ATTACKS ON SYNAGOGUES, MURDERS, RAPES, the Charlie Hebdo massacres and deaths at a

Old Town neighbors living around 159 W. Burton Place are fighting to keep this property from also being demolished by Castlerock Properties as the developer could tear down an orange-rated Lincoln Park property this week. In Old Town, residents nearby to the Burton Place property don't want to see the same thing happen to them.

BY FELICIA DECHTER

A local developer is causing quite a stir for his plans to demolish a historic, Old Town property at 159 W. Burton Pl. And by the time you read this, that same developer, Sebastian Barsh, CEO of Castlerock Properties, could have also demolished an orange-rated, historically-significant property in Lincoln Park. If the Fremont property is not gone yet, its demise is coming soon.

Castlerock Properties has Old Town neighbors up in arms over the mere thought of the demolition of 159 W. Burton Pl., which will destroy not only the historic character of the block, but could also cause irreparable damage to neighboring Edgar Miller and Andrew Rebori-attributed buildings. They're not so far-fetched in their thinking, because about five years ago, Gold Coasters were devastated when a circa-1891 carriage home at 25 E. Cedar St. -- where Frank Lloyd Wright had once lived -- was destroyed when the home next door was razed. The carriage house suffered irreparable damage and had to be demolished. Its owners were devastated.

"The city has been contacted and we are trying to obtain an Temporary Restraining Order to prevent demolition," said Robin Sladen, who has lived directly across the street from 159 for 17 years. "Our alderman, Walter Burnett [27th], came to a neighbors meeting, but he didn't seem to grasp the situation at all. Sebastian Barsh was also contacted.

"To tear out 159 W. Burton and replace it with cheap, cookie-cutter condos would be a massive disservice to Chicago's architectural heritage, and would permanently scar the block, which has remained virtually untouched since the 1940s, in spite of massive gentrification in Old Town going back to the 1980s."

"The building is worth saving because it is a piece of Old Chicago, which is rapidly disappearing," said Sladen. "Our block is one of the few in the city made up entirely of turn of the century buildings. The artistic buildings of Edgar Miller and his contempo-

Will 2016 see the first downtown Pride Parade?

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Ald. Tom Tunney (44th) said last week he's sill weighing the future of the Pride Parade in Lakeview and expects to be making his recommendation "sometime in the next month or so."

"It will still be up to the Mayor's office and the local aldermen involved where the location will be next year," Ald. Tunney told Inside last week.

Some city officials had come to consider the parade and after-party mayhem to be a "public safety issue" that needs to be addressed. Primarily that would mean possibly moving the parade to a downtown location.

The Feds may have some impute as well. The Dept. of Homeland Security sees events like the parade as a 'soft target' for terrorists - not unlike the crowd that gathered for the 2013 Boston Marathon when two pressure cooker bombs were exploded at the finish line. The concern is that the hundreds of thousands of people packed tightly on Lakeview streets may prove an irresistible target for evil doers.

The concerns voiced at an earlier meeting of the city agencies about the parade itself, but what happens throughout the entire day and night," not just when the parade itself wraps up.

Ald. Tunney added, however, that "my gut reaction is it went better than expected. During the parade, the drinking was lot less than previous years."

One of the many brawls that broke out following the 2015 Pride Pa-

Neighbors and police have complained for the last few years about the large amount of open alcohol and drug use that goes on during the parade. Indeed seeing parade attendees bring coolers full of beer and cocktails was a com-until recently. Citing the city departments' "parade recap," Ald. Tunney noted in his ward newsletter that while the parade lasted an hour and a half longer than the previous year's parade and two hours longer than in 2013, the delay was partly because of "unanticipated protests" (by a radical "Black Lives Matter" die in that blocked traffic near Addison and Halsted St., and a "queer" group demanding the abolition of jails and psych wards, among other things.)

According to the official reports, 52 parade related arrests were made, 206 cars were towed and there were 60 ambulance runs. Of course, arrests only count the number of crimes in which an offender was taken into custody and in no way represents the true number of crimes that may have actually occurred during and after the parade.

Ald. Tunney added in his report of the city officials' meeting that "it was noted there was a significant decrease in the number of open liquor containers along the parade route, which was attributed to a greater security presence

Appellate panel: City justified in denying Walmart River North liquor license over crime fears

Walmart's hopes to get a Chicago liquor license for its River North Walmart Express store suffered a major setback last week as a state appellate panel said the city was justified in denying the license over concerns allowing the retailer to sell alcohol could contribute to increased crime in the area.

At issue is a package goods liquor license for the Walmart store at 225 W. Chicago Ave.

The city's Local Liquor Control Commission initially denied the license. The License Appeal Commission upheld the denial, but a circuit court reversed that deci-

On July 17, the Illinois First District Appellate Court vacated the judge's reversal, meaning the License Appeal Commission's denial stands. Gregory Steadman, a liquor commission member, wrote a Nov. 14, 2011, letter denying Walmart's application based on a city code provision the liquor commissioner can reject "an application ... if the issuance of such license would tend to create a law enforcement problem."

During Walmart's appeal to the License Appeal Commission, Ald. Brendan Reilly, whose 42nd Ward includes the store, testified about the store's proximity to two methadone clinics and a YMCA single-room-occupancy residential facility. Further, Ken Angarone, a 31-year veteran Chicago police officer who has commanded within that police district for two years, testified "the Chicago Police Dept. regularly deals with incidents involving robbery, public urination, panhandling and loitering in the area near the Walmart." Angarone further said the threeblock stretch where the store sits "drains an inordinate amount of police resources when compared to the entire 18th Police District and that it is 'entirely possible' that the situation would only get worse if a liquor license were issued for the Walmart." From Jan. 1 to Sept. 2, 2011, documents indicate there were 374 police service calls in the immediate area that resulted in 270 documented incidents and 16 arrests - none of which involved a crime related to alcohol.

Angarone raised no issue with Walmart's business practices. On Oct. 19, 2012, the License Appeal Commission formally upheld the license denial, finding the city had established the potential of a law enforcement problem. Walmart requested a rehearing and cited a 2009 case, Vino Fino Liquors v. License Appeal Commission, which the retailer said established raries are an added bonus and what make the block so significant and unusual. This makes for a cohesive design."

Additionally, 159 W. Burton Pl. helps to tell a story of the evolution of the street, from it's initial fine quality construction, to how the various artisans and architects re-thought the buildings, said Ward Miller, executive director of Preservation Chicago.

"Its fine features, brickwork and gardens, in addition to its containing walls have been interwoven into the various courtyard gardens and overall composition of the street of artistic handmade houses, which exhibit influxes of the Art Deco-Art Moderne movement. in addition to the Arts & Crafts Movement and Folk Art instilled in each of the Edgar Miller-Sol Kagen buildings," said Miller.

Neighbors have started a Web site and online petition at www. sos-saveourstory.org. As of last Friday's deadline, there were 835 signatures.

Look out below! Or next door, as the case may be here

Zac Bleicher, director of the Edgar Miller Legacy, said that as much as he is concerned about the aesthetics of the block, perhaps more troubling is the prospect of collateral damage done to Carl Street Studios during demolition and new construction next door. Nothing on that block has changed in almost 75 years, so heavy vibrations, earth moving, foundational adjustments, etc., could prove devastating, Bleicher said.

"The developer assures us he will take precautions, but you know how that goes," said Bleicher. "Once the damage is done, it could mean serious harm to Carl Street and the investments of time, decades, and money, hundreds of thousands of dollars, in careful restoration by the owners there.'

Bleicher has a good, valid argument there. Again, I point to the complete devastation on Cedar St.

Barsh did not respond to a request for comment. Neither did Ald. Burnett, whose ward encompasses Burton Pl.

Who was Edgar Miller?

