A civil case against Thomas J. Walsh—alleging hate crime, battery and more—continues to wind its way through the system, with parties due back in court on Friday.

Race-fueled allegations have officer/security firm owner fighting suspension, lawsuit

Part four of a four part series on the growing dependence by area institutions and North Side neighborhoods on private security firms as the city's failing finances leave Chicago's police ranks undermanned.

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

A Town Hall District police officer whose side business provides security and private patrols to a number of clients in Lakeview, including the Boystown's bar strip, is fighting a 60-day suspension from the Chicago Police Dept. [CPD] after he allegedly tossed a black bouncer to the floor of a Halsted St. bar amid a torrent of racial epithets, according to city records.

The allegations against 19th District community policing officer Thomas J. Walsh were sustained after a 15-month investigation by the Independent Police Review Authority (IPRA), records show. Only a claim that Walsh was drunk at the time was not sustained, IPRA said.

And a civil case against Walsh—alleging hate crime, battery and more—continues to wind its way through the system, with parties due back in court on Friday.

The allegations against Walsh were discovered by this newspaper while developing a story about private security services in Lakeview. We reviewed more than 450 pages of documents from the CPD, IPRA, and the Cook County Court Clerk for this report.

November 29, 2013

On the day after Thanksgiving 2013, Walsh and some friends went to dinner at a West Town Italian restaurant and split a bottle of wine, he would later tell IPRA investigator William Abbruzzese.

Around 9:30 p.m., Walsh headed to the Lucky Horseshoe, a bar at 3169 N. Halsted in Boystown. He had been friends with the management for some 15 years.

He bellied up to the back bar with Tim Mitchell, a politically-connected man who is ex-CEO of the Chicago Park District and a long-time aide to Chicago Mayor Richard M. Daley.

A few minutes later, James Matthews, then 48-years-old, walked through the bar's front door. He was reporting for his first shift as a Lucky Horseshoe security officer.

Matthews was met by his supervisor who walked him through the bar, showing him the layout and introducing him to staff members.

As the two guards reached the back bar, they noticed a dust-up between some patrons.

"They were in each other's faces," the supervisor later told investigators, "and I noticed one of the gentlemen involved was Tom Walsh."

A local barfly had been thrown to the ground after calling Walsh's friend—Mitchell—a "fat fk." Walsh said he was trying to break up the fight when security arrived.

The security supervisor—knowing Walsh to be an off-duty officer who privately patrols Halsted St.—"felt it'd be best if [Walsh] knew the new guy [Matthews]," so he introduced them. They shook hands and Matthews assumed his post at the rear entrance.

A few minutes later, Matthews saw another incident in the back bar.

Walsh was "punchin' 'nother patron in the face. I separate them and... Mr. Walsh attacked me and knocked me down on my right side," Matthews later told investigators.

"[Walsh] started yellin' racial slurs at me while I was on the ground and... almost half the bar had to hold 'em back because I think he would've continued to attack me if they had not stopped him while I was on the ground,"

Hamilton re-installed in Lincoln Park; some not happy with positioning

Call for return of Grant Park's statue

STORY BY PETER VON BUOL

Lincoln Park's gilded statue of American Founding Father Alexander Hamilton is once again atop its pedestal in the park. The statue had been returned on the morning of June 8 after it had spent the past two years undergoing a meticulous cleaning of its bronze surface and a reapplication of gold leaf to give it a golden shine.

After having spent years facing south, towards Lincoln Park's North Pond, Hamilton's statute has now been repositioned to face north, as it was when it was first installed in July 1952.

According to information posted on the park district web-site, the statue in 1993 had been turned to face south to increase the exposure of Hamilton's face to the sun. That decision pleased some but disappointed others.

Ward Miller, executive director Preservation Chicago, a local non-profit organization dedicated to architectural preservation, is among those pleased by the park district's decision.

"That was 20 years in the making. It would be great if they could one day encourage the restoration of the black granite obelisk behind the statue. That contrast of the gilded statue, against the black obelisk, was a grand gateway into Lincoln Park, from Sheridan and Diversey," said Miller prior to its reinstallation.

The new positioning has, however, disappointed others, including Andrezej Dajnowski Ph.D, the owner of the company who which had cleaned and re-gilded the statue. While he was working on its reinstallation, he expressed frustration at it being positioned to face north. Hamilton's name on the red granite pedestal is now below his backside, not on the front.

Ken Bommer is also among those who is also disappointed the statue has been repositioned to

Newberry Library to undergo $11 million renovation

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Starting in January 2018, the Newberry Library will begin a six-month, $11 million transformation of its main floor. The 130-year-old library, located at 60 W. Walton St., is adding a new information center for visitors to learn how to use the facility's collection of 1.5 million books, 500,000 maps, early music, and assorted manuscripts, some dating back to the Renaissance and earlier.

Other new amenities will include a handicapped-accessible entrance, a climate-controlled seminar room allowing access to protected collection items, and a permanent exhibit gallery featuring an ongoing change of displays. Museum officials also announced that they have raised 40 percent of the $11 million needed for the renovation.

The idea is to make visitors feel welcome upon first visiting the library, museum officials explained.

Museum officials reported that they have hired Boston's Ann Beha Architects to design the new space. Beha specializes in "innovative contemporary design within historic settings," according to the firm's website. Beha's previous clients include University of Chicago, Princeton University, and the Smithsonian Institution.

"By creating an orientation center and using more wall space to tell our story, we're hoping to provide visitors with more avenues for learning about our different services; our collections, public programs, exhibits, continuing education seminars, fellowships and programs for teachers and scholars," Teller said in an interview with DNAinfo Chicago.

"We consider ourselves a community of learning that flourishes both within our walls and beyond them. But the Newberry is first and foremost a physical space built on bringing our users into direct contact with the legacy of the past," said Newberry President David Spatafora, according to a press release from PRWeb last week.

Often considered one of the least-known of Chicago's libraries, the Newberry was founded as a "free public library" by North Side businessman Walter L. Newberry who died at sea on a return trip from Europe in 1868. So as not to duplicate the work of the Chicago Public Library and the Crerar Library, the libraries cut a deal where the Crerar and Chicago Public Library would handle the sciences and the Newberry would specialize in the humanities.

The Newberry is open to the public, to all researchers over age 1.

The laureate’s lecture

By Thomas J. O’Gorman

“How many roads must a man walk down, before you call him a man?”

Can you remember the first time you heard a Dylan tune? Bob Dylan. That strange lyrical Dylan whose discomfoting speaking voice dances through his verses and whose cantankerous melodies take us to sad, broken, miserable places. I heard my first Dylan song fifty-five years ago.

I must have been a freshman in high school when Dylan’s work started receiving attention. 1962, the year he wrote the tune “Blowin’ in the Wind.” I had spent the summer in Europe. I kept saying, “toe-MAH-toe.”

Once Peter, Paul & Mary, the popular folk trio, recorded it in 1963 and made it the #2 song in America, “Blowin in the Wind” was on every radio station for that agonizing journey to high school. My father carted four friends and me everyday. But I do not recall one salient conversation about moral justice or peace that took place in our Oldsmobile.

Dylan’s “Blowin’ in the Wind” found its way to the venues of the summer festivals in 1963. My family did not attend any of the coveted fetes in Newport, Cape Cod or Fire Island. Neither of them were Dylan fans. Fifty-five years is a musical eternity. Way longer than high school.

Dylan’s musical voice was the perfect background track to the awakening of America. As the nation’s moral conscience began to stir about moral issues such as civil rights, the war in Vietnam, women’s rights, farm workers’ rights and global justice, the reexamining of what really counts and the anger it leaves behind were tailor-made for Dylan’s music.

In the great March on Washington, in 1963, led by Reverend Martin Luther King Jr., Peter, Paul & Mary made Dylan as famous as they were when they sang his tune for the world at the Lincoln Memorial. That’s the thing about Dylan’s music. It touches something deep in the soul of America. You can hum him on the ‘L’ or sing him on the bus. Or listen to his moral challenge on the car ride to school.

