A scam so brazen it would make PT Barnum blush

Quashed proposed Superior St. tower project still hasn't returned $50M to Chinese investors

BY PETER VON BUOL

In this era of 24/7 scammer, hackers, swindlers, cheats, and expired automobile maintenance plans, how does anyone anymore think they can still get away with putting up a fake website to keep tens of million in ill-gotten gains?

Ninety Chinese investors are still waiting for the return of their nearly $50 million investment with a New York-based developer which had failed in its bid to get a zoning change which would have enabled it to build a 42-story hotel/condominium development that would have replaced three Orange-rated 19th century Victorian-era rowhouses at 42, 44 and 46 E. Superior St.

It has been four years since Ald. Brendan Reilly [42nd] informed Symmetry Property Development he would not approve the project but the company continues to delay returning the money to its in-

And now they've put up a fake website hoping to trick the victims into thinking they have a rich Nigerian uncle they never knew about who was royalty - who just died and is leaving them a fortune... or something like that.

According to a source at an attorney's office of one of Symmetry's former co-defendants, attorneys for Symmetry are now claiming a financial firm in Bahrain has the investors' money and only bureaucratic red tape has been preventing Symmetry from paying back its investors.

Felon brought a mini-AK47, wore body armor to peddle pot in a 'known narcotics area'

BY CWBCHICAGO

The allegations a prosecutor presented against Kelvin Smith during a bond hearing on Sunday, Nov. 7 were not unlike hundreds of other cases that have come through the same courtroom this

Police were patrolling an area known for narcotics activity, and they saw a hand-to-hand transaction that led them to conduct a street stop.

But Smith's hearing took a turn when the prosecutor revealed that the known narcotics trafficking area was not a troubled street corner in a violence-ripped neighborhood. It was on Lake St., less than a block from Michigan Ave. in the Loop. Two blocks from Trump Tower.

block of E. Lake St., between Wabash and Michigan, around 10 p.m. Sunday, prosecutors said.

He ran. They chased him. He ditched his jacket and turned down a dead end alley. They caught him.

Smith was wearing a bulletproof vest, prosecutors said. A loaded mini-AK47 pistol was inside the jacket he discarded and he was carrying $766 cash and about six ounces of pot, they said.

Prosecutors charged him with two Class X felonies, the most-serious category other than murder: armed habitual criminal and aggravated unlawful use of a weapon with body armor. They also charged him with manufacturedelivery of cannabis and being a felon in possession of a weapon.

Assistant Public Defender Carolyn Howard said Smith is unemployed and he donates food and clothing to the homeless.

Judge Charles Beach set his bail at $100,000 and ordered him to go onto electronic monitoring if he posts a 10% deposit bond. Beach held him separately in lieu of $35,000 on a pending matter in the suburbs.

Festival of lights means festival of music, fun and congestion

Chicago is home to the nation's largest evening holiday celebration - the Magnificent Mile Light Festival, which will be held Saturday, Nov. 20.

The event will jump start the holiday season with a full day of family friendly activities, live music concerts, and holiday shopping, and thanks to the closed streets, may provide the familiar good old-time feel of prepandemic congestion that comes from people heading downtown for mirth and merry-making.

This holiday tradition begins with a grand evening parade down Michigan Ave. led by Mickey Mouse and Minnie Mouse. The parade will step-off this year at 5:30 p.m. from Oak and Michigan and proceed south to Wacker Dr.,

North Township property tax webinar Nov. 30

Residents of North Township may join a virtual webinar 6 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 30, to learn about the property tax appeal process.

North Township runs from Armitage Ave. south to the Main Branch of the Chicago River, and from the North Branch east to the lakefront.

The seminar will be hosted by Cmsr. Mike Cabonargi, of the Cook County Board of Review, along with co-hosts, Cook County Cmsr. Bridget Degnen [12th], Ald. Brian Hopkins [2nd] and State Rep. Jawaharial Omar Williams [10th].

To register or for more information call 312-603-5562.

This year the Cook County Assessor Office is providing property tax exemptions for veterans. The Assessor's Office administers both, Veterans with Disabilities and Returning Veterans exemptions, which can reduce the property tax bills of veterans.

Veterans are required to apply annually. Veteran homeowners who believe they may have been eligible in prior tax years can apply for a Certificate of Error. For more information contact the As sessor's Office at 312-443-7550.

Betrayed by old friend, AIC members talk cash cutoff

By Thomas J. O'Gorman

I listened to the Met's performance of George Bizet's opera "Carmen" on WFMT, a favorite in everyone's repertoire, now that it's safe to listen again after their successful on-air fundraising marathon.

I've been down with my bad reaction to my COVID booster, mostly exhaustion. Still beats being dead, so I won't complain.

But no matter how I am feeling, physically, I am really excited at the reader response to my column on the shameful actions of the Art Institute of Chicago [AIC].

Or as it's being characterized, "Betrayal by an old friend."

This newspaper has been deluged with responses and suggested individual plans of action. Our readers are wise, pragmatic, well-educated and competent in the use of their own power.

All that spells disaster for the AIC, if you ask me.

Outrage and anger seems to sum it up. Everyone, it seems, is a friend of a docent, or a relative, neighbor, lunch pal or fellow alumni with someone who has been so shabbily treated by President James Rondeau.

Karen Zupko put it this way: "Voting with our checks, credit cards and estate plans is the only answer. Hope they find some deep-pocketed individuals to pay those six new docents."

That's what's in my heart, create a financial response to the dirty deeds of the AIC. Just lock your wallet away, that speaks louder than anything. Leverage for fairness. Think Rondeau is fluent in finance?

Eileen Howard-Weinberg says: "If the AIC wanted more diversity, they could have hired some people WITHOUT firing the docents! I personally know three people who had the AIC in their wills and are now changing them. Not to mention the members who will not renew. If you are a member and choose not to renew, by all means do not just ignore the renewal; send it back and tell them why!!"

Eileen really hits the nail on the head, in language that members of the Board of Trustees will clearly understand.

They can't squirm their way out of this.

Rondeau has placed the board members on the hot seat with their outrageous decision to embrace woke culture. Be frightened.

The policy of dismissal and the un-American philosophy of cancel culture has no place among rational, generous Chicagoans in a free America.

Many feel that their precious Art Institute has been hijacked by forces of crippling destruction. This is how the Howard Connery Murray Heritage family put it: "Thank you for keeping the spotlight trained on the recently deeply flawed docent policy of the Art Institute, hopefully it will bring about a policy reconsideration. Or sadly, perhaps long shown art will next be deemed no longer appropriate."

Anything and anybody can become a victim of woke cultural fanatics. Clearly the severity of Rondeau's actions signal dread and disaster of large proportions for many Chicagoans.

AIC members especially.

Based on the AIC's perverted policies, Bertha Palmer herself, the woman who brought Impressionist painting to Chicago and giver of so many French Impressionists to the AIC, would be an unwelcome over-privileged Chicagoan today. She certainly couldn't be a docent. And her generosity would certainly be turned away.

Has Rondeau notified Potter

The real shame is in the carnage of Art Institute of Chicago's institutional policies. This is an historic failure of leadership by President James Rondeau.

Palmer IV that he would be returning Bertha's bequest to the Artist Rosemary Fanti raises suspicions: "Regarding AIC's racist shenanigans-who fires dedicated volunteers based on skin color? What happened to content of character?"

Content of character. A haunting judgment from American history. Hope it wakes up the board members. Everyday museum business should be put on hold until there is some positive resolution. Cancel financial bequests. Cancel subscriptions. Maybe Ken Griffin could hold back some of his millions. We're all in this together. The AIC certainly doesn't need an avaricious administrator undoing more than a century of generous support.

I've read the Op-Ed piece by the retired AIC program co-ordinator Karen Jacobson in the suddenly pathetic Chicago Tribune. I thought her concerns about the AIC throwing the baby out with the bathwater were well placed.

Ms. Jacobson's concerns are rational and rather balanced. But she allows room for the AIC's mistake which appears to have set long-standing supporters at odds with it, leaving her concerns as relevant as a Dixie cup.

Many AIC institutional soldiers, and members of the Board of Trustees, have been dispensing their "plan" for public consump-

You know, the plan that is supposed to make sense to all those not invited to the meeting where decisions were made.

