Noise pollution survey will help neighborhood groups make downtown quieter

BY STEVEN DAHLMAN
Loop North News

Barking dogs, beeping vehicles backing up, construction, garbage trucks, helicopters, horn honking, Bucket Boys, idling buses and trucks, loud talking, motorcycles, music and noise from businesses, and seemingly ubiquitous emergency vehicle sirens.

Noise is now on the radar of four downtown neighborhood advocacy groups, including River North Residents Assoc. [RNRA]. RNRA is asking residents to answer 15 questions, online about noise in River North. The questions are about which, if any, noises bother residents, how the noise affects them, and what, if anything, they did about it.

Results of the survey will be used, says RNRA president Mike Riordan, “in our future discussions with public safety leaders, both fire and police, and city agency and elected officials to see what we can all do to reduce noise pollution.”

A quieter downtown could be achieved, says Riordan, through enforcement, such as ticketing racing motorcyclists, or education – perhaps emergency vehicles don’t always need the siren.

Under the City Code the Commissioner of Environment may adopt regulations establishing preferred procedures for measuring sound decibel levels to demonstrate compliance or noncompliance with any section of the code, particularly between the hours of 10 p.m. and 8 a.m.

Unless otherwise specifically provided, a violation is subject to a fine of $300 for a first offense, $500 for a second offense committed within a one-year period, and $1,000 for a third or subsequent offense committed within a one-year period.

A quieter downtown could be achieved, says Riordan, through enforcement, such as ticketing racing motorcyclists, or education – perhaps emergency vehicles don’t always need the siren.

Emergency vehicles and sirens are not subject to these rules.

No establishment holding a liquor license, or a public place of amusement license is permitted to operate any equipment or device that electronically amplifies sound so as to generate sound having a sound pressure level greater than 55 decibels when measured from within any dwelling unit.

Where a business has been found liable for two violations of this section, and has been charged with a third violation, all within a one-year period, the city may recommend the suspension or revocation of the liquor license, the public place of amusement license, or both licenses.

Construction and demolition companies working in the city also have limits they must operate under between 8 p.m. and 8 a.m.

The responses to the survey will be compiled and published on RNRA’s website. Other organizations participating in the survey include Streeterville Organization of Active Residents, Cityfront Center East Maintenance Assoc., which represents the mixed-use building at 401 E. Illinois St., and New Eastside Assoc. of Residents.

Return of the Lincoln #11 bus next Spring

CTA Board gets on the bus

After a three-year battle, the Lincoln Ave. bus will be coming back this spring, Ald. Ameya Pawar (47th) announced last week.

The experimental return of the No. 11 Lincoln Ave. buses will start sometime next spring, CTA President Dorval Carter announced during the CTA board’s Nov. 18 meeting. Carter said the “Crosstown Bus Coalition” organized earlier this year had made a convincing argument that the neighborhoods served by the No. 11 bus and the 31st Street bus route have changed significantly since those routes were shut down for lack of ridership.

Ald. Michele Smith (43rd) said just the upcoming conversion of the former Children’s Memorial Hospital into a large residential/retail development will generate a number of new riders along that route. Ald. Smith estimated that development alone would bring in about 1,000 new residents.

Although it’s only a “pilot” program dependent on both the Lincoln and 31st Street routes producing enough riders, Ald. Pawar called the CTA board’s decision “a huge victory.”

Carter credited the CTA board’s decision on “a productive dialogue with the community,” while Ald. Pawar credited Carter and CTA Board Chairman Terry Peterson with “listening to the community.”

The two North Side aldermen and other activists called the CTA officials’ attitude a major change from the previous regime. “We’re very grateful to the CTA board for listening to our concerns and taking action.”

But it didn’t just happen, said Ald. Pawar, noting “you create your luck by working hard.”

During a Nov. 16 hearing two days before the CTA board voted to reinstate No. 11 bus service, at least temporarily, 43rd Ward resident LeRoy Johnson of the Park West Community Assoc. said “all we were hearing during the Recession was how we’ve got to help the small businesses. So what do we do? We cut off the transportation to those small businesses we want to help.”

“We need to make it easier for visitors from a foreign country like Schaumburg to use the CTA,” said Alan Melis, former president of the Friends of the Fullerton El.

The CTA had cut the No. 11 route as “redundant” because of nearby bus lines and the CTA Brown Line elevated service. The north end of the No. 11 route from Fullerton to Western and LeLand was eliminated as part of the CTA’s “decrowding initiative” that involved cutting service on 28 “redundant” bus routes so service could be beefed up on 48 more heavily-used routes.

Ald. Pawar and other No. 11 supporters argued those buses and Brown Line trains are not within walking distance for many seniors and disabled residents.

At that same board meeting, the CTA okayed the return of express service on the Ashland and West-

Marijuana dispensaries open in Chicago and statewide

GRETCHEN STERBA
Columbia Chronicle

Medical marijuana dispensaries have opened across the state for the first time since Nov. 9 when the Illinois Medical Cannabis Pilot Program began. Among them was Dispensary 33, a medical marijuana dispensary located in the Andersonville/Uptown area at 5001 N. Clark St.

[The Urban Dictionary explains that “33” is a code-word for “weed” that can be used anywhere without anyone knowing what you’re actually talking about. It’s an evolution of the spelling for weed - ‘w33d.’]

Dispensary 33, which held an open house on November 14-15, is one of 15 dispensaries in Illinois that sells medical marijuana to people with one of 30 qualifying conditions, including cancer, Lupus, Multiple Sclerosis and Tourette’s.

“We’re much more focused on the patient experience and we’re not trying to be like a doctor’s office,” said Richard Park, director of education and outreach at Dispensary 33. “It’s going to compel us to procure really high quality stuff.”

Dispensary 33, a medical marijuana dispensary located in the Andersonville/Uptown area at 5001 N. Clark St.

The Marijuana Policy Project announced Nov. 9 that the Illinois Dept. of Public Health approved Illinois’ first medical marijuana dispensaries, including others in the cities of Evanston, Addison, Quincy and Mundelein. At the dispensaries, patients can purchase pure cannabis or edibles like brownies, cookies or gummy bears.

MedMar Inc., a dispensary in Rockford, proposed a dispensary in Chicago’s Lakeview neighborhood that was rejected in February by the local Zoning Board. However, they proposed a new location in the neighborhood at 3812 N. Clark St. that was approved according to John Sullivan, vice president of MedMar Inc.

“It’s about getting medicine to patients,” Sullivan said. “Thousands of people overdose on prescription drugs every year. There are no known deaths from overdosing on cannabis, it just doesn’t happen. In general, it’s for very sick people who need this medicine.”

Sullivan said that 60% of the people who have applied for medicine at MedMar Inc. are women more than 60 years old and the leading conditions for medical cannabis are cancer and fibromyalgia.

“Depending on what kind of condition you’re suffering from, there’s a large body of legitimate research done in various areas,” Park said. “Cannabis for movement disorder, seizure disorder, AIDS treatment—there’s a solid body of evidence for this stuff. For new patients, we’re going to recommend that you start out with small doses until you learn the ef-

Apple knows location

Apple clearly understands the value of “location” in the real-estate choices they are making at the global level. They appear to have hit the mark again by choosing this prominent location along the Chicago River.

The proposed riverfront retail project at 401 N. Michigan Ave. includes construction of a glass enclosed entrance located on the 401 Plaza with descending stairs to the lower concourse level retail space. The concept includes exterior stairs cascading down from the 401 Plaza and Michigan Ave. to the Riverwalk level.

City officials asked Apple to revisit their original plan for drop-off, loading and unloading off the Michigan Ave. vehicular drive and they agreed, developing a traffic plan to create no additional vehicular traffic at-grade on Michigan Ave. for these larger groups.

Don't be a victim, pickpockets and scam artists hard at work during the Holiday Season

The Chicago Police has offered safety tips to help North Siders avoid pickpockets and other scam artists during the holiday shopping season.

