Mother Nature taking as good as she gave

North Siders should expect a battering this Winter
along North Lakefront

BY MAGNA MATER

Those who truly want to feel small, feeble and helpless can try to hold back the waters crashing on the North Lakefront this Fall and Winter.

For all the heartfelt concern by environmentalists toward protecting Mother Nature, she seems to be able to manage well enough on her own, and takes back Lakefront real estate as quickly as she gave it out.

According to city officials and members of the US Army Corps of Engineers, protecting Chicago's lakefront from rising water is going to be a very long, expensive and frustrating experience.

Lake Michigan's higher levels represent a significant swing from the early 2000s when Mother Nature tortured boaters with water levels so low that docking boats at Lakefront marinas was a problem. Conversely, Mother Nature gave Chicago's beach-goers wide, expansive sandy shorelines to enjoy. Lake levels are largely a function of water in and water out... rain runoff adds to the levels while evaporation lowers them. The extreme rain the Midwest had during late Winter and early Spring showed up quickly this year in the Great Lakes water levels.

At a town hall meeting Oct. 21 at Loyola University's Lake Shore Campus hosted by aldermen Harry Osterman [48th] and Maria Hadden [49th], residents learned that the city is now relying primarily on those recently installed concrete barriers to manage what they warn will be an especially bad winter for Lakefront flooding and erosion.

Besides the two aldermen, other panelists included Michelle Kozak, of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Chicago District, who is responsible for water resources Rising Lake Michigan levels could submerge Sheridan and Lake Shore Dr.

BY JIM VAIL

The cost to repair Chicago's lakefront will be over a billion dollars, said Ald. Harry Osterman [48th] at an Oct. 21 community forum that addressed the higher lake levels.

Chicago aldermen and other city and federal officials said the rising lake levels and shoreline erosion cannot be ignored in the short term. Lakefront flooding this winter could impact homes and roads.

These public officials say that Lake Shore Dr. and Sheridan Rd. could both be submerged in ice and water. Concrete slab barriers (not a permanent solution) are slated for Juneway Terrace, Howard St., Rogers and Thorndale avenues, according to the officials who spoke at the forum. Barriers will also try to tame wave action and later ice dams adjacent to Lake Shore Dr. from Oak St. to North Ave. and along the lakefront at 49th, 50th and 75th Streets.

Due to their waterfront location, the strip of high-rises along the lakefront north of Hollywood Beach also may be at high risk. The Lakefront Trail too seems destined to be closed for long stretches this winter if giant ice sheets and ice dams form along those segments adjacent to the water, leaving those who bike to work fighting traffic along residential and commercial streets.

The experts at the forum said that the city has sandbags ready and it has received water pumps from the Dept. of Homeland Security, which they hope will protect some of the city's most important infrastructure.

There does not seem to be a consensus on which department is responsible for funding the lakefront protection project - with the federal government [FEMA], the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Chicago Park District all mentioned. But experts agreed Chicago will need to seek state funding in the short-term, while federal dollars may be needed for the long-term.

House that entertained stars could be demolished despite chance to be landmarked

Ken Nordine's Snail Studio
hosted Jerry Garcia,
Tom Waits and many others

BY EDGEVILLE BUZZ

Edgewater's last historic mansions are dwindling in numbers as developers eye them in order to capitalize on the neighborhood's popularity. But one home's likely fate in particular has some shaking their heads and wondering if there is any hope.

Many of the surviving century-old homes such as the one that housed Wing Hoe restaurant at 5356 N. Sheridan do not meet the requirements needed to be landmarked. Those structures will likely see the wrecking ball after they are sold. But one historic mansion with a colorful history at 6106 N. Kenmore has everything needed for easy landmarking, not to mention a buyer willing to preserve it.

The house which stands on the northwest corner of Kenmore and Glenlake was owned by one of the most celebrated voices in both radio and television, Grammy Award nominated Ken Nordine. He purchased the mansion in the 1960s and it became home to his legendary recording studio Snail Studios.

In the mid '60s, radio personality Ken Nordine was doing a nightly radio show for WMAQ called "Ken Nordine's Word Jazz." Rather than spending studio time at the WMAQ studio, the top floor of his Edgewater home was emptied and turned into his Snail work space.

Snail started as a vehicle for Ken's Word Jazz and some other side projects. The bulk of the work centered around radio and TV commercial production with Ken's son Kris Nordine and a host of session musicians serving as the in-house band.

Through the decades a wide range of celebrities secretly recorded at the home. If those walls could talk they would boast about the likes of the Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia, Fred Astaire, and the masterful Tom Waits (just to name a few) and the creative collaborations that took place there. Sadly, time moves on and Nordine died in February. His estate was left to his sons who quickly started to look for a buyer.

It did not take long for prospective purchasers to show interest. The lot that the house sits on is a

Alderman giving away free smoke alarms

Residents who stop by the City Hall office of Ald. Brendan O'Reilly [42nd], Room 200 at 121 N. LaSalle St., can get a free smoke detector.

The smoke detectors are courtesy of the Chicago Fire Dept. Smoke detectors can be picked up from the office between the hours of 9 a.m.-4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Most fires occur at night when people are sleeping. A smoke detector can alert you when there is a fire, in time to save your life. Fire officials recommend that you replace your home smoke detectors every 10 years, and that you should write the install date on the unit as a quick reference. For more information call 312-744-3062 or write care of office@ward42chicago.com. And while they're not being given away for free, don't forget to install Carbon Monoxide detectors on every floor of your home as well.

Out of step, again, with 21st century self-absorption

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

The word's out that after much speculation... Ditka's Steakhouse, 100 E. Chestnut, just received a stay of execution for one year over its lease. No denying that the colorful former coach of the Chicago Bears is a local hero. His personality and character has always added a special flavor to the true taste of the stew that is genuine Chicago.

He deserves an outpost for his efforts and the continuance of his celebrity.

But that the end is near makes many of us sad. Chicago is proud of the coach. He still makes us walk a little taller.

Sad too was the news that the Bridgeport Bakery on Archer Ave. was closing because owner Ron Pavelka was retiring. The bakery's great claim to fame for me was their "Paczki," ("POONCH-kee to a Southsider) a Polish version of a jelly-filled Bismarck. Very popular just before the fast of Lent begins.

While working at Chicago's City Hall, kind Southsiders in the office would generously bring them in to nosh on before Ash Wednesday.

I don't do such changes well. I don't like the way such establishments cease functioning in our lives. Especially when they bring such comfort to us.

Don't get me wrong, both Mike Ditka and Ron Pavelka deserve less busy work days, if they so desire.

We just get used to their being there. A part of our urban furniture.

That got me thinking of all the fabulous places that have disappeared over the years. We've survived their loss, but Chicago life is not the same without them.

Do you remember The Bakery, Chef Louis Szathmary's Lincoln Park storefront that opened in 1963? A one-time columnist for this newspaper, he ushered in a food revolution amid the shabby surroundings. The chef with the giant mustache offered a stunning 5-course meal for just $12. He also served free lunch to whomsoever was in his building at noon. Odd how the UPS driver, meat deliveryman and postman always seemed to arrive right at 11:59 a.m. each day. They'd lunched next to sports celebrities, plumbers and Hollywood starlets who too were on site. Old School.

You probably remember the mouthwatering Beef Wellington or the Roast Duck with Cherry glaze. Not many Chicago bistros then. No one could offer such succulent cuisine.

Chef Louis was the Paul Bu-nyon of Chicago restaurateurs. He kept it going until 1989.

Chef Louis really brought fine dining to the yuppifying neighborhood. He was a character. I used to see him some mornings shopping for ingredients at Treasure Island on Wells St. You couldn't miss him. His conversations were historic. When The Bakery closed a piece of Chicago died.

Chef Louis Szathmary at the now shuttered The Bakery.

It was much the same way when Binyon's closed in 1987 and those Veal Kidneys on toast disappeared for good. Along with that heavenly Turtle Soup. Golden Ox on Clybourn shuttered and their sautéed Veal Chops with Veal Kidneys were no more. Both those spots were old-fashioned food in old-fashioned venues.

Not sure Millennials would be looking for such vittles today.

Alexander's was another place I recalled. For its life that steakhouse was at 79th St. and South Shore Dr. Alongside a neighborhood of refined elegance. Another old-fashioned gem, great steaks and chops. But what everyone remembers was their special appetizer. A shrimp on a thin slice of Italian bread all on top of their homemade onion/garlic, mayo-based salad dressing. Oh my, they were good. Best thing for a martini since the olive.

Then there was that fabulous salad at Don Roth's Blackhawk on Wabash. The home of the Spinning Salad Bowl shut down in 1984. And who could forget Jacques at 900 N. Michigan Ave. with its lush garden, dome and superb French fare lunches? We always had a special Christmas lunch there every year. Warm. Cozy. Unrivaled.