They still frame their disastrous decision in institution-speak in order to cease the critic's harping. They bury the public in a pile of data, statistics, jargon and buzz words. Sounds like Rondeau's followers were trained at the Woke HQ at the Univ. of Chicago.

Rondeau and his gang of highly motivated woke strategists must think Chicagoans are easily duped. But we can smell a hoodwink a mile away. We can measure the lay of the boondoggle from either side of the river. We've dealt with the real pros of Chicago skullduggery, like Hinky Dink Kenna, Bathhouse John Coughlin, Johnny Torrio, Big Jim Colosimo, Frank Nitti, Marshall Caifano, Joey "the Clown" Lombado, Ald. Tom Keane and the Gang at the Summerdale police station, in addition to the crooked judges of Operation Greylord.

Chicagoans have learned a lot from those who have hoodwinked us in the past. We recognize the lingo of their shenanigans. We recognize the odious scent of their subterfuge. And it's not Chanel No. 5.

The language of cancel culture is ripe. This is not the prophetic vocabulary of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. and the soulful leadership of the American Civil Rights movement. It's the bourgeois language of shame. It's the accusatory verbiage of academic left-wing nonsense. Hardly the formula you'd expect from a treasured public instruction. It's the fearful cowardly smoke screen of a troubled Board of Trustees, and the misguided Babel of maneuvering, self-serving art museum officials.

AIC administrators are trying to lead with ill-conceived and culturally shallow awareness of our city. Their actions have been so un-Chicago. We're all supposed to feel we are out of step with racial politics in America. Woke culture, of course, is currently tragically undoing decades of racial harmony and genuine understanding. The forced conditions of woke philosophy might look good to Rondeau and his raiders, but it lacks the goodwill and truth of real life.

Jim Kinney puts the topic in a nutshell: "It is appalling what the Art Institute and a few other institutions around town are up to! Rondeau needs to go."

The real shame is in the carnage of AIC's institutional policies. There is no room in Chicago for such false ideology. This is an historic failing of leadership.

All the gibberish of AIC administrators and staff does little to resolve something that was deeply misguided from the beginning. Shame on you.

Doggone it, there's a whole lotta love this week

Heart of the 'Hood by Felicia Dechter

On Sunday, I went with my four grand-children to the 400 Theater in Rogers Park, to see the endearing new movie, "Clifford the Big Red Dog." It's a sweet story about a 12-year-old girl and the feelings and love she quickly develops for one very large and cuddly, scarlet-colored dog that magically comes into her life one day.

It made me think about how attached we get to our pets and how they really can change us, and our lives. I saw it happen in my own home.

It was just two years ago that we had the saddest Christmas Eve, after we had to put our nearly seven-year-old bulldog, Bruce, to sleep due to a malignant brain tumor. He was failing quickly, and after first thinking we would wait until after Christmas, our plans changed as we watched him suffer. So Christmas Eve it was. The task was heart-wrenching.

My daughter and my husband were both so devastated that I started getting worried, wondering if they'd ever recover from the grief. Especially my daughter, as Bruce was really hers and they were bosom buddies. The sadness was overwhelming.

My daughter was inconsolable. My husband was crying like a baby. We all were.

I've had dogs almost all of my life, and I had made up my mind that I really did not want another after that. Losing your pet is just too difficult.

Then one day mid-January, my daughter messaged me a photo of the cutest puppy ever... a tiny little nine-week-old bulldog. Even though he was still pretty young, his owner was dispersing the litter. The last thing I wanted was another dog, but my daughter was still so inconsolable about Bruce that she and I drove out to Homewood to check the pup and his siblings out.

One look at that little runt and it was over, I knew he was coming home with us. He looked like Bruce's twin, but had a heart-shaped brown spot on his head.

We let the grandkids pick his name, "Mac," short for Macaroni. Mac and his crazy antics quickly brought laughter back into the house.

Today, as you read this, Mac will be celebrating his second birthday. As I write this, he is curled up on the couch beside me, snoring away with his stocky little body pressed against mine, keeping us both nice and warm.

The joy he brought to our household in such a short time has been a true blessing. And although we all adore him, believe it or not I think that the person who didn't want another dog -- me -- loves him best. And vice-versa.

"Clifford the Big Red Dog," is a reminder to us all how a pet can change one's life. It shows us how important our four-legged friends become to us.

I just hope that my Mac will be around for many more happy birthdays. It's truly amazing to me how one little dog -- or big red dog in Clifford's case -- can capture your heart. If you get a chance, take the kids and go see the movie for some light and feel- good holiday cheer.

Deep and profound... is actor Ronnie Marmo's portrayal of comedian Lenny Bruce in "I'm Not A Comedian... I'm Lenny Bruce," playing at the small, intimate Venus Cabaret Theater, 3745 N. Southport Ave.

The show is directed by our own home-boy, multi award-winning actor/director Joe Mantegna, and produced in partnership with Lenny Bruce's daughter, Kitty Bruce. But it was written by and stars Marmo, who carried the one-man show with an intensity that was impressive and commanding.

This is not a full of laughs play. It is not funny, although it does have some laughable moments. It is not Marmo standing on stage performing stand-up comedy.

This is the story of Lenny Bruce's rise, and fall, and the ridiculous censorship that he was subject to and tossed in jail for.

Ronnie Marmo as Lenny Bruce.

I feel sorry for today's comedians as they're also censored, cancelled, threatened and shunned - not by the law, but by the hopelessly intolerant among us. They can no longer poke fun at anyone, unless they want to be picketed and disgraced on social media. It's tough I would imagine to be a comedian trying to make it these days.

Marmo, who has starred in more than 60 feature films and television shows, said he believes Bruce's is the voice this country needs right now. Here we are, he said, more than a half-century later, and all of the issues Lenny Bruce was fighting for are still relevant such as free speech, racism, immigration, gender equality, police brutality, weed legalization, sexual identity and more.

As a journalist who is fiercely protective of our First Amendment right, I admire Bruce's unwavering commitment to free speech. But for him, it led to numerous obscenity charges and arrests. No stranger to Chicago, he was arrested for obscenity for his performance in Dec. 1962 at The Gate of Horn, a 100-seat music club located in the basement of the Rice Hotel at 755 N. Dearborn St.

Yet Bruce fought for freedom of speech all the way to the Supreme Court. He was out on appeal when he was found dead of an accidental overdose in 1966 after a struggle with severe drug addiction.

What's inspiring is that a portion of the show's proceeds go to the Lenny Bruce Memorial Foundation, a nonprofit that provides funds for those without insurance or lacking the ability to get treatment for drug and alcohol addiction on their own. I find that to be such an important cause as I've witnessed firsthand lives lost, destroyed and/or wasted from drug and alcohol addiction.

After the performance, the hubby and I went next door to the Argentinean steakhouse Tango Sur for dinner. We both ordered the El Filet, a filet served with spinach mashed potatoes and a side sauce made of garlic and other delicious tastes. If you haven't been to Tango Sur, I highly recommend it. But bring the credit card as it's not cheap!

Bruce's daughter, Kitty, called the Lenny Bruce show, "The best portrayal of my father I have ever seen. Brilliant." Warning though: If four-letter words and a couple of real booty shots turn you off, stay away. But if excellent acting, a happy-to-have-you-back community theater, and a fabulous restaurant next door sound good, check it out

And the award goes to... Illinois Dept. of Public Health director Dr. Ngozi Ezike, MD, who was honored recently by the National Kidney Foundation of Illinois [NKFI] at its 36th annual Gift of Life Gala at the Hyatt Regency Chicago. The evening raised $200,000 to benefit NKFI's mission of improving the health and well-being of those at risk or affected by kidney disease.

NKFI presented Dr. Ezike with the Gift of Life Award "in recognition of her resilient and compassionate leadership through the pandemic," in addition to her support of programs to engage residents in the awareness, education, prevention and early detection of kidney disease.

We all watched Dr. Ezike tell it like it was every afternoon during the darkest days of the pandemic and I really appreciated her updates. Sending her big thanks, and congrats!

No sugar coating... the fact that there are a lot of cold, needy folks out there and as we sit warm, comfy, and with full bellies in our homes, it's important to remember that not everyone is quite so lucky.

Lakeside Center is a perfect site for "pop-up" casino

The Home Front

by Don DeBat

Suddenly Chicago is on its way to becoming the Las Vegas of the Midwest.