Police cautioned that people are particularly vulnerable during the holidays when crowds flood stores, sidewalks, buses and subways. Busy shoppers and commuters navigating through crowds are preoccupied with multiple obligations. A thief or con artist can blend into a crowd searching for an unsuspecting target.

Deceptive practices often include dropping loose change, fainting in front of a person, or bumping into someone. Once the shopper's attention is diverted, another offender may take the person's wallet or purse.

Authorities also encouraged senior citizens and residents to be aware of scam artists in their neighborhood and to immediately report any suspicious activity to police. Con artists often pose as utility workers or city employees to gain entry into a home. Police stressed that residents should not open their doors to strangers, always ask for identification, and report any suspicious activity to police by calling 9-1-1.

Police emphasized that being aware of surroundings and practicing simple safety tips can help people such as keeping your purse close to your body, preferably in front of you or under a jacket or coat.

ern avenue routes starting Dec. 21. The express buses will run during morning and afternoon rush hours and are expected to cut travel time along those busy corridors by making stops every half-mile and at all bus and rapid transit transfer points.

“These express routes will improve speeds and service on two of CTA's busiest bus routes which provide for than 50,000 daily rides,” said Peterson. “This first phase is part of a comprehensive effort to provide shorter and more efficient commutes to this important economic corridor.”

However, due to traffic congestion and close stop spacing, both routes are affected by slow bus speeds, leading to consistent bus bunching and big gaps in service.

As part of the three-phase effort to improve speeds along the two routes, the CTA will also be optimizing bus stop spacing on the local routes by removing some of the least-used stops. This will allow buses to travel faster by reducing the time buses spend frequently merging in and out of traffic while still providing convenient access along both corridors. When implemented, up to 85% of all trips on Ashland and Western will be unaffected by bus stop relocations, while all trips will benefit from faster service.

Be aware of where your purse is when you got to restaurants or hotel lounges. Thieves prey on purses hung over the back of a chair or left on the floor.

If you carry a wallet, keep it in your front pants pocket or coat breast pocket.

Be mindful of those who pass you on a crowded bus or train or bump into you on a sidewalk. These individuals may be pickpockets.

Do not leave packages or other valuables on the car seat where they can be seen. Lock them in the trunk.

Do not carry valuables in backpacks, which can easily be accessed in a crowded elevator, on an escalator or in a checkout line.

Keep an eye on credit cards and the paper trail they generate to avoid becoming the victim of identity theft. To reduce the risk, people should destroy extra copies of credit card receipts. It's also best not to carry personal information in a wallet or purse. This includes a social security number, an old credit card, ATM receipts or seldom used credit cards.

Keep pertinent information, including credit card account numbers, banking information and social security numbers, in a secured but accessible place at home. That way, in the event that a credit card is lost or stolen, the information will be handy for reporting to authorities.

Use caution when making online purchases, especially when the vendor is an individual rather than a known retailer.

Housing activists to CHA: Keep promise to revamp Lathrop Homes

There are over 700 vacant units at Lathrop Homes on W Diversey Pkwy. and N Clybourn Ave. Lathrop Homes has looked like this since 2000, said Lathrop residents.

STORY AND PHOTOS
BY ALEXIS MYERS
Medill News Service

Pastor Bruce Ray of the Kimball Ave. Church said recently at a housing protest that it is Mayor Rahm Emanuel’s “duty and moral obligation” to stop the Chicago Housing Authority’s [CHA] violence against low-income communities.

“The CHA has left a trail of suffering and grief as it breaks promises to residents,” Ray said.

Ray was among other religious leaders, housing activists and protesters who marched to City Hall last week to demand that the CHA keep its promise to remodel the Julia C. Lathrop Homes, where renovations have been stalled for over a decade.

Located at Diversey and the North Branch of the Chicago River, Lathrop was one of three PWA housing projects built in Chicagoans and leased to the new Chicago Housing Authority. In keeping with the federal neighborhood segregation policy of the time, the development was intended for whites only. In 1937, a fourth was being planned for African Americans. Reflecting the severity of Chicago’s housing crisis, there were seven applicants for every one unit available. First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt cut the ribbon and helped usher in the era of federally subsidized housing.

Lathrop Homes was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 2012, and consists of two-story brick row houses and three- and four-story apartment buildings separated by landscaped courtyards and linked by small archways in a 36-acre campus-

Joy to the world of miniatures and kids

Heart of the 'Hood

By Felicia Dechter

When I was a little girl, my mom used to take me to the Art Institute and although I thought all the paintings were pretty cool, what fascinated me most were the Thorne Miniature Rooms. I love and used to collect miniatures as a child, and that's why I have something in common with Lakeview resident Sally Kalmbach.

Kalmbach too visited the Thorne Rooms as a little one and fell in love with them, just as I did. So I was excited to hear that she had written a new, 118-page book with about 60 pictures in it called, "Mrs. Thorne's World of Miniatures," which tells the tale not so much of the rooms themselves, but of the story behind the woman who created them. "The book is about Mrs. Narcissa Thorne's life -- the story of how she started collecting miniatures as a very young child inspired by her uncle who sent her souvenirs from his U.S. Navy tours abroad," said Kalmbach, who was able to write the book because she received Mrs. Thorne's private papers, notes, etc. from Thorne's granddaughter. "Her parents commissioned a local carpenter to build a dollhouse for her when she was five-years-old. As an adult she said the scale offended her because much too large dolls sat on chairs, and the house did not contain a staircase."

Apparently, Narcissa started designing and building her own dollhouses as she continued to collect miniatures. After numerous trips to Europe, she decided she could take it a step further -- providing a history of interior design to be exhibited in a museum for educational purposes. The first dozen Thorne Rooms were introduced to the general public in the Century of Progress World's Fair of 1933, said Kalmbach.

"This is the only book about Mrs. Thorne's life," said Kalmbach, also author of "The Jewel of the Gold Coast: Mrs. Potter Palmer's Chicago."

"It seems peculiar that nobody had written about a woman who left a major legacy to the city of Chicago and the world -- it's one of the most visited exhibits in the museum."

Quite a bit of information that has been written was incorrect, said Kalmbach. Yet Mrs. Thorne's granddaughter, Anne Thorne Weaver, generously sent Kalmbach her grandmother's papers, speeches, photos, etc. to sort out and write a factual account of her life.

"The most difficult part was organizing the timeline and solving a few mysteries along the way," said Kalmbach, who dedicated the book to Weaver, "a wonderful lady who had faith in my completing the task."

The Thorne Rooms are decked out for the holidays and you can see them, and hear the story of Mrs. Thorne and how she started designing rooms as a hobby, because on Dec. 3 and 5, Kalmbach will be giving tours of the rooms. The tour, suitable for all ages, will visit several quarters and Kalmbach will discuss Mrs. Thorne's amazing life with pictures and stories from her book.

"I have given it to groups of grandchildren, families with adults and children as well as groups of adult men and women," she said of the tour. "I have also organized questions about the rooms entitled 'Pinkerton Detectives' (another Chicago history lesson) and a few adults thought the questions were too difficult. However, the children managed to answer them fairly quickly!"

According to the Art Institute's Web site,

there are now 68 Thorne Miniature Rooms. They "enable one to glimpse elements of European interiors from the late 13th century to the 1930s and American furnishings from the 17th century to the 1930s, the site says. Painstakingly constructed on a scale of one-inch to one foot, the models were conceived by Mrs. Thorne and constructed between 1932 and 1940 by master craftsmen according to her specifications.

The book sells for $18.95, (Art Institute members get a discount) and it's also available at the Driehaus Museum, Glessner House Museum, and the Chicago Architectural Foundation. Thorne Room tours cost $30 and during the month of December, Kalmbach also gives private tours. To RSVP or for more information call Kalmbach at (773) 868-9096.

Santa Claus is coming to town ... and once again, he'll be partying at Dick's! For the last 25 years, the folks at Dick's Last Resort, 315 N. Dearborn St., have generously held a phenomenal holiday party for dozens of local kids, and this year is no different. On Dec. 2, Dick's will host the party for the 25th time and that, to me, is going more than the extra mile for kids in the community.

