Mayor Rahm Emanuel is rumored to be offering a $1-billion bribe if city residents would go along with his Lucas Museum plans: an extension of Lincoln Park further north on the lakefront.

Chicago's greatest asset - its lakefront parks - now in political play

BY DON DEBAT
The Home Front

Chicago's greatest asset—its coveted Lake Michigan parkland—is in political play along Lake Shore Dr. from Evanston south to the Indiana border.

Desperate to end a legal battle between the city of Chicago and the Friends of the Parks over the proposed Lucas Museum of Narrative Art being built on a lakefront parking lot near Soldier Field, insiders say Mayor Rahm Emanuel is offering a $1-billion bribe.

Apparently, Mayor Emanuel is willing to support development of 525 acres of new in-fill lakefront parkland and extend public access to four miles of new green space along Lake Michigan from Hollywood to Howard St. on the Far North Side to 71st to 95th streets on the Far South Side.

All the Friends of the Parks have to do is drop its lawsuit regarding the Lucas Museum, and the public-interest group would win a tempting victory that could possibly bring the ambitious 1909 Burnham Plan of Chicago to completion.

Foremost under Daniel Burnham's original goals was reclaiming the lakefront for the public. "The Lakefront by right belongs to the people," Burnham wrote. "Not a foot of its shores should be appropriated to the exclusion of the people."

The plan recommended expanding the parks along Lake Michigan's shoreline with landfill and much of that was done in the early 20th Century, and after the Chicago Fire, to create Grant Park.

Of the city's 29 miles of lakefront, all but four miles are public parkland today. The plan also called for creation of manmade islands, such as Northerly Island, along with lagoons, beaches, harbors, meadows and playfields.

By "creating new acreage from landfill, excavated material and general wastage from the city," the Burnham Plan envisioned lakefront improvements stretching from Chicago's northern suburbs south to the edge of Indiana.

Historians say Lake Shore Dr. started as a carriage path along the downtown area, with horses limited to a six mile per hour speed limit. In 1933, LSD was extended from Belmont Ave. (3200 north) to Foster Ave. (5200 north). In the 1950s, it was extended to Bryn Mawr Ave. (5600 north) and then in 1957 to Hollywood (5700 north).

The 1950s LSD extension utilized landfill, rubble and debris from the destruction of homes raised for construction of the Congress Expressway (now called the Eisenhower Expressway).

In 2004, the Chicago Park District [CPD] considered a feasibility study to extend Lake Shore Dr. about 2.5 miles north through Rogers Park and into Evanston. Activists say the plans for the expansion were actually drawn.

However, residents protested

North Side takes biggest hit from record property tax hikes

North Side property owners should prepare themselves, they're about to get hit hard by the next property tax bill. Property owners can expect them in their mailboxes by the end of the month.

Illinois residents already pay the second-highest property taxes in the nation, according to the Tax Foundation, but if reports from the Cook County Assessor's office prove true, some North Side neighborhoods will see a tax increase of 50% on their next bill.

And this is just the start. North Side homeowners can expect even higher property tax increases for years to come as the city, county and other taxing bodies deal with their worst financial crisis since the Great Depression.

On average, Chicago property owners face a 12.8% increase this year, according to a press release from the Cook County Clerk's office. That figure translates to a median $412.87 hike.

But the Assessor's office warns that residents and commercial property owners on the Gold Coast should expect up to a 50% increase in their next tax bill.

Other North Side communities will not be spared either... this means property owners in Lincoln Park, Lakeview, Lincoln Square, North Center, Wicker Park and Bucktown - among others - will also see their tax bills shoot up dramatically.

This tax hike was not unexpected considering the massive debt load the city and other taxing

Sheriff Dart says a lot of his inmates don't belong in jail

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Tom Dart spent much of his earlier career as a prosecutor whose job was to put people in jail.

Now as Cook County Sheriff, he's trying to get as many inmates as possible out of the Cook County Jail.

That may not be part of the official job description, but as far as the one-time state lawmaker is concerned, there are still some "evil people who need to be kept away from the rest of us for as long as possible."

But as far as Sheriff Dart is concerned, a lot of the inmates at 26th and California just don't belong in his jail.

"People shouldn't be kept locked up just because they're poor or mentally ill," Dart told a recent Lake View Kiwanis Club luncheon at Ann Sather's, 909 W. Belmont, ironically mere steps from the city's number one address for emanating 911 calls.

Yet that's what's been happening for years, Dart said, noting that his jail is not only the biggest county lockup in the country (with a population averaging about 12,000), but also the nation's largest mental health facility.

Sheriff Dart estimates he has between 2,000 and 3,000 prisoners with diagnosable mental illnesses in his custody on any given day, adding "That's a horrible statement for me to

Lakefront police enforcement efforts off to rocky start

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

A Chicago Police Dept. promise to deploy 100 officers on bikes, ATVs and horses to the lakefront and crime hotspots this summer got off to a rocky start this weekend as two people were shot and at least three robberies were reported along the North Side's shoreline.

The Summer Mobile Patrol initiative was announced by Chicago Police Supt. Eddie Johnson on June 8, about 10 days after nearly a dozen people were arrested at North Ave. Beach for battery, drinking and theft on the Memorial Day weekend. Video of the brawl went viral and was no doubt viewed by people all over the globe.

Supt. Johnson said that "a couple" of officers would be taken from every unit in the department to staff the mobile patrol on foot, on ATVs, on horseback and in vehicles through Labor Day.

"This special unit will have the ability to move... based upon emerging conditions, crime trends or sketchy events," Supt. Johnson said.

The CPD moved about a dozen ATVs—or "police all-purpose vehicle"s—to lakefront districts on the day after Johnson's speech. And the day after that, department repairmen were summoned to at least three districts where the long-mothballed ATVs were found to be inoperable or unsafe to use for patrol, according to a source.

Several of the ATVs also broke down during weekend patrols, the source said.

Trouble of a different sort started on the lakefront soon after sunset Friday when a gunman pulled out a pistol and shot at a man on Foster Beach. The victim received graze wounds to his neck and chest.

The next night, a 19-year-old man was shot by suspected gang members as he enjoyed the park with his wife and child adjacent to the tennis courts in the 3600 block of N. Recreation Dr.

Don't call us Chiraq

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Yikes! Just got back from Milk & Honey where there was quite a bit of cosmopolitan commotion. And not just because of the street fair “Do Division,” a county fair-like extravaganza happening one block west at Damen.

No, I mean paging through the voluminous focus piece on Chicago in the Sunday New York Times. Starting on page one. Then generously laid out across four more full pages. Chicago in a nutshell.

Nope, this is not a “36 hours in Chicago” piece, a la the Travel Section. Nothing to do with deep dish pizza. The Sox or the Cubs. The Lucas Museum. Old-fashioned ward politics. Taste of Chicago or the Art Institute. It is just about one thing. Murder. Pure and simple, murder. Hey. Don't call us Chiraq.