Edgar Miller was the lead artist on the Carl Street Studios project from 1927 to 1936. While Sol Kogen is generally regarded as the instigator and contractor, it was Miller who designed the architecture, installed hundreds of artistic details including mosaics, frescoes, woodcarvings, and stained glass, among other elements, and it was Miller who taught subsequent artists on the artistic crafts he so beautifully employed, said Bleicher. Miller went on to remodel three more complexes in Old Town and Lincoln Park, all of which still stand to-two on the block facing demolition. This particular property could be coming down this week.

Miller wasn't just a rehabber and decorative artist -- he was one of the nation's fore-

in 1890, and has remained nearly untouched since that time, said Bleicher. Most of Burton Pl. (originally Carl Street) was dotted with these stately Victorian homes, but the neighborhood fell into decline in the 1910s and 1920s. This is when enterprising artist and developer Kogen had a "bright idea" to buy one of the old mansions at 155 Carl Street and enlist his friend Miller in the project to repurpose them into modern dwellings intended for artists to live and work, said Bleicher. As the first project was most stained glass designers; he did dozens of murals in Chicago and elsewhere for restaurants, night clubs, department stores, and office lobbies and he sculpted statuary for public buildings including the monumental tomb of Chicago Tribune publisher Robert McCormick, said Bleicher. Miller pioneered the use of graphic art in advertising and magazine design from the 1920s to1940s; and he was a jurist for the WPA public art program, for which Chicago was one of the leading recipients of funding.

"Miller was an artist the likes of which we rarely see, and yet he has been so easily forgotten by history," said Bleicher. "We hope this will change and that the people of Chicago will take more pride in his story and life's work."

The Burton property is a Victorian built such a success, artists and craftsmen began to do the same to other old homes on the block, until the 1940s.

"So this block, unlike any block in Chicago and even the U.S., tells a story of the city's development from the 1880s/1890s through the modern movement of the 1920s/1930s, with a few buildings, like 159 W. Burton, telling the 'before' part of the story, juxtaposed with the 'after' part of the story told through the extant artistic rehabs, said Bleicher. "To tear out 159 W. Burton and replace it with cheap, cookiecutter condos would be a massive disservice to Chicago's architectural heritage, and would permanently scar the block, which has remained virtually untouched since the 1940s, in spite of massive gentrification in Old Town going back to the 1980s."

Unfortunately, the Burton property is coded yellow on the city's Historic Resources Survey, meaning there was no automatic 90-day demolition review process. "This we believe was an oversight, since the building is part of the Burton Place Historic District listed on the National Historic Register," said Bleicher.

The property's architectural elements indicate a Sullivan-esque influence, or even predate some of his architectural ideas which led to modern architecture, said Ble> icher. Strong vertical lines shoot up from the side of the building, which is odd for a building of its age, said Bleicher. It has "fabulous" artistic flourishes on its façade and also its red bricks are distinct and lend the building a stateliness which the neighboring artistic rehabs sometimes

"Needless to say, no one is building homes like this anymore," said Bleicher.

Another one bites the dust in Lincoln Park... actually, make that two

Besides the Burton Pl. property, Castlerock's Barsh also owns the orange-rated, circa 1880-1889, Queen Anne two-flat at 2221 N. Fremont St., which could be demolished this week, said Ald. Michele Smith [43rd]. A demolition permit was issued on July 20, and don't be surprised of by the time you read this, that beautiful property is gone.

"Obviously we are most concerned with the developments on Burton Pl., but we are alarmed that this developer is being so brazenly disrespectful of the historic nature of our neighborhoods in both Old Town and Lincoln Park," said Bleich-

An additional orange-rated, circa 1890-1899, "very intact," Queen Anne threeflat at 2226 N. Fremont St., not owned by Barsh, is also slated for demolition, Ald. Smith said. However, no demolition permit had been issued as of last week, according to Ald. Smith, who said she didn't know who the owner of that property is.

Both demos are occurring in the Sheffield neighborhood in Lincoln Park, where Ald. Smith said she met with neighbors on June 22 to discuss possible landmarking. There was not a majority of support to landmark them -- the whole block would have been

Thousands of Chicago property owners worried about tax exemptions ... and with good reason

members of the embattled Illinois Legislature are fighting with Gov. Bruce Rauner over the state's pension problems and inflated budget, there are other issues in the world of real estate that need attention.

Thousands of Chicago homeowners are worried because Cook County Assessor Joe Berrios has sent threatening letters to more than 20,000 law-abiding suburban homeowners warning them that they are being investigated for tax fraud regarding bogus homeowner exemptions.

The Assessor's Office now has an eight-man investigative Fraud Unit filled with seasoned ex-Chicago Police detectives who are actively looking for property tax cheaters. These are not mindless book-worm bureaucrats, friends and neighbors... these street wise ex-CPD detectives have seen everything.

Got a neighbor who doesn't like you? The Assessor's Office now has a whistleblowers link on their website so - in effect - the entire county has been deputized to search down tax cheats.

And no, it's not just the past due taxes you'll have to pay... there is a 50% penalty and interest charges added on too.

The homeowner's exemption can save hundreds of dollars in real estate taxes for every Cook County homeowner who resides in his or her own home. For example, the exemption for a typical North Side single-family home on the 2014 property tax bill amounted to a $478 tax cut.

The assessor's office says the mass mailing was necessary to claw back millions of dollars from tax cheats who unfairly claim homeowner's exemptions on properties in which they do not reside -i.e., rental properties -- or for folks taking a Senior Exemption they're not qualified to take.

So if you inherited a home from your parents, or some other elderly person who was taking a Senior Exemption, and haven't notified the county that a senior citizen no longer owns the house, this would be a good time to get around to it. The records proving this inconsistency are pretty easy to find and cross check and believe it, they're now finding a lot of people who are getting property tax deductions that they do not deserve.

The County believes there is over $200 million in past due property taxes they can collect. They've already collected $20 million in the 18 months that the Fraud Unit has been in existence. If they find you first they're going to look at the last four years of tax records and file a lien on your home if you

However, an analysis of homeowners who received the threatening letters revealed the assessor simply targeted anyone who claimed an exemption on more than one parcel of real estate, including many homeowners who own a dwelling that sits on more than one lot, and therefore has more than one PIN, or property information number.

In other cases, the exemptions

The Home Front

were never applied for by new owners, but automatically came with the property when it was transferred.

Thousands of Chicago homeowners are worried because Cook County Assessor Joe Berrios has sent threatening letters to more than 20,000 law-abiding suburban homeowners warning them that they are being investigated for tax fraud regarding bogus homeowner exemptions.

> One real estate investor told this writer he purchased a small income property—a 4-flat—that formerly was owner occupied and carried a homestead exemption.

> The new investor owner did not reside in the property and he overlooked the exemption on his tax bill because his real estate lawyer did not alert him to the issue. This oversight does not mean he is guilty of tax fraud, the investor said, but the Assessors office will tell him that he is liable for the extra taxes going back four years plus the penalty and interest charges too.

"We found one guy who owned 20 buildings and he was taking [fraudulent] exemption on all of them," said Berrios. "We got him for $174,000 in past due property taxes."

This is why real estate investors are lobbying Gov. Rauner for the passage of Senate Bill 780, noted Michael J. Mini, executive vice president of the Chicagoland Apartment Assoc. (CAA), which represents more than 7,000 apartment professionals who own and manage over 160,000 rental units in the Chicago area.

"This legislation is needed because of a situation that often occurs when residential property is transferred," Mini said. "Previously granted homestead exemptions may not be removed and exemptions for which the property no longer qualifies may remain on the property."

The CAA said Senate Bill 780 addresses this situation by requiring the new owner to apply or reapply for any homestead exemptions for which the property may be eligible.

To ensure that new homeowners receive all exemptions for which their property qualifies, the bill requires an assessor to mail information to the new owner regarding the rules and filing periods for applying and/or reapplying for exemptions.

