The Chicago Water Tower and Pumping Station on N. Michigan Ave. are celebrating their 150th anniversary starting with festivities 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14.

Chicago icon to celebrate 150th with day-long festival all over neighborhood

Water Tower a symbol of city's spirit and resilience

Chicago and a multitude of local organizations will celebrate the sesquicentennial of a Chicago icon with a day-long festival, the Chicago Water Tower 150th Celebration 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14. Built in 1869 by architect William Boyington, the Water Tower became an important symbol of Chicago after it was one of the only buildings to survive the Great Chicago Fire in 1871.

In the 1860s, Chief Engineer Ellis Chesbrough was brought to Chicago to find a solution for Chicago's water supply which was polluted and inadequate for the growing population. Chesbrough designed a water supply system with tunnels extending nearly two miles into Lake Michigan to pull cleaner water into a pumping station for distribution to residents. To offset the pressure surges in the water, they added a 138-foot standpipe three feet in diameter that was housed in today's iconic Chicago Water Tower.

Architect William Boyington designed both the Chicago Water Tower and the Chicago Ave.

Pumping Station buildings in a Gothic Revival style of architecture constructed in distinctive yellow limestone quarried from Joliet. In 1918, when Michigan Ave. (formerly Pine St.) was widened, the plan was altered in order to give the Water Tower its current featured location. For its 100th anniversary, the Chicago Water Tower was selected by the American Water Works Assoc. to be the first American Water Landmark and was designated a Chicago Landmark in 1971. The Chicago Water Tower and Pumping Station were listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1975.

Free programming will include family activities, lectures, tours, theater, music, dance and circus performances, public art, and exhibitions -- along with food trucks, dining discounts, and complimentary admission to nearby cultural institutions. Some of the city's enjoyable food trucks will take part in the celebration, and will be located at the East Tower Court ("Little Michigan") just west of the Chicago Water Tower.

Activists call for investigation into City Hall collusion in Lincoln Yards

Claims of a 'TIF cover up'

Some community activists have allied to demand a return of $1.3 billion in what they're calling "ill-gotten Lincoln Yards TIF funds" given to developer Sterling Bay by Chicago officials.

They are claiming in light of the recent media reports that former Mayor Rahm Emanuel's administration and some members of City Council were fully aware that the proposed Lincoln Yards Mega TIF did not meet the state's requirements for creating a Tax Increment Financing [TIF] district. Members of the coalition opposing the Lincoln Yards TIF are now calling on Mayor Lori Lightfoot to immediately open an investigation into the matter and to freeze all financial activity related to the Lincoln Yards TIF.

The activists, who include members of the Grassroots Collaborative, Raise Your Hand for Illinois Public Education, Black Workers Matter and other community organizers, held a protest and a press conference 5:15 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 29, at the Harold Washington Library, 400 S. State St.

Recent news reports show that had the Emanuel Administration and Sterling Bay waited much longer to close the deal, the development centered at the Chicago

Many Chicago tax payers are coming to see that each and every TIF district is in reality a covert, hidden property tax increase, as funds drained away by TIF districts have to then be made up with funds coming from properties not located within TIF districts.

River and North Ave. may not have qualified for its record-high taxpayer subsidy.

So now several community groups are asking the courts to reverse the City Council's decision.

"We are outraged by these new revelations of collusion to push through the Lincoln Yards deal under false pretenses," says Abbie Illenberger, Deputy Director of the Grassroots Collaborative. "On the same day that Chicagoans are expecting Mayor Lightfoot to ask us to make more sacrifices, to prepare for more tax increases on working people, and to endure more cuts to vital programs and services, we call on [the mayor] and City Council to stop this massive giveaway of $1.3 billion taxpayer dollars to developer Sterling Bay. Chicago's working families cannot continue to have their tax dollars taken away from our own neighborhoods to build new luxury neighborhoods for the very wealthy."

Through the use of TIF, Sterling Bay will be given $1.3 billion in property taxes created by the site over the next 23 years. They plan to borrow against that income to get the money up front, but then have the city pay high interest rates (around 7%) due to Chicago's poor credit rating and failing finances. Over those 23 years, very little property tax money will escape from the development's TIF zone to help fund other public taxing bodies such as schools, libraries and the parks.

Flyover bridge to close again for month of September

The long-delayed new section of the Navy Pier Flyover on the Lakefront Trail has been closed, and will remain closed for construction for most of September, city officials said.

The Flyover, which opened in December to bike and pedestrian traffic, will be closed so the completed portion can be connected to the second phase of the project, which city officials say is almost done.

The city started building the $64 million flyover project in 2014 to bypass a dangerous bottleneck near Navy Pier where bikers met up walkers, cars, buses and trucks all passing through the busy intersection at Grand and Illinois streets.

City Hall hopes that once the Flyover reopens, the second portion will also be available for use via a temporary bridge to the east sidewalk of the Lake Shore Drive Bridge. Crews will continue working on the third phase of the project throughout the Fall and maybe even into the Winter.

Maybe it's memory that saves us in the end

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

Not bragging here but I have always had a good memory. I recall a blueberry pie from 1959, a $100 bill from an uncle in 1962 and Sr. deLourdes making me king of the classroom Missions back in 4th grade.

Now I am not so sure.

Many Millennials only seem to have deep experiences of their own iPhones and laptops. They were preoccupied when people of consequence or significance were being introduced.

That's not a judgment, just a fact.

They appear to know only the immediate world around them. Their tattooist, yoga guru, life-coach, landlord, Starbuck's barista and the bosses of their office pods who surround them and influence this last generation born in the 20th century.

Past presidents, mayors, cultural heroes, movie stars, authors or relatives have narrow impact on their lives. Just those in the immediate vicinity.

Millennials don't realize what they are missing, but that's not the same as forgetting.

Ever wonder why you've forgotten a person's name or a well-known event in history?

Or why you've walked into another room, or, worse, ... (what's the punch line of my story? I forget.)

A recent lunch with a school chum at the Peninsula Hotel was rejuvenating. Lots of gab, catching up and filling in the blanks. Twice while regaling him with a story I suddenly realized I no longer knew why I was even telling it. I couldn't find anything to hook the story to so I had to tell him that it would take a couple of minutes. Then it would come to me.

I chalk those moments up to my daily medications. Perhaps my Warfarin had thinned my blood too much? Maybe my Carvedilol needs adjustment, and there's always my Bumetanide to go haywire.

But rarely do the medications go awry. These are just the struggles and adjustments a person goes through trying to understand the process of aging and the need for more vigilant health care.

Memory is too valiant an ally to lose in the process of aging. It is where all life is stored. All those grand moments of achievement and conquest. From spelling tests to college Greek.

Memory is where we remember the perfect parsing of an Aorist verb. Where declensions are stored. Where verb endings are collected, and where French fragrances are tucked away from Chanel No. 5 to Rockgarden.

Memory is also where the secrets of the kitchen rest. Without the wits of my memory how could I pull together my seafood pie or remember if oysters really work in it? Is cod better than flounder in such a delicate sauce?

Without an adequate memory I might be left to open cans of beans. (Do I even know if I own a can opener?) How many teaspoons in a tablespoon? How many ounces in a cup? What's the best red wine to use in Boeuf Bourguignon? How much garlic is too much?

Then there's all the faces. You know, a grandfather long departed. A grandmother like she never left. Mary Margaret O'Malley, the goody two shoes who wanted to be a nun in 3rd grade and that thought snitching on her classmates was her entry to the convent.

Then there are all those friends of a lifetime.

And those eternal enemies.

There must be a million faces stored in my noggin. People I met on airplanes or bought a drink for in a pub. Or said a prayer for in a bind. Or the whole Rosary if they were in trouble.

The mugs of all my favorite aunts and uncles. My best friend's cousins. All the Dominican nuns who taught me to be quick and alert. And the one, Sister Caralita, who taught me to play the piano.

Then there's all those family occasions, First Communion, graduations, weddings and welcoming family from foreign lands. Not to mention my photo with the Pope.

What about the Pythagorean Theorem and the square root of Pi? (I just know I am gonna use them some day). Which right this minute reminds me I can read and recite, still, the entire Greek alphabet. Alpha, Beta, Gamma, Delta, Epsilon ...

