Cook County tax increment financing districts report big increase

North Side's Transit TIF turning into mega cash machine

BY JIM VAIL

Cook County's Tax Increment Financing (TIF) districts will bring in almost $1.2 billion for the latest tax year 2018, a record according to a report last week from Cook County Clerk Karen Yarbrough.

This is a 17.4% increase over last year, with the biggest increase taking place in Chicago. Yarbrough said TIF revenue increased 27.4% in Chicago but decreased 1.6% in the suburbs from the previous year.

The Clerk's full 2018 TIF Revenue Report shows Chicago TIFs will generate approximately $841 million in tax revenue from its 138 TIFs in the 2018 tax year. This is a $181 million increase over last year and includes nearly $116 million for the City's "Transit TIF" on the North Side.

"As a taxpayer and property owner, as well as an elected official who has to answer to the people of Cook County, I want to know where my tax dollars are going, if I live in a TIF District, and how this affects the distribution of tax revenue," Clerk Yarbrough said in a press statement.

A report by the Cook County Clerk's Office shows Chicago TIFs will generate approximately $841 million in tax revenue from its 138 TIFs in the 2018 tax year.

However, critics charge the program is anything but transparent, and the TIFs funnel tax dollars by the mayor, is supposed to be used to develop "blighted" areas of the city. Instead, TIF monies have gone to corporate headquarters downtown, luxury condo developments along the lake and recently almost $1 billion was approved for the Lincoln Yards TIF on the North Side, which is some of the most desirable - not blighted - real estate in the Midwest.

Meanwhile, depressed properties on the South Side see little of that money.

"I call that an act of economic warfare against working class and black Chicago," said Tom Tresser, co-founder of the CivicLab and leader of the TIF Illumination

Medicaid managed care reforms signed into law

Bill aims to reduce application backlog, speed payments to providers

BY PETER HANCOCK
Capitol News Illinois

Gov. J.B. Pritzker said Monday that people applying for Medicaid benefits in Illinois will see those applications processed more quickly, and health care providers will be paid more promptly, under a comprehensive reform bill now signed into law.

"This legislation launches one of the most aggressive, cross-agency efforts in Illinois history to expand health care access and to eliminate the multi-year Medicaid backlog once and for all," Pritzker said during a bill-signing ceremony in Chicago.

Medicaid is a publicly-funded health insurance program for seniors, low-income families and the disabled. Established in 1966, it is jointly funded by the state and federal governments and it is the largest health insurance program in Illinois, covering nearly 3 million individuals, or nearly one quarter of the state's population.

Illinois operates its Medicaid program under what's known as a "managed care" model. That means people who are covered by the system enroll in a plan administered by private insurance companies, known as managed care organizations, or MCOs. Those companies, in turn, are paid a flat, monthly per-person rate, which they use to pay for each person's medical care.

In recent years, though, the Illinois program, called Health-Choice Illinois, has been plagued with a backlog of applications from individuals trying to get into the program as well as people trying to renew their coverage.

The backlog, defined as applications that have not been processed within 45 days of their submission, peaked around 121,000 cases during former Gov. Bruce Rauner's administration and now is about 95,000.

Health care providers have also complained about slow payments from the MCOs as well as high rates of claim denials.

Senate Bill 1321, which was drafted by the bipartisan Medicaid Legislative Working Group, seeks to address both of those issues.

Among other things, it requires the Illinois Dept. of Healthcare

Meeting Aug. 13 on proposed Barnes and Noble development

In April, Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] hosted a meeting to allow Newcastle Ltd. to present two Planned Developments for two separate proposed projects on N. State St. in the Gold Coast where the neighborhood rejected the proposals.

There will now be a second meeting for the 1120-30 N. State St. site (the so-named 'Barnes and Noble Project') 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 13, at 8 W. Division, 3rd Floor.

"The development team reached back out to my office with a revised proposal and I have agreed to hold a second community event to review the revised proposal," said Ald. Hopkins. "This will feature a unique presentation format, similar to an open house, which will allow individuals to review the proposal from many aspects, and have much more intimate conversations with the development team about different aspects of the project."

The project is still proposed as a Planned Development, 11 stories, (128'-6") tall. The proposal calls for 95 rental units, consisting of a mix of studio, one- and two-bedroom units. The project will provide 32 parking spaces and have 79 bicycle parking spaces.

The proposal will also include ground-floor commercial units. The parking garage, located on the 2nd floor, will now be accessed from the alley between State and Dearborn.

Members from the development team and alderman's office will be on hand to discuss the project and answer any questions.

New restrictions on overnight parking on Cannon Dr.

Chicago Police are asking for patience as they take aggressive steps to combat crime coming to the the North Lakefront. One of the new measures being implemented is restricting parking on Cannon Dr. in Lincoln Park.

Police have identified a pattern in which groups park on Cannon Dr., go to the park and beach area long after the park is closed and create disturbances. This pattern peaked at 3 a.m. July 20 when seven people were shot in a gun battle between two groups.

Last week Chicago Police piloted a program banning parking between 11 p.m. and 5 a.m. on Cannon Dr. They leafletted vehicles and talked to individuals as they attempted to park on Cannon. No cars were towed. Police said that most individuals were glad to see the police on scene and cooperated. Police believe that several other cars left the area quickly and that this activity deterred crime.

The 19th District has requested that this pilot continue for this weekend. Chicago Police and City Hall say they will monitor this pilot program to see whether it addresses the violence issue and whether the scope of the prohibition needs to be changed.

Hey kids, stop living in little French fry worlds

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Restaurant table manners are always a work in progress. Fine tuning is essential.

How do you eat, like a wolverine or a duchess? Maybe you are good with your hands, a fish fork or a plastic spoon.

What ever the tools of your trade, eating well, with polish and aplomb is essential in civilized society.

Henry Ford never hired an executive he hadn't eaten with. If you can't use a knife and fork correctly, corporate advancement is absurd.

Recently I observed the behavior of children out for lunch with their parents. I was bewildered by the low wattage of parents' intelligence that seemed to surround me on all sides. So much of it reflects their parent's choices and quirky engagement of the world. Especially the Millennials.

A nearby mother began lunch with her three-year-old by reading the Gibson's menu to her. "Would you like shrimp with avocado, or tenderloin sliders? Or shrimps with onions and tomatoes? Or a cheeseburger and French fries?"

We were in for rough going. That menu is exhaustive. I hadn't looked at it since 2001.

French fries and a cheeseburger seemed to raise the child's blood pressure because she just started shouting, "No! No! No!"

Then the mother explained to the grandfather, who was their host, that the child only ate French fries with hot dogs.

A real connoisseur, I thought.

The child apparently loved pickles and olives. So a small plate of them was immediately brought to her. It did not sweeten her disposition, however.

I laughed, because olives were one of the foods I could not tolerate until I was an adult. Clearly this family relied on their own unique foods to squelch the beast in this child.

I went home for a nap.

Had lunch at Ralph Lauren Bar & Grill the following day. A family of four were seated near me, mom, dad and two boys. They looked like campers. White t-shirts, dark denim jeans, thick bushy hairstyles. Very animated and chatty with each other.

The dad had the look of someone who edits films or makes them. Before their waiter could tell them the specials, the older boy of maybe 12, said loudly, "I know what I want. First, the beef carpaccio. And then, the chicken milanese. And just water to drink."

