) it's time to open the windows, dust off the lamps and shake out the rugs... it's time for Spring cleaning!

It's no secret that many people today try to do what they can individually on the local level to help the Earth and protect the environment and ourselves. According to the American Lung Association, "Chemicals released when using cleaning supplies contribute to chronic respiratory problems, allergic reactions and headaches."

With Spring cleaning now in full swing, here's how people can clean their homes with minimal impact on their health and the environment.

Utilize reusable cleaning supplies

Reusable cleaning supplies cut down on unnecessary waste and help save people money. Here are a few simple ways to reduce cleaning waste.

- Cut up old t-shirts to use as rags
- Invest in reusable sponges such as Scrubby's
- Replace dryer sheets with wool or silicone balls

Make cleaning solutions at home

By using household ingredients such as baking soda, lemon juice, water and vinegar (not to be mixed with baking soda) people can reduce the amount of chemicals and toxins that are in their homes as well as the environment. Traditional cleaning supplies not only contain chemicals, but the production and shipping they require also takes its toll on the environment.

Vinegar and baking soda can be used to clean almost anything. Mix in a little warm water with either of these and you've got yourself an all-purpose cleaner.

- All-purpose cleaner: Mix ½ tsp washing soda, two cups hot water, and a small squeeze of liquid soap; shake until dissolved

- Grout Cleaner: Mix ½ a cup of baking soda and two gallons of water

- Air freshener: keep a box of baking soda in areas of your home that start to smell like your fridge or trash can

Many people think that antibacterial and antimicrobial 'cleaners' are necessary, especially dur-

Loop robbery brings long prison term

Antonio Dorsey Demarcus Moore

Two men who were on parole when they robbed a woman at gunpoint in her car near Wacker and La Salle in Feb. 2018 have reached plea deals.

Antonio Dorsey of Chicago Lawn and Demarcus Moore of Auburn Gresham have each pleaded guilty to one count of armed robbery with a firearm in the case. Prosecutors dropped charges of vehicular invasion and unlawful restraint. Judge Ursula Walowski sentenced each man to seven years.

Around 2:15 p.m. Feb. 28, 2018, Dorsey, Moore, and a third man opened the passenger side door of a woman's car and demanded her valuables while holding her at gunpoint, police said. The robbers ran away with the woman's necklace and phone, but police soon spotted the men running on the Riverwalk, and a foot pursuit ensued. Moore and Dorsey were found hiding under vehicles near Lower Wacker Dr. and Michigan Ave. The victim was not injured.

Court records show Dorsey, 21, was paroled 26 days before the robbery after serving less than one year of a two-year sentence for trying to mug a 53-year-old man in the Loop.

Meanwhile, Moore, 21, had been paroled about four months before the robbery after serving half of a two-year sentence for possessing a defaced 14-inch sawed-off shotgun.

With 50% sentence reductions and credits for time served, Dorsey and Moore will be released early on Aug. 23, 2021.

The third offender, Terry Brewer, 21, pleaded guilty to felony theft last summer in exchange for a three-year sentence for his role in the robbery. At the time of the hold-up, he was on probation for forcing his way into a man's Kia in the Loop on July 6, 2016.

Probation for robbing man that helped her

A woman who tried to rob a man after he gave her $2 for train fare near the Sheridan Red Line CTA station on Aug. 16 has received two-years "drug probation" in exchange for her guilty plea. Tara Moore, 51, was also fined $529 by Judge Aleksandra Gillespie.

Prosecutors said the victim gave Moore a couple of bucks to get on the train, but when he turned to walk away, Moore grabbed him by the shirt, repeatedly punched the man, and ripped his pants pocket as she tried to gain control of his wallet. Four bystanders pulled Moore off of the 34-year-old victim and held her for police in the 900 block of W. Irving Park Rd., according to a report. Moore was arrested near the Sheridan Red Line station.

Fifteen-time convicted felon goes back to prison for 16th time

A 15-time convicted felon is going back to prison after pleading guilty to mugging a man in Rogers Park last October while on parole.

Dewitt Brown, 50, was arrested after a police sergeant on patrol saw him rob a man on the street in the 1700 block of W. Greenleaf around 10:30 p.m. Oct. 27.

When the sergeant intervened in the robbery, Brown allegedly said: "I ain't going down like this!" Brown then turned around, ran a few steps, collided with a wall and fell to the ground, the sergeant reported. As Brown was lying on the ground, he began to take items out of his jacket pocket, including a pay stub, a Ventra card, and an LG phone, all of which belonged to the 50-year-old robbery victim, police said.

Brown received a six-year sentence for his latest mugging in a plea deal approved by Judge Earl Hoffenberg. With 158 days credit for time served while awaiting trial and Illinois' standard 50% sentence reduction, Brown will be released early on Oct. 22, 2021.

Police records show that Brown's 2018 robbery took place less than 100 yards from a 2016 robbery that sent him to jail for three years in 2016.

Robbery in South Loop grocery store brings prison sentence

Six years is the sentence for Shavone Gunby, 25, who has pleaded guilty to the attempted robbery of a senior citizen in a South Loop grocery store men's room.

Around 4 p.m. Nov. 24, 2018, a 60-year-old man was using the restroom at Jewel-Osco, 1340 S. Canal, when he was approached from behind, placed into a chokehold, and ordered to hand over his money, wallet, and cell-phone by a robbery offender, police said. The victim fought off his assailant and ran from the bathroom screaming for help.

Police said a Jewel-Osco security agent chased Gunby into the parking lot where Gunby pulled out a knife and charged at the guard, causing the guard to retreat. The guard gave police a description of the offender and cops quickly located the suspect at the Roosevelt CTA station, 30 E. Roosevelt Rd.