It is an hour by hour, and minute by minute, accounting of the violence of the Memorial Day weekend here in town. Body by body. Bullet by bullet. Tear by tear. Tragic death by tragic death. Sixty-four shot. Six killed.

As the newspaper of record of the nation, the Sunday New York Times goes out of its way to be statistically and categorically correct, lest someone accuse them of being disingenuous.

Sixteen reporters were on this case. When was the last time anyone did that? Does the Chicago Sun Times even have 16 reporters left on staff?

Take a look at secondcitycop.com, the most comprehensive, anti-City Hall blog you can find. It's always full of truth. And a dynamic lesson in what is really going on in Chicago. It keeps no secrets. And it is a great source of information.

Mayor Daley hated them. It was mutual. And now they are Mayor Rahm Emanuel's curse. Back when the New York Times' project was beginning, this blog said that reporters had brought very sophisticated listening equipment with them that they carried to every shooting site. That way they were able to listen in on any conversation about the incident. They listened to the lingo of the cops. The crowds. The survivors. The grieving families. Nothing was hidden from them.

Of course, what they heard was the sad saga of our urban geography. West Side. South Side. Austin. Englewood. And the accompanying communities. That's why this focus piece gives America such a rough and heartbreaking read about what has been going on here. Murdered sons, fathers, mothers, girlfriends, daughters, sisters, brothers, next-door-neighbors. Brutally snuffed out. But don't call us Chiraq.

Mayor Rahm Emanuel

There were no journalists to interview survivors after the Fort Dearborn massacre in 1812. Maybe this is what that would have been like had 16 reporters from the New York Times been on the ground then.

For an American city with thin skin and an anxious ego, Chicago has always been nervous about appearing less than the best; the biggest; the first; the most; the center; the leading. We relish the boast, and false sense of superlative bravado that makes us feel superior. Is that because we cannot see the other side of the lake?

Because our local politics controlled much of our information flow for so long in the kingdom of the two Daleys, it is rough trying to deal with the truth of who we are as a city. Isn't that what the 101 video tapes recently released by Mayor Emanuel showing civilians being killed by Chicago Police officers reveal?

Curious, how eager the mayor is to shine a light on police, all the while placing a bushel basket over his own head.

Hiding is an important Chicago commodity.

The mayor's growing invisibility is almost a virtue in light of what the New York Times espouses. They love shredding that slithering celebrity that Rahm is so good at. Someone hid a video tape of a shooting to shield the mayor's election prospects. He's an advocate of taking cover. But not of how this has worked out.

I do not think this is the vision of being mayor of Chicago that Rahm had in his mind when he battled to get on the ballot, only narrowly squeaking by. What was he thinking? Did he think it would be all ribbon cuttings? Or political fund raisers?

Remember the faux CNN news docudrama “Chicagoland” starring Rahm? That attempt at branding Rahm seems almost quaint now.

Maybe he misses Washington and the Clintons more than he thought, with the ability to print fresh new money every day to throw at problems. I am sure there was no thought given to Donald Trump by him back then. Rahm was a Washington bully then. He could get away with it. But he never recovered from swearing at Chicago Teachers Union President, Karen Lewis, in his first term. She doesn't cotton to bullies. What a strange place America is.

So the bullets fly. And the bodies mount. And Chicagoans keep dodging the issue of failed civil survival. No wonder our African-American fellow Chicagoans are so angry and moving out of Chicago in droves. We are all angry.

Today the Sun-Times says Rahm hired a new tourism director, Choose One CEO David Witacker, for over $380,000. He is expected to re-market Chicago as something other than the murder capitol of America. Lots of snaps of the glistening blue waters along the lakefront, I am sure, without those images of the bloody bodies. Good luck with that.

The truth is that Chicago has lost its grip. The mayor has failed his people. Each and every one of us. For all life matters in Chicago. Black and brown and white. Nothing else is acceptable. How can we ever look each other in the eye with what is unfolding?

This is not the failure of one strategy or policy versus another, any more than it is about the color of the police superintendent's skin. But it is a failure. Of leadership. It is a lack of heart. A preoccupation by the mayor with himself and his national public image for greater things. This is about the limits of ability in a careerist who has little time for anyone but himself.

Sunday New York Times Chicago focus

What's the solution, now that the New York Times has let the cat out of the bag? They certainly have collected a lot of evidence about the Great Failure of Executive Leadership 2016. Market that. Kind of ranks up there with the 1893 World's Fair. Maybe the mayor spent too much time carrying the water for the Lucas Museum, trying to make glitzy deals rather than resolving issues of brutal urban gang warfare. One doesn't take much character. The other requires nothing but.

Second City Cop can be a gruesome blog source of good City Hall rumors. They have everyone reporting to them. The biggest one now is that Mayor Rahm Emanuel has told his body guard detail to start looking for police units in which they can go because he won't be here after August 1. What? That's what they are saying. I am only repeating. There is plenty of talk that he would like to get back into the good graces of the Clintons. With Hillary having a chance to be president, Rahm's nasty bulldog attitude, so out of place at City Hall, might be just what Mrs. Clinton needs, coming out of the convention, to destroy the Trump campaign.

But will any of this make a substantial change in the violence that surrounds so many of our fellow Chicagoans? Will it help to make Chicago a safer place for children who up to now are used as cannon fodder?

Rumors are also abounding that business leaders are coming together to go to the federal government for intensive special assistance. Isn't this what happened during the Capone Era when business leaders went to visit President Herbert Hoover and insisted something had to be done? Isn't this what set in motion the formation of the “Untouchables” and the arrival of Elliot Ness in town?

Word is that the big issue on their agenda is the criminal behavior of elected officials. Some very well-connected commercial titans say that there is a cause and effect relationship between the criminal behavior in government and the Wild West show on the streets. Perhaps reviving the tough-talking independent federal agents is a step in the right direction. Better hurry up, the Summer mugging season is upon us. Yes, just like the mullah's in Afghanistan, we have our season for fighting.

Former governor Jim Edgar spoke at a luncheon last week and said Illinois has not been in such bad shape in 50 years. And a six-year-old girl has been shot. But is not dead.

Heart of the 'Hood

Does the City Council need a watchdog?

I surely don't think it could hurt. How about you?

You may or may not have already heard that after being shut down by some of the city's aldermen last year, Chicago's former legislative inspector general, Faisal Khan, recently launched an independent, nonprofit government watchdog group, Project Six. The mission: to uncover and stop corruption in City Hall and across all levels of government in Illinois.

With the track record of some of our local and state politicians, they should keep pretty busy! Indeed one federal intelligence officer just told us last weekend that government contracting corruption is worse than ever.

The team, headed by Khan and consisting of investigators, writers and researchers dedicated to exposing government official corruption, will carry on the in-depth investigatory work Khan was doing before certain City Council aldermen decided they wanted to eliminate his post.

Corrupt politicians working for their own selfish gain and not for taxpayers have been allowed to run Chicago, Cook County and Illinois for so long that many people simply accept this as the unchangeable way of the city and state, Khan said.