The Dick's Christmas party though is not just your regular holiday bash, those involved go all out to make it merry and bright and give 50 children -- ages three to 12 -- something they might not ordinarily see or get at home. The restaurant is decorated to the max, Santa and Mrs. Claus are there, the Dick's staffers dress as elves, there's face painting and fun, Christmas carols are sung by carolers from the VanderCook College of Music, and each child (along with the adults and 18th District police -- about 125 people in all) is treated to an amazing buffet, filled with all sorts of healthy and delicious food. (And Goose Island even donates root beer!). And I'm not sure if he'll be there this year, but for the last 20 years, Secretary of State Jesse White has shown up too doing what he does so well -- supporting kids.

But it doesn't end there. After Thanksgiving -- so he can get the best bargains -- Dick's 26-year manager, Paul Grieshaber, personally shops for gifts for the kids, and at the party, each child gets a beautifully wrapped present with their name on it so they're not just getting something generic (they also each receive a giant stocking filled with school supplies). Two days beforehand, all the presents are wrapped by 18th District police, Dick's staffers, and Chicago civic leader Kathy Posner, who starts planning the annual event the day after Labor Day.

"Dick's is so generous to so many different areas of Chicago's communities," said Posner. "Besides the Christmas party they've done events for Easter Seals, the

Collectors converge on SOFA

The 2015 Sculptural Objects, Functional Art and Design Fair at Navy Pier

Photos and captions by Melody Bromma

Evelyn and Lawrence Aronson could easily be dubbed the First Couple of Contemporary Art Collecting in Chicago. Their sprawling suburban home is an indoor playground of sculpture, paintings and objects. Not all pretty, but all significant. Featured in the documentary film, “Hairy Who & the Chicago Imagists” their collection is world class, starting with their humble first acquisitions in the 60’s. Mr. Aronson revealed their collecting method, “The first day (of SOFA) we just walk around, not searching. If something hits us, then we come back - and focus.”

“Beautiful and cohesive,” were the rave reviews provided by dashing show attendees, Mitch Reinke and Chicago artist, Josh Grabowski.

SOFA as a team effort, “I’m enjoying seeing my home through the eyes of my designer,” gushed JoAnn Seagren, Investment Manager. Her stylish interior designer, Madeline Gelis provided practical acquisition guidance and an objective vision to confront a plethora of wares from around the globe. A creative compass like Gelis can provide the vision to navigate this vast and popular annual show.

Avant garde Parisian artist, Charlie Le Mindu, created a coiffure shocker with his human hair hats and helmets. Modeled by Playtex clad stunners, Natalie Bryant and Lauryn Merowyal, who claimed to “feel fabulous” in the mad millinery. Will these find a head for Hawthorne Hat Days?

SOFA served up art glass, ceramics, paint, jewels and even classes. Christopher Rogers of Dartmouth University has a yearning for yarn and to share lost weaving methods from New England. His vast rainbow hued loom installation offered nine year old, Natalie Drake, the opportunity to create. “I love the colors!”, she declared. A yen for yarn artistry fostered young.

After School Matters, Harris Theater combine for music, dance education

After School Matters [ASM] and Harris Theater for Music and Dance [HTMD] have announced a new arts education partnership.

Together the two groups will create enrichment opportunities through activities with Harris Theater-presented artists for ASM teens across multiple disciplines.

ASM provides Chicago high school teens with out-of-school opportunities to explore and develop talents while gaining skills for work, college and beyond.

During the 2015-2016 season, more than 300 underwritten tickets will be provided to ASM through the Harris Access Tickets Program. ASM and HTMD will collaborate on curriculum alignment and resources to be provided for each performance to deepen student learning.

“ASM is thrilled to partner with HTMD to provide opportunities for Chicago teens to engage directly with world-renowned artists and to experience world-class performances,” ASM chief executive officer Mary Ellen Caron said. “When young people see firsthand how professionals have achieved success, they build not only their skills but their confidence to know that they can and should dream big.”

HTMD president and managing director Michael Tiknis said his group is happy to join forces with ASM as well.

“This partnership is so meaningful to the Harris Theater,” he said. “Engaging diverse audiences and creating opportunities through which our community, especially young people, can enjoy the arts is a cornerstone of the Harris Theater’s mission. We see these enrichment moments as a chance to influence lifelong supporters of, and contributors to, our city’s arts scene.”

ASM and Harris Theater have developed four opportunities for engagement throughout 2015-2016:

- The partnership kicked off with a special engagement with AXIS Dance in October, during which ASM dance students participated in a conversation about physically integrated dance leading up to the performance of AXIS Dance – an ensemble of dancers with and without physical disabilities. Students had dinner at the Harris Theater and attended AXIS Dance’s performance.

- On Nov. 19 Lucky Plush, a Chicago-based dance company, led ASM teens in a workshop on improvisation and the creative process leading up to the company’s Harris Theater debut. More than 100 students from ASM attended Harris Theater’s presentation of Lucky Plush during the new MIX at SIX series.

- On Dec. 7, ASM music students will join Sphinx Virtuosi, an ensemble comprised of young black and Latino string musicians, for a pre-performance dinner and conversation on topics ranging from promotion of diversity in classical music, to the skills and commitment required of young professional musicians today.

- In April, Miami City Ballet will lead a master class for ASM dance students leading up to the company’s Harris Theater debut.

ASM will join other core arts education partners at the Harris Theater, including the Music Institute of Chicago, Chicago Academy for the Arts and Chicago High School for the Arts. For more information call 312-742-4182.

Holiday caroling at Cloud Gate begins Friday

Choral groups perform songs of the season in Millennium Park

Get ready to belt out some holiday classics at Caroling at Cloud Gate – part concert, part sing-along – each Friday, November 27–December 18, 6–7 p.m., at the Cloud Gate sculpture (aka “The Bean”) in Millennium Park.

Holiday music will fill the air as local choral groups perform seasonal favorites and invite revelers to join in the fun and singing.

Visitors will be able to enjoy views of the official City of Chicago Christmas Tree and take a spin at the nearby McCormick Tribune Ice Rink. Even Santa Claus will join the fun this year from 5–6 p.m., before the caroling gets started. Caroling at Cloud Gate began in 2006 and is free and open to the public.

This year’s Caroling at Cloud Gate performers are:

Friday, Nov. 27
Oakdale Youth Choir

The children’s gospel choir based out of Oakdale Covenant Church on the South Side of Chicago was originally formed as part of the church’s fundraising efforts to provide disaster relief to Haiti after the 2010 earthquake. Originally formed for a single fundraiser event, the popular choir now performs regularly throughout the Chicago area and has shared the stage with renowned artists including Jennifer Hudson and Common.

Friday, Dec. 4
Lutheran Choir of Chicago

The Lutheran Choir of Chicago (LCC) is a unique sacred choral ensemble with a rich spiritual tradition and an ever-expanding repertoire. For more than 65 years, LCC has enlightened, educated and entertained the people of Chicago and the world. LCC was founded in 1947 and has evolved into an exceptional group of performers from different spiritual backgrounds who share a common desire to make joyful music.

Friday, Dec. 11
Wicker Park Choral Singers

Wicker Park Choral Singers is a Chicago-based, all-volunteer choir dedicated to building community through choral music. The group has performed in spaces throughout the Chicagoland area, including the Chicago Cultural Center, the Fourth Presbyterian Church on the Magnificent Mile, the St. Vincent de Paul Church and the Humboldt Park Boathouse.

Friday, Dec. 18
Chicago Choral Artists

Chicago Choral Artists (CCA), formerly known as the James Chorale, are an ensemble of dedicated musicians that have been presenting innovative music to Chicago audiences for nearly 40 years. Whether performing Gregorian chant or gospel, CCA seeks to present excellent interpretations of its diverse repertoire, creating a vibrant thread of music which connects the director, the singers and the audience. CCA programs feature new commissions and music of indigenous cultures in tandem with fresh interpretations of classic masterworks.