Of course, it's a long list. But it's also very personal. When something you really cherish disappears, it takes a part of you with it. Especially places that comfortably fit into childhood. The Stock-Yard Inn was another legendary place, near the cattle pens on Halsted St., now long gone. It went the way of Fritzel's, the Como Inn and the Wrigley Building Restaurant. And of course, Gordon's on Clark St., perhaps, the ultimate urban outpost for superb cuisine nestled in a strange, dark part of town. But Gordon Sinclair, himself, was so remarkably welcoming and sophisticated with food like nowhere else. He established a memorable encounter with everyone.

Of course, we miss these treasures. Like Brigadoon, they seemed to magically rise to the surface and change our world before departing. But we are not the same for it. We were all transformed by the food, the civility, the hospitality and the nonchalance of excellence.

Such things are not merely nostalgic, they are seminal. Part of the cultural environment of safety and trust. The departure of familiar places of reference from our everyday living displays a powerful sense of disconnection from important safety codes. The discomfort engendered by their loss and the sense of spiritual failure of their withdrawal demonstrates a wearing away of important cultural confidence. No wonder people can't hold a meaningful conversation with one another about essential truths. Or eat dinner with their family without holding an iPhone in their hands.

All these small closures of favorite places loom large in our paths with shadow over life. All become very real to me amid the discomfort of "Impeachment" conversation. The sly shenanigans of Brexit. The promised protection of Northern Ireland's borders. The piano playing of Vladimir Putin. The hard line of Chicago teachers. The refusal of young Americans to vote. The spread of fake news and the re-naming of Lake Shore Dr. after an anti-American British sympathizer during our Revolution in 1776.

What are people thinking?

Capone book sure to be big hit

Diane Capone only knew her grandfather Al for a few short years before he died, yet her childhood memories of him are clear as can be.

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

"He was the most loving man -- a very devoted family man despite all that carrying on during his heyday in his 20s," said the 75-year-old Capone. "Despite everything that was said and alleged -- and whether it was accurate or not -- it doesn't matter to me. I don't know much about his public life, but in his private life he was very, very loving."

For those who would love to know about the personal side of the notorious gangster, his granddaughter has written, "Al Capone: Stories my grandmother told me." I had the pleasure of chatting with her about her first book.

Until now, she has lived a quiet, low-key life. But that will more than likely change for her since authoring the life story of her infamous grandfather, her "Papa."

"I think I came out of the closet," laughed Capone, a retired college counselor of 20 years. "It's wonderful to feel like finally the story of their private life is going to be told. There are so many misrepresentations," she added. "I tried to give the personal side."

The book is filled with memories and never before seen pix, of growing up Capone. Diane Capone has been working on it for several years, ever since her sister Ronnie fell ill with leukemia. While Ronnie was in the hospital, she and Diane were reliving their childhood memories.

"After she died, I thought, 'There's no one left to tell the stories,'" said Capone. "My grandma lived 40 years after her husband died, my dad told stories, my mom told stories -- I found diaries and journals my mother had kept since meeting my father at the age of 14. I did this so the story would be told as truly as I could tell it," said Capone. "I'm running out of time. I had to tell it."

She also wanted to recognize her grandmother Mae, "an extraordinary woman who never gave up hope, never took off her wedding ring, and never stopped loving him."

"It's a beautiful love story," said Capone. "I wanted to tell what it was like."

Capone, whose father Albert Francis Capone was Al's only child, had just turned three when her grandfather, who she called "Papa," died. Her birthday is Jan. 14, his was Jan. 17, and the family had a wonderful Christmas, and a fabulous birthday celebration for the pair just before Al died on Jan. 25. The last photo of Papa, which is in the book, was taken at the family's Palm Island, FL, home that Christmas, 1947.

that living room again."

Yet, "He found peace and joy in his last years, there was no danger, no looking over his shoulder," continued Capone, who has "very, very vivid memories of his death."

She also remembers the time she was six-years-old and in first grade when someone made a derogatory Capone remark to her.

"You have to be beyond reproach, because your name is Capone," she was told by her father, who, when he was a young boy, had to have notes signed by the parents of friends before allowing them to come over to the house.

Al Capone moved to Chicago in 1919, at the age of 20. He bought a two-family duplex at 7244 S. Prairie Ave., and brought other family members to live with him. He lived here until 1928, when he bought the Florida home.

Despite it never being officially linked to Capone, it was widely assumed that the chief gangster was responsible for ordering the 1929 St. Valentine's Day Massacre. Yet he went to the big house [Alcatraz] for only tax evasion and Prohibition charges when he was in his early 30s, said his granddaughter. Papa, who today is somewhat like a cult figure -- served about seven and a half years and never again publicly re-

Seven North Side communities posted whopping declines in sales

With a shortage of buyers touring listings this summer, many Chicago home sellers were left scratching their heads, as the market for single-family homes slumped in several North Side neighborhoods, experts say.

Total third-quarter home sales activity increased only in Lincoln Park, where it gained 11.1%, and was unchanged in Rogers Park, reported the quarterly Chicago

As home sales slump, sellers are asking 'where are the buyers?'

Seven North Side communities posted declines in home sales activity ranging from a whopping -22% in Edgewater to -3.8% on the Near North Side. Other results were -16.2% in Lake View, -12.9% in North Center, -8.8% in Uptown, -7.3% in West Ridge and -4.6% in Lincoln Square.

water, Lake View, Lincoln Park, Lincoln Square, Near North Side, North Center, Rogers Park, Uptown and West Ridge.

Seven communities posted declines in home sales activity ranging from a whopping -22% in Edgewater to -3.8% on the Near North Side. Other results were -16.2% in Lake View, -12.9% in North Center, -8.8% in Uptown, -7.3% in West Ridge and -4.6% in Lincoln Square.

There were 2,640 home sales in the nine community areas that make up the North Side during the July-September quarter, down -7.4% from the total posted a year earlier, but better than the -7.6% decline in the second quarter.

The median sales price of homes, townhouses and condominiums rose only 0.9% to $355,000, slightly up from the 0.7% increase for the second quarter.

Median single-family detached home prices ranged from a low of $345,000 in West Ridge and $545,660 in Rogers Park, to $725,000 in Lincoln Square, $747,500 in Edgewater and $950,625 in Uptown.

In luxury neighborhoods, median detached home prices ranged from $1,082,500 in North Center and $1,232,500 in Lake View, to $1,075,000 on the Near North Side and $1.6 million in Lincoln Park.

"While total third quarter sales effectively tracked those of the second quarter, there were some changes worth noting," said Nathan, who is affiliated with the Charese David Team based at 2044 W. Roscoe St. "Although the single-family sales activity led the market in the second quarter, attached home sales were the stronger component of third-quarter results."

The sales data cited by Compass is collected by Midwest Real Estate Data, LLC, the regional multiple listing service.

Condos are selling Attached residences—primarily condominiums and townhouses, accounted for 89.7% of all home sales on the North Side during the third quarter. Attached sales totaled 2,367 units—down 6.8% from the same period in 2018, while the median price gained 2.8% to $330,000.

Condo and townhouse listings sat on the market an average of 72 days before finding a buyer—14 days longer than the same period last year. Average market time increased to some extent in all nine community areas, topped by a 20-day increase in Lincoln Park, one of the only neighborhoods to post an actual increase in attached sales, gaining 12.6% to 358 units. Attached sales rose 6.4% in Lincoln Square to 100 units.

The eight other communities all saw declines in attached sales compared with the same quarter in 2018. Sales were off -0.7% in Rogers Park, -3.1% on the Near North Side, -6.5% in West Ridge, -8.7% in Uptown, -15% in Lake View, -22% in Edgewater and -22.7% in North Center.

The median condo and townhouse sales prices rose in five areas: 20.6% in Edgewater, 7.3% in Uptown, 3.2% in North Center, 1.9% in Lake View and 1.2% in Lincoln Square. Elsewhere, the median price fell -11.2% in Lincoln Park, -5.3% in West Ridge, -5.1% in Rogers Park and -3.7% on the Near North Side.

Single-family home slump

Third-quarter sales of detached single-family homes on the North Side were down -12.8% compared to the same period last year, while the median sales price for this segment rose 5.4% to $988,237, and average market time declined by one day to 101 days. Nathan said that result reflects the shortage of moderately priced inventory across the North Side.

Sales activity rose in three neighborhoods: 10% in Rogers Park, 4.5% in North Center and 2% in Lincoln Park. Among the six communities where sales activity fell, four had declines of more than 20%, including Near North, down -55.6%; Lincoln Square, down -32.4%; Lake View, down -28.8% and Edgewater, down -21.4%. Sale also were off -10% in Uptown and -9.3% in West Ridge.

Median prices also showed a wide variation in performance though five communities had increases, including gains of 48.9% in Rogers Park, 28.5% in Uptown, 15.6% in Lincoln Square, 2.4% in North Center and 0.3% in Edgewater.

The median price in Lincoln Park was unchanged at $1.6 million, while the median was off -4.2% in West Ridge, -8.7% in Lake View and an amazing -58.4% on the Near North Side.

"The big price decline on the Near North Side reflects the fact that only four homes sold there during the third quarter and all were outside the Gold Coast portion of that community, where sales prices for detached homes are typically well over $1 million and often are multiples of that number," Nathan explained.

