Has Your Doorman Ever Delivered a Baby?

ANN GERBER

IS THERE AN EFFICIENT, capable, sensitive doorman in your building who is the best in the city?

WE ARE OFFERING a $1,000 prize to the best doorman in the circulation area of Skyline and Inside Booster. Residents living in the Near North and North Sides can nominate their best doorman by sending Publisher Ron Roenigk a letter or email of no more than 200 words to inside-publicationschicago@gmail.com [please put “doorman” on the subject line]; or in the US Mail at 6221 N. Clark St., Chicago, IL 60660 and tell him why you want to honor your doorman.

We’ll take nominations for any doorman who works north of Madison St. [Sorry South Siders, we are after all, a North Side newspaper group.]

SEND US THE FIRST AND LAST NAME of your doorman, the building he serves and your name, address and phone number.

DID HE EVER DELIVER A BABY? Did he ever deliver groceries? Did he ever save the day? Our doormen are like respected members of our family who guide and help us in our daily lives. They are there when we need them. We’ve heard tales of bravery and service that are amazing. One doorman caught a serial sex offender who was terrifying women in their building. One doorman saved a woman from being raped in their freight elevator. Another doorman married the boss’s daughter.

ANOTHER LOCAL DOORMAN saved the day when a woman’s son lost his important homework. Doormen come in all shapes, sizes and colors. They are supportive and guide us in our daily living.

BESIDES THE $1,000 PRIZE there is a second prize of $500 and a third prize of $250. This is your chance to reward your loyal doorman for his years of service.

DEADLINE is Nov. 18.

WHEN YOU ARE ENTHUSIASTIC about what you do, you feel this positive energy. It’s very simple. -- Paulo Coelho NEWCITY at 1457 N. Halsted St.

NEWCITY opens this weekend

Will massive new retail, residential complex become community destination?

BY RONALD ROENIGK

For decades at the end of the last century people of all ages and races used to come to the intersection of Halsted and Clybourn to recreate at the old Newcity YMCA. Those folk’s children and grandchildren will now get their chance to do likewise with the opening of NEWCITY this weekend, a new urban retail, dining and entertaining complex located on the site of the old YMCA.

Developed and built by Structured Development and Bucksbaum Retail Properties, the 1.2 million square foot new mixed-use complex markets itself as a “neighborhood within a neighborhood.” It is located on an 8.5-acre site in the Lincoln Park neighborhood at 1457 N. Halsted St. and is impossible to miss when venturing through the intersection.

The grand opening weekend starts Friday and runs through Sunday. There will be a 9:30 a.m. Friday ribbon cutting ceremony and activities and entertainment will run continuously through Sunday afternoon.

The developers certainly got the most out of the development site as it combines a mix of retail, dining, entertainment, residential living and medical office space. The 360,000 square feet of retail space includes a 94,000 square foot Mariano’s Grocery - the biggest in their chain - and first-to-market entertainment and restaurant concepts.

The project focuses on it’s central core where a one-acre landscaped plaza; pedestrian-friendly sidewalks; 1,000-space public parking garage; and valet service can all be found. The 16-story, 200-unit residential rental tower seems to offer every lifestyle a vibrant community needs including

Cortland St. Bridge opens to vehicle traffic 10 days early

The Chicago Dept. of Transportation (CDOT) announced that it has completed work on a repair project for the Cortland St. Bascule Bridge 10 days ahead of schedule. The bridge, which had bike lanes added to it, re-opened to motor vehicular traffic last Friday morning.

“We are very pleased to have completed this project that provided important structural repairs and added bike lanes to the bridge, delivering safety improvements for pedestrians, bicyclists and motor vehicle drivers,” said Rebekah Scheinfeld, CDOT Commissioner. “The Cortland Street Bridge is an important east-west artery on the near North Side.”

CDOT’s in-house construction forces carried out the work on the bridge over the North Branch of the Chicago River. The project, which was scheduled for completion at the beginning of November but finished ahead of schedule, was needed to repair sections of the roadway as well as floor beams, trusses and sidewalks.

The work also included installation of a five-foot wide concrete bike lane along the curb in

City scouting for more Riverwalk concessions as many say 2015 a success

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

As the new Riverwalk’s first season winds down, the City of Chicago is looking for concession operators for next year. A “notice of availability” was issued on October 16, seeking a mix of recreational, cultural, entertainment, food and beverage, and retail facilities.

Existing concession operators have understood they are not necessarily a permanent fixture on the Riverwalk and would have to re-apply for 2016. Chosen concessions will get a one-year contract with the possibility of a one-year extension.

New businesses this year included bars, a music venue, and a dock for motorized boats visiting the Riverwalk. But the mayor’s office offered more ideas for possible concessions, such as facilities for human-powered boating, retail stores “of a cultural or environmental nature,” educational facilities, or “any other type of family-friendly concessions.”

The season will end on Sunday for the 14 businesses on the Riverwalk. Not all of them are certain they will be back next year but the consensus is that this year went well. Two new stretches of Riverwalk, Marina Plaza from Peter Cunningham and the Bread and Butter Band performs on October 11 at The Hideout’s new location on the Chicago Riverwalk.

A Comitti speedboat, belonging to the man at upper right, is docked along the Riverwalk west of State St. earlier this summer.

State St. to Dearborn St. and The Cove from Dearborn to Clark St., opened to the public on May 23 – River Theater opened on June 12 between Clark and LaSalle streets – but the first concessions did not open until June 11.

The last concession to open was The Hideout, on August 20, when the bluegrass quartet The Wandering Boys performed for a crowd of about 250 people on the Riverwalk west of Wabash Ave.

“The season went great,” says James Morro, owner and manager of Urban Kayaks. “The city did an amazing job promoting the walk and driving traffic. It was a very successful year by any definition. We look forward to many more and will be applying to remain where we are next season.”

Ron Silvia, owner of Downtown Docks, says the season was “great” for them, too. “We were open just in time for the July 4th holiday weekend and we look forward to the opportunity to grow and serve our customers in 2016.”

And while a spokesperson for City Winery says it is “too early at this time to comment” on next year, the wine bar west of State St. clearly benefited from being on a stretch of new Riverwalk that opened first and had particularly high traffic all summer. “Throughout the summer, huge crowds visited the Riverwalk,” said Mayor Rahm Emanuel last Saturday, “and on high volume days some Riverwalk restaurants reported 45-minute waits for tables and many of the paddling excursions and bike tours were sold to capacity.”

The mayor expects the city to receive “a large number of highly competitive proposals” for the 2016 season of the Riverwalk, what Emanuel calls “the next great recreational frontier of our

Want to honor a vet?

With Veterans Day approaching, we should all stop and recognize those veterans who helped make this country what it is. While millions have served, relatively few have been publicly recognized. On what was once Armistice Day, we pause on the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month to salute those who have served.

Some answered the call because they got a letter that said “Greetings.” Some answered to “Remember Pearl Harbor.” Some wanted to make the “World Safe for Democracy,” while others stepped up after witnessing the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001. Some gave their all. All gave some.

This newspaper comes out on Wednesday, Nov. 11. If you’d like somebody remembered in print then send us a note [c/o: insidepublicationschicago@gmail.com] briefly describing his or her service and any notable achievements or sacrifices made. Please put “recognize a vet” on the subject line. We will publish the notes of recognition in the Nov. 11 - Veteran’s Day - newspaper. Nominate as few or as many as you wish, and nominating friends or family members is fine. While the service member will be recognized, the names of those sending in the notes of recognition will not appear in print.

They all served. Help us recognize them.

Geja’s Café to crown tasting champions at 42nd Annual Pro/Am contest

It’s the Olympics of wine tasting –an intense battle of the palates —and the oldest event of its kind in the country. It’s Geja’s Café’s 42nd Annual Professional/ Amateur Wine Tasting contest.

On Sunday, Nov. 1 at 1 p.m., wine quaffers from around the city will gather at 340 W. Armitage Ave., to test their taste buds against experts and amateurs alike. Amateurs are defined as not having worked in the wine industry for the previous three years.

The event begins with participants rolling up their sleeves and preparing their noses and taste buds. Eight unmarked carafes of wine are placed before the competitors and tasting begins. Participants are challenged to identify the grape, place of origin and vintage of each wine.

The Grand Award for the highest scorer in each category will be an engraved crystal wine decanter. To enter, contestants pay an entrance fee of $20 and must be 21 years of age or older. Those who would like to try can call Geja’s at 773-281-9101.