A plea deal with prosecutors had Gunby plead guilty to attempted robbery while the state dropped two attempted robbery charges along with counts of aggravated battery, unlawful restraint, and aggravated assault. Judge Timothy Joyce approved the plea deal. Gunby is scheduled to be released early from prison Nov. 24, 2021.

Man charged with armed robbery on DePaul campus; Second hold-up remains unsolved Charges are filed in one armed robbery on DePaul University's Lincoln Park campus last week while a second hold-up on the same block remains unsolved, according to Chicago police.

Jesus Cabrera Monje, 21, has been charged with robbing a 19-year-old man at gunpoint in the 2300 block of N. Kenmore around 11:35 p.m. Thursday, May 2.

The victim told police that he noticed another man following him as he walked home. The stranger ap-

Three charged with armed robbery in Loop, given a sweet deal

Arthur Willis, one of the newly-assigned judges on Cook County's bond court bench, took a whack at setting bail recently and...WOW! He's going to be something to watch.

In one of the first cases before Willis last week, three people were charged with Class X felony armed robbery after they allegedly held up and battered a man on a CTA train in the Loop. Class X is the second most serious level of crime in Illinois behind murder.

A 39-year-old man told police that two men, a woman, and a female juvenile robbed him on a train at the State-Lake CTA station late last Tuesday. The victim said Alija Olds, 26 of the Gold Coast pointed a gun to his head and then to his stomach as Olds took valuables from the victim's pockets. Two females and Nathaniel Goodwin, 19, who were with Olds, battered the man and a 17-year-old boy who was also on the train, prosecutors said.

Police found Olds, Goodwin, De'Ovenonna Thomas, 20, and the juvenile at a nearby convenience store where the victims subsequently identified them as the offenders, according to court records. The robbery victim suffered bruising and swelling of his proached the victim, displayed a handgun, and demanded the man's valuables as he tried to enter DePaul's Sanctuary Hall Townhomes, according to police, who said the offender fled with the victim's phone and earbuds.

Monje was arrested a short time later near the Armitage Brown Line CTA station. Officers found the victim's cell phone in his possession and a handgun was recovered.

Prosecutors charged Monje with felony armed robbery with a firearm and felony unlawful use of a weapon. He is being held in lieu of $100,000 bail.

Just a few hours later, a female student told DePaul Public Safety officers that she was robbed while walking out of the Richards Library at 2350 N. Kenmore around 7 a.m. Friday, May 3.

The woman told police that she was approached by an unknown man who displayed a knife and demanded her laptop. The robber then fled northbound on Kenmore to Fullerton. DePaul said the victim was not injured.

Teen charged with knocking Cubs guard unconscious over candy sales dispute

A 14-year-old boy is facing felony charges after he knocked a Chicago Cubs security guard unconscious outside Wrigley Field on Friday afternoon, police said. The incident was the second in 10 days that involved "candy kids" who flood the neighborhood on game days and frequently unleash violence on passersby, patrons, and employees of nearby businesses.

The Cubs security officer was found unconscious outside of the left field gate around 3:50 p.m. May 3, according to a source. An investigation found that the boy "sucker punched" the guard after being asked not to sell head, face, and body, police said. The teen's left arm was reportedly swollen.

Olds and Goodwin were charged with Class X felony armed robbery and two counts of battery. Thomas was charged with Class X felony armed robbery and one count of battery. Details of the juvenile's charges were not immediately available.

In court, Willis set bail for Thomas and Goodwin at $2,000, meaning that they can go free by paying a deposit bond of just $200. For a Class X felony allegation, Willis said the two will have to go on electronic monitoring when they post bail.

Olds was already free on bail awaiting trial for burglary to auto in Lincoln Park. Willis revoked that bail and set bail in the robbery at $5,000.

That's quite a debut for Willis. We haven't seen bails that low for Class X defendants since Judge Stephanie Miller repeatedly released Class X robbers on recognizance bonds. Thankfully, she stopped doing that after realizing that higher bails are appropriate in violent Class X cases. Let's hope Willis catches on before too many people get hurt.

candy on stadium property, a source said. The Cubs security officer blacked out from the punch, went limp, and fell to the ground.

Chicago police said the security officer was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center for treatment. The teen has been charged with aggravated battery of a peace officer.

The Cubs did not respond to a request for comment.

Around 4:10 p.m. April 25, a group of "candy kids" punched several adults outside of Sports World, 3555 N. Clark. Two juveniles were detained in that incident.

"They are all back," a local restaurant manager said on Saturday. "Sometimes four or five kids will surround a few intoxicated patrons. It's all a matter of time before something happened. A lot more kids this year," the manager continued. "Some older guys are walking the block giving the kids direction. They don't work alone. Tough kids, they won't listen."

Last August, 10 juveniles between 13- and 16-years-old were arrested for mob action, retail theft, assault, and similar charges for a series of attacks along Clark St. Video showed teens charging at local doormen, climbing through patio windows, and throwing objects into crowds.

Man sentenced for robbery, strangulation in Gold Coast

A man who was charged with choking a robbery victim into unconsciousness during a robbery in the Gold Coast last summer has pleaded guilty to one count of robbery in a plea deal. Judge Catherine Haberkorn sentenced Darius Moses, 30, to eight years in prison with credit for 290 days time served. Five felony counts including aggravated battery and unlawful restraint were dropped in the deal.

The robbery victim said he was rendered unconscious and robbed as he walked through the Gold Coast on his way home from an after-work social function on July 20, 2018.