If the new owner does not apply or reapply for exemptions, or the property no longer qualifies for an existing exemption, the legislation requires the assessor to cancel the exemption for any ensuing assessment year.

"While this legislation generally does not apply to large multifamily apartment buildings, it would help those who own and manage singlefamily rental properties and inherit past improper homestead exemptions to have them removed from the property tax records," Mini noted.

Another nagging legal issue for landlords is the state law that requires them to pay interest on rental apartment security deposits.

It's not that landlords are refusing to pay the interest. With interest rates so low, the required annual interest payments are so low that the process has become an accounting headache. (The current security deposit interest rate for 2015 is only 0.01%.)

This is why real estate investors and the CAA are lobbying the governor for the passage of House Bill 1319, said Mini.

House Bill 1319 amends the Security Deposit Interest Act by modifying the requirement that a lessor (landlord) pay accumulated interest to a resident within 30 days after the end of each 12month rental period. The bill limits the requirement to pay interest on security deposits to that which has accumulated in an amount of $5 or

"With interest rates at historic lows, the $5 threshold makes common sense and will provide administrative relief associated with the handling of a negligible amount of security deposit interest," explained Mini.

landmarked, she said.

"We are always happy to assist property owners in maintaining the neighborhood's character,' said Ald. Smith. "Landmarking is a community-driven and community led process. If the neighbors want it, we will assist. It's totally community led."

Fremont St. is a beautiful representation of the Lincoln Park and Sheffield District and the loss of the two properties will impact the look and feel of the street, said Ward Miller. He said the Chicago Historic Resources Survey found about 15 orange-rated buildings on just this one block.

"It's terribly ironic that two orange-rated buildings would be lost to demolition, when the immense appeal of the street is its Victorian character, which is often under threat by developers looking to appeal to a new market of homeowners that are buying new homes, built in historic districts,' said Miller. "This so undermines the historic character and the exact attractions to the communities and various streets."

Too many properties are under threat and many have been demolished in the Sheffield Neighborhood of Lincoln Park and it is impacting the character of the community, said Miller. The Fremont properties should be preserved, retained and restored or renovated, he said.

"The facades are fine quality and could easily be restored, with amenities as necessary on the interiors of these buildings," said Miller. "The same is true with the building on Burton Pl."

"The city's professional staff at the Historic Preservation Division of the Dept. of Planning and Development also agrees that the buildings fit the criteria for Chicago Landmark Designation and in both instances, these should be considered for potential Chicago Landmark Designation," Miller. "Preservation Chicago fully supports that idea and has outreached to residents and owners to help to support those ideas."

Donorpath creates profits for the people

Company helps non-profits navigate troubled times

Although the concept of a "charitable organization" is thousands of years old, it may be surprising to learn that 90% of current non-profit organizations [NPO] were created since 1950. Today they have become the most rapidly growing types of organizations in the world, but many find themselves in financial trouble.

But now help is on the way from a new company called Donorpath, and it is offering its innovative strategy's to help NPO's navigate through these turbulent times.

Many NPO's now find themselves without practical solutions, and brace for deeper cuts or the elimination of funding altogether. Donorpath will directly assist embattled NPO's across Illinois to help themselves with a venture based alternative to public funding.

"Our sector is hurting," says Donorpath founder Brian Lauterbach. "Giving is going up, but non profits are going under and private foundations cannot bailout governments to bridge their deficits, cancelled contracts, and slow payments."

And for over a decade Illinois has in particularly been slow in paying grants and bills, having carried between $6-10 billion in unpaid bills in any given year.

Lauterbach is in the middle of a whirlwind tour of Illinois that he calls "The Fundraising Readiness Project," and he plans to visit 30 cities in 30 days to get his message out to many of the state's over 9,000 beleaguered associations.

"At the end of last year almost 80% of NPO's reported increased demand for their services, but did not have the resources to meet these demands," says Lauterbach.

"We want to provide a vital safety net to these company's and help guide them through these budget deficits and unpaid bills"

In early 2012 he was helping startups at 1871, Chicago's high tech proving ground for new business technology. He had previously worked for 16 years in the non-profit sector, first as a fundraiser, and later as a consultant. Together with Sean Knierim, then chief of staff to The MacArthur Foundation, he formed the prototype for Donorpath, and soon after created his virtual business with a visible fundraising team, that now operates out of a huge loft space in Bucktown.

In three years it has become a power-house tech based community that presents small and mid-sized NPO's with the type of superior fund raising tactics and ongoing coaching services that were traditionally unaffordable to them.

An organization creates a profile on Donorpaths' platform. It details their mission, their staffing, their budget, how they are raising money, and their fundraising goals.

It completes an online questionnaire that uses a "Match.com" style of algorithm and receives a choice of three experienced fundraising professionals chosen from over 150 top ranked consultants across the country. They then choose the one person that they feel is best suited to join them in their fund raising pursuit.

Donorpath then uses a company's existing software and securely syncs into their data base to gain pertinent information about accounting and fundraising, and then creates an easy to use personalized dashboard.

With that, a custom 12-month fundraising plan is created, and using a set of modules containing tools, templates, and tips, Brian Lauterbach brings his message of hope to the Heartland of Illinois' besieged non-profit organizations.

"Giving is going up, but non profits are going under and private foundations cannot bailout governments to bridge their deficits, cancelled contracts, and slow payments."

everyone rolls up their sleeves and starts to raise money.

"They are much more of a partner than a platform and we have all become good friends," says Michael Stark development director of The Holiday Heroes Foundation. "They have been a tremendous resource for us and we have seen our income grow over 100% in the past year."

The idea for Holiday Heroes started quietly about 10 years ago as two sisters found themselves spending a lot of time at Childrens' Memorial Hospital. One was ill and the other was her constant companion. They had the support of lots of family and friends, but began to notice that many other children were always alone even on their birthdays and holidays. The sisters came up with the idea to have a giant holiday party where everyone was invited and the template for Holiday Heroes was formed. To-day "Heroes" partners with hospitals, businesses, and celebrities to give hospitalized children a well needed dose of fun. Their mantra, "Always laugh when you can, its cheap medicine."

Meanwhile back in Quincy, IL, Brian Lauterback calls to report that Donorpath has signed up more than 500 non-profit organizations since he began his whirlwind road trip at the beginning of this month. "We must lock arms, think boldly, and act locally to achieve collective impact," he says. And with the response so far, and his company's techspertise, it looks like many struggling local non-profit organizations will be experiencing a bright and funded future.

Witness to accident brings bystander to question city's manpower shortages

Would he have lived if the ambulance had come sooner?

I heard the sickening thump of a car hitting something solid last Thursday then watched as people started toward the corner of Central and Cornelia. I got out of my car and stopped short. A middle aged man lay in the road.

I started toward him but a woman grabbed my arm and said not to touch him. The police had been called and he is dead. An older man said it was a hit and run and the guy fled. A younger man told me he was the one who hit him. He also said the man in the street was dead.

I started, again, into the street, and was told not to 'touch the dead guy.' I allowed someone should at least make sure he is really dead, and at least keep other drivers from hitting him. No one moved. Human compassion is a powerful motivator and I'd suggest that comforting a badly injured -- perhaps dead -- man is the human thing to do.

I leaned over the rumpled man and saw copious amounts of blood running from a head injury and a huge lump on his forehead. He had been knocked out of his shoes. He was breathing. I asked the woman to call 911 again and tell them the man was actually alive.

Cars slowed down to peer at the man. Some drivers made the sign of the cross. People on the sidewalk took pictures of him, no doubt many ending up moments later on some social media site.

I started directing traffic around the man – on both sides. Cars were stacked up for blocks. No police, no sirens. Ironically we were one block south of Resurrection Hospital. If the crowd had a means to get to the hospital without further injury to the man we could have carried him to the ER. In another era that would have happened.

Minutes passed. Way too many minutes. Nothing.

Now the people on the sidewalks started calling 911. They were told help was on the way. Nothing.