“At least a third of our constituent advocacy involves immigration matter, much of it from the Edgewater community,” said U.S. Rep. Jan Schakowsky [9th].

Success:
‘I finally got my mug shot’

BY PATRICK BUTLER

Americans would be making a big mistake if we didn’t take advantage of all the immigrant talent – both legal and illegal – wanting nothing more than a chance to contribute to the nation’s future, U.S. Rep. Jan Schakowsky [9th] said earlier this week.

And probably nowhere is the immigrants’ imprint more visible than right here in Edgewater, Schakowsky told an Oct. 19 Edgewater Historical Society meeting at the Broadway Armory, 5917 N. Broadway. The outspoken immigration reform advocate kicked off the “Voices of Edgewater” exhibit running Oct. 24-May 28 at the ECC’s museum, 5358 N. Ashland Ave.

The exhibit encompasses oral histories, artifacts, photos and other assorted mementoes of early immigrants in Edgewater, starting with the German and Luxembourg celery farms back in the 1840s.

Schakowsky talks of city’s immigrant roots

And that rich heritage keeps growing, said Schakowsky, noting that about 65 different languages are spoken today at Senn High School, 5900 N. Glenwood Ave. “Walk down Broadway or around Swift School [5900 N. Winthrop Ave.] and you’ll see people dressed in the traditional clothing of their homelands,” she added.

“At my alma mater (Sullivan High School, 6631 N. Bosworth), all the varsity boys soccer team are immigrants from around the world, including Mexico, Tanzania, Central African Republic, Nepal, Ghana, Iraq, Ethiopia, Sudan and Myammar (Burma),” she said.

That’s a far cry from the Sullivan she knew half-a-century ago where the student body was about 99% white and probably 95% Jewish, Schakowsky said.

Today’s Sullivan students have the advantage of meeting students from all over the world and learning to deal with all the different cultures represented there, she said.

Schakowsky said she herself is the daughter and granddaughter the whole country.

“Twenty-five percent of the district’s population was born in other countries. Thirty-five percent speak a language other than English at home.”

“But we need to fix a terribly broken immigration system so we can continue to be enriched by this diversity,” said Schakowsky, who two years ago went so far as to get arrested along with fellow North Side Congressman Luis Gutierrez [4th] during an immigration reform demonstration outside the U.S. Capitol building.

“My mug shot number was 2007. Would you believe it? It took me a long time, but I finally got the picture.”

Responding to a woman in the audience who complained that foreigners are taking jobs from Americans, Schakowsky said she’s not arguing there aren’t still a lot of unemployed people, “but to blame the immigrant community is misplaced.”

But many folks still believe that illegal immigration in particular makes a folly of the minimum wage laws. The fact is that many of those here illegally are willing to work for below minimum wage which hurts legal immigrants who expect to be paid the prevailing minimum wage.

“At my alma mater (Sullivan High School, 6631 N. Bosworth), all the varsity boys soccer team are immigrants from around the world, including Mexico, Tanzania, Central African Republic, Nepal, Ghana, Iraq, Ethiopia, Sudan and Myammar (Burma),” said Schakowsky.

But Schakowsky chose to blame “the top one percent of the one percent” who press for policies that depress wages and are doing their best to eliminate labor unions, cut the number of full time jobs and put people in part-time jobs that don’t offer benefits.

“We have a serious problem of how we’re going to address that stacked deck,” she said.

Pedestrians getting annoyed dodging scofflaw bikers

BY KEVIN HARMON

It’s been going on for as long as she can remember, ever since she moved to Lakeview 10 years ago. Although she and many others tolerate it, Gina Gomez wonders what it will take to get pedestrians to follow the same rules that cars are expected to.

“It’s weird how you hear a lot about people who walk, ride their bikes, rollerblade and skateboard complain that cars think they rule the roads and are not receptive to their roles in contributing to the frustration and accidents and so many bad feelings,” said Gomez, a fast food worker who lives over a store on Clark St, about a half-mile south of Wrigley Field.

Gomez said she knew it would be tough going during baseball season with the added pedestrian traffic on streets such as Clark, but she didn’t bargain for increased chances of getting nailed on her bicycle as she commuted to and from work and to her health club. Getting hit by the very people she admires – those that ditch their cars and ride their bikes and other forms of non-motorized transportation in an effort to reduce their carbon footprint and promote a healthier lifestyle.

“You have people walking and jogging in the streets when there is a perfectly good and empty sidewalk next to them and you have all these younger kids out of control on those skateboards and rollerblades and I guess they feel they can move faster and for some reason are safer on the streets for whatever reason,” she said. “I’ve [also] seen an increase in people riding their bikes on the sidewalks. I said something to a friend of mine who does it regularly and her response to me was that it was safer for her than being on the streets; yet she gets an attitude when someone says something to her about it.”

Riding on the sidewalks in Chicago will get you a ticket if a police officer sees you and is so inclined.

There seems to be certain streets where failing to yield to pedestrians remain a consistent problem. Broadway, Clark St., Sheridan Rd., and Belmont in Lake View; Clark St. in Andersonville; Broadway and Montrose in Uptown and Fullerton in Lincoln Park have all been mentioned in various forms as streets to be wary of stepping out into traffic. These are streets where apparently cyclists struggle to consistently yield to pedestrians and there is the occasional friction.

“I tried saying something to someone one time that I was coming out of a store on Broadway and the cyclist was going way too fast to be on a sidewalk and she yelled at me to pay attention and get out of the way,” said personal trainer and law school student Tony Barone, referring to a Lake View location. “I have a different spin on this type of stuff and think it points to everyone being in a hurry. Common decency is going out the window. Everyone is so obsessed with their electronic de-

Millennials rent and wonder whatever happened to the American Dream?

BY DON DeBAT

With more and more Millennials choosing to rent apartments, many housing advocates are asking: “Whatever happened to the American Dream of homeownership?”

Owning a home once was considered essential to the stability and future of the United States, experts say. When President Bill Clinton left office in January of 2001, nearly 70% of Americans were homeowners—the highest rate of owning in our history.

However, the nation’s homeownership rate has been falling for the past decade, slumping to a current rate of 63.4%—the lowest it has been since 1967. And today, homeownership is not a hot topic for Presidential candidates on the campaign trail.

As a result, the nation’s young people are swimming in a sea of apartment rent receipts while paying off student loans. Nearly 11 million renter households—or 27% of all renters—now pay more than half their incomes for housing.

Today, Republicans blame the Great Recession of 2008 partly on the efforts of the Clinton Administration to increase homeownership. Easy to obtain, low-interest loans backed by federal mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac caused a housing bubble, a stock market crash and a financial crisis, they say.

The truth is that Wall Street and banking industry greed had more to do with sparking the mortgage foreclosure crisis and the Great Recession, which nearly became the second Great Depression.

The blame for the Great Recession was focused on the eroding standards for mortgage lending and predatory lending practices often targeted at minority borrowers.

The so-called “toxic sub-prime home loans” were packaged into mortgage-backed securities and sold to investors. When the bargain introductory interest rates ended on the sub-prime home loans, borrowers couldn’t meet their higher loan payments and the loans fell into delinquency. This had devastating effects throughout the financing system.

In addition, the explosion of Wall Street trading in unregulated derivatives helped fuel the crisis and spread it to investors worldwide, creating a global meltdown that we’re still digging out of today. The foreclosure crisis that followed trickled down to damage local and state economies still is being litigated in the courts.

As a result, Congress passed the Troubled Asset Relief Program (TARP) a $700 billion bailout that was supposed to save the banking industry, stop the mortgage foreclosure crisis and stabilize the economy. TARP may have saved our financial system, but experts say the main beneficiaries were the same big banks who created the crisis.

While the big banks were penalized with fines, the Justice Department did not track down the managers and employees who were responsible for creating the toxic loans.

Meanwhile, Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac were put under control of the Federal Housing Finance Agency in September of 2008, and eventually received $187.5 billion in bailout money. During the nation’s slow, seven-year housing recovery, the companies have paid back a whopping $239 billion to the U.S. Treasury.

However, with Fannie and Freddie in conservatorship, critics say affordable housing largely has been forgotten in America.

Experts say the nation’s banking crisis happened because there were too many gaps in regulation and no one was looking out for the system as a whole.

“It’s important for regulators to be vigilant and keep monitoring,” said former Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke, who noted that the Fed and the Financial Stability Oversight Council now are constantly surveying the entire financial system.