"It was a nice night, and I elected to walk back home, which I've easily done at least 50 times in the past 12 years or so," the victim said. The 41-year-old, who works in healthcare, asked not to be identified by name.

Police said that just after midnight, the man was walking in the 1400 block of N. State Pkwy. when two offenders grabbed him from behind, placed him into a chokehold, and knocked him to the ground.

"I was choked, dragged down and beaten up," he said, adding that he doesn't remember the attack because he was knocked unconscious. "I woke up in Northwestern with a broken nose, fractured orbit, a black eye, and a chipped tooth. They stole my phone, laptop bag with a laptop, and the cash out of my wallet."

Luckily, a witness saw the robbery unfold, and he gave detailed descriptions of the offenders to police. About 20 minutes later, cops stopped Moses in the 100 block of W. Division because he matched one of the offender's descriptions. Moses, police said, was carrying the victim's phone.

Moses previously served three years for another robbery in 2007. After receiving a 50% discount on his current sentence and being given credit for time served awaiting trial, he is expected to be paroled on July 15, 2022.

Tourist describes brutal hotel room attack, but lack of cooperation yields only misdemeanors

A South Side man is only facing misdemeanor charges after allegedly carrying out a brutal attack on a tourist in a downtown hotel room because the 20-year-old victim did not cooperate with detectives who were investigating allegations of multiple felonies. Police responded after the Oklahoma woman reported being beaten and robbed in her room at the Doubletree Magnificent Mile, 300 E. Ohio, around 6:45 a.m. April 12.

The woman told police that she agreed to meet 29-year-old Darius Sanford in her hotel room via a dating app. Once Sanford arrived, he engaged in "solo activity" on the woman's bed, washed up, then grabbed the woman by the back of her hair and demanded to know where her money was hidden, the woman said.

The woman said she refused to give Sanford money, prompting Sanford to break a glass bottle over her head, causing lacerations to her head, ear, arm, and shoulder, according to a police report.

Sanford let the woman go when she told him that she had cash hidden in a drawer, according to allegations in police records. The woman said Sanford took the money and left the room. He was still in the hotel lobby when the police arrived.

Cops said they found blood on both beds in the woman's room, shattered glass, and more blood in her bathroom. The woman was treated at Northwestern Memorial Hospital for cuts, and a rape kit was collected, police said.

But detectives said the woman refused to fully cooperate with their investigation and only misdemeanor charges of battery and theft would be pursued "at this time."

Sanford was released on a recognizance bond.

Boystown menace gets 8 years for armed robbery near Belmont L

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

A neighborhood menace who got probation for burning down a Boystown home during a year of asinine behavior around Boystown has been handed serious prison time for her latest stunt: robbing a man at knifepoint near the Belmont Red Line CTA station.

Ryan Handzel, 24, was sentenced to seven years for Class X felony armed robbery by Judge Timothy Chambers in a plea deal that called for prosecutors to drop an additional felony aggravated battery charge. With 369 days credit for time served while awaiting trial and Illinois' automatic 50% sentence reduction, Handzel is expected to be released on Oct. 15, 2021.

Prosecutors said that Handzel and then-24-year-old Dionte Smith flagged down cops near the 800 block of W. Fletcher at 3:30 a.m. April 21, 2018, and reported that a man had just robbed them. Cops spoke with the alleged robber who said Handzel and Smith had it twisted: They had just punched him in the face and robbed him at knifepoint, according to prosecutors.

A search of Handzel and Smith by police revealed that they were carrying the real victim's property. Both were charged with felony armed robbery. Smith's case continues to work its way through the court system.

In Oct. 2016, Handzel was accused of punching a 24-year-old man in the face two times during an argument in the 800 block of W. Waveland. When the victim dropped his cell phone after being hit, Handzel picked it up and handed it to another offender who fled the scene.

Police said Handzel told them, "I hit [the victim] in the head twice, but I didn't intend to steal [the] phone." She was charged with battery and theft, but the charges were dropped when the victim failed to appear in court.

Most infamously, Handzel is one of two people convicted of "accidentally" burning down a 126-year-old Boystown home in April 2016.

No sure bets yet among plans for legalizing sports gambling

Odds look good for mobile betting; but $10M fee a gamble

BY GRANT MORGAN
Capitol News Illinois

With five plans being considered, it's anyone's guess what legalized sports gambling will look like in Illinois if the Legislature approves a bill this spring.

One element of several of those plans might not yet be a safe bet. The wisdom of having a $10 million one-time licensing fee was questioned during a second hearing on sports gambling by the House Revenue and Finance subcommittee April 25 in Chicago.

Testimony from the hearings will be used to reconcile the plans proposed in State Rep. Michael Zalewski's holder bill, House Bill 3308.

The proposed licensing fee would be paid by sports betting operators, such as casinos, race tracks or online platforms.

"If the licensing fee is too high, it's going to prohibit people from entering the market," said Robert Davidman, a marketing professional who has helped launch several online gaming businesses in New Jersey, widely considered to have the most comprehensive sports betting system of any state.

Davidman said fees that other states are considering, $100,000 in Indiana and $45,000 in Iowa, are better.

Pennsylvania, where the fee is $10 million, has not sold all of its available licenses, Davidman said.

In his proposed fiscal year 2020 budget, Gov. J.B. Pritzker uses the sale of 20 licenses as a source of more than $200 million in new revenue.

A safer bet among the proposals might be the allowance of mobile betting.

"Mobile sports wagering is not only the future, it's the now," said Jake Williams of iDEA Growth, a not-for-profit sports betting association.