Minutes later, after frantically getting people around the body, a man stepped out to tell me to stop the cars – the fire ambulance was arriving. And the police.

Where were they? I recall reading an article about the shortage of police manpower due to the city's financial crisis, unmanned ambulances and slowed response times to 911 calls... people being put on a waiting list after calling 911. My mind raced... I have seen them sitting in forest preserves, at the Montrose dog beach and at several out of the way places in the city. Do they just sit there and wait for a call? Are they limited to where they can go?

I know certain ambulances can only provide basic services. They are haulers. They do not send a paramedic or Emergency Medical Tech. Others provide advanced life support services with a paramedic and more sophisticated equipment.

Commentary

Who do they send for a reportedly dead body?

The fireman loaded the gentleman onto a gurney. One of the men loading him noticed blood on his gloves and dropped his hand to wipe it off. The gurney tipped and the man almost rolled off. They corrected the lean and covered the victim's face before they loaded him into the ambulance. People took pictures with their phones and chatted with each other. The story was over.

But it wasn't.

The young man responsible for the crash came up to me. I told him to immediately tell the police what happened. Incorrect hit and run stories were already circulating. I also told him about a woman across the street who yelled to me she may have information about the guy 'who fled the scene' while I was directing traffic.

Two days later I saw a small item online about the unknown man who was hit in Portage Park. He died two hours after he was hit. At Advocate Illinois Masonic! Miles away from the accident site.

I understand there are different levels to hospital care. Advocate Illinois Masonic is a Level 1 trauma center. Much better suited to care for the man. Still makes no sense to me. Could he not have been stabilized across the street at Resurrection?

Would he have lived if someone had called 911 advising he was alive instead of dead? Would the ambulance have come faster? Would the gawkers have been more responsive?

Or was his fate sealed the moment he was hit? Only God knows. Life is fragile.

So many questions about something I have thought so little about ... until last week ...

Now it's on my mind constantly. What if the article read "(fill your name in here) killed in car accident?"

Would someone question the arrival times of the emergency vehicles? Or have input into which hospital you were taken to?

In a city like Chicago, where lives are lost tragically every single day, will this change anything?

I admire every first responder. I cannot thank them enough. It's not their fault they are short handed and have too few ambulances and people to man them. Or people to direct calls to them correctly.

How can we as a community change this?

Letters to the Editor

Whispers unethical campaign to maintain the Mariano Park concession continues

As a visitor to Mariano Park I got a copy of the letter you published last week given to me by an employee. This is a response to that letter:

1. The park was a real detriment to the neighborhood before Whispers?

What detriment. It was empty. Whispers simply added tables and chairs and began selling coffee for a profit. A good idea, but hardly the salvation of the neighborhood. Further more, Gibson's didn't come out of the woodwork. It has been a responsible member of the community for decades. They merely responded to the Chicago Park District (CPD) request for proposal and have offered to make significant improvements to the park at their expense; the park needs work.

2. Whispers maintains the park?

Only after getting a lease to do business there. Of course Whispers maintains their place of business. Who else should do it? Also note there are three more vendors applicants to the CPD request for proposals.

3. What proposal?

Whispers did not share their written proposal as did Gibson's and Alamode foods at the recent public meeting. A Whispers principal simply gave a speech without showing their written proposal as other vendors did.

4. Gibson's wanted to cut down on the open space and seating significantly?

From six-percent to eight-percent of the park [taken by the] kiosk space is hardly significant.

As for seating, Gibson's proposal actually provides more seating.

5. Whispers now proposes to fix the brick pavers.

Was this part of their initial bid? Whispers has never invested in the park infrastructure. They say the CPD would not allow it in the past. Okay, that said, in the recent request for proposals the CPD has asked for infrastructure improvements. Did the initial proposal submitted earlier this year by Whispers include any improvements, or are these merely words now in order to compete with the other proposals.

6. The letter brings up Bellevue... liquor... etc.

These are hot-button issues already settled that absolutely no liquor will be allowed. Yet they continue to bring them up to stir the public.

7. Gibson's has slick PR people? It is Whispers, not Gibson's that receives outside help.

8. Wealthy connected business interests?

The insinuation here is that something unethical is taking place. The campaign contribution by Gibson's to Ald. Brendan Reilly is over an eight year period and is not an unusual amount for a business of their size. Has Whispers contributed to Ald. Reilly as well?

Any vendor that will be awarded, including Gibsons, the park will be available to all the visitors to sit, relax, walk and enjoy. No purchase will be obliged. This is an open park to all.

If Whispers wins, the park loses.

Reader questions need for race in reporting

It disturbed me to read Tom Faber's letter to the editor (July 15-21) regarding inclusion of race in the crime blotter. His insinuation that the majority of crimes committed are by non-white people is offensive enough, but to take the newspaper itself to task for not including the information is galling.

Mr. Faber apparently objects to the exclusion of race only when black citizens are involved, as his only two examples involved African Americans. He even misuses the term "Afrocentric" to drive his point home. Perhaps he would benefit from a quick look at a dictionary and a long look in the mirror.

Rebecca Ray

The CPD will miss a great opportunity to upgrade the park if Whispers is awarded the concession.

the law enforcement problem clause could only be used if the applicant had a history of violating liquor laws or laws in general.

The Appeal Commission rejected that argument and on Feb. 11, 2013, affirmed its 2012 decision. Yet on May 22, 2014, the circuit court overturned that ruling, and found the city had not satisfied the law enforcement problems clause. The city appealed instantly.

The appellate court's July 17 unpublished order cited its own ruling from earlier this year in a similar dispute over a liquor license between the city and convenience store Move N Pick: "Simply put, denial of a liquor license on the basis that its issuance would tend to create a law enforcement problem is not restricted to circumstances in which the applicant has a prior history of disobeying liquor laws or the law in gen-

It also noted the circuit court ruled on the Walmart appeal months before the Move N Pick appellate decision. Further, it said the actual review was of the administrative agency, not the circuit. Finding sufficient evidence to support the commission's initial denial, primarily based on Aragone's testimony to the Appeal Commission, the appellate court effectively upheld that decision. Specifically, the city code "does not require a finding that the issuance of the license would contribute to an increase of crime before it could be denied. Nor does it require a finding that the issuance will lead to law enforcement problems. The ordinance only requires a finding that the issuance of the license would 'tend' to create a law enforcement problem."

Say 'bye-bye' to these kinds of friends after 50

s baby boomers, we have Acollected a lot of friends over the last 50 years.

Some of us still stay in touch with people we knew as children. Most of us have at least a few high school or college buddies. We have work friends and social acquaintances, poker buddies and professional contacts.

Did you ever think about the fact that many of our friendships are "accidental?"

For most of our lives, the people that we meet are defined by our social context at the time. As a result, as we reach our 50s, we often find ourselves with people in our lives that are actually causing us more harm than good.

So, what's the big deal? Isn't it a good thing to have as many friends as possible?

Maybe. But, then again, may-

In talking to the other members of our community, I am often amazed by the kinds of people that they put up with. Setting aside the extreme of physically abusive relationships, there are still plenty of people that we let into our lives that we should probably let go. In doing so, we will create space in our lives for people who would actually care about us and treat us with the love and respect we deserve.

Here are a few of the friend-

Abusive, toxic and just plain mean people

Ironically, sometimes people that treat us badly are the ones that we are attracted to the most. This is especially true for people who are suffering from a lack of self

Is there anyone in your life that just can't seem to say anything nice? Do you have a friend who is passive-aggressive to the point of being hurtful? Are any of your acquaintances just plain mean? If so, it might be time to start spending less time with them and more time exploring your passions and

Chronic complainers

Getting older affects everyone in slightly different ways. I know people in their 70s and 80s who are sky-diving, exploring the world, starting businesses and volunteering – all the while keeping a smile on their faces.

