Is Bankruptcy inevitable for Chicago Public Schools? City Club of Chicago unites experts

Former Chicago Public Schools CEO Paul Vallas will speak at a City Club of Chicago event called "Is Bankruptcy inevitable for Chicago Public Schools?" on Aug. 25.

Everyone knows that the Chicago Public School (CPS) system is in deep financial trouble but is bankruptcy inevitable? The CPS' current financial straits have pit administrators against principals, lawmakers against public education officials, schools against schools and parents against the "powers that be."

On Tuesday, August 25 the City Club of Chicago will host a lunch and reception at Maggiano's Banquets, 111 W. Grand Avenue, to address the CPS's situation, future and financial options. Speakers will include experts on public education, bankruptcy and restructuring and the overall financial challenges that face huge city school systems like Chicago's.

Among the speakers will be Chuck Burbridge who joined the Chicago Teachers' Pension Fund (CTPF) as executive director in March after serving as chief financial officer of the Atlanta Public Schools (APS) and before that served as deputy chief financial officer, chief financial officer and interim chief information officer with the Los Angeles Unified School District.

Mr. Burbridge has held several positions in Illinois, including director, state and local government management assurance services at KPMG, deputy chief financial officer at Chicago Public Schools, deputy chief financial officer for Cook County, and as an economist at the Illinois Economic and Fiscal Commission.

Also speaking will be Troy Anthony LaRaviere, currently the principal of Blaine Elementary School, one of the highest performing neighborhood schools in Chicago, and a relentless defender of public education. In a speech at City Hall two years ago, LaRaviere became the first Chicago principal to criticize Mayor Rahm Emanuel's school policies following up with an Op-Ed in

"I get to see the best in human nature every day," said Lakeview Pantry director Gary Garland, recalling how there were only half a dozen volunteers when he started 28 years ago. Today, he noted, there are 950 volunteers giving 31,000 service hours a year. Photo by Patrick Butler

After 3-year fundraising campaign, Lakeview Pantry gets permanent home

BY PATRICK BUTLER

After 45 years, the Lakeview Pantry, one of Chicago's largest and longest-operating food pantries, finally has its own home. On Aug. 6, pantry director Gary Garland, board president Dan Laytin and their staff and volunteers were joined in a symbolic groundbreaking outside 3945 N. Sheridan Road by several dozen of their best friends.

Among them were Ald. James Cappleman (46th), Cong. Mike Quigley (D-5th), and U.S. Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL).

Thanks to what Laytin described as a "very aggressive" three-year fundraising campaign, "we're going to open next spring debt free. We bought the property with cash."

The goal was to raise $3 million and "we're 85 percent of the way there," Laytin said, adding that

I told the man who killed my son I forgive him --Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis, at Siskel film premiere

Lucia McBath, mother of Jordan Davis, an unarmed black teenager killed in Jacksonville, Florida in 2012 by a white man claiming self-defense spoke to a sellout crowd Sunday at the Chicago premiere of "3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets," at the Gene Siskel Film Center, 164 N State Street. The Sundance documentary from Participant Media and written and directed by Marc Silver, kicked off the film center's 21st Annual Black Harvest Film Festival. The film will be shown on HBO this fall.

The shooting of 17-year-old Jordan Davis came nine months after the shooting of Trayvon Martin in Sanford, Florida and both focused attention on what many believed are extreme Florida self-defense laws and an extreme gun culture. George Zimmerman, who shot Trayvon Martin, did not invoke Florida's Stand Your Ground law but George Dunn, a 47-year-old software developer charged with murdering Jordan Davis did. Much of the movie's tension centers on trial proceedings to determine if Dunn was really threatened or felt threatened before he shot 10 bullets into a car occupied by Davis and three of his friends. Dunn had asked the youths to turn down their rap loud music which escalated into violence.

Dunn's lawyer, Cory Strolla, valiantly tries to prove in the film that Dunn felt threatened before the shooting either seeing the barrel of a gun or a lead pipe, both of which are weapons that could do harm he notes. The defense attorney puts law enforcement officers on the stand and tries to prove that they did a poor job of examining the crime scene--a weapon could indeed have been displayed, as Dunn claims, and then discarded, perhaps in a dumpster. But Dunn's girlfriend Rhonda Rouer denies on the stand that Dunn ever mentioned a gun or other weapon immediately after the shooting (which occurs while she is out of the car), later that evening or even the next day.