St. Charles Singers to perform 20 contrasting carols Dec. 5

Chamber choir’s 32nd annual Christmas concert to include works by Pachelbel, Holst, others

The St. Charles Singers choir will perform its 32nd annual “Candlelight Carols” Christmas concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5, at Fourth Presbyterian Church, 126 E. Chestnut St.

Conducted by founder and music director Jeffrey Hunt, the professional chamber choir’s 2015 “Candlelight Carols” program will offer 20 contrasting carols by almost as many composers, including a “Magnificat” by Johann Pachelbel, “In the Bleak Midwinter” by Gustav Holst, and a carol by contemporary Englishman Jonathan Dove with a part written for the audience.

The Holst piece will be one of eight works the St. Charles Singers will perform for the first time.

Hunt says the variety of composers and carols distinguish the St. Charles Singers’ annual Christmas programs.

“There won’t be a lot of musical chestnuts roasting on the fire,” Hunt says.

Among the offerings is Dove’s “Run, shepherds, run!” written for unaccompanied choir with audience participation. Hunt will coach audience members on how to sing their part. Eight choir members will be posted throughout the hall to sing with and support the audience.

Hunt has programmed three carols by Sir David Willcocks as a tribute to the recently departed British choirmaster, composer and arranger: “Birthday Carol,” “He Smiles Within His Cradle,” and “Silent Night.”

The mixed-voice ensemble of 37 singers also will perform Orlando Gibbons’ “This is the Record of John,” Thomas Luis de Victoria’s “Alma Redemptoris 8,” Robert Pearsall’s “In Dulci Jubilo,” Herbert Howell’s “Sing Lullaby,”

Richard Bjella’s arrangement of Mateo Flecha’s “Riu, Riu, Chiu,” and Morten Lauridsen’s “O Magnum Mysterium.”

The St. Charles Singers’ new Klop positiv organ, acquired this year, will be heard in three carols.

“Its wooden pipes have such a wonderful sound,” Hunt says.

Single tickets for the concert are $35 for adult general admission, $30 for seniors 65 and older, and $10 for students. Tickets and more information are available at 630-513-5272. Tickets may also be purchased at the door on the day of the concert, depending on availability. Group discounts are available.

Park said that the trained medical employees at the dispensary will help patients track the medications they try and develop a profile for the patient that allows the company to tailor recommendations to them.

There are now slightly over 3,000 medical marijuana patients in Illinois as opposed to the 146,811 patients in Michigan. But that is far from enough of a client base to support the industry in Illinois.

Gus Koukoutsakis, the CEO and co-owner of licensed Illinois dispensary EarthMed, said he has worked for the company for more than two years, preparing it to provide patients with medicinal cannabis.

“The amount of patients that we personally have seen come through our doors with horrible health conditions and severe illnesses are people that are spread out throughout our state, and more concentrated in the city of Chicago. The benefits they can see [from the medical marijuana] are tremendous,” said Koukoutsakis.

Koukoutsakis said doctors send patients to EarthMed to receive medical cannabis as their “only hope.”

Beating the holiday blues

Feelings of sadness and depression are common during the holidays, but not inevitable. Experts offer a variety of practical tips to help you keep the blues away.

Once again the holidays are upon us, which means it's time for festive partying with friends and family, sharing gifts and laughter -- and getting depressed. That's right. For many people, the holidays bring on feelings of sadness and anxiety that can be hard to shake.

According to the National Mental Health Association, reasons for feeling blue around the holidays are numerous. They range from fatigue -- a result of all of the increased holiday activity -- to financial limitations and family tensions. Experts say one of the fastest routes to holiday depression is unrealistic expectations.

"People often hold on to what they remember as an ideal holiday from years gone by and are unable to reproduce it," said Jill RachBeisel, director of community psychiatry at the University of Maryland Medical Center. "There are also expectations around the holidays that 'everything must be perfect,' and perfection is, of course, rarely obtainable."

To reduce heightened expectations, Hinda Dubin, clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, suggests that people be honest with themselves about what they can do during the holiday season.

"Set realistic goals," said Dubin, who also is a psychiatrist at UMMC. "If your holiday plans require you to run around shopping and going to parties until you are exhausted, and staying up all night to wrap presents, your plans aren't very realistic. You need to pace yourself and get enough rest so that you won't be grouchy and testy."

Other factors that can contribute to feelings of sadness around the holidays are memories of deceased loved ones and strained family dynamics.

"The holidays are associated with family and togetherness," said RachBeisel, who is also an associate professor of psychiatry at UMSM. "In today's world of high divorce rates and fragmented family units, stress is commonly experienced as family members attempt to find some compromise in defining shared time."

Creating family traditions is one way to bring family members closer together, said Dubin. These traditions don't have to be formal or elaborate. For instance, she recommends visiting a nursing home to help serve holiday meals to some of the residents, or videotaping holiday celebrations and making an annual event of watching the previous year's celebration.

Holiday blues vs. serious depression

The holidays cause many people to feel anxious and depressed in a general sense, but for some, holiday tensions can lead to full-blown clinical depression.

According to the National Institute of Mental Health, about 19 million American adults suffer from depressive illnesses every year. Unfortunately, many people with clinical depression don't seek help, even though depression is a treatable condition.

"Some people still look at mental illness as a character flaw," Dubin said. "The truth is that it is no different from any other kind of illness. If your body couldn't produce enough insulin, no one would tell you to 'get over it.' You'd need to go to the doctor and get treated for your insulin deficiency. It is the same with mental illness."

Below is a list of depressive symptoms compiled by the NIMH. NIMH experts suggest that you seek professional help if you experience five or more of these symptoms every day for two weeks. If you have recurring thoughts of death or suicide, you should get help immediately.

- Persistent sad, anxious or "empty" mood
- Feelings of hopelessness or pessimism
- Feelings of guilt, worthlessness or helplessness
- Loss of interest or pleasure in hobbies and activities that were once enjoyed, including sex
- Decreased energy, fatigue or feeling "slowed down"
- Difficulty concentrating, remembering or making decisions
- Insomnia, early-morning awakening or oversleeping
- Loss of appetite and weight loss, or overeating and weight gain
- Restlessness and irritability
- Persistent physical symptoms that do not respond to treatment, such as headaches, digestive disorders and chronic pain

How to cope with holiday blues

Don't let all of the pressures of shopping, coordinating social functions, negotiating family issues and missing lost loved ones overwhelm you this holiday season. There are a number of things you can do to keep stress, anxiety and depression at bay.

One of the best antidotes for the holiday blues is doing something for someone else.

"Volunteer your time this holiday season to help others who have less than you do," Dubin said. "Taking the focus off of yourself and putting it on others can really make you feel much better. Not only can you help other people, but doing so will add a lot more meaning to your holiday season."

Dubin offers these additional tips to help you banish the holiday blues:

- Delegate. Don't try to do it all by yourself. People often want to help and to be involved. By breaking down tasks and doling them out to friends and family, everything becomes more manageable.

- Spend some time alone. Some people love the energy and exuberance of big holiday parties and activities. For others, all of it is very taxing. If you find yourself getting a little anxious, take a breather. Find a quiet spot to relax and recharge your batteries. Other people will be so caught up in what is going on that they probably won't even miss you.

- Let go of the past. Don't be disappointed if your holidays aren't like they used to be. Life brings changes. Embrace the future, and don't dwell on the fact that the "good old days" are gone.

- Don't drink too much. It is easy to overindulge around the holidays, but excessive drinking will only make you feel more depressed.

- Give yourself a break. Don't think in absolute terms. You aren't the best cook in the world, or the worst. You aren't super mom, or the most horrible mother in the world.

If, despite your best efforts to remain upbeat this holiday season, you find yourself feeling down for a sustained period of time, get help. Don't try to "tough it out" alone. There are treatment options available to you that could make a significant difference in your outlook.

Life can begin at 60, it’s all in your hands

Many people feel unhappy – health-wise and security-wise – after 60 years of age owing to the diminishing importance given to them and their opinion.

