Beware of Zuckerbergs bearing gifts for Chicago kids

BY JIM VAIL

Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg and his wife, physician Priscilla Chan's, philanthropic organization — recently announced a $14 million grant to the Chicago Public Schools (CPS) and LEAP Innovations, to bring personalized learning programs into 100 more Chicago schools.

The grant money will include $10 million going to LEAP, a Chicago-based ed tech incubator that uses CPS students to test ed tech software, and $4 million to CPS to train teachers and principals, purchase technology and other classroom resources and redesign classrooms to support personalized learning.

Diversified learning is all the rage in CPS when classrooms are filled with students at many different levels. What better way than to introduce computer software that allows the children to advance at their own level.

However, opponents voiced concern about privacy and what data the tech companies will collect on students without the parents' knowledge.

"There was already cause for grave concern about threats to student data protection, but this grant announcement, just weeks after Zuckerberg appeared in front of Congress to testify about Facebook's treatment of personal information in the Cambridge Analytica scandal, highlights the need for the Illinois General Assembly to act," the parent advocacy group Raise Your Hand (RYH) stated in a press release.

There is currently a bill in the state legislature that would, according to RYH, be the first step to "adequately protect the privacy and security of public school students' personal data."

"As computer usage and data collection increases in public ed, parents have the right to know who is collecting, storing and sharing what data on their children, and this bill will do that," RYH stated.

RYH Action and the Parent Coalition for Student Privacy wrote "As computer usage and data collection increases in public ed, parents have the right to know who is collecting, storing and sharing what data on their children, and this bill will do that," RYH stated.

a student data transparency bill entitled HB1295 that would require school districts in this state to disclose a detailed description of what student data is collected or stored and procedures for how parents can examine, correct and delete their child's data.

The fight to get a bill to protect students' privacy is not easy. The tech companies like Facebook have many lobbyists and resources to water down or kill any bills that would put a check on its activities. The current HB1295 Student Information Transparency bill that passed in committee, must be renegotiated before it gets a vote on the House floor because it is opposed by the tech industry, RYH stated.

Tech ed companies are compiling more and more information on students, including everything from grades, test scores and disciplinary actions to students' online usage history, IP address, food purchases, in-school behavior and physical location with time

Grant Park Advisory Council meets July 10

The Chicago Park District is calling a meeting for the Grant Park Advisory Council (GPAC) 6 p.m. Tuesday, July 10, at Maggie Daley Park Field House, 337 E. Randolph St.

GPAC determines the Park's programing and possible infrastructure initiatives each year. At the meeting, the Park District will explain how Chicagoans can participate in GPAC activities and even run for GPAC's Board of Directors.

The meeting is open to the general public.

City officials estimates that the price of park land acquisition, clean up and build-outs between $160-$200 million for the proposed 24-acre park on the east bank of the Chicago River in West Lincoln Park.

Plans for North Branch Park are fluid

Mix of new taxes and borrowing proposed to raise funds for purchase and construction on east bank of river

Most Chicago residents know that their city is broke, but three North Side aldermen and one urban planner and designer have now publicly produced a financing plan that would mix and match a variety of funding sources that they say could raise enough funds to buy, clean up and develop some of the hottest real estate in the city and turn it into a real park on the east bank of the Chicago River.

Ald. Michele Smith [43rd] hosted a meeting June 27 at the DePaul Univ. Student Union that drew over 200 people - and over 100 more watching a live Facebook feed -where she spelled out their plans in detail. She pointed to specific funding and taxing sources and explained in detail how as much as $150 million could be raised to purchase 24-acres of property running from North Ave. north to approximately Cortland St. to build a signature park space with athletic fields in space now owned by a local metal scrapper and other industrial sites.

Ald. Smith suggested that approximately 18 million square feet of new and mixed use development is envisioned along the North Branch with population projections that exceed 50,000 people within a few years.

But those at the meeting heard Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] question that kind of density and offer up a firm commitment that a proposed high-rise canyon wall of high density high-rise developments on this same property "was a non-starter."

"Estimates place the price of park land acquisition and build-out between $160-$200 million," said Ald. Smith. "Estimates of the infrastructure needs of our area for traffic congestion with new development on the west side of the river are about $500 million.

CTA adding hi-def cameras to Red Line to help battle increase in crime

City encouraging outsiders to join in initiative to merge all security cameras

Chicago police this Summer have taken to herding large hoards of trouble-making youths toward the CTA Red Line stations downtown when their numbers grow too large, then instructing the CTA to run waiting trains non-stop to stations south of the 35th St. Station.

With stats showing that crime and violence has been increasing on CTA property for the last three years, the CTA is adding more security cameras to try and stem criminal activity along the Red Line on the North Side.

Now fifty new high-definition surveillance cameras are being installed and operated along the CTA and they claim that those cameras will be monitored 24 hours a day, 365 days a year by Chicago police officers.

The new additional cameras are already up along the Red Line stations at Clark and Division, Chicago and State, and Grand and State.

The plan is part of a new partnership between the City of Chicago's public safety departments and downtown-area civic organizations who are seeking to strengthen the response, rescue and recovery efforts of first responders who at times are overwhelmed by the large mobs of youthful offenders that sometimes descend on the Near North Side and Downtown, many arriving via Red Line CTA trains.

To this end, the Chicago Police Dept. (CPD), Chicago Fire Dept. and Chicago Office of Emergency Management and Communications have joined forces to ensure what they claim will be "the highest level of preparedness for businesses, universities, institutions and other properties through their participation in Chicago's Public and Private Partnership (CP3) ini-

The City has reached out to property managers and security staff to join the CP3 portal, encourage suspicious activity reporting and inform them about connecting with the City's federated camera network. While the primary focus has been properties located Downtown and in the Central Business District, the public safety departments were also joined by representatives from the Dept. of Buildings and Business Affairs and Consumer Protection to conduct outreach in the 19th District in advance of the various Pride Month celebrations, which over the last few years have become quiet violent.

The CP3 portal is a centralized platform for the private sector and first responders to communicate critical information to increase the domain awareness of first responders across all City agencies

We all scream for ice cream

By Thomas J. O’Gorman

Are you an ice cream eater? What’s your favorite flavor?

Are you persnickety about what’s in your ice cream? Natural organic ingredients? Or will you eat anything cold, sweet and creamy?

In Chicago, if you have South Side roots, ice cream automatically screams “Rainbow.” They’ve been dishing out cones stuffed with their five distinct flavors at 92nd and Western Ave. since 1926. Orange sherbet, pistachio, Palmer House (New York vanilla with cherries and walnuts), strawberry and chocolate. (How do they get the ice cream to stay in the cone?)

You can’t really explain the taste to people, you just have to eat one.

I went through an anti-pistachio phase back in the late 1950s. But I grew out of it. As long as I can remember, whenever the O’Gormans got in our car, we began begging our parents to “please, please, stop at Rainbow” in Beverly. No matter what direction we were going. Even our grandmothers would chime in, they were ice cream lovers too.

That’s the thing about ice cream, it makes addicts of us all. Long lines down Western Ave. at Rainbow are historically a normal occurrence.

If you’re from the North Shore, ice cream instantly means Homer’s, in Wilmette. It’s a right of passage since 1935. Homer’s fans are obsessed with it, like the characters in their namesake’s “Odyssey” trawling the sea for a way back home. There are people who buy their peach ice cream at Homer’s in five gallon tubs. Same with Homer’s peppermint, it’s off the charts too. Amazingly, some swanky Chicago restaurants are starting to serve Homer’s for dessert. Erie Cafe is now dishing it out. Greek Islands too. Though they aren’t really blending cultures when they serve Homer’s dark chocolate ice cream since Homer’s was founded 80 years ago by Gus Poulos, a Greek immigrant, when they opened their doors at 1237 Green Bay Rd.

Margie’s Candies (1960 N. Western Ave. and 1813 W. Montrose) is another famous Chicago ice cream parlor also begun by a Greek immigrant named Peter George Poulos. When he opened their doors in 1921 making homemade luxury chocolates, that they still produce, his coveted homemade ice cream was born.

Margie’s, with their classic fountain sundaes, is said to have been a favorite of Chicago mob boss Al Capone.

Margie’s has survived layers of change and urban renewal around its location near Milwaukee and Western. Today it flourishes bolstered with a steady stream of past generations of faithful customers, as well as new hipsters, all bound by the quality of their ice cream.

After the Beatles’ historic concert in Comiskey Park, Aug. 20, 1965, Paul, John, Ringo and George made their way to Margie’s for some ice cream treats, further gilding the shop’s golden reputation.

When the O’Gorman Family drove off on their transcontinental vacations in our youth, our father always calibrated our daily mileage as the distance between great spots to break the days’ journey for lunch and for multiple beer breaks. That’s when we also got our oars in the water for ice cream stops at the many small town Rexal Drug Store soda fountains that were linked from sea to shining sea. Floats, sundaes and malts were always at the top of the list. Ice cream breaks were touted as a great way to get grandma to cool off after a day in the car.

Howard Johnson’s and its orange roof was another place where you could always count on good ice cream. They advertised something like 30 flavors. And there was always another one on down the highway.

It’s amazing to chart the many incarnations of the quality ice cream shops in our city. Many started by hard working Greek Chicagoans. Each neighborhood seems to have had their own classic ice cream parlor where families and young people would gather for shockingly fantastic creations.

Chris Callas’ Fountain anchored

Margie’s Candies, 1960 N. Western Ave.

the corner of 55th and Halsted St. on the South Side. Cupid Candies on West 63rd St. was another vision in the rear view mirror of my youth... pure luxury. Melody Lane on West 87th St. flourished in the 1960s and 1970s with extraordinary ice cream creations. Their “Tornado,” named to honor the cyclone that swept through the neighborhood in the 1960s, was the top of the line creation to share on the menu. It was huge and priced at $25. A small fortune back then.

Local soda fountains across Chicago set in motion for many their personal tastes for classically made ice creams. And in the era before air-conditioning, ice cream was as chilled as you could get.