He said mobile betting accounts for roughly 80 percent of New Jersey sports wagers.

Zalewski, who is the subcommittee chairman, agreed.

"We've become aware that states that don't have a mobile piece don't fare very well," he said.

That is bad news for one of the state's proposed plans, which would have sports betting overseen by the Illinois Lottery without any online component.

Then, there is the question of which sports to include.

Larry Lyons, athletics director at Illinois State University, spoke on behalf of most of the state's 13 schools with Division I athletics.

"We are in agreement that we oppose legalized gambling on college sports," he said, because it brings bettors too close to young athletes who are still maturing.

But others said there still would be illegal gambling on college sports if they are not included in the bill.

One emerging sport that could be included is electronic gaming, or eSports competitions for games like DOTA II, League of Legends and Fortnite.

Bob Greenlee of eSports company Tusk Strategies argued that eSports are more popular and professional than many people think.

Arguably the nation's best Fortnite player, Illinois resident "Ninja" Blevins, made as much as $10 million in sponsorships last year.

A 2018 League of Legends tournament, meanwhile, attracted 205 million live viewers, compared to just more than 100 million viewers of the Super Bowl that year.

"eSports is a real thing," said Margo McDermid (R-Mokena), adding that she learned about it recently while on Netflix.

"I hadn't really considered it as something Illinois should include in our future gaming, but perhaps we should," she said.

Greenlee said a company analysis puts state tax revenue from eSports betting alone at $18 million a year.

Also at Thursday's hearing, Grace Hou, head of the state's Department of Human Services, said next year the department needs almost double its historical budget of $1 million for gambling addiction services, but not because of sports betting.

"People often struggle with turning themselves in, so we need more marketing and outreach," Hou said.

But Anita Bedell, executive director of Illinois Church Action on Alcohol and Addiction problems, said legalizing sports betting will only increase addiction.

"Rather than address the problem, you want to make it worse by putting it on phones," Bedell told lawmakers.

No date has been set for the subcommittee's next hearing on sports gambling.

CLEANING from p. 9

ing cold season, but they don't clean hands any better than soap and water, and also add to the risk of breeding "super germs," bacteria that survive the chemical onslaught and have resistant offspring. The FDA has found that antibacterial soaps and hand cleansers do not work better than regular soap and water, and should be avoided.

Bring plants inside

While bringing in plants may seem counterintuitive to cleaning, plants are known for cleaning the air and improving respiratory issues. Pretty much any broad green leaf plant will do. Peace Lilies are a favorite choice. By placing certain plants inside the air people are breathing in their homes will be cleaner and greener. Here are some of the best plants to bring indoors: English Ivy, Bamboo Palm and the Spider Plant.

Cleaning can be easy, safe if you just know how.

PIGEONS from p. 6

pigeons found themselves in this situation on Nov. 28, 2017 after being dumped in a Ravenswood parking lot. An unknown man pulled into the lot and began scooping dozens of birds out of his van and onto the gravel, according to Ravenswood residents. When asked for an explanation for his odd behavior, the man told the residents he was giving his birds a chance to exercise. But when his car was empty, he drove away, leaving the birds on the street to fall prey to hawks and owls.

Domesticated pigeons often wear an ankle band, which specifies their age and hatching location. When the CBCM arrived on the scene they found that most of the pigeons were wearing bands. Despite this, they were unable to contact the man responsible for the abandonment of the birds.

The pigeons “were banded, but we tried to get in touch with the group of pigeon folks associated with their particular band number and we weren’t able to get a response,” said Katie-Anne O’Neil, a volunteer for the CBCM.

A couple of days later, the monitors had caught about 60 of the pigeons. Without knowing how to obtain food or water because of their domesticated upbringing, many were famished and dehydrated. Others were diseased and needed immediate medical assistance. Birds identified as rock pigeons were either too malnourished or hadn’t received the training needed to find their way back home.

“It’s just like if you or I were suddenly placed in the wilderness. We wouldn’t necessarily know how to forage and find food for ourselves. And we wouldn’t necessarily have the instinct to hide from things that want to eat us,” Sonnier said.

Fox Valley Wildlife Center, a wildlife refuge in Kane County, which often cares for the injured birds the monitors find, took in the rescued pigeons.

Others weren’t so lucky.

For the next week, Ravenswood’s streets and alleys were littered with the corpses of pigeons that had been picked off by predators. Splattered blood marked the spot of the original dumping. Residents were shocked, but members of the CBCM knew events like the one in Ravenswood are fairly common.

According to animal rescue organizations, most birds used in the dove/pigeon release business are all-white pigeons. Many of the birds used for this purpose are not trained to return to their loft, and are easy-pickings for predators.

A few months after the incident in Ravenswood, another dumping of more than 30 pigeons occurred in Margaret Park, 4921 N. Marine Dr., on Aug. 28, 2018. And on March 21, 11 domestic pigeons were dumped in an Andersonville driveway.

With the dumping of domestic pigeon appearing to be on the rise, a group of monitors recognized a need for a separate organization dedicated to healing, fostering and adopting out rescued pigeons.

The CBCM “gets called for domestic birds all the time,” said Sonnier. She noted the abundance of well-established rescue organizations in place to take in birds such as parakeets and parrots—the species most commonly thought of as domesticated birds. “But there was not a rescue in place for pigeons.”

Ten monitors, including O’Neil and Sonnier, decided to start a sub-organization, The Chicago Pigeon Pets Rescue [CPPR], on Sept. 6, 2018 to combat this problem. Still a fledgling organization, the members share responsibilities, which include responding to calls involving pigeons made into the 24/7 monitor hotline, retrieving and transporting pigeons, fundraising to pay for pigeon’s vet visits, fostering the pigeons in Chicago suburbs (a livestock ordinance prevents Chicago residents from owning pigeons within city limits), and adopting out rescued domesticated and non-releasable feral pigeons.