Moved and relieved by Rouer's testimony which proved a turning point in the trial, leading to Dunn's convictions, Lucia McBath says in the movie she does not know if Rouer has children of her own but felt that her compassion had inspired her to tell the truth about the shooting. The quick paced film intercuts between the effect of the shooting and trial on McBath and Jordan's father Ron Davis, interviews with Jordan's friends and close up, real-time footage from the trial. Viewers do not have to reconstruct the shooting in their minds--there is ample real-time evidence like video of Rouer as she pays for something in the gas station while shots ring out and bystanders say someone's "shooting" and they better call "911."

You gotta go to ‘We Gotta Bingo’

Heart of the ‘Hood

By Felicia Dechter

Walking into the Chicago Theater Works new space at 1113 W. Belmont Ave., last week, I had no idea what to expect at the opening of the new show, “We Gotta Bingo.” And I’m not going to tell you what “We Gotta Bingo,” is about, nope, I’m not going to be a spoiler. But what I will tell you is that it’s filled with over-the-top, wacky fun. You gotta go see it.

What I will tell you too is that you enter into a German beer hall known as “Der Brew-Ha-Ha,” where you are greeted by a lively polka band and a very colorful cast of characters from two local parishes, one Italian, one Irish, who are set to merge with one another against their wishes. They hold a madcap fundraiser, complete with bingo, an Italian dinner, drinks, dancing, music, mayhem and more.

“We Gotta Bingo,” is a night of raucous, interactive, theatrical entertainment. The entire cast does a phenomenal job of keeping the show flowing. That’s all I’m going to tell. Sorry.

OK, I’ll also tell you that the show’s creator, Bill Collins, was born and raised in the Oak/Elmwood Park area, and his characters were created from his own experiences growing up and attending a Catholic School ---St. Vincent Ferrer---with a mix of Irish and Italian families. It was a longtime dream of Collins’ to bring the hilarious play to Chicago.

He was involved in the interactive, “Tony ‘n’ Tina’s Wedding” for “a long time,” he said, and he’d run into people who’d tell him how much they liked “Tony ‘n’ Tina” and how they wished there were others like it.

“I started thinking of other shows,” said Collins, who lives in Minneapolis and also Lakeview, where he will stay for the duration of the open-ended show, which he hopes will enjoy a “nice, long, sit-down,” run. “I thought of the parish I grew up in and went from there.

“Chicago is proud of its ethnicities and neighborhoods, and it plays on that,” said Collins. “It’s a great Chicago experience. And you certainly don’t have to be Catholic to have fun.” (This Jew will vouch for that).

Kudos to the entire ensemble, which includes, among others, Lincoln Parker Mollie Rehner, Jessica Lauren Scott from Lakeview and Ty Rood and Tamara White of Edgewater. (And a special shout out to Mitch Conti, an awesome dancer who took me out for a spin on the dance floor).

White, who does temp work by day and the show by night, told me: “It’s not like anything else happening in Chicago right now.”

“If you come in with an attitude of fun, it’s always going to be fun,” said White. “I love how into it the audience gets. And when people play along, it makes it a great experience for everyone.”

If you’re willing to be silly and go along with bad puns, you’ll really enjoy the evening, said White. And that’s exactly what Collins is hoping for.

“I want to provide Chicagoans and tourists with a fun night out,” said Collins. “In tough times, everybody is always looking for a way to cut loose a little.”

Mr. Collins, I’d say you succeeded. “We Gotta Bingo” is a great way to do just that.

The city’s Commission on Chicago Landmarks last week approved preliminary landmark status for Burton Place between Wells and LaSalle but it is too late to save the circa-1891 property at 159 W. Burton Place, left. Residents of the block are fearful that neighboring properties will also be affected during demolition.

tive on the history of the Jewish community in Rogers Park will be provided by Richard Reeder, who grew up in the ‘hood and is now events coordinator at Max and Benny’s restaurant.