Admit it, haven't we all gotten just a little too comfortable with the high level of corruption Illinois seems to embrace? Sadly it is almost a macabre point of pride that we brag about to our out of town visitors.

Project Six aims to change that.

"This city needs watchdogs with power and conviction," said Khan. "The only way to combat the malaise that comes from such ingrained corruption is by uncovering corruption when it happens and creating a system that makes anyone afraid to participate in the first place. This is what aldermen have battled for decades; now, it is up to all of us to make sure this reform becomes a reality."

I first met Khan when I interviewed him in June of 2012. He had been hired for the job that past November, in 2011, hand-picked out of 140 applicants by a six person, blue ribbon committee. At that time, his "biggest goal," was to change public perception about oversight in government and make sure Chicagoans' voices were heard.

Khan was a former criminal prosecutor and assistant district attorney from New York, living in Lincoln Park. He had moved here in fall 2010 with the intent of opening his own law firm. Khan had simply happened upon the legislative inspector general job after reading an editorial in the newspaper slamming the position but also mentioning that the city was seeking candidates.

Besides his qualifications, Khan was a good candidate because he had no ties to Chicago other than a handful of friends, and the fact that he got engaged at the Signature Room. He had no relatives here, knew no aldermen, and didn't even know anything about the ward system.

Knowing what he knew about Chicago, he also had concerns that the position would be a legitimate one. His four-year contract provided a budget of $60,000 annually, which included his salary and running his office.

But Khan took the job anyway, as he felt it was "an incredible opportunity." He told me back then that he wanted to make sure he created "something that's long lasting and successful."

Unfortunately that didn't happen for him. But hopefully, this time around it will.

Taxpayers and engaged citizens are the only people who can truly change their government for the better, Khan said. Project Six will accept citizen and whistleblower tips (by name or anonymously), investigate any reported wrongdoings and illegal violations by aldermen, and initiate investigations into how elected officials are—or are not—fulfilling their duty to taxpayers.

The group's name comes from the "Secret Six," a group of businessmen and city leaders in Chicago during the 1930s who worked behind the scenes to choke off Al Capone's business interests and take away his deep-rooted influence in the city. Like the inspiration for its name, Project Six will fight to change the "Chicago Way," to [hopefully] one of open and honest government.

Khan said that although Chicago is an amazing city that holds so much opportunity for people from a diverse range of backgrounds, there is a "deeply ingrained and accepted culture of corruption that has bled away so much of that opportunity and so much of the city's potential." Therefore, Khan hopes to accomplish what no one else has been able to. Some of you are probably chuckling at the mere thought.

During his four years investigating the city's elected officials, Khan experienced staunch opposition from some of the 50 aldermen to any type of needed reform. But we all know that elected officials should be working for our best interests, because we're the ones who elected them. Obviously, that's not always the case in Chicago, or Illinois.

As the late 43rd Ward Ald. Paddy Bauler once so eloquently stated, "Chicago ain't ready for reform." It's a good thing that Khan begs to differ. Here's wishing him the best of luck in his difficult and seemingly impossible new endeavor.

Anyone interested in learning more about Project Six or submitting a tip should call (312) 366-2228 or visit thesecretsix.com.

In 2008, the Friends of the Parks proposed extending the lakefront park system north, possibly through off-shore manmade islands linked by bike paths. This proposal met with resident opposition from those who lived along Sheridan Rd. in Edgewater and Rogers Park.

that this proposed expansion would cut off Rogers Park and Edgewater residents from the lake. A Nov., 2004, referendum rejected the proposal.

In 2005, the CPD spent $350,000 on plans for new marinas along LSD, including one at Devon and Granville. At that time federal funding of $800,000 to $1 million was obtained for a study to extend the Chicago North Lakefront Path.

And, in 2008, the Friends of the Parks proposed extending the lakefront park system north, possibly through off-shore manmade islands linked by bike paths. This proposal also met with resident opposition.

In 2009, the Friends of the Parks marked the 100th anniversary of the Burnham Plan by unveiling a visionary sequel—adding 525 acres of new lakefront parkland at a cost of $450 million. This land would be created by adding landfill, stone and concrete seawalls to create a continuous chain of parks, islands, beaches, lagoons, and bike trails on the North and South sides.

By Don DeBat

In 1909, Daniel Burnham said: “Make no small plans.” Today, the cost of creating 525 acres of lakefront parkland might approach $1 billion, experts say.

Maybe now—107 years later—is the time for Mayor Emanuel to utilize his connections in Washington, D.C. to obtain the necessary federal funding for a noble goal of creating more lakefront parkland.

The job may take 20 years to complete, in stages. Why not start now by first extending North Lake Shore Dr. to north suburban Evanston while expanding park land, beaches and bike paths. The city likely has landfill public works projects, excavated earth from caissons of dozens of downtown high-rise apartment towers and from razed abandoned homes on the South Side to start the job.

It is time for Far North Side lakefront residents to realize that a major expansion of parks, beaches, lagoons, islands and N. Lake Shore Dr. up to Howard St. (7600 north) would boost both property values and the quality of life along Lake Michigan’s northern shore.

If private land controlled by a handful of condominium associations on the north lakefront is not for sale, let the city acquire it by eminent domain.

Whoop whoop whoop, nyuk nyuk nyuk

Here’s a final word on the proposed Lucas Museum, which architectural critics say is designed to look like a pile of rock salt. Why not build it on a landscaped, elevated concrete platform on the west side of the Outer Drive over Illinois Central railroad air rights?

Just about every Chicagoan this writer polled believes erecting this private museum on 17 acres of leased lakefront property is a bad idea.

Imagine the blob-like Lucas Museum floating between the re-muddled Soldier Field and aging McCormick Place East?

A former landmark that originally resembled the Greek Parthenon, Soldier Field was removed from the National Register of Historic Places after it was “renovated” to look like a flying saucer crashed on it. And, the darkly foreboding McCormick Place East was designed in the image of a World War II aircraft carrier.

Lined up across Chicago’s beautiful lakefront, those three stooge-like properties could be renamed “Curly,” “Larry” and “Moe.”

bodies have taken on, in large part to help fund government pension. Earlier this year Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the City Council passed the largest property tax increase in Chicago history... $588 million, which will take place through 2018. This year’s $363 million bill represents the largest bill.

To make things worse, Chicago Public Schools say they face a $1 billion budget deficit next year with no idea where they’ll find that new money. More borrowing at junk bond rates may no longer be an option, leaving property owners fearing that they may already know where the CPS will look to make up that deficit.

On average, Chicago property owners face a 12.8% increase this year, according to a press release from the Cook County Clerk’s office. That figure translates to a median $412.87 hike.

In 2015, Mayor Emanuel promised safeguards that would protect owners of homes valued at $250,000 or less, a solution that never materialized due to the state-wide political dysfunction. Emanuel spoke Tuesday about working with aldermen on a new option: a post-hoc rebate that is unlikely to be passed before tax payments are due on Aug. 1.