“The team formed in response to a huge glut of rescue pigeons and nowhere to put them,” said O’Neil. Being a new organization means that the CPPR doesn’t currently have enough fosters to take in the pigeons they save. Because of this, they currently rely on members of the CBCM who volunteer their homes. Once fostered to full health the birds become available for adoption. That process includes an application and a $40 adoption fee.

The “two [Chicago] dumps in particular really hit us hard,”

O’Neil said.

The amount of pigeon dumpings may surprise those outside the world of feathers and beaks, but it’s not the most common call the CPPR receives involving pigeons. More often, the organization responds to calls about racing pigeons and wedding/funeral “doves.”

The same navigational instincts that turned rock pigeons into war heroes, also make them desirable for competitive racing. The sport, which gained popularity among industrial working men in the early-1900s, involves training rock pigeons to fly hundreds, or even thousands, of miles from a designated releasing point to a finishing destination—demonstrating which trainer reared the fastest and most intelligent bird.

“If you’re downtown and you see spotted pigeons... some that have white on them, they’re probably the offspring of a dumped wedding pigeon who was able to survive and married a city pigeon.”

The sport continues to maintain popularity around the world in the 21st century. From the Iranian pigeon race that racked up over 14,000 participants this February to the weekly club races that take place each year between April and September in the United Kingdom (with around 42,000 fanciers, or pigeon enthusiast, involved), pigeon racing sustains its global appeal.

Despite the astounding number of participants in the sport, the CPPR has a less favorable view of pigeon racing.

“The biggest contributor to feral pigeons is pigeon racing,” said Sonnier. The pigeons most often picked to race are “married” birds, or pigeons that have chosen a life-long spouse. Specifically, female pigeons, which Sonnier said don’t like to be separated from their mates, are shipped to a releasing point because fanciers know the birds will fly as fast as possible back to their partners.

But many of the birds chosen for longer races never make it home, according to information gathered during a 2012 undercover investigation conducted by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA).

“More than 60% of the birds get lost or die as a result of extreme weather, predators, electrical lines, hunters, or exhaustion,” explained a PETA article. PETA is an extremist animal rights organization dedicated to fighting for the welfare of all species.

Fanciers “raise large quantities of [pigeons] because they are intended to be expendable resources,” Sonnier continued. Those blown off course either adapt to life in the wild (usually by marrying a city pigeon) or die. The combination of so many racing pigeons marrying city pigeons and their fast reproductive cycle lends to the huge quantity of feral pigeons in urban settings. Female pigeons reach sexual maturity at seven months old. They produce around two eggs each mating cycle, which they lay about 10 days after mating. The eggs hatch about 18 days later.

And the birds that do make it home but aren’t fast enough for their owner’s liking are either dumped or killed [culled] according to Sonnier. She also mentioned that fanciers who decide “they’re not going to race pigeons anymore usually wind up doing a massive dump.”

This may be the case for some pigeon racing organizations, but Deone Roberts, the Sports Development Manager at the American Racing Pigeon Union [ARPU], says she’s never witnessed mistreatments of any birds during her 20 years with the organization.

“There’s misinformation about treatment of the birds. I don’t know what to say to that when I see what is required to participate in the hobby,” Roberts said. “It’s an animal-lover organization.”

Roberts also says the members of the ARPU take extra precautions to ensure the health of their birds.

We look “for hawk migration because hawks are a natural predator. Another precautions [we take is] watching the weather. You don’t deliberately put an animal in a difficult situation,” said Roberts.

But she also admits that she cannot speak to pigeon racing on a larger scale.

“There might be something for profit. That is different from what we do,” she said. For-profit races, such as the 2012 Diamond Elite Race in China awarded the first prize winner 10 million yuan—an equivalent of $1.5 million—for the pigeon that could cross 300 miles the fastest. Those interested in entering had to pay $8,000 upfront. “[The ARPU] does family backyard hobby [racing] for diplomas and trophies and the camaraderie and friendly competition.”

Members of the CPPR also blame the population of city pigeons on wedding/funeral “dove” releases. According to the rescue, most birds used in the dove release business are all-white pigeons. Birds used for this purpose that are not trained to return to their loft, are easy-pickings for predators.

“Because they’re white there is no camouflaging themselves. So, often if they are not rescued first, they just get eaten by predators,” Sonnier said. Like the racing pigeons that find themselves lost in the wild, their only chance of survival is to marry a city pigeon. “If you’re downtown and you see spotted pigeons... some that have white on them, they’re probably the offspring of a dumped wedding pigeon who was able to survive and married a city pigeon.”

Debra Hayes, who owns White Water Doves, a business of over 60 all-white rock pigeons, says the training she has picked up over her 10 years in the wedding/funeral dove release business prevents her from losing birds.

“I personally take them out... within the yard where the loft is at and make sure that they’re trained to go back when they’re called. And then after they get good at that, I gradually take them out farther,” said Hayes. No matter the distance, whether it be two miles or 200 miles, she said she only rents out her birds after they prove they can confidentially return to the loft. “I am not training for speed but for accuracy so occasionally a bird does not make it home the day of the release but does return in the next few days.”

However, she does recognize that there are dove releases just trying to make a quick buck, without bothering to train their birds, or buy pigeons bred for navigation.