In addition, the Dodd-Frank Act created the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau to prevent mortgage abuse in the future and help put the American Dream back on its feet.

“The bureau’s entire mission is consumer protection,” Bernanke noted. “It represents an upgrade of regular resources directed to the issue of strong consumer protection.”

On another positive note, as the job market improved and the number of mortgage foreclosures declined, the nation’s average FICO score rose to 695 in September, the highest it has been since 2005. The average FICO score for those approved for mortgages now is 723.

However, in the aftermath of the financial crisis, lending requirements now are far more stringent. Many young first-time home buyers are scratching to save down payment cash while paying off student loans. So for many, the American Dream still is on the distant horizon.

In the ‘hood for 50 years: That’s amore!

Heart of the ‘Hood

By Felicia Dechter

For the last 40 years, I’ve been ordering piping hot and delicious, dripping-with-cheese pizza from a place down the street from my house, J.B. Alberto’s, 1324 W. Morse Ave. Honestly, throughout the years I’ve probably helped pay this place’s mortgage and send the kids to college because we’ve ordered from there so much.

And although my brood has moved out, they still live in the neighborhood and order regularly from there too, as does my brother. I swear, for us it’s a family affair when it comes to Alberto’s and it has been for decades, four generations to be exact. Someone there once even said we’re one of the few people that still call their old phone number, 773-338-3160, for delivery.

This pizza joint is famous in Rogers Park, and I’ve often had people like my husband’s cousin come to my house from out of town requesting their pizza. And while some folks call it J.B.’s, others, like me, call it Alberto’s. But either way, everyone who knows and loves this little storefront gem can surely call it a neighborhood mainstay.

Congratulations are in order, because Alberto’s is celebrating its 50th Anniversary today from 4 to 8 p.m. It’s an impressive feat just staying in business for that long, but it’s especially extraordinary because they’ve lasted on a street that has gone through some radical changes in the last 50 years. As a longtime neighbor, I can’t help but thank Alberto’s for sticking it out during some very rough years on Morse Ave.

In fact, when I think about it, they might just be the only business still around on Morse that was there when I moved into East Rogers Park 40 years ago. The rest all up and left -- to make their dough elsewhere.

“There were some rough times, I’m glad we stuck through it,” owner Tony Troiano told me. “I had customers who wanted our pizza, so I wasn’t about to go anywhere.”

Troiano was just 16-years-old when his father, Nick, “put up the house” and bought Alberto’s on Dec. 1, 1978. (In 1965, when Alberto’s opened, it was originally located across the street where Morse Gyros stands today. Alberto’s merged with J.B.’s in 1981). He had already spent the bulk of his childhood, since the age of five, working at the family’s first pizzeria, Vito’s, at Chicago Ave. and Hamlin St.

Now, all these years later, “It feels great, especially in an industry with so many casualties,” to be celebrating his business’s very important anniversary, said Troiano. So he’s putting up a big party tent in the lot east of the restaurant, where he’ll be dishing out free pizza slices and t-shirts, and holding a pizza eating contest. Also, the “The Mick Jagger of the pizza world,” according to Troiano, 11-time World Pizza champ Tony Gemignani will sign copies of his cookbook, “The Pizza Bible,” and demonstrate his impressive dough tossing skills.

As a pizza aficionado who owns 13 restaurants in California and Las Vegas, Gemignani said he felt it was important to be here to share in his friend Troiano’s very notable half-century celebration.

“It’s a milestone that not many restaurants hit in any industry, especially being in such a restaurant-rich city such as Chicago where the competition is fierce,” said Gemignani. “It’s so great to be a part of it!”

The party is on regardless of weather, said Troiano, who, when asked, said he needs to expand the restaurant and is considering that, as well as possible outdoor seating next summer.

He said everyone should come on down

“It’s our way of saying thank you to our customers... great customers who have supported us throughout the years,” said Troiano. “We’re nothing without our customers.”

Cup of wonder ... CTA 4G project on track for 2015 completion

BY JORDAN WATKINS
Columbia Chronicle

Expanded wireless coverage means Chicago Transit Authority [CTA] riders will no longer have to worry about wrapping up phone calls and quickly finishing text messages before entering the subway.

The CTA announced Oct. 15 it has completed the first phase of a project aiming to bring 4G wireless coverage to CTA subways.

Contractors working for the CTA completed the first phase of the project—activating 4G service along a 1.2-mile stretch of the Blue Line between the Logan Square and Belmont stops—earlier this month. CTA spokesman Jeff Tolman said he expects the project to be completed by the end of 2015.

“It will be done in phases,” Tolman said. “All 22 miles of CTA subway will have 4G wireless capability.”

The CTA could not provide specific details regarding which phases it will complete next or when the rest of the project will be done, but Tolman said the CTA is confident customers will have 4G signal throughout the system by the end of the year.

Tolman said the project covers all tunnels, mezzanines and platforms CTA riders and personnel utilize.

“It’s definitely a customer convenience,” Tolman said. “It improves the customer experience.”

The CTA also expects the project to improve safety on trains and stations by improving communications between customers and personnel with emergency responders.

The $32.5 million project is funded entirely by the four major wireless carriers: AT&T, Sprint, T-Mobile and Verizon. The deal was brokered by the Chicago Infrastructure Trust, which Mayor Rahm Emanuel created in 2012 to help provide alternative funding for major projects, Emanuel said in a Jan. 30 press release.

When the project is fully implemented, Chicago will be the largest city in North America with full 4G coverage throughout its subway system, the release stated.

“The addition of 4G coverage will ensure that CTA passengers benefit from dependable data service while riding the subway,” Emanuel said in the release. “This is part of the city’s ongoing efforts to invest in 21st-century technology for Chicago’s world-class transit system and expand economic

“As a kid, I recall observing in public the mistreatment of people based on race and income and being appalled by the injustice,” said Holsten. “I believe everyone deserves to live in dignity. So at least I can help the less fortunate with their housing needs... that’s what my company does.”

vices and you see people riding or walking with their smart phones checking e-mail or whatever and you see people talking on the phone when they are riding their bikes.”

Barone went as far as to say that he was shoved by a cyclist who apparently needed him out of his way as he thought he was too close to his bike.

“If I wasn’t in a better mood that day I would have chased him down and maybe took a swing at him, but I was worried about it going too far and there were police around,” Barone said.

Speaking of the police, the prevailing attitude from many people who have been vocal about this is that the Chicago Police don’t enforce the law that people over 12 aren’t even allowed to ride bikes on the sidewalks, except for certain situations. Considering the explosion of the Divvy Bike Sharing Program and the fact that there are way more bike racks in area neighborhoods than there were years ago makes this possibly tougher to enforce in theory.

opportunity for more Chicagoans throughout the city.”

Cellular service reaches devices in the subway through a distributed antenna system, said AT&T spokesman Phil Hayes.

“The old [antenna] system was 3G technology [and] was congested many hours of the day,” Hayes said. “The New DAS system supports all the technologies AT&T offers. Every AT&T customer that rides the CTA train system will recognize the improvement once the network is completely upgraded.”

Takin’ it to the streets... There have been fatal shootings what seems like constantly lately in my neighborhood, and so I applaud what Univ. of Illinois College of Nursing fellow Rachel Renee Gage is doing.

Gage is busy spending her time with youths involved with the metro YMCA Youth Safety and Violence Prevention Program’s Art For Peace Group.

“We have been working with the teens to improve resilience, improved decision making, confidence and compassion,” Gage ing forward to the project’s completion and being able to use her phone in the subway at any given time.

Megan Perrero, a freshman at Columbia College, said she will appreciate having Internet access in stations.

“I think having Google Maps tell you where you want to go and still have the directions will be really cool,” Perrero said. “It’s [also] nice to be able to call someone or be on your phone so people don’t come up and talk to you.”

told me. “They use art to tell their stories and to connect.”

The teens will sell some of their art to raise funds for art supplies for their next session at “Beat the Streets: This is Us,” 5:30 to 8 p.m. Friday at the YMCA at 1834 N. Lawndale Ave. The family-friendly arts celebration will have food, face painting, music and art presentations by the teens. There’s free parking and free admission, although a $5 donation is suggested.

hoods are short of police and enforcing biking laws may be a low priority.