Gold Coast auction

To stimulate the market for a swank Gold Coast mansion at 1316 N. Dearborn, RE/MAX Premier Properties has partnered with auctioneer, Rick Levin, to auction the home on December 3, with a minimum bid of $3.35 million. The owners spent $6.9 million to buy and remodel the 6,500-square-foot home. RE/MAX anticipates three or four bidders and a final sale price above the minimum bid.

Mayor proposes short term fix for budget

North Sider's properties, dinners, rides targeted for new taxes

Mayor Lori Lightfoot announced a plan on Oct. 21 to refinance $1.3 billion of outstanding bonds and book resulting savings of $200 million in the coming year to help balance the budget.

She is also planning to add higher taxes onto high priced real estate transfers - like those found on the Near North and North sides - as well as higher taxes on ride-share services, restaurant dining and drinks. Oh ya, and Downtown meter parking rates are going up.

The savings generated by refinancing old debt representing nearly 25% of the city's $838 million Fiscal Year 2020 budget gap. The City will issue General Obligation (GO) and Sales Tax Securitization Corporation bonds to refinance $1.3 billion in outstanding callable City GO and Motor Fuel Tax bonds for savings.

The city says they can reduce interest payments on the borrowed money from 4.9% to something in the range of 3% to 3.5%, as reported by the The Bond Buyer. The savings on that $1.3 billion in old debt would be 1.4% — or about $18 million annually. The city's slick accounting trick is that the savings from the reduced interest costs will occur over the next 20 years, yet the entire amount will be taken upfront, Chief Financial Officer Jennie Huang Bennett told the Chicago Sun-Times.

So the total supposed savings of $200 million is a one-time measure used to balance this years budget. The refinancing is pending approval by the full City Council. But Lightfoot said she anticipates issuing bonds as early as December.

The city would benefit from generally lower interest rates through this move because the new bonds will be "securitized." That's the new structure that was authorized by the state in 2017.

The basic idea behind securitized bonds is an actual sale of city assets. By transferring full ownership of city assets to ensure repayment of a bond, lenders believe they make their right to payment assured even in any future city bankruptcy. It's like completing a foreclosure sale before there's even a default. While City Hall says the chances of a Chicago bankruptcy are remote, the municipal bond community's actions say otherwise. They want not just collateral but full conveyance of ownership in something that generates income equal to their loan amount in exchange for the lower interest rates.

Mayor Lightfoot distinguished the move from the criticized "scoop and toss" technique of former mayors Rahm Emanuel and Richard M. Daley, who used refinancing of old debt with extended maturities to reduce short-term costs but saddle the city with more long-term debt.

Mayor Lightfoot's plan also calls for $40 million in new taxes on users of ride-share services, and higher taxes on restaurant food and drink. She's also called for higher taxes through a Chicago casino and recreational pot sales, both that need the authorization of Springfield.

The city says it will use future sales tax revenue to securitize the new bonds, but it already sold that sales tax revenue for earlier bonds. So, the new bondholders will get a junior interest in future sales tax revenue, the city says. Presumably there's some value in that junior position, which helped the city get the reduced interest rates.

Mayor Lightfoot proposes to save another $337 million through various efficiencies, including the implementation of zero-based budgeting, department mergers, better debt and tax collection, and various other financial improvements.

She wants the remaining $350 million deficit to be paid through new tax increases.

They include raising taxes on Chicago's real estate transfers — a tax that applies to anyone selling or buying a home. "These reforms will bring an additional $50 million this coming year with an additional $100 million every year after that," said Mayor Lightfoot. But a graduated real estate transfer tax targeted to hit high value transactions hardest will require cooperation from Springfield in rewriting state law.

Her plan also calls for $40 million in new taxes on users of ride-share services, and higher taxes on restaurant food and drink. She's also called for higher taxes through a Chicago casino and recreational pot sales, both that need the authorization of Springfield. She also plans to increase rates on our Downtown parking meters and add more meters in the West Loop, which she hopes will bring in $7 million.

Downtown meter rates have been frozen for the last five years. The mayor did not say how she could raise the parking rates and pocket the money, instead of forwarding it to Chicago Parking Meters LLC, which still owns the parking meters for another 65 years. The much despised deal negotiated by former mayor Daley gave Chicago Parking Meters LLC, the right to collect and retain all of the metered parking revenue derived from metered parking spaces city-wide.

Lightfoot plans to target the food and dining industry too, through an increase in the restaurant tax from a quarter of a percent to half a percent, which is expected to generate another $20 million in new taxes a year.

She also promised $18 million a year in new property taxes to allow libraries to remain open seven days a week.

If the mayor doesn't get those items, she's threatened to close the remaining budget deficit with a property tax increase.

In her budget speech, Mayor Lightfoot did not address a need for pension and collective bargaining reforms needed to help City Hall cut the massive pension liabilities that now hamstrings any long term budget progress, and leave Chicago trapped in a vicious debt spiral. Far from stemming the negative trajectory of the city's finances, the budget proposal keeps in place most of the structural problems that have led the city to annual budget deficits.

Employers should be aware too that the mayor is accelerating the city's move toward a $15 minimum wage. "Our 2020

They were arrested one day while protesting in 1965.

CAPONE from p. 3

turned to Chicago.

"From the time he went back to Florida, he never wanted to go back to any of that," said Capone. "Papa had health problems and lived a very quiet life after Alcatraz." And even though he lived in Florida until his death, Papa is buried in Mount Carmel Catholic Cemetery in Hillside.

"One main thing I wanted to do was tell the true story and this is one most people don't know," said Capone. "It's astonishing that people don't think of him as an anti-hero any more -- there's an iconic thing about him. People don't think about Prohibition.

They think about the glamour."

Mob historian John Binder, who runs the "Chicago Prohibition Gangster Tour," said the book shatters quite a few myths and misconceptions about Al Capone and his family.

"Despite claims to the contrary, he never worked in Baltimore as an accountant before coming to Chicago," said Binder, who has appeared in dozens of documentaries related to gangland and is a consultant to the Chicago History Museum on organized crime. "And there is no lost Capone fortune hidden out there waiting to be found. Certainly his descendants never saw much of his income, because he essentially spent it as fast as he got it."

"And it tells for the first time how he met his wife Mae, the reaction of her Irish family to him being Italian, and how their only child was conceived," said Binder.

The soft-cover book, which sells for $19.99, should be available on Amazon by next week. It is also available through the publisher, The Troy Book Makers at www.shoptbmbbooks.com. And Capone has already started her second book, "Growing Up Capone," which begins when Papa died and goes to modern times.

"I was lucky to have a relationship with my grandma and she lived so long," said Capone. "I wouldn't have these stories if not."

Hyde Park women 40 years ago protesting to save the park trees.

At the head of the class... are the teachers of this world. Hopefully, by the time you read this, the strike will be over and my two little granddaughters will be back in class. Although some people do not agree with this, I surely hope they get everything they're asking for. My mom was a 30-year CPS teacher. Her work day did not end when the bell rang. I watched as every day, she brought home a stack of papers to grade after a hard day of teaching. I saw her spend her own money for supplies and things she wanted or needed for her classroom that CPS did not provide. Hang in there teachers and don't give up! And thank you.

Saving the trees and our park... the following is a letter from Herb Caplan, a Lakeview resident who is president of Protect Our Parks (POP). As someone who used to live on the South Side not far from Jackson Park, I can't say that I disagree with POP. I'm still waiting for someone to develop the Michael Reese site (I was born there by the way), why not put the Obama Center there? Perhaps a casino is coming to that site?

"The ceremonial Jackson Park tree saving protest that took place on Saturday -- led by the revived Burnham Brigade and more than 25 representative community supporters -- had to defy the rain, and repel invading Obama Presidential Center (OPC) supporters who were simultaneously tearing down the ribbons placed to identify the ancient trees scheduled to be clear cut to provide open space for construction of the proposed OPC in the historic public park.

"The protest event was dignified by the presence of children of the Hyde Park women who some 40 years earlier had also come to save the park trees by symbolically chaining themselves to the threatened trees. Present were John Clement, whose mother was the famed park protection activist Kay Clement, and Alex Halkin whose activist mother, Diti Halkin, some 44 years before, had also come to protest the cutting of public park trees to extend and widen the road in Lake Shore Drive through Jackson Park. They were arrested for engaging in that protest in 1965. By coincidence the women at that time were represented by Attorney Marshall Patner who coincidentally was the law school classmate and friend of Herb Caplan in today's protest. There were no arrests on this Saturday.

"The issues of the protest were quite simple: Historic Jackson Park is a world famous public park, on the National Register of Historic Places - often compared to Central Park in New York. The attempt to clear cut 500-600 ancient trees in the public park is an environmental atrocity, and will further contribute to advancing dangers of climate change. There is no credible reason to thoughtlessly cut down 100-year-old trees to build an invasive 235-foot tower in historic Jackson Park; There are better suited and easily available sites for an OPC in nearby underserved communities in need of neighborhood investment and development that with a legally enforceable CBA (Community Benefits Agreement) would escape the current OPC gentrification; and when objective environmental and economic development principles are applied, the Obama legacy would be exalted and properly honored, not forever blighted by a blind desecration of a unique and much needed South Side public park."