Donations needed!...help the Rogers Park Chamber of Commerce fill 100 backpacks with school supplies by Aug. 21 for students at Gale Elementary School, 1631 W. Jonquil Terrace. Drop off donations at the chamber, 7231 N. Sheridan Road.

Demolition derby by Castlerock ...demolition could be looming very soon for the circa-1891, old Victorian at 159 W. Burton Place, whose owner, Castlerock Properties, is also razing a historically-significant, orange-rated building at 2221 N. Fremont in Lincoln Park. Demolishing the 159 W. Burton property will destroy not only the historic character of the block, but could also cause irreparable damage to neighboring Edgar Miller and Andrew Rebori-attributed buildings, neighbors say. What’s with this young whippersnapper developer Sebastian Barsh that he has to go tearing down our beautiful and historical properties?

Good thing the Commission on Chicago Landmarks last week unanimously voted for preliminary landmark status for the West Burton Place Historic District, which is comprised of 13 buildings between Wells and LaSalle streets. But wait a minute... the designation really is too late to save the 159 property because a demo permit was already issued two weeks ago. (Seems like Barsh giddy-upped to get himself a permit, fully aware of the fact that neighbors were protesting).

However, according to Zac Bleicher, director of the Edgar Miller Legacy, the preliminary landmarking means there will be a 9 to 12 month review process involving more study, education and discussion with the affected property owners, and public hearings. The landmarking still needs to be approved but Bleicher said it’s uncommon for a district or building to be submitted for landmark status by the Commission and then be rejected by the City Council.

The preliminary landmarking does not revoke Barsh’s demo permit. What it may do is tie up his building permits and demand a revision of his plans according to recommendations from the Landmarks Commission for maintaining the aesthetic integrity of the streetscape, Bleicher said. And going forward, Barsh’s every move will be heavily scrutinized.

“We have heard that he is entertaining serious buyout offers, and as of this date, no demolition has begun,” said Bleicher. “He could also choose to do a tasteful rehab of the interior, save the facades of the building, and still walk away with a profit and his reputation untarnished.”

While this fight is not yet over, Edgar Miller Legacy is thrilled that Burton Place and the Carl Street Studios will most certainly be protected in the near future by landmark status, said Bleicher. “We do hope that now the developer takes this matter more seriously and reconsiders the demolition of 159 West Burton Place,” said Bleicher. “It is not too late to do the right thing for the neighborhood.”

I was also told by Preservation Chicago executive director Ward Miller that the Landmarks staff is reaching out to Barsh to encourage a re-use of the facades, in lieu of a complete demolition of the building.

Landmarks also has purview of any new proposed construction within the preliminary landmark district, which may help to retain such features as height, volume, front-yard setbacks and other visual features of any new proposed development, Miller said.

“We are hopeful that the owner will be able to work within the historic facades, versus demolition of the entire building,” said Miller. “If the developer proceeds with a full demolition of the structure, they would be destroying a landmark building and possibly undermining other nearby fragile structures and features in a Chicago Landmark District. Many of us would hope the developer would work to save and embrace our cultural treasures of the City of Chicago, which are our landmark buildings.”

Existing home sales nationwide rebound to highest level since 2007

BY DON DeBAT

Has America finally put the Great Recession in its collective rear-view mirror? Nationwide, the 2015 spring home-buying season posted the best results in eight years since the beginning of the Great Recession in 2007, analysts report.

“Buyers have come back in force, leading to the strongest two months in sales since early 2007,” noted Lawrence Yun, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors (NAR).

Yun attributed the brisk sales to strong job growth, improved household finances and a rise in mortgage rates that are pushing Americans to buy now before rates climb higher.

After floating above 4 percent most of the spring and early summer, mortgage rates recently have eased. On August 6th, Freddie Mac reported that benchmark 30-year fixed home loans averaged 3.91 percent, down from 3.98 percent. A year ago at this time, the 30-year fixed loans averaged 4.14 percent.