On the other hand, I have met more than my share of people who seem to be determined to see the negative in every situation. No matter how much money they have, how many opportunities land in their lap and how hard we try to cheer them up, they just can't help complaining.

Do you have any friends that make you feel like they hang out with you because of what you can do for them, not what you mean to them?

complaining is wrong all the time. Sometimes, we need a friendly shoulder to cry on when things get tough. But, is there anyone in your life who is a chronic complainer? Do you have any friends who bring you down every time you meet them? Maybe it's time to look for more positive people.

People who take, take, take

Relationships should be balanced. It's perfectly normal to ask for help from your friends from time to time. In fact, helping others is one of the best ways to increase your happiness and positivity after 50. But, that doesn't mean that it's your job to solve everyone else's problems.

Do you have any friends that make you feel like they hang out with you because of what you can do for them, not what you mean to them? Do you dread receiving calls from someone because you know that they always come with a request? You have the right to be respected as an equal with all of your friends.

Building meaningful friendships with people who share your piness after 50. But, that doesn't mean that all friends are created equal. Focusing on your true friends doesn't have to lead to drama. You don't need to confront or try to change anyone.

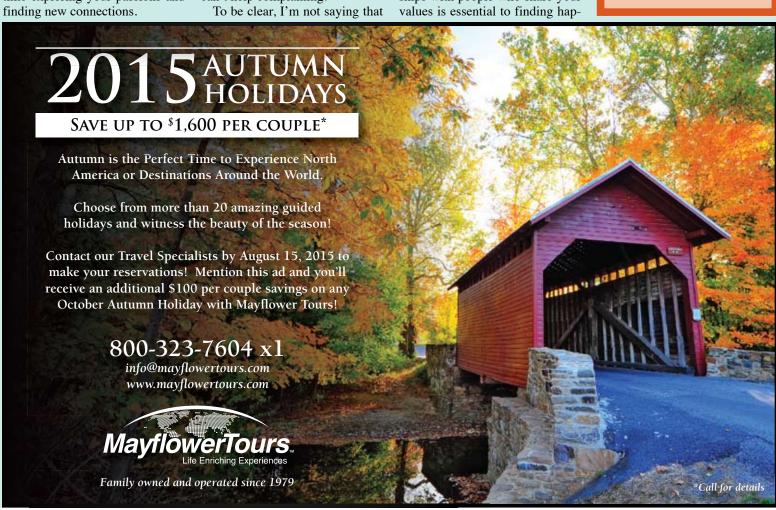

All you have to do is spend time with the people who truly respect and love you for who you are - and, if you don't have enough of these people in your life, it's time to explore your passions, build your life and find new friends.

Are you thinking too much to be happy?

Baby boomers have a lot on our minds.

We worry about our kids, so far away and yet so close to our hearts. We obsess about whether we have saved enough for retirement. We wonder whether we will be able to stay healthy and fit in the coming decades.

We worry about... well, pretty much everything actually. And that's the problem.

While most of us are worried about the future, far too few of us are actually doing something about it. Unfortunately, as Mary Schmich told the graduating class of 1999, "Worrying is as effective as trying to solve an algebra equation by chewing bubble gum."

So, what's the solution? If worrying won't solve our problems, what will?

Start by realizing that happiness is a verb

Have you ever noticed that the happiest people tend to be the ones that are most active? That's not a coincidence. These people aren't active because they are happy. They are happy because they are active.

The first step to finding lasting happiness is admitting to yourself that you are the one who is in control of your destiny. Happiness is not going to come to you. You cannot will your problems away. You have to take action.

Learn the art of turning your big worries into small actions

One of the most important skills to teach yourself, if you want to find lasting happiness, is how to turn your worries into actions

Most of us look for complex solutions to our biggest problems. Unfortunately, on a practical level, problems are almost never solved this way. There is seldom a "silver bullet" that will cure your financial problems, give you a rich and fulfilling social life or get you in the best shape of your life.

The alternative is to think big but act small. For example, let's say that you are worried about your weight. If you are like most people, your thoughts will probably bounce between regret ("How did I let this happen?"), self-pity ("I hate how I look") and big solutions ("I need to join a gym").

What's the alternative? Think big and act small. The moment that you start worrying about your weight, do something about it. If it's convenient, get up and stretch. If not, schedule time for a 20-minute walk later in the day. Do one minute of chair yoga. Do five sit-ups. Just do something.

What about big changes?

To be clear, I'm not saying that making big changes in your life isn't important. If you want to get in the best shape of your life, joining a gym or taking up a sport is a fantastic idea. I'm simply saying that small, positive actions are more likely to drive you to make big changes in your life than worries are.

Learning to turn your worries into small, positive actions is the first step. Then, as you gain confidence, you will naturally gravitate towards larger lifestyle changes. So, by all means, fantasize about weightlifting four times a week, but start by taking a relaxing walk around your neighborhood.

Author offers safety tips for women traveling solo

Perhaps more than ever, women are willing to ditch their traveling companions and go solo when it comes time to hit the road and see the world.

A survey by Small Luxury Hotels of the World, for example, revealed that between 2011 and 2012 there was a 53 percent increase in the demand for rooms by women traveling alone.

The London Daily Mail also reports that some hotels have taken steps to make accommodations more appealing to women traveling on their own, with such features as women-only floors.

Still, despite the trend, many women may worry that such solitary excursions carry too many risks from thieves, kidnappers and other criminals. One woman who has logged endless miles exploring the world and finding romance says her peers don't have to feel like targets.

"There is no reason to let your fears keep you from the adventures you can experience," veteran globetrotter Barbara Foster said. "Sure, there are risky places and bad types out there. But with the right precautions, women can travel solo with confidence, visiting the places and meeting the people they always dreamed of and returning home with wonderful stories and memories."

Foster, author of the book "The Confessions of a Librarian: A Memoir of Loves," speaks from experience: Her travels have taken her across the country and around the world, with stops in Istanbul, Bombay, Buenos Aires, Jerusalem and other locales. She says solo trips can be deeply rewarding for women, offering five tips for traveling boldly while staying safe.

- Steer clear of the most dangerous locales. Simply put, some places just aren't worth the risk, so avoid "no go" neighborhoods, cities and countries. For example, if you feel compelled to go to the Middle East, visit Israel, which is the safest Middle Eastern country. Still, if the destination is truly important to you, go ahead and take the risk. India can be dangerous Foster says she was nearly kidnapped there, saved only by the intervention of a librarian friend. At the same time, she says, the country offers a once-in-a-lifetime experience.
- Connect with friendly contacts. Make yourself known not only to the U.S. embassy or consul, but also to people in your field, Foster says. During her travels, Foster wrote articles about libraries she visited. Her fellow librarians were a protective group.

There is no reason to let your fears keep you from the adventures you can experience,

- Learn the language, or at least useful phrases. Even if it's just a few key words, speaking the language can come in handy if you need to seek assistance. Understanding what others are saying also can alert you to potential dangers.
- Dress wisely, pay attention to manners and spend money in moderation. Essentially, don't draw unnecessary attention to yourself. In her book, Foster recounts a visit to Istanbul during which she watched, horror-struck, as two Turkish men slapped a young British woman for wearing a miniskirt on the street. For added protection against thieves, Foster recommends carrying money and identification in a pouch under your shirt.
- Travel in the USA. You will miss many of the world's must-see places, but if the thought of traveling abroad holds too much stress for you, it might be better to stick closer to home. Foster says two of her favorite U.S. cities are New York and New Orleans both great places to explore.

Barbara Foster has worked as a college librarian and as an associate professor specializing in women's studies at the City University of New York. She has published numerous articles on education and travel, as well as more than 200 poems in literary journals under the name Belladonna.

