Horns and drums are back at Chicago jazz clubs

BY ELISA SHOENBERGER
Loop North News

Jazz holds a special place in Chicago hearts. For many, jazz and Chicago are synonymous. Since March 2020, many jazz clubs and other entertainment venues in Chicago have been dark due to the COVID-19 economic lockdown.

But now with vaccines, low case numbers, and Chicago reopening, horns and drums are again being heard.

Jazz clubs pivoted to deal with changing regulations and have worked to keep their patrons, musicians, and staff safe from the coronavirus. Winter's Jazz Club in Streeterville requires proof of vaccination from patrons before they enter. Andy's Jazz Club in River North requires reservations and charges a four percent cleaning and sanitation surcharge.

Starting in the late 1910s, jazz musicians flocked to Chicago to play at clubs and other establishments around the city.

Winter's Jazz Club in Streeterville requires proof of vaccination from patrons before they enter. Andy's Jazz Club in River North requires reservations and charges a four percent cleaning and sanitation surcharge.

"People say that New Orleans was the birthplace [of jazz]. It was raised, however, in Chicago," said Andy Schumm, musician and band leader of Chicago Cellular Boys.

Many of the greatest musicians of the Jazz Era came to Chicago.

Group of attackers rob another Divvy biker in the Loop; two charged, guns seized

BY CWBCHICAGO

Two suburban men face felony charges after yet another bicyclist was beaten and robbed by a large group of people in the Loop June 19. The victim is the third bicyclist — and the second Divvy rider — to be similarly attacked in the Loop since June 16.

Police said the 29-year-old was docking his Divvy bike on the 100 block of W. Monroe around 11:30 p.m. when a group of eight to 10 people approached him, punched him several times, and took his bicycle at gunpoint. Officers responded and found a group of suspects in the area.

On June 20 prosecutors charged Anthony Glees Cole, 19, of Park Forest with felony robbery and felony unlawful use of a weapon. The victim identified Cole as the offender who repeatedly punched him in the face and took his Divvy bike, prosecutors said. Police allegedly found a loaded handgun in his possession during a search.

Also arrested was Taurus Haywood, 25, of University Park. Police chased Haywood on foot and saw him throw an object into an alley as he ran, prosecutors said.

After he was in custody, cops returned to the alley and found a loaded handgun, according to the allegations. The victim identified Haywood as a member of the group that approached him at the Divvy docking station, prosecutors said.

Chicago USPS Postmaster replaced

Home-delivery of mail by the U.S. Postal Service on Chicago's North Side has wavered between dismal and well below average for more than a decade.

For the last 18-months, for some communities, receiving mail was at best a once-a-week occurrence. This newspaper reported several times about communities complaining about weeks-in-a-row passing with no mail delivered to the home.

Improvements brought on by interventions by U.S. Reps. Jan Schakowsky and Mike Quigley proved temporary — and now the Chicago Post Office has just announced a leadership change after years of mail service complaints. According to an internal announcement, Chicago Postmaster Wanda Prater has been replaced by Eddie Morgan Jr., most recently of the Kansas City post office. She left her job June 12 following tens of thousands of complaints from all over the Chicagoland region.

"The mail delivery in our neighborhood has been a problem for years now," said Ald. Debra Silverstein [50th], whose Rogers Park and West Ridge communities have been particularly neglected in the last 18 months.

"Many [residents] have called me about postal issues, and more than 100 local residents came to a town hall meeting I held last year with the leadership of USPS. I have been working to resolve these issues, and I am pleased to hear that the postal service is finally beginning to take it seriously."

Other North Side communities who also reported poor mail service were Lakeview, Lincoln Park, Uptown and Edgewater.

CTA lowering fares

In an effort to encourage people to start using CTA buses and trains again, from now through Labor Day (Monday, Sept. 6), the CTA will offer attractive discounts on three of its unlimited-ride passes. A one-day pass will be $5 (down from $10); a three-day pass, $15 (down from $20), and a seven-day pass, $20 (down from $28).

The promotional fares will be available for purchase at Ventra Vending Machines at CTA rail stations, on the Ventra app, on the Ventra website, at over 1,000 retail locations, or by calling 877-669-8368.

After dropping by nearly 90% due to the pandemic and economic lockdown, CTA ridership has been slowly increasing since the start of the year, and the CTA hopes that these lower promotional fares will help sustain additional ridership growth. Currently, the CTA serves more than 500,000 riders on an average weekday.

Sundays on State summer open streets program

Sundays on State [SOS], an new open streets project, operated by the Chicago Loop Alliance [CLA] will see parts of State St. in the Loop closed to vehicle traffic on select Sundays this summer.

Free and open to the public, SOS will take place on State St. from Lake to Madison on July 11, 18 and 25, Aug. 8, 22 and 29 and Sept. 5 and 12.

The closures will last from 7 a.m. until 11 p.m.

Not interested in going downtown? Well how about a game of chance... those who register to attend SOS will be automatically entered for a chance to win a $1,000 Loop staycation package.

In an effort to bring people safely back to the Loop, SOS will give pedestrians a chance to experience arts and culture, active recreation, retail, restaurants and bars against the backdrop of State

Chicago's most iconic street, State Street, will close to traffic and transform into an open street full of surprises beginning July 11.

St.'s iconic architecture. For more information, visit www.loopchicago.com/sundaysonstate.

The July 11 SOS will feature more than 70 events throughout the day, submitted by community members and organizations from all over the area and selected by a committee led by CLA.

East-west streets will remain open so that retail, hotels, restaurants and residential spaces will still have access by vehicle. Signage about the street closure will be placed at the sites of the closure and two blocks out to provide ample notice to vehicles. State St. from Wacker to Lake will be used as a drop-off zone.

CLA transformed State St. in a similar way in 2011 and 2012.

Taxi! Taxi! City can't defend us from the Kale Mob

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

The City of Chicago genuinely seems to be returning to life, but I'm at a loss, beyond the measure of a quandary.

Fans are beginning to show up at Wrigley Field. Sailors are skimming the waters of Lake Michigan with wind in their sails. Restaurants are booking reservations. Churches are rehearsing almost forgotten hymns. They're making a movie outside my house. Some Chicagoans are actually going to the funerals of their friends. The Palmer House has been spruced up. Old Town Art Fair came back from the dead. Lollapalooza is on the horizon. And members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra are tuning up their fiddles.

It looks like we are returning from the brink of pandemic and a forced economic shut down. On Bloomsday (June 16) no less. James Joyce would be proud. Like Hansel and Gretel. Half-baked.

Wetting our whistles with our pals, lunching with a small group of loved ones. Eating West Coast oysters for the first time in a year. Fitting into our pre-pandemic jeans. Eating watermelon and loving it.

But we're still finding our way. A closer look demands a deeper understanding of conditions. Flights are slow returning to O'Hare, the Chicago Public Schools are still in chaos and disarray. Not everything is making a quick comeback. For instance, what's up with Uber?

I've been an Uber-user and fan for a long time. Why not? Most of the time they're just two minutes away, and there's no need for cash.

Most drivers know North from South, and that expressways are for tourists.

Living in East Village, I'm in an Uber neighborhood. Surrounded by fellow Uber-users. You know, hipster types, new attorneys, traders, waiters, bartenders. Service industry types and artists.

People who always need a lift somewhere.

Back in March I received my first COVID jab at the Clark and Diversey Walmart. Uber came and collected me. But the ride was more expensive than usual. $22, not the $12 as it was normally.

Pandemic blackmail, I reasoned. Many drivers were out of work. Many cars (including most taxi's) withdrawn from use. Not as many folks traveling across the urban grid.

After the jab my return ride was an even bigger ambush, costing twice as much. Somewhere around the $40 range. I had no choice, I needed to get home.

When Uber appeared last Friday around 9:30 a.m. to take me to the Loop, I was cheered that it was a roomy Toyota. My lady driver said "hello."

I made sure my mask was in place, and said "hello."

But the music was so loud I didn't think she heard me. The air was on. But all the windows were closed. So I made two requests. First, I said, shouldn't the windows be down? She replied it was too hot out to lower them. I told her that in the winter I rode in Ubers with all the windows open. She had no reply.

Then I asked her to lower the radio as the music was too loud. She uttered an awful grunt and without pulling away from the curb said, "Get out. I'm canceling this ride."