His 10-year-old brother then said, "I want the escargot. And then, the steak sandwich, medium."

Just then, the dad and I caught each other's stare. And he said to his son, "Well, you caught this gentleman's attention."

"Well," I said, "I am frozen by the erudite palettes of your sons. Mature taste buds."

Interesting how these boys, true foodies, gave me some delight. Whereas that little girl the day before would just put me off children for good.

These boys were obviously at home in restaurants and very comfortable around sophisticated foods. They weren't afraid of it or suspicious of it. They were efficient eaters. Knew what they liked and must have determined their choices for lunch on the drive to the restaurant. They were fluent in the language of food. And engaging of the waiter who took their order.

They seemed organized, savvy-travelers, well-spoken and urbane. This is the perfect restaurant for them. They restored my trust in children.

What a welcome change they were from the hesitant, m u m b l i n g young people eating elsewhere in RL without a clue, whose lives are shaped by the narrow divide of hamburgers and hotdogs. Living in their little French fry worlds, incapable of using utensils properly. Talking with their mouths full.

In my youth, dining out brought delight to me and my family. We had our own routines for each restaurant we liked, favorite dishes at favorite eateries. We ate like adults, always free to order coffee when we chose. I was a consummate duck eater. Loved stuffings. Au gratin potatoes. Prime rib. Lamb chops. Fillet of sole on Fridays at the Palmer House. Jack Gibbon's Fried Chicken. Goulash at the Berghoff. And those Field's special sandwiches smothered in Thousand Island Dressing at the Walnut Room.

Another childhood memory that others my age say they do not recall, boys from military academies out for Sunday dinner with their families.

Remember Bishop Quarter Academy? You'd see these boys, 9, 10 or 12-years-old wearing a complete military uniform in a Chicago restaurant. Some had medals. But it just never made sense and I could not fathom sending a child off to a local boarding school, run by nuns, and having people bark orders at you like some war movie. Remember this would have been the 1950s. I always thought that these young cadets must have done something unspeakable. That they were being punished, tested and watched. Sen. McCarthy was always hunting Commies back then. It always creeped me out to see children in uniform.

I was a good child growing up, no arrests, but I was lippy, back-talking my parents. Sometimes used a swear words. I could annoy my grandmother by smarting off. My mother used to warn me at least twice a week, that I'd better shape up, because "they'd send me to Bishop Quarter Academy if I didn't."

She really knew how to stop me in my tracks.

No going out for dinner on a Sunday in a military uniform with my medals on my chest. It was all too ludicrous.

But I couldn't be sure they wouldn't do it. What would I say to my cousins? Or a favorite waitress who knew me before I was bivouacked into childhood military life.

Best to attempt some behavioral change, I reasoned. I couldn't have the worry of both the Russians and Military School hanging over me.

Maybe it was Mark Twain who pulled me back from the edge with Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer. That's also when I read James Fenimore Cooper and Herman Melville. Leather-stocking tales and Whaling yarns had a purifying affect on me. I still had to guard my tongue. Thankfully literature could intervene and bring clarity to childhood. Instead of reading the menu out loud to me, my wise parents found me something better to read. So off I sailed on the Peaquod. Sometimes blubber beats Carpaccio.

Talented teens take Goodman stage

Paris Richardson and ensemble rehearsing for the final 2018 performance by Goodman Theatre's Musical Intensive program.

What are you doing this weekend? How would you like to see a bunch of talented teens perform at the Goodman Theatre -- for free?!

One-hundred students are getting ready for their close ups and making their Goodman Theatre debut as part of the theater's 2019 Education and Engagement summer programs. PlayBuild Youth Intensive and Musical Theater Intensive are culminating with two final showcases performed by dozens of students aged 14 to 18 at 7 p.m., Aug. 9 and 10, at the theater, 170 N. Dearborn St. Each performance will be themed "Summer Love," to celebrate the various versions of love.

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Although the performances will be featured by teens who have participated in the aforementioned pair of programs, there are actually three summer activities that include youth participants at Goodman: PlayBuild, which is a seven-week devised story; Musical Theatre Intensive, which is an eight-week pre-professional training program; and Intergens, a six-week, multigenerational storytelling program, said Willa Taylor, Walter director of education and engagement.

All of these program are important for several reasons, said Taylor. "Intergens is important because many of our youth -- and certainly most of our Third Agers (age 55+) -- don't have chances to interact, let alone build something together, with people from different generations and life experiences," she said. "For young people to understand that others have come through the circumstances they are living in, the situations they are dealing with -- especially when they hear it from independent parties -- gives them perspective and helps them know they will make it through. For the Third Agers to have their experiences and their life stories listened to and validated by young people helps them remember the value of wisdom and experience, and the importance of passing that on."

With Musical Theater and PlayBuild, besides the practical artistic tools they develop, participants also build the soft skills most employers are looking for: critical thinking and collaboration; the ability to communicate to a multiplicity of audiences; media and technical literacy; and flexibility, said Taylor.

"But most importantly -- and I think most importantly from our perspective -- our programs give all the participants an opportunity to understand the power of their voices and their stories to make a change, not just in themselves but in the world," said Taylor.

Now in its 12th year, PlayBuild's curriculum uses all elements in the creation of theater to cultivate participants own voice and potential for creativity through personal history and storytelling techniques. Led by Taylor and five teaching artists -- Quenna Barrett, Charles Gardner, Sam Mauceri, Ana Velazquez and Paul Whitehouse--more than 600 students have participated in PlayBuild (formerly General Theater Studies) since its inception.

Musical Theater Intensive, now in its 4th year, is led by Goodman teaching artists-- Breon Arzell, McKenzie Chinn, Darian Tene and Margaret Winchell. The program is designed for young artists wanting to pursue a musical theater career. Through skill-building workshops designed to refine skills in acting, dancing, singing, storytelling and ensemble work, participants build a final musical showcase of original creations, works of classic and contemporary musical theater and pop.

The teens start all sessions start with physical and vocal warm-ups, said Taylor. "That is the only thing that is the same every day," she said. Daily schedules are built on the work of previous days and where the students are in their development, with the understanding of working towards a complete show.

"There are writing activities for both narrative and poetry/spoken word in both programs," said Taylor. "PlayBuild participants learn skills of ethnographic research and interviewing, of story collection. We also do work around issues of identity and culture."

"MTI builds from introductory to complex dance choreography, and vocal exercises to improve and expand technique, range, and emotional connection to the performance," she said.

The programs are offered to students throughout the Chicagoland area and again, they are 100% free, thanks to the numerous foundations, individuals, and institutions that provide support. Interested participants apply directly through the Goodman, who shares the program information with schools and various community partnerships that the Goodman has established throughout the years, as well as through traditional social media and marketing.

For PlayBuild and MTI, participants apply and audition. PlayBuild auditions are ensemble-based, meaning they audition as groups of students. "We look for their willingness to take artistic risks, to work well with others, and to follow directions," Taylor said. MTI is a more traditional solo audition, where an applicant performs a song and a monologue they have prepared.

'America First' trade policies push mortgage rates lower

President Trump's "America First" trade policies have sparked the Federal Reserve Board to lower interest rates, which could benefit Chicago home buyers and families seeking to refinance.