Of course with the resurgence of good food appreciation, ice cream has once again gained the high value and social grandeur that it once could only dream of. Good ice cream is not hard to find, many high-end ice cream vendors have opened all around town.

It remains the choice of sophisticated dessert lovers everywhere, but there is more to the story.

Ice cream has anchored a huge portion of life in America. Not merely its taste, but even more importantly its ability to recalibrate us and energize us in countless episodic ways. Ice cream’s ability to cool us down in the heat of summer is a perfect metaphor for the way in which we have been soothed by the presence of ice cream. More than nourishment, more than indulgence.

My parents cherished a good Brandy Alexander, the old fashioned cocktail. In Chicago there is none better than at the Drake Hotel’s Coq d’Or where they are so thick from sweet ice cream you can hardly sip them through the straw. The same goes for Gibson’s Steakhouse.

There has been an explosion in popularity of Italian ice creams and gelatos. Traditionally gelatos are made with the strategic addition of eggs to the recipe. Eggs enrich the final product and help it maintain a more creamy consistency. Black Dog Gelato at 859 N. Damen is among the best in Chicago. Out of an unassuming storefront creamy Italian ice cream to rival anything you’ve eaten in Europe is at hand. Often a long line of customers snakes down the street, especially on warm, summer nights.

In so many ways ice cream is really a gift from history. We have the Chinese to thank for originating ice cream before the time of Christ. Over the next centuries it seeped its way across the borders of the silk road and wiggled its way into the royal courts of Europe.

THE BIRTH OF THE MOSCOW MULE:
In a story that is now legend, in 1941, Jack Morgan of Cock and Bull Ginger Beer was sitting with John G. Martin of Hublein and Rudolph Kunett, the President of Smirnoff. They were experimenting, putting their heads together on the invention of a new cocktail. Ultimately they added Smirnoff Vodka to Ginger Beer on crushed ice with a healthy squeeze of fresh lime.

Hey Rogers Parkers, this one's for you

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Have you seen this cherished ring?

At around 10 a.m. on June 25, Rogers Parker Paige James was dragging a large piece of driftwood out of Lake Michigan when her late mother's black onyx, Fairleigh Dickinson U. ring slipped off her finger, and disappeared into the water.

"I spent the next six hours alternately sitting and looking into the murky water," said James, a more than three decade resident of the neighborhood. "This was by the metal jetty between Lunt and Pratt beaches. I've been wearing it since she passed away in April, and obviously am pretty devastated I lost it this way."

James was raised out East and was lucky enough to spend her summers on a tiny barrier island off the South Jersey coast. "So when I moved here to Chicago, living near Lake Michigan and being able to spend time at the water's edge was very important to me and still is," she said.

Her mom, Roberta "Bobbe" Persak, died about 10 weeks ago, and not surprisingly, James is still grieving her loss.

"So taking a morning and evening walk have been a great source of consolation to me, as has just sitting by the water's edge," said James. "Mom was 94 when she died. She and my dad -- still with us -- lived in a Quaker elder's community outside Philadelphia in the Brandywine River Valley.

"Mom died a natural death, with my dad and I at her side," said James. "She always loved this ring -- I think at least in part because she was the first in her family to ever attend and graduate from college."

James loved the ring so much because her mother loved it, but also because she liked the way it looked. "One of my daughters also always loved this particular ring and was going to have it after I die some day," she said.

"So, that's my sad story," said James. "But I just want to note while I consider this a great personal loss, I feel in many ways very blessed and fortunate. It's not the end of the world," she said. "But if the lake ever gives it back, I'd be overjoyed."

If anyone out there finds this ring, please contact me at write12@comcast.net.

Simply the best... Last week's Best of Rogers Park event brought together members of the community to celebrate the 25th anniversary of Rogers Park Business Alliance (RPBA) and honor businesses in the neighborhood. RPBA Executive Director Sandi Price highlighted successes from the past year, including how local businesses benefited from additional media attention during Loyola Ramblers mania. Price talked about the community's great input and response to the Vision Clark Street master plan, a strategic plan for the Clark St. business corridor. She also outlined the 25-year history of RPBA in the neighborhood, and how much the nonprofit chamber has grown.

Price then introduced WBEZ's "The Morning Shift" host Tony Sarabia, who talked about leaving the station at the end of the year to move to Iowa. He spoke about the sense of nostalgia he experiences in Rogers Park -- which reminds him of his childhood in Pilsen. Sarabia also commented on the fact that the Rogers Park community is so diverse and inclusive.

The business alliance then honored the following awardees at the event: Capital Investment Award - Archie's Café; Business Leadership Award - The Factory Theater; Community Partner Award - R Public House; Friend of Rogers Park Award - Wintrust Rogers Park; President's Award - Dorothy Milne; Volunteer of the Year Award - Leather 64Ten.

Finally, Ald. Joe Moore [49th] spoke about how Rogers Park holds on to its values and thanked the award winners for their dedication and impact on the neighborhood.

Congrats and thanks to all that make our community a better place.

Memory Lane... did you grow up between Sheridan Rd. and Kedzie Ave. north of Granville? If so, you may want to consider going to Max and Benny's Rogers Park/West Rogers Park night, from 5 to 8 p.m. July 18. Max and Benny's, 461 Waukegan Rd. in Northbrook, will prepare a special menu that night that'll surely bring back fond memories of Ashkenaz, Sally's and other fave restaurants from the old 'hood.

"People can pre-register by emailing me at richardreeder34@gmail.com and give me the names of the attendees," said organizer Richard Reeder, (Rogers '59, Mather '63). "I will register them and they will get a confirmation."

"We will feature a special menu highlighting some of the food items from those memorable old neighborhood eateries," said Reeder. "The historical society will be there selling books about the neighborhood. The aura of the old neighborhood will be recreated that night.

Just an FYI: Reeder has written a book called, "1001 Train Rides in Chicago." Can't wait to read it.

Landlord settles... a Rogers Park fair housing program fighting housing discrimination on Chicago's North Side settles two disputes in as many months.

Last week, Bil-Mar Property Management agreed to pay over $3000 to potential tenant Tymikee Brown in order to settle a housing discrimination complaint. The complaint alleged that Brown and her young daughter were treated differently when they attempted to use their CHA "Housing Choice Voucher" to find a nicer apartment in Rogers Park.

Some people refer to "Housing Choice Vouchers" as "Section 8 Vouchers." The company is not admitting their guilt or innocence in settling the complaint, but is one of many accused of allegedly turning away or discouraging the applications of users of public rent subsidies. Chicago and Cook County both have fair housing protections for source of income, obliging landlords to equally consider any legal, verifiable source of income including public rent subsidies.

"This is really getting out of hand. Nobody goes by the law of housing but they make up their own laws. And that's unfair," said Brown.

Some providers are suspected of purely discriminating against people with rent vouchers, and some providers are accused of allegedly treating voucher holders differently because of their race or disability.

These families were helped by the Northside Fair Housing Initiative, a project of Northside Community Resources funded by the Dept. of Housing & Urban Development.

"Everyday, we hear stories that seem to indicate a blatant disregard for laws against housing discrimination on Chicago's Northside. We are here to shine a light on fair housing law violations until we have a North Side where all feel welcome," said Courtney Kimble, of Northside Community Resources. Housing discrimination complaints can be reported to the program by calling 773-338-7722 x 13.

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

Housing costs rising faster than income

With more and more Millennials renting, is the American Dream of homeownership fading into the sands of time?

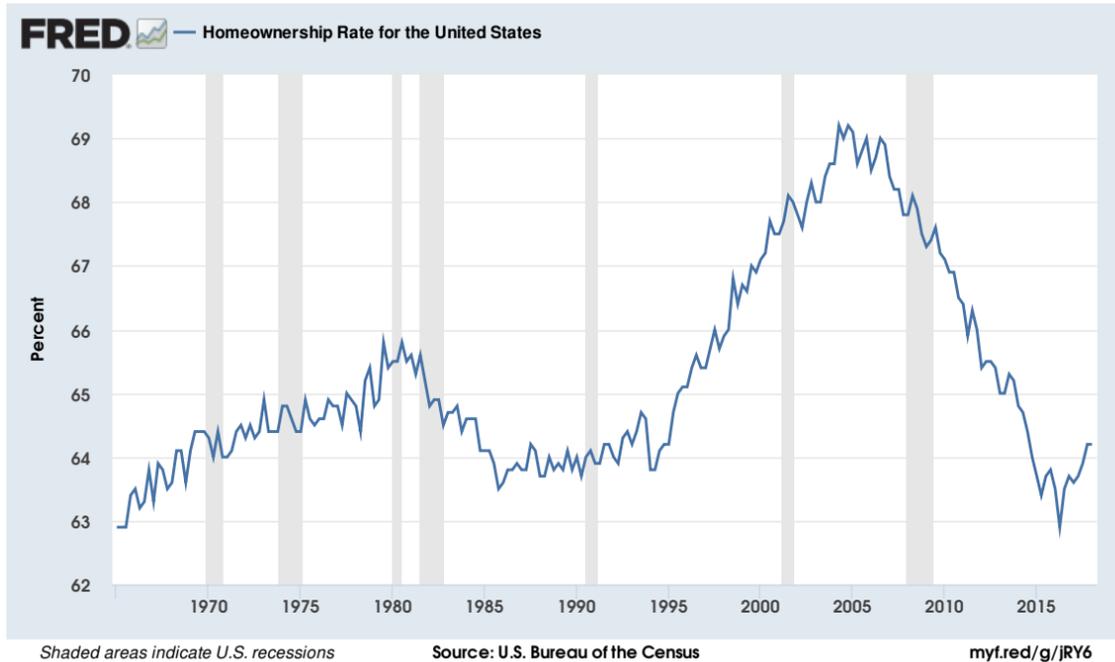

The Great Recession and societal shifts—such as declining marriage and fertility rates—have depressed homeownership levels among young adults, housing advocates say.