I asked her to reconsider, and apologized if anything I said upset her.

Many Yellow Cab drivers seem to see Uber for what it is, a reheated plate of vegan swill.

She said, "Get out. You give me too much stress."

Again I apologized, and said I was a cardiac patient going to my doctor. Would she reconsider? "No," she said. "I don't care. Get out."

I had to scramble for another Uber, it came quickly, and got me to the doctor on time.

But my earlier lady driver had left me in mild hysterics. Not a great preparation for a doctor's visit. I felt victimized and angry. No Chicagoan should have to endure such a thing.

Recently I called an Uber to collect me after lunch. I expected the charge to be about $12, but apparently it was a busy late afternoon.

Uber told me they couldn't do it for less than $35.

Once again it felt like a stick-up. Urban robbery. A modern snatch and grab.

If you need to be somewhere quickly, it's no use trying to appeal to any larger virtue or value.

Do we all miss our taxis yet, with their set rates?

I was fuming. Getting robbed by Uber in broad daylight appears to be the perfect metaphor for living in a community governed by the bewildering Mayor Lori Lightfingers. With the complete mismanagement of real values and business intelligence. Nothing but the crude and hostile shakedown of business customers. Has no one thought of the consequences that flow from such a narrow urban business model?

Since all of my many bad Uber experiences took place, I have been flooded with suggestions on how to better use existing city taxis. They're still working the streets. Learning how to connect to these tried and true Chicago rides is our best hope. The latest urban skill.

These taxis have a lot to offer. Economical lifts. Competent, thoughtful. Older drivers. Road vets. I've found kind and courteous taxi drivers still live. Many Yellow Cab drivers seem to see Uber for what it is, a reheated plate of vegan swill. The perfect party food from Univ. of Chicago. Transport for the lactose intolerant crowd, the almond milk brigade, the kale mob.

Why isn't Mayor Lightfingers dialoguing with Uber about their massive overcharging?

Why is the city not warning prospective passengers that they are getting "fleeced" by Uber?

Did she learn nothing at the Federal Attorney's Office?

We know from experience that there are far fewer taxi cabs these days on Chicago streets. Uber delivered the knockout punch.

There's no mistaking the convenience and economy that Uber first unleashed on the streets of America. But the public should not be allowed to be victimized by the rabid greed of Uber. There's so much more to the story than just the price gouging and poor business skills demonstrated by Uber drivers.

There's the clear perception that Chicagoans can't count on the City of Chicago to protect or defend them in the face of Uber aggression or unilateral price gouging. There's the common experience shared across the city that over time Uber has brought about a significant sea change. They now control the conditions and command much authority in what will transpire with alternative transportation across the city. Neighborhood by neighborhood.

I'd like to know how financially supportive Uber has been to Mayor Lightfingers and her crew? Do current conditions appear fair, equitable, reasoned or rational? Who are these people who have taken over our motorways?

How much more of Chicago's essential life has been squandered or given away? Between the Gold Coast riots and the pillaging of businesses; the sad defacement of Chicago's artistic culture; the weariness of this city's corporate executives to even engage local political leadership; and the abandonment of our fabulous restaurant industry by the city, what kind of future does history hold for people who love Chicago?

Time is running out. We fast approach becoming the American capitol of urban carjackings to match our #1 ranking in shootings. Another honor that kind of floated unnoticed to earth. No thanks, Mayor Lightfoot. You can keep your dystopian vision of post-pandemic Chicago. It is a frightening vision to behold. It's no longer life as we knew it.

Heart of the 'Hood by Felicia Dechter

No one is more deserving of a $5 million grant than Black Ensemble Theater (BET) founder, executive director and CEO Jackie Taylor.

Congratulations to Jackie! Look for the story in this newspaper about the generous $5 M grant from Jeff Bezo's ex-wife MacKenzie Scott.

I know there are many theaters in the city that would love, and deserve, a wind-fall like this. But if anyone has paid their dues, it's Jackie. When I first started going to her productions, they were held in an Uptown building's basement. But it never really mattered where the shows were held. It was all about the magic they contained.

I was there the day ground was broken on the theater's new site on Clark St. Excitement and good vibes filled the air. And soon thereafter, audiences filled the seats.

Jackie started BET with a critical mission, through the arts she aims to eradicate racism and its devastating effects on society. Yes, that's a tall order. But when you're at a BET show, for those couple of hours it just seems like everyone is the same. When you're inside Taylor's theater, you can't help but be grooving to the music and mesmerized by the talent.

If you've never been to a BET musical feast, get there as soon as COVID-ly possible.

Jackie's story is one of neighborhood girl done good. She was a kid growing up in Cabrini Green and was the only one caught after a bunch of kids broke a window at Seward Park on Division St. The others ran faster and Jackie was busted by the park's drama instructor who gave her a choice: either he called the police or she came to his drama class. Jackie of course, chose the latter, which she credits with "saving" her. After that she never wanted to do anything else except theater. The rest is history.

Today, Jackie is extremely grateful for this manna from Heaven and Scott.

Jackie said she thinks it's vitally important that funders, philanthropists, and others understand that the impact made at BET is directly tied to their continued support. "For the sustainability of impactful programming, systems, structures and staff, fundraising must be ongoing. It can never stop," she said.

"We hope it will serve as an impetus for others to also be financially supportive, helping us to continue delivering our educational outreach programming to thousands of underserved youths, and producing vital productions and programs that help to dismantle the foundation of racism," Jackie said. "We have great dreams for the future [and] MacKenzie Scott has played an important role in moving our dreams toward reality."

We can't wait to get back to BET but meanwhile, we send lots of hallelujahs and good thoughts its way regarding this big, bountiful bonanza.

Move over Monet... because the artwork at this year's Artists of the Wall Fest was stellar! Held last weekend in Loyola Park, although this year's fest was a little different with staggered days, it was still a great time. Thanks to the Loyola Park Advisory Council for its hard work.

For me, the most touching part was the memorial section. There, I met Kristen Ambrose and her mom, Ebony, who had created a small painting in honor of their brother and son Kevin Ambrose, who was just 19 and had lived 7,056 days of life when he became a victim of gun violence on the city's South Side in 2013.

"I moved to Rogers Park as a haven in Nov. 2014," said Ebony, who was working at The Cradle in Evanston at the time. "I didn't think it would be Utopia, but it's still pleasant where I live. And there's violence wherever you go."

Even though the fest is held spitting distance from my house, I took a pass on my family painting this year, as did some of my neighbors. One neighbor tried but couldn't land a spot, while another didn't want to spend the $43.

Those are exactly my gripes with the fest, which is now getting close to being 30-years old. I have been there since the beginning as it was founded by my neighbor, Keith Lord. What started as a community event for $6 a space, plus free paint, is now $35 plus $8 for paint. We are not the Gold Coast or Lincoln Park. We are a working class 'hood. And although the money benefits Loyola Park, and I can afford it, these days, especially during COVID, many people just cannot.

Some people who live in the neighborhood can't even get spots as they sell out very quickly. I suggest a zip code priority to 60626, then 60645 and other neighboring zips.

Anyway, it was a lovely weekend out in the park and at the lakefront. Be sure to walk on over and check out all the great new works.

RP resident Fawna Demma and Julian, 20 months. Fawna has been painting at the wall since she was 16, she is now 36.

Coosome twosome... congrats to my former co-worker George Castle, whose daughter, Laura Castle got hitched to Bradley Schacht on June 11, on the plaza next to the Chicago River and across the street from Marina City. Growing up in a newspaper family, Laura took a special photo with Bradley, appropriately, on the Irv Kupcinet Bridge.

Father of the bride, happy for his front-row "box seat" in the intimate wedding, is George, a former longtime Lerner Newspapers (including this newspaper) columnist and 21-time author. He did not have to walk the bride down the aisle in the ceremony, but is rehearsing such a role for next June, when Laura and Bradley plan a big indoor party and wedding ceremony at the Lincolnshire Marriott to reflect the pandemic's re-opening.

The magic is back at Chicago Magic Lounge, re-opening Aug. 2

After a 16-month intermission, the Magic is coming back to Chicago Magic Lounge [CML], 5050 N. Clark St.

Chicago's home for close-up magic has announced plans to re-open its speakeasy-style Art Deco venue on Aug. 2.