The Home Front

By Don DeBat

Trump, who is counting on a strong economy as he campaigns for reelection next year, has pushed the Federal Reserve to immediately start cutting interest rates to undo what he sees as the damage from four unnecessary Fed rate hikes last year.

In an abrupt policy shift on July 31, the Federal Reserve cut its benchmark funds rate by a quarter of one-percentage point to a range of 2% to 2.25%. It was the first reduction since 2008, when the Fed cut rates to essential zero in the wake of the Great Recession's financial crisis.

"The outlook for the U.S. economy remains favorable, and this action is designed to support that outlook," said Fed Chairman Jerome Powell. "It is intended to ensure against downside risks from weak global growth and trade policy uncertainty, and to help offset the effects these factors are currently having on the economy."

The immediate result of the Fed rate cut was a decline in the 10-year Treasury bond rate to 1.85% from 1.89%. Experts say the lower 10-year bond rate will put major pressure on long-term home-loan interest rates eventually resulting a quarter of one percentage point decrease.

On Aug. 1, benchmark 30-year fixed

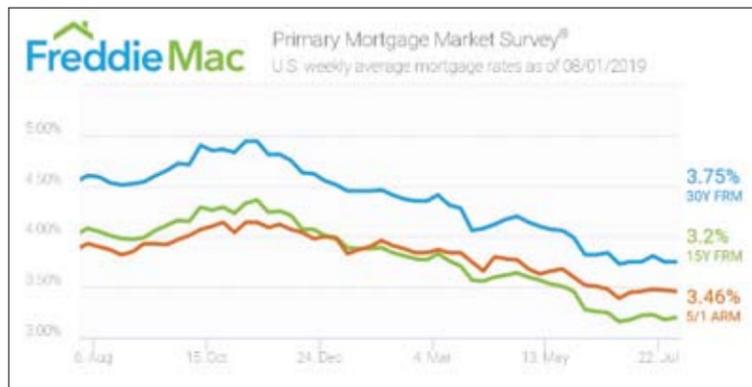

On July 31, the Federal Reserve cut its benchmark funds rate by a quarter of one-percentage point to a range of 2% to 2.25%, driving mortgage rates lower. Twenty years ago—in Aug. 1999—when many of today's Millennial borrowers were in grammar school, lenders were quoting 8.15% on a 30-year fixed mortgage.

mortgage rates averaged 3.75% nationwide, unchanged from a week earlier, reported Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey. A year ago, the 30-year fixed loan average was 4.60%. On Aug. 2, Chicago-area lenders were charging 3.756% to 3.940%, reported rateSeeker.com.

"Mortgage rates have essentially stabilized over the last two months, which reflects the recovery and improvement in the economy from the malaise earlier in the year," said Sam Khater, Freddie Mac's chief economist. "Low mortgage rates, a tight labor market and high consumer confidence should lead to improvement in home sales in late summer and early fall."

An optimistic forecast from the National Assoc. of Home Builders said: "The Fed's approach is a net positive for future housing demand and home construction." While additional rate cuts in the near term are not guaranteed, the NAHB forecast includes a prediction for an additional quarter of one percentage point reduction in the Fed funds rate in late 2019.

So, what do all these numbers mean to prospective house hunters and homeowners seeking to refinance? The window of opportunity for locking in a near record-low 3.5% or lower 30-year fixed mortgage rate in late summer and autumn of 2019 is wide open.

A benchmark 3.5% rate would be the lowest mortgage rates have hit since Nov. 21, 2012, when they tumbled to a historical rock-bottom of 3.31%, reported Freddie Mac.

Just how affordable is a 3.5% or lower mortgage rate? Twenty years ago—in Aug. 1999—when many of today's Millennial borrowers were in grammar school, lenders were quoting 8.15% on a 30-year fixed mortgage.

However, to really appreciate today's historically low interest rates, housing experts say home buyers need only to look at what banks and mortgage lenders were charging more than three decades ago, in the early 1980s.

According to Freddie Mac, benchmark 30-year mortgage rates peaked at a whopping 18.45% in Oct. 1981 during the Great Recession of the 1980s. Rates fell below 10% in April 1986, and then bounced in the 9%-to-10% range during the balance of the 1980s.

Archives of the now-defunct Federal Housing Finance Board show long-term mortgage rates were relatively affordable five decades ago at 5.81% to 5.94% between 1963 and 1965.

In 1966 and 1967, borrowers paid an average of 6.3% to 6.4%. In the 1960s, rates last dipped below 6.5% in January of 1968, when the national average hit 6.41%. Between 1971 and 1977, the now-defunct Illinois Usury Law held rates in the 7.6%-to-9% range.

Closing a hospital now more difficult in Illinois

New law requires permit from review board to close or downsize health facilities

BY PETER HANCOCK
Capitol News Illinois

Hospital corporations in Illinois now have to jump through more administrative hoops before they will be allowed to close or downsize a health care facility.

A new law that took effect this month requires the owners of those facilities to obtain a permit from the state's Health Facilities and Services Review Board before they can close a hospital, ambulatory surgical treatment center, nursing home or other health care center. It also limits the number of times they can apply to discontinue a category of services to just once every six months.

Those new provisions were included in Senate Bill 1739, which Gov. J.B. Pritzker signed into law July 15.

The bill was prompted by a controversy in Cook County earlier this year when California-based Pipeline Health announced plans to shut down Westlake Hospital in Melrose Park, a hospital that serves a large number of low-income patients.

Pipeline had purchased the 230-bed hospital in January, along with hospitals in Chicago and Oak Park. It initially said it planned to keep Westlake Hospital open,

Uber bike unit sues city over bike share deal with Lyft

BY JIM VAIL

The ride-sharing service Uber has filed a lawsuit against the city because they say it should have allowed competitive bids before awarding an exclusive bike rental contract to Uber competitor Lyft.

Uber owns a bike sharing service named JUMP, and has asked the courts to void the exclusive contract with the Divvy rental system owned by Lyft.

“By locking out other competitors, former Mayor Emanuel’s backroom monopoly fails to bring bikes to all Chicago neighborhoods - particularly the South and West sides - where they are needed the most,” an Uber spokesperson told local media.

The plan signed with Lyft a few months ago would expand the bike-share system citywide, and add 10,500 cycles by 2021, nearly tripling the fleet. Lyft Lyft would spend $50 million and the city would get an additional $77 million in revenue during the remaining nine years of the existing contract, and Lyft would be designated Chicago’s exclusive bike-share operator.

would spend $50 million and the city would get an additional $77 million in revenue during the remaining nine years of the existing contract, and Lyft would be designated Chicago’s exclusive bike-share operator. Once complete, the expanded system would have about 16,500 bikes and 800 stations in every ward staffed by 200 more employees.

The new bicycles are electric, and can be locked to either a standard bike rack or Divvy’s existing docking stations. Divvy began in 2013 and has lost up to $700,000 per year, according to city data.

Lyft will be able to raise bike-sharing rates up to 10% annually, but larger increases will be subject to approval from the Chicago Dept. of Transportation.