Apparently lower rates are here in the nick of time. In the second quarter of 2015, the nation’s homeownership rate plummeted to 63.4 percent--the lowest level in 48 years, the Census Bureau reported. The last time homeownership was so low was in the first quarter of 1967 when the rate was 63.3 percent.

Chicago posted sales of 3,110 existing single-family homes and condominiums in June, up 9.3 percent from June a year ago when 2,846 homes were sold, reported the Illinois Association of Realtors (IAR).

The median price of a home in Chicago was $290,000, up 5.5 percent over June of 2014 when the median price was $275,000.

“Median prices in Chicago have increased steadily since October of 2012, providing a remarkable comeback story for the city’s real estate market,” noted Hugh Rider, president of the Chicago Association of Realtors (CAR) and co-president of Realty & Mortgage Co. in Chicago.

“Consumer interest remains keen, as shown by the month-over-month increases in sales recorded since February and the relatively short time it is taking to sell a home,” Rider said.

In the nine-county Chicago area, existing single-family home and condo sales in June totaled 13,100 units, an increase of 14.2 percent from the 11,470 units sold in June of 2014, the IAR reported. The median price in June in the Chicago area was $232,500, up 5.7 percent from $220,000 in June of 2014.

“Sellers keep reaping the rewards of a market that has continued to see median prices edge higher every month this year,” said Jim Kinney, president of the

The burst in June sales growth was unexpected

IAR and vice president for luxury sales at Baird & Warner in Chicago.

“The burst in June sales growth was unexpected,” said economist Geoffrey J.D. Hewings, of the University of Illinois. “Prices, however, are growing more modestly yet strongly.”

Hewings said the foreclosure inventory seems to be playing a diminishing role in terms of both sales and prices with “significant declines” in foreclosed properties in recent months.

Statewide, existing single-family home and condo sales in June totaled 17,972 units, up 12.5 percent from June of 2014 when 15,982 homes sold.

The statewide median existing home price in June 2015 rose to $194,243, an 8.5 percent gain over June 2014’s statewide median price of $179,000. The median is a typical market price where half the homes sold for more and half sold for less.

“A decrease in the number of days it takes on average to sell a home in Illinois shows that buyers are undeterred by the steady upward tick in prices,” Kinney said.

The time it took to sell a home in June averaged 63 days statewide, down from 68 days a year ago and faster than 72 days last month. Available housing inventory remained tight with 70,999 homes for sale, a 6.9 percent decline from June of 2014 when there were 76,287 homes.

“Chiune Sugihara: Unsung Hero of The Holocaust” will be read August 27

Japanese diplomat Chiune Sugihara who saved Jewish lives during the Holocaust

Dwight Sora as Chiune Sugihara

BY MIRA TEMKIN

In Israel, there is a special honor reserved for those who went above and beyond to save Jewish lives during the Holocaust. Among this group is Chiune Sugihara, a Japanese diplomat who served as Vice-Consul for Japan in Kovno, Lithuania. Defying orders from Tokyo, he issued more than 6,000 transit visas so that refugees could travel to Japan, risking his career and his family’s lives. Most of the Jews who escaped were from German-occupied Poland or residents of Lithuania. In 1985, Israel named him to the “Righteous among the Nations” for his actions, the only Japanese national to be so honored.

A dramatic reading of the play, “Chiune Sugihara: Unsung Hero of The Holocaust,” written by Canadian playwright Philip Pinkus will take place on Thursday, August 27 at 7:30 p.m. at the Japanese American Service Committee, 4427 N. Clark in Chicago. The show features Dwight Sora as Chiune Sugihara and the reading is free.

After the war, when asked about his visa initiative, Sugihara simply said, “There is nothing wrong in saving many people’s lives. The spirit of humanity, philanthropy, neighborly friendship. With this spirit, I ventured to do what I did.”

Playwright Philip Pinkus said,”In writing this play, I saw Chiune Sugihara as a contemporary of the war years, bearing witness to the horrors, becoming increasingly aware of them, shock after shock, at the very time he was writing those visas. The questions Sugihara asks in this play are questions that for many, have no answers. From time to time, we should think about them. That is why I wrote the play as I did.”