Mayor Lori Lightfoot is spinning her roulette wheel and trying to choose between five proposals for the launch of a giant Chicago gambling casino by the first quarter of 2022. The proposals came after lawmakers in Springfield changed the casino tax structure and passed a pile of chips to the gaming industry.

Three of the five proposals involve massive new pie-in-the-sky construction plans on vacant land or railroad air rights that could take years to develop and build.

With the city drowning in $47 billion (and growing) in pension fund debt, City Hall is desperate for gambling tax cash, the only logical casino choice is Lakeside Center—the original McCormick Place East-for an instant "popup" downtown casino that could raise millions in gaming tax dollars for the city as early as 2022. (The winner of the casino stakes can operate a temporary casino for up to 24 months - subject to a 12-month extension - and, thereafter, the permanent casino.) Lakeside Center, which looks a lot like an aircraft carrier, is anchored on the shore overlooking Lake Michigan.

Construction experts say Lakeside Center originally was designed and wired decades ago for a future casino, and there is plenty of nearby parking. Before the pandemic the building was only used about 10 to 20 times a year for business gatherings.

Financial experts have estimated the casino would generate up to $6.6 billion in annual revenue, with direct tax revenue of $3 billion to $4 billion to the city and state. All this new revenue could help lead Illinois and Chicago back to fiscal stability... if that cash was put to good use and not just spent wildly.

In 2020, some $15-million in renovation upgrades were pumped into Lakeside Center to convert it to an emergency hospital for up to 2,500 COVID-19 patients. The patients never came but the upgrades remained.

Union tradesmen and women worked around the clock to install 100 new water lines, wiring 1,000 electrical outlets, and more than 100 data lines to supply an electronic records system to accept and monitor patients. FEMA paid for the work, and the Army Corps of Engineers supervised construction, so these funds really were a gift from Uncle Sam.

High-tech construction perks, along with other cosmetic upgrades could create hundreds of jobs, and the work could create an instant gambling casino.

An estimated 25% of Chicago's population are casino gamers or video poker players, and experts say they are eager to line up for the action and the fun of downtown gambling.

Move in 1,000 slots and video poker machines, add 200 manned gaming tables, a sports book, toss in a few restaurants and bars and Mayor Lightfoot's cash register could start going "ka-ching" in early 2022, since the house usually wins.

Lakeside Center [above] would be renamed Rivers Chicago at McCormick. Move in 1,000 slots and video poker machines, add 200 manned gaming tables, a sports book, toss in a few restaurants and bars and Mayor Lightfoot's cash register could start going "ka-ching" in early 2022 with a new land-based casino.

Another important perk is the proposal to redevelop Lakeside Center comes from Chicagobased Rush Street Gaming, headed by Chicago real estate developer Neil Bluhm, which owns four casinos, including Rivers Casino Des Plaines, the top grossing venue in Illinois.

Lakeside Center would be renamed Rivers Chicago at Mc-Cormick. According to Scott Goodman, founding principal of Chicago-based Farpoint Development, Rush Street Gaming's partner, Lakeside Center is "a perfect adjunct to what's already there, infrastructure, parking and access."

The seldom-used, 50-year-old Lakeside Center has 583,000 square feet of exhibit space. It's near 2,900 hotel rooms, designed for high-traffic events, and could help draw thousands of eager conventioneer gamblers.

But the new land-based casino is not without risk. According to a 2019 Associated Press report, casino industry's leaders see a shift to computer or smartphone sports bets that could amount to 90% of all sports betting action happening within the next 10 years. Ever since the 2018 Supreme Court ruling allowing sports betting, about 80% of that action is now made online.

The $1-billion plan for Rivers Chicago Casino at McCormick would create a casino floor of up to 300,000 square feet, along with food and beverage options and entertainment spaces, Good-

Farpoint likely would seek a 99-year lease with the Metropolitan Pier and Exposition Authority, managers of McCormick

Why Chicago's high-end condo market is booming

Downtown condos outpace office, retail and middle-income residential in record year

BY CONNIE KIM therealdeal.com

Chicago's luxury condo market is approaching its all-time annual sales record, outpacing office, retail and middle-income residential as buyers opt for downtown views while vaccines offer hope that the city will open up again.

A total of 27 condo and townhome sales above $4 million each had closed by mid-October, compared with the record 36 units sold in 2018, according to Integra Realty Resources, an appraisal and consulting firm. That's good news for the city's budget, and its efforts to spur development across Chicago and provide more affordable housing, said Ald. Walter Burnett [27th], whose ward that includes the rapidly developing Fulton Market where developers are planning residential buildings.

"The more high-end sales that we have, the more taxes come in, the better it is for everyone," Burnett said. "What's even better for folks is if we leverage development to build up those communities where we don't have development, where we normally have vacant lots and we're not getting any tax dollars from."

The booming luxury sales are being driven by buyers with a range of motivations: older folks who want to be closer to their children in the city; workers seeking a shorter commute when they eventually return to their offices; wealthy buyers in search of opulence. Constrained supply, meanwhile, is keeping prices high.

Giancarlo Chavez, an agent for Keller Williams ONE Chicago, said his client signed a contract for a 75th-floor, 5,700-square-foot penthouse at the Residences at St. Regis in 2016 — even though it came with a hefty price tag of $8.7 million and was at least four years from completion.

"The views, to be able to have a 360-degree panoramic view of the city, a private elevator," said Chavez of the property, built by Magellan Development Group. "He [the buyer] has ties to New York, so the affordability compared to New York City drew his attention."

A 14,260-square-foot penthouse on the 89th floor of the Trump International Hotel & Tower is the most expensive listing in Chicago this year, at an asking price of $30 million. The second priciest listing is a 71st-floor penthouse in the St. Regis, now under contract after asking $18.5 million. All five of the priciest listings in the city are asking $15 million and Older people who have the means to purchase a second home come to Chicago because their children are there, said Linda Shaughnessy, a broker in Chicago with Sotheby's International Realty. "It's a Chicago-specific cul-

Only about 13% of the 30,000 rental apartment units built over the past 10 years in downtown Chicago were condo units, according to Integra. "With the limited amount of new condo inventory being developed in the downtown market, the new condo buildings are targeting a narrow segment of the overall housing market," said Gail Lissner, managing director at Integra's Chicago office. She expects 95% of the units that are in development or in marketing will be condos ranging from $1.4 million to $2 million.

For buyers, the downtown area offers restaurants, museums, scenic views and convenient transportation, all at a relatively affordable cost, at least compared with similar-sized cities on the east or west coasts.

The challenge for Chicago, a city with high crime rates and persistent income inequality, will be translating the purchases of the wealthy few into benefits for the less-well-off majority. Politicians say that starts with encouraging

Melvin Potash knew families and businesses are stronger when everyone pulls together.

"He put it in terms we could understand," his son Art Potash told the Chicago Sun-Times. The longtime Lincolnwood resident worked for the family business from 1950

Until four years ago, Melvin was still going to work at the Clark St. store, where he'd stock the shelves and smile and wave at his regulars, many who became friends, his son said. When customers had children, Melvin's wife Phyllis made personalized baby books for them, with her delicate calligraphy and newspaper headlines from the day the infants were born. Melvin and Phyllis were married for 67 years.

Local Cannabis scene gets their first official convention

Event focused exclusively on Illinois

With the approval of the Illinois Cannabis Regulation and Tax Act in 2019, Illinois became the first state in the U.S. to legalize recreational marijuana sales through legislation rather than voter initiatives.

That cleared the way for Chicago to host the first ever Illinois Cannabis Convention, titled NECANN.

The convention will be held Dec. 4-5 at the Chicago Hilton, 720 S. Michigan Ave.

Illinois is estimated to produce between $2 and $4 billion in annual income from recreational sales if it reaches full maturity. Illinois will also expunge an estimated 700,000 marijuana-related police records and court convictions in a staged manner expected to be finished by 2025, making it the first state in the country to do so.

NECANN has been a leader of the cannabis industry since 2014. In the last several years growing from the brainchild of Co-founder and President Marc Shepard and fellow Co-Founder Jeff Lawrence to the event producing programmer that it is today. Their goal was to create a hub of resources and communication for the growing cannabis industry. Businesses, entrepreneurs, advocates, patients, investors, educators, and consumers alike have been utilizing the service that NECANN has provided to local communities.