Uber - which owns the electric bike-sharing company JUMP - offered 20,000 dockless bikes and 2,000 scooters in all 50 wards immediately, and offered to invest

Belmont Village Senior Living now open

Nationally recognized senior living provider brings award-winning programs and amenities to Lincoln Park Neighborhood

Belmont Village Lincoln Park opened their new facility on Fullerton in late July, it is their first community in Chicago and fifth in the Chicagoland area.

Located at 700 W. Fullerton Ave., the new community will be the company’s 30th nationwide. To celebrate the grand opening, Belmont Village hosted an open house that showed off the painstaking work that was done to create a modern facility that replicated that handsome, yet degrading building that was built in 1932 on the site. The former Nellie A. Black building had to be taken down rather than reused because it did not meet modern standards for a senior living and memory care facility.

The developers were able to salvage several architectural artifacts from the old building and have tastefully reused them in the new facility in some of the outdoor patio spaces. The Nellie A. Black building originally used to house nurses and interns adjacent to the Children’s Hospital. It was recognizable for its red brick exterior and Renaissance revival architectural style.

The building’s wall will soon be filled with photos of their residents. As is their tradition, they feature residents in framed portrait on a Wall of Heroes for those who served in the military, as well as those who have celebrated their 100th birthday on site. They brag of having over 50 centenarians in residence right now.

The new 120,500-square-foot, seven-story building is built adjacent to the new Lincoln Common on the former site of Children’s Memorial Hospital. Belmont Village communities are known for their distinctive design, high standards for life safety and reputation for quality.

The close proximity to theaters, parks and public transportation will allow residents to keep an active lifestyle while enjoying all the city has to offer. Belmont Village Lincoln Park will also host Tributosaurus becomes the Rolling Stones on Saturday night at the Chicago Hot Dog Fest at Stockton and LaSalle.

TEENS from p. 3

I asked Taylor what it's like for her at the end of the summer to see how the teens have grown, what they have learned, and how gratifying it is for her to witness what must be an amazing transformation.

"Summer is my favorite time of the year. I get to watch them grow and learn, and discover a tribe of people that support and nurture them," replied Taylor. "We become chosen family. We affirm that our voices have value, and that we are the change we want in the world."

Friday's performance will be by PlayBuild Youth Intensive participants while Saturdays will be by the Musical Theater Intensive program. Tickets are free but reservations are required. Call 312-443-3800 or visit goodmantheatre.org for more information.

Frankly my dear... it's going to be a hot time in the old town when the band Tributosaurus does the Rolling Stones at 7 p.m. Saturday night at the Chicago Hot Dog Fest at Stockton Dr. and LaSalle St.

This band definitely cuts the mustard when it comes to transforming itself into whoever it's featuring. If you haven't ever caught Tributosaurus, their Stones show should have you shouting, Hot Diggity Dog!

Hey, I'm just trying to be frank here. There's also a full line-up of other bands, history, family activities and Vienna hot dogs prepared in various regional and ethnic styles by the city's top dog vendors.

There's a $5 suggested donation to get into the fest, which goes directly to support the mission, exhibitions, and programs of the Chicago History Museum. And just an FYI, Tributosaurus will be making beautiful music with its Woodstock show on Aug. 15 at Martyr's, 3855 N. Lincoln Ave. Bands like Santana, Crosby Stills Nash and Young, The Who and more will be recreated, along with something we don't see much of today...peace and love.

Oh, you mean that J. Parker?!

Popular Lincoln Park bar only known memorial to derelict officer

BY PATRICK BUTLER

The J. Parker Rooftop Bar atop the Lincoln Hotel, 1816 N. Clark St., may be the only watering hole in Chicago - or anywhere else - named for a cop best remembered as one of the most derelict bodyguards in American history.

He's the guy who went out for a drink at one of the worst times in American history, leaving John Wilkes Booth free to walk in and shoot President Abraham Lincoln and stab one of the president's guests.

And thanks to their location and view, it is one of the most popular bars on the North Side. At the J Parker you'll get an absolutely stunning 360-degree view over both the Chicago skyline as well as Lake Michigan and Lincoln Park Zoo below with each cocktail.

According to Dan Warren, one of the J. Parker Rooftop Bar's three managing partners, Officer Parker had been written up numerous times for dereliction of duty ranging from being drunk on duty and sleeping on a street-car while he was supposed to be working (he claimed he heard a duck and stopped the tram to investigate), to visiting a whorehouse on company time before he finally got the boot in 1868 for sleeping on duty, ending his eight-year police career.

Surprisingly, Officer Parker got nothing more than a reprimand for leaving his post at Ford's Theater that fateful night, Warren said.

In fact, Warren added, "I may be wrong, but I was told that Lincoln himself had told him (Parker) to go take a break."

Ironically, Parker reportedly headed downstairs to the same Star Saloon where John Wilkes Booth was drinking!

Warren added that while there are no plans to install a Mary Surratt suite (named for the woman who was hanged with the other assassination conspirators) even though she never realized Booth and his confederates planned to kill rather than kidnap Lincoln, there is a John Wilkes booth near the bar.

J. Parker is the guy who went out for a drink at one of the worst times in American history, leaving John Wilkes Booth free to walk in and shoot President Abraham Lincoln.

But unfortunately, Warren noted, there's no Edman Spangler parking lot - named for the theater roustabout who held Booth's horse - in the back alley. Nor is there anything honoring Doc Mudd, who set Booth's broken leg and ended up spending several years in America's version of Devil's Island for his trouble.

Warren said he's not even sure who came up with the name for the bar which has been quietly operating for the past seven years or so.

And at this point, Warren said he and his partners have no plans to dress the waitstaff in 1860s period costumes or festoon the J. Parker Rooftop Bar with Civil War memorabilia. Or even a copy of the famous poster issued by the War Department offering a $100,000 reward for information leading to the capture of Booth and his co-conspirators.

In fact, there isn't even a known photo or drawing of Officer John Parker - only a logo of a 40ish man in a bowler hat hanging in the barroom.

Officer Parker himself rests largely forgotten in an unmarked grave in Washington D.C.'s Glenwood Cemetery - his only well-known memorial apparently being a bar atop a Chicago hotel.

UBER from p. 5

$450 million in Chicago and add 500 jobs.

Uber said it was a better deal and should have been allowed under a competitive bidding process.

"Uber's promise of providing 20,000 bikes by, like, now, was total vaporware, and their astroturfing campaign, paying people to write favorable 'news' coverage for them was pretty ridiculous," said John Greenfield

However, the city will say that a better price does not always mean a better deal. In this case, the city argued against Uber because another bike-share company would only cause confusion and the city would have no control over pricing.

"Uber's promise of providing 20,000 bikes by, like, now, was total vaporware, and their astroturfing campaign, paying people to write favorable 'news' coverage for them was pretty ridiculous," said John Greenfield, the editor of Streetsblog Chicago.

On his transportation blog Greenfield said that Uber paid The TRiBE - a digital media platform focusing on Black Chicago - to present anti-Lyft talking points to South and West Side residents. This resulted in black community and business leaders calling on aldermen to put the brakes on Emanuel's proposal to award the Lyft contract, comparing it to the disastrous privatized parking meter deal that the city lost billions on to private investors tied to Mayor Richard Daley.