This need not be the case, if only we understand the basic principles of life and follow them scrupulously.

Here are 10 mantras to age gracefully and make life after retirement pleasant.

1. Never say ‘I am aged’

There are three ages: chronological, biological, and psychological. The first is calculated based on our date of birth, the second is determined by health conditions and the third is how old you feel you are. While we don’t have control over the first, we can take care of our health with good diet, exercise and a cheerful attitude. A positive attitude and optimistic thinking can reverse the third age.

2. Health is wealth

If you really love your kith and kin, taking care of your health should be your priority. Thus, you will not be a burden to them. Have an annual health check-up and take the prescribed medicines regularly.

3. Money is important

Money is essential for meeting the basic necessities of life, keeping good health and earning family respect and security. Don’t spend beyond your means, even for your children. You have lived for them through a lot, and it is time you enjoyed a harmonious life with your spouse. If your children are grateful and they take care of you, you are blessed. But never take it for granted.

4. Relaxation and recreation

The most relaxing and recreating forces are a healthy religious attitude, good sleep, music and laughter. Have faith in God, learn to sleep well, love good music and see the funny side of life.

5. Time is precious

Imagine that every day you are born again. Yesterday is a cancelled check. Tomorrow is a promissory note. Today is ready cash — use it profitably. Live this moment.

The only way to make sense out of change is to join the dance.

6. Change is the only permanent thing

We should accept change — it is inevitable. The only way to make sense out of change is to join the dance. Change has brought about many pleasant things. We should be happy that our children are blessed.

7. Enlightened selfishness

All of us are basically selfish. Whatever we do, we expect something in return. We should definitely be grateful to those who stood by us. But our focus should be on the internal satisfaction and happiness we derive by doing good things for others, without expecting anything in return.

8. Forget and forgive

Don’t be bothered too much about others’ mistakes. For the sake of our own health and happiness, let us forgive and forget them. Otherwise, we will be only increasing our blood pressures.

9. Everything has a purpose

Take life as it comes. Accept yourself as you are, and also accept others for what they are. Everybody is unique and right in his own way.

10. Overcome the fear of death

We all know that one day we have to leave this world. Still we are afraid of death. We think that our spouse and children will be unable to withstand our loss. But the truth is no one is going to die for you; they may be depressed for some time, but time heals everything and they will carry on.

Giving thanks brings benefits throughout the year

Thanksgiving Day serves as our annual reminder to be grateful. The tradition of Thanksgiving is deeply rooted in American history, from the Pilgrims' first harvest dinner to President Lincoln declaring Thanksgiving a national holiday in 1863 in the midst of the Civil War.

The giving of thanks, however, is best practiced more than once a year.

In his book Thanks!: How Practicing Gratitude Can Make You Happier, psychology professor Robert Emmons writes, "Gratitude is literally one of the few things that can measurably change people's lives."

The residents of The Clare, Chicago's premier retirement community, have much to be thankful for.

Whether they are traveling to celebrate the holiday or staying close to home and enjoying Thanksgiving brunch prepared by Executive Chef Hagop Hagopian, residents agree on one thing: They are thankful for the beautiful surroundings, wonderful friends and relationships, and peace of mind they found when they decided to call The Clare home.

Thinking of what she has to be grateful for, one resident says, "My husband and I are thankful for living in this country, for each other and our life together...and for The Clare, which has proven to be the perfect place for us."

According to Dr. Lawrence Rosen, an integrative pediatrician, author and ad-

cor, there are five compelling health reasons to work on the practice of gratitude: It greatly enhances one's attitude and sense of optimism, decreases stress, improves sleep, benefits your heart, and serves as a memory booster.

Sheila Rock, the president of The Clare's Resident Advisory Council, writes, "I am grateful for my children and the support and love they give me and my husband, and for living long enough to see and enjoy my twelve grandchildren! And I'm grateful for the opportunity to live at The Clare; for the good fortune of meeting and making new friends here and the support and understanding I receive from them; for the caring staff who care for my husband; and for the doctor who cares and understands so well what is happening in my life."

Expressions of gratitude can relate to everyday moments as well as deeper levels of appreciation.

Joyce Saxon, chairperson of The Clare's Life Enrichment (Entertainment) Committee, says, "I am grateful for the camaraderie I have at The Clare. I can call residents at 4 pm any weekday to arrange dinner together and have different companions every evening!"

Sally Kinnamon, chairperson of The Clare's Hospitality Committee, reflects these sentiments: "I am grateful for the people in my life. My family, of course, but also my 'other' family, those who, in my really tough times this year have stood behind me, pulled me forward, remained at my side. They knew when to be there, when to speak and when not to, when to listen to me even when it was unreasonable or repetitive, to include me or let me exclude myself as needed. They are ordinary, extraordinary, present and insistent but always appropriate. I am so grateful to have them in my life and to be a part of theirs."

Cultivating and practicing gratitude can easily be integrated into our lives and provide meaningful benefits to our wellbeing. To start practicing gratitude, one can choose from a number of strategies, such as keeping a gratitude journal, giving at least one compliment to someone every

30-minute meditation method

BY MARGRET ALDRICH

Finding time for meditation is tricky, but I steal a few moments for it whenever I can: while reclined in the dentist’s chair, waiting for the hygienist; while riding the pleasantly rumbling bus on a morning commute; and, on increasingly rare occasions, while sitting on my bedroom floor in half lotus position. At this woefully meager rate, however, enlightenment—or any of meditation’s benefits—seems miles away.

For devout meditators (some with more than 10,000 meditation hours under their belts), meditation provides clear rewards. Scientists have indicated that meditation can alter experienced meditators’ brains, changing their gray matter to improve concentration and mental health. Now, even the time-crunched masses can enjoy the positive results of meditation, reports Jason Marsh in Greater Good. In a study published in the journal “Psychiatry Research: Neuroimaging,” Marsh writes, “meditating for just 30 minutes a day for eight weeks can increase the density of gray matter in brain regions associated with memory, stress and empathy.”

Researchers studied 16 participants in the Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR) program at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center. None of them were master meditators, yet their brains were changed by 30-minute meditation sessions.

“When their brains were scanned at the end of the program, their gray matter was significantly thicker in several regions than it was before,” writes Marsh.

He continues: “One of those regions was the hippocampus, which prior research has found to be involved in learning, memory and the regulation of our emotions. The gray matter of the hippocampus is often reduced in people who suffer from depression and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD).

“The researchers also found denser gray matter in the temporo-parietal junction and the posterior cingulate cortex of the meditators’ brains—regions involved in empathy and taking the perspective of someone else—and in the cerebellum, which has been linked to emotion regulation.” Carving out even 30 minutes a day for meditation can feel daunting, but Marsh points out that every little bit counts.

“The upshot of all this research seems to be: Small steps matter,” he said. “Many of us can bring about positive effects on our brains and overall well-being—without an Olympic effort.”

Tips for staying mentally sharp as a senior

Promising research indicates that taking the following steps can help keep your mind sharp as you age:

- Control cholesterol problems and high blood pressure. These conditions can increase your risk for heart disease and stroke, which are thought to contribute to the development of certain types of dementia. Cardiovascular health — having healthy blood sugar, cholesterol levels and blood pressure, along with being physically active, eating a nutritious diet, maintaining a healthy weight, and not smoking — was associated with better cognitive function in a 2014 study published in PLoS One.

- Don’t smoke or drink excessively. Because smoking and drinking both are seen as putting you at increased risk for dementia, kick the habit if you smoke and, if you drink, do so only in moderation.

- Exercise regularly. Regular physical activity is thought to help maintain blood flow to the brain and reduce your risk for conditions such as high blood pressure that are associated with the development of dementia. Consistent vigorous exercise helps lower the risk for dementia, according to a study published in Annals of Medicine in 2015.