However, the biggest barrier keeping young prospective buyers on the fence has been that housing costs are rising faster than incomes, according to new research from Freddie Mac.

The study examined economic and demographic trends from 2000 to 2016 to identify the causes behind the 8% decrease in the homeownership rate among young adults under age 35. U.S. homeownership's peak hit 69.1% in 2002. It currently is 64.2%.

Freddie Mac research revealed that higher rents and home prices are the primary reason for the decline in young homeowners (49%), followed by lower marriage and fertility rates (22%), and a likely combination of student debt, a preference towards renting, borrowing constraints and other factors (13%).

Other factors in the decline of homeownership are a younger, more racially diverse population (12%), and the increased migration to more densely-populated metro areas, which tend to be more expensive (11%).

“Historically low mortgage rates and increasingly favorable employment conditions should have generated a far greater number of home purchases by young adults, especially in the last five years,” noted Sam Khater, Freddie Mac’s chief economist.

“Unfortunately, home-price and rent growth above incomes—driven primarily by a severe shortage of housing supply—have been too high of a hurdle for many would-be buyers to clear,” Khater said.

“At a time when rising home values continue to build housing wealth for most homeowners, these weaker affordability conditions have led to a missed opportunity for the interested young buyers who are unfortunately priced out of the market,” he said.

The research also looked ahead to 2025 to estimate the homeownership rate among two age groups: those ages 25 to 34 in 2016, and those who will be of that age seven years from now.

Under the baseline scenario,

Freddie Mac estimates that homeownership rates in 2025 will increase for both groups as they age, but still remain below the historical average for their respective age groups.

The biggest barrier keeping young prospective buyers on the fence has been that housing costs are rising faster than incomes.

“Demographics, housing preferences and economic conditions will all play a role in the direction of homeownership in coming years,” Khater predicted. “If economic conditions improve, and incomes and entry-level housing supply increase in a meaningful way, homeownership rates for today and tomorrow’s young adults could exceed our current projections.”

Here are the highlights of the Freddie Mac homeownership study:

- The home price-to-income ratio has increased substantially since 2000, depressing homeownership. The ratio has grown more for young adults than the overall population, and even more so for young adults living in metro areas.

- Around 700,000 young adults did not buy a home between 2000 and 2016 because of increases in inflation-adjusted home prices and rents.

- Homeownership rates for younger age groups fell steeply after the financial crisis, and this lag is likely to persist through 2025.

The homeownership rate for young adults (ages 25 to 34 in 2016) is due to rise as they age, but that increase varies. By 2025 Freddie Mac projects:

- Under a baseline scenario, the homeownership rate of young adults rises to 58.1%.

- Under an optimistic scenario, the homeownership rate could rise as high as 60%—1.9 percentage points more than the baseline.

- In a pessimistic scenario, the homeownership rate only increases to 55.9%—2.2 percentage points less than baseline.

- For those who will be 25 to 34 years old in 2025, the homeownership rate is forecast to be 36.6%.

Additional economic and demographic factors also impact homeownership rates among young adults, including:

- Those self-employed are 5% more likely to become a homeowner than those who work for an employer.

- Living in a metropolitan statistical area (MSA)—where employment opportunities and amenities abound—results in a 5% less chance of becoming a homeowner versus those living outside metro areas.
- Those foreign-born are 11% less likely to become a homeowner, but the effect fades away as the number of years resided in the United States increases.

- Living in a multigenerational household results in being 5% more likely to become a homeowner.

Through many decades of challenges, newspapers remain strong voice for information, democracy

BY TARA MCCLELLAN MCANDREW
For the Illinois Press Assoc.

Like so much in Illinois, the origins of its newspapers were tied to politics and patronage.

This land was a wild, largely unpopulated, western territory when its first newspaper sprang up - the single-sheet Illinois Herald, published in 1814 in Kaskaskia. Its proprietor landed the job of printing territorial and national business through his friend, the territorial governor, according to the July 1918 Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society.

Some early newspapers were created to support or oppose a political candidate or issue, like the anti-slavery Edwardsville Advocate. Illinois newspapers remained political for decades in the 1800s, according to the ISHS Journal.

Publications faced many challenges: bad transportation, unreliable mail delivery and a lack of subscribers. As more settlers came to Illinois in the middle 1800s and transportation improved, newspapers fared better. The advent of railroads precipitated a newspaper boom.

Technological improvements such as the telegraph helped, too. So did wood-pulp, which made paper more economical. A lot of weeklies became dailies and foreign language newspapers arose for immigrant communities.

By the Civil War, Illinois had almost 300 newspapers, according to the Illinois Newspaper Project. While the war increased the desire for news, it brought censorship. Government restricted news sent by telegram and shut down newspapers for not supporting the war. This included the Chicago Times and the Jonesboro Gazette, according to the Abraham Lincoln Classroom online and the website of the Gazette's successor, the Gazette-Democrat.

Chicago's papers were decimated in 1871 by the city's Great Fire. Within two days, all of the major dailies were in business again, according to the Illinois Newspapers Project. Others were gone forever.

Illinois' newspapers were thriving and diversifying in 1880. The state had about 1,000 newspapers, with at least one in every county. Special interest papers were increasing. In 1899, Chicago was home to a newspaper for African-Americans, the Broad-Ax. More women, such as Myra Bradwell, were in the field. She had started the successful Chicago Legal News in 1868.

In 1902, the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign began offering journalism classes, partly in response to a call for more professionalism in media. Twenty-five years later, it opened a journalism school.

Radio brought a new threat, so did the stock market crash of 1929 and the Depression. As World War II raged, newspapers cashed in old machines and other scrap metal for the war effort. Editors and publishers had to comply, once again, with military censorship, and a plea from the governor. According to the Illinois Press Association's publication from February-

Summer meals program

The Summer Food Service Program is designed to ensure children receive nutritious meals over summer break. At Chicago Public Schools [CPS], all summer meal programs provide free meals inside the school to students attending summer programs as well as all children ages 1-18 years old in the community (children do not have to be CPS students).

Free breakfast and lunch are available while summer programs occur. Program duration and meal time varies per meal site. To verify times and locations of CPS programs or to find a site near you, call the Illinois Hunger Hotline at 800-359-2163.

In addition to summer meals served indoors, CPS also offers meals at outdoor school locations throughout the entire summer through the LunchStop program. Meals are available even beyond summer school programs. The LunchStop summer meal program provides free, healthy meals across Chicago to all children ages 1-18 years.

One of the very first mentions of ice cream in Western Europe came in 1672 when it was served to England's King Charles II. Surely his guests screamed.

Of course, it was a favorite at the court of Louis XIV at Versailles, as it had been decades earlier when Catherine de Medici was a French Queen. In the New World, mention of ice cream is made in a letter of 1744 describing a dinner in the home of Maryland's governor William Bladen who served it to his guests. Just 30 years later, Philip Lazio, a milk producer in Boston, advertised that ice cream was "available almost everyday." Ice cream was well-known to George Washington who produced it at home. And Dolly Madison who served it at the White House.

In 1943, the U.S. Armed Forces became the world's largest ice cream manufacturer, when it produced 80 million gallons per year for our American troops.

Americans' love of ice cream tells us something deep rooted and well-balanced about the people of our Republic. I take comfort in that, especially in these days of fake news and oppressive political nincompoopery of low level political intelligence both on the right and on the left. While pushing through the shame and distortion that is now ripe on the land, we can still take comfort in our common love for ice cream. It still has the power to soften hearts and shatter tongues while generating fresh possibilities in the worst of times.

Hello Kim Jung Un!

It is possible to put our trust in the goodness that is ice cream and the delight it can unleash. And its natural ability to cool-off the worst hot head! I've been reading the American writer Thornton Wilder recently and discovered him to be an ice cream man. He wrote in his 1942 hit 'Skin of Our Teeth,' "My advice to you is not to inquire why or whither but just enjoy your ice cream while it's on your plate."

REMEMBERING HAZEL: There was no one like Hazel Barr. Her death this past week removes the blithest of spirits from the Chicago social scene. Long and lanky, her fashion model good looks and her boarding school pedigree put her at the vanguard of a life of generous service, social significance and elastic humanitarian leadership. She was tough and loving, glamorous and chic, but always ready to rally the troops of privileged achievement on behalf of those in need. Her Service Club leadership and organization will remain a monument to her compassion. But it is for a thousand kindnesses and luncheon laughs that she will be most missed. Plus her treasured unguarded word. Hilarious observation. Dry nonchalance. All wedded to her sense of classic style and measured elegance. She really did walk in beauty, as the poets say. Treasuring her friends and the amusement that her long life provided. She will be mourned and missed and remembered well. "Adieu cheri."

STREETERVILLE ORGANIZATION: Grand Opening Day for the fourth season of the SOAR Farmers Market at the MCA Plaza, was held on June 19. It began with a live broadcast on WBEZ's "Morning Shift" and culminated with the traditions of ribbon-cutting and complimentary slices of Eli's Cheesecake -- with strawberries on top, straight from local farmers. The market continues every Tuesday from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m., through Oct. 30. Don't miss Gayle's Grilled Cheese, it could easily be the best grilled cheese you will ever have.

Much of the property pictured here as recreational space is owned now by a metal scrapper may go on the market very soon, says Ald. Michele Smith.

While these are big numbers, they pale in comparison to the overall figures for this looming development figures which exceed $5 - $6 Billion.”

If the aldermen, Mayor’s Office and local parks activists are able to pull this off it will certainly be a strong legacy for generations to come and create what might easily become one of the most beloved waterfront recreational parks in the city not located on the lakefront.

go on the market very soon, and that makes up 44% of the acreage needed for the proposed park. No doubt big private money interests are also eye-balling these parcels as well and they may not have trouble quickly raising the needed funds to close a deal.

Primary property owners include General Iron Industries, Peoples Energy, Commonwealth Edison and C. H. Robinson. C. H. Robinson will soon be relocating to Dominick St. into a new building by Sterling Bay who holds a real estate purchase option on the existing Marcey St. facility.