The City Council voted to reject the Uber proposal. The city said Uber had no experience in the bike-sharing program, and unlike the parking meter deal, the city still owns the bike-share program that Lyft is investing in and will earn profits.

Uber was also seeking an exclusive contract, which they are now contending is unfair.

Bethany resident celebrates 105 years

More than 100 people helped Edith Renfrow Smith celebrate her 105th birthday this month at Bethany Retirement Community. The crowd included family members, residents and staff, who celebrated Smith – the first black woman to graduate from Grinnell College in Grinnell, Iowa, where she was born in 1914. After she graduated, Smith left Grinnell to live in Chicago.

Concussion symptoms can improve with managed exercise

Seniors are more active than ever biking, hiking and sporting, so concussions are also ramping up with all that activity.

Nearly 3.8 million people suffer from concussions each year in the U.S., according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), many the result of athletic injuries and motor vehicle accidents. From 5 to 10 percent of these people may experience concussion symptoms that last beyond six weeks.

While talk will often point to conventional wisdom which states that “time and rest” are the best and only options for recovery from concussion, studies now suggest managed exercise and movement can hasten recovery.

In 2010, researchers at the Univ. of Buffalo were the first to show that specialized exercise regimens can relieve prolonged concussion symptoms. The study focused on both athletes and non-athletes and was published in the Clinical Journal of Sports Medicine.

Researchers based their findings on the hypothesis that “the regulatory system responsible for maintaining cerebral blood flow, which may be dysfunctional in people with a concussion, can be restored to normal by controlled, graded, symptom-free exercise.”

It wasn’t very long ago when concussion sufferers were told not to move – to rest, with no exercise, until symptoms improved. While rest remains important, it’s become increasingly important to get moving with a careful, managed exercise program that can benefit recovery.

MEMORY CARE AND ASSISTED LIVING

Clare artist Nancy Lee Spilove

Morning Glories and Summer.

Mum in Purple.

The meditation and precision of Sumi-e painting

Over the years, Nancy Lee Spilove has made her way through a number of careers.

She spent 10 years managing her ex-husband's medical practice. At age 51, she went to school to become a chef and later became a culinary arts instructor. For eight years, she worked at a soup kitchen in Florida, followed by a two-year stint teaching cooking at another charity.

Despite the career changes, one thing remained constant: Spilove's love of oriental ornamentation, which led to her passion for Sumi-e, or oriental brush painting.

While Spilove's fascination with oriental furniture and decoration has been lifelong, her interest in practicing Sumi-e painting sparked about 35 years ago, when she discovered an ad for a Sumi-e instructor – right around the corner from her Florida home, as luck would have it.

It was this instructor who served as a mentor for Spilove, propelling her into a world where Sumi-e art became far more than a hobby. Spilove grew to enjoy Sumi-e painting so much, in fact, that she has completed at least 40 works to date.

"It's my thing," she says. "I only wanted to stick with Sumi-e."

Sumi-e process

The process of starting a Sumi-e painting is quite meditative, according to Spilove: Add a couple of drops of water to an ink stone and rotate an ink stick to prepare the ink for painting.

"It takes quite a while to get your ink right, so it gives me time to cool down and release whatever's on my mind," she says.

In addition to the prepared ink, Spilove uses watercolors rather than grinding her own paints. Typically, she uses various different colors, blending them in the center of a pie plate. She notes the importance of holding the brush straight up and down, too, as opposed to a more natural, instinctive way of placing it in your hand.

"It doesn't sound like much, but when you're used to doing it another way, to get yourself to do it this way takes some training," she says.

When learning Sumi-e, artists begin by practicing the Four Gentlemen, which represent the four seasons: an orchid for spring, bamboo for summer, chrysanthemum for autumn, and a plum blossom for winter. The Four Gentlemen allow artists to experiment with their brushstrokes.

"The orchid is a very simple line, but it lets you start controlling the brush and applying pressure differently," Spilove explains. "This is how you start learning how to paint."

When a painting is complete, she says, it gets stamped with a chop mark which is unique for each artist. She has two inscribed chops, for example, one that says "Nancy Lee" and another that says "beautiful young swan."

Of the numerous Sumi-e paintings Spilove has done through the years, her favorite is one she named "Wishful." After she started it she said she didn't like where it was going, so she tossed it in the wastebasket. When painting one night, however, she ended up with a lot of paint left over and recalled the painting in the trash.

"I thought I would use it for something," she says.

"I thought I would use it for something, so I picked up this painting that was in the garbage and it just came together," Spilove says. "It was almost spiritual."

Today, it has been about five years since Spilove last finished a piece, but her love for Sumi-e hasn't faltered. She especially recognizes the value, purpose and peace it has brought to her life.

"My heart just hasn't been in it, but that may mean this is the time I need it most," she says. "Maybe if I get back into it, I'd be at ease."

Police Beat...

Phone thefts at Lolla

At least one phone theft crew made life miserable for partiers during the opening of the annual Lollapalooza festival in Grant Park. Police refused to file incident reports at the scene. Victims were told to submit their report with an officer by dialing 311.

Because reports were not immediately filed, the number of victims is not known, but one cop on the scene said "a bunch" of phones had been stolen in a mosh pit while Elephant performed around 5:30 p.m.

Reports of phones being stolen came in regularly throughout the day. Toward the end of the day, one officer said that a Good Samaritan walked up to him and handed over eight phones that were found lying on the ground.

Some victims reported that a thief approached them to sell drugs for $20 as a ruse. He was described as a man who stood 6'-1" tall and wore a red shirt with a snapback hat.

At least two other men and a woman were also suspected of being involved in the thefts.

The mini-crime wave resembles a similar crime pattern at Boystown's Pride Fest celebration in June. At least 30 people reported losing their phones to thieves during the two-day street fair on Halsted St. Many of them believed the thefts took place while they danced in a crowd.

Pete's Pizza closed for 'computer issues' as State investigation gets underway

An independent North Side pizza chain was closed for business last week, claiming computer issues, but Chicago police say rather than there is a state investigation into the business.

Officers with the 24th District were on site at the Pete's Pizzerias in North Center and Edgewater July 30 supporting the Illinois Dept. of Revenue.

Blockclub Chicago reported that nearby business owners and neighbors saw police taking files out of the pizzerias earlier last week. Employees who answered phones at both locations said the restaurants were having "computer issues" and would reopen.

The Illinois Dept. of Revenue declined to comment, citing taxpayer confidentiality laws.

Neighbors and nearby workers said they noticed what appeared to be police activity at the North Center location of Pete's, 3737 N. Western Ave., at about 10 a.m. July 30. The restaurant was closed for the day.

Law enforcement was also seen at Pete's Pizza in Edgewater, 1100 W. Granville Ave., around the same time. That pizzeria was closed Wednesday and Thursday as well.

Tenant alleges Uptown landlord failed to pay interest of security deposit

A rental agreement gone wrong ended with a man filing a class action lawsuit July 23 against a Chicago property management company in the Cook County Circuit Court.

Brian Doaks sued Related Management Co. LP and Sheridan Park Preservation LP, on behalf of himself and others similarly situated, alleging breach of contract.