Property taxes continue to be an endless source of anxiety for all people on the North Side. The effects of these tax increases are certain to drive up rental rates for years to come.

North Branch Corridor future being debated

‘City’s moves a major threat’

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY PATRICK BUTLER

City Planning and Development officials kicked off plans earlier this month to possibly open the North Branch Industrial Corridor to uses other than manufacturing. But a lot will depend on the community’s input, deputy Planning and Development Commissioner Eleanor Gorski told a June 7 meeting at St. John Cantius Church, 825 N. Carpenter St.

It was one of several opening discussions on the future of the 28-acre site that once included the former Finkl Steel plant. The city hopes to revitalize the now-flaccid industrial climate on and around the site of the former Finkl plant. This could be the first time a Planned Manufacturing District designation will be rescinded, this one covering the 115-acre Clybourn corridor, roughly bounded by Clybourn, the Chicago River, North and Southport avenues. Some of the large parcels in the vicinity of Clybourn and Courtland have already been bought up by developers and speculators.

But according to Gorski, “the city is not initiating any zoning changes with this process. But there are some areas that allow different uses to coexist. This is a possibility. And that’s what we’re here to hear.”

The city plans to get community input, digest it, start developing “land use scenarios,” and return in August for follow-up discussions, then come back in the Fall with a tentative plan.

“We would then compare an “adopted land use plan” with any proposed new uses,” Gorski said.

A transportation study will also be done in the Fall, she said.

“But we’re not initiating any zoning changes with this process,” Gorski said.

Not everyone, however, was comforted by these assurances.

“We’re concerned. We’re very concerned,” said Mike Holzer, executive director of the North Branch Works, which represents manufacturing concerns along the Corridor.

“Eleanor (Gorski) says they’re doing this to address the speculation (that could come). I would argue that this is causing the speculation. We had been doing fine. Goose Island had gone from 1,000 to 5,000 workers. We could use some updates like breweries with tasting rooms, but we’re doing fine.”

Holzer characterized the city’s moves as “a major threat.”

“I fear it’s about accommodating development interests,” Holzer said. And with the city suffering from the worst financial crisis in generations, those fears would appear to be legitimate, considering citizens are seeing city taxes and fees rising across the board.

Another man asked what incen-

“The city is not initiating any zoning changes with this process,” said Eleanor Gorski, deputy commissioner of the city Dept. of Planning and Development.

“We’re concerned. We’re very concerned,” said North Branch Works executive director Mike Holzer. “I fear it’s more about accommodating development interests” than saving local businesses.

“I fear it’s about accommodating development interests,” Holzer said. And with the city suffering from the worst financial crisis in generations, those fears would appear to be legitimate, considering citizens are seeing city taxes and fees rising across the board.

tives there would be for a factory to remain in the Corridor or to make capital improvements.

Others voiced concern about being priced out of the area while a business owner said he’s being pushed out by condos being built next to his plant.

“That’s exactly why we’re doing this. To provide some certainty,” said Gorski, who plans to return with four “draft scenarios” in August.

Two upcoming meetings on development proposals

The city and two neighborhood associations will be hosting two upcoming separate community meetings on pending development proposals in River North.

Representatives from each development team will present their plans and answer any questions the public may pose about these proposals.

Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] will be present at each meeting to monitor the discussion, take notes and record feedback.

The first project is at LaSalle and Hubbard streets.

Representatives of PG Development, LLC will present their plans to construct an 18-story, 224-foot tall building at at 430-438 N. LaSalle St. and 142-150 W. Hubbard St. containing approximately 6,000 square feet of retail space on the ground floor for a restaurant tenant, and a new hotel with 199 rooms.

That meeting will be held 6 p.m. Monday, June 20, at the Holiday Inn Chicago Mart Plaza River North, 350 W. Wolf Point Plaza Dr., in the LaSalle Room.

The second project is at 217 N. Jefferson. The JDL Development team will present their proposal for the development of a 27-story building containing approximately 94 residential units with ground floor retail and commercial space. The existing six-story commercial building will remain on the property.

That meeting will be held 6 p.m. Tuesday, June 21, at Carnivale Restaurant 702 W. Fulton St.

June programs at Washington Square Park

A series of special programs, free and open to the public, will occur at Washington Square Park, 901 N. Clark St. on June 21 and June 25.

The Glitz & Glam of Cannes

By
ANN

Michael Kutza brought back the scoop from the Cannes Film Festival touting it is an excellent year for dysfunctional family films.

Comedies were also front and center. “I can’t remember laughing so much with so many people,” said Kutza.

All the stars were out ... Julia, George, Woody ... Faye Dunaway was there, Sharon Stone wasn’t. Hollywood’s promotional machinery was in full force with wanna-bees and past somebods.

Everyone had to enter a 3-checkpoint security system in order to view any film. It was “the safest place in the world.”

Kutza is looking forward to introducing many of these fine films to our own Chicago International Film Festival audiences this October.

Older smokers looking to quit

BY KEVIN HARMON

The high cost of cigarettes in Chicago isn’t the only reason CTA bus driver and Lakeview resident Paul Johnson gives for wanting to quit smoking.

Johnson, who’s in his 50s and said he started smoking as a teenager, started a fitness program with others his age called the Lake View Power Walkers in January and one of the first things he decided to do this year was quit smoking.

“I remember I got together with some friends to play basketball at a 50-over league and in the first game I couldn’t last five minutes without being out of breath and that scared me,” Johnson said. “I work so much and generally don’t eat the best food and I told myself that I wanted to be around for my wife and to go out and run with my grandkids and to do that I needed to take better care of myself.”

Besides walking and quitting smoking, Johnson signed up for a healthy meal delivery service and stopped eating fast food – New Year’s resolutions he figured he could keep. He said he thought quitting smoking would be the hardest endeavor, as he knew of others who, like him, had smoked for years and were determined to give it up.

“I was advised by someone in my walking group to look into some resources for help and to not try to do it alone,” he said. “He said he had tried on his own to stop several times and even tried some of the new electronic cigarette varieties to wean back on smoking as much, thinking there was less nicotine and addictive elements in them.”

For older adults who like Johnson are thinking about quitting smoking, the National Institute on Aging is offering a newly-formed web service with videos, workshops, interactive features, strategies, quizzes and more. This was one of the resources Johnson’s friend Carlos Diaz was referring to. Diaz, an Uptown resident and retired Chicago Public Library worker, smoked both cigarettes and cigars since he was 20.

“Many older adults know that smoking is harmful, and many have tried unsuccessfully to quit, often a number of times, but smoking for me is a part of a lifestyle, of socialization, of connecting with people,” he said. “And I know that stopping smoking is quite difficult for older smokers like me that are so set in their ways of living and doing things.”