“I’ve said something to an officer who lives near me and patrols the neighborhood. He told me that with all that goes on in the city during the warm weather months, something like this isn’t a very high priority,” said Gomez, who plans to take her complaints to her local alderman. “He even said it would probably just be a better idea to just yield to bike offenders and to me that is just crazy.”

Barone said he applauds the notion that Chicago is becoming a more “bike friendly” city, but that comes with responsibility and instead of getting on the motorists to make all the allowances to help this transition happen in harmony, those on the bikes and boards need to accept their responsibility as well.

“I hope it doesn’t take a highly-publicized accident to open some peoples’ eyes,” he said. “I sort of accept it as a sign of the times these days, but I know that in the past I’ve done some of the same stuff, so I’m trying not to be too judgmental.”

any person age 18 and older who rides a bicycle on the sidewalk adjacent to N. Sheridan Rd., between W. Ardmore Ave. and W. Sheridan Rd. (6400 north) is that the bicycle shall be temporarily disabled without permanent damage; and the violator will be subject to a fine of $250.

But that’s only if there is a police officer nearby to witness the crime. Chicago Police report issuing 13,150 traffic-related tickets to bicyclers between 2006 and August of this year.

The low level of awareness of police ticketing bicyclists comes as no surprise, Active Transportation Alliance’s executive director Ron Burke told WBEZ. “There is too little enforcement of traffic policies across the board in Chicago and even in the suburbs,” he said. “Whether that’s the case for people driving, walking and even riding a bike.”

Burke told WBEZ that while well over 90% of traffic injuries and fatalities are caused by motorists, bike behavior factors in, too. “It’s important that we encourage good behavior across the board. And that is done by enforcing the road rules and issuing hefty fines for those who don’t follow them.”

Last hurdle for city is Lakefront Protection lawsuit

In response to recent votes by the Chicago Park District Board of Commissioners, the Chicago Plan Commission, and the City Council Zoning Committee to approve elements of the mayor’s plan to site the proposed Lucas Museum of Narrative Arts on the lakefront, Friends of the Parks makes the following statements:

Some call these votes ‘significant hurdles.’ But did anyone really think that these votes would turn out otherwise? Unfortunately, Chicagoans know to expect that mayoral appointees and aldermen under his thumb are going to vote as they are told, said Juanita Irizarry, executive director of Friends of the Parks.

The real surprise is the two dissenters: one Chicago Plan Commission member and one alderman who dared to vote “no,” bringing up some of the same arguments we have. Ald. Ameya Pawar [47th] asked a number of questions, including about the site selection process. Last week, Commissioner Linares offered concerns about the Lakefront Protection Ordinance’s prohibition of building on the proposed site and the plan to offer the Lucas Museum a 99-year ground lease for a mere $10, “especially while residents of this financially-challenged city are about to get hit with a significant property tax hike.”

The real, significant hurdle in this matter remains: our lawsuit.

Lauren Moltz, Friends of the Parks board chairperson

Sue Ellen was on Dallas

Once upon a time my letter brought Ann Gerber to tears. Now she has returned the favor. I am drowning in tears for poor Sue Ellen [Linda Gray].

According to your article [Oct. 14] she “knocked their socks off ...” at Neiman Marcus. In reality I think you knocked her socks off and ours, many of us, by placing her on Dynasty.

I’m afraid she was very happy on Dallas, making JR Ewing happy and miserable. Having worked three jobs at the time, I wouldn’t have missed Dallas for the world. Even my seven raccoons stopped being mischievous for an hour to watch JR tormenting Sue Ellen.

I hope you find it in your hear to make this wrong right.

Cellphone etiquette: minding your mobile manners

We all know you just don’t – EVER – double-dip a tortilla chip in the salsa. But what is the cellphone equivalent of this social gaffe?

In being tied to our cellphones, some of us may wonder just what it means to be polite while using them.

The art of cellphone etiquette is a relatively new idea in the grand scheme of the history of polite behavior. The notion of pairing etiquette and mobile use is of increasing importance as phones trickle into every elevator, office cubicle and restaurant table. According to the Pew Research Center, 91% of American adults already owned a cellphone way back in May 2013.

A survey conducted by Pew in 2014 assessed Americans thoughts concerning acceptable use of their phones in public places. For instance, 77% of people surveyed thought it was generally okay to use the phone while walking down the street, a number that quickly drops when switching gears to use the phone at a worship service. In this setting, only four percent of those surveyed believe it is okay to use the phone.

Of course any Chicago Police officer would warn you that walking down a street with the smart phone out in the open is like walking down the street waving two or three $100 bills in the air. There are many snatch and grab robberies of smart phones every day in Chicago -- and they generally always catch the victims by surprise because the smart phone user is so focussed on their phone rather than what’s going on around them on the street.

Ellen Clayton, co-owner of Etiquette School of Chicago, teaches students the importance of considering the people around you. “Maybe somebody is reading and who knows maybe someone just wants some quiet time,” Clayton said. In this case, it may be more polite to let the person know you will call them back.

“It’s all about consideration, discretion, common sense and thinking ahead if you’re in a situation,” said Clayton.

Thinking ahead is especially important when eating with others at a restaurant. According to the Pew Research Center, only 38% of Americans believe it is okay to use their cellphones at a restaurant.

“You can always announce to the people you are eating with that you are expecting an important phone call and, if it happens to arrive while you’re dining, it’s always appropriate to remove yourself from the table,” said Barbara Finney of The Etiquette & Leadership Institute of Illinois.

There are other times when being prepared beforehand can save you from casting a bad impression of yourself. When in the presence of others, it is important to be considerate of their time and attention. “We have a little tag line that says ‘Be Present’ so when you’re at a table you want to be present to the people at the table, to the food, to the conversation, to it all,” said Clayton.

Knowing when it is appropriate to use your phone is not enough; sometimes the temptation to use the phone is just too much.

“I always tell my clients to not use their cell phones as a security blanket,” said Akilah Easter, owner of the EtiquetteFemme school in Chicago. “I don’t even pull it out when I’m waiting at a restaurant, I always tell adults, ‘What did you do before cell phones were an everyday thing?’”

Staying off the phone in public places is not only considerate but it can be in your best interest as well. When taking calls in public, some may not realize the personal information that is falling on unknown ears.

“Avoid talking about personal

Percent of adults who believe it is ok or not to use a cellphone in these situations and confidential matters when in public,” said Patt Karubus of the Etiquette for Everybody school that conducts classes in the Chicago area. “If such details are necessary, make arrangements to call the person back when you have privacy.”

The percentage of the population relying on a cellphone increased 26% from 2004 to 2013, according to Pew Research Center’s Internet and American Life Project. With an increased number of cellphone owners comes an increased need to address the proper use of these devices no matter what level you are on.

“Whether you’re an 11-year-old kid, a middle-aged executive, or a grandpa, the tenets of appropriate cell phone usage remain the same,” Karubus said.

Veterans invited to share stories for Library of Congress project

Unity Hospice of Chicagoland [UHC] invites veterans in Chicago and surrounding cities to share their stories of military service for inclusion in the U.S. Library of Congress’ nationally-recognized Veterans History Project [VHP].

The library will preserve the stories so future generations can better understand American history and the realities of war.

All interviews are accepted regardless of wartime service or combat experience.

“I encourage veterans to take the opportunity to record their story of military service,” VHP director Bob Patrick said. “They will be performing another patriotic act by ensuring the account of their service and sacrifice will be preserved for the nation at the Library of Congress to instruct and inspire future generations.”

Interviews will be conducted Monday through Nov. 6 at UHC, 700 S. Clinton St., Suite 210, and Nov. 9-13 at the Unity Hospice Corporate Office, 4101 Main St. in Skokie.

UHC also will visit veterans’ homes or other facilities to conduct interviews; contact Brenda McGarvey at 618-954-6114 to schedule a meeting.

Shining new light on light bulbs

BY DAVID LEWIS

Have you shopped your local hardware store and found yourself to be thoroughly confused by all the new types of light bulbs? These days, the multitude of light bulb choices can be dizzying... so much new technology and little to guide you through the process of selecting new bulbs for your home.

The Incandescent light bulb, invented by Thomas Edison in 1879, is the type of bulb that most of us are familiar with. It is defined as a glass globe with a wire filament heated to a high temperature by an electric current passing through it until it glows, thus producing light.

Incandescent light bulbs are the least energy efficient, but they have advantages. They are inexpensive, turn on instantly, are available in a variety of sizes and shapes and provide a soothing, warm light with excellent color rendition.