In Aug. 2017, the Chicago City Council established the Industrial Corridor System Fund Ordinance, Chapter 16-8 of the Municipal Code of Chicago, to create new funding tools to promote the city’s vital interests in job creation and a diversified economy. The aldermen propose using some of these funds to help pull off this project.

Additional funding sources offered at the June 27 meeting included the Tax Increment Financing District originally proposed for the Amazon headquarters proposal; North Branch Corridor Bonus Funds, and Development In-Kind Improvement taxes.

Understanding the current 60-acre framework

As it stands now, the North Branch Framework states that “60 acres of new, publicly accessible open space is envisioned through a variety of public and private improvements. Of this, 10 acres should be created for single-purpose activities, such as skate parks and athletic fields.”

But in reality, there is no provision for publicly-owned, large-scale recreational parkland in the North Branch Framework.

This plan breaks down as follows:

25.5 ACRES = River Trail 30’ Setback x 7 Miles (This assumes every parcel along the riverfront is redeveloped to achieve this acreage.)

17 ACRES = North Branch Canal and Turning Basin Wetland Park (1 mile of boardwalk in canal water and 2.5 acres of wetland located around 14.5 acres of river water)

17.5 ACRES = “Civic Spaces” as Part of Private Development (Tribune site, Greyhound site, 2FM Site, Finkl site, Ashland & Webster site)

In large part, the income generated from these various sources would be used to pay off the immediate borrowing that would be undertaken to purchase the land, clean it up and develop the parks.

The June 27 meeting was not the only meeting local residents will have a chance to participate in this process, but the urgency for quick action was clear. Right now Ald. Hopkins is hoping to hold a minimum of three community-wide meetings prior to Sterling Bay filing its planned development plan with the City for their plans to develop the 70-acres of riverfront property they own the vicinity of the proposed new park. The purpose of these meetings would be to provide the community with an opportunity to review and comment on the proposed plans for a new entertainment district and soccer stadium that would double as an large-scale entertainment venue... and then have an opportunity to review whether community concerns are incorporated into a revised plan.

The park supporters say that the development of publicly-owned parkland along this stretch of the Chicago River is a citywide issue – not just a ward or neighborhood issue.

The proposed North Branch Park and Nature Preserve would

First public meeting on Lincoln Yards plan July 18 at Near North Montessori

The first public meeting over the sports and entertainment complex proposed for the Lincoln Yards Planned Development, and redevelopment of the North Branch Corridor will be held 6 p.m., Wednesday July 18, in the Near North Montessori School – Gymnasium, 1434 W. Division St.

Hosted by Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd], this inaugural community meeting represents the initial step in the Planned Development process. Many North Side residents today think the redevelopment along the river and proposed complex could usher in significant changes to the community for both the good and bad.

Limited parking is available in the school’s Bosworth parking lot, and on the south side of Division St. at Holy Trinity Church

“In keeping with my Community Advisory Committee’s process recommendations, Sterling Bay will conduct additional, direct engagement with local community groups to review their proposal,” said Hopkins.

The meeting will review the plans and analyze them against these key development metrics such as access to transit, congestion mitigation, infrastructure improvements, economic development and opportunity, environmental sustainability, open park land space and quality of life.

Those who would like to submit a question prior to the first community meeting or at any point during the review process must submit them directly to the alderman’s office who says they will pose these and other pertinent questions to the development team and share the responses with the public.

be located two miles north of the Main Branch of the Chicago River, in balance with Ping Tom Park located two miles south of the Main Branch. It would serve as a component of a Chicago River Park Network that supporters say will better connect neighborhoods, enhance the environment, and elevate the quality-of-life for current and future generations.

The site could feature river edge treatments to improve river ecology and welcome human engagement. Natural areas could provide important habitat for birds and other animals, while also mitigating urban heat island impacts, managing stormwater, and cleansing the air.

The park could contain both active and passive recreational features with separate bike and pedestrian trails that connect to transit, “The 606,” the Lakefront, Goose Island and neighborhoods in every direction.

Health and wellness improvements would increase opportunities for people to be physically active in both individual activities and team sports.

Park promoters say that environmentally-sensitive design, educational features, and programming would foster stewardship for land, water, plants, and animals, as well as providing a large park very close to the underserved Wicker Park and Logan Square areas.

'Whisky alone' thwarted plan to steal Lincoln's body

BY TARA MCCLELLAN
MCANDREW
for The State Journal-Register

It was July 3, 1876 — the eve of our country's first centennial. Everyone in Springfield would be celebrating downtown. No one would be near Oak Ridge Cemetery.

It was the perfect time to steal Abraham Lincoln's body.

The incredulous plot was hatched by Midwestern counterfeiters who had been shut down when their expert bill engraver was jailed. Benjamin Boyd's bills were the best in the Midwest, possibly the country. In 1875, he was captured in Fulton, found guilty, and sent to the Joliet penitentiary for 10 years. Without his plates, the criminals who made and passed the counterfeit bills were out of business. They had to spring their money man.

"Big Jim" Kennally, a St. Louis Irishman who led Midwestern counterfeiters, according to Thomas J. Craughwell's book, "Stealing Lincoln's Body," brainstormed a solution. They would snatch Lincoln's body, bury it in the Indiana Dunes, then ransom it for $200,000 and Boyd's pardon and freedom.

His minions in Lincoln moved to Springfield to implement the plan. As a front, they opened a saloon and dance hall — just a block west of the current Abraham Lincoln Presidential Library and Museum. When the criminals weren't running the saloon, they posed as tourists to case Lincoln's tomb.

With their preparations finished around the middle of June, the Logan County boys relaxed. They spent the night at a Springfield brothel and toasted their upcoming riches. In his well-oiled state, the gang's leader boasted to one of the ladies that they were going to steal "old Lincoln's bones" and ransom them. He even told her when.

She told the chief of police, who warned John Carroll Power, the tomb's custodian. He told the Lincoln Monument Association, local friends and peers of Lincoln's who were in charge of the tomb. They did nothing. In a book he wrote about the crime ("History of an Attempt ..."), Power explains: "It seemed to them so incredible that no attention was given to it."

When the Logan County leader sobered and realized what he'd done, he and his gang fled. "Whisky alone is entitled to the credit of having thwarted this well laid scheme," wrote Power.

A few months later, Kennally headed for Chicago to find new partners for his plot. He was part-owner of a bar there called "The Hub," which had little to offer except booze and boodle (counterfeit) carriers. Here, Kennally proposed his idea to co-proprietor, Terrence Mullen and Jack Hughes. They liked what they heard.

The duo needed more men for the job, so they approached Lewis Swegles, a horse thief who had become a frequent customer. Unbeknownst to them, he also was a spy. The assistant chief of the Secret Service in Chicago, Patrick Tyrrell, hired Swegles to hang around The Hub and inform him of the habitue's criminal activities.

As the would-be kidnapers honed their plan, Swegles told Tyrrell every detail. Tyrrell then told Lincoln's oldest and only surviving son, Robert, a Chicago attorney. The detective asked Robert to let the plot proceed so he could catch the kidnapers in the act and increase their chance of conviction. Robert agreed.

Mullen and his boys selected Nov. 7, election night, as the date. The presidential contest between Democrat Samuel Tilden and Republican Rutherford B. Hayes was heated, and once again, Springfield residents would be downtown celebrating and waiting for the results. No one would be near Oak Ridge Cemetery.

On Nov. 6, the counterfeiters caught a train to Springfield. In the back car, Tyrrell, other detectives and a Chicago Daily Tribune reporter were tailing them.

Once in Springfield, some of the gang procured tools, while the others visited the tomb, acting as tourists, to determine how to break in. They only had to break a door's padlock to reach Lincoln's white marble sarcophagus.

Lincoln's Tomb a place to honor revered 16th president

BY THE STATE JOURNAL-REGISTER STAFF

The final resting place of Abraham Lincoln attracts everyone from schoolchildren to tourists to prayer groups. While children in particular may be attracted to the large bronze bust of Lincoln and want to be part of the tradition of rubbing his nose for luck, those who come are there to pay their respects to a man revered by many.

Although he was assassinated in April 1865 while president in Washington, D.C., the remains of the 16th president were returned to Springfield, which Lincoln considered his hometown. The Lincoln Monument in Oak Ridge Cemetery, designed by sculptor Larkin Mead, was erected to preserve his memory. Also buried there are his wife, Mary, and three of their four children: Edward, William and Thomas.

Lincoln's Tomb is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. For more information visit <http://www.lincolntomb.org/>

Swegles later said, as reported in the Nov. 20, 1876, Illinois State Journal, that while his cohorts were able counterfeiters, they had few skills for burglary, especially when it came to picking the right tools.

That night, Tyrrell and his detectives got to the tomb first. They hid inside and waited. Mullen and his gang snuck up to the monument and began sawing the metal padlock on the door to the catacomb. They'd brought a flimsy metal saw for the job, and it broke. So they used a three-sided metal file, which took half an hour, according to Craughwell.

Once inside, the kidnapers opened the sarcophagus lid with a crowbar and sawed through the container's front to reach Lincoln's coffin. They pulled it out about a foot, but it was too heavy. Mullen told Swegles to get help. Instead, the informant signaled the detectives that it was time to raid the operation.

The agents dashed from their hide-out toward the catacomb at the other end of the tomb. In the excitement, one accidentally shot his gun. Frightened, the kidnapers fled. When the agents got to the sarcophagus, all that was left were the criminals' misfit tools.

The agents spread out to catch the would-be thieves. Tyrrell ran to the tomb's roof where he spied a couple of men and shot at them. They returned fire. When Tyrrell called for backup, one figure called out: "Tyrrell, is that you?!" One of the Secret Service's best detectives had been shooting at his own men.

Stupidly, the kidnapers ran right back to The Hub. Tyrrell ar-

Terraces Transition Manager Amy Klem, Clare resident Sheila Rock and Fitness Manager Leah Okner.