According to Erik Augustson, program director of the Tobacco Control Research Branch at the National Cancer Institute, the topic of addressing how to help older smokers quit includes a mix of tips and tools geared towards the needs and experiences of older smokers in easy-to-use resources that can benefit those trying to quit for the first time as well as those that have tried before.

“I think that people know that overall people are living longer, and by doing things to improve your health like quitting smoking, have a bigger effect in active people living in big cities like Chicago,” he said. “Smoking is such an expensive habit and the money spent could be used more wisely, like having a gym membership,

10 tips to help you quit smoking for good

1. Stay motivated. Make a list of reasons to quit and carry the list with you. Revisit these reasons when you have the urge to smoke.
2. Set a date. Quitting smoking is one of the most important health decisions a person can make, but it takes work and commitment. Setting a quit date in advance and making preparations is key to starting a new, smoke-free life.
3. Remove evidence of cigarettes. To get smoking out of your life, clean out your car, wash your clothes, put away your ashtrays, and get rid of all your cigarettes. Keeping cigarettes or lighters “just in case” undermines your self-confidence.
4. Change your routine. Cut smoke breaks out of your life and remove temptations by changing your routine as much as possible. For example, sit in a different place at the kitchen table, take a new route to work or drink tea instead of coffee.
5. Reward yourself for not smoking. Set short and long term goals, and reward yourself for each milestone you reach. Making a “contract” with yourself or a friend can help you stay resolved.
6. Drink more water. When you have the urge to smoke, drinking water can combat the craving and get your mind off of smoking. Also avoid alcohol and caffeine, which are common triggers for people who smoke.

7. Plan ahead for temptation. Eat frequent, small meals to stabilize your blood sugar levels. Keep substitutes (such as carrots, raisins, gum, hard candy and lollipops) handy to keep your hands and mouth busy. You can also keep your hands busy by carrying a stress ball, a doodle pad or a pack of cards.
8. Get moving. When a craving hits, get up and go for a walk, do some push-ups or call a friend. Staying active will keep your mind off of smoking until the craving passes.
9. Find support. Be proactive about spending time with non-smokers and/or ex-smokers. Plan non-smoking tactics before you go to events where other people might be smoking.
10. Don’t be discouraged. Many former smokers tried to stop several times before they finally succeeded. If you give in to a craving, don’t let it get you down. Examine what went wrong, learn from what happened and quit again.

or purchasing a bicycle or several pairs of athletic shoes for walking or running.”

Johnson said a visit to relatives living in Tucson, AZ, motivated him to quit smoking and get in better shape. Retired military workers, his cousin and her husband were avid hikers, runners and skiers. He said he noticed far fewer people his age smoking when they went out to social events and a generally fitter population.

“I know it’s Arizona where the weather is good most of the time, but going there and experiencing a smoke-free existence for the first time in my life really motivated me,” Johnson said. “I met a woman while we were cycling that said she moved from the Midwest and quit smoking after 35 years and she looked a lot younger than she actually was and she said quitting smoking was the jumpstart she needed to develop other healthier habits.”

Johnson and Diaz enlist the support of a nutritional counselor they met through a like-minded power walker and so far in 2016, neither has smoked once.

“I think having the support of my exercise group and some of the National Institute on Aging web services has helped me to stay motivated, informed and mindful,” Johnson said. “I’m going to be 58 this year and I don’t want to be one of those seniors struggling health-wise, especially when I’m in a position to do something it.”

Johnson, Diaz and the Lake View Power Walkers meet Sunday, Tuesday and Saturday mornings at the Totem Pole near Lake Shore Dr. and Addison and generally walk a 5-kilometer (3.1 miles) trek. New guests are always welcome.

Partner in River North firm charged in child porn scheme

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Federal prosecutors Friday announced a six-count child pornography indictment against a Chicago-based sports agent and former youth sports coach for allegedly paying boys to engage in sexually explicit conduct while being video-recorded.

Bradley J. Ames, 35, is charged with one count of conspiracy to produce child pornography, four counts of producing child pornography, and one count of knowingly receiving child pornography. He faces a minimum of 15 years in prison if he is convicted of the most serious charges.

He and an unnamed co-conspirator created a Facebook account for a fictitious girl named “Hannah” to draw in underage boys who were then paid between $100 and $650 to record sex acts that Ames later posted online, authorities said.

The crimes are said to have occurred between Aug. 2012 and Nov. 2013, according to the indictment.

One of the victims was contacted through a minor that Ames once coached in youth basketball.

Ames denies the charges, according to his defense lawyer, Ed Genson.

The unnamed co-conspirator has not been charged and is not identified by name in the indictment. However, prosecutors refer to “Co-Conspirator A” as a male. The government has not revealed if the co-conspirator is an adult.

Ames volunteered for the Oak Park park district as a volunteer youth basketball coach for nearly a decade.

Until last week, he was listed as a partner at Priority Sports and Entertainment, a River North-based sports marketing and representation company.

All references to Ames were removed from the company’s website within hours of the indictment’s announcement.

An archived copy of the company’s site, saved on June 3, described Ames as a 13-year employee who runs the company’s international operations.

Surviving the hellish service of the World War as a valued officer in the Pacific, he was gifted with leadership, courage and noblesse oblige. And then as George H. W. Bush’s ambassador in Paris from 1989-93. He was a favorite in both capitols. His charming ways went before him on the golf course and in the drawing room. He and his wife of 67 years, Mary Taylor Walton Curley, maintained a house in the West of Ireland right up until the present. With four books under his belt, he lived in Manhattan as a consummate New Yorker. I do not think the Frick had a finer friend. I am grateful for his many kindnesses to me and old friends over a long period of valued camaraderie. I deeply mourn his passing at 94. A great deal of elegant diplomacy passes away with him. He always had the right word the perfect gesture, the best wine, the funniest anecdote and the gentlest prayer, confounding those who thought America a land of hokey grifters. He was buried at St. Vincent Ferrer Church on Madison Ave. in Manhattan last week. Americans, I hope, will whisper a soft prayer in God’s ear for the gift of this gracious man who never forgot the lessons of Iwo Jima and the poetry of W.B. Yeats. IN CLOSING: Just rang a good friend at 7 a.m. to share a juicy tid-bit ... I could hear voices in the background ... she said she’d call me right back ... her cleaning ladies had just arrived ... DePaul’s president Holtschneider stepping down

BY MARIAH WOELFEL
The DePaulian

DePaul Univ. president Rev. Dennis H. Holtschneider, announced he will resign as president of DePaul University effective summer of 2017, two years before his contract was to expire. He was named president in 2004.

“It’s best for DePaul if I step aside in the summer of 2017 so that a new leader can assist the institution to name and ambitiously pursue its next set of strategic objectives,” Holtschneider said in an email sent to faculty and staff Monday afternoon.

According to the email, the decision has been underway since December of last year.

“My decision to step aside as president has been underway since my Christmas retreat,” Holtschneider said in his email. “In late January, the provincial of my Vincentian congregation gave permission for this transition. I informed DePaul’s board leadership in March, at which time we decided to share this news more broadly at the conclusion of the academic year.”