J. Blanton Plumbing University raises level of professionalism

May be the first program of its kind in U.S.

BY BOB AND JOANNE KITSOS

What began as a plumbing company by Jack Blanton, Sr. and Jack Blanton, Jr. more than 25 years ago has grown into a firm that now also offers HVAC services – heating, ventilation and air conditioning. In addition, this three-generation family business is leveraging the experience gained from its founders by developing a curriculum to ensure all its technicians are trained in the same way to ensure the best customer experience.

Training is in the form of J. Blanton University that began this year and may be the first of its kind in the country. It's a six-month program based on Blanton Jr.'s more than 30 years of plumbing experience; all the company's service technicians are required to complete the course.

"The need for the course is to better set our staff up for success in the field when conducting business," Blanton, Jr. said. "It's also an opportunity to grow both the company and the industry as a whole."

University focuses on service

The curriculum was designed by Blanton, Jr. and includes film and hands-on training taught by Blanton Jr. and other management staff. The course stresses the importance of what makes a good service plumber in the field and in the office.

"It establishes a solid foundation and touches on the customs and courtesies that go into making Jack's idea of the perfect plumber," said Oscar Kush, head of marketing. "Customer service is something that Jack takes very seriously. The course is geared around giving customers the utmost, best possible service and provide options to allow customers to choose the best one for themselves."

Training topics include demonstrations and practice in thawing frozen pipes, dealing with burst pipes, rodding clogged pipes and using iPad technology. In addition to the classroom training, the company weekly discusses issues and shares ideas online with members of a nationwide alliance of plumbing, HVAC and electric companies.

"We're being taught the way Jack would do the work. Jack knows everything," said Andrew Anderson, the first graduate of J. Blanton University who began working for the company in June 2019. "The training is as he would do it so we're going to do your job right for you."

The program includes a written test about plumbing and customer service. For Anderson, completing the comprehensive curriculum meant a better understand-

General Manager Jordan Blanton, left, and Andrew Anderson, the first graduate of J. Blanton Plumbing University. Completing the university's six-month curriculum, which focuses on customer service, leadership and mechanical techniques, is a requirement for all the company's technicians.

J. Blanton Plumbing, 4541 N. Ravenswood, is a family-owned and operated business that serves residential and commercial plumbing, heating, gas, sewer and air conditioning needs in Chicagoland and the Near North Shore. The company prides itself on its 24/7 service where "no job is too big or too small."

The J. Blanton family.

"We're being taught the way Jack would do the work. Jack knows everything," said Andrew Anderson, the first graduate of J. Blanton University who began working for the company in June 2019. "The training is as he would do it so we're going to do your job right for you."

ing about the mechanics of the business and customer services as well as a promotion, raise and vacation bonus.

The company is looking to hire more people and pass along the ethics, workflow and system that works for the company and its customers. "We want people to learn the trade and to grow the industry," said Jordan Blanton, general manager, Jack Jr.'s son.

"The university represents a resource and organization that pushes people to become better versions of themselves," said Jordan. "We want to motivate and excite our techs. Our common goal is that we want to do everything we can do to help each other -- whether they stay with us until they retire or go elsewhere. If we can show a better way, you're better for it."

Jordan, who started learning the business six years ago at his father's elbow, said, "I'm proud of my dad. Now, we're seeing kids of customers that he serviced early in his career. If you do right by the customer, they feel good about the experience and want to call you back."

This commitment to service may well be Blanton Plumbing University's legacy: To build an environment where its service technicians develop and pass along the knowledge, tradition and craftsmanship to help grow and advance the plumbing industry. Or, as Jordan said, "We want to pass the baton."

Police chief, in town for convention, falls victim to thief in River North

The head of a police agency in Virginia lost her wallet to a thief while she dined at a River North restaurant on Oct. 25. The woman was visiting Chicago to attend the International Assoc. of Chiefs of Police (IACP) convention.

A CPD spokesperson confirmed that someone stole a 55-year-old woman's belongings on the 500 block of N. Wabash. A source told this newspaper that the thief stole the woman's property as she dined at P. F. Chang's, 530 N. Wabash, around 6:30 p.m.

The thief went on to use the woman's credit cards at various locations in the downtown area before the victim realized what happened.

State Rep charged with taking bribes

Illinois State Rep. Luis Arroyo [3rd] has been charged in federal court with offering a bribe to a fellow state lawmaker in an effort to influence and reward the lawmaker for supporting legislation that would benefit Arroyo's private lobbying client.

Arroyo, 65, of Chicago, is charged with one count of federal program bribery, according to a criminal complaint and affidavit filed in U.S. District Court in Chicago. Arroyo made an initial court appearance Monday morning before U.S. Magistrate Judge Maria Valdez and was ordered released on a personal recognizance bond. The next court date was not immediately set.

Arroyo has served in the Illinois House of Representatives since 2006. He has also managed Spartacus 3 LLC, a private lobbying firm in Chicago.

According to the complaint, on Aug. 2, Arroyo offered to pay $2,500 per month to an Illinois state senator in return for the senator's support of sweepstakes-related legislation that would benefit one of Arroyo's lobbying clients. On Aug. 22, Arroyo met with the senator at a restaurant in Skokie and provided him a check for $2,500 as an initial payment, with the expectation that additional payments would be made for the next six to 12 months, the complaint states. The check was made payable to a nominee of the senator for the purpose of concealing the illicit payment, the complaint states.

Shots fired at West Loop carjacking

Two carjackers fired shots as they robbed a man of his vehicle in the West Loop Oct. 27, police said. No injuries were reported.

An 18-year-old man was standing near his 2006 Chevrolet Uplander when the offenders approached him on the 600 block of W. Lake at 10:06 p.m., according to CPD's Office of News Affairs. The two men then displayed a handgun and demanded the victim's keys.

Police said the carjackers fired two shots before driving away with the minivan—one into the pavement and the other at the victim. Shell casings were found at the scene.

The minivan, which bears a license plate that begins with BN707 and had three bicycles in the rear storage area, was last seen heading westbound on Randolph St., according to witnesses. Police described the carjackers as two black males wearing black hoodies.

H&M stores robbed in South Loop and Mag Mile

A shoplifting team pepper-sprayed employees at two H&M stores this week during a pair of robberies just four hours apart, according to police records. Detectives issued an alert to businesses as investigators try to track down the offenders.

Three women placed merchandise into bags and headed out the door at the Magnificent Mile H&M location, 840 N. Michigan, at 3 p.m. Oct. 24. They then pepper-sprayed a security guard who tried to stop them.

Later, the same women did the exact same thing at H&M's South Loop location, 1135 S. Delano, at 7:15 p.m.

Police issued descriptions of three offenders in the community alert:

Female, black, 16-20, 5'06", 130-145, dreadlocks, mustard jacket

Female, black, 20-30, ponytail, gray hat, gray sweater, maroon pants

Female, black, 20-30, gray headband, gray sweater, black pants

The woman in the mustard-colored jacket returned to the 840 N. Michigan store around 12:30 p.m. on Saturday, but she left before police arrived to take her into custody.

Anyone with information about the robbery crew can contact Area Central detectives at 312-747-8384. Refer to pattern #P19-1-346.

Gunman who robbed Lakeview phone store has struck two other times

WANTED

Investigators say the man who robbed a Lakeview wireless store at gunpoint last week has held up at least two other phone retailers since Sept. 9. A second man may also be involved.

That's all according to a business alert issued by Chicago Police Dept. detectives Oct. 26.

The man is seen striking around closing time, entering cellular stores and forcing employees into back rooms while displaying a machine pistol, according to the alert. He orders workers to open the store's safe and empty its contents into plastic bags.

On at least two occasions, the offender fled out the back door.

The offender struck most recently in Lakeview when he targeted the Sprint store, 2850 N. Broadway, at 7:53 p.m. Oct. 16. One of the phones contained a tracking device similar to those used to follow bank robbers. The tracker pinged down Lake Shore Dr., past downtown, and was last recorded near 111th Street and Interstate 57.

The two other cases took place on the South Side and Near West Side.

Police released two offender descriptions:

Male, black, 20-30, 5'-8" to 5'-10", 150 to 160 lbs, wearing a long dread wig, a baseball cap, glasses with no lenses, and a black hoodie. He carried a machine pistol that has an extended magazine.

Male, black, 20-30, 5'-5" to 5'-8", wearing a long dread wig, grey skull cap with red stripes, and a black coat. He carried a MAC-11 machine pistol.

Police in the alert encouraged businesses to install surveillance systems inside and outside their establishments and to install a hold-up alarm within reach of the cash register.

People with information about the robberies can share it with Area North Detectives at 312-744-8263 or Area Central Detectives 312-747-8380.