- Eat a healthy diet. People who consume plenty of vegetables and fatty fish and keep away from saturated fats are thought to have a lower risk for cognitive decline

- Stimulate your brain. People with less education are at higher risk for dementia, according to the Alzheimer’s Association, because mental stimulation throughout your lifetime is important for your brain health. Keep your mind active by increasing your level of social interaction, learning new skills, playing challenging games and doing other activities that require an engaged mind. People who are more socially and intellectually involved are less likely to develop dementia.

My Rememberer

My forgetter’s getting better
But my rememberer is broke
To you that may seem funny
But, to me, that is no joke.

At times I put something away
Where it is safe, but, Gee!
The person it is safest from
Is, generally, me!

For when I’m ‘here’ I’m wondering
If I really should be ‘there’
And, when I try to think it through,
I haven’t got a prayer!

When shopping I may see someone,
Say “Hi” and have a chat,
Then, when the person walks away
I ask myself, “who was that?”

Often times I walk into a room,
Say “what am I here for?”
I wrack my brain, but all in vain
A zero, is my score.

Yes, my forgetter’s getting better
While my rememberer is broke,
And it’s driving me plumb crazy
And that isn’t any joke.

day, writing thank you notes, and incorporating appreciation in a meditation or exercise routine.

Dorothy Pirovano, chairperson of The Clare’s Resident Marketing Committee, expresses her gratitude daily: “I am grateful for each day and make sure to begin my morning with a heartfelt thank you to God for my many blessings -- a husband who I love so very much; our kids and grandkids, who are such good people with kind hearts and souls; and a good life filled with caring friends and family. We have had the same roller coaster of a life as others with its soaring highs and lows but we believe in looking for what is positive and moving forward. A friend always said it was a good day if he ‘woke up on the right side of the grass.’ Up here on the 44th floor of The Clare, we’re glad to be ‘on the right side of the clouds’.”

The staff and residents of The Clare wish everyone a Happy Thanksgiving...and best wishes for practicing gratitude every day of the year.

North Side's rock 'n' roll bookseller says goodbye upon 50th Anniversary

(left) Florence of Florence and the Machine, perusing books. (Center) Shake, Rattle & Read at 4812 N. Broadway, just south of the Uptown Theater. (Right) Owner Ric Addy. "It's time," Ric said. "At age 64, and after 30 years in the same location, I'm looking for new adventures."

The year was 1966: The Beatles were about to revolutionize music with Revolver and Truman Capote was changing journalism with his book "In Cold Blood." That was also when Gail and James Osborne opened their store, The Book Box, near the intersection of Broadway and Lawrence in the Uptown neighborhood at 4812 N. Broadway. As it was then, and now, it stood sentry just north of the famed Green Mill and south of the Uptown Theatre.

Twenty years later, Gail's brother and longtime record store manager Ric Addy took over the shop and gave it another name: Shake, Rattle & Read. After decades of selling everything from literary classics to vintage pulp novels, collectible LPs to now-vintage cassettes, magazines and music memorabilia, Ric will start packing it all in throughout the first half of 2016.

Starting in early next year, Addy will be offering a series of events at Shake, Rattle & Read, leading up to his retirement and departure from Chicago in the late summer.

Every year he's held at least one annual sale giving a discount identical to the number of years the store has been open. Thus this long goodbye will start with a 50% off sale to mark the 50th anniversary of the store itself—all books, used records and magazines will be marked at half-off while new vinyl LPs will be discounted by 25%. [The actual date of the sale will be announced in January.]

"I'll miss all of my friends in Chicago, but I won't miss the winters," said Ric.

"It's time," Ric said. "At age 64, and after 30 years in the same location, I'm looking for new adventures. I need to take time to go see the rest of the world and be with my family and friends in Michigan and Florida. I'll miss all of my friends in Chicago, but I won't miss the winters."

Ric's own history in Chicago retail goes back to 1971 and a series of music stores that he managed—including such long-missed establishments as Rose Records, Downtown Records, and Record Exchange. He was also one of the city's first punk rock DJs at such clubs as O'Banion's, Exit, and Lucky Number/950. All of these experiences breathe through his collection at Shake, Rattle & Read, which one-time shopper Dr. Timothy Leary once called, "a museum of the last 50 years of pop culture."

Other impressed customers have included The Ramones, Iggy Pop, Clash guitarist Mick Jones, Bob Weir of the Grateful Dead and thousands of Chicagoans.

"Just being an independent businessman and not working for anybody else has been wonderful," Addy said. Having served as a Director for the Business Partners/The Chamber For Uptown for five years, he adds, "And it's been terrific to turn on so many people to so many great books and music—these are just the things that a small store always should do."

like arrangement.

In 1959, the CHA added an eight-story building to house seniors to the south side of the project.

The new Lathrop would eliminate 525 public housing units and convert 45% of units into market-rate housing. The most recent development plan from the project's stakeholders offers a look into the comprehensive plan.

Many, like Leah Levinger, director of the Chicago Housing Initiative, said she fears that the new market-rate housing strategy would push out lower-income residents in an already affluent neighborhood, which would further segregate Chicago which is already one of the nation's most segregated city.

"It's a disservice to the residents who need affordable housing," she said at the protest outside the Thompson Center Plaza.

Today, 138 families remain at Lathrop's 925 total units, according to CHA's most recent report.

"The developers want to take the property that I live on and bring in more retail and displace low-income people," Gross said.

"Every time they move a family out, they don't move a new family in, and that's how Lathrop has become the ghost town that it is" today, Levinger said.

Matthew Aguilar, senior manager of communications at the CHA, said the agency plans to expend $90 million of the development reserve balance this year on capital projects and resident services. Roughly $2.5 million of the development reserves in 2015 will go toward the redevelopment of Lathrop.

J.L. Gross, 63, a disabled veteran, has lived in Lathrop Homes for 26 years, and said the CHA offered people housing vouchers to move elsewhere when they decided to remodel

Lathrop protestors holding signs in support of the Keeping the Promise ordinance.

Lathrop, but he didn't want to leave his community.

"The developers want to take the property that I live on and bring in more retail and displace low-income people," Gross said. "Chicago needs more low-income housing than ever because there's a vast number of people that don't have a place to stay," particularly on the North Side.

According to Aguilar, the new Lathrop will strive to achieve many goals, including achieving a quality mixed-income community, a connection to the surrounding community, a model for sustainable development, the preservation of the architectural heritage and an emphasis of the site's proximity to the river.

An ordinance, introduced two years ago by the Chicago Housing Initiative, "Keeping the Promise," would ensure the CHA reports to the City Council four times a year, preserve or replace all standing public housing units, circulate more housing vouchers and keep its promises to rebuild replacement housing.

The Ordinance calls for the CHA to replace each demolished unit with another unit on a one-for-one basis as a qualification for accessing city funding for new units; to freeze sales of CHA land until a reasonable Replacement Housing Plan has been created to maintain a net-zero loss of housing; to use all federal funds for housing vouchers by circulating an additional 3,000 vouchers a year until 97% of all available funds are utilized; and by increasing (or implementing) mobility counseling for applicants during their housing search process to ensure equal access to all neighborhoods.

According to the Initiative, which is a coalition of eight community organizations throughout the city that work together to promote tenants' rights and low-income equality, the CHA's FY2012 financial report (the latest public record of CHA finances) reveals an agency sitting on a surplus of more than $432 million.

"By law, the ordinance would preserve or replace all of the 925 public housing units at Lathrop moving forward," Levinger said.

Brock Grosso, the housing organizer at Access Living, who attended the protest, urged the CHA to take responsibility and create more city oversight of its actions.

"We've seen what happens when there is very little oversight, like what's happening to the Lathrop homes," Grosso said. "It's unacceptable, and the CHA has taken no responsibility."

CHA officials said construction at Lathrop could begin by spring of 2016 and continues to work with stakeholders to pursue zoning approvals, financing and implementation plans for Phase I redevelopment.

Christmas fiesta, Posner said.

Besides people like Posner and Grieshaber, Santa needs to know that the following people also helped make this happen and they should surely be on his nice list this year: Ron Bockstahler, CEO of aLawCenters and Matt Lichius, president of Chicago Cost Containment, who both donated cash for presents; Sgt. Cynthia Schumann, 18th Police Dist. Community Policing Office; Professor Robert Sinclair, Ph.D., director of choral activities for the VanderCook College of Music; and, Dick's general manager, Mali Arwood.