CML will be open at capacity, including the Blackstone Cabaret, 654 Club and Performance Bar. To celebrate CML will be hosting a full week of signature shows, from Aug. 2-8.

Headliner shows include Luis Carreon and Justin Purcell, while Paige Thompson will perform a close-up magic set in the 654 Club. The Performance Bar will feature AJ Sacco, Deven Brown, and The Amazing Bibik.

The lounge "is like no other place in Chicago. We can't wait to welcome our audience, magicians and staff. [We'll be] featuring CML company members and local fan favorites, who rank alongside the best magicians worldwide," said CML owner Joey Cranford.

For more information call 312-366-4500 or visit chicagomagiclounge.com.

Guests who purchase premium tickets are invited to an exclusive performance of close-up magic directly after the main stage show in our 43-seat close-up gallery, The 654 Club.

Another $600 million needed to finish Cabrini-Green's transformation

With a public price tag already exceeding $300 million, the 23-year-long effort to rejuvenate the area around the former public housing project is set to take at least 12 more years and could approach a total of nearly $1 billion.

BY ALEJANDRA CANCINO AND NATALIE EILBERT
Better Government Assoc.

More than two decades after the first wrecking ball slammed into Chicago's most well-known public housing project to begin a nearly $300 million makeover on Cabrini-Green, Mayor Lori Lightfoot is doubling down with another $600 million in tax money to finish it.

Lightfoot's administration says the future property taxes are necessary to complete the transformation of the once-maligned area into a bustling community of mostly luxury apartments surrounded by restaurants and stores.

Lightfoot's new infusion of taxpayer money into an area that's already a windfall for developers is renewing the debate about who has won and lost on the massive redevelopment, especially when so much public money has been diverted from schools, police and libraries.

"They didn't do anything right from the onset in the redevelopment of our neighborhood," said J.R. Fleming, the executive director of The Chicago Anti-Eviction Campaign, and a former resident of Cabrini-Green. "And now they want us to believe that they will get it right this time. They didn't get it right the first time. What makes you think they will get it right this time?"

Last year, Lightfoot's administration quietly pushed through the Illinois legislature permission to extend the special designation of a 340-acre area on the Near North Side, including the former site of Cabrini-Green. The extension would allow her to use future tax revenue generated there for additional development.

The long-shuttered Near North Career Metropolitan High School was demolished with the help of property tax funds set aside for the redevelopment of the area through a tax increment financing fund. Construction, which is ongoing, is part of the Chicago Housing Authority's plan to redevelop the former site of the Cabrini-Green public housing buildings.

The city has not specified exactly how it plans to use the additional cash, other than noting it would help fund the Chicago Housing Authority's [CHA] plan to reshape the area. In 2015, the CHA released a three-phase plan to redevelop the area's remaining empty parcels of land. It called for the construction of up to 2,830 units of housing by 2025. The initial work is ongoing.

Money for the additional construction would come from the practice of Tax-Increment Financing [TIF], in which taxes from increased land value are captured for use in the district. Spending is overseen by a board of mayoral appointees and approved by the Chicago City Council. The Near North TIF District is the fourth largest by revenue among the nearly 140 TIF districts throughout the city.

Already 23 years old, the district was scheduled to sunset this year, which would mean property tax money created in the area would begin funneling into general funds. Springfield's approval to extend the district another 12 years means Lightfoot's administration can move forward with the final steps to finalize the extension. Earlier this month, the mayor's advisory panel that makes recommendations on economic development set a public hearing on the TIF extension for Aug. 10.

The Near North TIF has been controversial since it was created in 1997 by former Mayor Richard M. Daley, with public housing residents arguing the city's plan would displace them to make room for wealthier Chicagoans.

Daley's plan included demolishing public high-rises and then expanding the area's parks, opening dead-end streets, building new schools and redeveloping the area with "mixed-income" communities. Daley promised residents living there at the time they wouldn't be displaced, but only a fraction of them now love in the pricey developments taxpayers helped finance.

Fleming, the former Cabrini-Green resident, said construction has taken so long that many former residents have given up hope they would ever be able to return. Some have even died waiting, he said.

As Cabrini-Green made national headlines and was portrayed as rife with crime and staggering poverty, Daley and the CHA envisioned a transformation using a public-private investment model. To help finance it, the city created the Near North TIF. Most of the land within the TIF was owned by the CHA, which meant the parcels didn't generate any property taxes before construction began. The CHA has leased portions of its land over the last 20 years to developers to build a mix of public, affordable and market-rate housing units.

Today, the area, just a mile to the north and slightly west of downtown, is dotted with luxury condos and apartment buildings.

But the city's Dept. of Planning and Development [DPD] said in a recently released report the additional funding is necessary "to help complete the substantial build-out" of the area's redevelopment, including the empty parcels of land owned by the CHA next to the Target store and south of Division St.

The report was made to Lightfoot's advisory panel, the city's Community Development Commission, which is charged with making recommendations to the

Their unique purpose is to serve those who are not insured but in need of medical attention. There is a small paid staff but the bulk of the work falls on volunteer doctors, nurses, social workers, etc.

The doctors and nurses love it as there is no paperwork to do, and no insurance forms to fill out. So they don't have to spend a whole consultation staring at a computer screen and tapping on a keyboard.

And there are some top notch medical pro's volunteering there too.

If you show up with an insurance card, you are asked to find another clinic. Non-citizen? No problem. Since the pandemic the demand for behavioral health services has greatly increased. It is truly amazing all they accomplish due to the generosity of others. What would we do without people like this?

Black Ensemble Theater awarded $5 million grant from MacKenzie Scott

BY SHEILA SWANN

Have you ever wondered what it might feel like to fetch the mail one day and find a $5 million check waiting... and this time it's not a lottery winnings scam from some unknown cousin living in Indonesia?

Black Ensemble Theater [BET] Founder, Executive Director and CEO Jackie Taylor might be able to tell you.

She announced that the theater has received an incredible $5 million grant from MacKenzie Scott, Jeff Bezo's ex-wife. Taylor hopes that this gift will motivate other philanthropists and funders to also support BET and the arts in general.

Like most of the donations Scott is sending out these days, it was not solicited by anyone at BET, it just showed up in the mail.

In Scott's announcements of the grants award, "It was said that the purpose of her gifts was to enable the work of the organizations. She also stated that it was 'a signal of trust and encouragement, to them and to others,'" said Taylor. "This gave me great pride in knowing that our work to eradicate racism and its devastating effects was being recognized, supported, and respected in such a significant way."

Scott went on to ask a very important question: 'Would these organizations still benefit from more (more advocates, more money, more volunteers)? Yes.'

"That 'yes' was music to my ears. It is vitally important that funders, philanthropists, and others understand that the impact we make at BET is directly tied to their continued support. For the sustainability of impactful programming, systems, structures and staff, fundraising must be ongoing. It can never stop," said Taylor.

'Would these organizations still benefit from more (more advocates, more money, more volunteers)? Yes,' wrote MacKenzie Scott.

"We are grateful for this substantial gift. It will assist us in our recovery from the devastation of COVID. We are in our second year of having no earned income. It is going to take at least another two years for full and complete recovery. This gift will indeed help us through that recovery process," she said. "This has strengthened our foundation and enhanced our ability to continue our important work within the community. We hope it will serve as an impetus for others to also be financially supportive, helping us to continue delivering our educational outreach programming to thousands of underserved youths, and producing vital productions and programs that help to dismantle the foundation of racism."

"We have great dreams for the future of BET – MacKenzie Scott has played an important role in moving our dreams toward reality."

BET was founded in 1976, by producer, playwright and actress

Black Ensemble Theater Founder Jackie Taylor.

Jackie Taylor. It is the only African American theater located in the culturally, racially and ethnically diverse north side Uptown community. Through its Five Play Season of Excellence, The BET has dazzled audiences locally, nationally and internationally with original musicals that are entertaining, educational and uplifting. BET has produced more than 100 productions and employed over 5,000 artists.

The mission of BET is to eradicate racism and its devastating effects upon society through the theater arts. For more information visit www.BlackEnsembleTheater.org or call 773-769-4451.

Letter to the Editor

Why is Ald. Matt Martin enriching his friends at The Community Builders?

Ald. Matt Martin has been as busy as a beaver.

No, not working to get more police into the 47th Ward.