NECANN events cover every facet of the industry, including infused products, inventory tracking, legal resources, licensing services, medical resources, smoking, vaping, and dabbing accessories, POS and management software, private equity and investment resources, training and education, security services and equipment, testing and lab services, tinctures, salves, and topicals, accounting, insurance, marketing, banking and payment processing, botanicals, patient advocacy, storage, packaging,

Need a speaker?

If your club or organizations is looking for a speaker, wants to learn more about cannabis, or want to improve your marketing skills, NECANN exhibitors may be a good option. dosing equipment, patient education, medical experts, displays, fixtures, grow lights, hemp industry hydroponics and cultivation

Since legalization, Illinois has seen an average monthly tax collection revenue of $40 million from recreational cannabis Chicago itself hosts 44 cannabis dispensaries as of 2021. NECANN is designed to bring some of the industry leaders together in one place in Chicago. Events will take place on Saturday, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Two dozen unions ask judge to block mayor's city worker COVID vax mandate

BY JONATHAN BILYK Cook County Record

After a judge granted the request of Chicago's Police union and slapped a hold on Mayor Lori Lightfoot's COVID vaccine mandate, unions representing thousands of other Chicago city workers have asked a Cook County judge to similarly order the mayor to bargain with them before forcing their unvaccinated workers to take the jab or risk losing their jobs.

On Nov. 5, attorney George A. Luscombe III, with the firm of Dowd Bloch Bennett Cervone Auerbach & Yokich, filed suit in Cook County Circuit Court on behalf of about two dozen labor union locals.

The lawsuit seeks court orders blocking City Hall from enforcing Lightfoot's Dec. 31 COVID vaccine deadline for city workers, until the city and the unions complete arbitration over the terms of any vaccine

They stressed they are not attempting to block Lightfoot's orders requiring city workers to be tested twice weekly for COVID. The unions noted the membership of the bargaining units are at least 72% vaccinated against COVID, with some units exceeding 90% vaccinated.

However, they said, hundreds of city workers whom the unions represent remain unvaccinated against COVID, at this

"For objecting bargaining unit members, no arbitration award after the fact can undo the harm caused as a result of an individual being forced to receive a vaccination to which they have deeply held concerns or objections," the unions wrote in their complaint.

"... If the requested injunction is not granted, the Plaintiff Unions' - and their members' – fundamental rights under their labor agreements and labor law will be irreparably trammeled."

The lawsuit seeks a similar order to that granted on Nov. 1 to the Fraternal Order of Police Lodge No. 7, which represents Chicago's Police officers.

The police union was the first to challenge Lightfoot's vaccine mandate order in

Under the mayor's orders, all city employees, including those represented by unions, were required to report their vaccination status to City Hall by mid-October, and then were required to each receive a

'I'm a student journalist'

Each morning, the editors and reporters of Lane Tech's student paper come to Room 137 to learn about journalism and publishing.

A new privacy law is interfering with Chicago's high school newspapers. This school year, it's been difficult to publish anything new on the site they've come to rely on.

From pitching news stories in class to taking action shots at sports games, my school's journalism program is nothing short of fun, despite the hard work it demands.

As part of a vast and diverse student community at Lane Tech, there are myriad potential stories for our student news organization to cover. Aimlessly scrolling through the Lane Tech Champions website is one of my favorite pastimes, as the site — and its archive dating back 12 years — showcases Lane's rich history. The news website is the heart of our journalism program.

Unfortunately, the site is in danger.

What has blindsided Lane Tech's journalism program — and other courses, such as computer science and art — is Chicago Public Schools' interpretation of the Student Online Personal Protection Act [SOPPA]. The state law, designed to give parents more control over their children's data, also prevents educational technology companies from collecting protected student information in some cases. In effect, certain vendors that schools — and student journalists - rely on have not even been approved or considered for approval.

Each morning, the editors and reporters of Lane Tech's student paper come to Room 137 to learn and lead. Gathered around a table, student editors work on stories and layout, amid chatter and the endless staccato of typing. But recently, the tension surrounding CPS' interpretation of SOPPA has felt suffocating.

Student Newspapers Online [SNO], is an essential program that many student newsrooms use because it's built especially for student journalists. The largest provider of college and K-12 student news sites in the country, it allows the Lane Tech Champion and many other school news organizations to easily build their websites.

Unlike your typical website builder, it is specifically made for school newspapers and provides journalism education. Breaking news can be placed on a scrolling carousel, and the site can even be equipped with a handy staff page loaded with photos, positions, and descriptions. Above all, the site is easy to navigate. The Daily Northwestern, Northwestern University's daily student newspaper, is one example of an SNO-built site. Suburban Chicago schools use it, too. But CPS schools such as Lane Tech, Jones, and Northside, no longer can.

That's because CPS is blocking any further payments to SNO, which makes publishing tricky. We've been advised not to post to the site so as to avoid difficulties with SOPPA and CPS, and that has weighed heavily on us.

Formerly the Lane Tech Champion's photo and graphics editor, I stepped up into the sports editor position earlier this month. The position has been rewarding, allowing me to report from the sidelines and watch the best of Lane's athletic teams. My photography and writing skills have improved, which I can attribute to pumping out stories to keep up with demanding sports schedules. What I love most about publishing a new sports story is scrolling through the photo gallery a fellow editor and I put together, and beaming over our action shots and pictures of smiley players after a win.

But this school year, it's been difficult to publish anything new and share my reporting on our SNO-built site; it's only in the monthly print edition and a temporary WordPress site that doesn't look or feel the same. Fortunately, I do have alternate places to post my work, such as the Lane volleyball team's website, where one of the coaches has graciously offered to post my stories.

Publishing print editions of the Champion has also seen some drastic changes as a result of SOPPA. Adobe InDesign, an industry-leading student media software, is what we normally use for laying out pages. But with SOPPA's hold on our programs, including those by Adobe, we had to find another program.

When it became apparent that we'd have to stick to an alternative layout program called Scribus, my fellow editors and I had to learn the program and finish 12 pages in just two days. Having to adapt to Scribus was not easy. We couldn't download it on our Chromebooks the school's 1:1 student-device model provided us — so we had to download it to our personal laptops and bring them to school or, alternatively, to the classroom's iMacs.

The editors often look forward to after-school sessions where we come together to lay out the paper before we send pages off to our printing company. But learning the new program made it a tiring process. We lost sleep. Although we were able to push through this critical stage of publishing, these changes and challenges shouldn't be something CPS student journalists must endure, especially at the expense of our mental and physical health.

With basketball season just around the corner, the regular decision deadline for college applications looming, and sports winter conditioning likely to send some of us home exhausted every night, the battle around SOPPA only adds to our stress and workload.

As this situation unfolds, it has become clear to me how bureaucratic decisions from CPS' central office can unintentionally harm students. Mounting issues with SNO and InDesign have pushed me to work harder and adapt. But they've also helped me understand just how vital these programs are to our role in facilitating student expression. For now, though, these tools are off-limits to us.

Megan Camacho is the sports editor of the Lane Tech Champion and a senior at the school. Now in her second year of writing for the Champion, she is passionate about journalism and Lane's athletic community.

Uptown Theatre restoration stalled again

BY PRESERVATION CHICAGO

Maybe the show really musn't go on after all?

One of two main parties working to repair and reopen the venerable old Uptown Theatre has backed out of the project. But according to the venues owner, and a report from Preservation Chicago, plans to renovate the landmark theater are still in the works.

"Farpoint Development is no longer involved in the efforts to revitalize the Uptown Theatre," Jerry Mickelson, owner of the theater and founder of JAM Productions, and Ald. James Cappleman [46th] confirmed Nov. 8.

The legendary movie palace and concert hall has been shuttered since 1981.

Mickelson and Farpoint Development joined city leaders in 2018 to announce a $75 million plan to restore and reopen the Uptown Theatre, 4816 N. Broadway. The project was meant to revive a landmark building that would anchor a revamped Uptown entertainment district, then-Mayor Rahm Emanuel said at the time.

The project was boosted by $40 million in public funding, including property taxes collected through an Uptown Tax Increment Financing District and the city's adopt-a-landmark fund.

But the project leaders were on their own to secure the remaining $35 million, which proved to be a challenge. By Nov. 2019, Mickelson and Farpoint still needed to raise $26 million, the Chicago Tribune reported at the time.