“The year that I started doing this, I got criticized because people thought that I had let my doves go. [Doves] were all over the place, [but they were] not mine,” Hayes said. Someone had released ringed-neck doves in her area, she explained. This species of mostly-white pigeon, which is decorated with a black line behind its neck, is a breed of fancy pigeon, bred for its looks rather than its navigational abilities.

Though, the CPPR does not support any dove release businesses, they are most concerned about scenarios such as the one Hayes described.

“If you google fancy pigeons, you’ll see a whole gamut of unusual looking pigeons that would never be able to survive in the wild because of their coloring,” Sonnier said. “A lot of fancy pigeons are white, and a white bird can’t survive in the wild because Chicago only has snow part of the year. They can’t camouflage in with the buildings.”

In the months since the CPPR’s advent, members have rescued a slew of Chicago pigeons. From lost, white wedding/funeral doves to dumped fancy pigeons that get called into the CBCM’s hotline as “I don’t know what this is, but I’ve never seen one in Chicago before,” the organization is reassured every day that a group such as theirs is needed in the city.

“I would like people to know that we exist,” said O’Neil. “And I would ask that people take a second look at pigeons, because I think that they’re so much more than what they appear to be at a first glance.”

Polynesian dance will follow talk by social worker

Justine Janis, a social worker for the Chicago Public Library Bezazian and Uptown branches, will talk about her job and how she can help those who seek her assistance during a Community Coffee event at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Bezazian Branch, 1226 W. Ainslie St.

Community Coffee is described as a casual event where attendees can meet their neighbors. Coffee and snacks will be served.

The event will be followed at 11 a.m. by a Polynesian dance performance by Isla Pacifica in celebration of Asian American/Pacific Islander Heritage Month. The Chicago-based group's mission is to share the art and heritage of Polynesia. They will share dances from Hawaii, Tahiti, Guam and Samoa.

The truth is, of course, that there is no journey. We are arriving and departing all at the same time.

Thefts at construction sites

Chicago police are warning about thefts from construction sites downtown. The unknown offender(s) are prying open office doors at construction sites and taking copper pipe, iPads and power tools. These incidents have occurred during overnight hours in the 300 block of E. Wacker Dr. on April 26, between 12 a.m. – 7 a.m., and again on the 400 block of Lower Wacker Dr. between April 29, 2:30 p.m. and April 30, 5:30 a.m.

Another downtown carjacking under investigation

A woman told police that she was pushed by a man who stole her car as she prepared to fill it with gas at the BP service station, 1221 S. Wabash, near the Roosevelt Red Line CTA station. The incident is at least the third carjacking or carjacking attempt in the downtown area since April 29.

The victim was getting ready to fill up her car when a man in his late teens pushed the woman, then jumped into the driver's seat and sped away with her black Kia around 1:45 p.m. April 30.

Minutes later, the car was found abandoned with its engine running in the northbound lanes of Michigan Ave. near Balboa. Witnesses told police that two men in their late teens jumped from the car with a woman's purse and climbed into a nearby silver Toyota that fled the scene with a third person driving.

The two primary offenders were described as black males in their late teens. One was wearing a black hoodie. The Toyota, which has significant damage to its passenger side, was last seen westbound on Harrison from Michigan, according to a witness.

Tuesday's carjacking bears some resemblances to a pair of attempted auto thefts that were reported in River North and Streeterville on April 29.

- A would-be thief jumped into the driver's seat of a man's car as he was putting items in the vehicle's trunk in the 1100 block of N. State St. shortly after 2 p.m., police said. A bystander yelled out to the car's owner, who managed to pull the offender out of his car before the thief could drive away
- About 15 minutes later, a woman was elbowed in the face by a man who tried to steal her car from a valet stand in the 300 block of E. Erie. Bystanders intervened, and the offender escaped in a waiting vehicle.

Police said the thieves were getting around in a silver 2013 Chevrolet, possibly a Malibu, with darkened windows and a license plate that begins with AE266. The passenger-side brake light does not work. The driver and the man who tried to take the vehicles are both black men in their late teens, or early 20's who stood about 5'-6" tall and wore plain black jackets, accord-

Grad student found dead in Loyola dorm

Chicago police have launched a death investigation after a 26-year-old Loyola Univ. graduate student was found dead in his Water Tower campus dorm room May 1.

EMS and police were called to student's 22nd-floor unit at Baumhart Hall, 26 E. Pearson, after he was found unconscious in his dorm bathroom around 4:15 p.m. An ambulance crew pronounced the man dead at the scene.

Police said the man was found with lacerations to his neck, but foul play was not immediately suspected. A CPD spokesperson said the department did not believe that there was any threat to the community.

The man was pursuing a master's degree in social work, according to a university source.

Cops are watching as 60-year-old is mugged

Two plainclothes Chicago cops were watching as a 60-year-old man was knocked to the ground and robbed near his West Loop home April 29, according to prosecutors. Now, the alleged robber is facing felony charges.

The cops were in an unmarked car in the 600 block of W. Adams around 8:30 p.m. when they saw what they believed was a fight between two men on a nearby sidewalk. One man—now identified as Juan Borges, 42,—pushed the older man to the ground and then ran up the middle of Adams St., walking right past the officers' vehicle, police said. As Borges got close to the police car, he dropped something on the street.

The officers detained Borges and spoke with the other man who reported that Borges had just knocked him to the ground and robbed him while saying, "Give it to me! I have a gun."

Juan Borges

The object that Borges allegedly dropped near the police car turned out to be the victim's wallet, police said, complete with his ID, credit cards and cash. No gun was found.

Police said the victim was taken to Rush Hospital where he received stitches for a head wound and was admitted for treatment and observation.