Four-year sentence for shooting at a group of people and battering a cop

Four years. That's the sentence given to a man accused of firing a handgun toward a group of people in the Near North neighborhood on June 9, 2018.

Trashawn Steele

Steele, 27, pleaded guilty to one count of aggravated unlawful use of a weapon with a previous conviction and one count of aggravated battery to a police officer in a deal with prosecutors.

Judge Catherine Haberkorn sentenced Steele to two concurrent four-year terms.

Police arrested Steele at a River North gas station on July 5, 2018, after he was allegedly identified as the man who shot toward a group of people on the 900 block of N. Cambridge about a month earlier.

Steele "became irate" as cops tried to place him into a transport van and said, "I ain't going up in there. You have to shoot me!" He battered one officer, prosecutors said.

According to Illinois Dept. of Corrections records, Steele previously received a three-year sentence for battery to a police officer in 2014.

Steele received credit for 440 days spent in jail awaiting trial on the 2018 charges. The state will cut his sentence by 50% for good behavior, giving him an anticipated parole date of June 26 of next year.

As part of the plea deal, prosecutors agreed to drop eleven felonies, including multiple counts of aggravated discharge of a firearm, being a felon in possession of a handgun, and aggravated battery to police.

Not guilty

A man who police accused of having a gun in his car as he drove around Edgewater in March 2018 has been found not guilty in a bench trial.

Police said they pulled Justin Johnson over on the 2000 block of W. Granville because his car had only one headlight and no working tail lights. Officers further accused Johnson of having pot in his pants pocket and on his car's center console.

And, police alleged, when a cop tried to open the locked glove compartment of the car, Johnson became nervous and reportedly asked if "it'd be OK to not search the glove box."

Police said they eventually opened the compartment and found a loaded 40-caliber handgun inside. Johnson denied ownership of the gun.

Johnson, 27, waived his right to a jury trial and put his fate in the hands of Cook County Judge Shelley Sutker-Dermer, who found him not guilty.

76-year-old man robbed at Loop ATM

A Good Samaritan helped cops track down the man who allegedly pushed a senior citizen to the ground and stole his money at a Loop ATM last Monday, prosecutors said.

The victim, 76, was retrieving cash from an ATM at 70 W. Randolph when Michael Zuffa forced his hand away from the machine, knocked him to Stolen puppy Caela.

River North dognapping

The search continues for Caela, a 17-month-old shepherd mix who was stolen from outside a River North restaurant while her owner picked up a to-go order on Oct. 3.

Videos show a man unleashing Caela and walking away with her from outside Gus' Fried Chicken, 401 N. State St., around 7:20 p.m.

Gus' is offering a $1,000 reward for information that leads to Caela.

According to information posted on Craigslist, the man who took Caela is a black male in his mid-20's with a light complexion and short dreadlocks. He stands about 6'-3" tall and weighs around 150 lbs., the post said.

the ground, and robbed him around 12:30 p.m., according to allegations in court records.

Zuffa, who's 29 and lives in suburban Alsip, allegedly ran from the scene with $300 of the elderly man's cash — but a witness was hot on his heels.

The witness chased Zuffa and reportedly saw him shed a green sweatshirt before he boarded a #20 Madison bus a few blocks from the robbery scene. Police responded to the Good Samaritan's 911 call and stopped the bus a few moments later on the 300 block of W. Madison.

Police said they removed Zuffa from the bus because he matched a description provided by the witness. Zuffa was carrying $280 in $20 bills, police said.

The victim, who lives in Lincoln Park, could not identify Zuffa, according to police. But the witness reportedly did that for him. Cops also recovered a green sweatshirt from the bus stop on Madison St.

Prosecutors charged Zuffa with felony robbery of a victim over age 60. Judge John Lyke set bail at $75,000 and ordered Zuffa to go onto electronic monitoring if he can post a 10% deposit bond.

Police gave the $280 cash that Zuffa was carrying to the alleged robbery victim.

Three North Side women robbed in two hours

Three women reported being robbed within about two hours Oct. 26 in Lincoln Park and River North. No one is in custody.

The first victim reported that two offenders approached her from behind on the 1700 block of N. Sheffield and threatened to shoot her if she didn't hand over her purse around 12:40 p.m. She complied. No description of the robbers is available.

Another woman told police that she was walking near LaSalle and Maple streets when two teens jumped her from behind and tried to steal her bags around 1:10 p.m. She managed to hang onto her property and the would-be robbers escaped empty-handed.

That woman said both teens are black males about 15-years-old. One stands around 5'-8" tall, weighs 140 lbs, has a close-cropped hairstyle, and wore a gray North Face jacket, dark jeans, and a dark backpack.

The other is about 5'-4" tall and 160-170 lbs. He wore a charcoal gray hoodie, a gray jacket, and a dark baseball cap. Both teens were last seen heading eastbound on Maple from LaSalle.

The third victim sought help from staff members at a retailer on the 900 block of W. North Ave. after an offender jumped her and took her belongings around 2:30 p.m. Again, no offender information is available.

Teenager pulls gun on Walgreens employee

A 15-year-old boy pulled a handgun and threatened staff members of a Walgreens who tried to stop him from shoplifting in Lincoln Park Saturday afternoon, according to Chicago police. Charges are pending.

Police said the teen and a 17-year-old male companion entered the store at 2500 N. Clark around 2:25 p.m. and then tried to walk out of the store with unspecified merchandise.

Two men who work for the store, ages 22 and 25, confronted the teens but backed away when the 15-year-old threatened them with a handgun.

The two juveniles fled to a north-bound #36 Broadway bus and left the area, according to witnesses.

Officers stopped the bus near Broadway and Wellington a few minutes later. Cops removed both teens from the bus and recovered a handgun from the 15-year-old, according to a CPD. Witnesses and the victims identified the boys for police, the spokesperson said.

The older teen was later released without being charged. The 15-year-old remains in custody as prosecutors consider charges.

Where are the North Side's adult-use cannabis social equity zones?

Most know that recreational cannabis will be legal for adult use in Illinois starting on Jan. 1, 2020. The State of Illinois is now making an effort to help those communities they feel have been historically impacted by the criminalization of cannabis, by designating certain areas as opportunity zones, and giving them favorable treatment to participate in the legal cannabis industry.

But where exactly in the community are those zones located that will gain the state's favor going forward?

On Chicago's North Side those areas include large swaths of the former Cabrini Green complex, Uptown, Edgewater and Rogers Park.

On the Near North Side that area includes property east of N. Larrabee between Chicago and North avenues, reaching as far east - in parts - as Wells St.

In Uptown that area is east of Clark St. from Irving Park to Foster Ave. (And the honored dead will be stunned to find out that for some reason it includes all of Graceland Cemetery.) From Lawrence south to Montrose, the zone runs all the way to Lincoln Park. From Lawrence north to Foster it's bounded by Broadway and Sheridan.

The zone in Edgewater runs from Peterson Ave. north to Pratt Blvd., and from Western Ave. east to N. Clark St. North of Devon Ave. that zone extends east to Greenview.

Rogers Park boast two zones, one that is bounded generally by Farwell and Touhy south and north, and from Sheridan Rd. west to the Red Line tracks. The second zone has two segments: one bounded by Touhy Ave. to the south, Howard St. to the north, Ridge Ave. on the west and Ashland to the east. The second is bounded by Howard St. and Juneway Terrace south and north, and from the Red Line tracks east to the lakefront.

In order to address the impact on those communities, the Act establishes a program for Social Equity Applicants who meet the following criteria:

- Has at least 51% ownership and control by one or more individuals who have lived in a Disproportionately Impacted Area in 5 of the past 10 years.
- Have been arrested for, convicted of, or adjudicated delinquent for cannabis-related offenses eligible for expungement, including cannabis possession up to 500 grams or intent to deliver up to 30 grams.

- Have a parent, child, or spouse that has been arrested for, convicted of, or adjudicated delinquent for cannabis-related offenses eligible for expungement, including possession up to 500 grams or intent to deliver up to 30 grams.

- Has more than 10 full-time employees, and more than half of those employees currently reside in a Disproportionately Impacted Area.

- Have been arrested for, convicted of, or adjudicated delinquent for cannabis-related offenses eligible for

- Have a parent, child, or spouse that has been arrested for, convicted of, or adjudicated delinquent for cannabis-related offenses eligible for expungement, including possession up to 500 grams or intent to deliver up to 30 grams.

Social equity applicants can receive technical assistance and support provided through the Illinois Dept. of Commerce and Economic Opportunity. Applicants will receive consideration on everything from creating a business plan to applying for a license at a range of locations throughout the state. The state says that information will be released soon on where to find technical assistance to prepare an application and start and operate a pot business.

Letter to the Editor

CBD, Vaping and Tobacco Legislation

The recent national attention to vaping related illness has made many of us in the State reflect on the laws we have here to protect youth and regulate vaping products as a whole.

In addition to the alarming stories of illnesses among teens and adults primarily linked to unregulated street market CBD and THC vapes, teens have also been reportedly purchasing CBD products because Illinois law does not address age requirements for CBD only products whereas our tobacco or cannabis laws specifically address minors' access to the products.