Dylan went on to have a stunning career as a musician and a writer. His music pierced the armor of American indifference to war and peace. He seized our national emotion when America was broken to hope after the murders of John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr., and Bobby Kennedy. His tunes were the anthems for our age.

“How many seas must a white dove sail, before she sleeps in the sand?”

Dylan, like Shakespeare, took hold of our language and shaped a new national poetry. He concocted a musical language by which to demonstrate who we were and how we could survive the calamities in which we found ourselves.

“How many times must the cannon balls fly, before they’re forever banned?”

I think Dylan still seeks to expand our ability to widen our moral and political perceptions. Moments like this are rare. When the artist’s heart is at its best, combining the soft and vital rawness of humanity’s vigilance with the tender beauty that reawakens our consciousness.

“The answer, my friend, is blowin’ in the wind. The answer is blowin’ in the wind.”

I was glad when the Nobel Committee recognized Dylan’s gifts giving him the Nobel Prize for literature last December 2016. They bound this extraordinary writer’s life and career to that of WB Yeats (’23), George Bernard Shaw (’25), T.S. Eliot (’48), William Faulkner (’49), Sir Winston Churchill (’53) and many other greats.

The Nobel Prize in Literature is not awarded for just a single work or piece of writing. It is given based on the full scope of a writer’s literary output. It marks the cultural power of an artist or piece of art. Dylan’s work is not just a tune we cannot get out of our heads. Dylan’s tunes, like all great pieces of literature, seek to turn our world upside down. His lyrics question justice, economics, the environment, and the fragile state of peace on the earth. It forces the listener to decide what is and what is not just.

Dylan did not go to the Nobel Award Ceremony last December in Stockholm to collect his prize. He did not even give a speech to the Nobel Committee. He said at the time that he had prior obligations. And that public speaking was not his thing.

However, he did speak recently in Los Angeles and gave what many see as his Laureate’s Address. He appears to reach into the drama and adventure of a cherished work of American Literature, Herman Melville’s Moby Dick, for the appropriate metaphor for his literary career.

“Some men who receive injuries are led to God, others are led to bitterness.” It is at theses human points of impasse we need his work the most.

Dylan’s full response to such literary perceptions is, of course, a lifetime of work. Writing. Rewriting. Harmonizing. Creating poetry and larger than life images of experience. We feel the emotion of his work in every tragic moment of human history. The pain. The struggle. Survival. Perhaps Dylan cannot give us the moral answer we seek. But he can point us in the right direction. With the fresh poetry of his pen.

“The answer my friend is blowin’ in the wind. The answer is blowin’ in the wind.”

River North attorney receives Union League Boys & Girls Club award

Welcome back Tiger, Whisper now a shout out

Heart of the 'Hood By Felicia Dechter

By day he's a hard-nosed trial attorney, but once Stephen Schlegel leaves the courtroom, he becomes a softhearted mentor to kids from the Union League Boys & Girls Clubs (ULBGC). And for his commitment of doing just that for the last 40 years, Schlegel was recently honored with the prestigious Boys & Girls Club of America's National Gold Medallion.

The national award is one of the highest honors the Boys & Girls Clubs of America provides to local leadership for outstanding outcome-based services to boys and girls in their community.

"The award is a high honor from an organization I've been associated with for 40 years," said Schlegel, who became a trustee of the Union League Boys & Girls Clubs in 1978, fulfilling a promise made to his Union League Club mentor to commit to ULBGC service. "I'm humbled to receive it. I know so many people who have done more."

Schlegel, an attorney in private practice, was shortly thereafter elected to be General Counsel and continues to offer countless hours of pro bono legal services to the club. Additionally, he held a position as a committee member for resource development and also is chairman of both the Legal and Safety Committees. Most recently, Schlegel was instrumental in helping to reintroduce a Boys & Girls Club to the at-risk neighborhood of Englewood.

He applied for club membership in 1976, hoping to swim and play a little handball. At that time, Schlegel was told that to become a member, he had to make a promise to become involved with a couple of charities.

"I didn't know anything about charities," said Schlegel, who was born in Edgebrook, but also lived in Rogers Park, where he was a lifeguard at Pratt and Albion during his college days. "But I had to make a promise and knew I better say yes."

"From that day forward we were up and running," said Schlegel, who was lead counsel for the plaintiffs in the Vietnam War-related Agent Orange trials in the 1980s. "It's been gratifying and rewarding, a great involvement. Suddenly I find myself being called an expert on not-for-profit work and getting awards for small contributions."

Since 1919, the ULBGC has been serving vulnerable kids in some of the city's neediest neighborhoods, currently helping 13,500 youth members annually in Pilsen, West Town, Humboldt Park, Bucktown, South Lawndale and Englewood. The club also serves court-detained youth assigned to the Juvenile Temporary Detention Program to reduce recidivism, and it staffs and manages its own 250-acre summer camp in Southern Wisconsin, a place where kids spend some time in an environment free from drugs, gangs and violence.

The club is in expansion mode and going into three more sites in Englewood this year, said Schlegel. Since 2000, 98 percent of members have graduated high school, there have been no felonies in the last 15 years, and no teen pregnancies for the last 10 years thanks to its Smart Girls program, said Schlegel.

"I've gotten to know a lot of kids," said Schlegel. "They're now coming back to their clubs to give back."

Schlegel strongly believes safety is a top priority, and he has created a Safety Committee to assist the club's staff in implementing an annual All Staff Safety training. He also leads safety seminars at national and regional conferences and conducts consultations with board members in the Midwest region.

"My work with the Union League Boys & Girls Clubs has given me an opportunity to know some of the most amazing youth, many whom come from very difficult backgrounds, face enormous daily challenges and reside in some of Chicago's neediest neighborhoods," said Schlegel, who also received the Boys & Girls Club of America President's Volunteer Service Award in 2014. "Our clubs provide a secure after school resource for kids to get the extra educational support they need to become independent adults, an array of recreational outlets and programs that reinforce character-building and a location where children develop friendships with peers and relationships with caring, responsible adults."

"If a person just goes into a school or Boys & Girls Club in any neighborhood in the city, any tendency they have to say that a group of people is unworthy or discriminated against...you get to know how good people are in every nook and cranny in the city," said Schlegel. "They're appreciative of the help. It's very amazing."

Gimme artwork...the 24th Artists of the Wall Fest, as usual, was filled with fun and cool art (and recycle bins and garbage cans aplenty!). My family has been painting down there on and off since its inception and this year for the first time my three granddaughters participated with their parents. Check out spot #134 if you want to see the family masterpiece! There was so much awesome artwork; I especially loved the painting of Morse Avenue and the Mayne Stage. One that I didn't quite get was a headless woman holding an ax with blood on it, with Lizzie written in paint at the top. Not sure what Lizzie (I'm assuming Borden) had to do with the theme of "Making Waves," but to each their own I guess.

Now is a good time to bail out of those adjustable-rate mortgages

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

Homeowners who financed their home or condominium purchase with an adjustable-rate mortgage should be shopping now to refinance into the safe haven of a fixed-rate loan, experts advise.

On June 14, the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee voted to raise the federal-funds rate—which is the interest rate that banks charge each other for overnight loans—by a quarter of a percentage point to a range of 1 percent to 1.25 percent.

This is the second time the Fed has raised interest rates in 2017, and at least one more rate hike is forecast for this year because the nation's job market is improving, economists say.

Rates on one-year adjustable-rate mortgages (ARMs) are modified annually based on short-term interest rates. So, if your current ARM rate is 4 percent, the three quarter-point Fed hikes in 2017 will likely push the loan rate to 4.75 percent when it adjusts in 2018. That rate jump would boost the monthly payment on a $200,000 loan by $84.

With interest rates on the rise, holding on to an ARM loan is not a good idea. The Fed is forecasting three more rate hikes in 2018, and three or four increases in 2019. If each increase is a quarter of a percentage point, theoretically that 4 percent ARM loan could be adjusted upward three times to 6.5 percent, driving up monthly payments by more than $250 on that $200,000 mortgage by 2020.