Prosecutors charged Borges with aggravated robbery, and Judge Susana Ortiz ordered him held without bail.

Gunman forces victim to lie on ground during robbery

A Lakeview man told police that he was robbed at gunpoint near Boystown early Saturday morning. No one is in custody.

The victim was walking in the 500 block of W. Stratford around 2:10 a.m. when he was approached by a gunman who forced him to lie on the ground, police said. The offender ran toward Lake Shore Dr. after collecting the man's valuables, including an Apple Watch, iPhone, and wallet, according to a police report.

The offender was described as a black male in his 30's who wore a red puffy jacket. He stands about 6'-1" tall, weighs 200 lbs, and was last seen southbound on inner Lake Shore Dr.

Wrigleyville and Boystown this year recorded their second-best first quarter robbery stats since at least 2001, according to statistics from the city's data portal. Only 12 robberies were reported in the area during the first three months of the year. That compares to 20 during Q1 last year; 25 during Q1 2017; and 40 during Q1 2016.

But there has been a definite uptick in muggings around the area since mid-April.

Also lending to uncertainty about what summer holds: Local police Commander Marc Buslik, whose strategies and management style have driven street crime to new lows, is retiring.

Thefts of catalytic converters

There has been a recent rash of thefts of catalytic converters. New incidents include those on the 5600 block of N. Kenmore Ave. on April 12-14, between 8 p.m. – 2:30 p.m.; the 5800 block of N. Kenmore Ave. on April 12-14, between 9 p.m. – 10 a.m.; 900 block of W Carmen Ave. on April 12-16, between 8 a.m. – 6 p.m.; 5100 block of N Marine Dr. on April 13-20, between 11 a.m. – 2:30 p.m.; 5000 block of N Marine Dr. on April 14, at 12 p.m., and the 1300 block of W Thorndale Ave. on April 23-24, between 11 p.m. – 9 a.m.

GOING STRONG from p. 3

California in 2007 to attend Loyola Univ., where she studied Visual Communication and Peace Studies. After graduation, she co-ran a small non-profit in the neighborhood for five years that focused on community-based solutions to some of the environmental, social, and economic issues facing her generation. She also worked at a local nursing home, running a greenhouse and garden program for the residents. Costello has slowly moved more into art full-time, “which is how I thrive now,” she said.

Her mural will illustrate the eclectic, authentic and inclusive aspects of the multicultural Clark St. commercial corridor, as well as the vivid colors and designs that make up the recently unveiled Clark St. brand—an aspect of Vision Clark Street that will be used by RPBA and local businesses in the future.

Her upcoming mural is “quite literal and will be full of figures in action cooking, serving, building etc.,” said Costello, 30.

“It references and celebrates the many people and diverse food offerings that Clark Street provides,” she said. “I also like to weave in a lot of stars and constellations into my work, frequently depicting people with their own constellations in their body. It’s a symbol for each of our unique offerings and light in this world.”

“We celebrate these ancient figures in the sky and I think it’s important to celebrate and honor each other in a similar fashion, lifting each other up,” said Costello. “I also like to connect the constellations between people in an effort to say ‘the light in me is connected to the light in you.’”

“Our lives are connected. We are bound up in each other’s joy and suffering and it is our calling to show up for our neighbors and community, to break down illusions of our separateness, and to build a more just world together. There will be hints of this theme in the mural.”

There will be hints of this theme in the mural,” said artist Molly Costello.

Costello has been creating art for as long as she can remember. “I can recall bringing books about how to draw animals to my school’s ‘reading days’ in first grade,” she said. “My mother and grandfather were both painters so I feel lucky that my family supported me from a young age.”

borhood after graduation, she and her colleagues were sitting with a lot of the “direct and indirect traumas of this world” and she was in need of an outlet to escape to for calm and healing, said Costello.

“Art became a place for me to envision the world we were working toward... to have faith that our small projects were a part of a larger transformation that was unfolding,” she said. “It allowed me to be in love with the world again in the face of so much violence and environmental uncertainty.”

She said she’s thrilled that her first mural is in her neighborhood. “I have been wanting to get into public art for many years and this feels like the best place to start, celebrating a neighborhood that I love and know well,” said Costello. “I feel like it is allowing me to build a deeper relationship with this place as well. I’m excited to get started.”

Dylan’s Candybar among latest sued for scanning worker fingerprints

BY JONATHON BILYK
Cook County Record

The number of class action lawsuits accusing employers of violating an Illinois privacy law by making their workers scan their fingerprints continue to mount in Cook County Circuit Court.

During the week of April 17- 24, six more employers were added to the list of those facing class actions brought by trial lawyers, typically on behalf of former workers, seeking to take advantage of a recent Illinois Supreme Court decision making it harder for businesses to defeat the lawsuits.

This latest round of lawsuits included actions against a Michigan Ave. boutique confectionary owned by the daughter of fashion designer Ralph Lauren; a supermarket chain, with 14 locations in Chicago and the suburbs; one of the country’s largest freight railroads; and the maker of household cleaning products sold under the brand names of Vileda and O’Cedar.

All are accused of violating the Illinois Biometric Information Privacy Act for making employees scan their fingerprints, either on so-called biometric time clocks when punching in and out of work shifts, or on scanners used to verify their identity for security purposes.

On April 23, plaintiff Damien Woodard filed suit against his former employer, Dylan’s Candybar. The New York-based high-end confectionary chain operates its only location in the Midwest on Chicago’s Magnificent Mile. According to the complaint, Woodard worked for Dylan’s Candybar from 2016-2018. He is represented in the action by attorneys with the firm of Peiffer Wolf Carr & Kane APLC.