Who knows where some of these things are stored? The shortcuts across the pavements of Rome that bring you into the backdoor of Trastevere just along the Tiber. Or what tram stops where along route of the great art museums in Vienna? The best bistro in Paris? Who has the best scrambled eggs and croissants early in the morning, or the name of the barman at the Ritz in Paris in the afternoon? (I remember now, it's Paul).

Such a dilemma.

Will everything short-circuit at the same time or is it more insidious, one face or recipe at a time? And in Chicago that's all twice as bad because no matter what else, you need your wits and memory about you to survive. Otherwise how can you tell who you are in debt to? Who you owe what?

What alderman you still need to grease the skids for, and what lobbyist you still need to pay off.

In Chicago you don't always need to know everyone's name. People are pretty forgiving. But you do have to remember your debt. How much for that sidewalk permit? How much for that driveway entrance? How much for that zoning change? What's that lake-front mooring for my boat gonna cost?

Seems like recently it's open season on local politicians who somehow manage to flunk the basics of a "sting" operation. You know, those whose greed exceeds their reach no matter how many times they go to church. Seems they have already begun the great process of forgetfulness. More than ever they should be asking for our prayers. Before they leave the world of perfume, Caesar salad and rare steaks.

Perhaps the worst punishment may be remembering them all with clarity. No fog to cloud their robust aroma of delectable smells and good government. Maybe it's memory that saves us in the end.

MERCY ABOVE ALL: Her father may have been one of the most well-known Irish saloon keepers on Chicago's West Side, "Babe" Connelly, a man of the people. His doors were always open to families on a Sunday, after Mass, so all could partake in the Irish goings-on at his Madison St. establishment. He was part of that old-time brigade that made sure people had food, shelter, work and education. His daughter watched his hands-on approach to citizenship and faith. She never forgot what she saw. Last week, Sister Rosemary Connelly, RSM, (a Religious Sister of Mercy), celebrated 70 years as a member of the Mercy Order. As director and spiritual Pontiff of Misericordia, an institution where she has spent her entire life, Sr. Rosemary has rescued infants and children for whom life is all heartache and pain. Those children were once written off as beyond human help. Sr. Rosemary proved them wrong. Love was the way. As a result, many lived far beyond the life expectancy of their times. Today Misericordia gathers those children as young adults in safe and protected environments. Friends filled the Chicago Hilton with more than 1400 people to honor her, from Cardinal Cupich to Mike Ditka. Thousands of sweet young souls filled that ballroom too, children from the seven decades of faithful service that opened as much life for them as they could hold. Bravo, Sister Rosemary, for your service to others.

EXPO CHICAGO: Presenting artwork from 135 galleries, 3,000 artists from over 24 countries at Chicago's historic Navy Pier. Be here. Sept. 19-22.

CASH MONEY: Recognizing that increased access to the arts enhances the vibrancy of local communities, ComEd and the League of Chicago Theatres announced grants of up to $10,000 each to 13 non-profit arts organizations throughout northern Illinois, eight of them in Chicago. From local performing arts troupes to galleries and theaters, each grantee has proposed at least one unique project to support the expansion of arts and cultural offerings for underserved audiences. In Chicago recipients are Shattered Globe Theatre in Lakeview, Esperanza Community Services and Adventure Stage Chicago in West Town, Cerqua Rivera Dance Theatre in the Loop, Repertorio Latino Theater in Bridgeport, Chimera Ensemble in Wicker Park, CircEsteem Inc. in Uptown, and xperimental Station in Woodlawn. Congrats all.

Pot party at the Pawar's

Former North Side alderman wants to start peddling pot

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Former 47th Ward Ald. Ameya Pawar will soon be peddling pot, but he won't be getting busted by Chicago Cops, now that recreational marijuana will be legal in the state of Illinois starting Jan. 1, 2020; even though selling and using it remains illegal by federal statute.

Joining him in the new enterprise will be political consultant Hanah Jubeh; Dr. George Chimpas, medical director of the Chicago Marathon; Nikki Hayes, head of the Laborers International Union of North America; and Scott Weiner, a co-owner of the Fifty/50 Restaurant Group.

The diverse partners are hoping to win one of the 75 new retail cannabis licenses to dispense recreational marijuana once it becomes legal come New Year's Day.

But they won't just stop there. "We're focused on total wellness. It's going to be a place where you could get a massage or take a yoga class, get a bite to eat and stop at the dispensary on your way out," Pawar told Crain's Chicago Business.

Pawar said more than 50% of the "wellness" center will be drawn from neighborhoods that have been heavily affected by the "War on Drugs."

"I'm interested in exploring what can be done from a restaurant prospective," Weiner said, adding he has taken part in so-called "underground" dinners where chefs create marijuana-laced meals – like a broccoli cheddar soup "with a cannabis component that reminded me of shaved

Former 47th Ward Ald. Ameya Pawar.

Pot use not free from risks

According to the Royal College of Psychiatrists, the use of marijuana is far from risk free. These risks are seldom discussed in the present rush to legalize recreational drug use in Illinois.

Even though the link is not fully understood, it is widely accepted that cannabis use can cause short term psychotic episodes. There is a lot of reliable evidence to show that there is a link between the use of stronger forms of cannabis and developing psychotic illnesses such as schizophrenia, bi-polar and psychosis.

Clinical psychiatrists specializing in addiction have been stressing for years how understated the risks and consequences tied to marijuana consumption are in the nation, as states move to decriminalize or legalize aspects of drug consumption.

The body treats oil-delivered cannabis as a fat molecule, so it makes the onset and offset times very unpredictable. Those oils are not water soluble either so once consumed, pot stays in your system at a cellular level much longer than most

French truffles."

"It was just like Wow," he told Crain's.

But Weiner added the project he and his colleagues are working on isn't going to have a restaurant-like atmosphere. "This can be a place to spend your whole day, unwind. There will be three equal components: dining, wellness and spa."

Weiner, who operates more than a dozen Chicago restaurants, won't name the location of the "wellness spa," but said it will be on the West Side.

Jubeh, a marathon runner when she's not helping run campaigns, reportedly came up with the eat-workout-and-medicate concept and sold the idea to Pawar and Chimpas.

Pawar, who made unsuccessful runs for governor and city treasurer after finishing his aldermanic term, isn't the first Chicago politician to get into cannabis business.

Former West Side State Sen. Rickey Hendon has already been selling pot-based products for people and their pets at a dispensary on West Madison St.

The shop also carries items from Wa-Kanna For Life, run by another politico - State Sen. Patricia Van Pelt (5th) – who at last report was awaiting licenses to grow and sell weed.

people realize.

And people do get addicted to pot as well, while others suffer mental illness from using.

Researchers studied a group of 18-20 year olds who smoked cannabis. When they followed up with them more than 15 years later, they found that participants were two times more likely to develop schizophrenia than someone who doesn't take cannabis, and six times more likely develop schizophrenia if they are a heavy cannabis user compared to someone who doesn't take cannabis.

It is estimated that 17% of adult users who started using cannabis in their teens will become addicted, and 9% of adult users who started using cannabis in adulthood will become addicted to cannabis.

Certainly America has come a long way from the "Reefer Madness" era that railed against the use of marijuana. But today, warnings about the drug often are dismissed as outdated propaganda. Amid discussions of decriminalization or of legalizing medicinal use, the topic rarely includes

RISKS see p. 5

Closer to home, there are at least half a dozen legal reefer retail stores – some with fanciful names like Natural Releaf, Huxheep CBD Apothecary, Innovative Wellness, and Green Gate right here on the North Side.

While the law currently only allows the sale of marijuana for medicinal purposes, recreational pot will be allowed with local approval after Jan. 1.

Pot shops coming to River North, Gold Coast

Marijuana retailers popping up like weeds

Marijuana retailers are starting to grab up retail storefronts in high rent districts on Chicago's North Side.

According to Crain's Chicago Business, Cannabis companies are scouting and signing leases on retail properties throughout the Chicago market. The spaces will be used to sell recreational pot starting Jan. 1, 2020, when Illinois' new pot law takes effect.

For Chicago-based Verano Holdings, the search has resulted in agreements to open two dispensaries in the Gold Coast and River North, one at 444 N. LaSalle St. and the other at 23 W. Maple St.