Top ten ways to keep active in the city

BY MELISSA CUSICK Athletic Director at The Clare

When you live in an urban area, so many activities are available at your fingertips. And you can take advantage of them to increase your physical activity. Here are 10 ways to be fit in multiple wellness dimensions for seniors living in an urban area:

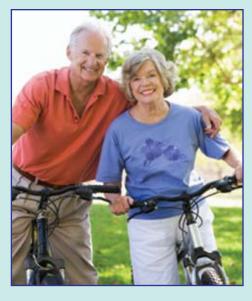

- Stop to smell the flowers by walking around a park or botanical garden. Research shows that green space and being outside can lower stress. I'm not saying you have to hug a tree in appreciation... unless you want to!
- Enjoy a cultural experience at a museum while racking up your steps. While you're exploring the city's many museums for art, science, history and much more, you not only get to exercise your mind, but also increase your steps to walk toward better health.

• Walk a pet. Use a cute pooch as your excuse to get out and about on a regular basis. Start slowly and increase your pace and/or distance over time.

- If you have access to a body of water, then try sailing, canoeing, or kayaking. These can be fun options to mix into your routine by getting out on the water. Don't forget to take pictures from that different point of view to show all of your friends!
- Take the stairs. Stairs are everywhere throughout the city. If this is a safe option for you, then challenge yourself with some stair routines. Walk them, every-other step them, do sidesteps...be creative!
- Explore the city's architecture and history. Whether it's on foot or on a bike, Chicago has so many learning and sightseeing opportunities that can help you get your exercise. If you don't own a bike, then try renting one!
- Participate in an organized race event. Many groups, clubs and neighborhood organizations host races of various lengths, causes and themes for you to participate in throughout the year. Select a race with a meaningful cause to you and train accordingly. This can also provide a target endgoal for your exercise regimen.
- Attend festivals or street markets. This will give you an opportunity to walk around and even pick up a few fresh treats while being social with a few hundred of your closest friends!
- Beat traffic by walking instead of driving. Given the accessibility of many locations, try walking to and from appointments and events such as grocery stores, hair appointments, doctor's appointments, dentists, and the theaters when appropriate. This is a healthy option that is also good for the environment.
- Try a Gentle Yoga or Tai Chi class! Both of these practices are beneficial to seniors since they are gentle on joints, promote range of motion and target on balance improvement. Some classes will even meet outside on nice days.

It's also important to keep in mind safety recommendations while you're exercising outdoors:

- Carry identification and telephone.
- Exercise with a partner and/or let people know where you're going and when you'll return.
- Don't wear valuable jewelry.
- Know your route.
- Keep your eyes and ears open and be aware of your surroundings.

• Be visible and consider reflective clothing and accessories.

It's important to stay active as you age. So stay safe and get moving!

Tips for eating well in retirement

You can't have healthy aging without healthy eating. Eating right in the autumn of life may help prevent heart disease, stroke and even some cancers – but that doesn't mean it has to be boring. Amy Klassman, the Registered Dietitian at The Clare, Chicago's premier retirement residence, recently shared her advice on getting the most from "power foods."

"These nutrient-packed foods," says Amy, "can help you maintain a healthy diet, and especially a healthy digestive system, without disappointing your taste buds."

--QUINOA: Quinoa is a fiber and protein-rich ancient grain that is a great gluten-free grain option that can be spiced up to accommodate any taste preference. Add it to some roasted red peppers and garlic for the perfect side dish, and your tongue and digestive system will thank you.

--CHIA SEED: Another power food that can be mixed into almost any dish is the chia seed. Chia seeds are perfect to sprinkle over yogurt, salad or to add to any smoothie. As a nutrient powerhouse, the chia seed is a great plant-based source for nutrients and may be beneficial for preventing osteoporosis.

--MACHTA TEA: Instead of turning to sugary drinks, try Matcha Tea as a healthier way to quench your thirst. This green tea powder not only tastes great, but may assist with immune function and may increase your concentration and energy.

It's never too late to start eating well for a longer, happier life.

Let this Autumn be yours to enjoy

Autumn is the perfect time to see the world! Mayflower Tours has been providing life enriching experiences since 1979 to destinations to witness the color palette of reds, oranges and yellows that Mother Nature paints across the landscape.

New England is always ablaze with color whether traveling the back roads of Vermont, along the Kancamagus Scenic Byway or enjoying a cruise on Lake Winnipesaukee on what has been called the "most beautiful cruise in New England." And of course, there is always that succulent lobster dinner feast to look forward to.

Right in our backyard you can see the beauty of the Midwest in Door County – complete with the Fish Boil Dinner and enjoy a cruise through the 22 Apostle Islands. Plus there are so many more incredible destinations in the USA and Canada – Michigan and fall harvest time, ride aboard the Algoma Central Railway through breathtaking Agawa Canyon or enjoy the aspens bursting with color in the Rocky Mountains.

There are destinations along the mighty rivers in Europe – sailing aboard exclusively chartered river ships along The Legendary Blue Danube or the Romantic Rhine and Mosel rivers. You'll see the castles, vine-yards and quaint towns enjoying the locals in ports of call you've only dreamed you'd experience.

Let this autumn be your autumn to enjoy the beauty of the season. And let Mayflower Tours show you these destinations...The Mayflower Way. www.mayflowertours.com.

Some simple ways to reduce stress and relax

It's no secret, we all live stress-filled lives. In fact, it's estimated that seventy-five percent to as high as ninety percent of all doctor's office visits are for stress-related ailments and complaints.

Stress is called the silent killer. It not only lowers our quality of life, but is also a leading contributor to heart disease. Pay attention baby boomers; as we get older, it's no exaggeration to say stress can literally kill you!

We all need to learn some simple steps to manage and reduce stress. Here are some suggestions.

- 1. Watch a funny movie or sitcom—one that makes you laugh out loud!
- 2. Listen to your favorite music through headphones while relaxing in a recliner. (Headphones and recliner are required.)
- 3. Watch a child sleep.
- 4. Watch a cat sleep.
- 5. Don't watch a fish sleep unless you're preparing it for dinner. By the way—cooking is a terrific form of stress relief! (Just get someone else to do the dishes.)
- 6. Take your dog for a walk.
- 7. Close your eyes and think of five things you are grateful to have in your life.
- 8. Write a nasty letter to the person causing you stress, and then tear it to shreds and while saying, "I forgive you!"
- 9. Read a verse from the Bible.
- 10. Make room for something new toss or recycle five things that are cluttering your life.
- 11. Take a 5-minute yoga break.
- 12. Do something you know you have to do—even if you don't want to. Just get it done and then bask in the glory of your accomplishment.
- 13. Write out a to-do list so you can quit stressing about forgetting what you need to
- 14. Spend a minute recalling what stressed you out the most one year ago, six months ago, last month—having trouble remembering? Hmmm, what's that say about the value of stress?
- 15. Be Present Now! Concentrate on only what you are doing right at this moment. Whether you're tying your shoes, washing a window, or driving a car—be present in the NOW! There is no past, there is no future, there is only now—shut out all the rest to de-stress.

Helping senior loved ones with downsizing

A lifetime of memories – and the possessions to prove it – is preserved in the homes of many senior loved ones. But the time eventually comes when seniors must downsize, and most people will need help and support during this difficult and emotionally trying process.

With our many years of experience helping seniors and their families with eligibility for Medicaid-sponsored, longterm care and nursing home placement, the downsizing dilemma is nothing new to us. We'd like share some tips on what to expect and how to deal with the situation.

How to know when it's time

It's usually time to consider downsizing for your loved one when the situation falls into one of the following scenarios:

• The amount of possessions has become too much for your loved ones to manage as their age advances. Large amounts of Most seniors know they need to downsize, but de-cluttering seems overwhelming.

possessions may be posing a hazard to their health, the quality of their life, or to the up-keep of their home. In some cases, years of hoarding may be taking their toll, and it's time to clear out items for both physical and mental health reasons.