Because 30-year fixed-rate mortgages are pegged to 10-year U.S. Treasury bond interest rates, they are only indirectly affected when the Fed increases the short-term federal-funds rate.

However, on June 15—the day after the Fed's rate hike—benchmark 30-year fixed mortgages rose to an average of 3.91 percent from 3.89 percent a week earlier, reported Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey. A year ago, 30-year fixed loans averaged 3.54 percent.

Fifteen-year fixed mortgages averaged 3.18 percent on June 15 up from 3.16 percent a week earlier. A year ago, 15-year fixed loans averaged 2.81 percent.

Thirty-year fixed mortgage rates generally have moved below 4 percent in recent weeks. On March 9, the benchmark rate hit 4.21 percent, the highest mark of 2017, reported Freddie Mac.

With interest rates rising at the end of 2016, homeowners seized the opportunity to refinance their mortgages, locking in fixed-rate loans.

Some 883,836 refinanced loans, totaling $246 billion, were originated in the fourth quarter of 2016, reported ATTOM Data Solutions' U.S. Residential Property Loan Origination Report. That's a 20 percent increase in loans, and a 27 percent hike in dollar volume from the previous year.

More than 3.3 million refinances and over 2.7 million home purchases were originated in all of 2016, according to the report.

Some economists have predicted that 30-year home-loan rates could rise as high as 4.5 percent by the end of 2017. However, if inflation heats up, rates could exceed that level. Thirty-year fixed-rate loans could hit or surpass 5 percent in 2018, some analysts say.

Because lenders expected the Fed to raise interest rates in mid-June, the hike may already be priced into the current yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury bonds. A likely scenario is that rates will trend gradually higher during summer and autumn.

If you are planning to buy a home or condo before higher rates price you out of the market, there are a few facts you should know:

- History is on your side. On the positive side, home-loan rates are still historically low. The annual average rate from 1972 through 2011 was higher than current rates. In 1999, benchmark 30-year mortgage rates were 8.15 percent. In June of 2003, lenders were charging an average of 5.21 percent. That's an interest rate borrowers may see again in 2018.

- Lower down payments available. New programs at Freddie Mac and Fannie Mae allow the secondary mortgage market gurus to purchase loans from lenders with lower 3 percent to 5 percent down payments, opening homeownership to more first-time buyers.

- More lenient credit scores. The average FICO score for home buyers obtaining mortgages backed by Freddie Mac currently is 750, a relatively high score. However, if a borrower is approved for a Federal Housing Administration-insured (FHA) loan, the score averages only 700.

Suburban homeowners cleared to continue suit vs Chicago over O'Hare air traffic

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

A Cook County judge has cleared dozens of Bensenville homeowners to continue their lawsuit against the city of Chicago for allegedly trespassing on their property rights when the city redesigned runways at O'Hare in 2013, sending a steady growing stream of air traffic over their homes daily since.

On June 7, Cook County Circuit Judge Thomas Mulroy denied the attempt by Chicago city attorneys to dismiss the legal action that has followed the opening of the newest runway at O'Hare International Airport.

The residents have claimed in the years since noise from the aircraft taking off and landing on the new runway, usually 500 feet or less above their homes, has demolished their quality of life. The residents claim the problems from the new runway constitute an "inverse condemnation," or illegal taking of their property under the U.S. and Illinois constitutions.

The homeowners had filed suit in 2016, and the city removed the case initially to federal court and asked a federal judge to dismiss the matter. However, before that judge could rule, the homeowners, represented by attorneys with the firm of LeonardMeyer LLP, of Chicago, persuaded the judge to send the case back to Cook County court.

In Oct. 2016, the city again asked the judge to dismiss the case, arguing the homeowners filed too late, as Illinois law gave them only until 2014 – a year after the new runway first opened – to bring their legal action against the city.

The homeowners, however, argued the clock on the statute of limitations should not start at the time of the runway's opening, but rather when air traffic on the new runway spiked and moved from being a mere nuisance to an infringement of their rights to enjoyment of their property. They asserted that began in 2015, and that, they said, is when the one-year statute of limitations began to run.

Further, they alleged city officials repeatedly misled or even deceived them and the general public to believe City Hall would relieve the impact of the noise on those living in the new runway's flight path, essentially lulling the homeowners into waiting too long to file suit.

In response, the city's attorneys said the statements cited by the homeowners were made by officials to "the press or to 'the public,'" and not directly to the homeowners. And they said no city officials ever promised to relieve the homeowners' situation, saying the statements cited by the Bensenville plaintiffs "describe elements of the normal political process when communities are concerned about the impacts of government action."

Preceding a hearing on June 7, attorneys for both sides presented written testimony from witnesses backing their positions.

Mike Leonard, an attorney for the Bensenville homeowners, said the homeowners presented data showing "an enormous spike in terms of arrivals, size of aircraft and night flights in the summer of 2015" using the new runway.

"The cases indicate that a taking does not occur until there is a practical destruction of the use and enjoyment of the property," Leonard told the Cook County Record. "And that one then is the statute of limitations triggered."

Following arguments in court June 7, Judge Mulroy issued a short handwritten order denying the city's motion to dismiss, and scheduling the case for further proceedings.

Byline Bank announces plans for public stock sale

Byline Bank announced Monday that its private ownership group will be taking the local bank public in an initial public stock offering sometime later this year.

The Chicago-based, North Side-centric bank, previously owned and operated as Metropolitan Bank Group, started over 40 years ago as the small, $16-million-asset North Community Bank in Lakeview East.

The bank was founded by North Siders Peter and Paula Fasseas and a small group of local investors, who then built the bank from a single location to more than 100 branches in the city and suburbs.

In a story first reported by Crain's Chicago Business, the now $3.3-billion-asset bank said it hopes to raise $82 million in its initial stock offering, according to a filing with the Securities & Exchange Commission.

The bank changed hands in 2013 as a result of the Great Recession and the need to recapitalize after hundreds of the bank's commercial loans went into default, costing the bank all of its cash reserves. The Metropolitan Bank Group posted a collective loss of $323 million from the real estate crash of 2008 until its sale in March, 2013.

Roberto Herencia, the former

The deal to take Byline Bank public is expected to set a stock price sometime next week. Various reports target a price between $19-$21 per share.

CEO of Banco Popular North America, recruited an investment group made up of prominent, wealthy Mexicans to recapitalize Metropolitan Bank Group. According to Crain's, the lead shareholder, a group led by Antonio del Valle Perochena, chairman of petrochemical giant Mexichem, holds 47% of the bank's parent. After the offering, that group, which won't sell shares in the IPO, will own about 39%.

The deal is being shepherded by Herencia, who was primarily responsible for putting together the investors group which raised the $207 million to recapitalize the banks in 2013.

In the first quarter of 2017, Byline Bank reportedly posted $6.6 million in net income, a 6.8% return on equity.

Now, some banking industry experts speculate that the bank's leadership may be making this move to raise capital at this time due to their connections to Banco Popular, and that bank's connections to Puerto Rico, just as the U.S. Commonwealth's bankruptcy proceedings begin. They are the island's largest bank. The island territory is deep in the throes of a fiscal crisis driven by a $70-plus billion bond debt, as well as an additional $49 billion pension obligation to government employees.

During recent protests in Puerto Rico, masked rogue demonstrators were seen throwing stones at Banco Popular's main headquarters shattering some of its largest windows. Banco Popular later filed lawsuits against protesters naming 42 plaintiffs, including community organizations, labor unions, and "unknown demonstrators."

According to Crain's, the owners see a place in the Chicago banking scene for a publicly traded bank Byline's size, as locally based banks like Wintrust Financial and MB Financial that used to occupy that niche have grown to $19 billion or more. "Given the relatively modest IPO, there's a surprisingly large number of investment banks getting pieces of the action. Leading the offering are Bank of America. Merrill Lynch and Keefe Bruyette & Woods," said Crain's. "It likely is as much a testament to Herencia's many connections in the market and to the investment banking world as it is to the fees the deal will generate."