A 31,000-square-foot parking lot located to the west of the famed theater now hosts a new high density 54-unit Transit Oriented Development. That parking lot was supposed to be part of the redevelopment deal.

The former city-owned parking lot at 1030 W. Lawrence Ave. was sold to the theater for $1 "to support theater operations following the completion of the planned reconstruction of the adjacent CTA Red Line station," the city said at the time.

Then last year, Chicago-based JAB Realty bought the parking lot for $3.45 million, and moved forward on the development despite the cloudy future of the theater rebirth.

Construction was originally slated to begin on the Uptown Theater in summer 2019, but that date came and went with no action taking place.

Then the COVID-19 pandemic swept in with its shutdown of the entertainment industry, and a year passed by with no progress.

Mickelson and Farpoint Development's plans envisioned restoring the venue to its Jazz Age grandeur. On top of restoring the building's facade and historic features, the project would have increased capacity from 4,300 to 5,800, installed removable seats on the first floor and added a new marguee.

Now, Farpoint Development's decision to back out of the project throws up yet another major obstacle for the project. Despite the setbacks, Mickelson said his efforts to reopen the Uptown are moving forward.

Ald. Cappleman said the project still retains its public funding and is likely to get back on track in a post-COVID-19 world, whenever that may be.

Preservation Chicago - and many of the local residents, community organizations and area businesses have been longtime advocates for the restoration and reuse of the theatre.

New legislation would prohibit out-of-state money in judicial campaigns

BY ANDREW HENSEL

A new measure would prohibit candidates in judicial elections from accepting out-of-state donations and anonymous donations during campaigns for judicial positions, including those in the Cook County Court system.

Senate Bill 536 has passed both houses of the Illinois General Assembly. If signed by Gov. J.B. Pritzker, it would prohibit any candidate for a Supreme Court, Appellate Court, or Circuit Court position from accepting any campaign donations from out-of-state donors or accepting any untraceable campaign funds.

State Rep. Katie Stuart [112th], who is the only House sponsor of the legislation, said that this change is something all Illinoisans can support.

"I think trying to avoid dark money from elections is something I think we can all get behind," Stuart said. "So the change would stop out of state and untraceable money from finding its way into our judicial races."

Republican state Rep. Ryan Spain [73rd], has spoken out against this bill. He called the measure unconstitutional.

"The ability to make political donations is an example of free speech," Spain said. "I have concerns that this provision in this legislation is not constitutional."

Spain also questioned the timing of a bill.

"For me, I am not comfortable supporting this bill here on the last day of veto session," Spain said. "This has very significant changes that affect how we will handle our elections for judges in the state of Illinois."

If Pritzker signs the measure, the legislation would go into effect immediately.

Man arrested in Old Town for South Side murder

Alton Spann, 19, of the 6500 block of S. Maryland Ave., has been charged with one felony count of murder after he was arrested 6:20 p.m. Nov. 10, in the 1400 block of N. Sedgwick St. in Old Town.

Spann was identified as the offender who, on Nov. 9, shot a 24year-old Shaoxiong "Dennis" Zheng, a recent Univ. of Chicago graduate on a Hyde Park sidewalk during an armed robbery attempt.

Witnesses peering out of windows near the scene saw Zheng fall to the ground as Spann stood over him, pointing a gun.

Zheng died of a gunshot wound to the arm, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office, which said Zheng was pronounced dead less than an hour after the shooting, at 2:13 p.m. at the University of Chicago Medical Center. His death was ruled a homicide.

When Spann was taken into custody, he was in possession of two firearms and was charged accord-

Turkish national charged with directing cyber attack

An alleged cyber attacker from Turkey has been indicted in federal court in Chicago for allegedly orchestrating a distributed denial-ofservice (DDoS) attack on a Chicagobased multinational hotel company.

In Aug. 2017, Izzet Mert Ozek used the WireX botnet, which consisted of compromised Google Android devices, to direct large amounts of network traffic to the hospitality company's website, preventing legitimate users from completing hotel bookings, according to an indictment returned in U.S. District Court in Chicago Sept. 29. His equipment comprised thousands of trapped Android devices.

The hospitality company, which managed luxury hotels and resorts, was headquartered in downtown Chicago and the servers for its website were located in northern Illinois.

The WireX botnet was discovered in mid-July 2017 and was created with the help of hundreds of trojanized applications distributed through the Google Play Store and third-party application stores.

The indictment charges Ozek, 32, with one count of intentionally causing damage to a protected computer. Ozek is believed to be residing in Turkey, and a warrant for his arrest will be issued.

Woman sexually assaulted in Loop

On Tuesday, Nov. 2, at approximately 11:20 p.m., a 37-year-old woman was awaiting an Uber in the lobby of a building in the 100 block of S. Wacker, when an offender entered the lobby, walked around the victim, wrapped his arms around her in a "bear hug" and lifted her off the ground, while simultaneously rubbing her vaginal area with his hands over her clothing.

The offender fled when another citizen entered the lobby. He is described as a male black in his midlate 20's, 6'-1" to 6'-3" tall, 160-180 lbs, with short dreadlock hair style.

Shots fired near Lake Shore Drive S-curve

Police confirmed that shots were fired near the S-curve on Lake Shore Drive in Streeterville Nov. 11, and they allegedly found a man with a gun in a vehicle nearby. But he is not accused of firing any rounds. No injuries were reported.

Several officers stationed along the Magnificent Mile and in Streeterville heard about five shots fired near the lakefront around 2:07 a.m., according to CPD radio transmissions. One officer said he saw a gray or silver pickup truck speeding from the area and suggested it may have been involved in the aunfire.

Cops found a shell casing in the street near Lake Shore Drive and Walton St., and some witnesses reported that two cars were involved.

Meanwhile, officers pulled over a vehicle near Lake Shore Dr. and Chicago Ave. that allegedly matched the description of one involved in the in-

Assistant State's Attorney Brian Burkhardt said officers asked its driver Avion Floyd, 36, to step out of the car. When he did, cops saw a handgun sticking out of the center console, Burkhardt said.

Police secured the gun, which had a loaded extended magazine, and took Floyd into custody, according to Burkhardt. Floyd's front seat passenger was not charged.

Judge Barbara Dawkins set bail at $2,000 on one count of aggravated unlawful use of a weapon. Floyd must post 10% of that amount to get out of jail. He only has one misdemeanor conviction in his past, Burkhardt said.

Federal jury nails gang

On Nov. 8 a federal jury has convicted a leader of the Four Corner Hustlers street gang of participating in a criminal organization that committed murders and other acts of violence while brutally protecting a drug-dealing operation in Chicago.

Lamar Spann, 43, of Chicago, was found guilty on all four counts against him, including racketeering conspiracy, two counts of murder in aid of racketeering, and extortion. The jury found that Spann committed four murders in a cold, calculated, and premeditated manner as part of the racketeering conspiracy, including the murders of Maximillion McDaniel on July 25, 2000, George King on April 8, 2003, Willie Woods on April 17, 2003, and Rudy Rangel on June 4, 2003.

The conviction is punishable by a mandatory minimum sentence of life in prison. U.S. District Judge Thomas M. Durkin set sentencing for March 9, Spann was indicted in 2017 along with eight other members of the gang and two additional defendants. The other defendants pleaded guilty, and several have been sentenced to federal prison terms.

Loveless in Rogers Park

Prosecutors say Deandre Loveless and another man opened fire on a car in Rogers Park in 2015, intending to shoot a man who was inside. Instead, the bullets allegedly struck the woman who was driving the vehicle.

Loveless and the other man were initially charged with attempted murder, but that was upgraded to first-degree murder when the woman died from her injuries last year.

Loveless, 27, was held without bail until Judge Thomas Hennelly agreed to reduce bail to $200,000 on Feb. 17. Loveless walked out of jail the same day after posting a 10% deposit, court records show. Hennelly did not require him to go onto electronic monitoring, either.

Police arrested Loveless again on Sept. 30 after allegedly seeing him sell drugs on a Rogers Park street corner. Prosecutors said he had a baggie containing suspected crack in his waistband along with $233 cash. He is now being held without bail.

Commercial burglaries on Near North Side

Police have issued an alert to businesses on the Near North Side about a rash of recently reported commercial burglaries.

In each incident, the offenders forcefully enter through a front or side door by breaking the door glass with a pry tool. Once inside, the offenders takes property from within, and exits.