• Your loved one needs to move into a smaller home. This may be a care facility, a senior living complex, or even a smaller home that is better suited to mobility limitations. The amount of items in the family home, accumulated over a lifetime, is too much to move into the new, smaller dwelling.

Start the conversation

Broaching the subject with your loved one is often the most difficult part of the entire process. Most seniors know they need to downsize, but de-cluttering seems overwhelming. It's not just the physical work of downsizing, but also the emotional stress of parting with a lifetime of memories. This can make your loved one defensive, or even angry, when you bring up the subject.

You can ease the conversation by having a plan. Be willing to help and be present throughout the entire process. Come up with a strategy for dealing with hard-to-part-with items. This could be as simple as donating mindfully to those that would appreciate the items most, or creating photo-documentation of the sentimental items that your loved one can keep in an album after the physical items have moved on.

Help with the downsizing process

The most important thing you can do during this difficult time is to be there for your loved one through every step of the process. Bring in trusted family members and friends, when possible, to help set your loved one's mind at ease. If you must bring in outside help, make sure you are there to help manage and monitor the process, and step in if you see your loved one becoming upset.

Get on top of out-of-control clutter

The process is made more difficult if the clutter is out-of-control. Begin by helping your loved one create an inventory of their items. This can be on paper, or you can work room-by-room and lay everything out so it's visible.

As you list items, separate them into categories – "keep," "donate" and "undecided." Get donations and trash items out of the house daily so they don't accumulate and lead to second guessing. On undecided items, you may need to take a hard line approach and insist that some things must leave. If your loved one is emotionally attached, find a compromise – such as passing the item on to another family member or adding it to the photo book.

Although this can be a difficult time, it shall pass. Your loved one will eventually feel better with fewer things, and it will be easier to tend to their evolving care and home requirements as they continue to age.

Chicago offers affordable options for beginner golfers

BY SCOTT GUTHRIE Medill News Service

Local golf courses reported less traffic Independence Day weekend than in years past, reflecting a national trend indicative of the game's decreasing popularity.

"We were [only] down about 20 rounds," said Tom Donovan, general manager at Robert A. Black golf course in West Ridge. "But it's nothing to scoff at."

Since 2011, an average of 137 courses have closed each year according to the Pellucid Corp., a company that tracks golf industry trends.

High costs and large time commitments are two key factors keeping people away from the course. An afternoon of golf can easily cost more than $50 and can consume upward of four hours.

That's a considerable investment for a difficult sport that can leave people perplexed and frustrated. But golf doesn't have to be expensive, time-consuming or disheartening.

Here are some suggestions:

Make a plan that works for you and commit to it. Golf is a lifetime sport. Professionals who have been playing their whole lives are still unsatisfied with parts of their game. It is a process. Don't try to tackle it all at once, but don't ignore practice either.

"I can count on one hand how many instructors have said their people practice too much," said McCartin.

Designate one or two days a week and set aside 15-30 minutes to go to the nearest driving range and work on your game [Diversey Driving Range is at 141 W. Diversey Pkwy.]. Consistency is key.

If you start feeling golf isn't for you, "remember what got you out there originally and keep that momentum and happy feeling when you go play," said Gay Crain, teaching instructor at Cantigny Golf in Wheaton.

Sticking with golf will be easier if you have a feasible objective in mind.

Make a goal to be able to play 18 holes by the end of the season. If you are ambitious, set a goal for a certain score you want to achieve.

Small goals can be effective also. Practice with one club until you are comfortable and then start working on another.

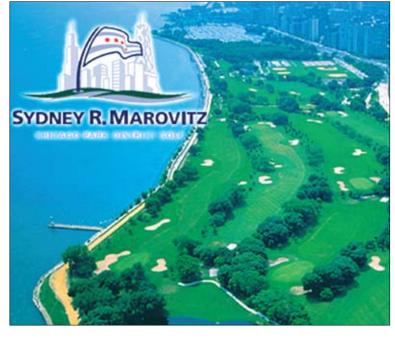

"I may have [a beginner] start with putting and then chipping and then move to 100 yards," Gay Crain. "Start from the green and work back."

Beginners are often lured to the expensive, flashy clubs the pros use. Clubs themselves won't make you a great golfer though.

Used clubs are a great, economic option, and several stores in Chicago sell them. It shouldn't be hard to find a full set for $100. Most golf shops also sell new, 10-club beginner sets.

"You can find a pretty decent one of those [beginner sets] for under $300," said McCartin. "I would rather have beginners do that and be able to play, than pay too much for clubs and not be able to afford to play or practice."

Don't worry about getting fitted. For a beginner, getting fitted for clubs is "overkill" according to Crain

Places to buy beginner sets or used clubs:

1. Proline Golf – 925 W. Chicago

Ave.
2. Play It Again Sports – 3939 N.

Ashland Ave.
3. Golfsmith – 2782 N. Clybourn

Group and individual lessons are available throughout Chicago. Getting a group of friends to share lessons can help split the costs and make the lessons more enjoyable, according to Crain.

"When learning a motor skill, it's very nice seeing other people doing the skill," said McCartin. "And when you do struggle a bit, it is really reassuring looking next to you and seeing someone else is struggling also."

Individual lessons work well for someone who has been playing a few years and has something specific he or she wants to work on, according to McCartin. Just make sure you are comfortable in the learning environment you select.

"People should learn confidence, it's a difficult game. It's going to be tough," said Scott Hogan, a Chicago-based swing coach.

Don't spend more time driving to and from the course than actually playing. This will make golf start to feel like a chore.

As a beginner, you don't need to play the best courses in the area. Instead, just find a nice course that allows you to work on your game. There are several public courses in the city that have affordable greens fees and are easy to get a tee time.

Also, look for twilight deals — late afternoon tee times — as they are often cheaper than morning or afternoon time slots.

A few great deals in the Chicago area include:

- 1. Harborside International Golf Center, 11001 South Doty Ave.
- 2. Sydney R. Marovitz Golf Course, 3600 Recreation Dr.
- 3. Robert A. Black Golf Course, 2045 W. Pratt Blvd.
- 4. Jackson Park, 6401 S. Richards5. Edgebrook Golf Course, 6100 N. Central Ave.

If you aren't ready to play a full

THIS IS, DARE I SAY, A STAGGERING WORK

18 holes, don't. Playing 18 holes can take roughly four hours. Golf is supposed to be enjoyable. If you aren't playing well, four hours can feel like eight. If your playing experiences are frustrating, you will be less likely to want to play again. Don't torture yourself if you don't have to.

Find a par-3 course, or just play nine holes. Both will be great practice and less time-consuming. Once you are comfortable playing these, then venture onto a full 18. Hit from a closer tee box if needed and don't worry about using every club in your bag as some are difficult to use and may leave beginning golfers disenchanted with the game.

"I wouldn't even bother [beginners] with hitting a driver or wood," said Crain.

Understand what you want to gain. Whether you want to win the U.S. Open, chime in at the water cooler or spend more time with loved ones, it's crucial to determine why you want to learn golf.

Once you know why you want to learn, it will be easier to determine the commitment level you want to make, and to properly set your expectations.

"It's a very challenging and very difficult game," said PGA Director of Instruction John McCartin of Chicagoland Golf Academy. "You need to realize going into it that once you hit one really good shot, that's not the standard, that's the potential."

Former correspondent to discuss Brazil at free event

New York Times former correspondent and editor Larry Rohter will give an overview of Brazil's history, culture and economy during a free event at 6 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 6, at the School of Law Room CLC-209 at the Loyola University Water Tower Campus, 25 E. Pearson St.

Rohter will talk about the country's transition from a debtor nation to a quickly growing economy. He also will discuss the reasons for the current political situation in Brazil.