The deal is expected to set a stock price sometime next week. Various reports target a price between $19-$21 per share. If investment bankers exercise their total over-allotment, the market value of Byline Bank will be about $500-$584 million.

Bank officers declined to comment for this story, citing legal limitations in advance of an IPO.

Being sweet comes with a cost

Over $1 in new taxes for that 3-liter Coke

BY MAUREEN COWHEY

Stock up on sugary drinks now because as of July 1, Cook County will implement a $.01 per ounce tax on all sweetened beverages. The tax, which was passed in Nov. 2016 by the Cook County Board of Commissioners, is said to raise $224 million for the county.

What it is also sure to do is drive soft drink buyers to surrounding counties and Indiana.

According to a report from Cook County, the tax will apply to bottled sweetened beverages including soda, sports drinks, flavored water, energy drinks, pre-made sweetened coffee and tea with less than 50% milk content, etc. The tax will also cover soda and drinks from dispensers such as fountain drinks and lemonade, stated the report.

The tax will however exclude 100% natural fruit/vegetable juice; syrup and powder with no added sweetener; milk, soy, rice, or similar milk substitutes; unsweetened drinks to which a purchaser can add, or can request that a retailer add sugar at the point of sale; infant formula; beverages for medical use; weight reduction/therapeutic nutritional meal replacements; and any syrup or powder that the consumer himself or herself combines with other ingredients to create a beverage, according to the report.

The tax has been controversial since it was first introduced back in 2016. While 10 Cook County Commissioners supported the tax, seven did not. There are also several campaigns and websites dedicated to 'can the tax.'

One such campaign looking to stop the tax cites Philadelphia as evidence of the detrimental economic outcomes. Philadelphia implemented a similar tax in January, resulting in what Bloomberg News claimed to be a 45% decrease in sales and an equivalent of 400 lost jobs based off of decreased sales. There is even talk of two senators introducing a bill to end the tax, according to the Philadelphia Business Journal.

However, Chicago and Philadelphia are not the first cities to implement such a tax. Other cities across the country have also done so including Albany, Berkeley, and San Francisco in California; Boulder, CO; and Seattle. Many countries throughout the world have had similar taxes in place for years.

Concerns among citizens include small businesses losing profits, people crossing into other counties to buy their drinks tax free, and apprehensions over the regressive nature of the tax affecting the poor disproportionately.

Proponents of the tax believe it will raise money for the county and encourage people to make healthier drink substitutions.

Unspoken but a major factor no doubt is Cook County's dire finances and the need for additional tax revenue to help pay for their unfunded pension liabilities.

Matthews told IPRA.

Matthews’ supervisor didn’t see what caused his new guard to fall, but “Lo and behold, he’s on the floor, and Mr. Walsh is standing above him screaming — insane,” the supervisor recalled in an IPRA report. “He repeatedly called him the ‘N’ word.”

“Mr. Walsh... comes charging, almost as if to finish him off. I’m helping [Matthews] stand up. And a bunch of [Walsh’s] friends grab him, and he’s just raving and, you know, telling [the injured guard] what he thinks of him and all that good stuff.”

Saying the incident seemed like a scene from The Jerry Springer Show, the supervisor said Walsh “looked directly at me and spoke directly to me and said ‘get that fking nier away from me.’”

“Mr. Walsh... comes charging, almost as if to finish him off. I’m helping [Matthews] stand up. And a bunch of [Walsh’s] friends grab him, and he’s just raving and, you know, telling [the injured guard] what he thinks of him and all that good stuff.”

A bartender also told IPRA that Walsh was involved in a fist fight. He even stepped away from his post “to get somebody to help—to break them up or to calm them down,” he said.

The bartender, whose name is redacted in IPRA’s report, said Matthews seemed to grab Walsh by the shoulders to pull him back from the confrontation.

“It happened so quick and [the new guard] was on the ground... He just was like ‘my back... or my shoulders and my back.’”

Investigators heard a different story from Walsh: The intoxicated patron - who had called his friend Tim Mitchell a name minutes earlier - started hitting Walsh in the chest, the officer recalled.

“That’s when I get up and I said—I didn’t strike ‘em or anything—I said ‘keep your hands off me.’ I said that hurts,” Walsh recalled.

“And with that, someone comes from behind me. They put their arm around my neck,” Walsh said. “I just turned with my body... and shrugged him off. Whoever it was. Never put my hands on ‘em. Never pushed ‘em.”

The person Walsh says he shrugged off was the guard—Matthews—who was about four inches taller and 40 lbs. heavier than Walsh, according to IPRA case files.

“...And then you know the guy’s layin’ on the ground. And I said what the fk are you puttin’ your hands on me? And I... did call ‘em a nier, which I regret,” Walsh told investigators.

Three days after Walsh met with IPRA’s Abbruzzese, the men returned to the agency’s offices on Chicago Ave. Walsh wanted to make some clarifications.

“I just wanted to emphasize that while I used very poor choice of profanity,” Walsh said, “it was not meant as a racial slur. I just wanted to reiterate that.”

Walsh went on to say that he referred to a white man as “nier” during the episode, too. “It was just not meant to be a racial slur.”

“I wanted to clarify that my conduct was not influenced by the alcohol... I was not intoxicated. I did not start either event and I was assaulted from the rear by an unidentified individual.”

IPRA’s Abbruzzese later wrote that “Officer Walsh’s attempted justification of his use of profanity and racially derogatory language is not only egregious but blatantly fictitious.”

Two of Walsh’s acquaintances also spoke

Lakeview cop, security contractor eyed in CPD inquiry

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

The Chicago Police Department has opened an inquiry into the relationship between a 19th District police officer’s private security firm and the department’s own operations, according to a source who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

The probe is focused on the years that Officer Thomas J. Walsh worked in the 19th District CAPS office handling complaints about local bars and firms while his private security company was receiving over $200,000 a year from area establishments for private security services, the source said.

This newspaper raised questions about the department’s ethics policy and potential conflicts of interest with Walsh’s private and public employment in a report earlier this month.

The CPD inquiry was launched “in an abundance of caution,” the source said while declining to go into the “specifics of a pending investigation.”

Separately, Walsh’s firm is being looked at by the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation, which oversees security firms in the state.

IDFPR is looking into licensing issues as well as Walsh’s compliance with “other matters,” a source said.

Meanwhile, Walsh took a moment on June 16 to renew his license to work as a security contractor in the state. As we reported last week, he had been operating on an expired license since June 1.

physical altercation when he pushed [Matthews] to the floor, causing an injury to his right shoulder,” investigator Abbruzzese wrote.

Walsh had also violated department rules “when he stated words to the effect of ‘Fking nier. Don’t you ever put your fking hands on me,’ ‘Who the fk do you think you are, you fking nier,’ and ‘Get that fking nier away from me,’” IPRA’s findings said.

The agency also sustained an allegation that Walsh’s actions at the Lucky Horseshoe brought discredit upon the department.

Only an allegation that Walsh was intoxicated at the time of the incident was not sustained, meaning that investigators found insufficient evidence to either prove or disprove the claim.

IPRA recommended a 20-day suspension for Walsh, but then-Chicago Police Supt. Garry McCarthy’s office had a different idea. After reviewing IPRA’s report. McCarthy’s office tripled Walsh’s suspension to 60 days, city records show.

Walsh immediately exercised his contractual right to file a grievance and the matter is now working its way through that often years-long process.

Meanwhile, Matthews sued Walsh, the Lucky Horseshoe Lounge, and the City of Chicago, seeking an unspecified sum exceeding $75,000.

The suit accuses Walsh of a hate crime, battery, and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

Matthews claims he has not been able to work as a security officer since the night of the incident due to a torn rotator cuff and severe pain.

Depositions in the suit began late last year, and the case is scheduled for trial in early 2018.

Mum’s The Word

In preparing our report, we asked The Center on Halsted CEO Modesto “Tico” Valle for comment on this story. His LG-BTQ service agency pays Walsh’s security firm over $130,000 a year for private security guard services.