In July 2017, Doaks said he signed a lease with the defendants for an apartment in the 4500 block of N. Magnolia in Uptown. The first lease was for Aug. 1, 2017-July 31, 2018, and called for Doaks to pay $800 to cover the security deposit. On July 24, 2018, Doak said he signed another lease agreement with an $800 security deposit. That lease went from Aug. 1, 2018-July 31, 2019.

Doaks alleges the defendants did not reimburse the security deposit interest within 30 days after his first lease came to an end. Neither lease verified which bank the security deposit would actually be sent to, the suit alleges, and Doak said this happened to a minimum of 50 other tenants.

He alleges violation of the Chicago Residential Landlord and Tenant Ordinance (RLTO) for the "landlord's failure to attach a separate summary including the security deposit rate for the 'new' years 2017 or 2018 to leases and renewals entered into in 2017 or 2018..." This alleged failure means that the defendant is owed $100 in damages and the opportunity to end the lease early, according to the lawsuit.

Doaks also alleges the landlord failed to follow RLTO regulations when it did not disclose the information for the financial institution where the security deposit would be sent. Doaks pointed out that the RLTO says "if a landlord fails to comply with RLTO Section 512-080(a) then the tenant shall be awarded two times the amount of the security deposit," according to the lawsuit.

The class also requested attorney fees, other related court costs, and a determination that the landlord violated the RLTO, giving the tenants permission to end their leases early.

Woman charged with financial crime enterprise

Alicia Renee Newby, 29, of the 6200 block of W. Wabansia Ave. has been charged with one felony count of Continuing Financial Crime Enterprise.

Newby was ID'd as the female offender who gained access to credit card information via electronic means from a 47-year-old victim between

Alicia Renee Newby

July 5, 2018 - July 11, 2018, in the 600 block of N. Lake Shore Dr. Newby defrauded the victim of her personal identity, financial institutions, and merchants by identifying herself as the victim, using deceptive practices via the internet, telecommunications, smartphones, and tablets. Newby was taken into custody after a search warrant was executed and was charged accordingly.

Man dead after being run over in Lakeview alley

A 56-year-old man was apparently lying in a Lakeview alley when an SUV struck and killed him Aug. 1, according to police. The driver of the vehicle did not stop.

The Cook County Medical Examiner's Office has identified the victim as Joseph Ruta. No home address was listed for Ruta.

Emergency personnel went to an alley in the 1000 block of W. Oakdale for a "man down" call around 11 a.m., according to a CPD spokesperson. The injured man was taken to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center where he died later in the day.

A witness said the man was lying in the alley near a chair and a bottle of liquor, leading to speculation that he may have been homeless.

Police who reviewed surveillance video from nearby residents identified the striking vehicle as an SUV that is registered to an address on the same block.

Woman run over by bus

A woman was hit by a CTA bus in Streeterville Aug. 2 and critically injured after being pinned underneath the bus.

Police say that the bus hit the woman about 8:45 a.m. in the 600 block of N. Fairbanks Ct. The Fire Dept. responded, and the woman was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital in critical condition.

The CTA reported that a #3 King Drive bus was exiting a bus terminal at Fairbanks and Ontario St. and as the bus turned left onto southbound Fairbanks, it struck a pedestrian.

A nearby security guard said she reported the incident over her radio and officials responded in about two minutes. It took them several minutes to raise the bus and get the woman out. She said it appeared the woman was holding a phone.

There is a surveillance camera that faces the corner where the collision happened.

Group mugs two bicyclists on Gold Coast lakefront

Two bicyclists reported that they were battered and robbed of their bikes and other personal property along the lakefront July 30. One attack happened near Oak St. Beach and the other near North Ave. Beach.

A 44-year-old man was standing on the sidewalk in the 1000 block of N. Lake Shore Dr. when three men approached him, punched him in the face, and then took his bike and other belongings around 9:40 p.m., police said. The offenders then fled the scene.

The robbers were described as black males between 19- and 21-years-old who stand 5'-4" to 5'-9" tall and weigh about 160 lbs, according to a CPD spokesperson. No one is in custody.

Then, around 11:20 p.m., a woman reported that five teenagers pushed her to the ground near the North Ave. Beach pier and stole her bike, phone, and backpack.

Police recovered the bike a few minutes later after the victim pointed out a male who was riding it on the bike path at 1400 N. Lake Shore Dr.

The victim described the offenders only as five teenage black males who were last seen heading toward the LaSalle Dr. underpass.

Car thief crashes in Loop

A car thief who stole an idling vehicle in the Loop July 30 crashed into a Blue Line subway entrance moments later after he discovered that there were two people sitting behind him in the back seat, according to police and a witness on the scene.

The driver and front passenger stepped out of the Hyundai on the 400 block of S. Dearborn around 11:15 p.m. while a man and a woman remained in the car's back seat, police said. Moments later, a man jumped into the driver's seat and sped northbound on Dearborn.

He didn't get far. Police say the man crashed into the Blue Line station exit at 343 South Dearborn and then fled northbound on foot, leaving his stunned passengers behind. No one was seriously injured, police said.

ABC7 News spoke with a woman who said she was one of the back seat passengers. Jasmine Brown told the station that she punched the carjacker, ripped off his shirt, and tried to throw the car into park.

The carjacker was described as a shirtless black male in his late teens or early 20's with an afro hairstyle. Area Central detectives are investigating.

Man who has terrible luck with wallets and doorknobs is in trouble again

A man who has terrible luck with wallets and doorknobs had more terrible luck with wallets last week. Jeffrey D. White, 35, was arrested early last Wednesday in the Viagra Triangle.

Patrol officers intervened as a woman confronted White in the 1000 block of N. State St. about stealing her wallet from a nearby bar around 3:30 a.m. July 24. White told police that he would empty his pockets to prove that he didn't have the woman's wallet. Indeed, he did not have it.

Jeffrey D. White

Unfortunately for White, another patron showed police cellphone video in which White was shown taking the 28-year-old woman's wallet from her purse. The wallet was never found, but White was arrested and charged with misdemeanor theft.

Judge Mary Marubio released him on a recognizance bond.

White has another pending criminal case.

Around 6:30 a.m. June 8, 2017, several residents reported seeing a man going house to house, checking doorknobs on the 1200 block of W. Newport in Lakeview. Arriving officers stopped White for an interview.

As they spoke with him, a woman emerged from a nearby home. She said she had just chased White from her apartment after he tried to open her bedroom door, police said. He had apparently climbed through the woman's front window.

White allegedly gave cops a fake name. Officers discovered the name discrepancy when another resident walked up and handed them a wallet that she found on top of her porch. It belonged to White and contained his identifications.

A grand jury returned a true bill against White charging him with felony criminal trespass to a residence with persons present. The case continues to drag on in court more than two years after the alleged crime.

Prosecutors last week filed a violation of bail bond against White after he was charged with the Viagra Triangle case. Judge Michael Hood decided to release him on another recognizance bond.

Police are warning drivers of reported thefts of personal property from vehicles in traffic. The offenders fled on foot in an unknown direction.

Incidents include one on the 200 block of E. Grand Ave., July 24, in the afternoon hours; the 0-100 block of E. Illinois St., July 25, in the afternoon hours, and the 100 block of E. Grand Ave., July 26, in the afternoon hours.

Another group of criminals are utilizing CTA trains for robbery incidents. One to three offenders are using force and intimidation to take property from CTA train passengers.