The email also stated that he will not be leaving for another position, but rather return to a tenured faculty position after a year away from the University.

Holtschneider’s resignation comes just weeks after increasing tension on campus, the tipping point of which was a visit by Milo Yiannopoulos, and subsequent protests, where many students called for his resignation.

Holtschneider told Crain’s Chicago Business that the free-speech controversies on campus, that disrupted the appearance of a conservative blogger, were not a factor in his decision.

Holtschneider became DePaul’s 11th president on July 1, 2004 and oversees a $550 million budget, 23,539 students and 924 full-time faculty on four Chicago and suburban campuses.

Crain’s reported that during his tenure he had raised $333 million, exceeding an initially targeted $250 million. He also helped established two colleges, in communication and in science and health, and added and rehabbed facilities for other colleges and schools on its Lincoln Park campus.

DePaul professor of law Terry Smith was one of the people who called for Holtschneider’s resignation in a recent letter to the editor.

“The President’s decision to step down was an act of true leadership,” Smith said in response to Holtschneider’s announcement today. “His decision, however, should not be used as an excuse to slow-walk or ignore the demands set forth by the university’s black community.

“My concern is also that the faculty not be passive in the selection process for a new president, and that the leadership of Faculty Council does not betray the interests of the faculty in that process.”

DePaul will comprise a search committee of board representatives, university administration, faculty and students, led by DePaul Trustee and Vice Chair Jim Ryan, to hire a new president, according to a university press release.

“The board is dedicated to conducting a comprehensive national search to find the best individual possible to lead the university,” board chair William Bennett said in the release.

The committee will also retain assistance from an executive search firm, Witt/Kieffer, and “will consider both Vincentian and lay leaders.”

Holtschneider told Crain’s that he plans to take a year’s sabbatical and then return to his tenured position as a professor of education.

The board will also invite the submission of candidate names from members of the university community, according to the release.

have to make, but it’s true.”

Part of the problem is the County Jail has become a last resort with the state’s dire financial straights forcing major cuts in funding for psychiatric care, he said, noting that Gov. Bruce Rauner has been calling for another $82 million in cuts.

Indeed, in early June came reports of a mentally ill woman in Uptown being arrested for the 400th time.

And Chicago’s not alone, Dart said, noting that in 44 out of 50 states, the largest mental institutions are jails or prisons.

Changing that is one of his two main concerns, said the sheriff, whose other preoccupation is doing what he can to reduce the out-of-control shootings in Chicago.

Dart tries to help by assigning sheriff’s police to assist state troopers on the Chicago expressways and in high crime districts where the Chicago police are short-handed.

He’s been reaching out to aldermen and police commanders when he can, “and believe me, they’re very happy we’re there.”

But, he added, “it’s a very uphill battle. For every gun we take off the street, it seems two more turn up the next day.”

Of course, sometimes he has to stretch his own resources pretty thin to do the job he believes he should be doing. After all, he’s got about 7,000 employees, with about half of them being correctional officers, as the jail guards prefer to be called.

Many of the others are deputies who act as court bailiffs, serve legal papers, and assist in evictions. Others oversee County Jail inmates often seen picking up trash along the highways.

The difference between jail and prison, Dart explained, is that jails are for suspects awaiting trial or misdemeanor offenders serving sentences of less than a year.

“We’re not supposed to care how they got here and what they’ll do when they leave,” said Dart, adding he’s never been able to go along with that line of thinking.

Since becoming sheriff 10 years ago, he’s launched a number of programs to help inmates while they’re in jail and after they’ve been released.

“We even have a 24-hour hotline for released inmates to call if they need help,” he said.

He’s also tried to make the visiting facilities more family friendly. There’s nothing worse than having kids in the room when their mother’s telling the father she’s pulling the plug on the marriage, Dart added.

As far as Sheriff Dart is concerned, it’s more than a job.

“I’ve seen too many people in public office, not because they want to work, but because it’s a prestigious title paying generally good money,” Dart said. “I’m here to work.”

And speaking of jobs, Dart still won’t say whether he’s seriously thinking of running for mayor, as has been rumored for more than a year.

He added that if someone asked him that question some months ago, he’d have answered with a flat no.

Now he muses that one never says never to anything.

More commercial burglaries in Lincoln Park

Chicago police say there have been at least two more commercial burglary related incidents in Lincoln Park. In these incidents, the offender(s) forces entry to a commercial establishment and/or restaurant and removes property from within. These incidents have occurred in the early morning hours of the day on the 1900 block

Veterans invited to record stories of military service for Library of Congress

Unity Hospice of Chicagoland is offering an outreach program to area veterans interested in video recording their stories of military service for submission to the Library of Congress.

The effort is part of the nationally recognized Veterans History Project [VHP].

The Library of Congress will preserve the stories so future generations can better understand American history and the realities of war.

“(Veterans) will be performing another patriotic act by ensuring the account of their service and sacrifice will be preserved for the nation at the Library of Congress to instruct and inspire future generations,” VHP director Bob Patrick said. “These accounts will become a valued treasure for veterans’ families.”

Unity Hospice will provide the equipment necessary to conduct the interviews. The Library of Congress accepts all interviews, regardless of age, wartime service or combat experience.

Interviews will be conducted June 22-24 at Unity Hospice’s Chicagoland office, 600 W. Cermak Rd., Suite 3D, and the Skokie office, 4101 Main St., Skokie.

The dates are tentative, and the hospice can work to accommodate participants’ availability and travel limitations.

To schedule an interview contact Unity Hospice’s director of program development Brenda McGarvey at 618-954-6114.

What would your epitaph be?

“Final words, epitaphs are the ultimate good-bye” (Thomas O’Gorman, June 8-14) was informative, fascinating, and poignant. It prompted me to share the following. I was a member of a workshop at a national group psychotherapy convention consisting of psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, nurses, and others. During the program, in which participants were encouraged to openly interact, a young woman asked how I would like to be remembered after I am dead.

I responded with the following and was as pleased with it then as I am now.

“When I am dead the most important thing I would want a person to say about me is: “Because of my involvement with him I feel encouraged to go anywhere.” I cannot think of anything I’d rather have either on a headstone or in some similar form of remembrance.

I continued to think about that provocative question throughout the day. Four more ideas came to me that I would be pleased to include in my epitaph. They are: He worked to make a village out of a city. He loved his family and friends in ways that some of them might not easily be able to understand or imagine. He worked to make the world better than he found it. He did his best.

The above five statements completely reflect my feelings on this significant topic. I cannot think of any way that I would improve that epitaph.

What would your epitaph be?

Leon J. Hoffman, Lakeview

Fathers more important than ever

Father’s Day has never been more important. Our city’s increasing violence is largely the result of the absence of effective, on-duty fathers in the home. Increasing numbers of fathers have abrogated their responsibilities after making someone pregnant. The resulting breakdown of the intact family as we have known it in addition to people’s move away from an organized belief system or religion are the two primary reasons for the absence of impulse control, our city and nation’s greatest problem.