It appears the locations of highest interest right now are in Chicago's notorious party zones, as seen with Cresco Labs who signed a lease to move its MedMar dispensary from 3812 N. Clark St. three blocks south to a building within steps of Wrigley Field that currently houses a John Barleycorn restaurant. Cresco Labs, which holds 56 dispensary licenses across nine states, recently unveiled the "Sunnyside" branded pot store, announcing they plan to lump all of their current and future pot shops under this new label.

So North Siders should expect to Property tax appeal workshop Sept. 12

There will be a property tax appeal workshop 6:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 12, at the Broadway Armory, 5917 N. Broadway.

Property taxes have escalated quickly in Illinois these last few years and the rate of increases shows no sign of slowing down due to the desperate state of government finances in Chicago and Illinois.

Mayor Lori Lightfoot hinted to city residents during her state of the city speech Thursday that she may have to add another $830 million in new taxes to their tab to help underwrite Chicago's budget deficit this year.

Indeed, when combined with the high sales tax, high fuel and energy taxes, and proposed state income tax hike, North Siders now suffer by living in one of the highest tax locations in the nation.

And changes to federal law reducing the deductibility of state and local taxes have only exacerbated the situation putting greater focus on the constant demand for raising local taxes every year.

This workshop is hosted by the office of Cook County Board of Review Cmsr. Mike Cabonargi. Property owners are asked to bring a copy of their 2nd installment property tax bill.

In September, the Mayor will also lead four budget town hall meetings throughout the city, although none of them will be held on the North Lakefront. They are:

Huge apartment rent increases forecast for Chicago have not yet hit

Like death and taxes there's one other inevitability in life—apartment rent increases.

With the battering-ram of real estate tax increases hammering away at Chicago apartment owners this year, experts are wondering how much longer "Ma-and-Pa" landlords can compete with downtown luxury rental developments and stay in business.

Skyrocketing tax assessments on homes, condominiums and small apartment buildings in 2018 led to dramatic increases in real estate tax bills payable in 2019 for hundreds of thousands of property owners on Chicago's North Side and Northwest Side.

Out-going Cook County Assessor Joseph Berrios raised the estimated fair market value of some properties from 30% to more than 140% in North Side and Northwest Side neighborhoods. This comes as a parting shot from Berrios after he lost his re-election campaign to challenger Fritz Kaegi, the newly elected assessor.

In 2018, the entire City of Chicago was reassessed. The sharply higher assessed valuations sparked mind-bending real estate tax hikes when bills arrived this month.

Facing huge tax increases, many apartment building owners are planning to strike back with large rent increases to pay the expected sharply higher 2018 tax bills, but the tax hikes may take years to recoup.

Apparently, the expected Herculean rent hikes have not yet hit the Windy City. Chicago apartment rents rose only 1.4% between Aug. 2019 and Aug. 2018, slightly below the national average of 1.6% reported Apartment List, a national rental survey.

Currently, median rents in Chicago stand at $1,095 a month for a 1-bedroom unit and $1,288 for a 2-bedroom layout. Experts say renters should brace themselves for hefty rent hikes on new leases offered by landlords in spring of 2020.

However, one Old Town landlord who was slapped with a 33% real estate tax hike said he is planning a 6%-plus increase on a 1,000-square-foot rental unit in a Victorian walk-up, hiking the rent from $2,495 to $2,650.

Meanwhile, rents are skyrocketing more than 4.5% in Henderson, NV, and Mesa, AZ, and more than 3% in Phoenix, AZ, Raleigh, NC, and Austin, TX.

Another national rental study by Yardi Matrix reported that multifamily rents in 127 markets for the year through July 2019 rose a hefty 3.4% to $1,469.

Rents are going up faster in so-called "Lifestyle" buildings—fancy high-rises with a concierge, a swimming pool and roof-top grilling club and other expensive amenities. Lifestyle rents increased 3.1% in July, showcasing the strongest growth for the segment since Sept. 2016, according to the report.

However, for the past six years, in "Renter-by-Necessity" buildings—those lowly walk-ups without the bell-and-whistle amenities—rents have grown faster. Despite the rent increases, the national apartment occupancy rate declined only 0.1% to 94.8%.

Yardi Matrix reported that rent increases stem from several economic changes such as the nation adding 172,000 jobs per month in 2019.

The U.S. Census Bureau reported that the number of renter households increased to its highest level during the first quarter of 2019. Data shows that the number increased by more than 600,000 to 43.8 million.

Should Illinois put the brakes on 5G?

Some experts say 5G network radiation possibly carcinogenic

MARY SCHUERMANN KUHLMAN
Illinois News Connection

Some Chicagoans are encouraging state leaders to put the brakes on the rollout of new 5G wireless technology [5G is short for the fifth generation of wireless].

Chicago started seeing the installation and expansion of the 5G network last Winter. The big wireless carriers have been secretive about their specific rollout plans in Chicago, but Sprint, T-Mobile, AT&T and Verizon have taken to the task. In fact Sprint turned on their 5G network in Chicago on July 11. Indeed some of the high tech equipment seen on light poles throughout the city today are part of their 5G network.

The Illinois House Cybersecurity, Data Analytics and IT Committee held a hearing Aug. 29 on the topic of technology and 5G in Illinois.

New 5G technology promises higher speeds, higher capacity for connected devices, and better efficiency than current 3G and 4G technology.

The introduction of 3G got people to switch from cellphones to smartphones; and the 4G technology is what glued smartphones to people's hands and head by allowing enough data to pass through the air to give us Youtube, cat videos and streaming. Today the amount of data people use on their smartphones has gone up 40-50 times since 2010... but is that healthy?

The World Health Organization has already classified the radiation from radio frequencies as a potential 2B carcinogen. The list of health concerns associated with 5G range from heart health, radiation to the skin, tumor growth, vision problems, reduced bacterial resistance, ecosystem and Ozone disruption, cell-growth depression and even damage to crops and plants.

Paul Heroux - Professor of Toxicology and Health Effects of Electromagnetism in the Dept. of Epidemiology, Biostatistics, and Occupational Health at McGill Univ. in Montreal - told lawmakers he has serious reservations.

Heroux has studied the health effects from electromagnetic fields and radiation and says 5G greatly increases the risks. He explains that 5G infrastructure requires a larger number of smaller cell systems installed within close proximity to one another.

"Increasing the amount of radiation and making it as a beam and further supporting what is called the internet of things, which is a plan to put radiation everywhere to saturation, all of this is a very bad idea from the point of view of human health," says Heroux.

Both the wireless industry and the Federal Communications Commission say 5G is as safe as current technology. However, a 2016 government-funded study linked radio frequency radiation to cancers in rats, and in 2011 the World Health Organization suggested that cellphone radiation be listed as possibly carcinogenic to humans.

The list of health concerns associated with 5G range from heart health, radiation to the skin, tumor growth, vision problems, reduced bacterial resistance, ecosystem and Ozone disruption, cell-growth depression and even damage to crops and plants.

Heroux says the immediate impacts of 5G technology are felt by the few who are hypersensitive to radiation. For everyone else, he says, the radiation destroys biological structures over time and can accelerate chronic diseases such as Alzheimer's and diabetes.

He notes that children are especially vulnerable. "Their skulls are more easily penetrated by the radiation," says Heroux. "And we know from animal experiments that with the levels of radiation that are allowed by the FCC, you can irreversibly change the structure of the brain in animals, so we have to imagine that this can happen in children."

Instead of stronger wireless signals, Heroux suggests the industry increase the use of optical fiber in homes and buildings, which he notes can provide higher bandwidth.

The homes will be open between 12:00 p.m. and 5:00 p.m., rain or shine. Tickets may be purchased in front of the St. Gertrude's social hall at the Southwest corner of Granville and Glenwood beginning at 12:00 p.m.. The admission price of $25.00 includes a tour booklet featuring detailed historical descriptions of each home as well as light refreshments.

The Edgewater Historical Society museum is located at 5358 North Ashland and is open on Saturday and Sunday from 1:00p.m. to 4:00 p.m. You can view them on the web at <http://www.edgewaterhistory.org/ehs/tours/home-tour-preview>.

factual examinations of the harm that can come with marijuana consumption. Data show Americans have grown to perceive the drug as less harmful than alcohol and other drug use.

Also ignored are data that speak to how the drug can adversely affect health, can be associated with a decrease in IQ with chronic use, can lead to a number of undesirable social consequences and can reveal a predisposition to serious mental illness.