These incidents have occurring in these locations: the 0-100 block of E. Superior St., Nov. 7, during the early morning hours; in the 300 block of W. Superior St., Nov. 7, during the early morning hours; 300 block of W. Chicago Ave., Nov. 7, during the early morning hours, and on the 0-100 E. Superior St., Nov. 7, during the early morning hours.

The offenders are described as one to two male African American offenders wearing masks, dark colored clothing.

Police are asking anyone with information on a crime in progress to call 911 immediately and provide a detailed description of any suspicious people including any vehicle description and license plate information.

Concealed carry holder kills catalytic converter thief who opened fire on him in Roscoe Village

Darion Blackman, a suspected catalytic converter thief, was shot dead by a concealed carry holder in Roscoe Village Nov. 10, according to a source and initial information from Chicago police.

What's more, this reporter has learned that the dead man was on parole, and he was charged with illegally possessing a firearm two months ago — but state authorities decided not to revoke Blackman's parole, and he was released back onto the streets.

Around 11:45 p.m., a 44-year-old man was sitting on the steps of his home when he heard a loud noise coming from the street in the 2900 block of N. Wolcott, police said. He investigated the noise and discovered two men under a vehicle.

The two men both drew guns and began shooting at him without warning, police said. The concealed carry holder pulled out his own gun and returned fire, striking one of the men in the neck, according to police.

That man, age 25, collapsed on a nearby sidewalk with a gun under his arm, according to officers at the scene. He was pronounced dead at 12:07 a.m. by a doctor at Advocate IIlinois Masonic Medical Center.

Witnesses said a man carrying a saw escaped in a Dodge Durango occupied by at least one other person. Police determined that the Durango, which was previously reported stolen, made its way to the Loop and River North after the shooting, but no arrests were made.

Police were interviewing the concealed carry holder overnight.

Chicago police arrested Blackman for illegally possessing a firearm on a West Side street in September. The next day, a judge ordered him held without bail at the request of the Illinois Dept. of Corrections, which wanted to review his parole status, according to bond court notes maintained by this reporter. But state officials decided not to send him back to prison for a parole violation, and they released their hold.

The bond court judge set bail in the gun case at $5,000 with electronic monitoring, meaning the man would have needed $500 to get out of jail on home confinement after the state released its hold. But sheriff's office records indicate the man was not enrolled in the electronic monitoring program as recently as Nov. 9, so another judge may have changed his release conditions.

Just two days ago, three catalytic converter thieves threatened to shoot a man who interrupted their work in Bucktown, according to a CPD report and a neighborhood Facebook group post. The man was investigating a car alarm on the 2000 block of W. Shakespeare when the thieves pulled out a gun and said, "you don't want to do that," a relative of the man said in the post.

The thieves got away with the man's catalytic converter but did not fire any shots. "They were in a silver Infiniti and [they] waved at him as they left," she said.

Carjackers pull driver from his car in the Loop

Three carjackers pulled a man out of his car and drove away with it Nov. 9 in the Loop, police said.

The victim, 48, was sitting in his parked gray Honda Civic near the corner of State and Lake streets when the offenders walked up and opened the vehicle's front doors, CPD spokesperson Kellie Bartoli

They pulled the man out and then headed east on Lake Street with the car, she said. The vehicle was last seen turning south onto Michigan Ave.

The man was not injured, and no arrests have been made.

All of the offenders wore hats or ski masks with black sweaters. According to initial information from the scene, one of the men's sweaters had a red design on the front.

Teen shoplifting mobs again target Gold Coast, Michigan Ave.

Oak St. and Michigan Ave. retailers were again targeted by teenage shoplifting mobs last weekend say police, who report a rash of organized retail theft related incidents in the Gold Coast in the last month.

In each incident, multiple offenders enter the business, grab purses on display tables, and flee the store to a waiting vehicle. The offenders are using various getaway cars of which most are reported stolen. These incidents are occurring.

Incidents include one on the 800 block of N. Michigan Ave., Oct. 11, 2021 during the afternoon hours; another in the 0-100 block of East Oak St., Oct. 13, in the afternoon hours; the 800 block of N. Michigan Ave., Oct. 22, during the afternoon hours; 900 block of N. Rush St., Oct. 29, in the early morning hours; 600 block of N. Michigan Ave., Nov. 9, in the afternoon hours, and on the 700 block of N. Michigan Ave., Saturday, Nov. 13, in the evening hours.

County leaders say electronic monitoring is safe and effective

Here are some people who may disagree

BY CWBCHICAGO

City and county leaders have engaged in a series of public dust-ups over whether Cook County's electronic monitoring [EM] program is used effectively and appropriately.

Typically, Chicago Police Supt. David Brown argues that too many people are reoffending while on EM for pending cases while Cook County Board Pres. Toni Preckwinkle and Chief Judge Timothy Evans insist the program is safe and effective.

Cook County Sheriff Tom Dart, whose office operates the monitoring program, thinks there are problems.

"We were handed this thing — we didn't ask for it — we said 'this is not what it was designed for," Dart told NBC5 in July. "The program was never designed for violent people."

Just last week, a five-time felon was charged with murdering his own cousin while on electronic monitoring.

On Nov. 9, public defenders represented 14 men during felony bond hearings in Chicago. Records show six of those men were on bond for other felony cases when they allegedly committed the new crimes. And two of those six were on electronic monitoring.

Escape and armed robbery

Charles Whitehead, 26, was in court yesterday to face charges of armed robbery and unlawful vehicular invasion stemming from an incident that allegedly happened while he was supposed to be on electronic monitoring for possessing a stolen motor vehicle.

Prosecutors on Nov. 9 said he and another man walked up to a victim who was sitting in a car outside a store in West Town on the evening of Sept. 17. Whitehead allegedly opened the driver's door, put a knife to the man's neck, and grabbed the victim's wallet from his pocket. The other offender punched the victim and the pair fled.

Whitehead was not wearing a mask, and a "very clear" surveillance video shows the entire incident, prosecutors said. CPD officers recognized Whitehead from the footage

At the time of the alleged robbery, Whitehead had been missing from EM for three weeks, according to prosecutors. He remained at-large until Oct. 5, when police arrested him for allegedly having a loaded handgun inside a satchel on a street in East Garfield Park.

Prosecutors charged him with Class X felony armed habitual criminal and escape on October 6, court records show. In addition to escaping on the stolen motor vehicle matter, Whitehead was also wanted for failing to show up in court for a pending manufacture-delivery of heroin case.

He is now being held without bail.

"Sometimes the third time is the charm"

When Emannuel Romero appeared before Judge Charles Beach on a charge of Class X armed habitual criminal in September 2020, it was Romero's third felony gun case in three years. Police said they saw a loaded handgun lying at Romero's feet during a traffic stop on the 300 block of W. Oak the night before.

Beach ordered Romero to pay a $10,000 deposit to go home on EM and said, "sometimes the third time is the charm."

Sometimes.

On Nov. 9, Romero was charged with having a loaded 9-mm handgun with an extended ammunition magazine and a half-pound of pot inside the home where he's supposed to stay on EM. Sheriff's deputies found the contraband after receiving a tip, prosecutors said. Romero also made comments about having cannabis and guns during a recorded phone call from jail, Assistant State's Attorney Sergio Gomez said.

He's now charged with another Class X armed habitual criminal count.

"It's an ongoing issue of you possessing weapons and ammunition," Judge Mary Marubio said before ordering him held without bail on Tuesday.

Among other cases involving EM participants:

Fire

Terrell Hill, 40, is accused of setting his ex-girlfriend's house on fire while she, her children, and other people were inside. Hill was on electronic monitoring for Class X armed habitual criminal, aggravated assault with a deadly weapon, and six other felonies stemming from a separate domestic confrontation at the time of the alleged arson.

Prosecutors said Hill texted his ex with threats to kill her and her children and then went to the woman's home at 3:50 a.m. July 5. There, he texted photos of himself standing outside her front door and sent a message that she would "see fire," prosecutors said.

He poured gasoline on her front door and set it ablaze, then did the same thing to the home's back steps, according to prosecutors. There were five children and two adults inside the house at the time. None were injured.

Hill's fingerprints were allegedly found on a gasoline can nozzle at the scene, and

Chicago trader charged with security fraud

A Chicago trader was charged with securities fraud for allegedly engaging in unauthorized speculative bond trading that cost his employer and others more than $30 million.