Lamentably the behavior of offspring from such settings predictably resembles that of untrained pit bulls off a leash.

Fathers who are present should be celebrated and valued. Fathers who are absent, or whose behavior includes abuse of their children, physically, verbally, or emotionally, can never be accepted. Effective fathers help to provide structure. Structure binds anxiety. Saggy-pants wearers are just one pathetic example of untrained youth desperately seeking such structure.

Fathers who are truly men don’t abandon the ship they helped to create and which now needs them more than ever. Fathers, be there for the children you fathered.

Waste no time in doing the right thing. Remember that one’s history does not imply one’s destiny. Fathers, our beleaguered communities need you now.

To all future fathers, what a great opportunity awaits you. Life is ephemeral; waste little of it. For those fathers who have remained present and committed to their crucial role and connected to their charges, happy Father’s Day.

Exhibit taps into history of Windy City’s bars, taverns and breweries Beers seems to be the absolutely everywhere these days. Craft breweries are popping up in Chicago like dandelions after a summer rain while home brewers by the thousands are concocting specialty beers in their basements.

Indeed the city seem to have an unquenchable thirst for beer.

Now, the Chicago Public Library is hosting a traveling exhibit, created by the Elmhurst History Museum that shares Chicago’s beer, brewery and tavern history. Beer Chicago: The Refreshing History taps into Chicago’s cultural and historical connections to what is arguably one of the Windy City’s favorite beverages. The exhibit is open now and will run through Jan. 8, 2017, in the Special Collection Exhibit Hall, 9th Floor, at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St., and can be seen daily during regular library hours.

Beer has always been a part of Chicago’s history. German immigrants established Chicago’s first brewery in 1833, serving its beer to the 200 early residents drinking in the city’s three taverns. That same year at one of these establishments—Sauganash Tavern—the Town of Chicago became official after a gathering and vote of 12 to 1. Beer has been a component of Chicago’s colorful fabric ever since, and its popularity continues to surge today with the emergence of a vibrant craft beer industry.

During the 19th century, beer making was transformed from a small-scale, seasonal activity for local consumers into a highly mechanized big business. Outside of New York City, Chicago became the nation’s largest center of the malt liquor industry.

In 1833, German immigrants established the first brewery in Chicago. Soon renamed the Lill and Diversey Brewery, it made English style ales and porters. In 1847, however, John A. Huck opened the first German-style or lager beer plant and an adjacent beer garden on the Near North Side. The city’s swelling numbers of Irish and Germans preferred this lighter, more carbonated cold drink, relegating traditional brews to a small specialty market.

At the same time, however, the half-century campaign for temperance was becoming a highly-charged political issue, full of ethnocultural, gender, and class meaning. Concerns about new waves of European immigrants, women’s changing roles, and working-class militancy fueled the attack on the neighborhood saloon as the city’s greatest social evil.

With the coming of World War I, the forces of reform won passage of the 18th Amendment, marking the end of Chicago’s role as a vibrant center of brewing innovation. After the repeal of Prohibition in 1933, the city’s brewing industry did not recover in the face of competition from national brand names selling beer in cans. One by one, the city’s breweries closed their doors.

Industrial beer making in Chicago languished until the 1980s. Attempts to reopen some of the old large-scale breweries ultimately failed, but microbreweries and brewpubs kept the city’s beer-making tradition alive.

Exhibit Highlights include an interactive alcohol-free “bar” featuring a bartender who will share his knowledge of Chicago beer history with patrons.

A profiles of Chicago breweries past and present—names like Peter Hand, Lill & Diversey and Schoenhofen and more. Beer-making terms and the new wave of craft beer makers in and around Chicago along with artifacts and signage, including vintage cans and bottles, from brews made throughout history and a science of beer-making hands-on activity station.

That victim was treated and released from Weiss Hospital for a through-and-through gunshot wound to his left thigh, police said.

Sources told this newspaper that at least three robberies were reported as crowds left North Ave. Beach around 7 p.m. on Saturday. The muggings were reported along with mob thefts from retail shops along stretches of LaSalle Dr. and North Ave. near the beach.

A fourth robbery was reported around 9:30 p.m. onboard a Red Line CTA train at the North and Clybourn station, the source said.

Cooler temperatures on Sunday brought relief and relative calm to the lakefront area as police executives were surely re-working the plan that they hoped would restore safety and security to the city’s treasured shoreline.

Tasers Mandated

In another development, every Chicago police officer “who is responding to calls” is issued a Taser and has been trained in the proper use of the device, according to Chicago Police Supt. Eddie Johnson.

“Expanding the use of Tasers and body cameras was a commitment Mayor Emanuel made last December, and we are following through on this important expansion,” he said during a May 31 speech at the City Club of Chicago.

The CPD has implemented procedures to “ensure all officers responding to calls are issued a Taser at the start of their shift,” according to a press release issued after Johnson’s speech.

Seven of the department’s 22 districts now participate in a pilot program that outfits officers with high-definition body cameras to record audio and video of their work.

Four Corners Tavern Group accused of fraud

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

A restaurant and tavern group, which operates nearly a dozen sites sprinkled throughout the Loop, North and Near West sides, and which hopes to open a new restaurant in Chicago’s Maggie Daley Park, has been hit with a class action lawsuit, alleging it left customers with no options to cash out or transfer rewards credits toward free food and drink when the group transitioned to a different customer loyalty rewards program.

On June 6, plaintiff Micah Riskin, identified in the lawsuit as a resident of Cook County, filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court against the Chicago-based Four Corners Tavern Group, alleging the company violated Illinois consumer fraud law and was unjustly enriched in the process when it earlier this year abruptly ended its participation in a loyalty rewards program administered by a third party, in favor of a customized program unique to its own branded establishments.

According to the lawsuit, Four Corners Tavern Group had participated in and promoted customer participation in a loyalty reward program, identified in the lawsuit as Spring Rewards, beginning in early 2015. The program, which relied on an app downloaded to customers’ smartphones, enabled patrons of Four Corners’ various bars to receive a $10 credit for every $250 spent at a specific Four Corners establishment.

According to its website, Four Corners currently operates 11 establishments, identified as Benchmark, Schoolyard, West-End, Kirkwood, Gaslight, Side-bar, Ranalli’s, Highline, Federales, Fremont and SteakBar.

According to the lawsuit, the reward points were specific to individual bars, and could not be transferred to other establishments. For instance, money spent at Highline did not count toward credits at Benchmark or any of Four Corners’ other establishments.

Riskin said he enrolled in Spring Rewards at Highline in March 2015. He also enrolled in the program at Four Corners’ Benchmark and Kirkwood locations, the lawsuit said.