The play is directed by Elayne LeTraunik, Associate Artistic Director of Genesis Theatrical Productions, who commented, “I felt this play was important in bringing to the public a hero of the Holocaust who is largely unknown. Among the families he saved were the families of Sam Zell and Leo Melamed, two individuals who are leaders in Chicago business.”

Sam Zell is a top Chicago real estate figure who bought the Chicago Tribune in 2007 and served as CEO for a time. Leo Melamed is credited with developing Chicago’s financial futures industry and establishing the world prominence of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

“People were desperate and his own government went against him, LeTraunik added. “As he was being recalled by Japan he was throwing visas off of the train.”

Chiune Sugihara is also memorialized at the Illinois Holocaust Museum and Education Center in Skokie. “There were a number of individuals I would call ‘points of light’ in a sea of darkness during World War II,” said Rick Salomon whose father was also saved by Sugihara’s visa initiative.

For more information about the upcoming dramatic reading of “Chiune Sugihara: Unsung Hero of The Holocaust” call 773.800-1703.

construction work will begin next month and be completed in April.

Lakeview Pantry’s mission is to eliminate hunger and poverty in the community and raise awareness, help clients achieve independence and serve as model of compassionate and as a stable presence of service delivery. Opened in 1970, the pantry originated from the efforts of a few neighbors who wanted to help people in their own community who were struggling to secure the food they needed. Today Lakeview Pantry serves nearly 1 in 9 individuals in Lakeview who are struggling with poverty and food insecurity and even provides home delivery services for elderly, disabled and home-bound clients. The pantry also provides clothing, personal hygiene products and holiday toys to its clients and social services like case management, referrals and assistance in aid applications.

The new facility will be 7,500 square feet compared to the 4,100 square foot space the pantry previously rented at 3831 N. Broadway, according to a fact sheet distributed by the pantry. And when finished, “it will look nicer than a New York deli and you’ll get treated better,” added Laytin.

The Lakeview Pantry will also become a place where pantry clients can learn to cook, write their resumes and look for work, said Ald. Capplemann. Pantry director Gary Garland said the alderman always “had our back, not for political gain, but because he had the heart of a social worker,” when some residents opposed moving the pantry to Sheridan Road.

Last year, Garland noted, the pantry helped 4,400 households and 9,000 individuals. “Today we’re celebrating a dream people will not have to go without food.”

“What’s being built here today is more than a building. You have built hope where there was no hope,” Garland told the pantry’s supporters.

With 29 years under his belt, Garland said he never expected to stay on that long at the pantry. “I didn’t really know what a pantry was when I started here. I didn’t have any vision. But it seemed like a worthwhile job.”

Garland said he’s seen the roster of volunteers grow from six to 950, donating a total of 31,000 service hours a year. In 2014, the pantry distributed 1.6 million pounds of food during more than 29,000 client visits. Over the years, Garland has also seen the pantry add a West Lake View branch on Oakdale Avenue.

“But you can see what kept me here. I get to see every day people who care about their neighbors,” said Garland, adding that things didn’t always look so hopeful back in the early 1990s “when we were struggling as an organization just to meet budget.”

But somehow help always came when it was least expected, Garland said. “I remember Christmas Eve, 1989, when a truck pulled up full of food. We didn’t order it. It had been sent by someone who had been helped by the pantry, plopped down $500 because he wanted to give back.”

“Whenever we fill a bag with groceries, we never know where that’s going to lead,” Garland said. To donate, volunteer or learn more about the Lakeview Pantry visit <http://www.lakeviewpantry.org>

JPA steps up to the plate for child welfare

By Ann Gerber

THE JUVENILE PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION spring benefit, “Step Up to the Plate,” raised $497,470 in support of JPA’s critical treatment and counseling services for traumatized children and families in crisis in low-income Chicago communities. A baseball theme was chosen this year to memorialize Ernie Banks who died in 2015 after many years of volunteer service to JPA and attendance at JPA’s annual benefit event.