To that last point, a study of the data shows the risk of schizophrenia increases as marijuana use increases. There is also a higher risk of schizophrenia-like psychosis directly related to younger ages of first marijuana use. It's important to note that there is a distinction between a substance causing psychosis and one revealing a predisposition.

Serious mental illness often occurs with marijuana abuse. Of the 21 million people in the U.S. with a substance use disorder, 8 million also live with a mental illness. The dual diagnosis is not an exception—it's much more common than most may think. Those with mental illness are more susceptible to addiction—substance abuse is twice as prevalent among adults with mental illness—because of the desire to self-medicate symptoms. Some people with mental illness may not even know that their substance use constitutes as a disorder.

Users are more likely to develop a psychotic illness if they smoke cannabis, and they are 'genetically vulnerable' to mental health problems.

Alcohol and drugs can worsen the symptoms of mental illness. And prolonged use of substances increases the underlying risk for mental illness. Individuals with mental illness consume roughly 38% of all alcohol, 44% of all cocaine and over half of all opioid prescriptions in the U.S. And the more severe the mental illness, the greater the likelihood a person will also use substances.

Not everyone who uses cannabis will develop psychosis or schizophrenia. Not everyone who has psychosis or schizophrenia has used cannabis. But users are more likely to develop a psychotic illness if they smoke cannabis, and they are 'genetically vulnerable' to mental health problems. Pretending that marijuana is a harmless substance is not the way to help the mentally ill or loved ones.

Some of the biggest names in Chicago night life performed at Rainbo Gardens nightclub during the early 20th century. And some of the most star-crossed teen romances bloomed on the roller rink floor of the Rainbo Rink.

Rainbo Roller Rink part of Lost Chicago presentation

Located at N. Clark St. and Lawrence Ave. the Rainbo Gardens has a long history of businesses and nightclubs, going back way before the ice skating rink and then the roller skating rink some people today may remember.

From the earliest jazz, dancing and political rallies to jai alai, ice skating, roller skating, boxing and rock-n-roll concerts, the nightclub and its predecessor the Rainbo Roller Rink entertainment venue had it all. Many Chicagoans remember having their first kiss, dance, skate or conert there -- or maybe all four.

In the '60s the Rainbo became the Kinetic Playground, in the '90s the roller rink became important to the rave, deejay, hip-hop and graffiti art scene.

Local journalist and historian Andy Pierce will share historic photos and interesting information to help bring this memorable place of Lost Chicago back to life during a presentation 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 21, at the Bezazian Library, 1226 W. Ainslie St. For more information call 312-744-0019.

Pierce was one of the founders of Friends of the Uptown Theatre and a presenter at Bezazian on the history of the Uptown. He was a former reporter for Lerner Newspapers and served the City of Chicago in the Dept. of Buildings and in the City Council Division. Pierce recently exhibited his Rainbo photographs at the Sulzer Regional Library.

Pierce recently exhibited his Rainbo photographs at the Sulzer Regional Library. According to the Illinois History Journal, as early as 1894, the site was occupied by a small roadside restaurant that likely enjoyed a robust business. Like many of the other picnic groves that operated across the city's northern periphery during the late 19th and early 20th centuries, the Clark St. roadhouse would have offered weary travelers and St. Boniface Cemetery visitors a welcome place to stop and refresh themselves before continuing their journeys or returning to the city. There was food in the restaurant, drinks in the tavern, and a spacious picnic grove out back. Two lengthy horse sheds provided visitors a place to hitch their horses and park their carriages.

During the next 20 years, urban growth gradually engulfed the Clark St. roadhouse. As the area grew, the roadhouse changed.

By 1905, its owners had added a second floor to the restaurant and erected a two-story beer hall, a bowling alley, an outdoor dance floor, and several stand-alone refreshment stands.

These new amenities helped transform the old roadhouse into an urban amusement center. Whereas the old 19th century roadhouse had catered to travelers and cemetery visitors whose dining options were limited by the remoteness of the site, the enlarged 20th century eatery and outdoor pleasure ground competed with other urban amusements for the business of young, pleasure-seeking urbanites.

By the summer of 1917, the pleasure spot had come to be known as the Moulin Rouge Gardens, with D'Urbano's Eccentric Italian Band heading the bill of entertainers. Shortly after the end of WWI, Chicago restaurateurs Fred and Al Mann took over the Moulin Rouge Gardens. The pair changed the name of the place to Rainbo Gardens, reportedly in memory of Al's wartime service in the 42nd "Rainbow" Division of the American Expeditionary Forces.

After a visit in July 1921, a Variety correspondent reported that the Rainbo Gardens was "running an easy first with the money-getters. The gardens are beautifully decorated, cool and inviting. Stunts are proving drawing cards, and at present a toddle contest is very popular. An automobile is to be given to the winners."

Shortly after the end of WWI, Chicago restaurateurs Fred and Al Mann took over the Moulin Rouge Gardens. The pair changed the name of the place to Rainbo Gardens, reportedly in memory of Al's wartime service in the 42nd "Rainbow" Division of the American Expeditionary Forces.

In 1921, Mann set about giving the old pleasure spot a million-dollar make-over. Plans called for a redesigned outdoor gardens for summertime events and the construction of a two-story structure to house a cocktail bar and dining room that would remain open year round. The rebuilt gardens opened in June 1922.

Some of the biggest names in Chicago night life performed at Rainbo Gardens during the early 20th century. During the late 1910s, singing sensation Ruth Etting performed there after having made a name for herself as a costume designer at Chicago's Marigold Gardens. She wowed audiences at the Rainbo Gardens with her deep singing voice and her eye-catching chorus-line costumes.

Before leaving for Hollywood, many Chicagoans had come to know her as "Chicago's Sweetheart." Musicians were also an important part of the Rainbo Gardens during these years.

Before it was demolished, the Rainbo Roller Rink was primarily a late-night roller skating rink but also hosted some concerts in the rink as well. The last event held in the building was on March 30, 2003, and it was demolished in Nov. 2003.

Today there is a new condominium complex where the Rainbo building once stood. The new condominium complex is named Rainbo Village.

Dept. of Public Health releases Older Adult Health Report

The Chicago Dept. of Public Health (CDPH) and the Center for Community Health Equity (CCHE) have jointly released a report describing the health status of Chicago's older adult population.

In 2016, there were more than 300,000 adults over the age of 65 living in Chicago, and this number is expected to grow. The report provides an in depth look at older adult health and well-being across a range of topics by gender, race and ethnicity.

Highlights from the report include:

- The older adult population in Chicago is increasing, both in terms of the overall number of older adults in the city, and the proportion they make up of the overall population.
- Once they reach age 65, older adults in Chicago are expected to live to 84.1 years.
- Heart disease, cancer and stroke are the three leading causes of death for older adults, regardless of gender or race/ethnicity.

ethnicity.

- More than one third of Chicago older adults have a disability.
- Overall, 16% of Chicago older adults live below the Federal Poverty Level and nearly half of Chicago older adults would not be able to afford an unexpected $400 expense.
- Older adults, regardless of gender or race/ethnicity, report a high level of neighborhood belonging.

This report purports to build on the goals of Healthy Chicago 2.0, the city's plan to improve health equity. The plan hopes to provide actions to help ensure that all residents, including older adults, "not only have access to the services and resources they need, but also live and age well in an environment that is healthy and affirming."

The Center for Community Health Equity is a collaboration of DePaul Univ. and Rush Univ. Medical Center. The Center researches ways to improve health outcomes and contributes to the elimination of health inequities in Chicago.

"As Chicagoans continue to live longer, CDPH is committed to supporting aging residents to live healthy lives. We do this first by characterizing the older adult population in Chicago and identifying where health inequities exist," said Dr. Allison Arwady, CDPH Acting Commissioner. "We are grateful to collaborate with the Center for Community Health Equity to release this report, which offers new data that partners across Chicago can use in their work to promote the health of older adults."

Older adults, regardless of gender or race/ethnicity, report a high level of neighborhood belonging.

In 2012, Chicago joined the World Health Organization's [WHO] Global Network of Age-Friendly Cities, a group of cities and communities worldwide who are striving to better meet the needs of residents of all ages by creating inclusive and accessible urban environments. This led to the Chicago Dept. of Family and Support Services creating and releasing the Chicago Plan in 2015.