However, in January 2016, Riskin said he received an email from Four Corners informing him and others like him, enrolled in the Spring Rewards program, that Four Corners was ending its participation in Spring Rewards, in favor of a new customized, in-house rewards program, identified in the lawsuit as My4C Points, which it said “would perfectly suit our customers’ needs.” The email said customers had until the end of February to redeem any “rewards” they had already earned through Spring Rewards.

Riskin said he had intentionally given those Four Corners bars – and Highline, in particular – his business, to accumulate points toward the reward credits.

However, he said he was short of receiving the credits at the time the program was cancelled, including just $10 short of receiving the credit at Highline, when the program was cancelled.

He alleged Four Corners needed to provide customers options for either transferring reward points already earned into the new program, or redeeming the points in some other way.

Riskin’s complaint alleged the plaintiffs believe “hundreds or thousands” of others potentially suffered similar loss when Four Corners transitioned to the new rewards program.

Earlier this year, Four Corners Tavern Group also was revealed as the company the Chicago Park District had selected to operate a new restaurant planned for Chicago’s Maggie Daley Park. According to published reports, Park District officials have indicated that restaurant could open sometime in 2017.

ATM skimming pattern ID’d in Lakeview, Lincoln Park

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

Chicago police have identified a debit card skimming pattern in Lakeview and Lincoln Park, according to a law enforcement source who spoke on a condition of anonymity because they are not authorized to discuss police matters publicly.

In a skimming operation, thieves attach their own card scanning device to an ATM in order to capture the debit card numbers and PINs of unsuspecting victims.

Police found an active skimming device attached to an ATM June 4 at a Lincoln Park 7-Eleven store, 2619 N. Clark.

Then, Tuesday afternoon, June 7, employees at a Lakeview East 7-Eleven store flagged down police after they encountered a man who was attempting to make ATM withdrawals with a fraudulent debit card that was apparently manufactured using skimmer data, police said.

The suspect was described as Middle Eastern with a large shoulder bag, a beard and dark glasses. He was last seen running west-bound on Newport from Halsted around 12:45 p.m.

Skimming scams tend to target independent ATMs since they are often less-closely monitored than machines at bank branches... but not always.

ATMs at the Bank of America [BOA] branch located on the intersection of Clark and Fullerton were targeted in a skimming operation this winter that tapped into a “significant number” of BOA accounts, according to the source. Lost funds were quickly credited back to victims—many of whom were bank employees—according to one man whose account was skimmed. In April BOA confirmed that one ATM in Wicker Park and another in Bucktown were also targeted by thieves with illegal skimmers.

What can you do?

The officer we spoke with made the following suggestions:

- Tug on the card reader of the ATM before you use it. Most skimmers are loosely attached. If the card reader seems loose or out of place, don’t use it.
- Cover your finger as you type in your PIN. Some low-tech skimming scams use hidden cameras to record PIN entry.

A victim’s tale

One recent North Side skimming victim told his story on Reddit over the weekend:

I logged into my bank account today and saw a surprise. It was a tad bit lower than usual. Did I sleepwalk and buy a TV? Maybe I accidentally ordered a couple hundred pens from Amazon?

Nope!

Two ATM withdrawals were listed from 356 W. Armitage in Lincoln Park. Odd, I live in River North. Odd, my debit card is sitting in my wallet right in front of me. My pin number was randomly generated and no one should know it.

Investigated and my best guess is ATM skimming. Doesn’t seem plausible the culprit could have taken my information online and used it at a physical ATM location. I contacted my bank and filed an online police report.

Anyways, please be vigilant. Take a closer look at the ATM you’re using and see if anything seems off. Also, please use secured ATM machines in which you need to swipe your card to gain access to the ATM. Tracing my steps it seems that I did not.

Rice funeral a standing room only affair

Originator of community ministry his lasting legacy

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY PATRICK BUTLER

Some 500 of the Rev. George Rice’s best friends, family and colleagues packed the Salvation Army Citadel chapel, 8534 W. Foster, for an hour-and-a-half farewell marked with tears, cheers and even some laughter.

Rice’s family figured correctly that the church the noted North Sider filled weekly would be too small to hold the expected crowd. But even the larger space saw people standing along the back wall and by the doors as if it were a Cubs World Series game.

The popular pastor emeritus of the Addison Street Community Church, who died at 85 after making his services fall on his birthday, June 11, after more than half-a-century of service to the Lakeview community and his congregation.

He was always “an event waiting to happen,” recalled Roger Bethard, one of several speakers who recounted Rev. Rice’s contributions as a Chicago Police Dept. Chaplain, a former member of the Illinois Law Enforcement commission, a mainstay of the Lake View Council on Religious Action, and the Lake View Citizens Council.

One speaker noted that Rev. Rice frequently got those 3 a.m. calls everyone fears and always showed up... usually in his signature Khaki’s, white shirt and blue blazer.

He also worked with the late Sen. John Merlo and State Rep. Arthur Telcser to get the North Side’s first “indoor park” built on Southport Ave., then helped get it named for another prominent local religious leader, Catholic Archbishop Bernard Sheil, long-time pastor of St. Andrew’s Church.

Originally brought in to close down the floundering Addison Street Church, Rev. Rice in turn revitalized the dwindling congregation with enough of a pastoral shot-in-the-arm to keep it alive more than 50 years later.

Rev. Jim Queen, a friend and associate of Rev. Rice for 55 years, credited Rev. Rice with “teaching me how to be a pastor.”

“The seminary taught me the Bible, but George taught me the practical things about pastoring.”

“George showed me how to be a pastor,” said the Rev. Jim Queen. “The seminary taught me the Bible, but George taught me the practical things about pastoring.”

“He thought I slid in too high and hard and he told me so. He was red in the face, we were nose to nose and toe to toe, and we almost came to blows,” Queen said.

Eventually “George became my mentor when I invited him down to do a revival in rural Indiana,” said Queen, adding that Rev. Rice urged him to start a church in Uptown.

That church - Uptown Baptist - is still a major force in Uptown today.

“George was the person who gave me a heads up when the church at Sheridan and Wilson came up for sale just about the time the Pacific Garden Mission wanted to set up a branch in Uptown.

“But George said “go get it,” and I did,” Queen said. “If it hadn’t been for George and the Kiwanis Club it would never have happened.”

Queen added that when the Jesus People first came to Uptown in the 1970s, the police thought they were selling drugs, not

“He was my pastor. And I will be forever grateful,” Queen said.

Tributes also came from the Rice grand-

“‘Papa’ loved funerals,” better than weddings, one said. “He said you didn’t have to worry about the flowers or making the new mother-in-laws happy.”

“I never heard anything so beautiful as my grandfather praying,” another grandson said.

Similar sentiments were voiced by Rev. Rice’s son, Rev. Gary Schroeder, recalling how “nobody cared about people like dad did. Listening, caring, encouraging. There are no pastors in America (anymore) who grow up in a community, and spend 50 years in ministry in that community.”

“He was the originator of community ministry,” Schroeder said.

“We could all do a lot worse than turning out like George.”