The Clare Crewsaders prepare for their first race.

Surrounded by elite groups, fire departments and corporate crews, on-lookers might not have suspected that residents of The Clare, a luxury senior living community in Chicago's Gold Coast, were about to race along the south branch of the Chicago River.

And yet, The Clare was one of 32 teams competing in the 18th Annual Dragon Boat Race for Literacy on June 23 at Ping Tom Memorial Park in Chinatown – and the oldest team, at that.

"It is inspirational to watch our residents take on the challenge of the races," The Clare fitness manager Leah Okner said. "The average age of our boat was approximately 40 years older than the other teams."

But age didn't prevent The Clare Crewsaders from giving their all.

"Residents enjoy competing in the Dragon Boat Races because they have the mindset of, 'Why not us?'" The Clare director of life enrichment Lori Griffin said. "They are not held back by the perceived boundaries of aging."

Six weeks prior to the race, Okner began training with the residents. Half of the practice focused on balance training, as entering and exiting the boat can be a challenge, given its curved bottom and thin beams that rowers have to step over in order to take their seat.

"Just getting in and out of the Dragon Boat was a feat in itself," Clare resident Sheila Rock said.

Each team consists of 20 members: 18 paddlers, one drummer and one flag catcher. The paddlers row to the beat of the drummer, while the flag catcher pulls a flag positioned in the water at the finish line. This is why the other half of The Clare's practice sessions were geared toward strength training and timing.

On the day of the race, The Clare Crewsaders first competed in a time trial race, registering a time of 2:02. In the team's second race, their boat crossed the finish line in a time of 1:53, beating their previous time by 9 seconds.

"Going into the Dragon Boat Race, safety and fun were our top two goals – and we certainly accomplished those," Griffin said. "Being in the Dragon Boat Race as a team of older adults challenges people's perception on aging. And while we may not have been the fastest team, the day was a huge success."

Being supported and encouraged by family, friends and fellow residents cheering the team on only added to the experience.

"The Dragon Boat Race was another super activity that The Clare sponsors to keep us socially engaged, physically fit and active," Clare resident Anne van Amerongen said. "Although The Clare did not bring home a medal, many laughs were had by all, and each one of the paddlers exerted their maximum effort."

Tips to ensure home care safety

Some older adults are reluctant to use the services of home health care providers out of concern for their personal safety and security, cautions Kathy Semrow, director of Life Care at Home, a not-for-profit organization based in Chicago that provides private in-home personal care and domestic services for older and other adults.

Kathy Semrow

Elder abuse, identity theft and general theft present hurdles both for older adults and their families. "Because these situations do exist, it's important to take measures to confirm the integrity of home care providers and the caregivers whom they employ," Semrow said.

"Many people try to manage without assistance that would make their lives easier and, most likely, safer—they think they're playing it safe."

Safety and security should be a given for any health care provider. Semrow suggested there are several reliable indicators people should consider when hiring a home care provider.

Before hiring any care provider, find out if the company insist on drug testing and background checks for employees. Are workers properly trained and certified?

Are workers periodically retested and retrained?

Does the care provider schedule nurses to conduct regular supervisory visits to evaluate how the home care worker is performing?

What effort is made to ensure the home care worker is suited to the preferences and needs of the person wanting services? For example, if you need help preparing food, is the worker at ease cooking?

example, if you need help preparing food, is the worker at ease cooking? Do they understand the basics of kitchen safety and food sanitation?

Does the care provider evaluate the home to make sure the person needing care is living in a safe environment? Do they recommend measures to make the home safer and secure?

For Life Care at Home clients, a registered nurse visits the home, conducts a safety inspection and completes a 12-page comprehensive survey before assigning a home service worker or home health aide. The survey also identifies safety issues to be addressed, such as removing throw rugs or installing a grab bar in the bathroom.

The survey also helps determine specific forms of assistance needed, such as medication reminders, help with bathing, dressing, meal preparation, laundry, running errands and even caring for pets.

Life Care at Home assists people with short-term care while they recuperate from surgery or complete a course of therapy. It also provides ongoing assistance to those with chronic conditions, such as COPD or Parkinson's disease.

A proper safety evaluation can also evaluate if home care is appropriate or if assisted living or skilled nursing care may be needed, said Semrow.

Life Care at Home's individualized care plans are managed by home service workers as well as home health aides who are certified nursing assistants. All staff members pass drug testing and background checks. They're trained and supervised according to Illinois laws regulating the home care industry. Every year, they receive eight hours of training from registered nurses. Current staff also must complete online training to update and refresh their knowledge of best practices and home health regulations.

As part of their orientation and then annually, all employees receive training to help people with dementia. Registered nurses conduct supervisory visits during the first two weeks, after one month and every three months after that.

Prescription for trouble, how to avoid becoming a statistic

Know what your medications may do to your body temperature

With summer temperatures soaring, heat when combined with certain medications, can seriously put seniors at risk.

Consider this: 80-86% of seniors suffer from a chronic condition or disease that requires medication, the summer heat can pose significant challenges.

The National Weather Service even suggests that there are more heat-related fatalities in the U.S. than there are during frigid arctic outbreaks.

Some will recall that in July, 1995, Chicago was gripped by one of the city's worst natural disasters: a scorching heat wave that claimed more than 700 victims, mostly the poor, elderly and others on society's margins. Temps hovered between the high 90s and low triple digits for five consecutive days and as a result hundreds of bodies filled the Cook County medical examiner's office, enough so that refrigerated trucks were summoned to handle the overflow of corpses.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention seniors are more prone to heat stroke and heat-related stress because their bodies can't adjust to sudden changes in temperature.

Seniors who take certain prescription medications are more susceptible to heat-related injuries and illnesses and should always consult with a doctor or pharmacist regarding the potential impact of heat on any medications.

Antidepressants and antihistamines act on an area of the brain that controls the skin's ability to make sweat. Sweating is the body's natural cooling system. If a person can't sweat, they are at risk for overheating.

Beta-blockers reduce the ability of the heart and lungs to adapt to stresses, including hot weather. This also increases a person's likelihood of heat stroke and other heat-related illnesses.

Beta-blockers reduce the ability of the heart and lungs to adapt to stresses, including hot weather. This also increases a person's likelihood of heat stroke and other heat-related illnesses.

Amphetamines can raise body temperature and Diuretics act on kidneys and encourage fluid loss. This can quickly lead to dehydration in hot weather.

Sedatives can reduce a person's awareness of physical discomfort which means symptoms of heat stress may be ignored; while Ephedrine/Pseudoephedrine found in over the counter decongestants decrease blood flow to the skin and impact the body's ability to cool down.

Here are some easy tips to help cool and beat the heat:

Everyone needs to drink plenty of water or juice, even if they're not thirsty. Dehydration is the cause of many heat-related health problems. Avoid alcoholic or caffeinated drinks, which can contribute to dehydration.

Dress Cool - we're not talking about the latest fashion trends. When it's hot out, seniors should wear light-colored,

Keeping the 'home' in nursing home

BY LYNNE KORNECKI

For the past 43 years, Patty Schultz, 80, has called Continental Nursing & Rehabilitation Center, 5336 N. Western Ave., home.

She is the resident who's lived there the longest. According to senior staff members, she was admitted as either patient No. 2 or patient No. 3 in August 1976, moving in even before the building was completely finished.

Schultz grew up in a bustling family of eight children in Chicago's Bridgeport neighborhood. Because of a serious neurological disorder that has now impacted her ability to speak, she was protected and cared for by her mother and later other family members until it was no longer feasible.

"My sister was named Patricia because she was born on St. Patrick's Day," her brother, John, recalled. "She's always loved that holiday – all holidays for that matter. She has an easy-going personality, loves to laugh and go to parties."

Sabrina Robinson, Continental's activity director, confirms that Patty is quite the party-goer.

"No matter what we're doing – she's right there in the thick of it," Robinson said. "She enjoys everything from finger painting – especially with green paint because of her connection to St. Paddy's Day – playing catch with stress balls or wearing silly headpieces along with everyone else – she knows how to have fun."

Robinson, a former special education teacher, has found her niche designing activities for all levels of functioning among Continental's residents.

"FaceTime with families and friends who live far away or simply cannot visit is a very popular activity for them all," she said. "Whether it's Patty's family or the families of other residents, we have done FaceTime with people as far away as Europe, Japan and even the Philippines. It's a great way to keep their connections strong."

When Schultz was younger, a bus picked her up from Continental and transported her to and from the nearby Anixter Center where individuals with special needs can gain life skills, stay active and earn a modest income. She worked there for eight years with Continental's dietary staff packing her a brown-bag lunch each day so she could enjoy her noon break with friends.

Today, keeping life consistent for Schultz is a shared staff goal. She even has had the same physician caring for her since her original 1976 admission date despite his now being semi-retired.

"We truly provide person-centered care here," Robinson observed. "Whether it's Patty or others – we care about them like we would our own family. Seeing them happy, involved and content is so gratifying, not just to me, but to everyone who works here. Patty brings us all a lot of joy."

lightweight, loose-fitting clothes and a wide-brimmed hat.

During extreme heat in the mid-day hours, seniors should stay indoors between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. when the temperatures tend to be hotter. Seniors should avoid exercise and strenuous activity, particularly outdoors when temperatures are on the rise.

If a senior's home isn't air-conditioned, they should seek out a public place with air conditioning during times of extreme heat, such as a mall or cooling shelter. Most police stations and fire stations serve as emergency cooling shelters.

Meet the woman behind Chicago's ghost bikes

KATHERINE BRADEN
Medill Reports

You've seen them. Leaning against a street-light, they seem to almost glow, plastic flowers hung around their painted white frames. A small plaque with a stark name serves as a haunting reminder.

There are 30 ghost bikes in and surrounding Cook County, but the bikes aren't unique to Chicago. Originating in St. Louis in the early 2000's, the bikes have become an international symbol, a memorial constructed after a cyclist's death by a motorist.