"Health inequities among older adults are often ignored and even assumed to not exist. This report helps to address that gap in Chicago," said Fernando DeMaio, Professor of Sociology at DePaul and Co-Director of the Center for Community Health Equity. "The data in this report reveal important features of the structural and social determinants of health, and serve as an important call to action to address disparities that are avoidable, unnecessary, and unfair."

According to the WHO, an age-friendly city like Chicago aspires to be an "inclusive and accessible urban environment that promotes active aging." The soon be hearing about pot retailers signing leases in Boystown, Andersonville, Weed St., along Milwaukee Ave. in Logan Square and in Bucktown and Wicker Park.

Cannabis companies like Verano are taking a gamble by trying to nail down retail spaces even before the city releases regulations dictating where recreational pot can be sold, reports Alby Gallun of Crain's. Complicating matters further, the new state law prohibits recreational dispensaries from operating within 1,500 feet of each other, a major restriction.

But that's not stopping the cannabis companies, which are in a race to find the best locations among a limited number of properties—and to build out their stores as soon as possible. The hunt has even taken firms like Verano to N. Michigan Ave. where they hope to peddle upstart pot brands like ZenLeaf on the Mag Mile.

Verano has negotiated a lease for a recreational dispensary at 444 N. LaSalle, a three-story, 9,600-square-foot building owned by Fred Latsko. They have also signed a lease for another vacant 6,600-square-foot building at 23 W. Maple, also owned by Latsko.

Latsko told Crain's that leasing to a cannabis company could force him to pay off his debt on the properties because his lenders, wary of running afoul of federal laws criminalizing pot, aren't likely to approve the deals.

But recreational pot soon will be legal in Illinois, which legalized marijuana for medical uses in 2013. Under the new law, signed by Gov. J.B. Pritzker in June, companies that already have licenses to run medical dispensaries can open the same number of recreational dispensaries and also apply for licenses for additional stores.

Other marijuana companies also are busy scouting the Chicago market, even without knowing how local ordinances will limit recreational sales.

Meet 'Sylvia' creator Sept. 6 at the Edgewater Library

Author and cartoonist Nicole Hollander will discuss her book, "We Ate Wonder Bread," on Sept. 6 at the Edgewater Library.

Hollander will share her coming-of-age story complete with gangsters, the police, Catholic girls and drives into better Chicago neighborhoods in the family car, a blue Hudson. The free program, a partnership with Edgewater Village Chicago and Women and Children First Bookstore, will be held on the second floor of the library. Autographed copies of her memoir will be available for purchase.

"Nicole Hollander has been one of our nation's leading satirists," said Jules Feiffer, cartoonist and author. "This means she is in the business of telling the truth and making it funny... She is a radical social critic who is certain that nothing works, and so what?"

Hollander wrote in her blog, "When I was 40 I created the cartoon character Sylvia. She was going to hack her way through the jungle of aging." However, Sylvia didn't age, and the daily comic strip was so successful that it ran for 30 years. Hollander also published 19 "Sylvia" collections. She has been described as "the most outspokenly feminist cartoonist in mainstream publication."

Veteran cartoonist Nicole Hollander, who created the internationally syndicated comic strip, "Sylvia," will discuss her witty, illustrated memoir, "We Ate Wonder Bread: Growing Up on Chicago's West Side," from 1:30 to 3 p.m. on Fri., Sept. 6, at the Edgewater Library, 6000 N. Broadway.

REPORT from p. 7

WHO model is built on the premise that an age-friendly city sustains "opportunities for health, participation and security in order to enhance quality of life as people age." Cities who join the network commit to a five-year cycle of planning, implementation, and evaluation.

"As a geriatrician, the report provides a glimpse into the experiences of Chicago's older adults, a key group that makes the city such a vibrant place to live," said Dr. Raj C. Shah, Associate Professor, Family Medicine and Rush Alzheimer's Disease Center at Rush Univ. Medical Center. "The Older Adult Health report provides insights to support the design of solutions that will advance healthy aging for all in Chicago."

Because of their work with Age-Friendly Chicago, DFSS understands that seniors want to age in their homes. In addition, a number of Age-Friendly Initiatives have been launched including: Age-Friendly Businesses; Age-Friendly Caregiver Support; and the Age-Friendly Village Interdependent Collaboratives, which uses the senior centers as a base to build volunteer support around seniors wishing to continue to live in their homes and communities as they age.

Andy Poznanski: One step ahead

Clare resident Andy Poznanski has often been one step ahead.

He and his family were one step ahead of significant danger on several occasions during World War II. He was a step ahead in certain aspects of pediatric radiology, including the development of approaches to reduce patient radiation exposure and the identification of genetic malformations.

Now, after a dramatic and challenging childhood and extensive career, Poznanski resides at The Clare with his wife, Gail Margolis, enjoying personalized service, excellent food at his fingertips and the company of wonderfully diverse and thoughtful residents.

"I'm not really in a hurry anymore to go anywhere," he says.

But throughout his life, that wasn't always the case.

Evading World War II

As an 8-year-old in Poland when Germany attacked in September 1939, Poznanski joined his sister and parents in trying to escape to the east.

They left Warsaw with a horse and wagon days after the invasion, only to return when they heard Russia had also invaded Poland. His father believed it would be easier to get out of Poland from the German side. During this time, the family was caught between both warring parties and was subject to bombing and strafing on the roads.

"I recall how frightened we were fleeing first to the east, hiding in the forest, encountering German troops, and after returning to Warsaw, having our house searched by the Gestapo," Poznanski says.

An uncle, who was the Consul General of Poland living in London with connections to various embassies, then arranged for a visa and false documents to enable the family to leave occupied Poland in February 1940. Poznanski was told that his family had one hour prior to boarding a train to Italy, and eventually to France. His father, a civil engineer, obtained a job working on a dam construction in Algeria, then a Department of France. However, no sooner had they arrived in Algiers that France fell to the Germans and the job ended. Fortunately, the funds advanced for their travel to the new job were enough to provide them with basic support despite severe rationing in the country.

Initially in Algeria, the German military presence was light, and life calmed down for Poznanski and his family. Poznanski attended school and learned French.

"I remember Algiers as being a lovely place to live," he says.

Again one step ahead, just as the German presence began to increase dramatically, his father secured a job in Canada, a country seeking engineers for the war effort. In July 1942, they traveled across the Atlantic Ocean on a Portuguese ship that had been leased by an American Jewish organization to help refugees flee Europe. The ship unloaded its passengers in Baltimore, where they took a train to their new home in Canada – first Ottawa, then Montreal.

"I vividly remember landing in Baltimore and walking to the train with armed guards lining the path to make sure we didn't escape into the United States," Poznanski says.

This was in sharp contrast to the joyful reception they received upon arrival in Canada.

Embarking on a career in radiology

Poznanski attended McGill University in Montreal, studying mathematics and physics. Upon graduation, he decided to pursue medicine at McGill, a choice that propelled him to become deeply involved in the emerging specialty of pediatric radiology, to engage in ongoing research, and later to become a member of the American Board of Radiology.

As an 8-year-old in Poland when Germany attacked in September 1939, Poznanski joined his sister and parents in trying to escape to the east.

He obtained his U.S. citizenship and completed his residency in 1960 at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit, where he remained on staff and set up a pediatric subsection within the department. Poznanski developed several devices to make X-ray procedures easier and more comfortable for children, and he oversaw a significant expansion of the department.

From there, he moved on to become a professor and co-director of radiology at the Mott Children's Hospital at the University of Michigan. After 11 years in Ann Arbor, he came to Chicago in 1979 as a professor of radiology at Northwestern University and radiologist in chief at Children's Memorial Hospital (presently Lurie Children's Hospital of Chicago), known there affectionately as "Dr. P."

During these years, not only did he share his knowledge with future doctors, but he was also recognized as an expert in radiology of the hand, particularly identifying symptoms of congenital malformations.

"Perhaps the most satisfying and enjoyable aspects of my career were interactions with clinical colleagues, as well as teaching residents and technologists," Poznanski says.

Over the course of his career, Poznanski became president of three national and international professional organizations and received four gold medals for contributions to radiology, frequently lecturing at conferences worldwide. He also was a member of the International Commission on Radiological Protection. Always involved in research, he authored three books, co-authored another and found time to publish more than 200 articles centered on the radiology of the hand, growth and development, and congenital malformations.