Valle stated that someone told him the case is still under investigation and “there is nothing to comment on.” He did not respond when we informed him that IPRA concluded its investigation two years ago.

We also contacted the Northalsted Business Alliance, which pays Walsh’s private security firm for foot patrols on Halsted St. Neither Executive Director Chad Honeycutt nor Director of Operations Eric Santiago replied to multiple emails seeking comment.

Walsh declined to comment for this report.

with IPRA investigators about the incident. Both stated that Matthews put Walsh in a “chokehold.”

Neither man could recall seeing Matthews on the floor nor did they remember Walsh verbally abusing him as he lay on the ground. One recalled Walsh using the N-word.

Mitchell, the former parks CEO who was the target of the drunk’s insults, died in Dec. 2014.

IPRA Findings

All told, IPRA investigators spent 15 months looking into Matthews’ allegations.

On March 18, 2015, the agency sustained three of the four charges against Walsh.

Walsh had “engaged in an unjustified

Trash talkin' at the Glenwood Sunday Market, Rogers Park

BY FELICIA DECHTER

A mere suggestion for a garbage can at the Glenwood Sunday Market in East Rogers Park made eyes roll and heads hot last Sunday. What started out as a really nice Father's Day stroll for my family turned into a not-so nice-stroll after my daughter, Tedi, made a simple request for a garbage can.

My daughter went to the organizer's table where Sheree Moratto, sustainability director for the Rogers Park Business Alliance (which runs the market) sat with a couple of young volunteers. Tedi was looking to throw some garbage away and politely mentioned there should at least be one garbage can somewhere in the block-long market. Instead of being told it would be looked into, Tedi was told to give her garbage to Moratto, that she could just hand it to her every week. She and my husband were also told that people are going to litter whether there are garbage cans or not. But my daughter has been taught not to litter, so that didn't sit well with her.

She went over and told my son-in-law, Liam, who was told people can just throw garbage on the ground because it's biodegradable. Liam took offense and became very vocal and, well, he loudly started talking trash as he is very environmentally conscientious. It turned into a scene. Over a very polite and simple garbage can request.

Before I go further though, the city's Web site plainly states of farmer's market rules and regulations (under Health and Safety): "There must be a waste container in a prominent place adjacent to the sampling area for public use."

Someone working for the alderman should surely know that city rule, so it didn't help that Ann Hinterman, who works in 49th Ward Ald. Joe Moore's office, followed my son-in-law around puffing her chest saying that she worked for the alderman and that, "A garbage can will never happen." When I introduced myself and asked Hinterman to go on record with her thoughts she wouldn't comment, and snottily told me she was fully aware of who I was and that she knows how I feel about the alderman. (Actually, I have no problem with the alderman. He has a problem with me. But I didn't know I was such a hot topic around the office!)

There are garbage cans at the corners of Lunt and Morse, but nothing in between that full block length. There are Dumpsters belonging to the local businesses and they're not for public use and are locked shut. Moratto said she would be happy to take garbage and that one of the market vendors, Urban Canopy, has a compost bin.

Moratto was very apologetic and nice. She said a need had been identified and she "would be happy to have further conversations." She also said signage pointing people to Urban Canopy's composting would also probably be helpful. It most definitely would.

There needs to be at least one garbage can at the market. The city already has a rodent problem and what if someone has a bunch of kids with them and needs to throw out a dirty diaper? I mean stuff happens. Do they have to walk a block with little kids in tow to get to a garbage can? Or should they just throw the non-biodegradable, dirty diaper on the ground?

Rogers Park Chamber of Commerce president Bill Morton has offered to donate a garbage can to the farmer's market. Problem solved.

A mere suggestion for a garbage can at the Glenwood Sunday Market in East Rogers Park made eyes roll and heads hot last Sunday.

This is also very important for people with disabilities who cannot walk to Lunt or Morse, a full block, to be able to throw their garbage out and possibly may not have an extra hand to schlep trash if they walk with a cane. I've since been told vendors will throw things away. If that is true, no one mentioned it and again, there should be signage. And Tedi pointed out that vendors taking garbage need to wash their hands, but there is no water for them to do so. At that point, it becomes a sanitation issue.

Meanwhile, that same weekend, at the Artists of the Wall Fest, there were at least a dozen-and-a-half garbage and recycle bins. I realize that's the park district, but still, there they were. As it should be.

On Monday morning, Tedi drove down Glenwood Avenue. While the surrounding blocks were clean, the market site had at least 20 pieces of garbage strewn about and the garbage cans on Morse were overflowing, she said. Also on Monday---after the issue blew up on social media when Tedi posted something about it Sunday on a couple of neighborhood Facebook pages---Rogers Park Chamber of Commerce president Bill Morton generously offered to donate a garbage can to the market. Problem solved, thanks to Morton's community spirit!

I hope to see a trash can (and a recycle bin would be nice too) next time I visit this wonderful market, which by the way, now serves prepared food also and has had its nearly 100 vendors return this year. If you haven't been there, be sure to go. But maybe bring a big garbage bag with you, in case you want or need to dispose of something properly.

Gallery examines the effect of racism and xenophobia during WWII

Exhibit is free and open to the public

What does an American look like? Who is welcome in this country? What is every American's duty in the face of racist government action? These and other questions are posed by Alphawood Gallery's first original exhibition, Then They Came for Me: Incarceration of Japanese Americans during WWII and the Demise of Civil Liberties, debuting Thursday and continuing through Nov. 19.

Then They Came for Me is showing at the gallery, 2401 N. Halsted St., and is free and open to the public.

The exhibit examines a dark episode in U.S. history when, in the name of national security, the government incarcerated 120,000 citizens and legal residents during World War II without due process or other constitutional protections to which they were entitled.

Executive Order 9066, signed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt on February 19, 1942, set in motion the forced removal and imprisonment of all people of Japanese ancestry (citizens and non-citizens alike) living on or near the West Coast. During this 75th anniversary year of Executive Order 9066, we look back at this shameful past to learn lessons for our present and future in the face of new challenges created by fear-mongering and racism at the highest levels of government.

Then They Came for Me is steeped in Chicago history. Thousands of previously incarcerated persons resettled here after release from the camps, and they built a vibrant and rich Japanese American community that lives on today, particularly on the North Side. This Chicago story forms an important part of the exhibition and its message. The gallery has partnered with the Japanese American Service Committee (JASC) and members of Chicago's Japanese American community to produce this show, which will employ a wide range of photography, video, art and historical artifacts to provide multiple perspectives, engaging visitors in critical discussions of this story of injustice and its relevance today.

"A difficult but important part of our mission is shining a light on great injustice, inhumanity and unfairness when it happens in our own country," said Jim McDonough, Executive Director, Alphawood Foundation. "By understanding how this could have happened only 75 years ago, we hope to promote a more fair and just America today. The lessons that we take from this history will help us counter the hatred and xenophobia being peddled in the name of national security and patriotism."

The title of the exhibition, Then They Came for Me, points out that this could happen to any group, "to any one of us. If we don't stand up for our neighbors when they are threatened in this way, who will stand up for us," said McDonough.

"[People] within the broader Japanese American community are proud to be a part of such a timely and important exhibit," said Michael Takada, CEO of the JASC. "Through our archives, we have been entrusted with preserving and promoting the lessons learned through the experience of wartime incarceration and resettlement. For the Japanese American community, having seen what can happen when racism, xenophobia, wartime hysteria, and a lack of political leadership are allowed to flourish, we hope to continue to help spread the message that each new generation must challenge itself to guard our civil liberties and human rights, and to not take them for granted."

Then They Came for Me draws largely upon 100 powerful images culled from the recently published book Un-American (CityFiles Press) by Chicago-based photography historians Richard Cahan and Michael Williams. Forming the core of the exhibition's incarceration narrative will be these works by renowned American photographers Dorothea Lange, Ansel Adams and others documenting the eviction of Japanese Americans and permanent Japanese residents from their homes and their subsequent lives in incarceration camps.