The “500 Home Run Club” baseball collection donated in memory of Ernie raised $21,000 in an auction drawing national attention and featured across Chicago media. In the long and storied history of Major League Baseball, only 26 players have attained the ultimate career achievement -- hitting 500 home runs. The rare collector’s set includes balls autographed by many Hall of Famers: Babe Ruth, Mickey Mantle, Willie Mays, Hank Aaron, Mel Ott, Jimmie Foxx, and our beloved Ernie Banks.

Fox 32’s Good Day Chicago’s Corey McPherrin hosted and JPA board members Robin Segesta, Dr. Heather Pyle, and Jim Rose served as the co-chairs for this year’s event, held at the Four Seasons.

A rare “500 Club” baseball collection draws $21,000 for JPA. The donation, in honor of Ernie Banks, put a national media spotlight on the need for the trauma therapy that JPA provides Chicago’s most vulnerable children.

Jeweller Peter Marino, whose diamond earrings were a highlight of the JPA silent auction, with Mamie Walton, Robin Segesta, and Tom Segesta flanking the “500 Club” Baseball Collection, which sold for $21,000.

JPA welcomes Gary and Cheryl Rabine family with the 2015 Jane Addams Community Partner Award for their dedication to the community and for enriching the lives of adults and youth.

Letters to the Editor

A free press should not bow to political correctness

A letter in the July 29 Inside Publications newspapers from Rebecca Ray suggests that it is taboo for newspapers to report the race of suspected criminals in our neighborhoods and comes perilously close to calling me an outright "racist" for suggesting that newspapers should report facts to their readers.

I was editor-in-chief of a university newspaper, whose circulation exceeded that of most local newspapers in the USA. I was a community reporter for the Lerner neighborhood newspapers, which preceded the Inside Booster. I worked as a reporter out of the Washington, DC bureau of one of the largest circulation dailies in the world. I think that I can fairly suggest that I have newspaper ink in my bloodstream.

Because I have a firm, personal commitment to the preservation of a free press, I was appalled to read Ray's suggestion that the free press ought be censored for the purposes of left-wing political correctness. She wrote: "for one to take a newspaper to task for not including (racial descriptions) of suspects is galling." No. What is galling is for a person like this Rebecca Ray, to use the forum of a free press to argue that there should be no free press.

Tom Faber, North Side

Enjoy your news but please watch your grammar

I enjoy reading the neighborhood news in your Rogers Park et al edition [the News-Star] and am grateful for your paper.

You'll earn more respect from your readers if you are more careful with your language and grammar. I am reading the current issue [July 29] and there are 2, yes two, incorrect uses of the verb "impute" on the front page alone: in paragraph 4 of the article about the Pride Parade, and in paragraph 5 of the article about the new mid-rise development.

In both cases, you mean to use the noun "input." Impute is a verb, not a noun, and doesn't even come close to meaning what you intend. From "dictionary.com", impute means "to attribute or ascribe," among others.

Cosplay Day of “costume play” to be held at Da Sorce August 16

BY JOHN PORUBSKY

Sure it’s August and we’re on the cusp of Wizard World Comic Con Chicago which will attract hundreds of Cosplayers but if you Cosplay and really want to get warmed up then don’t miss the Cosplay Day event at Northcenter’s Da Sorce comic shop, 4353 N. Lincoln on Sunday, August 16th starting at noon.

Cosplay literally means “Costume Play”-dressing up and pretending to be a fictional character (usually from a sci-fi, comic book, or anime character). The rapid growth in the number of people Cosplaying as a hobby since 1990 has made the phenomenon a significant aspect of popular culture in Japan, parts of Asia and in the Western world. Cosplay events are common features of fan conventions, as well as local and international competitions, social networks, websites and other forms of media centered on Cosplay activities.

Cosplay costumes vary greatly and can range from simple themed clothing to highly detailed costumes. Cosplay is generally considered different from Halloween and Mardi Gras costume wear, as the intention is to replicate a specific character, rather than to reflect the culture and symbolism of a holiday event. As such, when in costume, some Cosplayers often seek to adopt the affect, mannerisms, and body language of the characters they portray (with “out of character” breaks). The characters chosen to be Cosplayed may be sourced from any movie, TV series, book, comic book, video game, or music band anime and manga characters. Some Cosplayers even choose to Cosplay an original character of their own design or the Chicago Sun-Times, republished in the Washington Post that accused City Hall of silencing principals with a heavy-handed approach.