His multi-decade career allowed him to experience tremendous change in the field of radiology.

"That's the amazing thing, and that's why it was so exciting," Poznanski says. "When I first started, all we had were X-rays and wet film."

Then, processing improved considerably, and nuclear medicine and ultrasound were introduced. CT was the next major development, followed by MRI.

"All of a sudden, you could separate muscles, blood vessels, fat and more," Poznanski says. "You saw anatomy so much better."

Of course, these advancements kept Poznanski on his toes.

"I had a lot of learning to do," he jokes.

He gradually eased his way out of his career in radiology, retiring as chair of the department at age 68 and working part-time for the next 12 years.

Through it all, from his flight from Europe to his challenging work life, Poznanski proved to be resilient, adaptive and modest.

"It was hard, of course," he says. "But I was fortunately able to face difficult situations and deal with them."

Sex offender arrested

Anthony Hatley, 58, of the 900 block of W. Lawrence Ave., has been charged with one Felony Count of Failure to Register as a Sex Offender.

Anthony Hatley

Hatley was placed into custody 2:09 p.m. Aug. 28, in the 2500 block of N. Bosworth Ave. following a report of a barricaded subject. It was later determined he had failed to register as a sex offender and was charged accordingly.

At least 11 robberies downtown in August

At least five robberies were reported in the downtown between Friday morning and Sunday night.

Most recently, a man and woman robbed the Bluemercury cosmetics store at 356 N. Clark around 4:12 p.m. Sunday. A 35-year-old woman who works at the store told police that she confronted the couple after they collected merchandise and prepared to leave the store. The man battered the woman, and both offenders then fled south on Clark St. toward a white van.

Police on the scene said the couple were white, "European," very tan, and in their 40s. The man wore a white button-up shirt while the woman wore a blue dress with "an Amish-style bonnet on her head," officers said.

Earlier Sunday, two armed robbers pistol-whipped a clerk during a robbery of the Burnham Mart convenience store at 828 S. Wabash. The men hit the cashier over the head with a gun around 1 a.m. and then stole cigarettes along with other merchandise, police said. The robbers were described as two masked black men, one of whom wore a black sweatshirt with white paint splatter marks. The other wore blue jeans, a black shirt, and sunglasses.

Around 4:45 a.m. Saturday, a man reported being attacked by a group of robbers near Wabash and Huron in River North. The victim said six or seven men jumped him and then took his phone before running from the scene. He described the assailants only as a group of black men between 18- and 20-years old, according to a police report.

At least two women reported being robbed on Friday. The first sought help at a River North Starbucks after two men robbed her at gunpoint around 4:20 a.m. Police said the victim was near Hubbard and La Salle when the two offenders approached her and one displayed a black gun in his waistband.

She described the robbers as two black men who are both skinny and in their early 20's. One wore a light blue shirt, black pants, and black gym shoes with no laces. The other one a zip-up hoodie, black pants, and black and white shoes.

The second woman was reportedly robbed as she entered CVS Pharmacy at 105 S. Wabash around 1:30 p.m. Police said two men ran toward the L station at Adams and Wabash after taking the victim's wallet. No description of the offenders was available.

An additional six robberies occurred downtown when offenders entered the retail clothing store and took various items displayed for sale, and passed the last point of sale without paying for merchandise, knowingly committing a theft.

Offenders have used force or threat of force when confronted by store personnel. These incidents have occurred during the daytime hours along the 100 block of N. State St. Incidents include one on Aug. 06, at 12:20 p.m.; another on Aug. 08, at 12:46 p.m.; Aug. 11, at 6:41 p.m.; Aug. 14, at 3:30 p.m.; Aug. 15, at 9:27 a.m., and one on Aug. 23, at 8:40 p.m.

Rogers Park resident charged with robbing autistic man 5 days after beating another victim

A Rogers Park man is accused of beating up and robbing an autistic man less than a week after being charged with battering another victim during a 7-on-1 mugging in the Far North Side neighborhood, according to court records.

Michael Williams, 18, was arrested Aug. 25 after Chicago police officers pursued him into neighboring Evanston after he ran from them during a stolen vehicle investigation.

Officers were called to the area of Jarvis and Seeley by a witness who reported seeing three men breaking into a red Jeep. Officers said they arrived and saw two men and Williams trying to put cardboard over the vehicle's broken window.

Williams told cops that the Jeep belonged to his mother, but a check of the license plate revealed that the car had been reported stolen. Williams allegedly ran from the scene and was arrested a short time later.

He was later identified as the person who punched an autistic man in the face and stole his phone, iPod, and cash on the 7200 block of N. Damen last Thursday, prosecutors said.

Williams was charged with felony robbery and misdemeanor counts of reckless conduct and criminal trespass to a vehicle. Judge Charles Beach set bail at $3,000 and ordered Williams to go onto electronic monitoring if he can post a 10% deposit bond of $300.

Just five days before the autistic man was mugged, Williams was charged with battery after his 45-year-old neighbor identified him as one of seven people who punched and kicked him during a robbery, police said. Williams was released on a recognizance bond in that case.

Armed carjackings

An armed carjacking crew is suspected of targeting three people on the Northwest Side in under two hours Sunday morning.

Police said in a community alert that between two and five offenders had ordered each victim from their vehicle at gunpoint. One victim, a 59-year-old woman, was pistol-whipped, according to a source.

The first carjacking was reported on the 2900 block of N. Talman in the Avondale neighborhood at 6 a.m., police said. After the offenders ordered the victim from her car, the gunman struck her in the head with his weapon.

At 6:50 a.m., a man was ordered out of his 2015 dark gray Subaru Forester on the 5700 block of N. Christiana in the North Park neighborhood. The victim told police that the carjackers were also using a dark-colored Jeep Cherokee to get around.

Finally, at 7:35 a.m., a man was carjacked at gunpoint by three offenders on the 3900 block of N. Keeler in the Irving Park neighborhood. The robbers pulled up in a dark SUV, and one of them ordered the victim from his silver Isuzu Rodeo at gunpoint.

Police said the robbers are a group of Hispanic men between 19- and 30-years-old and a black male between 20- and 29-years-old. One of the victims thought the gunman had a tattoo on his face.

Divvy snatcher pilfering phones downtown

A man on a Divvy bike is snatching phone from people's hands as he pedals around the downtown area, police said.

The man struck twice on Aug. 23, according to a community alert issued by Area Central detectives: on the first block of S. La Salle at 1:45 p.m. and on the 300 block of S. Riverside Plaza at 2 p.m.

Police said the thief—described only as a black male with black hair who weighs about 140lbs—grabs the phones from his victims as he rides past them on the public way.

Anyone with information about the incidents may contact investigators at 312-747-8384 regarding pattern P19-1-275.

Sexual assault reported near Adler Planetarium

Detectives were investigating a reported sexual assault on the lakefront downtown on Aug. 30. A possible offender is in custody, police said.

Officers came upon a distraught 34-year-old woman as they patrolled the 500 block of E. Solidarity Dr. near the Adler Planetarium just after midnight.

The woman's boyfriend told police that he had walked away from his girlfriend after they became involved in an argument. When he returned, the boyfriend reportedly saw the woman and another man walking out from behind some bushes.

Police said the boyfriend and the other man began to fight as officers arrived. During questioning at the scene, the boyfriend reported that the other man had sexually assaulted his girlfriend. Officers placed the second man into custody.

The woman was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital for treatment.

A police department source said she showed physical signs consistent with a sexual assault. However, in a media statement released at 3 a.m., the police department said "the victim has not provided any information to police at this time."

Violent attack of security guard ends with probation

The man who brutally beat a 61-year-old security guard at the posh Trump International Hotel in March has been sentenced to probation.

Craig Echols

Craig Echols, 24, allegedly attacked the guard and another security officer after they confronted him for smoking in the lobby and damaging property.

The older guard was knocked to the ground, suffering a broken finger, torn ligaments in his right knee, a fractured cheekbone, and facial trauma that required 17 stitches to close, according to court records.

This week, Echols pleaded guilty to a single count of aggravated battery of a security officer. In exchange, prosecutors dropped 14 additional aggravated battery charges as well as a criminal damage to property count. Judge Timothy Joyce sentenced Echols to two years probation and 164

Construction supervisor OK after being shot in on-going labor dispute

A construction supervisor is in good condition after being shot during an on-going dispute with a day laborer at a Lakeview construction site Aug. 30, according to police and sources.