Keith Wakefield, 48, of Chicago, was charged in a criminal information with one count of securities fraud. The charge is punishable by a maximum sentence of 20 years in federal prison.

The SEC's complaint, filed in federal district court in Chicago, alleges that from June through Aug. 2019, Wakefield engaged in unauthorized speculative trading in U.S. Treasury securities, on behalf of Atlanta-based IFS Securities, Inc. and incurred millions of dollars in losses for the firm. The SEC said that Wakefield engaged in a variety of fraudulent practices to create the appearance of fictitious trading profits and disguise his unauthorized trading losses, including falsifying IFS's books and records. As alleged, from Jan. 2017 through Aug. 2019, Wakefield also fraudulently obtained approximately $820,000 in commission income from IFS based on fictitious commission payments from customers that he fabricated and recorded on IFS's books and records.

According to the complaint, Wakefield's fraud came to an end in August 2019 when IFS was unable to honor millions of dollars in unauthorized fixed income securities trades executed by Wakefield with more than one dozen counter-parties. As a result, IFS was forced to close its business, withdraw its registration as a broker-dealer, and file for bankruptcy.

Mag Mile raiders steal 38 handbags from Salvatore Ferragamo

BY CWBCHICAGO

The holidays are just around the corner and it looks like one shoplifting crew is not experiencing supply chain issues.

Police are looking for the six-man team that stormed into Salvatore Ferragamo, 645 N. Michigan, and stole over $70,000 worth of purses Nov. 9.

It's the latest in a long string of similar organized thefts from high-end retailers in the area.

Around 4 p.m., the men stepped out of two vehicles, entered the store, and began collecting handbags from the shelves. They — and 38 of the store's purses — were gone within minutes, according to a CPD report. Ferragamo's bags retail for well over $1000 each.

The crew was last seen heading east on Erie Street in a gold Lincoln SUV and a gray Toyota Camry, according to the report.

In August, a 73-year-old security guard was critically injured when a shoplifting mob knocked him to the ground at Ferragamo. That incident sparked one of many community alerts Chicago police have issued about shoplifting teams that specialize in stealing purses from pricey boutiques around the Mag Mile, Oak St., and Rush St. retail strips.

Less than two weeks ago, thieves rammed a Nissan Maxima through the front doors of DIOR, 931 N. Rush St. during an overnight raid. Thousands of dollars worth of purses and other merchandise were taken from inside, police said.

Police released a video in October of two men swiping armloads of handbags from Bottega Veneta, 800 N. Michigan. In September, an employee at Bottega Veneta admitted a man into the same store and about eleven other men poured in behind the first. The crew collected about 35 handbags from the shelves and ran out the door, according to a property management company's email to nearby residents.

On Oct. 13 up to 10 young thieves raided the Saint Laurent store at 11 E. Walton around 11:27 a.m. and stole merchandise worth about $35,000, according to an initial estimate.

Crews also hit Burberry and Moncler in September.

Investigators believe the thefts are conducted by an organized crime ring that sells the stolen merchandise online.

DUBLIN'S TRAVAILS: Wicked developers have set their sights on acquiring the land that cherished Dublin Bar and Grill occupies at State and Maple streets. Apparently 11 E. Partners, owners of Blue Agave and Morton's locations, have seen to it that the electricity has been shut off at Dublin's. The treasured late night bar and eatery responded by installing an exterior generator outside to give them power (Dublin's has no basement because it is above the CTA's Red Line operation). Dublin's owner, Fred Chamanara, is stymied because he has been ordered to remove the generator, even though with no basement, there is no place for ComEd to install a meter. The evil 11 E. Partners displayed unusual greed and nastiness in their attempted power-play take-over. Is this the type of local commercial neighborhood the Gold Coast needs? How about displaying some Chicago sense and reason as businesses like Dublin's try to survive the pandemic? - Bally's Chicago. Bally's has submitted two $1.6-billion proposals to build a Chicago casino at different sites. One calls for a new construction casino on the 28-acre McCormick Place Truck Marshaling Yard, a giant parking lot at 31st Street and S. Lake Shore Dr.

Bally's second proposal involves redeveloping part of the 30-acre Freedom Center site at 777 W. Chicago Ave., which prints the Chicago Tribune and currently houses the newspaper's news room. Bally's has an option to purchase the land.

developers to build residential properties on vacant lots, with at least 20% of the units meeting affordable housing criteria.

High property taxes and slow home value appreciation are the downsides for people looking to buy the higher-end luxury condo units. For the broader benefit of the city, they better hope the high-end buyers keep coming, said Daniel McMillen, a finance professor at the Univ. of Illinois at Chicago.

Illinois ranked second for the nation's highest property tax rates at 2.16%, behind only New Jersey at 2.42%, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. Local governments in Illinois also rely on the property tax for 40% of local revenue, compared with 30% of local governments in other states, according to the Lincoln Institute of Land Policy.

"Driving out the high-priced won't be able to fund schools and invest in less developed areas. So with buyers picking up more luxury condos, the city's budget would increase, but the question is where that money gets spent, he Chicago's Home Price Index of high-tier residential properties grew by 12.% in July year over year, according to St. Louis Fred and S&P Dow Jones Indices. The index for the rest of the Chicago market increased 13% during the same period. The figure for Miami, one of the popular cities remote workers are moving to, jumped by about 25%.

"At the end of the day, the price is still going up. That's still going to incentivize developers." said Luis Lopez, a professor at UIC's business school. But, he said there may be greater incentives to build in states like Miami where there is no income tax.

Chavez, the buyer's agent at the St. Regis, said he has seen more demand for luxury condos this year than any other year closing 12 contracts for condos that were $4 million and over.

"Some of those condos sold in less than 30 days," he said.

"A few years ago, we were talking about there being more million-plus sales in the West Loop than there ever had been," said George Schultz, who oversees brokerage services at @properties. "That's not going to stop."

MONITORING from p. 9 the GPS tracker in his EM monitor pinged at the ex's house for over an hour around the time of the fire, prosecutors said.

They filed aggravated arson and electronic harassment charges against him last month.

Hill, a seven-time convicted felon, was on electronic monitoring for allegedly having a gun and threatening to shoot another ex-girlfriend last December.

"That's him! He has a gun!" the woman screamed as police arrived at the scene about a week before Christmas.

Officers chased Hill, who tossed the gun, which was equipped with an extended ammunition magazine, into a car as he walked away, according to prosecutors.

He was charged with eight felonies, including Class X armed habitual criminal, possessing a stolen firearm, and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

A judge initially ordered him held in lieu of $100,000 with a requirement to go onto a GPS monitor if he posted 10% of that amount. Another judge reduced the bail amount to $40,000 with electronic monitoring six days later, court records show. Information about which judges were involved in the bail decisions was not immediately available.

Less than three months later, while on bond, he was charged with manufacture-delivery of cocaine in Mount Prospect. A judge ordered him to pay another $2,700 to get out on EM. He did.

Sheriff's deputies conducted a "compliance check" at Campbell's home last month and found a loaded handgun in his bedroom along with a separate ammunition magazine, prosecutors said. The gun, which had multiple serial numbers, was stolen, according to the allegations.

Like Romero, Campbell allegedly talked about owning the gun during phone calls from jail. He is now being held without bail.

The Chicago city worker vaccine mandate was similar to mandates issued by other private and public employers, including the state of Illinois, through Gov. JB Pritzker.

Police officers and firefighters, in particular, have pushed back against the vaccine orders.

A group of Chicago firefighters, along with other city workers, filed suit in federal court, claiming the mandates violated their constitutional rights.

A federal judge in that case refused their request for a temporary restraining order against the city's vaccine mandate.

The Chicago Police union, however, opted for a different strategy, petitioning a Cook County judge to declare the vaccine mandates violated their rights under their collective bargaining agreement.

Cook County Judge Raymond Mitchell agreed, saying Lightfoot denied police officers a meaningful opportunity to press their grievances over the vaccine man-

While the city agreed the dispute belonged in arbitration, Judge Mitchell noted arbitration would be meaningless if the city was still allowed to force city workers to be vaccinated against their will, while the arbitration

> They directly quoted from Mitchell's decision, noting the judge's words: "If every union member complied and was vaccinated by Dec. 31 ... they would have no grievance to pursue and there would be no remedy an arbitrator could award," the judge wrote. "An award of back pay or reinstatement cannot undo a vaccine. Nothing can. "... 'Obey now, grieve later' would be transformed into 'obey now and forever' – without a meaningful opportunity to arbitrate."