Adams, Lange and others were hired by the U.S. Government's War Relocation Authority to document the "evacuation" and "internment" of Japanese Americans along the West Coast. Lange left the program after three months, and some of her photographs, Police Beat....

Man charged with entering woman’s Lakeview apartment

A man who claimed to be looking for his wallet has been charged her bedroom door at 5:30 a.m. last week.

Several 911 callers reported seeing a man walking house-to-house, checking the doorknobs on homes in the 1200 block of West Newport around 6:30 a.m. on June 8.

Responding officers say they saw Jefferey D. White enter a gangway on the block as they arrived. They stopped him for an interview.

As they spoke with White, a woman emerged from a nearby home and said that she had chased White from her home after he tried to open her bedroom door, police said. He had apparently climbed through the woman’s front window, prosecutors said.

Just as police were preparing to take White into the station, another resident of Newport walked up and handed them a wallet that she found on top of her porch. It was White’s.

Officers reviewed the wallet’s contents and determined that it belonged to White, who had given them a fake name.

White works as a security guard.

Teen gets probation for Wrigleyville robbery

A Garfield Park teen has been sentenced to two years of probation for his role in a Wrigleyville robbery on April 3.

Alex Clark

place a block west of Wrigley Field on Addison Street around 8:30 p.m.

He has now pleaded guilty to one count of robbery-indicating firearm and the judge let him off without prison time.

In addition to probation, Clark has been ordered to pay restitution of $215.99. He was also sentenced to 67 days in jail, which was offset by time served.

Details on the other two suspects’ cases are not available because they are juveniles.

River North bouncer fires shot after group surrounds him at ATM

A bar security guard was arrested after he fired a handgun into the ground on the Hubbard Street nightlife district in River North, police said.

Aleksandr Bogatyrev told police that a group of people surrounded him near an ATM at 21 West Hubbard around 2 a.m. on June 3. He fired his handgun into the ground, apparently in an effort to defeat what he believed to be a robbery.

A 21-year-old woman who was in the group of people called the police and filed charges against Bogatyrev, who works at El Jefe Tavern, 15 West Hubbard, according to prosecutors.

Bogatyrev is being charged with reckless discharge of a firearm.

River North robbery report

Two men were attacked and robbed in separate River North incidents early Saturday, June 17.

A Streeterville man was thrown to the ground by two men who put guns to the back of his head and took everything out of his pockets near Illinois and Lake Shore Drive around 3:30 a.m. The victim, who was walking home when the attack took place, could not offer a description of the gunmen.

Minutes later, an officer on patrol found a man in his mid-20’s beaten badly and apparently going into shock on a sidewalk in the 100 block of West Kinzie. The victim, believed to be a robbery victim, suffered facial injuries and blood loss.

DePaul-area traffic stop leads cops to gun, drugs

Police recovered a loaded gun and drugs from a documented gang-banger’s car during a routine traffic stop near DePaul University last

Johnathon Moore

Thursday, police said.

Just three weeks ago, police recovered three guns and ammunition from the man’s home during a domestic altercation, court records show.

Police noticed expired plates on 27-year-old Johnathon Moore’s car near Halsted and Fullerton just after 11 p.m. They pulled him over. Two minors were in the car with him, police said.

One of the minors reached over the car’s seats as officers approached and one cop saw the handle of a handgun on the back passenger-side floorboard, prosecutors said.

Police stated that they ordered everyone out of the car and then recovered a loaded 9-millimeter handgun along with suspected Ecstasy.

Moore—a Familia Stone gang member according to police—told cops that he was “just hanging out with friends” and that one of the minors was living with him at the time. “I been showing him the ways of doing things,” Moore reportedly explained.

Prosecutors charged Moore with being a felon in possession of a firearm, possession of a controlled substance, contributing to the delinquency of a minor, possessing ammunition without a Firearm Owner’s Identification Card, traffic citations, and related charges.

He was also wanted on a warrant for a domestic battery case that police handled on May 24.

In that incident, a family member told police that Moore pushed her to the ground and a neighbor reported that Moore fired a shot at her before cops arrived, police said.

The family member who lives with Moore gave police authorization to search their residence, and police recovered a loaded 9-millimeter handgun; a second 9-millimeter handgun that was reported stolen in Indiana; a loaded 22-caliber rifle; and a box of ammunition, according to prosecutors.

But the neighbor had a change of heart and decided that she did not want to pursue charges related to being shot at because she did not want Moore’s children to see their father go to jail for a long time.

In the end, Moore was charged only with domestic battery, according to records.

His bail is now set at $125,000.

Man beaten, robbed by offender who wore rainbow glowstick

Police say a man was punched in the face, beaten, and robbed at Roscoe and Clark Saturday morning by two offenders—including one who was wearing a rainbow glow stick.

The man was found “all bloodied up” at 3335 North Clark after losing $10 to the assaulters just before 3 a.m. An ambulance crew treated him for his injuries.

Both offenders were described as black men in dark clothing. One is in his late teens, heavy-set, and about 5’6” tall. He was carrying a rainbow glow stick. The other man is thinner.

Lincoln Park bump ‘n’ run

There’s another bump ‘n’ run car theft to tell you about. This one played out at Clark and LaSalle late on June 15.

A woman was rear-ended as she neared the intersection around 10 p.m., police said. When she got out of her 2015 Infinity to check the damage, a man jumped from the other car, got into hers, and drove away.

The man who took her car is described as a short black man who was wearing a red hoodie.

He emerged from a silver Chrysler 300 that was driven by a heavy-set black man with dreadlocks.

Both cars were last seen heading toward Lake Shore Drive on LaSalle.

Gang member shot in Lincoln Park

A 28-year-old man is in good condition at Stroger Hospital after being shot inside Lincoln Park on Saturday. No one is in custody and the man is not co-operating with investigators.

Witnesses reported seeing two groups of people shooting at each other near North Pond restaurant in the 2500 block of North Stockton just before 3 a.m. Both groups fled the area in separate vehicles—a gold Cadillac and a blue Chevy Z71 truck.

The victim, a known gang member who lives in West Town, was dropped off at Stroger about 30 minutes later.

Shell casings and blood were found at 2551 North Stockton, police said. Four parked vehicles were also shot.

Wrigleyville shots fired

Wrigley Field’s food and beverage warehouse suffered a gunshot wound after a man opened fire during a disturbance in the 3700 block of North Clark on Saturday.

Callers reported hearing eight shots fired by a man around 2:15 a.m.

The gunman, described as a white man who was wearing a black hat, black shirt, and blue jean shorts, fled the scene in a white Buick SUV, witnesses said.

Cops found a bullet hole in an overhead door of the Wrigley Field warehouse at 3721 North Clark.

No one was arrested. Shell casings were later found in the rear of a nearby home.

Shots fired at ‘L’ station

One man is in custody after shots were fired during an argument at the Clark/Division Red Line station early Saturday.

The shooter pulled out a gun and shot at the other man on the ‘L’ station steps around 3 a.m., but no one was struck, police said.

Cops arrested the offender minutes later at the North/Clybourn station. Charges are pending.

Uptown gang member charged in North Ave beach stabbing

A member of Uptown’s Gangster Disciple street gang faction is charged with Tuesday evening’s knife attack at North Avenue Beach, police said.

Pablo Sosa, 35, is accused of attempted first-degree murder and aggravated battery—deadly weapon. Bail is set at $750,000.

Sosa met the 25-year-old victim for the first time at the beach about an hour before the stabbing unfolded.

Witnesses told police that they advised the soon-to-be-victim that Sosa was behaving erratically and to be careful with him, prosecutors said.

Around 6:15 p.m., Sosa approached the victim, and a fistfight broke out. Sosa soon pulled out two knives and used them to stab the other man nine times, police said.

Bystanders and police caught up with Sosa as he tried to flee the scene on his bike. One man hit and stabbed Sosa with a broken bottle.

The victim remains in serious condition at Northwestern Memorial Hospital with a punctured lung and other injuries.

Sosa also remains hospitalized at Northwestern with stab wounds.

Shortly after the attack, a police official said the incident was domestic related, but prosecutors said today that Sosa did not know the victim.