No, not getting a new selective enrollment public high school built to serve our children.

He's been busy enriching his "friends" at The Community Builders [TCB].

In order to get a City-owned piece of land on State St. in the South Loop, TCB will pay the City $1. One whole dollar. Oh goody.

According to the June 17 Chicago Sun-Times TCB will "gift" the City $2 million dollars for Pritzker Park for the land valued at $7.95 million dollars.

So the City will lose $5.95 million dollars right off the start.

And that's not including TCB management fees, tax credits, subsidies, TIF funds and blessings from the Chicago Housing Authority [CHA].

Remember, former CHA Commissioner Nash is a director of TCB.

But what is Martin getting from TCB? Could it be hiding in the blacked-out FOIA requests City Hall and Martin gave to Inside Publications?

And what is to be given to the neighborhood from TCB?

Certainly not more police patrols nor a new selective enrollment public high school.

Michael Sullivan

Police Beat...

Up to a dozen teens beat, rob girl at Chicago Red Line CTA station

Police are investigating after a group of teenagers chased, beat, and robbed a 16-year-old at the Chicago Red Line CTA station June 15, according to CPD. It began around 9:19 p.m. when a group of 10 to 12 male and female teenagers blocked the path of some friends who were walking and refused to let them pass, police spokesperson Sally Bown said.

The 16-year-old girl pushed her way through the crowd, which caused the group to get angry and chase her onto the platform, Bown said. The group then allegedly beat the girl until she fell to the platform, and one offender stole her phone.

All of the teens then ran from the station. No arrests have been made.

This incident was the latest in a string of robberies involving teenage offenders on and near the CTA's downtown train system: June 10, a woman was hit in the head and robbed on the Roosevelt Orange Line platform by two teenagers around 3 p.m.

Around 7:30 a.m. June 12, a 19-year-old woman reported that three teenagers robbed her as they passed through the cars of a Blue Line train downtown. She followed the robbers, all believed to be about 14-years-old, from the train at Jackson but lost them in the tunnel that leads to the Red Line, according to a CPD report. After the robbery, witnesses reported seeing a similarly-described group stealing phones and purses outside the Roosevelt station at least twice over the next hour. No arrests were made.

At 12:30 p.m. June 13, a 27-year-old woman was robbed and pushed into a train at the Clark Lake Blue Line station. The offender fled from the station.

Police seek woman in random stabbing attacks; possible anti-Asian motive eyed

A woman has stabbed three people at random and threatened to shoot a fourth person in a series of attacks on the North Side, according to Chicago police.

This reporter has learned exclusively that the woman threatened to shoot one of the victims because he is Asian and at least one of the stabbing victims is also an Asian man. Police did not mention any motive in the alert, nor did CPD mention any pattern of Asians being targeted.

Police have linked a recent stabbing inside a Lakeview grocery store, a random stabbing near the Thorndale Red Line CTA station, and two other incidents in Uptown to one suspect. According to the alert, victims have been targeted "for no apparent reason."

At about 8:45 p.m. June 5, a woman wearing a pink top attacked a 24-year-old Asian man from behind as he walked with his girlfriend on the 1000 block of W. Thorndale. Then, she ran away. The victim was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center for treatment.

Around 4:40 p.m. June 9, a woman wearing a pink top and jeans implied she had a gun and threatened to shoot a man because he is Asian on the 4800 block of N. Broadway, a CPD report said. The man was not injured.

At 4:25 p.m. June 11, a woman wearing a pink top stabbed a customer inside the Lakeview East Mariano's grocery store, 3030 N. Broadway. Police said the victim was female, but witnesses said the victim appeared to be a man. No motive was given for the attack, and the victim's racial background is not known.

A fourth victim was stabbed in an apparently random attack on the 4800 block of N. Marine Drive around 10:45 a.m. June 5, according to the CPD. No further information was available about the incident or the victim.

Police said the attacker is a Black woman who stands 5'-6" to 5'-8" tall. She wore a pink top in three of the incidents, police said. We have learned that the June 9 victim said the woman had very short hair.

Anyone with information about the woman can call Area Three detectives at 312-744-8261.

Divvy biker slapped gun from armed robber's hand in Rogers Park, prosecutors say

A Divvy biker punched and disarmed a gunman who tried to rob him in Rogers Park, according to prosecutors and police. The alleged robber was arrested a few minutes later when he crossed paths with a CPD squad car that was driving the victim around the neighborhood.

The bicyclist noticed another biker, who wasn't wearing a mask, riding behind him as he traveled home around 1:15 p.m. June 12. When he arrived at his destination in the 7300 block of N. Ridge, the other bicyclist turned toward him, pulled a revolver from his pocket, and demanded his chain and bag, Assistant State's Attorney Brian Burkhardt said.

But the Divvy biker wasn't having it. He slapped the gunman's hand away, then ran, hid, and called police, according to Burkhardt.

Officers met with the alleged victim and were driving him to the robbery scene when he saw 19-year-old Raekwon Meeks coming out of an alley near Howard and Bell. The victim immediately recognized Meeks as the robber, Burkhardt said. Meeks pedaled away from officers on his bike and then jumped off and ran.

Police arrested him in the 7500 block of N. Ridge. Burkhardt said officers retraced the path of the foot chase and found a handgun with a sawed-off or missing barrel on the ground. The victim allegedly identified it as the weapon used in the robbery attempt.

Meeks, who is now charged with attempted robbery, is on juvenile parole for possessing a stolen motor vehicle, and he has a three-week-old felony drug case pending. Meeks' public defender said he has no children and is a church-goer.

"I'm just blown away, how many people go to church who's charged with all these violent offenses that come in front of me," Judge John Lyke said after hearing the allegations against Meeks. "The churches I went to didn't talk about violence and what have you — basically stated not to do it."

"I'm not saying he did it all. I want the record to be crystal clear on that," Lyke added before ordering Meeks held without bail for violating the terms of bond in the pending drug case. Lyke set bail in the new case at $10,000 and ordered Meeks to go onto electronic monitoring if he's released.

Idaho man arrested when gun falls from his clothes while filing a police report in River North

An Idaho man had a negative Chicago experience when his car was stolen in River North June 13. He had an even worse Chicago experience when a gun allegedly fell from his clothing while he rolled on the ground in a fit of histrionics as police tried to take his report. Kamran Khademi, 34, is now charged with felony unlawful use of a weapon. And his car is gone.

Police initially responded to a call of a person with a gun in the 400 block of N. Wells around 4:15 a.m. June 13. But they didn't find anyone there. Around the same time, Khademi called 911 to report that his car had been stolen in the area, according to Assistant State's Attorney Brian Burkhardt.

Cops met with Khademi on the first block of W. Hubbard and were in the process of taking a report for his stolen car when the Idahoer laid down, grabbed his chest, and started rolling back and forth on the ground, Burkhardt said.

As police called for an ambulance, a pistol allegedly fell from Khademi and plunked onto the ground. Cops seized the weapon and found two loaded ammunition magazines in Khademi's left pants pocket, Burkhardt said.

CPD camera footage from the "person with a gun" call on Wells St. allegedly shows Khademi running after his stolen car with a firearm in his hand.

Khademi, who has no criminal background, was in Chicago to work, according to statements made during a bond court hearing Monday.

Judge John Lyke released Khademi on his own recognizance and gave him permission to return to Idaho while the case is pending. Khademi is due back in court on June 21.

Old Town burglaries

Police are warning residents of Old Town of recently reported burglary related incidents. In most incidents, the victims left their garage doors open or unlocked resulting in an offender entering and various properties being stolen.

Incidents include one on the 1300 block of N. Cleveland Ave., Monday, May 3, during the morning hours, and a second one on the 1400 block of N. North Park Ave., Thursday, May 6 in the morning hours.

Two shot while traveling in car near Oak St. Beach

Two men were shot, one fatally, while riding in a car on Lake Shore Dr. near Oak Street Beach, police said. A third person in the car was injured when their vehicle crashed into a light pole on the roadside.

Witnesses began reporting the car crash moments after officers stationed at the intersection of Michigan and Oak reported gunfire around 12:43 a.m. June 15. Cops found a silver Nissan Sentra that crashed into a pole while traveling northbound on the 1100 block of N. Lake Shore Dr., according to a CPD statement.

The 32-year-old male driver was later pronounced dead at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center with two gunshot wounds to his torso.