And please Santa, don't forget Steve Schiff, the owner of Dick's who not only supplies the venue and all the food but also kicks in a very generous amount of money for gifts for the kids.

"He never wants publicity," said Posner. "He doesn't do it so people know who he is. He does it because he likes to give back."

Fishing the Door Peninsula

Door county in Wisconsin is considered a year-round paradise for sportsmen, nature lovers and people who enjoy the simple life, with a few parcels of “dry” land—meaning they don’t sell alcohol—and sometimes sketchy internet and cell-phone service, part of the experience.

A strange and wondrous place and full of surprises

BY MARK SCHIPPER

THE TERRAIN

Door County in Wisconsin is a long, angular peninsula sticking up from the state’s eastern edge like the pinky on a cup of tea held “British style.” The giant Bay of Green Bay slices out to the west, separating the peninsula from the main body of the state, and Lake Michigan proper, as big as the sea, laps at its eastern shoreline. It is a place familiar to many Chicagoans.

That long strip of narrow land is bisected near the middle by the seven miles long Sturgeon Bay Canal, which gives shipping a cut through the landmass—sparing captains 80 or so water miles and a run between Death’s Doors (Porte des Mortes) at the far northern end of the peninsula.

The county is considered a year-round paradise for people who enjoy the outdoors and the simple life, with a few parcels of “dry” land—meaning they don’t sell alcohol—and sometimes sketchy internet and cell-phone service, part of the experience.

We dragged in several King Salmon over 12 pounds, and a sharp, metallic-colored steelhead. All of these fish made beautiful filets.

It’s also a place to plan your outings beforehand, because you may drive five winding miles from your hotel for a bottle of wine before dinner and find the store closed at 4 p.m., probably so the proprietor could eat at home, which will hit you like a thunderclap if you’re out from the big city.

It is a strange and wondrous peninsula and full of surprises. For example, it takes far longer to get somewhere than you’d think and it feels like you should leave a trail of breadcrumbs to find your way back. The amount of bread necessary would be equivalent to what Napoleon’s army would have needed to survive Russia, but if you can get away from it all and keep your head, the wild sights—the big water, the great sport, the sunrises and sunsets that come straight out of a painting—will give you an experience well worth having.

THE BASS

It would be easy to argue the small mouth bass on the Green Bay side keep the name out of a sense of irony. As fish they are big all over and aggressive fighters; real small-ies, in other words.

On what Fishing Hall of Fame guide Dale Stroschein called a slow morning around Sister Islands off the county’s western shoreline, your reporter reeled in eight kicking, running, thrashing bass. Each weighed over three pounds and the biggest more than five. Several more five pound bass were brought in by Stroschein—who runs the Wacky Walleye guide service out of Sand Bay in the southwest of the Peninsula.

The run out to Sister Islands from the boat launch in Stroschein’s Nitro fishing boat was rough, with the bow pointing up like a missile on the launching pad on the way over a three foot swell, before plummeting into the trough as though we were going to try and harpoon a salmon on the way down. But the mile of rough water to the islands was worth it, as we settled into a quiet lee in front of a shallow opening splitting the islands.

The spot was amazing, with big white pelicans holding themselves up in the air, currents over the islands, black, filthy cormorants zipping past in all directions on the hunt for fish, and seagulls circling noisily overhead. Surrounded by all that water, and dramatic cliffs rising in the distance, it looked like a National Geographic special. Most of Door County is like that, an amazingly beautiful natural place.

We threw hundreds of casts in each spot, reeling in fish until there didn’t seem to be anymore to catch. Then, we moved around the island to a different position and did it again. Stroschein wrapped up the morning with a slow move down the shoreline, looking at the big and interesting houses and casting into shallows and dock areas until we got back to the launch.

SALMON

It was too early for great salmon fishing in northern Door on the Green Bay side, but a good trolling run with Captain Mike Di Lulio on his Marinette 32 aluminum yacht, plumbing a hundred feet deep without a hook up, was enough to get an understanding of Death’s Doors. Capt. Mike spends his winters in Colorado shredding backcountry on his skis; the summer he spends fishing. He’s as good natured and affable as his life would make you if you had it.

There are competing stories for how the water at the top of the peninsula, which works itself into a broad straight passing through a grouping of islands, got the name Porte des Morts. The runaway leader, and the story everyone tells first, is the one about the lake swallowing up a pitched battle between the Potawatomi and Winnebago Indian tribes.

The Winnebago, according to lore, had pushed the peaceful Potawatomi up the peninsula and onto the islands off-shore, forcing them to look back over the water onto their former homeland and decide whether or not it was worth fighting for. Eventually they decided it was worth a battle, and the Potawatomi devised a stratagem for winning it back.

They outfitted three scouts with canoes and ordered them over the treacherous water to reconnoiter a place to land safely behind the Winnebago encampments. Once there, they were to light signal fires for the waiting warrior bands. The Potawatomi expeditionary force then would set out in light ships of their own to make an amphibious landing and stalk up the peninsula from behind, engaging the Winnebago in battle and force them north off the land mass and into the lake for good, thereby taking back their birthright and resuming their former way of life.

But the scouts were captured, and two were killed before the Winnebago’s “enhanced interrogation techniques” could get the story out of them. The third one squealed before dying and the Winnebago knew what was coming. To counter the Potawatomi, they sent their own men to set diversionary signal fires above bluffs that would not support a landing, leaving the raiding party floundering in canoes in treacherous water while they rained down death from above.

The Potawatomi, seeing the signal fires glowing on the dark peninsula, set off through the channel, the seas rising from a stiff northerly wind as they crossed. By the time they passed, the lake had kicked up into mighty swells crashing toward the peninsula and a landing became a necessity,

Holiday art contest for local high school students

Inside Publications is once again holding our holiday art contest for high school students.

Students should hand-draw on an 8 1/2-x-11-inch vertical white piece of paper, in black ink. Submit a drawing of a North Side landmark with a holiday twist or theme. The student's name, age, telephone number, high school name, and year in school should be on the back, not front, of each drawing. Sorry, but computer artwork is not eligible.

The first place drawing will grace the cover of Inside's holiday issues for the Skyline, News-Star and Inside-Booster community newspapers on December 23, 2015.

The top artist will receive $100. Drawings by runners up will also be published on inside pages of the newspaper and will also receive recognition and prizes.

Mail or bring the students' drawings to: Inside Publications, Holiday Art Contest, 6221 N. Clark St. Chicago, IL 60660 so they are received by noon Wednesday, Dec. 16.

Voting will take place on Dec. 17-18. If you have any questions on how you or some student you know can enter or vote, call 773-465-9700.

This year provided a slow spring for warm weather, and even in middle June the water at fishing depth was somewhere around 45 degrees; too cold to bring the big mirations of fish to the north as they prefer the low 50s.

FISHING from p. 17

not merely to fight, but to survive the storm. There was no reprieve, however, as the bluffs below the fires proved sheer down to the water and the Winnebago attacked from above. The Potawatomi's braves were dashed to death at the gateway to their ancient home.

But the Winnebago had gotten greedy, and resolved on a swift annihilation of their enemy, sending a second party north through the rough seas to attack the villages that had been robbed of their protection when the warriors set out on their campaign. The same seas that had troubled the Potawatomi, wrecked the Winnebago, too, as the big northern swells swallowed up their counter raid whole, leaving no mortal trace of the men or their canoes.

With the massacre, the place was given the name The Doors of Death. It proved an apropos title, as schooners and steamships were sunk during great storms throughout the 1800s and early 20th century. Those ships rest well-preserved on the lake's floor, curiosities now for scuba divers who want to look for ghosts or treasure in the cold, clear water.