What is unique is the support system Kristen Green, 30, provides local families of the bereaved.

For Green, who started Ghost Bikes Chicago in 2016, it became personal when Blaine Klingenberg, Green's close friend, was struck and killed by a bus in the West Loop.

Green has known others cyclists who have died. But after Klingenberg, Green decided to take action.

"When he went down, my heart went too. I realized I needed to do something," Green said.

Previously, ghost bikes in Chicago were set up occasionally by friends or family. Now, as soon as a Chicago cyclist is killed, Green starts work on a ghost bike immediately.

Local bike shops like Working Bikes and West Town Bikes donate used parts. It takes just a few weeks for Green, with the help of local volunteers, to paint, decorate and install the bike.

She also reaches out to family, helping them find a lawyer, navigate police and deal with grief.

"The families are so grateful," Green said. "If it were not for me and Ghost Bikes Chicago, a lot of these families would be left to deal with this alone."

Green says the hardest part is being strong for the families. She said she cries after every death.

Summer of 2016, Green and Yasmeen Schuller, executive director of Chicago's online cyclists' community thechainlink.org, painted two bikes at once.

"I've done nothing but fight an uphill battle," Green said. In 2016, eight cyclists were killed by motorists. Last year, the death toll became four after Chicagoan Lisa Shaulk, 50, was struck and killed Nov. 1 by a motorist near Midway Airport. The installation of her ghost bike and memorial service was held by Green on Nov. 19.

"[Ghost bikes] give us a sense of gravity and ask us to do better," said cyclist Teresa Maze, who commutes 100 miles to work every week on her bike.

Maze just filled out her accidental death and dismemberment insurance form.

"Me being hit and killed by a car seems like the most likely cause of death right now," Maze said.

Cars regularly try to run Maze off the street, she said. Sometimes drivers stop and threaten her if they feel she is in the way.

"None of the cars believe we Wet, warm weather may bring mold into your home

Chicago has been experiencing a warm, wet moist summer with all the rain and humidity it has received so far this year, and that creates a perfect breeding ground for mold.

Yes, high mold counts are creating dangerous air quality levels in the Chicago area.

The warmer temperatures and heavy humidity of summer have some local families blasting air conditioning in their homes for relief. The problem—when we pump cold air through our home's ducts—combined with warm, humid air on the outside—is that we create condensation and moisture that can lead to mold.

So what can you do to keep your home cool while at the same time fight off moisture and mold that can make you and your family sick?

Some mold experts have created a moisture and mold battle plan and offer five tips to fight mold and humidity.

• Beware of your air. Run air conditioning systems from May through the end of October and keep the fan setting on "Auto." Leaving the fan setting on "On" runs the system continuously and can cause moisture condensed on the air conditioner coil to be blown back into the home.

• Rein in rain. Add gutters to the roof of your house or condo and downspouts at the base to redirect rainwater away from the house's foundation.

• If your house has a crawlspace, make sure the floor has a vapor barrier, which is a plastic covering that lays on top of the dirt surface. This prevents moisture from the dirt floor from evaporating and seeping through into the air beneath the home. This also protects against problems caused by excess moisture like mold, odors, insects and wood rot.

• Cover your crawlspace. Crawlspaces can be encapsulated by sealing the walls and floor with a thick, plastic wrapping and installing a dehumidifier to set the appropriate humidity levels. The relative humidity in a house should not exceed 50%.

In many cases you can see or smell mold as it forms. It is most often green or black in color and has a "musty" or "earthy" smell, somewhat like the forest floor deep in the woods.

Stachybotrys is a greenish-black, slimy mold found only on cellulose products (such as wood or paper) that have remained wet for several days or more. Stachybotrys does not grow on concrete, linoleum or tile. According to the City still not dealing with issue of lead in drinking water

During [last week's City] Council meeting, the mayor and aldermen submitted changes to the affordable housing initiatives in Chicago. The City also moved forward on borrowing $900 million more in water and sewer bonds to continue work on existing infrastructure.

For several year now, some of the aldermen have pushed for short and long term solutions to the burgeoning problem with brain killing lead in our water system. While we have been unable to get the Emanuel Administration to allow for a public hearing on the issue, new information has come to light about the extent of the problem in our child care facilities, schools, homes and parks. In fact the Chicago Park District may shut down half of its outdoor drinking fountains this Summer in a move aimed at protecting the public from lead exposure, officials say.

None of the new water/sewer bond funds go toward addressing the problem. Chicagoans need a publicly backed and publicly available long term plan devised to deal with the issue of lead in the drinking water.

Keep libraries open longer

I congratulate Alexi Giannoulis on his appointment to the Chicago Public Library Board, and I wish him the best in his effort to keep the Chicago Public Library [CPL] relevant. The branches of the CPL are already relevant to its many users. They include students seeking help with their homework, for some, their branch libraries are the only on-ramps to the Information Superhighway, and the rest are looking for books, magazines, and even newspapers to keep informed.

One way to keep the city's library relevant would be to restore the funding needed to keep branch libraries open longer so that people do not have to wait to get into their libraries at 12 noon on those days branch libraries have the 12 to 8 schedule or when they have to leave at 6 p.m. on the days that libraries have the 10 to 6 schedule.

The branch library hours were reduced in 2010, as a result of budget cuts. However, the state has recently restored its contribution to all libraries in Illinois, but the CPL still runs its branches on a reduced schedule and 48 hours a week is not enough. Branch libraries could be more relevant if they can return to their original 64 hours a week. The residents in nearby suburbs do not have to wait to get into or leave early from their libraries.

Our branch libraries are already relevant to many Chicagoans, but it is not meeting the needs of our city. The city's Inspector General reported that the CPL could do more to meet the needs of every neighborhood in this city. I urge the Board to visit several branch libraries to see that they are already heavily used and find ways to make our neighborhood learning resource centers more vibrant and better able to serve Chicagoans

Ex-bookkeeper can't press retaliation claims vs Hellenic Museum because he never told cops about financial practices

The former vice president of finance and operations for the National Hellenic Museum has lost, for now, his attempt to sue the museum for allegedly wrongfully terminating him, after he claims he brought to light financial improprieties at the museum and a museum staff member claimed he stalked her.

BY DM HERRA
Cook County Record

The former vice president of finance and operations for the National Hellenic Museum in Chicago has lost, for now, his attempt to sue the museum for allegedly wrongfully terminating him, after he claims he brought to light financial improprieties at the museum and a museum staff member claimed he stalked her.

U.S. Judge Robert M. Dow Jr. dismissed the complaint brought by plaintiff John Gerba. But the federal judge also left the door open for Gerba to amend his complaint and correct "pleading deficiencies," which the judge said "may have been ... mere oversight[s] ... easily corrected."

Gerba sued the museum for violating the Illinois Whistleblower Act, retaliatory discharge and defamation. According to Gerba, his employment came to abrupt end after he had brought to light questionable accounting practices at the museum and told his superiors he was uncomfortable using restricted funds for general purposes. After his termination, a member of the museum staff filed for a restraining order accusing him of stalking her. Though the restraining order was never granted, he claimed museum staff were told there was an active restrain-ing order against him and they should call police if they saw him on the premises.

Shortly after Gerba began working for the museum in May 2016, he said interim president Pat Nichols asked him to provide an inventory showing the museum had used grant funds from the Illinois Department of Natural Resources to install information kiosks. The kiosks had not been installed and Gerba said he could find no inventory. He said he suggested several ways to install the kiosks and emphasized that the project needed to be completed. He also said the museum never accounted for how it had spent the grant money.

Shortly thereafter, Gerba said, he noted the museum had dipped into a donor fund intended to purchase benches inscribed with donor names and instead spent tens of thousands of dollars from that fund to cover general museum expenses. He said he was also instructed by his superiors to use a donation earmarked for educational purposes to cover payroll.

After months of bringing concerns to his superiors regarding the way the museum was managing and reporting its finances, Gerba said he was terminated, without any warnings or disciplinary action.

Gerba claimed the museum violated the whistleblower act and improperly retaliated against him by firing him just weeks after he complained about the accounting activities. He claimed defamation because of the announcement to museum staff that there was a restraining order against him for stalking.

Gerba voluntarily conceded the whistleblower charge because he never reported the accounting activity to law enforcement. The museum claimed the standard for retaliatory discharge was not met because Gerba's firing was related to the governance of a private entity. Because Gerba's complaint did not demonstrate he had reported suspicions of criminal conduct, Dow agreed.

"These pleadings suggest that plaintiff was allegedly 'fired over a disputed company policy' about how funds should be used and accounted for, rather than for reporting a suspected violation of law," the judge wrote. "But this is a close call, and plaintiff is given leave to file an amended complaint ... specifying what suspected 'unlawful activities' he reported to defendant."

The court also found that Gerba's claim of defamation was insufficient because the only false statement he alleges involved the alleged active restraining order against him.

"Stating that there is a restraining order against plaintiff is not the same thing as stating that he committed an underlying criminal offense," the judge wrote. "Plaintiff does not allege that [the] statement that he engaged in stalking was false. Without this information, the complaint fails to allege that the defendant made a false statement."

Dow gave Gerba until July 20 to file a first amended complaint.

LINCOLN from p. 8

rested Mullen and Hughes there on Nov. 17. They were tried the following May. Since grave robbing wasn't a crime, the worst the two could be charged with was petty theft, for trying to steal Lincoln's $75 coffin. They were convicted and sent to Joliet, the same penitentiary from which they had tried to spring their engraver, Benjamin Boyd.

After their arrest, Charles Conant, the acting secretary of the U.S. Treasury, asked Robert Lincoln to pay for an attorney to prosecute charges against the counterfeiters, and to pay Swegles and another witness a per-diem to make sure they stayed in the capital city until the trial. Lincoln agreed, but it appears he was stiffed. According to an article by Lincoln historian James Hickey in the Feb. 11-17, 1982, Illinois Times, despite Robert's many attempts to get his money back, there are no records that the feds ever paid it.