This newspaper has learned that Sosa was, in fact, charged in a domestic incident recently. Prosecutors agreed to drop charges when the victim became uncooperative, according to court records.

On March 3, police went to the West Side home of Sosa’s longtime girlfriend after the woman’s daughter called 911 and said that Sosa was being abusive and she feared for her mother’s safety, according to court records.

Cops said no one would open the door when they arrived, yet they could hear screams and noises coming from inside as Sosa reportedly yelled, “She’s fine! She’s fine!” The fire department was called to force the door open for officers.

Inside, the police found bloodstains on bed sheets as well as on Sosa. The 51-year-old girlfriend admitted that Sosa threw her onto the bed and held her face in the mattress, causing severe neck and head pain, police said.

A witness stated that they often heard screams coming from the apartment and Sosa does not let his girlfriend leave the house, according to police.

During a court hearing in late May, the woman told prosecutors that she did not want to testify in the case. Prosecutors agreed to drop the single charge of domestic battery that Sosa faced.

Florida man refused to press robbery charges

Derrick Robie won’t be facing robbery charges even though a man identified him as the person who held a knife to his stomach and demanding his iPhone in Boystown last Friday, police said.

The victim, a 22-year-old college student from Tampa, refused to press robbery charges because he will not return to Chicago for court.

Police said they stopped Robie in the 3200 block of North Halsted around 4:45 a.m. Friday because the victim identified Robie as one of three offenders who’d just held him up nearby.

Robie shoved the victim into a wall and pressed a knife to his stomach saying, “Gimme the phone, you know what this is,” police said.

Cops said they recovered a knife from Robie that the victim identified as the weapon used in the hold-up.

But Robie did not walk away unscathed. The City of Chicago is pursuing a misdemeanor charge of sale or possession of a deadly weapon against him.

He quickly bailed out for 10 percent of $120. Which was convenient because he only had $11.73 in his possession at the time of his arrest, according to police.

Man stabbed repeatedly in North Center brawl

A 19-year-old man is in serious condition after suffering multiple stab wounds in a fight in North Center on Thursday.

Police said an offender is in custody.

The two men got into a fight that spilled into the street outside of a physical therapy clinic and a social service center in the 4200 block of North Lincoln Avenue just after 3 p.m.

Officers arrived in time to take the suspect into custody at the scene.

Police said the victim suffered multiple stab wounds to his chest and a slashed face. He was taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center in serious condition.

River North man tried to kill woman with Tylenol, prosecutors say

A former Boystown man has been charged with trying to kill a woman by forcing her to ingest

Shane Limbacher

Tylenol in his River North apartment.

Prosecutors say 44-year-old Shane Limbacher became angry with the woman on April 15, grabbed her by the throat and began punching her in the face.

He then tied the woman to a chair, cut her hair with a knife and told her that he was going to kill her before he “poured a handful of Tylenol down her throat” and forced her to drink water to wash the pills down, prosecutors alleged.

The woman later told investigators that Limbacher may have shoved over 70 pills down her throat during the attack.

A grand jury returned a 9-count true bill against Limbacher, who’s charged with two counts of attempted murder; two counts of aggravated kidnapping; two counts of aggravated domestic battery—strangulation; one count of aggravated domestic battery; aggravated battery—toxic substance; and aggravated battery with a deadly weapon, court records show.

Limbacher was returned to Chicago on a warrant after authorities found him in Jackson, Michigan, late last month. He is being held without bail.

Just a month before the woman was allegedly attacked, Limbacher filed papers in an attempt to get an old battery charge removed from his otherwise clean record.

He was accused of striking a man inside a bar in the 3300 block of North Halsted in 2011, but the case was dropped after the victim failed to show up in court.

A fourth person was able to detain Tucker until officers arrived moments later.

Tucker is charged with one count of felony attempt robbery and three felony counts of aggra- vated battery in a public place.

Sexual assault in Irving Park

A 26-year-old woman was sexually assaulted in her Irving Park home on the afternoon of June 14, police said.

Around 1 p.m., the victim was followed into her building by an unknown offender who knocked her down, pulled out a knife, and sexually assaulted her, according to authorities.

The man then fled in an unknown direction from the 3400 block of West Irving Park Road.

He is described as a 30-year-old Hispanic man who stands about 6'1" tall and weighs 210 pounds. His dark hair was pulled back into a bun and he wore a black t-shirt with tan cargo pants and black sandals.

Woman shot dead on Streeterville sidewalk; stray bullet flies into condo owner's living room

A 25-year-old woman was shot to death early Sunday morning near Lake Shore Drive and Ohio Street in Streeterville. No one is in custody.

Stray bullets from the shooting flew into a nearby condo building, with one bullet becoming entangled in a second-floor resident's living room window blinds, a witness said.

Raven Lemons of North Lawndale was pronounced dead at Northwest- ern Memorial Hospital just after 3 a.m. About 20 minutes earlier, she was shot once in the head as she stood on a sidewalk in the 500 block of East Ohio Street near a pedestrian tunnel that goes to the lakefront, ac- cording to police and a witness.

People were seen running from the area and a white sedan—possibly a Kia Optima—with four occupants sped away.

2014 rape in Boystown construction site brings 17-Year sentence

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

More than three years after he followed a woman from a Boys- town gas station and raped her in the back of a Halsted Street construction site, 23-year-old Marcus Lynch has met justice.

Marcus Lynch

Lynch was handed a 17-year sentence on Tuesday after he pleaded guilty to aggravated crimi- nal sexual assault in connection with the attack on April 14, 2014.

Around 4:30 that afternoon Lynch trailed a then-22-year-old Boystown woman as she walked to buy cigarettes at the Circle K gas station, 801 West Addison. He watched her in the store and then followed her as she left and turned down a nearby alley to return to her apartment, prosecutors said.

About a half-block into the alley, Lynch ran up to the woman from behind, put a double-edged knife to her throat, and shoved her into the back of a construction site at 3532 North Halsted, prosecutors said. Construction crews were still working during the attack to convert a dilapidated auto garage into a day care center.

Aided by surveillance video, cell phone pings, and fingerprints for a known man who is believed to have fled the scene. He may have been the intended target, a source said.

Four bullet casings were found in the 600 block of North Lake Shore Drive. In addition to the one that killed Lemons, other bullets flew into that Lynch left on a construction worker's truck, cops made an arrest within days.

Prosecutors admitted that Lynch had been accused of sexually assaulting another woman five months before the Boystown at- tack, but prosecutors did not file charges.

An online police blog reported details of the case that went uncharged:

[Marcus Lynch] was arrested on 13 December 2013 on another [case] where he detained and raped a female at knifepoint, forced the victim to give him her phone number, called the victim while she was being interviewed by the police for another "date" and was apprehended where he told her to meet him.

Slam-dunk Criminal Sexual As- sault, right? Not according to the State's Attorney who refused to ap- prove felony charges that probably would have kept this animal be- hind bars and prevented the most recent rape. The case was initially listed as "continuing investigation," but was shortly followed up by a refusal of charges.

"It was a different case with different circumstances, and there was insufficient evidence to pursue charges," state's attorney spokes- person Sally Daly said at the time.

Lynch's parole date has not been set.

Chicago Cinder Classic bike race debuts Aug. 20 at Winnemac Park

Relay on cinder track inspired by film “Breaking Away”

Inspired by a well-known cinder track relay race at Indiana Univ. and the film “Breaking Away,” Chicago’s Active Transportation Alliance [ATA] has now opened registration for the Chicago Cinder Classic bike relay race on Aug. 20 in Winnemac Park ion Lincoln Square.

Each team of four racers will ride 100 laps (25 miles) on identical single speed bikes. Unlike the race at Indiana Univ. which is only open to students, anyone can participate in the Chicago Cinder Classic in one of four different races: Open, Men’s Elite, Women’s Elite and Masters. Within each race, awards will be given to the top overall teams and the top Corporate and Bike Club teams.