Last summer LaRaviere and other principals founded the Administrator’s Alliance for Proven Policy and Legislation in Education (AAPPLE), which subsequently exposed unclean conditions in Chicago Public Schools that it charged resulted from the city funneling $340 million in taxpayer dollars to two private for-profit custodial management companies. AAPPLE also charges that CPS Office of Accountability officials altered charter school test score data.

Participants at the City Club of Chicago luncheon will also hear George Panagakis, a deputy practice leader at Skadden’s Corporate Restructuring Group, experienced in representing clients in complex business reorganizations, debt restructurings and insolvency matters. Mr. Panagakis has served as lead counsel in numerous Chapter 11 cases such as those of Enesco International, Ingersoll International and Shorebank and led successful out-of-court restructurings of top national and international manufacturers, satellite telecommunications and technology firms. Panagakis is a frequent speaker on restructuring topics and has served as a contributing author to Norton’s Annual Survey of Bankruptcy Law and the Illinois Institute for Continuing Education.

Also addressing CPS’s financial options will be Jesse H. Ruiz, a corporate and securities partner at the law firm of Drinker Biddle & Reath, who specializes in complex business transactions such as equity and debt offerings, financings and the purchase and sale of assets from bankruptcy estates. A long-time public education advocate, Ruiz has served since 2011 as vice president of the Chicago Board of Education and previously as chairman of the Illinois State Board of Education.

Vallas is a strong believer in data driven instructional management systems to give teachers the tools to effectively develop lesson plans.

The best known of the luncheon speakers will be Paul Vallas who served as CEO of the Chicago Public Schools from 1995 to 2001, eliminating a $1.25 billion, 5-year projected budget gap and structurally balanced six $4 billion budgets. During the 2002 gubernatorial primary, the Chicago Tribune wrote that Vallas “airlifted CPS out of its ocean of red ink without asking for any special bailout from the legislature or the city.” More recently Crain’s called Vallas “arguably to the most effective schools superintendent in recent decades.” In 2007, Louisiana recruited Vallas to lead the post-Hurricane Katrina Recovery School District, where he implemented the nation’s first 100-percent school-choice district and managed the U.S.’ largest school rebuilding initiative. Vallas also advised Haiti and Chile’s Ministries of Education in the wake of their respective earthquakes.

While the City Club of Chicago event is sold out, a waiting list can be found at <https://www.cityclub-chicago.org>. Many will be eager to hear the opinions of the five experts who hopefully can save the CPS from bankruptcy.

Free “Broadway In Chicago” concert at Millennium Park August 17

Fans of Broadway shows will see highlights from a dozen of them at the Broadway In Chicago Free 2014 summer concert at the Jay Pritzker Pavilion in Millennium Park (201 E Randolph St) on Monday, August 18 at 6:15 pm.

Hosted by ABC 7 Chicago’s Janet Davies, the concert will feature cast members from the pre-Broadway World Premiere of Amazing Grace, the World Premiere of Dee Snider’s Rock & Roll Christmas Tale, the pre-Broadway World Premiere of First Wives Club and the World Premiere of Emerald City Theatre’s Hansel & Gretel. Also featured in the Broadway In Chicago concert will be A Wickedly Delicious Musical Treat and hit shows Evil Dead The Musical, Annie, Disney’s Newsies, Rodgers + Hammerstein’s Cinderella, Jersey Boys, Kinky Boots, Pippin, Beauty & The Beast, The Illusionists and Million Dollar Quartet.

“This summer concert is one of our favorite events of the year. It’s an unforgettable gathering of the friends and fans of Broadway In Chicago with an amazing array of performers representing the best of Broadway,” said Eileen LaCario, Vice President of Broadway In Chicago. “There is no better way to commemorate our 15th year than by celebrating in one of Chicago’s most iconic settings.”