Additionally, the majority of the illnesses related to vaping reported have been associated with unregulated street market vapes without the controls over production or testing in the regulated marketplace. That is why HB 3906, led by my colleague Bob Morgan, will prohibit the sale or distribution of a CBD product unless the CBD product has labeling and has undergone lab testing that meet labeling and testing requirements set by the Dept. of Agriculture.

I've been hearing from a lot of constituents both for and against HB3883 to prohibit flavored tobacco. There are many who feel strongly about the importance of limiting youth access to smoking and specifically are concerned about flavors intended to appeal to youth while at the same time

I'm hearing from others about the relative benefits of flavored smoking cessation items.

There is a hearing on this on Monday of next week and I intend to ask some of the thoughtful questions I've heard from constituents and weigh the language of the bill carefully. I have always voted for measures aimed at reducing access to tobacco products by youth, as well as clean air initiatives, so I'm hopeful that this bill can meet the concerns of all and move swiftly through the process to passage of a policy that can responsibly address the concerns.

Man robbed in Boystown, but local muggings at 19-year low

since at least 2001.

Police in the Lakeview-based 19th District recirculated a robbery alert Oct. 23 following a hold-up on the Boystown bar strip earlier in the day.

Despite that victim's bad fortune, robberies in the Wrigleyville and Boystown neighborhoods are on pace to end 2019 at their lowest level in nearly 20 years.

Not bad for a part of town that, just five years ago recorded more robberies than any other beat in Chicago.

Around 4:30 a.m., a man told police that two offenders implied they had a handgun and robbed him on the 3500 block of N. Halsted St. The victim gave the men his valuables and the robbers ran from the area, he said. A clerk working at a nearby gas station called 911 for the victim.

Police at the scene said the robbers were two black men in their mid-20's. One of the men wore a red sweater, and the other wore a brown or orange sweater. They were last seen running southbound in the west alley of Halsted St.

Around 10:30 a.m. Oct. 23, the 19th District sent out a community alert issued on Sept. 12 in which detectives warned of a robbery pattern that involved a group of up to three men who were striking in Wrigleyville. However, the note did not explicitly say police believed Wednesday's hold-up is related to the earlier pattern.

The pattern identified last month included robberies on the 1100 block of W. Waveland, the 1100 block of W. Addison, and the 3500 block of N. Clark.

Still, robberies are affecting far fewer people in the Wrigleyville and Boystown area than any time

Police recorded 93 robberies in the neighborhoods through Sept. 30, 2019. That's one incident more than during the same period last year, which was the area's best performance in 18 years.

And robberies this month are pacing well behind nearly all previous Octobers on record.

All things considered, Wrigleyville and Boystown appear to be on track to record their lowest robbery count since before 2001, the first year for which records are publicly available.

"The 19th District has seen a reduction in robberies due to the preventative patrol and immediate response to emergency calls for service by our officers," said Cmdr. Chris Papaioannou, who has led the district since May.

"We have also utilized our Strategic Decision Support Center (SDSC) to quickly identify and track offenders in real-time, improving our initial response to emergencies," he said.

Officers assigned to the SDSC monitor the district's POD cameras and other intelligence streams, then communicate key informa-

OUT OF STEP from p. 2

All of these are signs to me of a disintegrating sense of American self-understanding. I regret the loss of a convenient local eatery. But I decry the loss of foundational American self-awareness and truths upon which the dream of a Republic was built. Out of step, apparently, with 21st century self-absorption. And the selfish cultural impact of 21st century goals. Maybe the lease is up for everyone.

STEVENS AWARD: Retired Judge Sheila Murphy recently received the Justice John Paul Stevens Award from the Chicago Bar Assoc. and the Chicago Bar Foundation. A noted jurist and champion of civil liberties, Judge Murphy has been a judicial role model to the bench because she is first a great defender of the freedoms of others. Her influence and friendship on me personally goes back 40 years. Bravo, Judge Murphy.

TIDBIT: Judge won't toss Chicago's lawsuit against Jussie Smollett.

THE VERSACE WAY: The ladies of The Service Club of Chicago were treated to an afternoon of all things Versace. Starting with a special luncheon at Le Colonial, complete with Versace place settings, a private fashion show, champagne toast and DJ. That's one fabulous way to shop for a cause!

BROWN PAPERED WINDOWS: Are you keeping track of whose drawers the Feds are raiding? The latest round appears to have hit a political consulting business head on. Can't be good for other clients. They are digging deep and coming up with tasty tidbits.

SUPER SLEUTH: Sean Eschaghy reports that the last townhouse on Maple St. between State and Dearborn has been pulled down. Sadly, it was once the home of Astor St. girl Hazel Martyn (1880-1935) during the 1880s. Her poppa, Edward Jenner Martyn, once ran the Armour Meat Packing Empire. She later married Sir John Lavery, the famed Irish portrait artist. As Lady Lavery, she is reported to have had a love affair with young General Michael Collins, head of the Irish Free State. Lavery designed the Irish paper currency featuring her as the mythic Kathleen ni Houlihan from 1925 to 1975. A tip of the hat for an American, a Chicago socialite who did great things for Ireland.

PRIMA BALLERINA: Alicia Ernestina de la Caridad del Cobre Martínez del Hoyo; Dec. 21, 1920–Oct. 17 2019, was a Cuban prima ballerina assoluta and choreographer whose company became the Ballet Nacional de Cuba in 1955. Best known for her portrayals of Giselle and the ballet version of Carme.

THE STARS CAME OUT: Haute Dog presented by Canine Companions for Independence is in its 8th year. Haute Dog LA went Hollywood at the Skirball Cultural Center in Los Angeles on Oct. 20, with many pals of Chicago's Bobbi Panter flying out to be with the heart and soul behind Haute Dog. Her love for the canine caregivers is magic. Her wonderful husband, Matt Arnoux by her side. True friends made all the difference: Sherrill Bodine, Irene Michaels, Rhonda Sanderson, April Schwartz, Sheree Schimmer Valukas, Sherry Lea Fox, Heather Jane Johnston, Mary Lasky, Sally Jo Morris, Irene Michaels, Sherry Abrahams and Tina Weller.

LOTTA MOOLA: At $110.5 Million, Jean Michel Basquiat painting becomes priciest work ever sold by a U.S. artist.

BREAK SOME EGGS: Paul Borg is with Marc Joseph Sievers at Marchesa Chicago. Congratulations, Marc, on the launch of your fabulous new cookbook. Best omelette ever!

FOUR WAYS ALWAYS: Sherry Lea Fox with Sally Jo Morris, Mary Lasky and April Schwartz at Tony Duquette Studios in LA.

GET OUT THE VOTE: Dan Balanoff spent the morning collecting signatures in the 27th Ward at Marshall Field Apartments with Dionne, one of his rockstar volunteers. Important that people in all parts of the district feel represented to achieve our goal of equal justice for all. www.judgeb2020.com.

TIDBIT: The world's largest Starbucks is opening in Chicago this Fall. As they serve the world's most popular diuretic, we assume they'll also have the world's largest Starbucks bathrooms too.

NEW BOOK: Entertaining Chicago by Neal Samors and co-author, Bob Dauber, the story of Chicago's fabled nightclubs and watering holes, out this week at Amazon, Barnes and Noble and local Chicago area bookstores.

SMART LADY: Congrats to Julie Weyforth Quattlebaum who received her Doctorate in Clinical Psychology from Adler Univ. with piles of Palm Beach folk here this past weekend.

SMART SERVICE: A big welcome to young John Hanley, a smart efficient pro, now a server at Gibson's Steakhouse.

SMART WIN: Lois Dal Santo Harring and husband, Michael, in the stands in Champaign-Urbana for U of I's stunning victory over #6 Wisconsin.

SMART READ: On National Book Day, for those who show a book instead of ticket, Dutch book lovers got free rail travel across their country's entire network for the weekend as part of the Netherlands' annual book week celebrations. Every year since 1932 the Netherlands has encouraged reading with "Boekenweek"—a celebration of literature marked with literary festivals and book signings across the country.

Many days of happy celebration among the guests with the lads who are deeply cherished by so many. Palm Beach was filled with Chicago folk like Leslie Hindman's Jim Sharp, Sarah Touhy, Mon Ami Gabi's Johnny Mahady and hubby, David Izaguirre, Matthew Mika, Patrick Falso, Dave Camp, Markus Richter, Brad McLaughlin, Bill Bacarella and legions more. Sharp's hubby, Michael Moore, did the honors. The wedding cake was supreme.

DOUBLY INDICTED: What well-known spouse was caught with her boy toy shopping for a yoga mat in Wicker Park, far from the neighborhood she shares with her beleaguered husband?

WOMEN CENTERED THEATER: Rivendell Theatre Ensemble, Chicago's only Equity theatre dedicated to producing new work with women at the core, presents the world premiere of Laura and the Sea by Kate Tarker, directed by Devon de Mayo. Laura and the Sea, an unhappy comedy, runs now through Dec. 8, at Rivendell Theatre Ensemble, 5779 N. Ridge Ave.