When initial reports of the attempted kidnapping were printed, many people, even detectives and other newspaper editors, thought it was a hoax. The crime was too sacrilegious to be believed.

Once verified, it was blamed on lots of people other than the real culprits. Some thought Democrats did it, others blamed it on vengeful former Confederates. In Illinois, Chicagoans thought it was a ruse planned by one of the detectives to help him win election for chief of police.

A few days after the attempted theft, Power and some of Lincoln's friends moved the president's coffin to the tomb's earthen floored basement, for its safety. It was moved several more times until 1901. Then, per Robert's request, it was buried 10 feet beneath the catacomb in an enclosure of concrete and steel.

Editor's Note: This article originally appeared in the July 3, 2016, edition of The (Springfield) State Journal-Register.

NEWSPAPERS from p. 5

March 1942, the governor asked Illinois newspapers to "impress the public ... that this is a war to finish."

After the war, the IPA fought for open government. It created a committee to investigate complaints of government inhibiting the media's access to news. It's an issue that remains today.

Newspapers have undergone drastic changes since the 1950s because of technology and competition. Insiders needlessly worried that the new invention called television would be papers' death knell. But the Watergate investigation that brought down President Richard Nixon in the 1970s fueled a new generation of reporters and readers.

The end of the 1990s and the early 2000s brought the internet and cellphones, which claimed

Some say print newspapers are doomed; others say their readership is greater than ever because of the internet. What's the future? No one knows, but so far the industry has survived every competitor that's come along.

MOLD from p. 13

U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, all molds should be treated the same with respect to potential health risks and removal.

Exposure to any mold could cause health effects under the right conditions.

Residents can use an antimicrobial mixture made up of household items such as hydrogen peroxide, vinegar or baking soda to kill or prevent the growth of mold. Spray the mixture onto the mold area and remove with a scrub brush or disposable rag while wearing protective covering such as face masks, gloves and shoe covers.

Mold grows quickly: It only takes 24-48 hours to grow and spread in wet, warm conditions. Excessive moisture behind walls (where many air condition ducts are), under floors, or in cabinets or closets are perfect breeding grounds for mold. This is mold that you often can't see or smell but it can make you and your family very sick.

Heavily damaged, porous materials (such a carpeting or drywall) that cannot be thoroughly dried and cleaned once they've been soaked should be discarded and replaced. Non-porous surfaces and porous materials that cannot be removed should be cleaned using a soap or detergent solution. Areas that have been cleaned also may be disinfected using a diluted bleach solution (no more than 1 cup of bleach per 1 gallon of water), but it is critical that all visible mold growth and soiling are cleaned off using a soap or detergent solution before applying a disinfectant. Bleach will be less effective if dirt and visible mold are not removed first.

A more effective treatment is the antimicrobial mixture made up of household items such as hydrogen peroxide, vinegar or baking soda.

Mold damage can cost as much as $10,000, and most insurance carriers will not cover the cost of mold removal. Symptoms of mold exposure include severe body aches, joint pain, nausea, chronic, sometimes serious respiratory issues. These symptoms can develop quickly, or over time.

People most at risk are the very young, the very old and people with compromised immune systems. Mold can be deadly among these groups of people.

For more information on mold and its remediation visit www.epa.gov/iaq/molds/moldguide.html or www.cdc.gov/mold/dampness_facts.htm.

Woman shot in Uptown by known offender

A 43-year-old woman was shot in an Uptown apartment Thursday evening by a man that she knows, police said. The exact relationship between the two was not released.

The woman called 911 shortly after 9 p.m. to report that she had been shot on the 9th floor of a high-rise in the 4900 block of N. Sheridan, according to an officer at the scene.

Police said the woman suffered a single gunshot wound to the chest. Crack pipes covered with blood were found in the apartment along with unused ammunition.

The suspect, possibly named "Ernest," is described as a black male who was wearing a black hat, blue jeans, and a black coat when he fled the scene, the woman said.

The victim was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center where she was reported to be in serious condition.

thing into an alley, police said.

The running man, Lavontay Bell, 23, was caught by police. On top of a fence in the alley, cops found a loaded handgun, a bag containing 18 small baggies of suspected crack, and a bag containing seven small baggies of suspected heroin, according to police records.

Lavontay Bell

Back at the patio where the 911 caller initially saw the man with the gun, cops found another bag that contained 25 small baggies of suspected cocaine.

Bell is charged with felony aggravated unlawful use of a loaded firearm and two felony counts of possession of a controlled substance. He was not charged in connection with the drugs found on the patio.

Police said Bell is a member of the Gangster Disciples street gang.

In 2012, Bell received six months probation for illegally possessing a handgun in the 3200 block of N. Clark near Boystown, according to court records.

14-year-old shot in Lower Wacker narcotics nest

A 14-year-old boy is in good condition after being shot in the knee on Lower Wacker Drive in the Loop the evening of June 29. No one is in custody, but police said the investigation is "progressing."

Police said the shooting took place just after 6 p.m. at 35 E. Lower Wacker Dr., an area frequented by homeless people that is rife with narcotics activity. The boy was seen "purchasing merchandise" on Lower Wacker when a man rode by on a Divvy bike and opened fire, according to police and witnesses. Three shell casings were found.

"The area is heavily surrounded with cameras," say police.

Police described the gunman as an older man with a gray beard who was wearing a red hat or red bandana, a gray shirt, jeans, and white shoes. He was last seen pedaling a Divvy bike eastbound on Lower Wacker, police said. Officers were unsure of the man's race.

Friends of the victim told police that they were certain that another person had been shot in the incident, but no other victims have been located. Officers were searching the catacombs of Lower Wacker Dr. to see if they could find any persons down.

The teen is in good condition at Lurie Children's Hospital.

A municipal staircase on the northwest corner of Upper Wacker and Wabash leads to an underworld populated by skyscraper loading docks, homeless people, and narcotics activity.

On Feb. 2, police officers tried to stop four-time convicted felon Shomari Legghette at the foot of the staircase to speak with him about an attempted shooting in the area. Legghette fled up the stairs and was later chased by 18th District Police Cmdr. Paul Bauer. Seconds later, Legghette shot Bauer to death outside the Thompson Center. Legghette is awaiting trial.

Police capture burglar

Police captured a would-be burglar inside a home in the 500 block of W. Hawthorne Place early June 28. The family that lives in the residence is on vacation, according to a neighbor. Officers arrived at the home around 4:20 a.m. and found the prowler still inside. He had apparently entered through a rear side door.

Arrest warrant issued for women at center of Post-Pride Parade video

An arrest warrant has been issued for a woman who was seen falling to the ground and shaking after a police officer intervened in a post-Pride Parade fight last Sunday. Videos of the incident have gone viral and Chicago's Civilian Office of Police Accountability is reviewing how police handled the case.

On June 28, Cook County Judge Marvin Luckman signed a warrant for the arrest of Breah K. Bedford, 18, of Calumet City to face battery charges, according to court records secured by this reporter. Police department paperwork that accompanies the warrant for Bedford's arrest lays out further detail about what allegedly led up to the fight seen on video.

The viral videos show Bedford inserting herself into a fight outside of Big City Tap, 1010 W. Belmont, around 9:30 p.m. June 24. She appears to strike a bar security officer, prompting a Chicago policeman to pull her away from the man. Bedford falls to the ground and her legs began shaking in the air while a bystander screams, "she's having a seizure."

The videos were recorded as police were in their fifth hour of trying to maintain order along Belmont Ave. where large, lingering crowds sparked a series of fights following the parade.

Simone Jones, 20, of Gary, IN, and Freddie Gordon, 21, of Indianapolis were arrested on the scene and have been charged with misdemeanors in connection with the fight. Bedford was not immediately charged because she was hospitalized, police said.

According to a police case report, police had ordered the owner of Big City Tap and neighboring 1000 Liquors to close his businesses for the night and to keep both establishments clear of loiterers. Around 9:30 p.m., the owner was instructing a group of people to get out of the doorway at Big City Tap when Bedford and Jones began arguing with him, the report said.

Jones began spitting on the owner, throwing food and drinks at him, and swinging bags, according to the report. When the owner and a security guard tried to detain Jones for police, Gordon began punching them and Bedford "utilized what appeared to be a white metal chain to strike all of the victims involved," an officer said in the report.

An officer "grabbed Bedford by her arms and pulled her away from the victims in order to stop the violence," according to the report. "Bedford fell to the ground and began showing signs of a seizure disorder and was actively seizing on the sidewalk," officers reported. She was admitted to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center in serious condition.

The police report says Bedford is 5'-tall and weighs 84 lbs. Gordon, Jones, and Bedford were all "suspected of using alcohol," according to the CPD report.

Gordon is charged with two counts of misdemeanor battery. Jones is charged with a single count of misdemeanor battery. Both were released on recognizance bonds last Monday.

Man arrested on Loop bus after driver summons cop

A CTA bus driver who had a man with a gun on his bus summoned help from police June 26 by making shooting gestures at passing patrol officers in the Loop.

Cops saw the driver making gun gestures and pointing behind him as the bus rolled through the 400 block of S. Michigan around 10 a.m. Officers boarded the bus and saw convicted felon Joseph Ryan, 39, sitting directly behind the driver, police said.

Ryan was pulled off the bus and cops listened to the driver's story: He said he was in the parking lot of a McDonalds on 79th Street when Ryan approached him, pulled a gun from a backpack and said, "you owe me $100. You're going to give me $100 or I'll blow your brains out."

The driver, 36, invited Ryan to "ride with me to sort it out."

Both men boarded the bus and the driver started heading toward the Loop.

Officers said they found Ryan in possession of an unloaded revolver with an 8" barrel.

Prosecutors charged Ryan with felony unlawful use of a weapon, misdemeanor reckless conduct, and misdemeanor possession of a firearm without a Firearm Owner ID card.