Offenders have threatened violence and punched victims in the face and body prior to ripping property from the victim's hands or pockets. These incidents have occurred upon trains and CTA platforms during the afternoon and evening hours.

Lakeview woman beaten, robbed near her home

A Lakeview woman was struck in the head, kicked, beaten, and robbed by a man who approached her as he walked near her home early Friday morning, police said. No one is in custody.

The victim, 19, was walking home from a nearby business when a stranger approached her and started a conversation in the 1000 block of W. Oakdale around 3 a.m., police said.

She said the man suddenly hit her in the head multiple times, causing her fall to the ground. While she was down, he continued to kick and beat her before stealing her phone and purse, the woman reported.

The offender is described as a skinny black male between 20- and 30-years-old who stands about 6'-2" tall.

Police spoke with the woman after she sought treatment for her injuries at Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center.

Lincoln Park thefts

Police are warning residents of recently reported burglaries in Lincoln Park. In each incident, the offender forced entry into buildings through windows or doors, took property from within, and then exited the location.

The Offender is described as a male, African American, bald, 40-50 years of age, wearing black t-shirt, blue jean shorts, black gym shoes.

Group attacks, robs man on Belmont CTA platform

A man was jumped and robbed by at least five offenders as he waited for a train July 30 at the Belmont Red Line station, 945 W. Belmont. The mugging was part of a series of incidents that unfolded at the CTA station and in nearby Boystown that night, resulting in at least eight arrests.

Trouble began around 11:30 p.m. when four male teenagers who had been asked to leave the station returned and began fighting with a security officer and CTA personnel. A Chicago police transit unit called in back-up to help resolve the problem. Two arrests were made for aggravated assault of police.

Cops were called back to the station at 1:30 a.m. after CTA security detained a man who refused to pay his fare and became combative with the guard. An ambulance was summoned for the security agent, who suffered a knee injury, police said.

At 1:36 a.m., a Jewel-Osco employee reported that three young men armed with bottles and knives were robbing the store of merchandise at 3531 N. Broadway. Officers arrived in time to see the offenders running out of the store parking lot. Two were arrested nearby in the 700 block of W. Brompton. The third man got away.

Then, at 2:40 a.m., a group of five or six people approached a man as

Police website to detail accused gun offenders and their bail amounts

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

A new twist will be added today to the ongoing back-and-forth between police, politicians, and the courts over the relatively low bails being given to accused gun offenders in Chicago.

The Chicago Police Dept. [CPD] on Monday announced the creation of a public website where it will share felony gun arrest and bail information, according to a media release issued Sunday.

Police said the new "Gun Offenders Dashboard" will be updated every Wednesday with information about adults who have been charged with felony weapons-related charges as well as the bond types and amounts given to them by Cook County judges. CPD will gather the portal's data from its own records as well as from the Cook County Sheriff's Office.

Accused gun offenders are routinely released from custody on recognizance bonds that require no cash deposit or low cash bonds that sometimes require only a few hundred dollars to go free.

Yet, the same courts regularly set much higher bail for people accused of simple property crimes like spray painting "The Bean" sculpture in Millennium Park ($10,000) and stealing booze from a River North hotel ($15,000).

This newspaper has been reporting on Cook County's firearms bail practices for over a year. Here is a sampling of some recent court decisions:

- Jordan Hill, 25, will only have to pay $1000 to free himself from Jail after a felony gun arrest on Aug. 2 for possession of assault weapons [pictured above] and armor-piercing bullets. He was issued a $10,000 bond, and only had to put 10% down to go free.

- Ronald Allen, 19, was released on a recognizance bond after being charged with two felony firearms charges and misdemeanor reckless conduct on July 19. Police said they saw Allen walking with a firearm in his waistband on the 4800 block of N. Winthrop. Allen ran through Hickory Playlot where parents and kids were playing, then dropped or threw the handgun as he vaulted a fence, according to a police report. Officers said they found him hiding in the men's room of an apartment complex's fitness center.

Jordan Hill (inset) and the "weapons of war" that a CPD spokesperson said he was arrested with on Friday. Hill can get out of jail by posting a $1,000 bond, according to the police department.

- Police responding to a call of shots fired in the 7300 block of N. Damen on July 19 stopped a car that pulled from a parking space and allegedly made an illegal turn.

Accused gun offenders are routinely released from custody on recognizance bonds that require no cash deposit or low cash bonds that sometimes require only a few hundred dollars to go free.

When the vehicle occupants were asked to step out, Isaac Okeyere, 21, emerged with a blue nylon bag strapped around his neck, officers said. The bag contained a 9-millimeter handgun loaded with hollow point rounds, according to CPD. Police said Okeyere blurted out, "OK. So I got caught with a gun. The sergeant told me it's a misdemeanor because it's my first one." In fact, he was charged with felony unlawful use of a weapon. Judge Sandra Ortiz released him on a recognizance bond.

- Angel Mireles, 23, of Hammond, IN, was arrested after a police sergeant saw him running after a vehicle in the 2200 block of N. Milwaukee with a pistol in his hand on July 26, according to CPD. Mireles, who has concealed carry license in his home state, but not in Illinois, is charged with felony unlawful use of a weapon and misdemeanor reckless conduct. Judge Charles Beach set bail at $10,000, meaning that Mireles needed to post a 10% bond of $1,000 to go free.

- Austin Randall, 29, was charged with Class X armed habitual criminal, misdemeanor assault with a deadly weapon, and misdemeanor battery after being identified as the person who pointed a gun at a 25-year-old man and a 14-year-old girl inside a Lincoln Square hotel room on July 27, police said. Randall has been ordered held without bail Judge Beach.

State records show Randall was paroled on March 1 after serving half of a six-year sentence for being a felon in possession of a firearm and methamphetamine possession. He was previously sentenced to three concurrent five-year terms in 2012 for being a felon in possession of a firearm; unlawful use of a weapon; and possession of a firearm with a defaced serial number.

But just because someone is ordered held without bail does not mean that another judge won't later set them free.

Naomi Turner, 39, was ordered held without bail after prosecutors charged her with shooting a 30-year-old woman on a sidewalk in the 5000 block of N. Winthrop last April. On July 25, Judge Carol Howard nixed the no-bail order and set Turner free on a recognizance bond with electronic monitoring.

Police ID wanted man in attack of Lincoln Park woman

BY CWBCHICAGO.COM

In a rare move, Chicago police have identified a wanted offender by name in connection with the July 13 attack and carjacking of a woman in her Lincoln Park garage.

A 56-year-old woman was confronted in her garage July 13 by an armed man who battered her, robbed her, and stole her car.

Adam Bramwell, a four-time convicted felon who is currently missing while on parole, is being actively sought by police, according to a new community alert from Area Central detectives. The alert warns people to call 911 if they know where Bramwell is and to avoid approaching him personally.

Bramwell, 32, was paroled in March after serving half of a four-year sentence that he received for aggravated unlawful use of a weapon in a vehicle. He was sentenced to three concurrent prison terms in 2012: six years for residential burglary, six years for robbery, and three years for domestic battery causing bodily harm.

The victim was parking in her garage on the 1800 block of N. Fremont when the man approached her with a knife, demanded her valuables and forced her from the car, police said. A struggle ensued and the woman was thrown to the ground and choked by the offender who then entered the vehicle and drove away northbound.