The Broadway In Chicago summer concert at Millennium Park is produced in partnership with The City of Chicago Department of Cultural Affairs & Special Events. It is part of Millennium Park programming that includes symphonic and popular music, dance and opera performed by some of Chicago’s best-loved cultural institutions. Seating for the Broadway In Chicago concert begins at 5:15 pm. For full calendar information, visit millenniumpark.org.

Opening a question and answer period, McBath said the movie “is our legacy to Jordan--to stem the violence and save more sons” and that “we felt it was important to travel with the film.” Of the racial fears that fanned Jordan’s shooting, McBath said we are not living in a “post racial society” and there is much work to do. Asked how parents can teach their children, especially their sons, to avoid the violence that seems to be everywhere, McBath said parents should teach their children “their history,” emphasize “education and learning,” and instill pride in “who God has ordained them to be.”

Perhaps recalling how families of nine church worshippers killed in Charleston, S.C. in June, allegedly by a white supremacist, McBath was asked if she or others had addressed Michael Dunn. “We gave victim impact statements in court,” said McBath and I “told Michael Dunn I forgive him.” The reason she summons forgiveness in her soul, said Jordan’s mother was forgiveness was “what I was teaching my child” and if she allowed “pain, anger and angst” to remain with her, “I could not do this work I was ordained to do.”

Jordan Davis’s death was not

Michael Dunn, who used a Stand Your Ground defense, was found guilty of the murder of Jordan Davis and will serve life in prison without the possibility of parole.

just about racial fears and misunderstandings, noted McBath. It is also about unfettered gun violence abetted by laws like Stand Your Ground and the National Rifle Association (NRA) which is “spewing hate and fear-mongering all over,” said McBath who has become spokesperson for Moms Demand Action for Gun Sense in America, also called Everytown for Gun Safety, members of whom were present at the film screening.

Even though most NRA members agree with us, the NRA is not “what it was 30 years ago,” said McBath noting a “close connection” between the gun group and the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC), an organization of conservative state legislators and private sector representatives that drafts and shares state-level legislation reducing corporate regulation, weakening the power of labor unions, loosening environmental regulations and expanding and promoting gun rights. McBath urged the audience to visit <http://everytown.org> where they can quickly find their own legislators, pre-written tweets and posts and everything they need to become active against gun violence. It is especially important to vet your state legislators before voting for them, said McBath, because many are serving the NRA.

There are some moments of laughter in the “3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets” like when Jordan’s friends say he dressed sharp but was miserable at basketball and when they are asked on the witness stand why they bought gum at the gas station where the shooting occurred. (They wanted to meet girls and make sure their breath wasn’t bad, they say.) But the many lives broken by the shooting are hard to ignore--from friends and family of Jordan to those close to Michael Dunn. Upon sentencing Dunn to life in prison (after a second trial which found him guilty of murder) Circuit Court Judge Russell Healey admonishes Dunn that there a fusion of different genres (e.g. a steampunk version of a character).

Under new ownership, Da Sorce seeks to be more than just an ordinary comic book store. Trying to reach out to the “kid at heart” in customers, the store offers all sorts of games (Magic: The Gathering, Yu-Gi-Oh!, Pokémon, board games, video games and a plethora of others) featured in the form of tournaments and free game play. It wants to provide a safe, child-friendly environment where people can come and play.

In the “real” world, several employees at Da Sorce use their own powers for good. Using her artistic skills, Lynn has added creative workshops to inspire young ones to always follow their dreams, have fun and hopefully meet new friends to learn and share from each other. William has a great knowledge of heroes past and the ability to crunch numbers faster than a speeding locomotive. Edward has great wisdom about life and the perils of finance, legality and hawking. The result is a Da Sorce that helps people find whatever they may need like toys/collectibles and custom screen-printing for T-shirts, cups, hats and other items and even offers would have been “nothing wrong” with retreating from the scene instead of shooting. There is nothing worse for a parent than losing a child the judge tells Dunn.

The audience at the screening of “3 1/2 Minutes, Ten Bullets,” some of whom discussed the deaths of their own teenagers, embraced the film and McBath’s message. “You are my role model,” one mother told McBath--“you have never waived in your faith.”