However, due to their inefficiency and limited life spans, they are more costly to operate when compared to compact fluorescent lamps (CFLs) and light-emitting diodes (LEDs).

Gregory Kay, a master electrician and president of Lightology -- headquartered in Lincoln Park with a showroom at 215 W. Chicago Ave. -- notes that incandescent bulbs are being phased out by the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007. According to Kay, “There is so much wasted energy coming out as heat in an incandescent bulb that it makes a better heater than it does a light source.”

A Halogen bulb has a capsule that contains halogen gas surrounding the heated wire filament to increase the efficiency of the incandescence. They cost more than incandescent bulbs but are more energy efficient. Most halogen bulbs have an inner coating that reflects heat back into the capsule which improves efficiency by “recycling” the otherwise unused heat. The filling and coating recycle heat to keep the filament hot, but with less electricity. Halogen bulbs provide excellent color rendition and have a longer lifespan than incandescent bulbs.

Most modern indoor and outdoor flood lights, recessed and TruLine 1.6A 5 Watt (2 rows x 2.5W) 24VDC Plaster-In LED System creates a clean line of glare free general illumination within drywall.

An LED bulb consumes one-sixth the energy of an incandescent and lasts up to 25 times longer. Replacing a 60-watt incandescent with an LED equivalent could save $125 or more in energy costs over the new bulb’s lifetime. “The average homeowner could realize a significant reduction in their electric bill by replacing all incandescent bulbs with LED bulbs,” says Kay.

track lighting, floor and desktop lamps use halogen bulbs. Some halogen bulbs are dimmable and can be used with timers, but check the package for this feature before purchasing.

The Compact Fluorescent Lamp, or “CFL,” became available to consumers about 10 years ago. These bulbs were designed to replace incandescent light bulbs, and most CFL’s will fit into light fixtures that currently use incandescent bulbs. The CFL is comprised of a compact ballast and a tube that is curved or folded to fit into the space of an incandescent bulb. Integrated CFL bulbs combine the tube and ballast into one single unit. “Compared to incandescent bulbs, CFL’s use about one-third the electricity, and last up to 15 times longer. A CFL costs more, but it can save five times its purchase price in energy costs over the bulb’s life span,” said

Kay. The price of a CFL is higher than an equivalent incandescent lamp, but a CFL uses up to three-quarters less energy. Lifespan averages 6,000 to 15,000 hours.

Light Emitting Diodes, or “LED,” are the newest alternative to incandescent bulbs. LED’s are highly efficient, but come with a higher price tag. Buying an LED bulb isn’t simple, you must know what to look for. “Once you understand the technology and versatility that LEDs offer, you will come to appreciate them. LED and fluorescents both use phosphors to turn a blue light white,” says Kay. “The type of phosphor mix determines the color rendering index quality of the light. People often dislike fluorescent lighting because it doesn’t closely imitate the color rendering properties of natural light. Fluorescents are difficult to dim and basically impossible to turn into a spot light for accent lighting.”

With LED, you have control over the beam and a variety of dimming options. New power supply and driver technologies offer standard, electronic low voltage (ELV), and 0-10 volt dimming for LEDs. Some LEDs may flicker at the low end of the dimming capacity, Kay advised. The final piece of the LED dimming puzzle is the new “warm to dim” LED bulbs. Normal LEDs become visually cooler rather than warmer when you dim them, but there are new LED bulbs that mimic the comforting amber glow of incandescent light bulbs as they dim.

Increased demand and improved manufacturing techniques are lowering the cost of LED bulbs. Utility company rebates have reduced the price of many LED’s to under $10, and in some areas they cost just $5 each. While that’s still more expensive than the old .99¢ incandescent, keep this in mind: An LED bulb consumes one-sixth the energy of an incandescent and lasts up to 25 times longer. Replacing a 60-watt incandescent with an LED equivalent could save $125 or more in energy costs over the new bulb’s lifetime. “The average homeowner could realize a significant reduction in their electric bill by replacing all incandescent bulbs with LED bulbs,” says Kay. The future of modern light bulb technology has arrived and it looks brighter than ever.

over 30,000 square feet of medical office space. Tenants lucky enough to score units with views to the south toward downtown will be richly rewarded every time they look out a window. The views are spectacular.

And of course it is located in the white hot North and Clybourn retail district, which is second only to the N. Michigan Ave./Oak St. area for retail sales in Chicago. In fact, even before NEWCITY was built the retail offerings lining the major streets in the area offered more retail square footage than does Woodfield Mall in Schaumburg.

Some of the other major new tenants in NEWCITY include ArcLight Cinemas, Kings Bowl, Nando’s PERi-PERi, Dick’s Sporting Goods, Earl’s Kitchen + Bar, IT’SUGAR and Adobe Gila’s.

Optimism: a philosophy of life

As a philosophy of life, optimism is a choice one makes in response to uncontrollable circumstances.

BY JURRIAN KAMP

The world isn't coming to an end, contrary to what you may have heard.

But the media's near-exclusive focus on conflict and disaster means that the progress and everyday acts of brilliance taking place across the globe go unnoticed.

In "The Intelligent Optimist's Guide to Life," Jurriaan Kamp shows that optimism — intelligent optimism, not a rose-colored-glasses brand of wishful thinking — is good for not only your mind but your body too.

The following excerpt comes from chapter 1, "The Best Way to Live."

In high school, my week revolved around the field hockey game on Saturday. Back then, we still played on real grass. Hence, as the week progressed, a striking parallel arose between my mood and darkening skies. Too much rain would force the game to be canceled, which routinely happened in the fall and winter. My grumbling started well in advance. If it were raining cats and dogs on a Friday afternoon, my dear mother would try to cheer me up by looking out the window and pointing at a random piece of sky. "Look," she'd exclaim, "it's already clearing up over there!"

That unfounded optimism always infuriated me.

Yet she had a point. After the rain there will always be sunshine. Yes, bad things happen. But it is our choice to accept the rain and look beyond it to the coming sunshine. We create pessimism by our focus on the bad. At the same time we create optimism by focusing on the good. And, as we shall see, optimism is a much more rewarding strategy.

Optimism doesn't mean denying reality. According to the dictionary, the everyday meaning of optimism is "hopefulness and confidence about the future or the success of something." But the root of the word comes from Latin (optimum) and the more precise definition of optimism is "the doctrine that this world is the best of all possible worlds."

Optimism is a fundamental attitude. It's not an opinion about reality; it's a starting point for dealing with reality. At every moment, you can decide that you're in the best situation to handle a given challenge. That is optimism. Optimism is searching for the yes in every situation and finding it. Or as someone once aptly described that attitude: "If there's no solution, then there's no problem."

Pessimism: a giant roadblock

"This pessimism is lying across modern civilization like some enormous fallen tree and somehow we've got to get a bulldozer and shift it out of the way," said the English writer and "the first philosopher of optimism in European history" Colin Wilson.

According to Wilson, the roots of the pessimism epidemic go back to the Romantics of the early 19th century whose message was that humans could only briefly experience "exquisite happiness," which was not meant to last forever; life was supposed to be miserable.

"Most people still don't understand what has happened in Western culture over the past two centuries," Wilson said. "How the long, defeatist curve that originated in the early 19th century continues to cloud our way of thinking."

Human beings have a unique capacity to find new answers through the expansion of their consciousness. That's why optimism, the art of finding solutions, is a more logical way of life than the pessimistic worldview that was "invented" by a few poets 200 years ago and that still dominates in intellectual circles.

Life will inevitably deal us some bad hands from time to time. Life is not simple. That it should be is a contemporary misconception fed by modern consumerism, which offers a quick solution for every inconvenience. An increasing stream of gurus have extrapolated from that material prosperity to claim that life can be, should be, an effortless affair.

* This is a solicitation for insurance. Not a branch of Medicare or any other government agency.

All those messages seem to have made us less of a match for life. Our ancestors trekked across the steppes and savannas. They knew they were continually in danger. They didn't know life could be anything but challenging. Our reality consists of hospitals, insurance policies and benefit payments when things go wrong. The welfare state has strongly influenced our expectations, but it still doesn't preclude bad things from happening.

In 1978, psychiatrist M. Scott Peck wrote "The Road Less Traveled." The book begins like this:

"Pain is inevitable, suffering is optional."

"Life is difficult. This is a great truth, one of the greatest truths. It is a great truth because once we truly see this truth, we transcend it. Once we truly know that life is difficult—once we truly understand and accept it—then life is no longer difficult. Because once it is accepted, the fact that life is difficult no longer matters."