A 20-year-old male passenger in the car suffered two gunshot wounds to his arm. His condition stabilized at Northwestern Memorial Hospital, police said. A 25-year-old male passenger who suffered minor injuries from the crash was listed in good condition at an unidentified hospital.

Police said no one is in custody for the shooting. It was not clear where the gunfire came from.

CPD surveillance camera operators saw three people run from near the crash scene and cross into the Gold Coast neighborhood, where at least one of them changed clothing. Police later detained two of those individuals, but it's not clear if they were involved in the shooting. Both of the detainees were taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital with unspecified injuries. Area Three detectives are investigating.

Burglar is targeting ground-floor apartments on North Side

Police are warning about a burglar who is crawling through ground-floor apartment windows in Lincoln Park and Lakeview.

The prowler has struck twice this month, police said in a community alert: in the 2600 block of N. Sheffield on the night of June 8-9 and in the 1600 block of W. Roscoe on the night of June 11-12.

Police said the offender used force to gain access in one case. He takes valuables from inside the home and then flees, the alert said.

Detectives are urging residents to make sure security and video systems are working properly and to pay special attention to suspicious people around the area.

Anyone with information about break-ins can contact Area Three detectives at 312-744-8263 about cases JE-259217 and JE-263164.

Armed men rob an entire family near Magnificent Mile; Group has struck many times this week

Armed men who robbed a family that was walking in Streeterville on June 15 are suspected of committing several similar crimes downtown, in the South Loop, in Old Town, and elsewhere. No arrests have been made, and the offenders are apparently not afraid to target multiple people simultaneously.

At 10:44 p.m. June 15, a 48-year-old man was walking with his family on the 100 block of E. Grand when a black car pulled up and four men got out — three armed with handguns. The offenders then robbed the family of four phones, four wallets, electronics, and jewelry, according to a CPD report. Then, the crew drove away.

Around the same time, another victim reported being robbed by three men who got out of a black car on the 200 block of E. Superior. One of the robbers displayed a handgun.

About 30 minutes before the two Streeterville robberies unfolded, a man was robbed by two gunmen who emerged from a black car at 21 E. Cullerton in the South Loop.

Police believe all three robberies and at least three others reported elsewhere in the city were committed by the same group of men who were using a black Honda Civic bearing a license plate beginning with BY503, according to a source. The Honda is stolen.

The offenders have consistently been described as Black men in their teens or early 20's who wear all black clothing and black masks.

Among other recent robberies that may be linked to the same crew: At 12:20 a.m. June 14, three 19-year-old men told police they were walking on the 100 block of W. Goethe in Old Town when two men got out of a black Porsche Cayenne and approached them with handguns, according to a CPD spokesperson. The offenders took the victims' wallets and phones, then fled westbound on Goethe in the Porsche.

At 12:10 a.m. June 15, a man was pistol-whipped and robbed by four offenders who got out of a red Acura MDX on the 1400 block of S. Wabash in the South Loop. An ambulance treated the victim for injuries.

Area Three detectives are heading up the investigations.

Man critically wounded in Near North Side drive-by shooting

A 42-year-old man was critically injured in a drive-by shooting on the Near North Side June 18, police said. No arrests have been made.

The victim was walking in the 900 block of N. Cambridge when someone began firing at him from a black sedan around 1:29 a.m., according to a CPD statement. Bullets struck the man in his abdomen and left leg. He was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Witnesses saw the black car drive southbound on Cambridge after the shooting. Police found two shell casings at the scene. Area Three detectives are investigating.

Friday's shooting is the second this month on a two-block stretch of Cambridge Ave.

Around 1:30 a.m. June 5, a 31-year-old man

Men shot in River North, Goose Island, and near Lincoln Park Zoo

BY CWBCHICAGO

Three people were shot in separate incidents June 19 and 20 in River North, near Lincoln Park Zoo, and in the Goose Island neighborhood. No arrests have been made.

In the River North shooting, witnesses approached officers who were handling a separate incident to report that a person was shot inside a parking garage at 401 N. State St. around 1:50 a.m.

Officers found a 30-year-old man with a gunshot wound to his right thigh inside the structure, police said. The victim said he was walking through the garage when several men approached him and fired shots, according to a CPD statement.

An ambulance took the man to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in fair condition.

Investigators found four shell casings, clothing, and two phones at the crime scene.

In the Lincoln Park shooting, police said a 20-year-old man was shot while driving past the Lincoln Park Zoo around 8:45 p.m. The man was driving his Kia Soul on the 2300 block of N. Stockton when a man who was on foot fired several shots, according to police.

One round grazed the victim's torso. He drove himself to AMITA St. Joseph Hospital, where he was listed in good condition.

In the Goose Island shooting a 27-year-old man was critically wound in a shooting near Stanton

Park in the Goose Island neighborhood, police said. No arrests have been made.

The victim was on the 700 block of W. Evergreen in a parking lot adjacent to the park when a man got out of a gray car and shot at him around 6:15 p.m., according to a CPD report. The gunman then returned to his car and left the area.

Bullets struck the victim in his arm, leg, and groin, police said. He was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Surveillance video shows two vehicles, a silver Porsche Cayenne and a silver Chevy Tahoe, apparently traveling together before and after the shooting, the CPD report said.

Twice-convicted sex offender tried to sexually assault sunbather in park

BY CWBCHICAGO

Prosecutors on June 17 charged a twice-convicted sex offender with trying to sexually assault a woman who was sunbathing this week in a park adjacent to the 606 trail in Bucktown.

The 45-year-old woman was wearing a bathing suit and lying face-down in Churchill Field Playlot Park, 1825 N. Damen, when Darryl Sprowal 41, walked up around 1:30 p.m. June 15, according to police and prosecutors.

Sprowal moved his hands to his groin area while standing within feet of the woman, who has never had contact with him before, Assistant State's Attorney Kevin Deboni said. The woman reportedly looked over at Sprowal and asked if she could help him with something.

Suddenly, Sprowal jumped onto the woman's back and began grabbing her face as if to cover her mouth, Deboni said. The woman screamed, attracting the attention of two men in the area. They both intervened.

As Sprowal got up, he said he "didn't do anything" and "it wasn't what it looked like," Deboni said. He then walked away on Damen Ave.

A third witness took video and photos of Sprowal as others called 911. Police searched the area and found Sprowal in the 2000 block of W. McLean around 2:22 p.m.

The alleged victim identified him as the man who attacked her and Sprowal told police that he "tripped and fell" on the woman, Deboni said.

Sprowal received a six-year prison sentence in 2016 for attempted criminal sexual assault. In that case, he was accused of forcefully grabbing a woman he didn't know, pulling her legs apart, and positioning himself between them. He was supposed to register his address as a sex offender by March 8, but he never did, Deboni said. Sprowal told investigators who handled the case that he "gets urges to have sex." In 2005, Sprowal received a nine-year sentence for sexually assaulting his 72-year-old grandmother, Deboni said. He also served five years in Texas for a burglary that involved a 13-year-old victim.

Prosecutors charged him with attempted criminal sexual assault, aggravated battery in a public place, unlawful restraint, being a sexual predator in a public park, and violating the sex offender registry act.

His defense attorney said Sprowal has been homeless since March and has one child who is now an adult.

Judge Mary Marubio noted the "impulsive nature" of the new allegations and set bail for Sprowal at $250,000, meaning he will need to post $25,000 to get out of jail.

Criminals are crawling down bridges to burglarize riverfront restaurants

BY CWBCHICAGO

Never let it be said that Chicago's creative criminal element won't take advantage of every opportunity.

Police last weekend warned Loop businesses that burglars are crawling down the side of a Chicago River bridge structure to burglarize a riverside restaurant via its scenic waterfront patio entrance.

CPD did not identify the restaurant, but they said the burglaries took place on the 100 block of N. Wacker Dr. during the overnight hours of June 2 and June 18.

In both cases, male and female burglars eased their way down the side of one of the city's famed bascule bridges and jumped onto the restaurant's riverfront patio. From there, the prowlers entered the eatery and took unspecified property.

Police described the burglars only as males and females between the ages of 18 and 24.

Anyone with information about case can contact Area Three detectives at 312-744-8263 regarding alert #P21-3-077.