Police were called to the 1200 block of W. Cornelia at 10:30 a.m. after a man reported that a known offender had fired a shot at him on the street near a work site. The victim, who was struck by one bullet in the buttocks, was transported to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center, police said.

The shooter, a white male who's about 60-years-old, fled in a black Ford Focus, according to a witness. Police believe the gunman used to work for the victim at the construction site.

A police department source said days time served.

The hotel attack came just four months after Echols was accused of beating a 39-year-old woman with a baseball bat, records show. In that case, a woman emerged from an apartment carrying a bloody baseball bat. Her face and head were covered with blood, cuts, and contusions, police said. The woman reported that Echols had beaten her with the bat.

But Echols—whose hands were bloody, according to police—countered that the woman swung the bat at him, so he disarmed her and struck her with it in self-defense. The charges were dropped after the woman stopped cooperating with prosecutors.

Group robs two Loop 7-Eleven stores

A small group of robbers has raided two convenience stores in the Loop in August, prompting police to issue a warning about the crew.

According to the community alert, three men went behind the stores' counters, pushed the clerks out of the way, and stole merchandise both times. The robberies were reported by 7-Eleven stores in the first block of E. Jackson at 1:20 a.m. Aug. 22 and in the first block of East Adams at 9:28 p.m. Aug. 23, police said.

A CPD report of the Aug. 22 case said that the robbers battered the cashier and stole eight cartons of Newport cigarettes and bags of chips. The offenders were three black males between 18- and 21-years-old who all wore black hoodies and black jeans, according to the alert. Two were last seen northbound on Wabash, the other two fled westbound on Jackson.

No further details were available for the second robbery, but police described the offenders as three black males of various heights and weights.

Information about the robberies may be shared with Area Central investigators at 312-747-8384. Refer to pattern #P19-1-286.

Wanted for Hit & Run on Armitage

Police are looking for a hit and run driver who hit a male pedestrian in the 2000 block of W. Armitage Ave. at 2:55 a.m. Aug. 25. The pedestrian suffered life-threatening injuries. The vehicle failed to stop at the scene to render aid and exchange information.

The vehicle was traveling eastbound on Armitage Ave. at the time of the accident.

Anyone who may have information regarding this incident, is asked to contact the CPD's Major Accident Investigation Unit at 312-745-4521.

Lincoln Park stand off ends peacefully

A SWAT team stand-off ended peacefully in Lincoln Park Aug. 29 after a man barricaded himself inside an apartment with his girlfriend, according to police and neighbors.

the gunman is suspected of attacking the same victim with a hammer earlier this week at the same location.

Around 4 p.m. Aug. 26, a construction supervisor walked into the 16th Police District to file a report. The man said a former employee damaged his property and struck him with a hammer earlier in the day on the 1200 block of W. Cornelia, according to a police department spokesperson. CPD would not officially confirm that the shooting and hammer incidents involve the same victim and assailant.

The victim told police on Monday that he would seek medical attention on his own for injuries he received in the hammer incident.

Patrol officers responded to an apartment building on the 2500 block of N. Bosworth after a caller reported hearing a woman scream for help from a third floor unit around 11:45 a.m. First-responding officers came into contact with the man who they said was naked and holding a knife to the woman.

The situation was handed off to the police department's SWAT team after the man allegedly barricaded himself inside. Negotiators worked with the man's relatives to resolve the stand-off around 2 p.m.

Police took the man into custody and transported him to Advocate Illinois Masonic Medical Center. The woman, who had an injury to the top of her head, was also taken to Masonic for treatment.

No charges have yet been filed in the case.

Robbers target three women in two hours

At least three women were mugged by a pair of thieves Aug. 26 in the North Center, Lincoln Square, and Roscoe Village neighborhoods, according to police records and a witnesses who wrote to this reporter. No one is in custody.

The first victim was pushed to the ground by two males who tried to take her phone near the intersection of Lincoln Ave. and Irving Park Rd. around 3:30 p.m. A witness said the woman fought back and the offenders ran away southbound. The victim apparently left the scene before police arrived and no formal report was immediately found.

About 45 minutes later, two males robbed a woman of her phone near Leavitt and Wilson in Lincoln Square. The offenders fled northbound through an alley, police said.

Then, a reader saw a woman get robbed of her phone on the 1800 block of W. Roscoe around 5:15 p.m. "It happened on the south side of Roscoe right during the evening rush," the man said. "She didn't want to call the police." Again, no formal report was immediately found by CPD.

Witnesses described the robbers as two black male teenagers. One wore a white sweatshirt and the other wore a green sweatshirt, according to descriptions provided to police and this reporter.

Robberies on Near North Side

Police are warning residents of the Near North Side of recently reported robberies. In each incident, the offenders approached victims and punched or forcibly grabbed property from their hands.

Incidents include one on the 600 block of N. Wells St., Saturday, Aug. 3, in the evening hours; another on the 0-100 block of W. Grand Ave.,

City finally admits they have a STD problem, creates Syphilis Task Force

The City has announced a new, multiyear initiative to try and lower the number of sexually transmitted infections (STIs) in Chicago, starting with a task force of medical and community experts that will create a comprehensive action plan to reduce new primary and secondary syphilis cases, the most infectious stages of disease in men and pregnant women.

This comes after reports of a rise in the number of reported STI's in certain at risk communities including several on Chicago's North Side. In a 2017 study done by the city, the highest rates of new HIV infection diagnoses were seen in individuals residing in Uptown, Chatham and Washington Park. The highest rates of people living with HIV were observed in Uptown, Edgewater, Rogers Park and South Shore. Non-Hispanic Blacks were the most frequently diagnosed population, representing 54.8% of new HIV diagnoses, and 64% of AIDS diagnoses. There were 5.1 times as many new HIV diagnoses among men than women.

Compared with other HIV transmission groups, there were 3.9 times more new HIV diagnoses among men who have sex with men than those reporting heterosexual transmission, and 19.3 times more new HIV diagnoses than those reporting transmission associated with injection drug use.

While there were only 11 reported cases of congenital syphilis in 2017 in Chicago, the lowest reported number in the past five years, non-Hispanic Black mothers accounted for over 90% of the reported congenital syphilis cases in 2017.

The nationwide surge of sexually transmitted diseases in recent years has created a sense of urgency for Chicago-area doctors and city health officials to embrace going public about the growing problem. STD rates have hit an all-time high, according to the Centers for Diseases Control and Prevention.

For several years during the Emanuel Administration this newspaper questioned city health officials about signs of a growing problem with STD's on the North Side, and we were told that Chicago public health officials were not seeing this rise locally. Under the Lightfoot administration those blanket denials have apparently ended.

While HIV rates are now declining, other STIs are on the rise in Chicago and across the nation. In 2018, Chicago had 30,608 chlamydia cases (the highest on record), 12,679 gonorrhea cases (the highest in a decade) and 877 primary and secondary syphilis cases (the highest since the mid-1990s). The syphilis figure represents an 11% rise over the previous year, with a disproportionate effect on gay and bisexual men. In addition, women saw a 38% increase between 2017 and 2018, which could lead to more babies acquiring congenital syphilis. Without proper treatment, syphilis can lead to neurological damage, blindness, deafness, dementia, stroke and permanent damage to vital organs.

The nationwide surge of sexually transmitted diseases in recent years has created a sense of urgency for Chicago-area doctors and city health officials to embrace going public about the growing problem.

The Syphilis Task Force will be a partnership co-led by Chicago Dept. of Public Health (CDPH) and other community organizations, who hope to work together to develop strategies that are community oriented and focused on populations and geographic areas disproportionately impacted by syphilis, including those on Chicago's North Side.

The syphilis task force says their first step is to try and curb STIs across the city. Future task forces will be named to create recommendations for reducing chlamydia and gonorrhea infections, primarily among non-Hispanic Black youth and young adults.

They plan to offer recommendations that focus on strengthening existing policies and practices and initiating new approaches to reduce disease transmission through increased testing, treatment and prevention.

The Task Force is comprised of 15 experts and leaders of healthcare providers, academic institutions and community-based organizations with successful track records developing community engagement strategies and implementing public health interventions.

"The City of Chicago is committed to ensuring all residents have the opportunity to be healthy," said Mayor Lori Lightfoot. "There is an urgent need to scale up prevention and treatment efforts on STIs. Together with community partners, we intend to meet this challenge."