Every religion and philosophy of life teaches that the meaning of life lies in our responses to the challenges we encounter. Our life lessons are the essence of our existence. That's why the way we face those lessons is so important.

"Pain is inevitable, suffering is optional," Buddhists say.

Optimism turns out to be the most promising and fulfilling strategy, because the optimist accepts reality and then does something about it.

Resilience is more useful than sustainability

In more and more environmental dialogues the word "resilience" begins to replace the word sustainability.

Sustainability means keeping things intact. It means avoiding causing damage. It's about preventing change. Sustainability is a static concept.

Resilience, though, is dynamic. "The capacity to recover quickly from difficulties," says one definition. Resilience is part of ongoing change. The world today is not the same as the world of 5,000 years ago. Nor will the world of the future much resemble our current reality. That's why sustainability is not a helpful concept in a world of continual and rapid change.

Seniors face higher Medicare premiums, deductibles next year

BY TRUDY LIEBERMAN
Rural Health News Service

The last couple of weeks have brought unexpected and unwelcome news to millions of seniors and disabled people on Medicare: Their already high out-of-pocket costs are going to get higher.

For some, premiums for Medicare Part B coverage that pays for doctor and outpatient services will go up as much as 52 percent. Part D premiums, which cover drug benefits, will increase an average of 13 percent, and everyone will see their annual Part B deductible rise from $147 to $223.

These are not trivial amounts considering that half of all people on Medicare are living on annual incomes of $24,150 or less.

In 2010 about 7 million people covered by the program lacked supplemental insurance such as Medigap policies, which cover what Medicare doesn't.

By 2013 the number of people without the additional coverage had more than doubled, most likely because they couldn't afford to buy it.

What's going on here? Weren't Medicare's costs supposed to go down thanks to the Affordable Care Act?

These increases have nothing to do with Obamacare and everything to do with the laws governing Medicare and Social Security.

Each year the Secretary of Health and Human Services examines the spending for Part B services, which actually has risen this past year. By law, premiums paid by everyone on Medicare must cover 25 percent of the program's cost, while general tax revenues cover 75 percent. Each year the Social Security Administration determines the cost-of-living increases for seniors based on the Consumer Price Index.

There will be no increase for the coming year.

All this means about 30 percent of beneficiaries will see increases for Part B. Most people have their premiums deducted from their Social Security checks, but the law prohibits any Part B premium increase that would result in a reduction in their Social Security benefits.

Without a COLA increase, a higher premium means a smaller Social Security check.

Because Medicare premiums must cover 25 percent of Part B costs, the government has to find the money somewhere else.

Four groups of people will have to shoulder the added financial burden: those who begin receiving Medicare benefits in 2016, those over age 65 who are on Medicare but who have not taken their Social Security benefits yet, wealthier beneficiaries (individuals with incomes above $85,000 and couples with $170,000), and low-income people eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid.

State Medicaid programs pay those increases and they, too, are grumbling.

Increases in Part D premiums stem from higher costs for both brand and generic prescriptions and particularly for specialty drugs like Sovaldi to treat hepatitis C.

Will Congress fix these inequities and find other funds to protect everyone from these increases?

"It's very hard to predict what Congress will do," says Tricia Newman, senior vice president at the Kaiser Family Foundation.

Newman points out this year's higher premiums and deductibles may be temporary and are expected to come down in 2017.

The other day I explained all this on a New York City radio show along with Joe Baker who heads the Medicare Rights Center, which helps beneficiaries from all over the country understand their options. Callers on fixed incomes and tight budgets drove home the point: The increases will pinch. One woman told of a $300 rent increase she had to absorb along with higher prices for food and medicines.

Another said her husband had cancer, and the family had been socked with high medical costs. She said they had to pay a $3,000 deductible before insurance kicked in. Most likely she was referring to the requirement to pay $3,000 out of pocket before her Medicare Advantage plan pays benefits. That's a common out-of-pocket limit for these types of plans. Even if she didn't label the source of the problem correctly, she knew the family budget was in trouble.

That led to a discussion of the how the COLA adjustment is calculated and whether it is fair to seniors because they spend money on a different market basket of goods than younger Americans do. Seniors spend more on healthcare, for example, and less on gasoline, which is heavily factored into the COLA calculations. But despite years of talk and experiments with a more accurate cost of living index for seniors, the government has yet to implement one.

Years ago healthcare expert Marilyn Moon, who served as a public trustee of the Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds, urged Americans to save their money because they were going to need it for medical care when they got older. This year's situation shows how right she was.

OPTIMISM from p. 9

The same applies to our daily lives. They will never be sustainable in the static sense. We can only frustrate ourselves by not accepting the changes we cannot escape. That frustration is at the root of much pessimism.

The optimist is resilient. She evolves with circumstances and times. Bad days will come. But the point is, they will go as well. So the challenge is to go as untouched as possible through the bad days. That's where resilience comes in.

But untouched does not mean "disconnected."

Resilience means remaining part of the circumstances and adapting, taking the fact in, learning the lesson—understanding and accepting—and moving on.

The focus of the optimist is on the potential change. She embraces yes and fights against no. The optimist makes the conscious choice to endure in times of hardship. It is illuminating that the Chinese use the same character for endurance as for patience: the patience required to wait for the moment when you can once again act effectively. That wise patience is also evident in theologian Reinhold Niebuhr's famous prayer: "Grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, the courage to change the things I can, and the wisdom to know the difference."

Optimism, persistence, and resilience go hand in hand. You can't find answers or solutions if you aren't prepared to keep searching and digging. At the same time, you can't find them if you don't first accept the truth at the deepest level. That's often a painful process. Optimism isn't always fun and happy.

You don't want to sustain your life as it is; you want it to be resilient and adaptable to the ever-ongoing change around you.

Award-Winning Chef Hagop Hagopian creates healthy, decadent fare

Chef Hagop Hagopian stops by FOX 32 Chicago to share his pumpkin truffle recipe.

When it comes to fine dining in Chicago, there is no lack of culinary choices. Highly decorated chefs at award-winning restaurants are not hard to come by. So, why do the residents of The Clare prefer to dine on the premises? If Chef Hagop Hagopian were preparing your meals, you’d eat in, too.

Chef Hagop prides himself on creating tasty, healthy menu choices using locally sourced foods whenever possible that more than satisfy the sophisticated palates of The Clare’s residents. Whether he’s preparing his daily fresh fish selection or one of his famous signature desserts, the residents are always pleasantly surprised by Chef Hagop’s creativity and execution. In fact, many residents often treat family and friends to a meal at The Clare to show off Chef’s culinary skills.

A leading force in Chicago’s culinary scene, Chef Hagop came to The Clare with more than 15 years of experience. Trained in French cuisine and working in 3- and 4-star kitchens, he honed his cooking skills and developed a unique artistic flair for creating showpiece sculptures out of ice, sugar and chocolate.

Chef Hagop has impressive credentials including being recognized as a Leading Chef by the renowned Les Amis d’Escoffier Society of Chicago and as a skilled ice carver in Matsumoto, Japan. Before coming to The Clare he earned his stripes as the Executive Chef at the Hyatt Regency Woodfield, the Karma Restaurant at the Crowne Plaza North Shore and the Deer Path Inn in Lake Forest.

In addition to Chef Hagop’s daily gourmet preparations, residents enjoy monthly themed-dining and festive meals for holidays. He also leverages local, seasonal vegetables, fruits and herbs to create his dishes.

Every day is an indulgence with Chef Hagop, who is known for his decadent,

Pumpkin Truffles Recipe

Hagop Hagopian, Executive Chef at The Clare
Makes 125 pieces

Ingredients:
2 oz. Corn syrup
8 oz. Heavy cream
4 oz. Pumpkin puree
1 tsp Pumpkin pie spice
18 oz. Milk chocolate couverture (chopped)
1 cup Melted glazing chocolate (keep at 115 degrees)
Dutch process cocoa powder - as needed

Directions:
1. Place the heavy cream, corn syrup, pumpkin puree and pie spice in a saucepan and bring to a boil.
2. Place the chocolate in a stainless steel mixing bowl and pour the boiling heavy cream over the chocolate and cover with plastic wrap and let sit for two minutes.
3. With a whisk starting in small circles, slowly begin emulsifying the cream and chocolate. Once you see the emulsion starting, make your circles larger.
4. Allow the ganache to set overnight and scoop the ganache and place on a sheet pan.
5. Coat the ganache in the coating chocolate and roll in a bowl with cocoa powder.