That firm also filed a BIPA class action on April 23 against Chicago Ridge Nursing Center LLC, which operates Chicago Ridge Nursing & Rehab Center. The class action, which seeks to represent everyone who worked at the center in the last five years, was filed on behalf of named plaintiff Danielle Tolleson, who worked at Chicago Ridge Nursing from 2016 to Nov. 2017.

On April 22, attorneys with the firm of Werman Salas P.C., of Chicago, filed a class action on behalf of named plaintiff Giovanni Collier against Pete’s Fresh Market 2526 Corp. The company operates the chain of Pete’s Market stores in and around Chicago. According to the complaint, Collier worked for Pete’s for two months ending in Nov. 2018.

Also on April 22, attorneys from the Law Offices of James X. Bormes P.C. and the Khowaja Law Firm P.C., both of Chicago, filed a class action against Freudenburg Household Products. The company operates a manufacturing facility in west suburban Aurora, where it makes a range of household and commercial cleaning products and textiles. According to the complaint, named plaintiff Latera Chantel Moore worked at the Aurora plant from 2008-2018. The complaint said the company began using biometric time clocks in 2015. The class would included everyone who worked at the Aurora plant since April 2014.

And on April 22, lawyers with the Chicago firm of McGuire Law P.C. filed a class action in Cook County Circuit Court against freight rail operator CN Transportation Ltd. The lawsuit, filed on behalf of named plaintiff Richard Rogers, asserts the company improperly required its truck drivers to scan their fingerprints when entering railyards and other CN facilities.

Finally on April 17, plaintiffs Juan Cortez, Tobias Gonzaga and Alejandro Perez filed a class action against their former employer, Headly Manufacturing Co. The company operates a metal stamping facility in suburban Broadview. According to the complaint, Cortez worked for Headly from 2013-March 2019; Gonzaga worked for the company from 1998-March 2019; and Perez worked for Headly until March 2019. According to an article published in Crain’s Chicago Business, in March, Headly fired and locked out 10% of its workforce at the Broadview plant.

The class actions arrive as just part of the latest wave of such lawsuits since the Illinois Supreme Court ruled in January that plaintiffs suing under the Illinois BIPA law don’t need to demonstrate they were ever harmed by the alleged violations of the law to sustain their lawsuit.

In that ruling, the state high court ruled a technical violation of the law without real harm is “not a mere technicality,” and expressed no concerns about the potential cost facing employers who use biometric punch clocks and security systems.

In the lawsuits, plaintiffs have requested damages of $1,000-$5,000 per violation. Under the law, a single violation could include each time an employee scans a finger or handprint when punching in or out of a work shift. Such findings could leave even small employers or other businesses on the hook for millions of dollars in damages and fees.

process has been terminated successfully, and FGC President Larry Kroll has signed a Plan of Operations which requires the facility to do the following:

- By July 1, FGC shall reduce its patient load to 700 or fewer.
- And FGC representative shall attend all regularly scheduled CAPS meetings, hospitality business meetings, and meetings with aldermen, the police commander and community groups.
- They shall engage the services of a licensed and bonded security company and security shall monitor the interior and exterior of the licensed premises and the adjacent areas during hours of operation.
- They shall maintain the use of professional off-duty Police Officers.
- FGC security and off-duty Police Officers shall disperse individuals loitering or engaging in illegal activities surround the licensed premises.

- They shall continue to enforce its “zero tolerance” no loitering policy and immediately discharge patients that are loitering near the facility.
- They shall maintain security cameras to monitor the premises and link them to the Office of Emergency Management of Communications.

Ald. Reilly believes that FGC’s enhanced security, regular cooperation with the Chicago Police, and decreased patient load will address the safety concerns raised by residents in River North.

Dr. just east of the Michigan Ave. Bridge.

Robert Burnier’s Black Tibernius will remain throughout the 2019 season. The large-scale work, specifically commissioned for the western Confluence section of the Chicago Riverwalk between Franklin and Lake streets, features three geometric structures made of steel, nylon mesh and rope. Responding to structural constraints imposed by the narrow strip of land that curves around the riverbend where Wacker Dr. turns from west to south, Burnier’s suspended forms hang over the lawn and are visible from Upper Wacker as well as the river level.

At 7:45 p.m. May 13 a Riverwalk Lantern Procession begins at Wabash Ave. heading west to the Confluence between Franklin and Lake streets. Spectacular lanterns created by artist Heather Killian will illuminate iconic elements of famed productions Hamilton, Kinky Boots, Mary Poppins, Aida, The Lion King, Wicked, Phantom of the Opera and Alladdin.

Fireworks display from theMART will be held Tuesday, May 14, 8:30 p.m.

On Friday, May 17, noon–6 p.m., fishing will be offered at the Jetty with the Chicago Park District.

Returning for its third year, the CPD will share a preview of their popular Fishing at the Jetty. The District’s free public programming will expand this season, with three days (Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays), weekly from June 27 to August 17, of hands-on, spontaneous activities on the Chicago Riverwalk.

On Sunday, May 19, a group of Navy veterans have developed a submarine memorial for the Chicago Riverwalk to Honor, Educate and Inspire. Twenty-eight submarines were manufactured in Wisconsin after the attack on Pearl Harbor and traveled through the Chicago River to get to the Gulf of Mexico, via the Mississippi River on through the Panama Canal and ultimately to the war effort in the Pacific. The new memorial includes a submarine door and seating and will be located near the updated Field Drive Plaza on the east end of the Riverwalk. The time for the ceremony will be announced at a later date.