The driver refused to sign complaints against Ryan, but the state pursued the weapons charges and a CTA supervisor signed a complaint for reckless conduct, according to court papers.

Another Near North gun arrest

Just five days after a man was arrested with a handgun following gunfire in the 800 block of N. Cambridge, Chicago police on June 27 arrested another man with a gun on the same block.

Officers responding to a call of a man sitting with a gun shortly before 3 p.m. saw a man running from the scene and jumping a fence. A sergeant saw the man throw some-

Michigan Ave. NIKE store hit by shoplifting mob

A five-man shoplifting mob struck the flagship NIKE Store, 669 N. Michigan, the evening of June 27, police said. The crew reportedly entered the store shortly before 7 p.m. and then ran out with a collection of shoes minutes later. Three offenders fled westbound on Huron while the other two ran north on Michigan. Police broadcast descriptions of two suspects: One is a heavysset black male wearing a red shirt and jeans. The other is a black male who wore a black and white striped shirt.

Parolee charged with robbing Uptown Jewel store

A parolee has been charged with stealing cash registers and liquor from the Uptown Jewel-Osco store, 4355 N. Sheridan, police said.

Shortly after midnight on June 18, store workers reported that a man was stealing the coin dispensers from cash registers. Responding officers, armed with a description of the offender, stopped Taveon White, 20, in the 900 block of W. Agatite. The store manager identified White as the man who had stolen two coin dispensers, taken three register drawers off of their tracks, and smashed a glass liquor case to get a bottle of Jim Beam.

White is charged with one count of burglary. Bail is set at $20,000.

State records show that he was paroled in Sept. 2017, after serving half of a four-year sentenced he received for two residential burglaries. In 2013, he was sentenced to three years for armed robbery with a handgun.

Man facing attempted murder charges arrested twice in Lakeview East after charity bails him out

A man who is awaiting trial for attempted murder was arrested twice in Lakeview East this week—including once at the Center on Halsted. He had to be tazed one time, police said.

The man, who had been in jail for nearly a year after allegedly stabbing a man in North Center, went free because a city charity opted to post his bail last month, records show.

Emanuel Smith, 19, is accused of repeatedly stabbing a then-19-year-old acquaintance during a fight that spilled into the traffic lanes at 4200 N. Lincoln in June, 2017. Prosecutors charged him with attempted first-degree murder; aggravated battery with a deadly weapon; and aggravated battery causing great bodily harm.

With bail set at $50,000, he remained in jail until last month. That's when the Chicago Community Bond Fund put down $5,000 for him to go free, according to court records.

On Tuesday afternoon, Smith was arrested and charged with battering a 45-year-old employee of the Center on Halsted, the LGBTQ service agency at 3656 N. Halsted. While being charged with another crime is a violation of the terms of his attempted murder bail bond, he was released on a recognizance bond.

Then, around 4:40 p.m. June 28, Smith and Aaliyah Brown, 18, of West Town were arrested after they got into an altercation with a man in the 800 block of W. Sheridan Rd., police said.

A 22-year-old man told police that he was arguing with Smith and have a right to be there,” Maze said. “When I’m not out of the way they get aggressive, even if they’re just speeding past to get to a red light.”

Green agreed. “There are times where it feels like there’s a war on the street,” she said.

“A lot of drivers treat bike lanes as an extra lane or stopping zone,” Maze said, noting that Lyft and Uber drivers will sporadically pull over, causing her to swerve into traffic.

According to Jennie Ruff, rider operator for cycling courier service Cut Cats, their cyclists are hit by motorists at least twice a month. Ruff has been struck several times. A head-on collision with a truck left her comatose in the hospital for several days and off work for weeks.

Even though Chicago has added more than 100 miles of protected bike lanes in the past five years, it’s still not enough to keep cyclists safe. There are an estimated eight cycling casualties for every 10,000 cyclists in Chicago, according to the League of American Bicyclists.

“A lot of drivers treat bike lanes as an extra lane or stopping zone,” Maze said, noting that Lyft and Uber drivers will sporadically pull over, causing her to swerve into traffic.

“Bike lanes are a nice idea, but we need to push driver education,” Ruff said. “A lot of the drivers we encounter are not well-educated on where bikes can be, should be or are supposed to be.”

Since 2000, the number of bicycle commuters in Cook County has increased by 150%, according to the latest bicycle crash analysis from the City of Chicago.

After every death, Green arranges a memorial ceremony, gathering together family, friends and the community for a brief service as they set up the bike.

“[Chicago] is a really tight community for cycling,” said Anthony Cruz, shop manager at West Town Bikes.

Cruz attended a candlelight vigil for cyclist Anastasia Kondrasheva, 23, who was killed in 2016. “Hundreds of people were there... Whether they knew [the deceased] or not, cyclists got together to show love to people in the cycling community,” he said.

Green said it’s important to her that the community is given a place to mourn. Her ultimate goal? No more ghost bikes. To make that happen, cyclists are pushing for better driver education and calling for police to be more attentive and informed.

“A lot of the time, police officers will automatically assume cyclists are in the wrong,” Ruff said.

A constant source of frustration for Green and other Ghost Bike volunteers is the seemingly unjust rulings after a cyclist’s death. Since 2005, there have been 22 fatal crashes involving cyclists in Chicago. Only four of those drivers were charged with felonies.

For now, Green does what she can for the families and community.

“Ghost bikes are really important. They create awareness,” said Danni Limonez, project manager of West Town bikes. “The more awareness, the more people pay attention.”

The ghost bikes serve as a stark reminder for cyclists. They challenge motorists to remain aware, reminding them that an extra couple of seconds is not worth a human life.

“Cyclists are people. Treat us like people,” said Green. “Ultimately, I want to see [my friends] live. I don’t want to continue to watch as they die.”

The boy made “inappropriate contact” with the girl around 6 p.m., causing minor injuries, according to a CPD spokesperson. Prosecutors charged the boy as a juvenile with criminal sexual abuse.

Police said the girl was treated at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center. The pool was being used for a Chicago Park District program at the time of the incident, according to a spokesman for Chicago Public Schools. The park district did not respond to a request for comment.

half of an 18-month sentence for narcotics. He was sentenced to four years for possessing a stolen motor vehicle in 2015; three years for being a felon in possession of a weapon in 2012; and one year for aggravated unlawful use of a weapon in 2010, according to the Illinois Dept. of Corrections.

Man shot in Streeterville Sunday

A 40-year-old man suffered a grave wound to his arm in an early morning shooting Sunday along the Chicago River in Streeterville, police said. The man was near a Centennial Fountain, 400 N. McClurg, when an argument began and a man fired several shots around 5:15 a.m., according to police and witnesses.

A group of people was seen running west on N. Water St. while two cars sped away northbound, according to a witness. At sunrise, a blood trail could be seen stretching from the fountain to New Street along the same route taken by the group that was seen running away.

At least some of the shooting was captured on a Chicago Police Dept. pod camera.

The victim, who was taken to Rush Hospital by a friend, is in good condition, according to police.

stamps. RYH noted that public schools around the state have been subjected to numerous data breaches.

The Student Online Privacy Protection Act (SOPPA) which was passed last summer in the Illinois legislature was written “by and for the tech industry.” According to RYH, families and parents had no role in the bill, and parts of the bill weaken student protections, including loopholes for inappropriate commercial use of student data.

“The primary goal of HB1295 is transparency,” RYH stated. “SOPPA did not include transparency provisions. If this data is important enough to collect, then parents deserve at the very least to know what is being collected by whom; this is information that is currently nearly impossible for a parent to access. It is also critical that policymakers have a clear picture of the scope of the personally identifiable digital data that public schools are responsible for generating and securing.”

Parents are encouraged to contact their state legislators and ask them to sponsor the HB1295 bill that will provide some protections for student data privacy and security.

with the goal of saving time, life and property during an emergency incident or mob action.

Through the portal, the private sector is able to continuously update information regarding their organization, such as floor plans, security operations and critical contacts at their specific locations.

Business owners, tenants and members of a facility’s management teams are encouraged to enroll and become a CP3 partner. All users are also included in the CP3 Information Sharing Application which provides timely situational awareness and briefings on subject matters specific to the user’s area of information need and responsibility.

“This adds to the CPD network that continues to grow throughout the neighborhoods and communities of the city,” said CPD’s First Deputy Anthony Ricco at a press conference Friday.

These additional cameras are on top of 1,000 new cameras, and the upgrade of 3,800 existing cameras throughout the CTA transit system. Police say that since 2011 over 1,200 criminals have been arrested and charged thanks to security cameras. Of course the weak link in this plan is that the Cook County Courts and Sheriff’s Office quickly releases many of these criminals on low bonds and with lightly supervised electronic monitoring shortly after they’ve been arrested.

The City says this is all part of the “Safe and Secure” multi-million dollar project that they claim, once completed, will be one of the most comprehensive surveillance camera networks used by a transit agency.

“If you commit a criminal act on a CTA train, CTA station, CTA bus, you’re gonna be on video and that video is going to be crystal clear,” Riccio said.

When the upgrade is finished, there will be 1,000 new HD cameras throughout the CTA system and will upgrade more than 3,800 older-model cameras across the system.

The closure is related to bridge and viaduct painting which will continue for several weeks. Residents should be advised that work hours are from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

In case of weather delays, the crews may work on Monday, July 11 or Tuesday, July 12 between those same hours.

Westbound traffic should follow Van Buren to Franklin, to Madison, to Clinton and then return to Van Buren.

Columbus Dr. Bridge open again

Meanwhile the Columbus Dr. bridge has reopened to vehicular traffic and will no longer require daytime full closures.

Repairs to the Columbus Bridge sidewalk and roadway center breaks will continue through October.

The following traffic and pedestrian impacts are anticipated through mid-July: all southbound lanes of traffic will be open, one northbound lane of traffic will be open and the east sidewalk will be closed. The west sidewalk will remain open while bus routes will be maintained and will not be re-routed.