> The city has not yet responded to the unions' complaint.

Bag those leaves and plan for water

Street sweeping will soon end for the year as Chicagoans prepare to shovel snow. The city is reminding residents to clean up the falling fall foliage and not let leaves clutter the streets, curbs and gutters.

Streets and Sanitation are requesting residents bag leaves from now on, instead of raking or sweeping them into the street.

Raking or sweeping leaves into the street clogs the sewers and causes standing water and icy streets. You can also be ticketed for leaving piles in the streets.

Once bagged, the city is asking that they be placed by your garbage carts to be picked up by city crews and composted.

The City provides dedicated bagged leaf collection in addition to the normal garbage pickup, but you have to request it by calling 311 or your local alderman's office to request a pickup.

A truck will collect leaves based on calls and take the yard waste to be composted. Remember to bag the yard waste separately from your regular garbage and recycling.

City Hall is also asking residents to be mindful of stormwater in the coming months. Stormwater management can greatly reduce backups and flooding in basements when water and waste in overwhelmed sewers have nowhere else to go.

By reducing your water output during storms, making sure only rain goes down the drain, disposing of fats, oils, and greases properly, and disconnecting your downspout, you can help keep the sewers flowing and water out of your basement.

Follow these tips to effective manage stormwater:

- Sweep up leaves from driveways, sidewalks, and streets, and clean roof gutters and drains.
- · Keep nearby catch basin grates clear of yard waste and trash.
- Do not litter or dump anything in storm drains. Storm drains are for rain only.
- Avoid running a dishwasher or washing machine during storms.
- · Use a commercial car wash or wash your car over grass or gravel instead of on a driveway or in the street.
- Do not dump fats/oils/greases in private drains.
- Disconnect your downspout from the sewer system.
- Before winter, empty your rain barrel and store in a garage or

Meeting on dealing with high commercial property taxes

North Side small businesses that are struggling to manage the high property tax burden in Chicago may join a virtual help session 10 a.m. Friday Nov. 19.

Several North Side politicians are cosponsoring a virtual property tax info session for small businesses. Ald. Matt Martin [47th] will be joined by the Cook County Assessor's Office and Cmsr. Bridget Degnen [12th] where they will present information on what goes into commercial property tax assessments, and how to appeal high taxes.

Registration is required to join the meeting, for more information call 773-283-7873.

Need a new marketing plan?

New ice skating rink at Navy Pier

New this year at Navy Pier is Chicagoland's largest indoor, temperature-controlled light garden and ice skating rink.

Ice skaters may enjoy large-scale lightsculpture displays, an Alpine ice rink, authentic holiday beer garden, kiddie train rides, Santa's Merry Main Street and gift market—and a visit with Santa. Festivities begin Friday, Nov. 26 and run through Sunday, Jan. 2, in Navy Pier's Festival Hall.

Tickets are $15 for children and adults on Mondays; children are $19 and adults are $21 on Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

The new rink features the area's largest indoor light show, boasting more than 600,000 lights. It will feature oversized sculptures with holiday and toy box themes, including a giant teddy bear, a deer soaring 25' high, a 60' light tunnel and a 40' tree. Borrowed skates are available at no charge.

Live streaming ATM looter gets probation, then gets locked up again

BY CWBCHICAGO

Of the scores of people charged with looting-related crimes last year, Arron Neal is one of the more memorable. While waves of looters pillaged stores along the Magnificent Mile on Aug. 10, 2020, Neal was a couple of blocks away, live-streaming his dismantling of a grocery store ATM.

Investigators released the streaming video and asked for help identifying the three men who tried to slam, hammer, and pry their way into the machine. Neal was charged with burglary by the end of the

He pleaded guilty to the charge in July, and Judge Diana Kenworthy gave him a gift: a sentence of two years "second chance probation" and 30 hours of community service.

So, where is Arron Neal today? He's being held without bail in the Cook County jail.

Less than two months after Kenworthy gave him that "second chance," police allegedly found Neal carrying a loaded hand-participating in EB-5, a federal program which provides foreign investors with a fast-track to permanent U.S. residency status, after they had individually invested up to $550,000 each for a total of nearly $50 million to build the condominium and hotel tower at the northeast corner of Wabash Ave. and Superior St.

The high-rise plan has gone nowhere, the Chinese investors never got their U.S. Visas, and the money is now ... allegedly... ahem... stuck in Bahrain.

One year ago, a federal securities class action lawsuit alleging securities fraud, breach of contract and fiduciary duty had been filed on behalf of the 90 Chinese investors. The aborted project, known as Carillion Tower, would have replaced the three Superior St. rowhouses. Citing neighborhood opposition, the project had been blocked by Ald. Reilly.

Symmetry's problems are not limited to Chicago. The company has also been involved in a failed 330-unit timeshare development on the Hawaiian island of Kauai. According to The Garden Island newspaper, SPD II Makaiwa Resort Development LLC, a company registered to Symmetry principal Jeffrey Laytin, has defaulted on a $10 million loan and is being sued by the project's financier, architect, landscape designer, two construction contractors, and a public relations firm hired to promote the development.

gun with an extended ammunition magazine during a traffic stop in the Loop.

Cops pulled the car over on the 200 block of W. Harrison early on Aug. 28 and allegedly saw an open bottle of D'usse cognac on the rear floorboard next to his feet.

Officers asked everyone in the car to step out and noticed that Neal, 21, was trying to conceal a prominent bulge in his front waistband. It was the gun. Neal also had a bottle containing 19 suspected Xanax pills, prosecutors said.

Neal allegedly told police he found the gun and decided to keep it.

Judge Mary Marubio set bail in the new case at $10,000, but she also ordered Neal held without bail temporarily until Kenworthy had a chance to review his probation.

Kenworthy reviewed it and kept Neal in jail without bail. He's still there. His next court date is Nov. 29.

During his bond court appearance on Aug. 28, an assistant public defender said he was expecting his first child.

offering fabulous floats, giant helium balloons, marching bands, celebrities, musical performances, Santa Claus, and the illumination of more than 200 trees along The Mag Mile.

There will be an official Christmas treelighting ceremony in The Wrigley Building Centennial Plaza, 410 N Michigan Ave. at 4 p.m., complete with musical entertainment by Grammy-nominated singer and actress Deborah Cox and the Chicago Carolers.

The parade concludes with a fireworks show over the Chicago River at Michigan Ave. For public safety, spectators are not allowed to view fireworks on any of the Chicago bridges.

Given the large crowds expected for this year's festival and the associated street closures, the police advised that residents exercise caution should they decide to drive near the parade route, as the access pass will not offer free and open travel.

The following streets will be closed as early as 3:30 p.m., and will remain closed until 7:30 p.m. or such time as the Chicago Police Dept. deems it safe to reopen the street: Oak St. from State to Michigan, N. Michigan Ave. from Oak to Wacker, and Upper Wacker Dr. (Michigan Ave. to the east turnaround.

Additional streets will se closures in effect at different times:

Closed 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturday are Clark St. (Oak to Delaware, east curb lane only); Delaware (Dearborn to Clark, north curb lane only); Oak St. (Clark to State); Dearborn (Delaware to Maple), and Walton (State to Clark).

Randolph St. curb lane from Michigan to Columbus, and Upper Columbus Dr., from Wacker to Randolph, southbound curb lanes only, will also be closed 3:30 p.m. to

Given the magnitude of the event, there may be significant traffic delays associated with the festival as well as intermittent "rolling" closures not listed here - these are under the jurisdiction of the Chicago police and could be enacted without notification if troubles arrive.

Not far away from the Festival of Lights, Millennium Park will host the 108th Annual City of Chicago Christmas Tree lighting on Friday night, admission is free.

After being all virtual in 2020, the city is welcoming back citizens for the tree lighting at exactly 6:30 p.m., followed by fireworks and a concert. There will be multiple viewing locations and screens, and a special Chicago Soul Spectacular concert, headlined by Cirque du Soleil and singer-songwriter Brian McKnight, from 6:35–7:45 p.m. This year's 51' Blue Spruce is donated by the Benavides family of the Logan Square neighborhood.