Another curiosity in the vast waters of the doorway to death is Pilot Island, which looks like Door County's own Alcatraz sitting out in the big straight, with nothing more than the old "Keeper's House" going to seed in the middle of wild scrub and tree growth being ruined by the acidic droppings of cormorants. Capt. Mike said the small island once kept a family in the house to man the fog signal tower, but all of that is finished now, with only big pine snakes dominating the island alongside the cormorants.

THE DOC

Another long morning was spent with the Fish Doctor, whose real name is Lynn Frederick, out on the north-east end of the peninsula. We worked the big Lake Michigan side in her 28-foot Bertram yacht for salmon and steelhead.

The doctor is quiet, brooding and friendly all at once. She is full of wisdom and experience after more than 30 years guiding fishing expeditions off Door County. She's also a real doctor, with her doctorate in zoology from the Univ. of Michigan.

It had been a slow spring for warm weather, and even in middle June the water at fishing depth was somewhere around 45 degrees; too cold to bring the big migrations of fish to the north as they prefer the low 50s. The morning was strange and overcast, with the sun coming out from behind clouds long enough to get everyone to take off their shells, only to dip back behind the scudding clouds and force the fishermen to reverse the process.

We worked up a big current seam that was as clear as if someone had sprayed down a line on a football field. The water was deep gray-blue on one side and lighter blue, with a touch of green, on the other. The seam itself had white foam in places and was marked all the way by lines of seagulls drifting on it like buoys.

The action on the deeply bowed rods and outriggers was sluggish—but slowly, about once an hour, a fish hooked up. We dragged in several King Salmon over 12 pounds, and a sharp, metallic-colored steelhead. All of these fish made beautiful filets.

"If it was really slow out here I'd planned to take you on a boondoggle to the reefs," said the doctor. "We'd get out the gobies and fish the reef for lake trout. But there seem to be fish around, we just have to find more of them."

The Lake Trout have made a painful, incomplete recovery from the invasion of Sea Lamprey into the Great Lakes. In the Atlantic Ocean, because the fish and lamprey evolved together, the fish are able to survive a hook up with the parasitic predator and continue reproduction. In the Great Lakes, where trout and Whitefish were alone before the invasion, the encounters almost always result in death.

Lampreys are foul looking beasts, with big circular mouths filled with teeth and a razor sharp tongue that works like an auger. They secrete an enzyme that prevents blood from clotting and suck off a fish's life energy until it can't go on. Lampreys first attach themselves, dig in with their hooking teeth, and then spin that tongue in to bore out an opening in the fish's side. If the fish does manage to get the Lamprey off, many times an infection from the wound kills them.

The devastation to the once massive Great Lakes fishery has been astonishing. While prior to the 1940s something like 15-million pounds of Lake Trout were harvested yearly, by the 1960s it was down to 300,000 pounds, barely two-percent of the former number. At one time, according to research from the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, around 85% of fish that did not die outright from Lampreys showed signs of having been attacked by a Lamprey at some point.

Catching Lake Trout now is not exactly a novelty, but the days of a mighty commercial fishery are gone. The Salmon and

Steelhead action that morning was just good enough to keep the Doctor from taking us on her "boondoggle," and we went back to the docks where the fish were cleaned, bagged and put on ice for later.

THE FISH BOIL

The Scandinavians were the earliest "white men" to settle the peninsula, and they established the tradition of the fish boil, a novelty that endures today in full force.

Chicagoans may make fun of the odd tradition but all will admit to attending at least a few boils.

Each day local fishermen spill their catch of White Fish for a place like "Pelletier's," where we ate, to boil up. The fish are gutted, cleaned and part with their heads, but otherwise kept whole. Giant baskets of fish, onions and potatoes are prepared and a huge black witch's cauldron is set up over an open wood fire.

Then the Boil Man appears. He's smoky in the face and with hands blackened up to the forearm, he picks up the fire and moves it strategically around the cauldron, sending heat to the open pockets. People sip their cocktails on the open patio and watch him work.

He's like a pagan God dancing in the flames as people circle around the ritual with their cameras. Once the heat is up and the ingredients go in, a lid is slammed over the top and an accelerant is dumped on the fire, sending a tunnel of flames up and around the cauldron and forcing an awed, primitive gasp from the spectators as the dinner boils over the cauldron.

The fish and vegetables come served in a tray with a giant cup of melted butter to pour over the top. You can get apple sauce on the side to add to the big, heaping spoonfuls. The White Fish is bony but so soft that it is easy to separate the delicious meat from the tiny spikes.

Afterwards, you can meet the Boil Man cleaned up at the bar. He'll be sitting there with a drink, eating the fish himself. It's like encountering the local celebrity. He has a big smile and a firm handshake, a quick bit of lore on the tongue and a self-deprecating comment about his powers. How does he grab by hand wood that's been in a fire so long, you might ask. Well, he's been at it a long time and knows the right places to grab, he'll answer.

It's as easy as that.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS COUNTY DEPARTMENT - CHANCERY DIVISION EMIGRANT BANK, F/K/A EMIGRANT SAVINGS BANK AND NEW YORK PRIVATE BANK & TRUST Plaintiff,

BY PETER VON BUOL

For the first time in nearly a decade, overall reported cases of the sexually-transmitted diseases Chlamydia, Gonorrhea and Syphilis have increased sharply, according to a November 17 report on STDs released by the federal Centers for Disease Control [CDC].

According to the CDC’s annual report, Sexually Transmitted Disease Surveillance, 2014, there were approximately 1.4 million cases of Chlamydia (an infection rate of about 456 cases per 100,000) which were reported last year, an increase of about 2.8% since 2013. The infection rates of primary and secondary syphilis (the most infectious stages of syphilis) has also sharply increased. Last year, there were 19,999 reported cases, a more-than-15% increase from the previous year (6.3 cases per 100,000).

Lastly, infection rates for gonorrhea have also increased. In 2014, there were 350,062 reported cases of gonorrhea, an infection rate of nearly 111 per 100,000.

Coincidentally released on the same day as actor Charlie Sheen’s public admission that he had tested positive for Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), STDs continue to plague young people.

While women are most severely affected by STDs, rates among men have been increasing dramatically, especially among men who have sex with other men (MSM). “America’s worsening STD epidemic is a clear call for better diagnosis, treatment, and prevention,” said Dr. Jonathan Mermin, M.D., director of CDC’s National Center for HIV/AIDS, Viral Hepatitis, STD, and Tuberculosis Prevention in a written statement. “STDs affect people in all walks of life, particularly young women and men, but these data suggest an increasing burden among gay and bisexual men.”

This newspaper contacted the Chicago and Cook County Departments of Health and could not obtain any solid local numbers. But presumably those MSM communities - that are concentrated in several North Side neighborhoods - are also seeing some of these same gains.

According to officials at the CDC, since 2000, reported cases of post and secondary syphilis have risen significantly among MSM. In fact, of those whose sexual partner is known, this group accounts for 83% of those reported to have cases of post-and-secondary syphilis. Alarmingly, more than half of the MSM diagnosed with syphilis (51%) are also HIV-positive. The link is not coincidental. According to the medical researchers, those infected with syphilis will often have open sores on their genitals which provide an easy pathway for the transmission of the Human Immunodeficiency Virus.

Officials at the CDC report that while Syphilis is currently the only STD for which data is collected about a person’s sexual partner, there seems to be growing evidence that there has also been a sharp increase of Gonorrhea and Chlamydia among MSM and they added more research needs to be done to understand the causes for the increase.

According to the authors of the report, “MSM of lower economic status may be particularly vulnerable to poor health outcomes, especially if they belong to racial and ethnic minority populations.

Among black MSM, factors such as community isolation and limited social support may influence sexual risk-taking. Similarly, for Hispanic men, the relationship between individual experiences of oppression (e.g., social discrimination and financial hardship) and risk for sexually transmitted infections in the U.S. has been documented.” The inequality of the burden of STD’s among marginalized populations, and lack of hard data, is important for public health officials to address.

For those MSM who are sexually-active, the CDC recommends individuals are screened at least once a year for Syphilis, Chlamydia, and Gonorrhea.