POLICE BEAT from p. 6

was shot in the hip a block south of Friday's shooting scene. Police said that victim, who has a history of contact with CPD, did not cooperate with investigators.

Man shot, critically wounded during Gold Coast carjacking attempt Carjackers shot and critically wounded a 35-year-old man as they tried to take his Jeep Trailhawk in the Gold Coast on June 17, police said. No arrests have been made.

The victim, who lives in River North, was standing with his girlfriend at 21 E. Chestnut at 10:21 p.m. when a man demanded the keys to the Jeep at gunpoint. Police said the offender then fired one round, striking the victim in his neck. The carjacker then returned to the SUV he arrived in and fled the scene, according to a police statement.

Surveillance video shows two offenders getting out of a silver Honda Pilot driven by a third person before the hijacking attempt. Both men ran back to the same car, a stolen car, after the shooting.

An ambulance transported the victim to Northwestern Memorial Hospital where he was taken to surgery.

Carjacking reports continue to outpace the record numbers seen in 2020. Among the most recent cases is an armed hijacking in the South Loop around 2:55 a.m. June 17. In that case, carjackers got away with a man's Mercedes AMG GT63 — a car that retails for over $150,000.

The victim told police that three men, all armed with handguns, commandeered his car on the 1900 block of S. Wabash.

Minutes before the crew got away with the victim's Mercedes, they apparently tried to carjack an Uber driver outside a luxury apartment building on the 1300 block of S. Michigan. That attempt failed, but the Uber driver flagged down police to tell them about it moments before the second hijacking unfolded.

Woman sexually assaulted in Lakeview East

A woman was sexually assaulted June 14 by a man who approached her as she walked in the Lakeview East neighborhood, police said. The victim, age 22, was walking in the 600 block of W. Wellington when the offender struck up a conversation between 2:30 and 3 a.m., according to a community alert from Area Three detectives.

Police said the man took the woman into a "dirt lot" and sexually assaulted her. The woman fought with the man, who reportedly ran westbound on Wellington.

An ambulance transported the woman to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center for treatment. In addition to being sexually assaulted, the woman had injuries to her eye, according to a CPD report.

Police said the suspect is a Black male in his 20's who stands 5'-6" to 5'-7" tall and weighs 160 to 170 lbs. He has short black hair and was wearing all dark clothing.

Anyone with information about the attack can contact detectives at 312-744-8200 about case #JE-265129.

Monday's attack is similar in some ways to a May 17 sexual assault in Ravenswood. In that case, an 18-year-old woman was sexually assaulted after a man lured her into a construction site as she walked in the 4800 block of N. Ravenswood between 6:45 p.m. and 7 p.m.

But the suspect description in the earlier case is much different: a Black male with shoulder-length dreadlocks who's about 27-years-old, 6'-3" tall, and 190 lbs. He was wearing a red t-shirt, black pants, and a black paisley bandana as a facemask. He also carried a black duffle bag across his body, police said.

Area Three detectives are also investigating the May attack, which is recorded under case #JE-233594.

Rash of armed robberies

Police are warning citizens of multiple similar robbery incidents which occurred during the evening/early morning hours in the month of June. In each instance, multiple offenders approach the victims, display handguns, and take possession of the victims' property after threatening use of force.

Incidents include one on the 1900 block of N. Hudson Ave. on 9 10 p.m. June 3; 100 block of E. Grand Ave. 2:45 a.m. June 4; 100 block of W. North Ave. 3 a.m. June 4; 1600 block of N. Throop St. 3:12 a.m. June 4; 1600 block of W. Belmont Ave. 3:20 a.m. June 4; 1600 block of W. Irving Park Rd. 3:30 a.m. June 4; 4800 block of N. Western Ave. 3:44 a.m. June 4; 1800 block of W. Peterson Ave. 3:50 a.m. June 4; 200 block of E. Lower Illinois St. 6:15 a.m. June 4; 300 block of E. Ohio St. 6:20 a.m. June 4; 200 block of E. Superior St. 10:40 p.m. June 15, and on the 100 block of E. Grand Ave 10:44 p.m. June 15.

The offenders are described as 4-8 Black males, 15-20 years of age, armed with handguns, wearing dark hooded sweatshirts and masks. Anyone with information on these crimes may contact the Bureau of Detectives Area 3 Detective Division at 312-744-8263.

Armed carjackers take SUV in the Loop

An armed man battered and carjacked a 32-year-old driver in the Loop June 20 as hijacking reports continue to increase in the city.

Several offenders approached the driver as he got out of his Volkswagen Atlas on the first block of East 9th St. around 6:29 p.m., police said. One of the hijackers displayed a gun, hit the victim in the neck, and demanded the keys to the car, according to police.

The victim, who lives in Rogers Park, complied.

Police said the offenders climbed into the man's SUV and headed west on 9th St. A license plate reader detected the stolen car traveling outbound on the Dan Ryan at 51st St. a short time later.

The victim's neck was bruised, but he declined medical attention, police said. He described the carjackers as three Black male teenagers, one of whom wore a red hoodie.

On June 29, a 47-year-old delivery driver was hit in the head, knocked to the ground, and carjacked in Old Town, according to CPD. Police said the man was making a food delivery in the 1500 block of N. Wells around 8:25 p.m. when the offender punched him in the back of the head, knocking him to the ground.

The hijacker jumped into the man's red 2014 Mazda 3 and drove away southbound. He was later seen turning west on Chicago Ave. from Franklin, police said. The victim suffered minor injuries but declined medical attention.

On June 17, Ald. Michele Smith (43rd), who represents much of Old Town, said in an email newsletter, "carjacking is still a serious issue in our city, but numbers are significantly down since the carjacking task force was enlarged in March."

In fact, carjackings have increased every month since March, according to the city's data. There were 83 hijackings citywide that month, 98 in April, and 111 in May. Through June 12, this month was on-pace to record 120 cases.

Illinois Medicaid companies rake in record profits from pandemic

The BGA reveals how the five private insurance companies running the state's healthcare program for low-income residents benefited from the COVID-19 lockdown

BY DAVID JACKSON
Better Government Assoc.

The for-profit insurance companies running Illinois Medicaid collected hundreds of millions of dollars in extra profits during the COVID-19 pandemic — much of it for services never provided to patients, an investigation by the Better Government Association has found.

The windfall was the result of a payment system based on annual, per-patient estimates. While the number of patients in the state's Medicaid program swelled as people lost their jobs, many deferred elective medical procedures during the pandemic.

That meant the insurance companies spent a smaller percentage of their government revenue on direct medical services, a trend seen nationwide in which Medicaid providers made billions in extra profits.

An analysis of the quarterly and year-end financial statements of Illinois' five Medicaid insurance contractors — called managed care organizations [MCO] reveals the unprecedented surge in profits from April 2020 through Dec. 2020. The Illinois COVID-19 lockdown began in March when Gov. J.B. Pritzker issued executive orders closing schools and some businesses.

Three of the Medicaid companies — Meridian Health Plan of Illinois, IlliniCare Health Plan and Molina Healthcare of Illinois — reported a combined $282 million increase in profits in Illinois during that nine-month stretch when the pandemic was at its height, compared to the same period in 2019.

The other contractors — insurance giant Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Illinois and Aetna Better Health of Illinois, Inc. — also reported large profits on a national scale, but the direct correlation is unclear because their figures include private patients, Medicare recipients or data from other states.

The parent company of Illinois' Blue Cross — which covers the insurance carrier over five states — reported its net income from all private and public plans rose by 75% to nearly $4 billion last year, records show.

Presented with the BGA's findings, the top official at the Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services said her office will investigate and work to recover some of the taxpayer money as part of a routine statewide accounting due in 2023.

"I don't think it is fair to take a partial-year look or a short-term look at something when all these numbers and all these projections are annual in nature, and there's still a lot of billings and reporting and reconciling to do," said Theresa Eagleson, director of HFS in an April interview with the BGA.

"If those numbers for calendar year 2020 end up bearing out, we will be recouping a significant amount of money from the plans," Eagleson said. "I'm not saying that we don't see this potentially occurring. I'm saying we don't have a process in place to recoup it until ... all the information is in."

In a followup email earlier this month, Eagleson's top spokeswoman said, "purely as a snapshot in time, initial incomplete figures indicate HFS would recoup over $120 million" from the insurance firms for calendar year 2020. Those funds will come through a program called a "risk corridor" that reallocates money if the companies exceed or fall short of targets for medical care.