Immunizations important for seniors, too

BY RUTH FOLGER WEISS

It's National Immunization Awareness Month, which means there is no better time to get your immunizations than now.

Getting the proper vaccinations is important and is not something that is limited to young children and adolescents. In fact, as a senior citizen, now is the time to make sure you are protected against disease. Here are some immunizations you should be getting to protect yourself.

Chicken pox and shingles

If you have never had the chicken pox vaccination, now is the time to get vaccinated. This also holds true if you were only given the first dose of the vaccine as a child. Proactively protect yourself, because this disease can lead to serious complications. Seniors must get a specific vaccine that specifically targets shingles and chicken pox, because shingles commonly occurs in people who are more than 50 years old.

Many people believe that the chicken pox vaccine protects against shingles because both come from the same bacteria, but this is not the case. Talk with your doctor to ensure you're getting the protection you need.

Diphtheria and tetanus

TDAP is the name for the vaccine that protects against diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis in adults. It is suggested that seniors receive each vaccination every 10 years to ensure protection against these diseases.

Pertussis is more commonly known as whooping cough. Although whooping cough doesn't pose a serious threat to adults, it can be extremely harmful to infants. Receiving this vaccination helps protect you and your family from getting extremely ill, particularly if you have grandchildren who are very young.

Influenza

The flu is responsible for many hospitalizations for people of all ages and is not a pleasant illness to deal with, as recovery time can be slow. For seniors, the flu can be especially harmful and even can result in death. As you age, your body weakens and lacks the well as it once could. Getting your flu shot each year is important in order to prevent catching the disease.

Seniors living in nursing homes should receive their flu shots annually to prevent the spread of the flu within the facility. A higher dose of the vaccine sometimes is available to those who are older in order to more effectively help prevent the disease. Your doctor can help you decide which version of the vaccination is right for you.

Pneumococcal

Similar to the flu, pneumonia is responsible for many deaths among the elderly. Even if you had a pneumonia vaccination as a child, you still are eligible for another one-time shot.

Those who smoke or have issues with their lungs can see major complications from pneumonia, making prevention even more important.

Other vaccinations

Some seniors who are older and suffering from other medical conditions may be more susceptible to other illnesses such as meningitis, hepatitis, measles, mumps and rubella. Talk to your doctor to find out if any, or all, of these vaccinations are right for you.

These are just some of the vaccines that will protect you against illnesses and the complications that come along with them, especially if you are considering assisted living. Talk with your doctor or visiting doctor to learn more about protecting your body from severe illness and the vaccinations you may need.

Ruth Folger Weiss is a writer for the Mont Marie Rehabilitation and Healthcare Center, a post acute rehabilitation center in Holyoke, Mass.

Improve health, longevity using a few simple tips

Aging can be defined as: "progressive changes related to the passing of time."

While physiological changes that occur with age may prevent life in your 70s, 80s and beyond from being what it was in your younger years, there's a lot you can do to improve your health and longevity and reduce your risk for physical and mental disability as you get older.

Research shows that you're likely to live an average of about 10 years longer than your parents—and not only that, but you're likely to live healthier longer too.

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, 40.4 million Americans (about 13 percent) were 65 years of age or older in 2010. By the year 2030, almost 20 percent of the total U.S. population will be 65 and older.

So how do you give yourself the best possible chance for a long, healthy life? Although you aren't able to control every factor that affects health as you age, many are in your hands.

Some keys to living a long, healthy life include:

- Make healthful lifestyle choices—don't smoke, eat right, practice good hygiene, and reduce stress in your life
- Have a positive outlook
- Stay as active as possible—mentally and physically

- Take safety precautions
- See your health care provider regularly and follow his or her recommendations for screening and preventative measures

One of the most important things you can do to stay healthy in your golden years is to maintain your sense of purpose by staying connected to people and things that matter to you. However, this isn't always easy—especially in a society that all-too-often views older people as a burden.

Visit your local senior center. Spend time with at least one person—a family member, friend or neighbor—every day. Volunteer in your community, attend a local event, join a club or take up a new hobby.

How to live without regrets

BY MARGRET ALDRICH

If you died today, what would be your paramount regret?

Would you lament the fact that you never got the front porch painted, that you didn't try that hot new restaurant, that there was one more project at work you wanted to wrap up?

Palliative caretaker Bronnie Ware spent years attending to hospice patients during the final weeks of their lives. In those aching heavy days, she heard first-hand their regrets over missed opportunities, botched relationships and squandered joys.

Realizing what these end-of-life wishes could teach the rest of us, Ware collected the top five regrets of the dying for her blog "Inspiration and Chai" and republished them online with the AARP. The list follows:

1. I wish I'd had the courage to live a life true to myself, not the life others expected of me.

2. I wish I didn't work so hard.
3. I wish I'd had the courage to express my feelings.
4. I wish I had stayed in touch with my friends.
5. I wish that I had let myself be happier.

It's easy to inch dangerously close to these common regrets in our own lives. Workaholic family members should know that every one of Ware's male patients regretted putting their job above their children and partners. Skip the late-night conference call!

Too-busy young parents should beware of letting golden friendships grow cold.

"Everyone misses their friends when they are dying," Ware says. Have a drink with an old pal!

And all of us should remember the most common regret: not being true to oneself. Unleash all those beautiful quirks and aspirations!

The U.S. edition of Ware's book "The Top Five Regrets of the Dying: A Life Transformed by the Dearly Departing" will be released this month. She hints it has a happy ending, noting that each of the people she cared for came to terms with their regrets and even made major life changes to remedy the situation.

"People grow a lot when they are faced with their own mortality," she writes. "I learned never to underestimate someone's capacity for growth. Some changes were phenomenal."

It's not too soon for the rest of us to make changes, either—good health or not. Don't wait.

Three reasons getting older is great

BY ALEXA ELHEART

It is very accurate to describe current society as "youth-obsessed."

Many people feel embarrassed to reveal their true ages. They're pressured to dress like middle school-aged kids, and they live in fear of their next birthday.

The truth is that society has it completely backwards: Getting older is actually the best part of life! Don't believe me?

Getting older is actually the best part of life!

1) You have better social skills

It's proven to be true: As people age, their social skills increase. In a study conducted in 2010 at the University of Michigan, 200 people were given "Dear Abby"-style letters asking for advice. Researchers found that "subjects in their 60s were better than younger ones at imagining different points of view, thinking of multiple resolutions and suggesting compromises."

2) You gain perspective

Another great part of getting older is that you realize what's most important and what you don't really need to spend time worrying about. As Oprah Winfrey put it, one of the hardest—but most rewarding—parts of aging is "recognizing the time that you wasted and the things that you worried about that really didn't matter."

When you're young, you tend to give yourself an inordinate amount of stress; however, as you get older and have the luxury of looking back on your experiences from early adulthood, you can start to see how much unnecessary pressure you may have put on yourself. When you are older, you can finally free yourself of that stress and save it for things that actually matter.

3) You have the opportunity to give back

While there are some 20-somethings who have the means to give back substantially to their communities, the majority of people in their 20s just don't have that privilege—whether that's due to a lack of funds or an inflexible work schedule. However, when you get older and find yourself with a much more stable lifestyle, both professionally and economically, it becomes less prohibitive to donate money or time to your community.

So get out there and thrive — take your superior social skills, perspective and sense of community and make the world a better place! You have amazing and unique things to offer, and your experiences really have the capability to improve the world around you.

Financial concerns, loss can lead to depression

Stress can have an enormous impact on your health and your quality of life at any age—and even more so as you get older.

In fact, according to a recent study published in the Journal of the American Geriatrics Society, depression and anxiety are linked to physical decline in seniors. Concerns like: "Will there enough money now that I'm retired?" and "What will happen if I get a serious illness or become disabled?" are common in older adults.

As you age, you're also more likely to experience emotional trauma associated with loss—the deaths of people close to you (friends, family members, spouses), declines in your own health, or a loss of independence.

For many seniors, dealing with the loneliness caused by multiple losses can lead to a diminished investment in life—especially when combined with other issues, like financial concerns.

Try these tips to help deal with difficult changes:

- Focus on being thankful. Appreciate and enjoy your life and don't take people or things for granted.
- Acknowledge your feelings and express them. Talk to a friend, family member or health care professional, write in a journal or join a support group.
- Embrace your spirituality.
- Accept that some things are out of your control.
- Try to keep your sense of humor.