Chicago's talking statues a first in the U.S.

Picasso's sculpture in Daley Plaza.

'Hi, we used to be guards, but now we're celebrities'

BY PATRICK BUTLER

For the past few years, Beth Sair has been talking to 30 different statues in Chicago's parks.

And nobody thinks it's strange. Sair held a lecture on talking statues Oct. 17 at Sulzer Library, 4455 N. Lincoln, courtesy of the Ravenswood/Lake View Historical Assoc., telling the audience that anyone with a smartphone and a map of Chicago's parks can do the same thing.

The former teacher will happily introduce you to everyone from the lions in front of the Art Institute; Dorothy, Toto, the Tin Man, and the Cowardly Lion in Oz Park; the Millennium's Bean; a dinosaur guarding the Field Museum; former Gov. John Peter Altgeld in Lincoln Park; a bronze cow near the Chicago Cultural Center; and Nathan Hale who used to hang around the Tribune Tower alcove.

She'll even take you over to Humboldt Park to meet Leif Ericson, who bristles at the very name of Christopher Columbus.

After all, he'll have you know, it was fake news... it was the Vikings – not the Italians or the Spaniards – who discovered America some 500 years before Columbus accidentally tripped over the New World, thinking he had finally reached the Far East.

They weren't about to put up with all that Columbian Exposition nonsense.

After all, they didn't call him "Leif the Lucky" for nothing, howled the hot-headed Swedes and Norsemen who then made up the Humboldt Park neighborhood (named incidentally for Baron Von Humboldt, another explorer – this one a German – who's also honored with a statue in Lincoln Park).

Moving on, she'll introduce you to the roaring lions in front of the Art Institute on Michigan Ave.

"We used to be guards, but now we're celebrities," one of the lions will tell you. "Our purpose is to symbolize and celebrate this city. We've become the unofficial mascots. For all of Chicago's sports teams. In fact for all of Chicago."

Beth Sair

Not far away – on 11th Street – there's a memorial to a merchant prince who spent 20 years fighting in the courts to keep the Grant Park lakefront free and open, Sair said.

"Were it not for me, I'm not sure this lakefront would still be here," said Aaron Montgomery Ward, creator of America's first major mail order business (a business largely done in at this point by online merchandising.)

"I was determined not to allow that lakefront to disappear," Ward tells passersby.

Another driven Chicagoan – Jane Addams – holds court in the Chicago Women's Park and Gardens, 1801 S. Indiana Ave., through the medium of actress Amy Morton.

Almost larger than life, Ms. Morton tells the story of how the first woman ever awarded the Nobel Prize organized the first settlement house, fought for the first Child Labor laws in Chicago, worked for Chicago's first juvenile courts, and while she was at it, fought for women's rights to vote.

Hear the story of how the first woman ever awarded the Nobel Prize, Jane Addams, organized the first settlement house, fought for the first Child Labor laws in Chicago, worked for Chicago's first juvenile courts, and while she was at it, fought for women's rights to vote.

Back in the Loop, at Daley Plaza, lies one of Chicago's great mysteries – the 50'-tall Picasso statue.

Since 1967, Chicagoans and tourists alike have wondered whether it's modeled after the quirky Spanish artist's Afghan hound, a baboon, or the Egyptian deity, Anubis, or maybe one of Picasso's models.

Former North Side Ald. John Hoellen [47th] suggested replacing it with a statue of Chicago Cubs great Ernie Banks, while a newspaper columnist and one-time Booster reporter called it "an interesting design, I'm sure. But the fact is, it has a long stupid face and looks like a giant insect that is about to eat a smaller insect."

Several years later, another Booster editor/reporter told a pair of out-of-town girls the mysterious statue was our "Civic Deity" which feasted on visiting virgins once a year.

The ladies never batted an eyelash.

Picasso himself never told what the statue represented and for decades the debate has continued.

And just to get your head straight, she'll take you over to psychologist's Bob Newhart's bronze couch at the east end of Navy Pier.

The "Talking Statues" exhibit – first of its kind in the United States and slated to run through Aug., 2020 – took its cue from a similar display in London and is funded by the Richard Driehaus Foundation.

Man shot teen while AWOL on robbery charge

We've shared many outrageous stories about what some people have allegedly done while free on "affordable bail" in Chicago. Few reach the level achieved by Randy Wilson.

Prosecutors say Wilson, 18, shot a teenager while on electronic monitoring for robbery, then went AWOL from the court system, and subsequently threatened another man with a gun before cops caught up with him. When police arrested him for the robbery, he already had an electronic monitoring bracelet on his ankle for yet another case.

It all started on May 15, 2018, when cops arrested Wilson for criminal trespass to a vehicle. He was released to await trial. Not a big deal.

A month later, on June 11, Chicago police arrested him again. They say he was carrying a gun this time. Prosecutors charged him with possessing a firearm without a valid Firearm Owner's ID card. He was released to await trial again.

Three weeks later, a 50-year-old man told police that Wilson and three other men robbed him and two teenagers on the South Side. Police arrested Wilson. They said in his arrest report that Wilson was wearing an electronic monitoring bracelet when they found him. Prosecutors charged him with two counts of attempted robbery with a firearm.

Someone paid a $2,500 deposit bond to get him out of jail again — while being ordered to be on electronic monitoring, of course.

There was a little hiccup on March 11. That's when Wilson failed to show up for court and the judge issued an arrest warrant. Wilson remained

Randy Wilson

AWOL until April 25. Police caught up with him after a man reported that Wilson walked up to his car and pointed a handgun at him. The victim said he thought the incident was a matter of mistaken identity because Wilson quickly lowered the gun and walked away.

A judge finally decided to have Wilson held without bail, and the Cook County Sheriff's Office filed an escape charge against him.

On Aug. 19, Wilson pleaded guilty to attempted robbery and to unlawful use of a weapon in the two most recent cases. Judge Carol Howard sentenced him to 2-1/2 years for the robbery case and a consecutive one-year term for pointing the gun at the guy who was sitting in his car.

He's currently in prison with a parole date of May 20, 2020.

About that failure to appear in court we mentioned, on Sept. 17, a month after Wilson went to prison, prosecutors charged him with five counts of attempted murder and aggravated discharge of a firearm. They say he shot a 17-year-old boy on the 4100 block of S. Prairie around 1:40 a.m. March 9 — two days before he skipped bail.

He has pleaded not guilty to the attempted murder charges. The electronic monitoring escape charge is pending.

Man robbed at Maggie Daley Park

Detectives are investigating after a man reported being robbed in Maggie Daley Park on Oct. 23. The offender may have tried to rob three other people nearby just a few minutes earlier.

A police spokesperson said the victim was walking along a path in the park when a stranger approached him on a bicycle at 6:51 p.m. The bicyclist announced a robbery, pulled the victim's arm, and threatened to shoot him if he didn't hand over cash, the victim said. No weapon was seen.

The robber then rode away on his bike after getting about $20 from the victim.

A group of three people approached officers during the robbery investigation and said that a man on a bicycle tried to rob them moments earlier a little further south in the park.

Those victims, two men and woman, reportedly foiled the robbery by explaining that they are all broke college students.

The four people who spoke with police about the man said he is black, about 5'-10" tall, and rode a gray bike. He was wearing a gray hoodie with a blue bandana on his face.

Commercial burglaries targeting ATMs in Edgewater, West Ridge

Thieves stole money from at least two ATMs during burglaries of small businesses in the Edgewater and West Ridge neighborhoods since Oct. 17. Police issued a community alert to warn retailers about the pattern.

The burglars shattered the front doors to gain entrance to the stores and then stole property, the alert said. This newspaper learned independently that the offenders targeted ATMs at least twice.

According to information in the alert and details secured by this newspaper, the burglars first struck on Oct. 17. A witness reported seeing three men break into Youmax Food & Liquor, 2222 W. Devon, around 4 a.m. The offenders double-parked a black sedan in front of the store, ATM proceeds and other property, then sped away northbound on Bell Ave, the witness said.

Police described the offenders as black men between 5’-6” and 5’-11” tall who weigh between 160 and 180 lbs. They wore masks and hooded sweatshirts, according to CPD’s community alert.

The thieves then struck twice in the Edgewater neighborhood on Oct. 22: at Everything Dollar, 6028 N. Broadway around 3:30 a.m. and at Hollywood Spirits, 1301 W. Hollywood, around 4:15 a.m.

Police said the men used a red Ford Explorer during the Edgewater heists. The crew targeted an ATM at Hollywood Spirits, according to a police report.

Detectives are encouraging business owners to share information about the crime pattern with their colleagues and neighbors.

Anyone with tips about the burglaries can contact Area North detectives at 312-744-8263 regarding pattern #P19-3-281.

Man shot in Old Town

A 42-year-old man is in serious condition following a shooting Oct. 23 in Old Town. Three persons have been detained for questioning.

Police said the man was walking on the 1300 block of N. Sedgwick around 1:15 a.m. when someone fired shots from a red SUV, striking the victim in his left leg and right foot.