This initiative hopes to build on the city's existing efforts. The CDPH already tracks all new STI infections in Chicago—more than 40,000 cases annually—and provides follow up services to prevent further transmission.

"The time has come for a concerted effort to reduce syphilis in our community," said Chad Hendry, Director of Sexual & Reproductive Health at Howard Brown Health and member of the Syphilis Task Force. "We are eager to work with the City to foster more effective approaches to preventing and treating syphilis, especially among the residents most at risk."

The proposed plan includes boosting operation of three STI specialty clinics in Austin, Lakeview and Roseland that act as a critical safety net and serve nearly 11,000 residents per year, treating more than 2,500 infections. It also adds funding for two community-based clinics, operated by Howard Brown Health and the CORE Center that provided more than 15,000 screening tests and diagnosed and treated more than 2,000 cases in 2018.

Diversey water main project behind schedule

The large Diversey Pkwy. water main project spanning from Racine west to Damen Ave., is now behind schedule and NPL, the contractor on the project, says they are working to get final permits needed with the Illinois Dept. of Transportation [IDOT] to finish underground work on Diversey and Damen. The work has stalled traffic in south Lakeview and north Lincoln Park all Summer. They say that they now hope to complete the project by the end of September.

The Chicago Dept. of Transportation [CDOT] has approved the traffic plan to do late evening work on the Clybourn-Damen-Diversey intersection. CDOT officials are also working with Peoples Gas and ComEd to finish their portion of the underground sections affected by the water main.

A deputy commissioner at CDOT has reportedly taken on some oversight roles in the project to expedite permits at IDOT, coordinate with other utilities and push NPL to complete the project.

POLICE BEAT from p. 10

Wednesday, Aug. 7, in the morning, and one on the 100-200 block of E. Chestnut St., Sunday, Aug. 18, in the morning.

The offenders have been described as two males, African Americans, 5'-8" to 5'-10" tall, 130-150 lbs, and 15-18 years of age.

Car with two kids carjacked at Portillo's

A car thief got more than he bargained for when he stole an idling car from in front of a popular River North fast food restaurant on Saturday afternoon. He got the car, of course. And he also got two children who were in the back seat. The kids are okay, but the thief remains at large.

Police said a 29-year-old woman left her car running outside a "food establishment" in the 100 block of W. Ontario while she went inside around 3:50 p.m. When she came back out, her car and her kids were gone. Multiple sources identified the restaurant as Portillo's.

Officers searched the area and found the woman's gray Nissan Maxima abandoned under the L tracks at 641 N. Franklin shortly after 4 p.m. The children, ages 3-weeks and 7-years, were examined by an ambulance crew as a precaution. Police said no medical attention was needed.

Investigators learned that video of the auto theft was captured by security cameras at the former Rock and Roll McDonald's at 600 N. Clark. Footage showed the thief enter the passenger side of the woman's car, climb into the driver's seat, and drive away westbound on Ontario, an officer said.

The thief was described as a black male who wore yellow shoes, acid wash jeans, and a black hoodie that has a white graphic design on the front.

CPD camera footage showed the man running north on Franklin after he dumped the car. Another camera recorded him running northwest through a parking lot at Erie and Orleans moments later.

Area Central detectives are investigating.

More Uptown robberies

Police are warning residents of recent residential burglaries that have occurred in Uptown. In these burglaries, the offender(s) gain entry into the premises. Once inside, the offender(s) remove property from the residence.

Incidents include one on the 4800 block of N. Magnolia Ave., between Aug. 10 and 11, from 11 p.m. to 9:30 a.m., and a second one on the 4800 block of N. Magnolia Ave. on Aug. 13, between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

Eastland Disaster history to be shared with Newberry, Maritime Museum

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

The organization that for the past 21 years has been preserving the names, faces, and stories of the 1915 Eastland Disaster will split its trove with three iconic Chicago-area institutions.

Eastland Disaster Historical Society [EDHS] says it is transitioning from a family-run, not-for-profit organization to becoming key assets within bigger organizations.

Newberry Library, an independent research library on the Near North Side, will get archives that include historical accounts and photographs from thousands of families, as well as records from Cook County Coroner's Office, Red Cross, and Western Electric Company.

Chicago Maritime Museum, which has an exhibition on the Eastland Disaster, will get artifacts and reference books. Six other museums in the Great Lakes region will also get artifacts.

EDHS will become part of the Chicago Genealogical Society, with EDHS executive director Ted Wachholz serving on the genealogical society's board of directors.

"The iconic institutions with whom we are working are committed to protecting and honoring the work that EDHS started 21 years ago, ensuring that the stories of Chicago's greatest tragedy will always be preserved and shared for generations in the future," said Wachholz, whose wife and sister-in-law are granddaughters of a survivor of the Eastland Disaster.

On July 24, 1915, while docked at the Clark St. Bridge on the main branch of the Chicago River, the S.S. Eastland, an excursion boat loaded with Western Electric employees, their families and friends, rolled over, killing 844 people, including 22 entire families.

Materials will be delivered to the Newberry Library on W. Walton St. over the next four months. The library says they will be available to users in 2020.

"The records in the Eastland Disaster collection are vital to family and local history, and to the national record as well," said Matthew Rutherford, Curator of Genealogy and Local History at Newberry Library. "We are well-situated to provide access, assist researchers as they use the collection, and make it visible to audiences across Chicago and the rest of the country."

Julie Benson, president of Chicago Genealogical Society, says integration of the two organizations is a "very natural and logical step for both entities" as both are focused on preserving and sharing the records of ancestors from Chicago.

Eastland Disaster Historical Society was founded in 1998 by Susan Decker and Barbara Decker Wachholz, granddaughters of Borghild Amelia Aanstad, a survivor of the Eastland Disaster.

Chicago Festival of Israeli Cinema kicks off Sept. 14

The Chicago Festival of Israeli Cinema [CFIC] kicks off 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14, at Alliance Francaise de Chicago, 54 W. Chicago Ave. A variety of foreign films and shows will be presented.

Currently in their 14th season, this annual Fall film festival will offer several outreach events throughout the year including screenings Nov. 7-17 at the Music Box Theatre and at Spertus Institute of Jewish Learning and Leadership.

The mission of CFIC is to nurture an appreciation of Israeli culture in the Chicago metropolitan area by multiple generations of American Jews, Israelis and the community at large. This is one of the few independent institutions in the Chicago community where there are no barriers to entry—by religion, politics, age, gender or ethnicity. For more information visit <https://israelifilmchi.org/>.

as a means of funding the revitalization of struggling communities throughout Chicago, TIF money in Chicago has rather mostly been used to fund large developments in wealthy neighborhoods in the Loop, and on the North Side. TIF's were designed to foster economic development in areas that were considered blighted, which is certainly not the case with the white hot real estate located along the North Branch of the Chicago River whose value has grown dramatically in the last few years. And now many Chicago tax payers are coming to see that each and every TIF district is in reality a covert, hidden property tax increase, as funds drained away by TIF districts have to then be made up with funds coming from properties not located within TIF districts.

Grassroots Collaborative and Raise Your Hand for Illinois Public Education filed a lawsuit against the City in April, arguing that the City failed to satisfy the state's statutory requirements of blight and the "but-for" test. The lawsuit also challenges the City's racially and ethnically discriminatory administration of the TIF system which has disproportionately benefited areas in majority-White census tracts to the detriment of areas in majority-African American and majority-Hispanic census tracts.

Participating organizations include the the Chicago Dept. of Cultural Affairs and Special Events, Dept. of Water Management, Chicago Public Library, Chicago Fire Dept., Dept. of Planning and Development, The Magnificent Mile Assoc., the newly-formed Water Tower Arts District and its members including Lookingglass Theatre Co., Richard H. Driehaus Museum, Museum of Contemporary Art Chicago, and Graham Foundation, AIA Chicago, the Metropolitan Water Reclamation District of Greater Chicago, and others.

"[The Water Tower] has been a constant in our city's history, as much an icon of our identity as our lake or our flag, representing both our ingenuity, architectural heritage, and boundless resiliency as a people," said Mayor Lori Lightfoot. "Just as our city has been shaped around it, it has also shaped us, bridging our past to our present, and continuously guiding our future for generations to come."