The offender initially ordered the victim to close the garage door behind them before initiating the robbery, according to an email shared with neighbors by a person familiar with the incident.

The woman suffered minor injuries to her legs and arms, but declined transportation to a hospital, police said.

Taken was a silver 2019 Honda Fit bearing a license plate that begins with "AZ77." The car will have damage on its roof because the garage door was going down as the robber backed out. He also struck the garage, so the car may have additional damage on its back end.

Anyone who has information about the incident or the whereabouts of Bramwell can contact Area Central detectives at 312-747-8380 regarding case JC-346738.

he waited for a train on the Belmont Red Line CTA platform, police said. The offenders punched the man in the face, robbed him of his phone and wallet, and then ran from the train station.

Four people were later arrested in the 3200 block of N. Halsted after being stopped by police and identified by the victim, according to a police spokesperson. Charges are pending against two of the arrestees. The other two were released without being charged, police said.

The 39-year-old victim was treated for injuries at the Belmont station.

Boystown regular charged with attempted sexual assault of intellectually challenged man

A character who frequents the Boystown neighborhood is in jail, accused of trying to sexually assault an intellectually challenged man at a South Side beach, according to court records.

Police said they came upon two men in Rainbow Beach Park around 4:15 a.m. on July 10. One of the men appeared to be wearing bikini bottoms. The other man was wearing a shirt, no pants, and carried a teddy bear, according to police.

Cops who spoke with the man who had no pants "quickly realized... he was unable to speak" and was carrying a stuffed animal. When officers asked where his pants were, he pointed to the other man, Jeremiah Beaverly, 26.

Prosecutors charged Beaverly with one count of Class X felony attempted criminal sexual assault of a person with an intellectual disability and criminal damage to property for allegedly destroying a mattress at the police station. Judge Arthur Willis ordered him held without bail.

Police were not able to immediately determine the alleged victim's age due to communication challenges.

only to reverse that decision within a few weeks.

Under a state law known as the Health Facilities Planning Act, operators of health facilities are required to obtain a permit from the review board before they can build a new facility or modify an existing one by demonstrating there is a need for such a facility. But until passage of the new law, they could apply for an exemption from the permitting process in order to close or downsize a facility.

Pipeline applied for such an exemption in February, and the review board approved that exemption April 30 on a 7-0 vote.

During that period, the village of Melrose Park and Cook County State's Attorney Kimberly Foxx filed suit seeking to overturn the board's decision, and in May a Cook County judge issued an order temporarily blocking the closure while the court reviews the case. The new law took effect as soon as Pritzker signed it.

New law limiting high-interest consumer debt

Consumer Fairness Act lowers post-judgment interest, reduces collection timeframe

BY PETER HANCOCK
Capitol News Illinois

Illinois residents who have had judgments entered against them for consumer debts will soon start paying less interest on those debts, and collectors will have a shorter timeframe in which to collect on those debts.

That's the result of a new law Gov. J.B. Pritzker signed July 29. House Bill 88, known as the Consumer Fairness Act, reduces the interest rate charged on post-judgment debt of $25,000 or less to five percent, instead of nine percent. It also reduces the time for collecting on a judgment to 17 years, instead of 26 years.

The new law takes effect Jan. 1, 2020.

Gov. Pritzker said the intent of the legislation is to relieve consumers from the burden of high-interest debt.

Sadly for Chicagoans, it will not protect people from the most predatory of all debt today, that incurred through parking tickets and City Sticker tickets. Those with City Sticker debt are now charged a nearly 200% penalty fee if the fee is paid late. Left unpaid for too long, the city also now seizes cars and sell them out from under the owner.

"Consumer debt is at an all-time high across the United States, and there are millions of people, including too many Illinois families, who are struggling under unconscionable circumstances," said Gov. Pritzker. "Here in Illinois, we are giving real relief to those who are simply trying to pay off their debts, so they can end the cycle of debt they are trapped in."

The bill was sponsored in the House by Rep. Will Guzzardi and in the Senate by Sen. Iris Martinez, both from Chicago. It passed both chambers by unanimous votes without opposition from debt collectors or other financial institutions.

"Millions of Illinoisans struggle with consumer debt, and our laws have allowed far too many of them to get trapped in an endless cycle of collections," Guzzardi said. "Today, we are putting reasonable limits on debt collection to protect people from predation and help them get back on their feet."

Project.

The Lincoln Yards TIF - rushed through City Council over the protests of hundreds of area residents and a number of grassroots organizations - including seven newly elected (but not yet installed) aldermen who protested on LaSalle St. while the super-TIFs were approved - the Lincoln Yard TIF is for $1.3 billion and includes $400 million in finance fees. Megaproject The 78 TIF is for $1.1 billion and also includes $400 million in finance fees.

The TIF revenue growth on the North Side can be partially attributed to higher property value reassessments that have significantly increased property taxes.

More than 25% of Chicago properties are in a TIF district, Yarbrough said.

The $2.1 billion Red Line TIF area for the CTA modernization project stretches from North Ave. to Devon Ave. along Red and Purple Line CTA tracks, and generated $116 million in revenue this year. That's nearly triple the amount of money the district captured last year, according to Yarbrough's office, and the most generated in Chicago from a single district.

And that revenue figure is expected to grow dramatically in the coming years as a great deal of high density development is coming to the areas located within the Transit TIF.

Former Mayor Rahm Emanuel and the City Council rushed to approve the new district in 2016, and planned to use some of the anticipated revenue to pay off debt that would finance new tracks, signals and a controversial flyover that will separate the Red and Purple line tracks from the Brown Line tracks north of Belmont Ave.

Tresser, who is also the editor of "Chicago Is Not Broke. Funding the City We Deserve," published in 2016 about city finances, said the Red Purple Line Modernization Project TIF funded is a perfect example of how TIFs are used to further inequality in this city.

"Every penny of increased value over the "base" - that is, the amount of property taxes generated at the time of the TIF's creation - goes to the TIF," he wrote. "Since the TIF dollars are supposed to be spent in the TIF where collected and since the transit TIF is so huge - this situation exacerbates and magnifies inequity in the city. All those current and future property tax dollars can not be put into the general fund to find its way to projects in the West or South Sides - or to help develop disinvested communities. That is why TIFs are racist and continue to swell with hundreds of millions of dollars in predominantly white and affluent areas of the city."

Tresser said since his book was published in 2016 his TIF Illumination group has held 66 public meetings based on his "Chicago Is Not Broke" while Mayor Rahm Emanuel's administration held no public budget meetings for three years. Tresser will be holding his 77th TIF town meeting Sept. 10 for the Wicker Park Committee where people can find out where their tax dollars are going.

Recently the city's inspector general lambasted the city for not being transparent on the TIF program, while a coalition of grassroots groups sued the city stating that the TIFs are racist.

and Family Services to set up a new claims clearinghouse to collect and analyze data about medical bills and to adjudicate claims. That agency will also establish a dispute resolution process and will act as the arbiter in disagreements between providers and MCOs.

The new law also requires MCOs to pay claims within 30 days and to make expedited payments to providers that serve large numbers of Medicaid patients, including long-term care facilities where more than