Seniors are at increased risk for depression. If you're feeling overwhelmed or unable to cope or deal with stress, it's important to reach out to family, friends, caregivers and health care providers. To locate services for older adults and family members in your area, visit the Eldercare Locator provided by the U.S. Administration on Aging or call 800-677-1116.

Sponsored by

The Clare Is Part of the SOAR Artisan Market, November 6 – 8

Visit The Clare Lounge during the 7th Artisan Market Streeterville being held November 6 – 8, in the Lurie Research Building Lobby of Northwestern, 303 E. Superior. The Clare is excited to be returning as a sponsor of this signature event of the Streeterville Association of Active Residents (SOAR).

Fifty-nine artisans offer jewelry, clothing and accessories, home décor, children's goods, art, and photography—plus food vendors and food gift items. Admission is free. The Market is open Friday, November 6, from 2 – 8 pm; Saturday and Sunday, November 7 – 8, from 10 am – 5 pm.

Up all Friday night with architecture

On the eve of Halloween, 6 p.m. Friday, North Siders can join art and architecture enthusiasts for free presentations, conversations, hands-on workshops and maker activities that architecture buffs and beginners will enjoy. They're being held at the Chicago Cultural Center, 78 E. Washington St., and feature an art and architecture-oriented PechaKucha with Peter Exley, co-founder of the design firm Architecture is Fun; a conversation with public-interest design guru Bryan Bell, founder of Social Economic Environmental Design; a film screening and discussion of Candyman; and a flashlight tour of the Chicago Cultural Center and beyond with Cultural Historian Tim Samuelson.

Go behind the scenes of Victory Gardens' 'Never the Sinner'

Audiences are invited behind the scenes of "Never the Sinner" during Backstage at the Biograph: In Plain Sight at 7 p.m. Thursday at Victory Gardens Biograph Theater, 2433 N. Lincoln Ave. The event features a discussion with the stars of the show, which runs Nov. 6 through Dec. 6. Set in 1924 Chicago, the story follows two handsome and wealthy college students, Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, who are accused of murder. The courtroom drama explores the complex and twisted relationship between the men in search of passion, intellect and the perfect crime. A panel of experts will discuss criminology, psychology and law during Backstage at the Biograph, an open rehearsal kick-off party for "Never the Sinner." Attendees also can enjoy complimentary drinks and appetizers while mingling with the cast at the 1920s-themed event, which is free and open to the public. Space is limited and an RSVP is required. For more information call 773-871-3000.

'Little Shop of Horrors' playing on big screen to celebrate Halloween

The public is invited to celebrate Halloween with a free screening of "Little Shop of Horrors" at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Jay Pritzker Pavilion at Millennium Park, 201 E. Randolph St. Guests may take a seat at the pavilion or picnic on the lawn as the movie is presented on a 40-foot LED screen. Food and beverage from Goose Island will be available for purchase.

The 1986 movie follows a nerdy florist who finds his chance for success and romance with the help of a giant, man-eating plant that demands to be fed. The family friendly American rock musical and horror-comedy film stars Rick Moranis, Ellen Greene, Vincent Gardenia and Steve Martin. The film lasts 94 minutes and is rated PG-13. For more information call 312-742-1168.

Chicago's low ranking among fit cities in the nation

BY KEVIN HARMON

Many people are surprised to find out that in recent polls Chicago isn't ranked real high when it comes to being one of the fittest cities in the U.S. This time of year, folks can be seen cycling, running, attending outdoor fitness boot camps, playing softball, volleyball, flag football, etc, so it came as a surprise to Sarah Mitchell, a Lakeview teacher who regularly spends her days either running or cycling on the Lakefront Trail, that Chicago wasn't ranked in the Top 10. "My thinking is there is a lot that goes into these various polls and studies and it's not an indication that Chicago isn't a fit city," she said. "We don't have something that some of the other cities have... we don't have nice weather all of the time." Women's Health and Men's Fitness magazines recently released their rankings of the fittest cities in the U.S. Both publications used a 15-point formula, citing air quality, pedestrian and bike friendliness, general well-being, access to places to walk, public transit use and access to and the overall number of health clubs as some of the factors in making the determination.

The top 10 cities in order were San Francisco, Washington, D.C., Denver, Seattle, Minneapolis, Boston, Portland, Oregon, Oakland, San Jose and Long Beach. What these cities had that put them in the top 20 were having a solid cycling infrastructure, lots of gym/health clubs, natural food stores, outdoor urban gardens, great trail systems and with the exception of Minneapolis, consistently good weather in that it doesn't get really cold. Some would argue that the Pacific Northwest cities of Seattle and Portland get too much rain, but their access to the mountains and the ocean give them the nod. Chicago was listed 16th in the polls, behind Miami, Sacramento, New York City and Austin, TX. Not bad in the big picture, but surprising to some. Mitchell figured with the explosion of the Divvy Bike Sharing Program, the increased number of bike lanes in the city and the

"In a good year the weather in Chicago will never rank up there with places like Denver and those California cities that get lots of sunshine and warmer weather most of the time," said Mitchell.

extensive Chicago Park District system, would result in Chicago having a higher ranking. "In a good year the weather in Chicago will never rank up there with places like Denver and those California cities that get lots of sunshine and warmer weather most of the time," she said. "But I've lived in different places and I would say that Chicago ranks among the fittest cities around and all you have to do is drive around the city on a decent weather day." Donnie Taylor said he commutes to his job at a South Loop bakery from his home in Edgewater on the Lakefront Trail on his bike and he is amazed at all the people of different sizes and ages doing a variety of fitness things on the lakefront. "In a lot of ways we are like California in that we have a lake that draws people to fitness instead of an ocean and we have lots of places to walk, have pretty good transportation and there are a lot of gyms here too," he said, responding to Chicago's ranking as the 16th fittest city by the polls. "I think it has a lot to do with name recognition and maybe nationally, people don't view Chicago as a fit city because it's a blue collar town and some might equate that with low income people or fat people. A lot of the Rust Belt and Midwestern cities are not considered havens for healthy people statistically." When asked why she thought Chicago wasn't considered among the top 15 fittest cities in the country, firefighter Sherry Compton, who ran in last weekend's Chicago Marathon, and regularly runs the entire 18-mile length of the Lakefront Trail, thinks the rating is due to Chicago's abundance of overweight people. "We eat pretty well here and have a lot of great restaurants in and around Chicago and just because a person appears overweight doesn't mean they are not fit or in really good shape," she said. "It has a lot to do with imaging and packaging. When you see images of people on television in Chicago, they don't show people running, cycling, para-sailing, skiing or paddle boarding like you would see in images of places like Portland or Denver, you see people in restaurants, at sporting events, at concerts, at Taste of Chicago, etc." Compton and Mitchell agree the bike infrastructure, which has grown by leaps and bounds over the years, needs to be better to promote more people cycling. "I've been to Portland and Seattle and they are both very bike-friendly towns and there are a lot of fit people there because the way both cities are set up, biking as a way to commute as well as a way to stay fit are encouraged," Mitchell said. "I think we do pretty well here considering there are only about six really good months of weather." Mitchell, Compton and Taylor agree that Chicago isn't a top place when it comes to healthy eating, even if people are trying to stay fit because there are just too many good food options.

each direction, and resurfacing the approach on both sides of the bridge. At least one sidewalk was kept open to pedestrian traffic and bicyclists were allowed to walk their bikes across it during the project. Although the Cortland St. Bridge no longer functions as a movable bridge, it was the first Chicago Style Fixed Trunnion Bascule Bridge when it was originally built in 1902. The design was developed by City of Chicago engineers in the late 1890s. This model has been copied worldwide since. As the very first bridge of this type, the Cortland St. Bridge is now considered an historical landmark.

Harvard physicist to discuss book about universe history

Physicist Lisa Randall of Harvard Univ. will discuss her new book “Dark Matter and the Dinosaurs: The Astounding Interconnectedness of the Universe” 6-7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 10, in the Pritzker Auditorium of the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St.

In the book, Randall tells a story that weaves together the history of humans and the cosmos. The book explores a speculative scenario in which a disk of dark matter - the stuff in the universe that interacts through gravity like ordinary matter but that doesn’t emit or absorb light - dislodges a comet from the Oort cloud that was ultimately responsible for the dinosaurs’ extinction.