Each team is required to make at least three exchanges between teammates during the race, and the strategy for when to exchange and how often is crucial to winning. Each team will be provided two identical single speed bikes to race, which allows teams to adjust bike seat positions to accommodate riders of different heights.

As with the race at Indiana Univ., the track is cinder at Winnemac Park, which makes for a more gritty and interesting race compared to a paved surface (cinder is crushed gravel mixed with ash).

“If you’ve ever seen the race, you know how exciting and fun it is,” said Ron Burke, executive director of ATA. “We’re bringing that experience to Chicago and expect to see teams forming from corporations, groups of university alumni, bicycling and running clubs, and friends who perhaps play other sports together or simply enjoy bicycling.”

Start positions are first come, first served by the order of registration.

Millennials contribute to Chicago's climb as a bike-friendly city

BY HALEY VELASCO
Medill News Service

Molly Russell, 26, who is new to Chicago, rides her bike from Lakeview down Lake Shore Dr. to get downtown for school.

“I can just hop downtown with a really easy ride. No stress,” Russell said. “I’m really impressed by the transportation around Chicago. I have been trying to bike just to save money and get out and about.”

Rated as the No. 1 biking city in 2016, according to Bicycling Magazine, Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the city have made commitments to improving bike lanes and increasing access to bikes through bike-sharing programs like Divvy.

According to Divvy’s released ridership numbers, in Q4 of 2014, 88,972 people 16-27 years old rode Divvy bikes. Out of a total ridership of 437,965, that means approximately 20.21% of riders were millennials.

In Q4 of 2016, 207,686 people 18-29 years old rode Divvy bikes. Out of a total ridership of 683,382, that means approximately 30.39% of rides were taken by millennial riders.

“The Divvy program is certainly going to be something that is going to be expanding and helping people get access to cycling. Whether they are using those bikes for transportation or for some recreation,” said Lou Kuhn, owner, mechanic and manager of The Pony Shop. “I think they are mostly getting used for transportation. That certainly seems to be expanding. The capacity for people to be able to get into cycling easily around here.”

At the end of 2016, Divvy also announced that it hit the 10 million rider mark since its founding in July 2013. This made Divvy the third bike-sharing system in the nation to hit the milestone, following Capital Bikeshare in Washington, D.C. and Citi Bike in New York City.

“There’s been a great uptick of millennial bikers,” said David Pohlrad, program director, Bikes N’ Roses, a non-profit that employs youth in bike shops in Albany Park and Belmont Cragin. “I saw it starting when I was in high school about eight years ago, and it’s still growing. I think a lot of it has to do with freedom. In a city as dense as Chicago, you can get anywhere on a bike quickly.”

“The Divvy program has done a lot for cycling. It’s great for people that aren’t quite committed to biking enough to buy a bike, lock, helmet, lights, etc. can jump on and go.” Pohlrad said.

The Chicago Dept. of Transportation created the Divvy for Everyone campaign to offer all Chicagoans an affordable, accessible and fun transportation option. People 16 years or older (with an annual household income at or below 300% of the Federal Poverty Level.) can register for an annual membership for just $5.

“Personally, I look at the introduction of Divvy’s “Divvy for Everyone” program as one of its largest successes yet,” Pohlrad said. “It addresses this lack of cycling access and provides residents of low income neighborhoods an equitable opportunity to cycling as a form of transportation.”

Mayor Emanuel also pledged last year to create 50 more miles of lanes over the next three years, have been helpful with getting riders, especially millennial ones, on bikes.

“Millennials that we see that are getting into it are getting into it as a lifestyle choice. They don’t want to be on the train. They don’t want to be on the bus,” Kuhn said. “They just want to be in charge of their own transportation with riding. I think it’s a freeing way to live your life.”

No camping in Grant Park

Courts: IL Constitution does not expand assembly rights beyond First Amendment

BY JONATHAN BILYK
Cook County Record

A Chicago ordinance prohibiting anyone, even protesters, from remaining overnight in Grant Park without a special city permit is constitutional, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled, rejecting contentions from left-wing protest groups that the state constitution grants broader rights to assembly than does the U.S. Constitution.

On June 15, the state's high court justices ruled 6-1 to back a state appeals court's findings a Cook County judge had erred in finding unconstitutional a city ordinance allowing Grant Park to "close" for seven hours each night, which the city used several years ago to justify police actions to block protestors from camping in Grant Park.

The case landed in the courts nearly five years ago, after the city of Chicago expelled a group of protesters associated with the left-wing Occupy movement from Grant Park in Oct. 2011. That month, protests in Chicago, as part of the nationwide Occupy movement, had swelled to several thousand daily, with a sustained presence 24 hours a day on downtown city streets. On Oct. 15, protesters announced their intent to "occupy" Grant Park.

Over two successive weekends that month, however, the Chicago Police Dept. arrested more than 300 protesters, when Occupy protesters refused to obey repeated police orders or heed multiple warnings to leave the park hours after it "closed," under the city ordinance.

The protesters then challenged the ordinance, saying it unconstitutionally violated their rights to assemble.

Cook County Judge Thomas More Donnelly initially sided with the protestors, finding the city's ordinance barring use of Grant Park from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m. was an unconstitutional infringement on citizens' rights under the U.S. and Illinois constitutions, and particularly those of the Occupy protestors, who wished to use the park to assemble for their protests against what they believed to be injustices within the U.S. economic and political systems.

City Hall appealed the ruling, arguing its ordinance was justified under the goal of allowing the city to preserve and maintain the park for public use, which they said was a legitimate government interest. And the city argued the ordinance did not block the protesters from marching – only from setting up camp in Grant Park.

On appeal, the Illinois First District Appellate Court twice overruled Judge Donnelly, first in Dec. 2014, and again 12 months later, after the Illinois Supreme Court ordered the panel to take another look at the case in light of the Occupy plaintiffs' First Amendment claims.

face north. Prior to its reinstallation, Bommer had been among those who had lobbied to have the statue to face south.

"Pedestrian viewing is much better on the south side. There is not much land on the north side of the statue. Also, up and down Lakeview Ave., you have a number of high-rises that face the statue. Looking north, there is only one. It's ludicrous that they did this," Bommer said.

Numerous sources have told this newspaper the decision to turn the statue to face north was influenced, partly, by the persua-

The protesters then appealed the matter to the state high court, which also upheld the city ordinance.

The justices centered their ruling on the protesters' contentions the Illinois constitution – which grants to state residents the "right to assemble in a peaceable manner, to consult for the common good, to make known their opinions to their representatives and to apply for redress of grievances" - grants them more expansive assembly rights than under the U.S. Constitutions. The protesters had argued this meant their rights to assemble should not be subject to the same "time, place, manner" restrictions as is applied now under federal case law. The court, however, rejected that claim.

"We hold that because the two provisions are virtually identical in language and were intended by the drafters of the Illinois Constitution of 1970 to express the same meaning, the right to assemble guaranteed in article I, section 5, of the Illinois Constitution of 1970 is to be interpreted and applied in lockstep with the federal precedents interpreting and applying the assembly clause of the first amendment of the United States Constitution," the justices wrote.

While the protesters asserted the overnight parks ban also violated their rights to "consult for the common good" and "to make known their opinions to their representatives," the justices said the protesters failed to connect "their desire to exercise these rights and the need to gather together in Grant Park during the overnight hours."

They "argue only that their right to consult with 'passers-by' for the common good is impaired by the park's closing, when law-abiding members of the public would not be present," the justices wrote.

Seven hours of mariachi bands will be more than just a dream when the Chicago Mariachi Festival starts this weekend.

The festival will include a seven-hour "mariachi extravaganza" at Millennium Park on Sunday. The free event will take place at Cloud Gate and Jay Pritzker Pavilion starting at 2 p.m.

Featured bands will include Mariachi Herencia de México from Chicago and student mariachi bands from seven Chicago Public Schools.

On Saturday, Ballet Folklórico de la Universidad de Colima will perform at Roosevelt University's Auditorium Theatre. Tickets for that event will range from $40 to $75.

Organizers say it is the largest mariachi event in the United States, attracting more than 18,000 people.