"Illinois was one of the first states in the country to implement risk corridors during the pandemic to further restrict possible profit margins," said Jamie Munks, Eagleson's spokeswoman. "We will recoup more from the health plans than we otherwise would have."

The prospect of waiting two years for payback isn't fast enough for some state lawmakers. State Sen. Dave Koehler, a Democrat from Peoria, in December filed a bill to "claw back" 20% of all COVID-era profits from the Medicaid providers.

"Our two hospital systems here in Peoria verified that their revenues were down during the height of the pandemic because everybody was not doing electives," Koehler, an assistant majority leader, told the BGA. "That bothers me."

When his bill wasn't progressing to a floor vote, Koehler said he met for 45 minutes with Pritzker in March and made his case to recover 20% of the excess profits now.

"I said, 'We don't really have a managed care system in this state; we have a managed payment system. ... There is no care,'" Koehler said he told Pritzker.

Koehler declined to discuss how Pritzker responded.

Email traffic obtained by the BGA through a public records request suggests the Pritzker administration had already decided to scuttle Koehler's efforts.

"The governor's office also has many concerns with the (bill) language," wrote Samantha Olds Frey, the state's top Medicaid insurance lobbyist, in an email to company leaders Jan. 5. "They asked that I send over our high level list of concerns, so they can review them and include them in their analysis."

"We are also working with HFS and our communications team to push back with the press," Olds Frey wrote in a separate email to industry executives.

The emails illustrate the influence Medicaid contractors exert over Illinois agencies tasked with holding the insurance firms accountable for patient care and taxpayer savings, according to ethics and industry experts.

"It doesn't seem to be just or fair to the taxpayers of Illinois that these billions of dollars in payments would continue to flow to the MCOs during a time when they're not providing the services city council.

"CHA and the city, along with its development partners, have worked to realize the goals of the redevelopment plan to create a vibrant, mixed-income community," said CHA spokeswoman Karen Vaughan. "The availability of TIF funds will ensure that this work continues. The TIF funds are a vital funding source needed to complete the revitalization of the Near North community area. The CHA and the city remain committed to the community and residents as we continue working to meet the redevelopment obligation."

The empty CHA land was part of the Cabrini-Green footprint, including namesakes William Green Homes and a series of red-brick buildings known as Cabrini Extension South, named for a Catholic missionary. Also waiting to be modernized are the historic Frances Cabrini Rowhouses, which were built in the 1940s for returning war veterans.

The grand vision to transform the neighborhood has been riddled with problems from the beginning. The project has progressed in fits and starts because of economic downturns, lawsuits and funding issues.

The redevelopment began in the 1990s, but construction halted as the city, the CHA and public housing residents battled in the courts. They came to an agreement in 2000, with the CHA agreeing to build 700 units of public housing, and the city agreeing to create 270 units of affordable housing. In 2015, the CHA agreed to increase the number of public housing units to 1,800. The agency still remains 580 units short of that goal.

Last year, the city council approved spending up to $4 million in TIF funds to demolish the vacant Near North high school to make way for the first phase of redevelopment there, a high-rise with about 190 units of mixed-income housing.

As projects are completed and property values rise, the district increasingly generates more taxes. Over the last two decades, it produced more than $320 million. If extended, the city expects it will create about $600 million more over the next 12 years.

So far, about $50 million went to the developers of mixed-income housing, who have created more than 1,000 units, records show. The developments are called mixed income because about a quarter of the homes were set aside for public housing residents, 20% have income caps, and the rest are rented or sold at market rates.

The Cabrini-Green redevelopment was initially set to be completed in 2010, but the 2008 housing market crash delayed projects. When one of the developers couldn't make its sales quotas, the CHA and the city bailed it out and kept a bank from auctioning off units.

The city spent about $30 million in TIF funds to redevelop neighborhood schools and more than $13 million to expand and improve area parks and help finance the construction of a field house that bears the name of Secretary of State Jesse White. In recent years, the city also has tapped millions in TIF funds to help plug city budget holes.

The Cabrini-Green redevelopment was initially set to be completed in 2010, but the 2008 housing market crash delayed projects. When one of the developers couldn't make its sales quotas, the CHA and the city bailed it out and kept a bank from auctioning off units.

That developer, the Holsten Real Estate Development Corp., is now completing the final rental phase of the Parkside of Old Town redevelopment, which will deliver 102 units. About a third of those units will be reserved for public housing residents, a third have income caps, and a third can be rented at market rates. The $50 million project, or nearly $500,000 per unit, includes $9.5 million in Near North TIF money.

Some experts said the area supports expensive housing because of its location. The redevelopment of the Near North TIF, along with the displacement of public housing residents throughout the city as the CHA moved toward privatization, helped cement the city's segregated lines, as many displaced public housing residents, who were almost all Black, were forced into disinvested areas on the city's South and West Sides, where TIF districts are far less lucrative for developers.

"TIF has never worked well with equity and need," said Rachel Weber, a professor of urban planning at the Univ. of Illinois at Chicago. "It is not conducive to encouraging equitable development."

The report from the city's DPD doesn't specifically say what future projects would be financed with the additional TIF dollars. It said the TIF extension is needed to fulfill the CHA's "vision of creating diverse mixed-income communities."

and the state has a significant budget problem,” said John Pelissero, a government ethics professor at the Loyola University Chicago, who reviewed the emails at the BGA’s request.

Renée Popovits, an attorney for Medicaid doctors and medical clinics who testified in March in favor of Koehler’s bill, told the BGA that the insurance firms “deserve to be adequately and appropriately compensated but not at this level of gross profits.” The corporations’ pandemic-era profits surged as Illinois’ health care system was reeling and officials struggled to vaccinate citizens and protect elderly and disabled adults, Popovits noted. “How can the state shut down churches, schools and businesses in the name of a public health emergency yet feel no urgency to redirect this money?”

Olds Frey, who heads the Illinois Assoc. of Medicaid Health Plans, said her collaboration with the Pritzker administration to combat Koehler’s bill helped ensure the solvency of the entire state Medicaid program.

“We continuously coordinate and calibrate with key stakeholders like the governor’s office, HFS, legislators, providers and members to ensure positive outcomes for Medicaid recipients,” said Olds Frey.

Pritzker’s press secretary Jordan Abudayyeh declined to provide details but said the governor and his staff routinely solicit feedback from all sides as they analyze the pros and cons of any issue.

Nicole Huberfeld, a professor of health law at the Boston Univ. School of Law, said the Illinois Medicaid contractors’ 2020 windfall profits could be erased by new expenses if citizens who deferred care soon demand it.

“Yes, there is an uptick of profits, but the MCOs are facing a potential rip tide of losses as COVID eases and people return to their doctors with pent-up demands for treatment,” Huberfeld said.

Three days after the BGA published this article, Koehler cited the BGA findings and called for hearings into the insurance providers COVID-era Medicaid profits.

“If we are able to reallocate excess profits from these companies, we can help hospitals stay open and keep providing life-saving care in our low-income and rural communities,” Koehler said on May 27.

Illinois began taking steps to privatize its modern Medicaid program in 2010 under then-Gov. Pat Quinn. Former Gov. Bruce Rauner accelerated those efforts, which were embraced by Pritzker.

At the same time, consolidations reshaped the insurance sector focused on Medicaid. Today, a handful of publicly traded companies are in charge of one of the most vital functions of Illinois’ government: providing care to 2.6 million low-income people, including pregnant mothers, people with disabilities, nursing home residents and foster children, records show.

Before Medicaid was turned over to private insurance companies, the state paid each doctor, clinic or hospital a fee for every Medicaid service rendered. Today, the state pays the insurance firms a fixed dollar amount per member each month, whether the patient received costly treatments or no medical services.

Four of the five companies declined to respond to the BGA’s written questions or requests for interviews. Blue Cross said its financial gains were largely limited to the first months of the pandemic.

“During the first half of 2020, we saw sharp declines in elective care utilization, as consumers were reluctant or unable to seek medical care due to ‘stay at home’ measures,” said Blue Cross spokeswoman Colleen Miller. “In the second half of the year, the pendulum swung the other direction, and the deferral of care moderated with utilization levels eventually returning to nearly normal levels. During this period, benefit expenses also increased to cover pandemic-related costs, such as testing, diagnosis and treatment.”