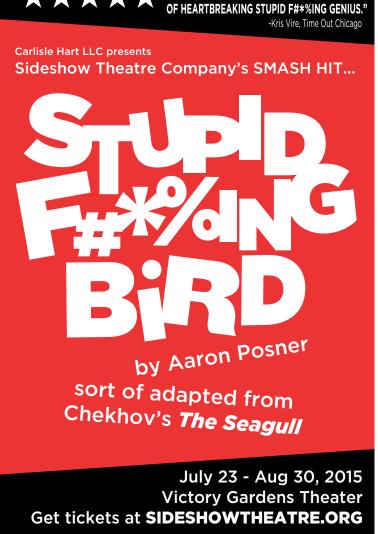

Rohter was a correspondent in Latin America for more than 20 years. He is the author of the 2008 Portuguese language book "Deu no New York Times," a foreigner's look at life in Brazil, and "Brazil on the Rise" in 2010.

Born and raised in Chicago, Rohter is a graduate of the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service. He also has a master's degree from Columbia University's School of International Affairs.

His talk will be followed by a reception and a question and answer session moderated by professor Ben Penglase of Loyola University's Department of Anthropology.

Refreshments will be served. For more information and to RSVP call 312-427-0584.

History Museum's Hot Dog Fest expands

Hot Dog History to be made Aug. 7 – 9

Let your taste buds run wild at the Chicago History Museum's [CHM] third annual Chicago Hot Dog Fest that will include a full lineup of bands, hot dog history speakers, and hot dog vendors serving up their spin on the Chicago-style hot dog.

The CHM is expanding its annual celebration of encased meats into a three day event this year starting Friday, Aug. 7 and running through Sunday Aug. 9, at the corner of Clark St. and LaSalle St. Admission to the festival is free.

The classic Chicago-style hot dog, made exclusively with Vienna® Beef, will be the star of the festival. Guests can enjoy tasty treats from vendors like Boricua Dog, Flashy Hotdogs, Chubby Wieners, Frannie's Beef and Catering, Chicago Classic, Select Cut Steakhouse, Cookers Red Hots, Fatso's Last Stand & Frank Meats Patty and others.

The fest will also offer musical entertainment all three days.

Once guests have filled up on hot dogs, it's time to head over to the Speaker's Stage for a taste of history from the city's leading hot dog experts, 12 to 4 p.m. daily. On Friday Bill Savage, Northwestern Univ. professor, tackles an infamous hot dog topping during his talk, "Ketchup: The Condiment of Controversy." Later that day Russell Lewis, the Museum's vice president and chief historian, addresses Chicago's Union Stock Yards. Saturday brings Rich Bowen, Loyola professor and author of "Hot Dog Chicago," and Bruce Kraig, author of "Man Bites Dog." Save room for Sunday's talk on the people behind Chicago's favorite hot dog stands by Vienna's own Bob Schwartz, author of 'Never Put Ketchup on a Hot Dog."

SKYLINE

Discounted 'Early-Bird' food ticket packages are now available online. Dog Dollars for food, alcohol, and non-alcoholic beverages will also be sold individually at the festival. For more information visit chicagohotdogfest.com or call 312-642-4600.

UPDATE: Damen, Elston, Fullerton intersection construction

Demolition has now been completed at Midtown Tennis and the city has taken possession of the property as a part of the reconfiguration of the Damen, Elston, Fullerton intersection.

The old Whirleyball/PartyCity building demolition on the north side of Fullerton continues and is scheduled to be completed by mid August.

The work on Fullerton Ave. has started with a shoring system needed to make some connections to the existing brick sewer main. Demolition is happening in the Vienna Beef lot at the same time.

There are lane restrictions on Damen north and south bound, and on Fullerton in the east bound lanes. These lane restrictions will change from week to week.

along the route.

But a great deal of the open drinking occurs after the parade ends as the street partying carries on late into the night.

The CTA instituted an improved transportation and safety strategy as well. Due to these improvements, the Belmont CTA L station did not need to be closed like it has in previous years due to overcrowding and criminal behavior.

But while Ald. Tunney himself said the jury is still out on the future of the popular parade, some say has outgrown the neighborhood. The alderman's 44th Ward outreach director Erin Duffy told a July 14 South East Lake View Neighbors meeting that "it's more like when it will move than if."

Duffy told the SELVN that if the parade moves to a new location next year, the Northhalsted Business Alliance will be asked to move its Pride Fest street party to start after the parade on the same date.

But she said a final decision still has to be made by the mayor's office and Ald. Tunney. Duffy said the feedback received so far indicates people feel this year's parade was "better managed" than earlier parades.

Stellas family rebuffed by alderman over plans to improve Diversey

Local family grocer battered by national franchises, now blocked from making their own improvements

Plans for the redevelopment of The Market Place Food Store site at 521 W. Diversey/2775 N. Hampden Ct. were vetoed by Ald. Michele Smith (43rd), sending the property's owners, George and Peter Stellas, back to square one.

Ald. Smith said the neighbors and the developer, Lexington Homes, could not agree on plans for a 17-story, 78-unit condo tower with 81 parking spaces on two stories, 7,700 square feet of ground floor retail space and four single-family homes on Hampden

The project would have required a zoning change which allowed the alderman full control over the fate of the proposal.

"After several months of discussion and prolonged negotiations by my office, the Park West Community Assoc., and the developer to explore potential changes, it became clear that the current proposal could not be realistically modified to address neighborhood concerns. As a result, the proposal will not be going forward," said

"When you wrap them all together, we couldn't find adequate public benefit" to seek a zoning change, Ald. Smith said.

The alderman had been involved in negotiations with the Stellas Family and Lexington Homes over

The 88-year-old Market Place at 523 W. Diversey is likely to be around for a while longer, now that plans to put a 17-story condo tower have been scrapped by Ald. Michele Smith (43rd), after the community and the developer were unable to reach a meeting of minds.

the proposed high rise for nearly two years, long before the public became aware of the proposal.

The deal seems to have collapsed, more over parking spaces than over the building itself, or cleaning up what is perhaps one of the most unsightly commercial blocks in Lincoln Park.

The Market Place Food Store has been a Lincoln Park fixture since 1927 and is currently run by Peter Stellas, grandson of the store's founder. Stellas had been working with the developer, who scaled back the plans which originally called for 200 units in 20

In an ad that ran in the June 17-23 Booster, The Market Place Food Store - which described itself as Chicago's oldest continuously operating market - asked for community support for the project, arguing that "this new and exciting condo building is just what is needed to re-energize this depressed part of the street."

The Market Place statement claimed that traffic studies show the proposed building would actually decrease the amount of traffic on local streets, that the security of the neighborhood would improve, and that the building would "dramatically increase tax revenue at a time when the city desperately needs money to maintain our neighborhoods."

"It's time for residents and owners in the area to take control of our streets and work with our aldermen to secure our neighborhoods and investments and bring them back to their glory days," the ad concluded. Supporters were asked to send e-mails to Diversey521@ aol.com.

The plans - which were scaled back from what the developer originally wanted to present were unveiled in September and met with concerns ranging from inadequate parking to the 205-foot tall height of the building.

Ald. Smith urged the property's owners when making their next plans, to "carefully consider the feedback they received as they contemplate future development concepts."

But the main opposition to this plan going forward appears to be coming from the store's own ten-

The Stellas Family leases parking spots in their private parking lot adjacent to the store to a few area residents... reportedly these are the same folks who have now put up the most opposition to the proposal going forward over fears of losing their off-street parking spots.

The venerable Lincoln Park grocery has been overwhelmed by the recent additions of national franchise chain food stores that have taken up large spaces in the vicinity and battered the store's bottom line. In the last year a new Walmart Grocery opened within steps of The Market Place, as has a Trader Joe's and a giant new 42,000 square foot Walgreens that sells ready-made meals. Oddly, Walgreens was never asked by the city or neighbors to include parking as a part of their project.

Next up is a new 83,000 squarefoot Mariano's Grocery now under construction at Wellington and Broadway, expected to open in 2016. That, too, will hurt what is one of the last locally-owned grocery stores in Lincoln Park.