CPD surveillance cameras captured images of a red SUV as it fled the wrong way on Goethe St. after the shooting. Police suspect a stolen silver Mercedes SUV bearing a specialty Indiana license plate was also involved in the shooting. Both vehicles were used in a homicide Monday evening in the Austin neighborhood.

Patrol officers stopped the red SUV as it neared the Kennedy Expy. and Ogden Ave. shortly after the shooting. Investigators detained three occupants of the vehicle.

The victim’s condition has been stabilized at Northwestern Memorial Hospital.

Another armed robbery in Lincoln Park

A gunman robbed two more people in Lincoln Park Oct. 22, according to Chicago police.

INSIDE PUBLICATIONS

A 24-year-old man and a 26-year-old woman told police they were on the 2100 block of N. Lincoln Park West around 7:50 p.m. when a man approached them. They said the man pulled a handgun from his pocket, collected their valuables, then ran from the scene.

Cops searched the area, but they did not find the offender.

A police department spokesperson said the robber is a black male in his mid-20’s who stands 6’ tall and weighs about 160 lbs. The victims last saw him running northbound on Stockton Dr. while wearing a black Nike-brand hoodie, black pants, and a black skull cap.

Tuesday’s hold-up took place just a few blocks from where another robbery unfolded Oct. 20. In that incident, a 31-year-old man said two offenders robbed him at gunpoint as he stood on the sidewalk in the 500 block of W. Arlington around 11:55 p.m.

Sunday’s victim said the men who robbed him are both black and in their early 20’s. One is about 6’ tall and wore a black leather coat over a black hoodie. The other wore all black clothing.

BUDGET from p. 5

Budget will also institute a path to a $15 minimum wage in Chicago that we will arrive at by 2021. We will roll out our $15 minimum wage the right way – through ongoing work with the City Council, business, labor, and community groups who have been at the table to create prosperity that is not only strong but alleviates poverty for years to come.”

Low income tax-payers will also get relief in this budget through the new Utility Billing Relief program, “which is an unprecedented, equity-focused effort that will reduce the water utility rates for homeowners with incomes 150% below the federal poverty level,” said Lightfoot. She claimed this effort will tion to responding officers. The recently-installed tech center also generates intelligence reports for patrol officers like one that recently led to the arrest of an alleged burglar in Boystown.

Papaioannou also pointed to his district’s “collaboration with our various communities in building trust and effectively affecting arrests.”

Not too long ago, things were much different. The nightlife and entertainment-heavy neighbor-cut the size of water bills for every other Chicagoan by “creating monthly – rather than twice-a-year-bills – and end water billing after an account has been shutoff. This program will cut water utility taxes, end the threat of water shut-offs, stop any referral to collection agencies.” After one year of participation, Lightfoot says the City will then “waive all past due water bill debts.” The city estimates that about 20,000 households are eligible to participate in this targeted relief.

hoods recorded record high robbery counts in 2011, then again in 2012, and yet again in 2013.

The local aldermen, CAPS meeting leaders, and a string of police district leaders early in this decade refused to acknowledge that there was a problem. Thankfully, new attitudes emerged and more motivated leaders took the reigns. Out went the denials and misinformation, and in came facts, the re-alignment of police assets, and the aggressive pursuit of robbery offenders.

development, including flood risk management and storm damage reduction; Sarah White, the lakefront planning coordinator for the Chicago Park District [CPD]; Julia McCarthy, a Federal Emergency Management Agency representative, and Vasil Jursek, a representative from the Chicago Dept. of Transportation.

While much of the meeting focused on short-term flood mitigation and disaster preparedness as it relates to the North Side, most people are aware that these high water levels are affecting the entire lakefront, and indeed the entire Great Lakes region. So don't despair, most all of our Midwestern neighbors are also in this same rising boat.

The issue for Chicago and the North Side is that protecting the beaches, parks, bike paths and N. Lake Shore Dr. itself may require large-scale solutions. Rogers Park's Juneway Beach is just one beach that has just disappeared due to increasing lake levels, leaving crumbling retaining walls and a small, sandy patch where once there was a spacious beach.

And the timing seems right, as the city, state and Federal government are all right in the middle of reimagining Chicago's N. Lake Shore Dr. and the North Lakefront. But as usual, city and state officials who are already suffering under a severe financial crunch may have a hard time finding the additional funds to do such broad and expansive infrastructure repairs and improvements. For sure federal assistance will be needed to enact longer-term solutions like constructing eight additional revetments, which would cost an estimated $500 million or more.

As Winter's winds will surely whip up dangerous wave heights and create ice build ups along the lakefront, state and local officials will be searching madly for the 'extra' cash needed to combat Mother Nature's ill will. Meanwhile, the CPD will continue their ongoing assessment of Chicago's shoreline, an effort begun this Summer with drones zipping north and south photographing the entire Chicago lakefront to help evaluate their present state.

point in what is believed to be a 30-year cycle of rising and lowering lake levels.

Condo owners at the packed meeting held at Loyola Univ. in Rogers Park asked if the city would be partially responsible for increased erosion, but government officials said no - shoreline on private property is not under government jurisdiction.

One woman told the audience her building was hit on Monday with 30' sprays from the lakefront that felt like an earthquake. "We aren't even in November yet and things are already bad. What are we going to do?," she told Block Club Chicago.

Ald. Maria Hadden [49th] said there is no solid plan yet.

"I think (this winter is) what everyone is afraid of," Hadden said. "That's what I'm afraid of."

People at the forum said the city should plant more natural grasses to prevent erosion, or else there will be few beaches left.

While this could make for a better Lake Shore Dr. and lakefront in the future, it is perhaps too late in the season to plant any new organic matter and expect it to take root by winter.

But in a city, county and state already suffering under severe financial crisis, lakefront residents and tax payers should expect things to get very costly very quickly, hinted the officials at the forum.

large, double-wide property that is zoned RM-5. That means that a developer can come in, demolish the property, construct a larger multi-unit building up to 45' in height and make a nice profit. In Fact the property listing for the house boasts about its current RM-5 zoning designation and its ability to accommodate medium to high-density multi-family buildings as well as a variety of other residential housing types.

This is similar to situation in East Andersonville when houses in that neighborhood started to see buyers with plans to do the same. Those residents banded together to be downzoned to RT-3 to restrict a building height to 20', thus eliminating most threats of larger developments. However, Ald. Harry Osterman [48th] has no plans at this time to downzone the area where the Nordine house stands.

With the possibility of 6106 N. Kenmore being demolished, the Edgewater Historical Society (EHS) stepped in with hopes of a better alternative. Over the summer they enlisted the help of Landmark Illinois, an organization that works to save historical buildings that face the threat of being torn down.

"Everyone understood the vulnerability once the property was put up for sale, and the vulnerability being that it is a historic house that is not protected and also happens to be in an R-5 zone," said Landmarks Illinois Director of Advocacy Lisa Dichiera. "Rezoning and landmarking are really the only two tools we have in hand to outright prevent a demolition."

So Landmarks Illinois got to work and found a potential buyer back in July who was willing to Landmark the property in order to preserve it. The plan was to restore the house, build a new addition and divide it into a few units. He made a contractual offer just below market value with the plan of going through the landmark process in order to take advantage of the incentives the it offers. Negotiations were going well until the seller of the estate suddenly ended the process sometime in mid-September.

"The estate as the seller was not willing to embark on the landmarking process," Dichiera said. "I'm not sure why they pulled out but the reasoning may be that if they started along the landmarking path and then if that particular purchaser pulled out for whatever reason, it could undo it (the contractual offer). They instead took an offer that was not contingent on landmarking from a different developer. I do not know who that developer is, only that it is someone who has done past new construction in the neighborhood."

Dichiera said that developers asking for a land use contingency such as a zoning change in order to make a project work is normal. Though the overall landmarking process could take 6-9 months, this developer wanted the contingency based on starting the process which means obtaining a preliminary landmarking designation which usually occurs within three months.

In fact, Dichiera already had gotten insight from the Dept. of Planning and Development that the house meets the criteria to be landmarked. The most notable point about 6106 N. Kenmore is the nationally recognized Chicago architects who designed it in 1902, Pond and Pond. Considered among the earliest modernizers in architecture in the period after the Great Chicago Fire, the firm built a long list of significant civic and institutional buildings throughout the nation. The other criteria for landmarking status that the house meets is that it was owned by a significant person, Ken Nordine.

"Neighbors need to speak out if they want to see the house retained," Dichiera said when asked if there was anything that can be done still. "You will have the voice of the Edgewater Historical Society, but you also need area residents and neighbors to understand that losing this house will be a major loss. I mean it really is a beauty and you could never create this house again. Another hope is that the developer who is currently negotiating the purchase would be open to meeting all people concerned about the future of the property and be open to reuse of the house."

Even though landmarking looked promising and a buyer was found to work with the existing house, 6106 N. Kenmore could be another historic Edgewater mansion lost. This time however, it is a bit more painful for those who are trying to save these properties from demolition because it had everything in place to be successful.