Eagleson said the BGA’s analysis is incomplete because it is focused only on the nine COVID months of 2020. If the entire year is considered, the same three Medicaid insurance firms reported combined losses last year and in 2019. “In full context, it is plain that the plans are not making excess profits,” Eagleson’s spokeswoman wrote.

Those state-level losses to which Eagleson referred don’t reflect actual losses on a company-wide level because Illinois contractors pay hundreds of millions of dollars in management fees to their corporate parents.

For instance, Meridian Health Plan of Illinois Inc. reported a 2019 loss of $77 million — but only after paying a $287 million management fee to a subsidiary of its parent company, Centene Corp. Despite such state-level losses, Centene reported nationwide profits in 2019 of more than $1 billion, records show.

Illinois officials and industry lobbyists said they opposed Koehler’s clawback legislation because the state already has a mechanism in place to recover overpayments to the insurance companies. Under Illinois contracts, which totaled $16 billion last year, the insurance companies are required to spend 85% of all public revenues directly on medical services, leaving 15% for administrative costs, marketing, other expenses and profits.

That 85% rule has come under scrutiny in recent years because of the state’s poor record enforcing it, loopholes in what constitutes medical services, and the state’s lack of transparency about how it holds the insurance companies accountable.

The Illinois Auditor General found in 2018 that the state failed to account for the 85% rule for three years between 2012 and 2015. HFS acknowledged the failure and retroactively collected $90 million in excess payments stretching back to 2011, according to data HFS provided to the BGA.

Critics of Illinois’ Medicaid system also said the state allows the insurance providers to meet the 85% rule by counting vaguely defined activities, such as “quality improvement,” as direct medical expenses.

During 2019, for instance, Illinois’ five Medicaid insurance firms claimed they spent a combined $336 million on quality improvement, records show. Absent that expense, two of them would have fallen short of the 85% ratio and been forced to remit millions of dollars, state records showed. IlliniCare and Aetna, two of the five companies, recently merged.

The HFS’ Eagleson said Illinois raised its ratio to 90% during the COVID-19 period last year to make sure taxpayers weren’t being fleeced.

Several other states told the BGA they have already begun to recover undeserved profits from Medicaid providers. South Carolina currently estimates it will recoup $75 million from its far smaller $3.3 billion

Woman stabbed to death Saturday on Loop street corner

BY CWBCHICAGO

Anat Kimchi, 31, of Maryland was fatally stabbed by a man who attacked her on a Loop street corner Saturday afternoon, police said. An online search shows the woman has recently been a criminal justice doctoral candidate in Maryland. The offender, believed to be a homeless man, remains at large. Police and fire personnel responded to a person stabbed at 401 S. Wacker Dr. around 3:35 p.m., according to dispatch records. Police said the woman was on the sidewalk when the man pulled out a knife and began stabbing her in the upper back. Initial reports said she was bleeding from her neck area. She was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital, but doctors were unable to save her.

Witnesses told police the offender fled south on Wacker toward a tunnel area. They said he is a slim Black male with long dreadlocks who wore a red bandana and a blue tank top. Police believe he removed the tank top as he fled. Less than two blocks from the iconic Willis Tower, police worked a crime scene where the woman's backpack sat next to a large amount of blood on the sidewalk. Anat Kimchi's online presence includes many references to her being a high-performing doctoral candidate who studied criminal justice. She is also listed as a research worker at a criminal justice research group in suburban Washington, DC. She was carrying a Maryland driver's license. Area Three detectives are investigating.

Stories behind the statues June 24

The Gold Coast Neighbors Assoc. [GCNA] are hosting a virtual public seminar 6 p.m. Thursday, June 24, which will focus on the history and meaning of six local monuments in Lincoln Park. (They are the Oglesby, Standing Lincoln, Benjamin Franklin, Ulysses S. Grant, Alexander Hamilton and Vardiman Greene Black Memorials.)

This informational seminar will include a critical discussion of individual monuments in terms of current perspectives.

The program will be moderated by Vern Broders, GCNA president. Kim L. Dulaney, Director of Education and Programs at The DuSable Museum of African American History, and Rose Miron, Director of the D'Arcy McNickle Center for American Indian and Indigenous Studies at the Newberry Library will be the panelists.

To RSVP or for more information email info@goldcoastneighbors.org, or call 773-510-7327.

King Oliver's Creole Jazz Band played from 1917 to 1922 and included jazz legends Louis Armstrong and Johnny Dodds.

"Chicago was an everything hub, as the national center of rail travel. Tourists flocked here, and as the second-biggest city in the country, it also had the second-biggest potential audience for any art form, including jazz," explained Bill Savage, Professor of Instruction at Northwestern University and a Chicago historian.

But jazz was very much an underground music in the 1920s, Savage noted, when jazz musicians were finding their scenes in New York.

"Because any place serving alcohol was breaking the law, all sorts of other taboos were also flouted, including sexual mores and racial mixing," said Savage. "Most jazz musicians were still African Americans, though whites were flocking to the music as well, and jazz was the house music of any big speakeasy. 'Black and Tan' clubs catered to mixed-race audiences."

In the 1920s, no respectable music school would have taught jazz, according to Savage. "Now you can get a degree in it at Northwestern. The underground music of American cities is now rap and hip-hop. Jazz is old and white and respectable. As is always the case with aesthetic/cultural revolutions, the avant garde becomes the old guard."

As the decades passed, jazz became more mainstream, aided in part by government programs to export jazz around the world. Jazz clubs found their way to downtown Chicago. Londonhouse, now a hotel in the Loop, was home to a jazz club from 1946 to 1975.

Haywood, who received a one-year prison sentence for gun possession in 2016, is charged with unlawful use of a weapon. Judge John Lyke ordered him held on $75,000 bail, meaning he'll need to post a $7,500 deposit to get out of jail. Lyke said Haywood would also need to go onto electronic monitoring if he's released.

Coles has never been arrested before, prosecutors said. Lyke set his bail at $20,000 and ordered him to stay in the home from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily if he can post the $2,000 deposit required for release.

Two bicyclists, including another Divvy

But jazz clubs still abound throughout the city – including Winter's, which opened four years ago, and Andy's. And after a year of staying at home, people may feel more inclined to go out to their local jazz club and support local talent.

Schumm and Chicago Cellar Boys will be playing at Winter's on July 7 at 7:30 p.m.

rider, were robbed by a group of seven offenders June 16 in the Loop. An 18-year-old was charged in connection with one of those robberies, which was captured by surveillance cameras. In fact, Princeton Rogers Jr. didn't make his high school graduation ceremony on Friday because he was in felony bond court as a prosecutor charged him with the robbery.

Prosecutors said a bicyclist was riding southbound on Wabash at Madison around 11:30 p.m. when seven people approached and told them they wanted his bike. The biker tried to maneuver around the group.

Rogers, wearing bright red pants and a bright long-sleeve sweatshirt, used both hands to grab the bicyclist by his backpack and throw him to the ground, prosecutors said. He then struggled with the alleged victim for control of the bike and eventually rode away with it, according to the state's allegations.

The bicyclist chased Rogers and the other members of the group for a short distance and flagged down a CPD squad car for help. Police reportedly found a group of people riding bicycles nearby — including one man wearing the bright red clothing that the alleged victim described.

Rogers tried to pedal away from police, but he eventually ditched the stolen bike and began running on foot, prosecutors said. Police caught him, and the victim identified him and the bike he discarded, according to prosecutors.

A private defense attorney told Judge Arthur Willis that Rogers was supposed to be graduating from high school June 18. Rogers has no other arrests, according to defense and prosecuting attorneys.

Willis, swayed by the fact that Rogers has no other arrests in his background, set bail at $10,000. Rogers will need to post a 10% deposit and go onto electronic monitoring to be released, the judge said.

Within 10 minutes of the robbery seen on video, another bicyclist reported being battered and robbed by seven men who surrounded him and took his Divvy bike on the 100 block of N. Dearborn, CPD spokesperson Sally Bown said. Rogers is not accused of participating in that incident.

Those offenders struck the bicyclist in the face, knocking him to the ground. They continued to beat the man, and one of them rode away westbound with his Divvy bike, Bown said. Other members of the group also reportedly fled on Divvy bikes.
